the throne of his father David] The ſpirituall and eternal kingdome over his Church, prefigured in Davids temporal kingdom over Iſrael. See Iſaiah 9. 7. Jeremiah 30.9. Ezekiel 34. 24. Ezekiel 37. 24. Hoſea 3. 5. thus the Angel declareth, that this is he in whom the Propheſie of Amos 9. 11. concerning the raiſing up of the decayed tabernacle of David, ſhould be fulfilled.

v. 33. and he ſhall reign] See Daniel 7. 14. Micha 4. 7.

v. 34. How ſhall this be?] This queſtion was not of diffidence, but rather of admiration: for though the propheſie declared this myſterie of Chriſts incarnation by a virgin, Iſaiah 7. 14. and of the branch ariſing out of the decayed ſtock of Jeſſe, Iſaiah 11. 1. yet the manner how was not fully underſtood; herein ſhe deſireth reſolution: and it ſeemeth they were not to come together preſently after betrothing.

v. 35. overſhadow thee] The extraordinary power of God ſhall effect this: it ſeemeth an alluſion to that, 1 Kings 8. 12.

holy thing] Chriſt without all ſin: as God, the eternal Son of the Father: as man, conceived of a ſanctified maſſe, or ſubſtance without all ſin.

v. 36. thy couſin Elizabeth] See note on verſe 4.

who was called barren] Elizabeth who was known or noted to be barren, is now ſix moneths gone with childe.

v. 37. nothing ſhall be unpoſſible] See Geneſ. 18. 14. Jeremiah 32. 17. Matthew 19. 26. in the Greek it is πᾶν ῥῆμα, every word; that is after the Hebrew expreſſion, no word. So Pſalm 143. 2. כָּל־חַי, all living, that is, none living: and ſo they put דָּבָר dabar, a word, for a work, or thing, as Geneſ. 24. 50. from the Lord proceedeth הַדָּבָר, 70, τὸ πρᾶγμα, the thing. In theſe words, the Angel lifteth up the virgins minde to the conſideration of Gods omnipotency, that ſhe might reſt ſecure concerning the fulfilling of the promiſe, which he brought her.

v. 38. behold the handmaid of the Lord] This is alſo an Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, importing a ready obedience and ſubmiſſion. See 1 Sam. 3. 4. הִנֵּנִי hienni, behold I, or here am I, Iſaiah 6. 8.

v. 39. to the hill countrey] To Zacharie and Elizabeths houſe, which probably was Kirioth-Arba, or Hebron aſſigned to the prieſts. See Joſh. 14. 15. Joſh. 21. 11.

v. 41. The babe leaped] This extraordinary motion was by the inſpiration of the Holy Ghoſt, enabling Elizabeth to know and propheſie the incarnation of Chriſt; (for no otherwiſe could ſhe know it then by divine revelation) and ſhewing a ſecret correſpondence between Chriſt and John rejoycing at his coming.

v. 42. bleſſed art thou] So the Angel pronounced verſ. 28. ſhe was bleſſed, in that God not onely vouchſafed her the honour of conceiving her Saviour in her wombe, but chiefly for that he gave her faith, to believe in her Son and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. See verſe 45. and Chap. 11. 27, 28.

v. 43. whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord &c.] Elizabeth reſpecting Gods great ſavours conferred on the Virgin Mary, yieldeth her due reſpect and honour, and acknowledgeth this viſit an honour undue to her ſelf; yet doth ſhe not adore her to Gods diſhonour, we may neither undervalue Gods graces in others, nor idol them for the ſame. The excellencies of the creatures are ſo farre forth well reſpected and reverenced, as no interpoſition thereof cloudeth Gods Maieſty.

v. 44. as ſoon as the voice, &c.] See note on verſe 41.

v. 45. bleſſed is ſhe that beleeved] By the inſtinct of the the Holy Ghoſt, ſhe declareth wherein the bleſſedneſſe of Mary, (as alſo of all the elect) conſiſteth; that is, true faith apprehending all the promiſes in Chriſt, which ſhall certainly be fulfilled.

v. 46. My ſoul doth magnifie] That is, extolleth and praiſeth: not as hypocrites uſe in words onely, but with the inward affections of my ſoul. So ſhe attributeth all the favours received, to the meere and free mercie of God, leaving nothing to her own merits.

v. 47. and my ſpirit hath rejoyced in God] My ſoul hath an inward joy in Gods mercy and ſalvation: there can be no ſolid rejoycing untill we believe God to be our Saviour.

v. 48. ſhall call me bleſſed] For this favour freely beſtowed on me, which all ages ſhall ſpeak of: ſhe ſaith not, ſhall call me Queen of Heaven, Lady &c. much leſſe, ſhall adore me: See note on verſes 28, 42, 43.

v. 49. for he that is mighty &c.] That is, future ages ſhall ſo acknowledge me bleſſed, as attributing all which God hath done for me, to his free mercy, not any merit of mine: there can be nothing more injurious to this bleſſed Saint, then ſacrilegiouſly to put on her the ſpoils taken from Chriſt her Saviour: here is no, roga patrem, jube natum, &c. See Offic. Beatæ Mariæ.

and holy is his name] The name of God ſometimes here importeth God himſelf, as he manifeſteth himſelf to us. See Matthew 6. 9. and ἅγιον, holy, ſignifieth alſo venerable and ſacred, or ſeparated from things vulgar, or profane: ſo ought we to ſpeake and think of the holy God, with all reverence. See Exod. 20. 7.

v. 50. his mercy is on them that fear him] This ſpeech ſeemeth taken from the covenant of God: Geneſ. 17. 7. and Exodus 20. 6. Deuter. 7. 9. Pſalm 105. 8. God is ever one, unchangeable, and therefore conſtant in his favours, as appeared in the example of Abraham, and his ſeed; but becauſe all are not children of Abraham, who according to the fleſh were deſcended of Abraham, but the faithful and holy onely; therefore ſhe here reſtraineth the effect of the promiſe to thoſe who feare God. See Pſalm 103. 17. in vain do they boaſt that God is their father, who degenerate from the faith, and ſanctity of thoſe ſaints, whom he owned for his children. See 1 Pet. 1. 17. under this word fear him, are underſtood, faith, obedience, and all piety, and true religion.

v. 51. he hath ſhewed ſtrength with his arme] ἐποίησε κράτος: ſo Pſalm 118. 16. עֹשָׂה חָיִל, hoſe chaiil, ἐποίησε δύναμιν, 70 that is, δυνατῶς, powerfully. So Num. 24. 18. and Iſrael עֹשֶׂה חָיִל, 70 ἐποίησεν ἐν ἰσχύϊ, ſhall do valiantly, which phraſe is ſometimes uſed for the atchievement of victories, wherein might and power is ſhewed. So the Syriack interpreter giveth the words as if it were ἐνίκησεν, he overcame, &c. the arme of the Lord importeth his power, commonly in oppoſition to all other helpes, as Iſaiah 59. 16. See Pſalm 89. 13. Iſaiah 51. 9.

he hath ſcattered the proud in &c.] God ſheweth his power in defending and lifting up the humble: the proud he ſcattereth in their imaginations and vain counſels, as the winde the chaffe: See Pſalm 33. 10. 2 Sam. 15. 34. Job 5. 12. 1 Pet. 5. 6. Iſaiah 8. 10. Gen. 11. 8, 9. Iſaiah 14. 13, 14. Ezek. 28. 2. 7.

v. 52. he hath put down the mighty] 1 Samuel 2. 6. Job 5. 11.

v. 53. he hath filled the hungry] See Pſalm 34. 10. 1 Sam. 2. 5.

v. 54. in remembrance of his mercy] See Jeremiah 31. 3. 20.

v. 55. as he ſpake to our fathers] Gen. 17. 9, 10. Pſalm 132. 11, 12.

to his ſeed for ever] That is, to the faithful and holy. See Galat. 3. 16. 26, 27, 29.

v. 56. about three moneths] Untill her delivery; probably that ſhe might ſee that fulfilled, which the Angell propoſed to her, for the confirmation of her faith.

v. 57. and ſhe brought forth a ſon] So God ever fulfilleth his promiſes in good time.

v. 58. rejoyced with her] This is that holy ſympathy which God commandeth, Rom. 12. 15.

v. 59. on the eight day] See Gen. 17. 12. Levit. 12. 3.

they called him Zacharias] They who were to circumciſe him, as the common cuſtom was, called him by his fathers name.

v. 60. he ſhall be called John] It is likely that Zacharie had by writing enformed Elizabeth concerning the whole viſion, and impoſition of this name by the Angel. See note on verſe 13.

v. 61. none of thy kinred] They relyed on the cuſtome; which (had their aſſertion been true) may never be followed againſt the word and commandement of God.

v. 62. they made ſignes to his father] To end the controverſie, they do by ſignes conſult his father.

v. 63. he asked for] Or required: that is, made ſignes to have brought him writing tables: ſo underſtand, ſaying, to be writing, his name is John.

v. 64. his mouth was opened] His voice and uſe of ſpeech, was reſtored him again.

and praiſed God] Doubtleſſe, acknowledging his dumbneſſe a juſt puniſhment of his ſlowneſſe to believe: the righteous are not aſhamed to confeſſe their faults to Gods Honour: and this ſerved to enforme the preſent, that this childe was, (as conceived walking in all] that is, living in, and endeavouring to keep all the commandements. See Pſal. 119. 1. 6. not that they attained perfection by the works of the Law: (See Phil. 3. 12.) but as he that walketh in a ſtraite way, ſomtimes ſtumbleth, ſalleth, and doth not preſently come to the end of that way, but by ſome other ſupply of his lameneſſe or infirmity; ſo is it here.

v. 9. According to the cuſtome] See note on v. 5. and according to Gods law, this office appertained to Aaron and his ſons. Exod. 30.7. 1 Chron. 6. 49.

into the temple of the Lord] into that court which was called holy; into which onely the Prieſts entred. Exod. 28.43.

v. 10. The whole multitude] See Levit. 16.17.

without] in that part of the temple which was called the peoples court. See Levit. 16.17. 1 Kings 7.12.

v. 11. The altar of incenſe] See Exod. 31.1.

v. 12. And fear fell upon him] The ſodain and unexpected ſight of the angel not onely troubled, but terrified him. So Dan. 10.8. if the appearance of one angel ſent to comfort, ſo much affrighted this juſt man, in the work of his holy calling, what dread and terrour ſhall fall upon the wicked when Chriſt, (God and man) ſhall appear with all his angells to judge the wicked for all their willfull acts of impiety?

v. 13. Thou ſhalt call his name John] this is not only a prediction, but a precept, and the impoſition of a name before the nativity, was ever an argument of Gods marking thoſe parties to ſome excellencies. See Matth. 1. 21. this name ſignifieth the grace of God: intimating that which ſhould be in his perſon and office: See note on John 1. 6. So that Zacharies prayer was heard in that the Meſſias ſhould now come: and in that Elizabeth, for whom he had often prayed, ſhould alſo conceive and bear a ſon.

v. 14. And thou ſhalt have joy, &c.] So great, as that it ſhall break out into rejoycing, for that thou ſhalt obtain a deſired iſſue, above hope and the common courſe of nature, and for that thou ſhalt know the ſingular office to which this childe is aſſigned, that is, to be the immediate Herauld to proclaim the Meſsias, and the fore-runner to prepare his wayes. And this joy ſhall not be onely domeſtick, but alſo publick, as concerning the intereſt of all thoſe which expect Chriſt the Saviour of Iſrael.

v. 15. great in the ſight of the Lord] That is, God ſhall highly eſteem him, and make him excellent.

ſhall neither drink wine nor ſtrong drink] σίκερα, which Theophylact, Euthymius, &c. interpret πᾶν τὸ μέθην ἐμποιεῖν δυνάμενον, any thing which may make drunken: So alſo Jerome lib. 2. ep. 14. Nepotiano. The word is taken from the Hebrew שכר inebriatus fuit, thence שכר, ſhechar, and in the Syriac שכרא, Levit. 10.9. Aaron and his ſons were forbid to drink יין wine, and alſo שכר which the 70 give σίκερα; as here, ſo where Hanna ſaid ſhe had drunk neither wine nor שכר ſtrong drink: the 70 give it μέθυσμα: the Syriac by שכר underſtand alſo, fædum, deformem a filthy or deformed perſon: ſuch are they who are overcome with drink: and therefore the Lacedemonians were wont to make their Helots, or Slaves drunken; that themſelves being ſober, and obſerving τὴν ἐκείνων ἀσχημοσύνην their uncomely and filthy behaviour, it might be a remedy to them; cauſing them to loathe that ſinne, the effects whereof were ſo ſhameful and loathſome. See Clemens Alexandrinus Pædag. lib 3. cap. 8. The meaning of the Angel is here, that John ſhould be conſecrated unto God, as a Nazarite. See Numb. 6.3. Judges 13.4,5. 1 Sam. 1.11.

filled with the holy Ghoſt] That is, he ſhall have an abundant meaſure of the Spirit of ſanctification even from his mothers womb; and in his ripe age, for the execution of his charge. See Jer. 1.5. Gal. 1.15. Seeing then Infants are capable of grace, and the holy Ghoſt, wee may ſay for them as Peter for his hearers, Acts 10. 47. Can any man forbid water, that theſe ſhould not be baptized, which have received the holy Ghoſt as well as we? See note, on Acts 10.47.

v. 16. many of the children of Iſrael.] See Malachi 4.6. He ſhall be the means of their converſion, by his preaching accompanied with the power of the holy Ghoſt to make it effectual. See Acts 26.18. 1 Corinth. 3. 5, 6. James 5. 19. 20.

v. 17. he ſhall go before him, &c.] That is, immediately before Chriſt the Meſsias, the king of Iſrael, to declare his coming, and preſence. See John 1.29. Malachi 4.5. Matth. 11. 14.

in the ſpirit and power of Elias] That is, with as great a meaſure of grace, and gifts of Gods Spirit, to make his miniſtery powerful. See Matth. 11. 11, 14. Mal. 4. 6.

turn the hearts of the fathers to the children] By his miniſtery, the unnatural, degenerate, and wicked children, ſhall be converted, and become obedient children to their fathers, and to the Church of Chriſt; ſo, as their fathers ſhall acknowledge them to be their children indeed: For the diviſion which followeth the Goſpel, that is, an accidental effect, which the corruption of man produceth, and not the Goſpel of peace.

to the wiſdom] ἐν φρονήσει. Here ἐν is put for εἰς. So the Interpreter of the Syriac, ad cognitionem rectorum, to the knowledge of right things. Jerome, on Mal. 4. giveth the meaning, Ut credant poſteri eorum in Dominum Salvatorem in quem & illi crediderunt, that their poſterity may believe in the Lord their Saviour, in whom (Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob) themſelves beleeved; the whole ſence is, by the example of their holy Fathers, they ſhall be wiſe and believe, and ſo be of one heart and conſent with their fathers.

prepared for the Lord] Prepared for Chriſt, as John proclaimed, c. 3. 4.

v. 18. For I am an old man, &c.] Conſidering the ordinary courſe of nature; he was ſlow in believing ſo great a miracle. Abraham laying aſide all natural reaſon, believed above hope. See Rom. 4. 17.

v. 91. I am Gabriel] גבריאל fortitudo Dei. This name ſignifieth the power of God: he putteth him in minde, that he was the ſame Angel, who ſome hundred yeers before, was ſent to the Prophet Daniel, to declare the time of Chriſts coming, Dan. 8.16. Dan. 9.21. that he might aſſure him of the fulfilling of the ſame, now in the fulneſs of time.

that ſtand in the preſence of God] This Hebraiſme, borrowed from thoſe who wait on Kings, importeth a readineſs to adminiſter or ſerve. See 1 Kings 10.8. Prov. 22.29.

v. 20. thou ſhalt be dumb] Becauſe thou deſireſt a ſigne; this ſhall be both a puniſhment of thy incredulity, and a ſigne to confirm this faith, as Chryſologus Ser. 90. ſaith, Ut ex te & in te credendi regulam conſequaris: that from thy ſelf, and in thy ſelf, thou muſt attain a rule of believing.

v. 21. waited for Zachary] For he was to diſmiſſe them with a bleſſing. See Numb. 6.23. Now they waited longer then ordinary, without the holy place, to which the people of the Iews were to reſort, as v. 10.

v. 22. he could not ſpeak] Not onely becauſe a marvellous ſtupor of fear had invaded him, but becauſe God had, for the time, taken away his faculty of ſpeaking, for a ſigne unto him (that he might believe) and to the people, that at the preaching of Chriſt now at hand, their Prieſthood ſhould be ſilenced.

they perceived that he had ſeen a viſion] By his ſilence, pale countenance, beckning with, and lifting up his hand toward Heaven, or the holy place whence he came, by theſe or the like means God would prepare the people to conceive an high opinion of John the forerunner of Chriſt.

v. 23. were accompliſhed] At Jeruſalem he was to officiate one whole week. See 2 Kings 11. 1. Chron. 9.25. which ended, he went home.

v. 24. hid her ſelf] See kept her chamber, or otherwiſe concealed her miraculous conception ſo long, until it was evident, and out of doubt that ſhe had indeed conceived.

v. 25. to take away my reproach] For barrenneſs was counted a diſhonour to the women. See 1 Sam. 1.6, 11.

v. 26. the ſixt moneth] Reckoning from Elizabeths conception.

v. 27. to a virgin eſpouſed] That is, promiſed in marriage: a woman ſo promiſed was ſaid μνηστευθεῖσα. See Matth. 1.18. and here c. 2. 5.

of the houſe of David] Of the ſtock and linage of David, (ſo ſome Greek Copies have it) as was alſo Joſeph, Luke 2. 4. Matth. 1.16.

v. 28. highly favoured] or graciouſly accepted, much graced (ſee v. 30.) freely beloved: as the Apoſtle uſeth the word Epheſ. 1.6. honoured with this ſingular grace, to be the Mother of the Meſsias: therefore he ſaid ſhe was bleſſed among women: he ſaid not to be honoured as God: οὔτε γὰρ Θεὸς ἡ Μαρία, ſaith Epiphanius adv. hæreſ. l. 3. tom. 2. 23. for neither was Mary a God.

v. 29. ſhe was troubled] At the appearance of the heavenly Majeſty which probably ſhined in the Angel, and at that ſtrange ſalutation.

v. 30. thou haſt found favour] Thou art in Gods favour, who hath freely choſen thee to this honour which thou thoughteſt not of.

v. 31. and behold thou ſhalt conceive] See Iſaiah 7.14.

his name Jeſus] See Matth. 1.21. a Saviour of his people.

v. 32. the ſon of the higheſt] So he ſhall be called, and ſo is he from all eternity: the onely Son of God by nature: God manifeſted in the fleſh, 1 Tim. 3.16.

the throne of his father David] The ſpiritual and eternal kingdome over his Church, prefigured in Davids temporal kingdom over Iſrael. See Iſaiah 9. 7. Jeremiah 30.9. Ezekiel 34. 24. v. 56. about three moneths] Untill her delivery; probably that ſhe might ſee that fulfilled, which the Angell propoſed to her, for the confirmation of her faith.

v. 57. and ſhe brought forth a ſon] So God ever fulfilleth his promiſes in good time.

v. 58. rejoyced with her] This is that holy ſympathy which God commandeth, Rom. 12. 15.

v. 59. on the eight day] See Gen. 17. 12. Levit. 12. 3.

they called him Zacharias] They who were to circumciſe him, as the common cuſtom was, called him by his fathers name.

v. 60. he ſhall be called John] It is likely that Zacharie had by writing enformed Elizabeth concerning the whole viſion, and impoſition of this name by the Angel. See note on verſe 13.

v. 61. none of thy kinred] They relyed on the cuſtome; which (had their aſſertion been true) may never be followed againſt the word and commandement of God.

v. 62. they made ſignes to his father] To end the controverſie, they do by ſignes conſult his father.

v. 63. he asked for] Or required: that is, made ſignes to have brought him writing tables: ſo underſtand, ſaying, to be writing, his name is John.

v. 64. his mouth was opened] His voice and uſe of ſpeech, was reſtored him again.

and praiſed God] Doubtleſſe, acknowledging his dumbneſſe a juſt puniſhment of his ſlowneſſe to believe: the righteous are not aſhamed to confeſſe their faults to Gods Honour: and this ſerved to enforme the preſent, that this childe was, (as conceived out of the ordinary courſe) ſo promiſed by an heavenly Oracle.

v. 65. and fear came on all] That is, a reverend conſideration of all theſe things: ſo ought we to meditate on Gods works, as that they may ſeriouſly affect us.

v. 66. all they that heard] All, that is, many: poſſibly many alſo forgat them: as it comonly cometh to paſſe, in things moſt obſervable and divine.

the hand of the Lord was with him] He profited ſo, as that there appeared a ſingular power, and manifeſt grace of God in him.

v. 67. filled with the holy Ghoſt] Inſpired with an excellent meaſure of the Spirit of propheſie concerning the myſtery of our ſalvation by Chriſt.

v. 68 viſited and redeemed] He ſpeaketh of that which was ſpeedily to come, as if it were done, to ſhew the certainty of Gods counſels and promiſes: to viſit, is out of a care and purpoſe to relieve, comfort, and help: though God be ever preſent with us, he doth not alwayes manifeſt it: but when he ſheweth in ſome eminent effect, that he hath care of his people, then he is ſaid to viſit them: ſo alſo when he puniſheth, he is ſaid to viſit. See Jer. 14. 10. Amos 3. 2. Pſalm 89. 33. Iſaiah 27. 1. Iſaiah 29. 6. Here he viſited to redeeme his people from ſinne and damnation, which he did by the Paſſion of Chriſt.

v. 69. an horn of ſalvation] That is, δύναμιν καὶ βασιλείαν σωτήριον, Theophilact. power and a ſaving kingdom: the Hebrews ſignified ſtrength and defence againſt enemies (as Pſalm 132. 17. 18. Pſalm 89. 17. 18.) by an horn of ſalvation.

v. 70. as he ſpake by the mouth of his holy Prophets] Who living in divers ages, yet with one conſent taught concerning ſalvation by Chriſt onely: this doctrine was from the beginning: God ſpake by the mouth of all his Prophets, Hebrews 1. 1. 2 Pet. 1. 21. See Chap. 24. 44.

ſince the world began] As Acts 3. 21. and Pſalm 119. 52. מֵעוֹלָם, meholam, which the the 70. give ἀπ' αἰῶνος, (the word here uſed) of old, or from the beginning of time: from the firſt time that God began to ſpeak by any Prophet. Sometimes the ſame word importeth eternitie.

v. 71. That we ſhould be ſaved, &c.] This declareth the end of Chriſts coming: this ſalvation we muſt underſtand to be from our ſpirituall enemies; Satan and ſin, with whom we have truceleſſe warre: See Epheſians 6. 12, &c.

v. 72. To remember his holy covenant] Becauſe in the long affictoin of his people, his promiſe might have ſeemed forgotten; but God ever remembreth and in the appointed time performeth his promiſes in Chriſt: hath he promiſed remiſſion of ſins? he performeth it in Chriſt. Hath he promiſed eternall life? he performeth it in Chriſt: therefore was the book of the Law (containing all Gods promiſes) ſprinkled with the blood of the ſacrifice (Exodus 24. 7, 8. Hebrews 9. 19.) which ſignified the blood of Chriſt, in whom all theſe promiſes were fulfilled.

v. 73. and the oath which &c.] See Gen. 12. 3. Gen. 17. 4. Gen. 22. 16. Hebr. 6 13.

v. 74. that we being delivered] The efficient cauſe of our deliverance and ſafety is Gods free mercy: the final our ſerving him in holineſſe. See 1 Theſ. 4. 7. 1 Cor. 6. 20. Tit. 2. 11. Rom. 12. 1. Epheſ. 1. 3. We are delivered from ſervile fear, (Rom. 8. 15.) in our peace with God through faith apprehending the merit of Chriſt for our juſtification, Rom. 5. 1. without which none can rightly ſerve God: they who in doubtful anxiety of minde know not whether God accepteth their ſervice or no, can never be accepted: for without faith it is impoſſible to pleaſe him, who loveth willing and cheerfull ſacrifice: firſt then the conſcience muſt be quieted in aſſurance of Gods mercy, that we may ſerve him, as David begging a mercifull audience for his prayer, ſaith, if thou Lord ſhouldſt mark iniquities: O Lord, who ſhall ſtand? but there is forgiveneſſe with thee, that thou mayeſt be feared: Pſal. 130. 3. 4. when God giveth us peace of conſcience, he ſweetly inviteth us to come unto him cheerfully, and to call upon him in our wants with a filiall confidence: as Romans 8. 15, 16. whereas, without hope of attaining, who can pray cheerfully? Tolle Gubernatori ſpem perveniendi, & in mediis fluctibus incertus errabit; take away from the Maſter of the ſhip hope of ſafe arrivall, and being uncertain, he will let his veſſel goe adrift, whither winde and tide will carry her. Now for the preſent, our freedom from fear, is as our immunitie from ſin, not but that ſome Canaanites are ſtill left to exerciſe us: but in that we are ſecure of victory in Chriſt. See Rom. 7. 25. 1 Cor. 15. 57.

v. 75. in holineſſe] See 1 Pet. 1. 15, 16, 17. We muſt be conſtant all our life: it is not enough to begin well.

before him] Before the all-ſeeing God, to whom no hypocrite can be acceptable. See Pſal. 16. 8.

v. 76. go before the face] See Mal. 3. 1. He was the voice of the cryer, to prepare the way, and proclaim the preſence of the King of kings. John 1. 23. the friend of the Bridegroom Chriſt, John 3. 29 the burning and ſhining light, (Matth. 11. 9, 10, 11. John 5. 35.) born before Chriſt: and as Nazianzen orat. 42. ſaith, τῷ προδρόμῳ λύχνῳ τὸ φῶς ἀκολουθεῖ τὸ ὑπέρλαμπρον, that moſt excellent light (Chriſt) followeth (John) the foregoing light.

v. 77. to give knowledge of ſalvation] This is to prepare the way of the Lord: to teach them the will of God, concerning the free pardon of their ſins in Chriſt, which is the ſumme of the Goſpel.

v. 78. the day ſpring] The Sun of righteouſneſſe Chriſt Jeſus, Malachie 4. 2. the worlds ſun riſeth from the low Horizon; But Chriſt deſcended from the incomprehenſible height of Majeſtie, farre above all creatures, to give us light of ſalvation: even from the Father: (John 3. 13.) as the beames from the Sun; he had not his riſing from the Earth, where (as man) he was conceived and born: ſee John 16. 28.

v 79. To give light] Or to appear to: See Iſaiah 9. 1. Matth. 4. 16. 2 Pet. 1. 19. until Chriſt our light ſhine in our hearts, there can be nothing but deathful ignorance therein.

in the way of peace] That is, ſalvation and true happineſſe, in our peace with God, and peace of conſcience.

v. 80. Strong in Spirit] In the gifts and graces of the Spirit: whereby it appeared that God prepared him to a ſingular office: See Chap. 2. 40. 52.

in the deſerts] The places of Judea which were leaſt inhabited; as are great foreſts: the rough mountainous countrey, as verſe 40. See 1 Kings 2. 34. 2 Kings 3. 8. Joſhua 15. 61. not that John Baptiſt lived like an Eremite from all ſociety of men, but in ſome obſcure places, neer Jordan: (as appeareth Luke 3. 3.) until he was called to preach repentance, and to Baptize. See Matth. 3. 1, &c. Luke 3. 1, &c.

CHAP. II.

Verſe 1. IN thoſe dayes] Some ſay in the fourty ſecond yeer of Auguſtus Cæſar, Emperour of Rome, in the thirty third yeer of Herod the Great, Son of Antipater: (Epiphanius Hæreſ. 51. N. 22.) then came the promiſed Shilo, the Meſſias, the King of peace: that Jacobs propheſie might appear fulfilled, Gen. 49. 9. in that the Sceptre and kingly power was now departed from Judah; as alſo that his kingdom was ſpirituall, not of this world, to whoſe princes he would be tributary, and ſubject, thereby declaring, that he came not to take away the order of their government, but to eſtabliſh it.

all the world] All that which was ſubject to the Romans; theſe weſtern parts of the world.

v. 2. this taxing was firſt made] This, firſt, relateth to other taxes following, whether under Cyrenius, as ſome think, or others: ἀπογραφὴ, is here, taking in writing, the pole or name of every region, city, family, and perſon, that they might taxe, or ceſſe them by the head: this taxing was firſt made, when Auguſtus Cæſar, being deſirous to know the wealth and power of his Empire, (though perhaps not with any preſent purpoſe of levying moneyes thereby) among others gave commiſſion to Cyrenius to tax Syria.

when Cyrenius was Governour of Syria] That is, Sulpitius Quirinus. See Joſephus Antiq. lib. 17. cap. 15. and lib. 18. cap. 1. was Governour, ἡγεμονεύοντος, governing: there were other governours in ordinary, to whom this commiſſion of taxing was not given by Cæſar; but to Quirinus or Cyrenius, jure extraordinario: the Emperours aſſigned great and chief men of the Empire to this office: ſo Druſus, this Quirinus, and others were commiſſionated by Auguſtus: ſo the great Germanicus, by Tiberius, Tacit. Annal. Libro primo, & cætera: this ἡγεμονία, and ἡγεμονεύειν, is uſed to import, any great power and authority in the Common-wealth: therefore in the Scriptures ſometimes the Roman Emperour is called ἡγεμὼν: ſometimes it ſignifieth Caſars Deputy; See Matthew 27. 2. &c. So that Cyrenius was not now Preſident of Syria in ordinary, as afterward, after Archelaus, when hee was made Governour, both to govern that Province, and to tax and levy monies on them; whereof you may reade more in Suetonius, and Dioniſius Romanus.

v. 3. into his own city] That is into the chief town or city of their own tribe: as the Metropolis or chief city of Benjamin, was Ieruſalem; of Iuda, Bethleem: hither came Joſeph and Mary, though they dwelt at Nazaret of Galile: Herein appeareth the admirable providence of God, (who doth according to his will in the army of Heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth, Daniel 4. 35.) by a ſecret inſtinct moving the minde of Caſar dreaming of nothing leſſe, to give that very command which muſt occaſion the fulfilling Gods Word by the Prophet concerning Chriſt the Meſsias's birth at Bethlehem-Iudah. So men ſhall do Gods will when they intend it not.

v. 4. city of David] The city where David, Joſeph, and Chriſt was born, of the linage of David. See John 7.42. Micha 5.2. Matth.2.5. 1 Sam.16.1.

v. 5. his eſpouſed wife] Chap.1.27. ſhe is called a Virgin eſpouſed, and here an eſpouſed Wife: which is to ſhew that Joſeph had (according to the Angels word) taken her to wiſe, Matth. 1.24. who was before betrothed to him. For eſpouſal is but marriage promiſed, or contracted: and marriage is eſpouſal accompliſhed: therefore ſhe is here called his eſpouſed wife; becauſe he had married her: he had not known her. Matth. 1.25.

great with childe] See Matth.1.18.

v. 6. while they were there] While Joſeph and Mary were at Bethlehem, to be taxed.

the dayes were accompliſhed] The time was come that Mary ſhould be delivered.

v. 7. her firſt-born] He is ſaid to be the firſt-born, before whom was none elder by the ſame parents, although he be the onely Sonne, after whom there is no ſecond born, as Theophylact well obſerveth.

no room for them] With ſo great a confluence of people coming to be taxed, all the rooms of the Inne were taken up; onely they found room in a Stable.

v. 8. keeping watch, &c.] ἀγραυλοῦντες, that is, (as Theophylact expreſſeth it) ἐν τῷ ἀγρῷ αὐλιζόμενοι ϗ διάγοντες, lying or being without in the fields, intending their flocks, which were otherwiſe in danger of wilde beaſts, or theeves. Some would hence conclude againſt the ancient cuſtom of the Church obſerving the Nativity of Chriſt on the twenty five of December, ſuppoſing it improbable that ſhepherds would in ſo cold a part of the yeer abide with their flocks in the fields; not conſidering the diverſities of air according to the diverſity of climates, neither the vigilant induſtry of countrey men when neceſſity requireth. The learned Iſ. Caſaubon, Exercit. 2. ad Annal. Ecleſ. B. An. 1. Num.14. well adviſeth, Quare vetuſta traditio Eccleſiæ non temere nobis rejicienda; it being but a cold argument which can be grounded on this ſuppoſition, that the ſhepherds would watch their flocks onely in Summer, the ſame hazard and neceſſity of feeding being alſo in the winter, if not greater.

v. 9. came upon them] The Syriac Interpreter giveth it, came unto them: ἐπέστη αὐτοῖς. It importeth ſuch an apparition as ſuddenly came upon them, and unexpectedly, they little thinking of any ſuch thing; that it might appear to be no compact.

glory of the Lord] Such an heavenly brightneſs and light, that the amazed ſhepherds might by ſo unuſual a glory, perceive that he was the Angel of the Lord: Thus God adorned his Meſſenger, to the end, the meſſage by him ſent, might deeply affect their mindes, and be received no otherwiſe, then as from the mouth of the Lord. Had the Angel appeared with leſſe majeſty and authority (as ſometimes Angels appeared) perhaps this great myſtery would not have been ſo readily believed: we more eaſily credit that which we believe cometh from Heaven: ſo that this glory was here neceſſary for the confirmation of theſe witneſſes faith, who were to finde the Meſsias in ſo low an eſtate of his humiliation.

v. 10. fear not] As if he had ſaid; I am not ſent unto you from an angry Judge, nor with any ſad meſſage, but with joyful news.

great joy which ſhall be to all people] The greateſt joy which ever ſounded in the ears of Men or Angels, as concerning a true and eternal bleſſedneſs in Chriſt: and that which concerneth all the people of God, of all nations; all which are, or ſhall be, Jews and Gentiles, bond and free: all believers.

v. 11. for unto you is born this day, &c.] For your good and ſalvation. So Iſaiah 9.6. unto us a childe is born, unto us a ſon is given, &c. this is that great myſtery of godlineſs, God manifeſted in the fleſh, 1 Tim.3.16. this day, after ſo many ages, foretold by the Prophets, ſignified by the legal ceremonies, expected by the faithful; in this afflicted condition of Iſrael, now he is come: this day he is born: this is the day which the Lord hath made, we will rejoyce and be glad in it. Pſal.118.24.

in the city of David] In Bethleem, where God promiſed his nativity, Micha 5.2.

a Saviour] See Matth.1.21. Chriſt the Lord, the promiſed Meſsias; both ſignified anointed: the onely Mediator between God and man, Chriſt our Saviour, God and man: the Angels Lord and preſerver, and mans Redeemer.

v. 12. this ſhall be a ſigne] That they might not be offended and think themſelves deluded, when they ſhould finde Chriſt the Saviour in ſo poor a worldly condition, the Angel preventeth that, before hand ſhewing them how they ſhould finde him.

v. 13. with the angel a multitude] For the more evident confirmation of the truth by ſo many witneſſes, and their faith by ſo glorious a company.

of the heavenly hoſt] The Hebrews uſed to call companies of Angels מחנה אלהים machane elohim, Geneſis 32.2. τὸ παρεμβολὴ θεοῦ; the tents, or hoſt of God: and צבא השמים zeba haſſhamaiim, the hoſt of Heaven, 1 Kings 22.19. and he is called the Lord of Hoſts, Pſalm 24. &c.

praiſing God] Thus God would have this publick ſervice (for ſo their multitude made it) performed by all that have knowledge of and intereſt in the birth of Chriſt: as to maniſeſt his mercy and truth, ſo to condemn their ſtupid ingratitude who perverſly refuſe to joyn in this duty: as if general precepts in Gods Word, right reaſon, and the examples of men and Angels, inſpired by Gods Spirit, choſen witneſſes of our Saviours nativity, and for this ſame purpoſe ſent by God himſelf from Heaven, that they might thus celebrate that day, were not ſufficient warrant to lead them to imitation, and joyning in an holy harmony with them.

v. 14. Glory to God] Let God be glorified, in mans reconciliation to him. Or they congratulate and rejoyce praiſing God for both theſe.

in the higheſt] In Heaven; Hebr. במרום bammarom, on high, Pſal.93.4. So the Syriac hence hath במרומא (in excelſis) bamraume.

on earth peace] See Luke 19.38. and at this time all the World was at peace.

good will towards men] The free mercy of God towards men, and love and good will of one man towards another: whereas ſinfull man was at enmity with God; in Chriſt he is reconciled. See Romans 5.10. Coloſsians 1. 20.21.

v. 15. the ſhepherds] Gr. the men: the ſhepherds, that is, the men which were ſhepherds.

and ſee this thing] τὸ ῥῆμα τοῦτο, this word: ſo the Hebrews put דבר dabar, a word, pro rebus verbo celebratis, as was noted, cap. 1.37. for the things ſpoken, 2 Kings 17.9, 11, &c. So here, this word ſignifieth, this thing which the Angel told us. See v.19. and on Deut. cap.1.37.

v. 16. came with haſte] Neither the hazard of their flocks, length of way, nor darkneſſe retarded them: this faith and ready obedience, God rewarded, in their finding their Saviour, to their great joy and comfort, verſ 20.

17. they made known abroad the ſaying] This was their faith, and ſincerity, that they truly related to others thoſe things which they had ſeen, and heard of the Angel concerning Chriſt. Thus would God propagate the glorious myſteries of the kingdom of Chriſt by men ſo obſcure and ſimple; as to beat down the arrogance of carnal reaſon, ſo to confirm our faith. For, as Lactantius ſaith of Chriſtians truth, Abſuit ab iis fingendi voluntas, & aſtutia, quoniam rudes fuerunt, &c. lib. 5. cap. 3. they had neither will nor ſubtilty to feign, becauſe they were ignorant: therefore they were of the minde of thoſe four Lepers, 2 Kings 7.8, 9. being themſelves refreſhed and abundantly enriched by the Aſſyrian tents, they ſaid one to another, We do not well, this day is a day of good tydings, and we hold our peace,---Now therefore come, that we may go and tell, &c.

v. 18. wondred at theſe things] as men thoughtful, what all theſe things would come to. This knowledge therefore left them more unexcuſable, who thereby did not profit in the faith of Chriſt.

v. 19. kept all theſe things] τὰ ῥήματα: that is, as Theophylact interpreteth τὰ πράγματα. See on v. 15. thoſe things; the ſpeech of the Angel, and all that which the Shepherds related, and all that which now came to paſſe.

and pondred them in her heart] Diligently comparing, and laying theſe things together.

v. 20. the ſhepherds returned] To their calling and habitations.

glorifying and praiſing, &c.] This is an effect of faith, and the end of our coming to Chriſt.

v. 21. when the eight dayes were accompliſhed] See Geneſis 17.12. Levit.12.3. Luke 1.59. Thus would he be ſubjected to the law, that he might redeem thoſe who were under the law (Galat.4.4.) and deliver us from the curſe of the law.

his name was called Jeſus] The Jews uſed to name their children when they circumciſed them, as we do when we baptize them: God would have him named, according to the office aſſigned him; to declare that there is no other name under Heaven whereby we can be ſaved, Acts 4.12. Neither was this done by the counſel of man, but God, who ſent his Angel to name him ſo before his incarnation. See 1.21. Luke 1.31.

v. 22. dayes of her purification] See Levit. 12.2,5,6. For though Mary was not made unclean in her conception, but rather ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt and power of the moſt High; yet thus ought they then to fulfil the law, which was not as yet repealed, or taken away, as it was afterward when Chriſt had accompliſhed and fulfilled the ſame.

to preſent him to the Lord] To dedicate, commend him to, or ſet him before the Lord in the place of his publick worſhip. See Exod.13.12. Numb.18.15. Exod.22-29.

v. 23. every male] This was he for whoſe ſake all the firſtborn under the Law were holy to the Lord, as Tertullian ſaith, *c.*23. De carne Chriſti.

v. 24. according to that which is ſaid] Levit.12.2.6.

a pair of turtle doves] Which offering was appointed unto them who were ſo poor that they were not able to offer a Lamb, or a Sheep, Levit. 5.7.

v. 25. was juſt and devout] One that feared God, and expected the coming of the Meſſias. See verſ 38. and Mark 15.43.

the holy ghoſt was upon him] That is, the ſpirit of propheſie.

v. 26. that he ſhould not ſee death.] That he ſhould not dye, before he had ſeen Chriſt the anointed King, Prieſt, and Prophet, come in the fleſh. See Pſal.2.6. Iſaiah 61.1. Dan.9.24.

v. 27. came by the ſpirit] By the ſecret inſtinct and motion of the holy Ghoſt.

when the parents brought the childe Ieſus] That is Ioſeph (the reputed father of Ieſus: See Hebr.7.3.) and Mary his mother.

v. 28. then took he him up] With great joy did he imbrace Chriſt in his arms, and bleſſed God: that is, gave thanks and praiſe to God for Chriſt, now born in the fleſh.

v. 29. Lord now letteſt thou thy ſervant depart, &c.] Now that thou haſt ſhewed me the fulfilling of thy promiſe concerning my Saviour the Meſsias, whom thou haſt given to raiſe up the tribes of Iacob, to reſtore the preſerved of Iſrael, and a light to lighten the Gentiles to be thy ſalvation unto the end of the earth, Iſaiah 49.6. Hebr.2.10. and 5.9. now I willingly and cheerfully leave this preſent life.

v. 30. for mine eyes have ſeen thy ſalvation] Pſal.98. Iſaiah 52.10. he did before this time ſee Chriſt with the eye of faith, as Abraham did, and rejoyced: but now he ſaw with his bodily eyes that fulfilled which he before expected.

v. 31. before the face of all people] As that which thou wilt make manifeſt to all nations.

v. 32. a light to lighten the Gentiles] A light to ſhine unto the Gentiles who were aliants to the covenant of God, and ſate in the region and ſhadow of death, Matth. 4.16. that is, ignorance and ſpiritual blindneſs: now ſhall he teach them the knowledge of God, and life everlaſting: he alludeth to Pſalm 98.2. Iſaiah 9.2. Iſaiah 42.6. and 49.6. this is that which God promiſed by all the Prophets, the ſum of whoſe words is, that all Nations of the world ſhould look up to Chriſt, the onely author of ſalvation. See John 8.12. Coloſ. 3.5. Epheſ. 5.3. 1 Corinth. 6.4. Acts 26.16. Iſaiah 60.1. &c.

the glory of thy people Iſrael] With whom he had a covenant; who were his adopted and firſt-born, Exod. 4.22. to them peculiarly was Chriſt promiſed: among them was he born in the fleſh: See Rom.1.3. Rom.9.5. to them he firſt offered the covenant of free-grace in him.

v. 33. marvelled] Not becauſe they beleeved not (being confirmed by ſo many teſtimonies of the Angel, ſhepherds & wiſemen) but becauſe they apprehended an admirable concurrence of all theſe, declaring the truth of God fulfilled in Chriſt.

v. 34. Simeon bleſſed them] He prayed for the ſucceſſe of Chriſts kingdome, and Ioſephs and Maries proſperity.

behold this childe is ſet for the fall, &c.] This κεῖται, is ſet, importeth not onely the event, but alſo the decree of God: which when it is come to the execution thereof; then, as we muſt underſtand, that the free grace of God (calling and working faith in the elect to apprehend the merits of Chriſt for their juſtification) cometh between the decree of ſaving them, and their ſalvation: ſo, between the fall of reprobates, and Gods decree concerning them, their own corruption, and wilful unbelief intercedeth: ſo that as God juſtly decreed to puniſh them for that which he foreſaw in them from eternity: So doth he no otherwiſe execute that his counſel in time, then by a juſt puniſhment of their wickedneſs; and they bear no more then that which themſelves have cauſed, and truly deſerved: and ſo underſtand this place: That Chriſt was ſet or appointed for the fall and greater condemnation of unbelievers (who wilfully fall upon this rock of offence which God layed in Sion) and for the reſurrection and recovery of the elect to whom he giveth faith, Epheſ.2.8. So God ſaveth the elect in free mercy, and caſteth away the reprobate in abſolute juſtice, whom he predeſtinated to juſt puniſhment, but not to ſin, but for ſin. See Iſaiah 8.14. 15. Rom.9.3. 1 Pet.2.8.

which ſhall be ſpoken againſt] By unbelievers and wicked men, the enemies of Chriſt and the Goſpel; who, however diſſenting among themſelves, yet all combine againſt him, as if he were the onely mark for all the powers of Hell to ſhoot at.

v. 35. a ſword ſhall pierce] That is, bitter ſorrows ſhall afflict thy heart: he ſeemeth to allude to Pſalm 105.18. This he ſaith concerning Maries heart-grief which ſhe ſhould conceive for her dear Sons ſufferings, to which ſhe was conformable in a double capacity: firſt as a tender mother: next as a true member of his myſtical body wherein his ſufferings were meritorious, and ſanctified hers.

v. 36. a propheteſſe] That is much exerciſed in the holy Scriptures, and inſpired of the holy Ghoſt to declare things hidden, extraordinary, and unuſual. See 1 *Sam.*18. 10. or things to come. See Acts 11.28. 1 Cor.14.3. Judg. 4.4. 2 Kings 22.14. this Luke inſerteth to ſhew the authority by which ſhe ſpake, not as a vulgar woman; and to the ſame end ſerveth the deſcription of her.

v. 37. departed not from the temple] Not that ſhe was a Recluſe: but this ſheweth that ſhe daily frequented the temple: night and day, or continually, in ſuch acts of religion, import a conſtancy, without ceaſing, not without intermiſſion. See 1 Theſſ. 5.17. 1 Tim. 5.5. Luke 24.53. 1 Theſſ. 3.10.

v. 39. They returned into Galilee] That is, Joſeph and Mary with the childe Jeſus, after they had been in Egypt, as Joſeph was warned by the Angel, which ſtory Matthew recordeth, Matth. 2.13, &c. and this Evangeliſt omitteth in purſuit of the following hiſtory for as Epiphanius. Alog. hæreſ. 51.6. well obſerveth; God gave every Evangeliſt his proper task: ſo as that they related ſomethings συμφώνως καὶ ἴσως with one accord and equally; thereby ſhewing that they all drew out of the ſame fountain: other things omitted of all the reſt, one of them rehearſeth, as the holy Spirit gave him that for his part, as hath been noted.

v. 40. Filled with wiſdom] With admirable wiſdom ſhewing it ſelf in him as he grew up: this was the effect of the deity dwelling in him, ſhining from under the vail of his aſſumed humanity; to the deity could nothing be added: an infinite cannot encreaſe: in the humanity he was as we in all things without ſin. Hebr. 4.15. and ſo had a native ignorance of ſomethings; from which he grew as he encreaſed in age: for though the deity and humanity were but one perſon, yet were not the incommunicable properties of the deity given to the humane nature: the deity was infinite, omnipreſent, &c. ſo was not the humanity, &c.

v. 41. The paſſeover] See Matth 26.2. and Luke 22.1. they went up to the Paſſeover as was commanded Deu. 16. 1. It ſeemeth Mary came up of her own free devotion, as did alſo Hanna. 1. Sam. 1. 2. &c.

v. 43. Fulfilled the dayes] The dayes of the feaſt preſcribed by the law. Exod. 23. 15.

the childe Jeſus tarried behinde] not out of any diſobedience, but to ſhew what his office was, to which he was deſigned by his father, the prophets foretold hereof. Iſai. 61. 1. and Chriſt mentioned it c. 4. 43.

v. 44. To have been in the company] ἐν τῇ συνοδίᾳ the Syriac interpreter giveth cum comitibus eorum: with the company or companions in the way, for they uſed to come up to the feaſts at Jeruſalem from all parts of the land in great companies; and ſo to returne home again.

v. 45. They returned back] Not without great perplexity of minde; that not only for loſſe of time, labour and the company of their friends and kinred, but principially for fear of the childe Jeſus.

v. 46. The midſt of the doctors] With the doctors: it is an Hebraiſme: as c. 22. 27. it may be he ſate at their feet, not in the cheif ſeats; of which Luke 11. 43.

v. 47. Were aſtoniſhed] ἐξίσαντο properly ſignifieth, they were out of themſelves with admiration, it was beyond their underſtandings which they heard, in the preludium, and firſt reliſh of Chriſts miniſtery: the ſame word uſed c. 24. 22. Budæus interpreteth, ad ſtuporem uſq; nos perculerunt.

v. 48. Thy father and I] Theophylact thinketh ſhe thus called him in reſpect of the Jews, ἵνα μὴ νομισθῇ ἐκ πορνείας εἶναι; but indeed ſhe thus called him, becauſe though he was not his naturall father, yet was he (as Epiphanius ſaith. Ebionit. hæreſ. 30.) ἐν τάξει, that is vice, or munere, a father: the Evangeliſt beſt expreſſeth, it his ſuppoſed father. c. 3. 23.

v. 49. My fathers buſineſſe ἐν τοῖς τοῦ πατρός μου ---- in the things which are my fathers: the Syriac giveth it, know ye not that I muſt be, דבית אבי debeth abbi; in my fathers houſe? that is, the temple where they found him; the meaning is, doing that which appertained to mans ſalvation: his purpoſe was to ſhew, that though duty to parents muſt be obſerved, yet duty to God muſt be preferred. Matth. 10. 37.

v. 50. They underſtood not the ſaying] For his office of a mediatour and ſaviour was not yet known to them. though the Angel had foretold it. Matth. 1. 21. and Zachary had propheſied it. Luke 1. 68, &c.

v. 51. Was ſubject unto them] From that time till he was about thirty years old. c. 3. 23. Mark 6. 3. this ſubjection was not infirmitatis, but pietatis as Ambros. in Luc. l. 2. c. 2. obſerveth, diſce quid parentibus tuis debeas, ſaith the ſame, thou oweſt to thy mothers trouble, ſorrow and danger in bringing thee into the world, who when ſhe hath brought forth what ſhe long deſired, partu abſolvitur, non timore: ſhe is delivered of the birth, not her fear: many labours and cares of parents belong to the education of children; oughteſt thou not for all theſe, to requite them with thy obedience?

v. 52. Increaſed in wiſdom] as a childe lege humana natura as Euthymius ſaith well, he encreaſed by little and little; for as God, he was abſolutely perfect: becauſe he aſſumed a reaſonable ſoul as well as an humane body, the deity thereto united was ſo vailed, that the graces thereof ſhewed themſelves by certain degrees, according to the maturity of his humane faculties; and ſo he encreaſed in wiſdom; though the fulneſs of the Godhead dwell in him. Col. 2. 9.

and ſtature] ἡλικία. In ſtature of body, the Gr. word alſo ſignifieth age. So he, as man encreaſed in body and ſoul; Nam ſicut carnis eſt ætate proficere, ſic eſt animæ ſapientiâ & gratiâ profeciſſe. Fulgent. de myſt. Mediat. ad Thraſ. lib. 1.

v. 2. Annas and Caiphas being the high prieſts] There were three degrees of miniſters under the law Prieſts, Levites, and Nethinims: over theſe the high Prieſt was chief; and that office was ſucceſſively tied to the line of Aarons firſt born, all the reſt of his poſterity were Prieſts: but there was to be but one high Prieſt, at whoſe death another was ſtill to ſucceede: that two are here named high Prieſts together; ſome think that the Grecian Kings, at their pleaſure made high prieſts to officiate by the year, not for life. V. Shindler lex. Pent. in כהן others impute this diſorder and violation of Gods law concerning the perpetuity of this office in one man during life, to the power and covetouſneſſe of the Romans. But for better reſolution we muſt conſider that the high Prieſt had alſo his ſuffragan, or סגן ſagan, who in caſe of the high Prieſts pollution performed his office: Such was Zephaniah. So Ambroſ. in Luc l. 2. c. 3. underſtandeth here ædificationem eccleſiæ, the edification of the Church of Chriſt, conſiſting of living ſtones, 1 Pet. 2. 5. and thoſe principally of the Gentiles to be converted.

v.9. The axe is laid to the root of the trees] See on Matth. 3. 10. the metaphor ſhewed them, that the inſtruments of their deſtruction (ſuch as were Titus and Veſpaſian) were near,and ſhould quickly execute;except they repented,the axe is laid to the root,cū tota ſimul progenies cū parente tollitur. Greg. ho. 20. when the whole progeny is cut up with the parent: which judgement then threatned the Jewiſh nation.

v. 10. What ſhall we do?] Their hearts being toucht with Johns preaching they enquire (as Peters hearers alſo did. Act. 2. 37.) what they ſhould do? as if they ſaid, what fruits muſt we bring forth, that we may flee from the anger to come.

v. 11. He that hath two coats] as Ambroſe ſaith, to thoſe ſeverall ſorts of men he gave an anſwer, ſingulis conveniens, omnibus unum; convenient to every particular one, but in ſubſtance it was but one precept; that is concerning mercy and charity, which is plenitudo virtutum: the fulneſſe of vertue: the moſt acceptable fruit of repentance, without which, all religion is vain, and the anger of God hangeth over men. See 1 Cor.13.1. Jam.1.26.27. & 2.14. 1 Joh. 3.17. 1 John 4.20. John 13.35.

v. 12. Publicans to be baptized] Theſe were officers who received tribute,and cuſtome for the Romans. See on Matt. 9.10. & Matth. 5.46. this office was erected among the Jewes after that Pompey had ſubdued them (whereof ſee Joſeph. de bel. Jud l. 1. c. 5.) and they became tributary to the Romans,about threeſcore years before the birth of our Saviour: of Publicans Cicero and other authors make often mention.

v. 13. Exact no more, &c.] He taxeth the unjuſt exactions whereby ſuch men commonly grieve the people: therefore chap.19.8. Zache, in his converſion, proclaimeth reſtitution, without which (where there is any ability) can be no true repentance: not that the office was unlawfull, but becauſe oppreſſion and religion are unconſiſtent: therefore, of many ſins whereof John Baptiſt might have admoniſhed them, he inſtanced onely in that to which they were commonly given, and which cannot ſtand with charity and equity; without which,faith is dead, and all religion counterfeit.

v.14. Do violence to no man] Or put no man in fear by your violence, and ravages.

your wages] let your pay, and allowance of victuall, apparel, or appointed quarter content you: extort no more: if Chriſtian diſcipline had diſallowed all wars, it ſhould have been told theſe that asked counſel, ut abjicerent arma that they ought to lay down their arms. Auguſtin. Marcellin. ep. 5.

v. 15. People were in expectation] Or in ſuſpence Conſidering the unuſual auſterity and excellency of John, they began to have hope that he was their long expected Meſſias. So the Syriac expreſſeth this προσδοκῶντος, by the word סבר Sebar: which ſignifieth hope: as alſo סברא Sabro.Act.24.15. 1 Tim.5.5.&c.alſo it ſignifieth joyful tidings, the Goſpel, &c. Luke 2. 14. Matth.4.23,&c.

v. 16. I indeed baptize you with water, &c.] Meaning that he adminiſtred onely the external ſigne and Sacrament, but Chriſt would give the inward effect thereof,for the waſhing away their ſins. See on Matth. 3. 11. Mark 1.8. John 1.26. Acts 1.5. Acts 11.16. & 19.4.

and with fire] Meaning that Chriſt would cleanſe them from their ſins, as fire doth the gold from droſſe. See Acts 2. 3.

v. 17. Whoſe fan is in his hand] See on Matth. 3. 12. the preaching of the goſpell is as a fan in Chriſts hand: before the truth is preached, all ſeem one confuſed heap; chaffe and wheat, good and bad are undiſtinctly one maſſe in the Church: it is the fan which ſeparateth the chaffe: thus he ſhewed the Jews, that there was now coming a purging blaſt of the truth to be preached, which ſhould make them fly out of the Church,as chaff out of the floor, in which they with their many corruptions had hitherto but filled up a place: this ſeperation Chriſt beginneth here,which ſhall be perfected in the life to come; and it is to be underſtood concerning the effect of the word preached,which proveth a Savour of like unto life to ſome, and a Savour of death to death to others: it edifieth and comforteth ſome,and enrageth others to an heat of perſecution of Chriſts Miniſters; concerning the finall and abſolute ſeparation to life or death eternal, we may not here pronounce (of that he ſaith Matt. 13.30. Let both grow until the harveſt, &c.) That we now ſee by wofull experience many ſeparating from us,let none be offended: the winde bloweth out the chaff from the floor, not the good grain, as Cyprian. de ſimpl. prælat. tract. 3. ſaith, let thoſe of light faith, as much as they will, flee away with every breath of tentation eo purior maſſa frumenti in horrea Domini reponetur ſaid Tertullian de præſcript. chap. 3. the more purer heap ſhall be laid up in the Lords granary the Church; ſome of Chriſts diſciples taking offence at his words (John 6.66.) ſeparated: do we wonder that ſome depart from his Church? theſe things ſhew us to be Chriſtians which we ſuffer according to the example of Chriſt; they went out from us, they were not of us, 1 John 2. 19.

v. 18. Many other things] this Evangeliſt wrote only the ſum of Johns preaching, as much as might demonſtrate him to be the foreordained meſſenger to prepare the way of Chriſt, to whoſe hiſtory he addreſſed his diſcourſe. See Mal. 3. 1.

v. 19. But Herod] See on Matth. 14. 3. and Mark 6. 17.

v. 20. Added yet this above all] This bloody fact helped to fill up the meaſure of his ſin, in that being incenſed againſt the word of God, he revenged himſelf on the Miniſter thereof as on an enemy: a ſad document to all perſecuters of Chriſts Miniſters, would they underſtand it.

v. 21 Jeſus alſo being baptized] See on Matth.3. 13.Mark. 1.10. John 1. 32. he would be baptized, non mundari volens, ſed mundare aquas— ſaith Ambroſ. in luc. lib. 2. cap. 3. not to be cleanſed, but to cleanſe the waters, that they being made clean by the fleſh of Chriſt who knew no ſin, might have baptiſmatis jus---- an ordinance, and right to baptiſme.

v.22. Like a dove] See on Matth.3.16. John 1. 32. why like a dove? (ſaith Ambroſ.) ſimplicitatem enim lavacri requirit gratia. Our baptiſme enjoyneth us to be ſimple and harmleſs as doves.

v.23. About thirty years of age] At which age the Prieſts were to enter into their function. Num.4.3.35. &c.

being (as was ſuppoſed) the ſon of Joſeph] for Chriſt as man, had no father; as God, no mother; as it is ſaid of Melchiſedec his type. Heb. 7. 3.

Son of Eli] Luke aſcendeth from the laſt father to the firſt,and Matthew contrariwiſe deſcendeth; extending his rehearſall no further then to Abraham; to aſſure the Jewes of Gods promiſe in Chriſt fulfilled to them. Luke rehearſeth to Adam, to aſſure the Gentiles alſo of their intereſt in Chriſt, for as much as they were the ſons of Adam,though not of Abraham. Note alſo that the Jews reckoned their genealogies, not only by the natural,but alſo by the legall deſcents: and that whereas divers men had two names: one of the Evangeliſts reciting one, and the other another,they yet agree in the ſame perſon.

v. 34. ſon of Thara] Geneſis 11.24,26.

v.36. which was the ſon of Cainan, which was the ſon of Arphaxad] Moſes ſaith Arphaxad begat Sala,Geneſis 10.24.but this Evangeliſt reckoneth Cainan between Arphaxad and Sala. For the reconciliation of theſe places, and the better underſtanding thereof, conſider,

1. That all the word of God is infallibly true, and without all contradiction John 17. 17. 2 Tim.3.16. though we underſtand not ſome; neither how to reconcile others of them.

2. That not one jot,or tittle of the Scriptures, in matter of ſubſtance, hath paſſed away, or ever ſhall, until all be fulfilled, Matth.5.18. Luke 16.17.

3. That ſome perſons mentioned in holy Scriptures were binomii, ſuch as had two names: ſo Eſau was alſo called Edom.Gen.25.30. Gen.36.1.8. J*erom adverſus Hevild.* inſtanceth in Raguel Moſes father in law,called alſo J*ethro*. So alſo in Gedeon; Ozias, &c. So was Simon alſo called Peter. John 1.42. J*oſeph* was alſo called Barſabas, and ſurnamed J*uſtus*. Act. 1. 23. So Simon was called Niger. So Iudas was ſurnamed Barſabas. Act. 15. 22. ſome think Shem was called Melchiſedec.

4. That Gods Spirit in opening the truth of holy Scriptures (as Lactantius well noted. lib. 2. cap. 9.) would have us know thoſe things which concern life eternal, and the means thereto; other things he omitted or cauſed to be abridged. See John 20. 30. 31. John. 21. 25. therefore Matthew omitted 3. deſcents. Matth. 1. 8. where it is ſaid,that J*oram* begate Ozias: Ahaziah,J*oaſh*, and Amaziah, are omitted. See 1 Chron. 3. 11.12. See note on Matth. 1. 8. ſo Chriſt is called the Son of David. Matth. 1.1. you muſt underſtand that many generations and forefathers according to the fleſh, came between. So Luke 1. 5. Luke 13. 16. &c. It is probable which ſome ſay; that ſeeing Matthew propoſed to mark a threefold ſtate of Iſrael from the promiſe made to Abraham concerning Chriſt, unto the time of his coming in the fleſh; he reckoneth. 3. times

14. generations; within which compaſſe holding himſelf, he was not curious of choice, but indifferently mentioneth holy and wicked, and ſo many in ſucceſſion; his principall ſcope being to ſhew the truth of Gods promiſe fulfilled, in Chriſts incarnation. And certainly Moſes alſo intending to ſhew how God ever had his Church, and to declare the truth of his promiſe concerning Chriſt, principally took care to ſhew in what line the Church continued; neither reckoning all the Saints which were in that line, nor them onely which were holy; nor all deſcents in a direct line, without intermiſſion of any perſon.

5. There are many ellipticall and ſhort ſpeakings in ſcriptures: ſo that the interpreter muſt neceſſarily inſert the word, or words there underſtood. as Luke 7. 11. ἐν τῇ ἑξῆς underſtand ἡμέρᾳ: which the Syriac inſerteth; or χρόνῳ as it ſeems Theophylact doth, reading ἐν τῷ ἑξῆς: deinceps, as chap. 8. 1. ἐν τῷ καθεξῆς. So John 5. 36. I have witneſſe, μείζω τοῦ Ἰωάννου; that is, μείζω τῆς τοῦ Ἰωάννου as the learned Beza noteth: the full ſpeech muſt have been μείζω τῆς μαρτυρίας τοῦ Ἰωάννου: greater then that teſtimony of John. So Acts 15. 5. ἐξανέστησαν δέ τινες, there εἶπον (they ſaid) is underſtood. So Matth. 21. 30. The ſecond ſon ſaid, ἐγώ; underſtand ἀπέρχομαι, or ποιήσω, I will go, or will do ſo. So Matth. 1. 6. ἐκ τῆς τοῦ Οὐρίου where γυναικὸς and the word γενομένης are to be underſtood: Uriahs wife, which became Davids. So Rom. 11. 4. τῇ Βάαλ, that is, τῇ εἰκόνι τοῦ Βάαλ. So Mark 14. 43. παρὰ τῶν Ἀρχιερέων: underſtand πεμφθέντες or ἀποσταλθέντες, ſent from the high prieſts. See Acts 9. 11.

6. That the article ὁ, is ſometimes put to ſignifie that which is, or is called ſomething notable. Mark 15. 16. ὅ ἐστι πραιτώριον, which is called the pretory: ſometimes that word is expreſſed: as, Luke 21. 37. τὸ ὄρος τὸ καλούμενον ἐλαιῶν, that is, τὸ ὄρος τῶν ἐλαιῶν: as, Mark 11. 1. Luke 22. 39. of which ellipſis of the word הַר, we read alſo, 2 Sam. 15. 30. Sometimes the Greeks double the article, and propoſe it to both names. John 1. 42. John 6. 69.

7. For concluſion then (ſeeing all the ſcripture is infallibly true, and no jot thereof may paſſe away) we muſt underſtand that (whereas Luke here nameth Cainan, between Arphaxad and Sala, which Moſes in the ſame genealogie doth not, Gen. 10. 24.) Moſes in that epitome of hiſtory, ſaying Arphaxad ילד jalad 70. ἐγέννησε begat Sala, muſt be no otherwiſe underſtood, then Matth. 1. 8. Joram (ἐγέννησε) begat Ozias: not immediately, but as one of his progenitors: as, 1 Chron. 3. 11. &c. or as the whole ſeries of this genealogie is ellipticall υἱοῦ being ſo often underſtood: So may we here underſtand καλουμένου; as if we read Ἔβερ τοῦ Σαλὰ, τοῦ καλουμένου Καϊνάν. Eber the ſon of Sala, who was alſo called Cainan: and ſo this article τοῦ may here be underſtood, as ſet to diſtinguiſh this ſurnamed Cainan, from his anceſtour of the ſame name mentioned, Gen. 5. 9. 12, 13, 14. and here verſe 37. or if we underſtand here λεγομένου, it may onely point out the vulgar errour, which it may be the miſtake or corruption of the 70. interpreters brought in; that being then the vulgar and commonly received tranſlation of the old teſtament into the Greek tongue; and ſo may the Syriac reading here be underſtood, ſhala בר קינן bar Kainan, that is, דמתקרא בר קינן demeth kere bar Kainan, which is called the ſon of Cainan: ever neceſſary in difficult genealogies, is that rule of the Apoſtle. 1 Tim. 1. 4. that we give not heed to endleſſe genealogies, which miniſter queſtions, rather then godly edifying which is in faith: the end of the commandment being charity out of a pure heart, and of a good conſcience, and of faith unfeigned. See alſo Tit. 3. 9. Theſe things are written that we may beleeve, that Jeſus is the Chriſt the Son of God, and that beleeving, we may have life through his Name. John 20. 31.

The ſon of Sem] Gen. 11. 10. &c.

v. 37. the ſon of Methuſala] Gen. 5. 21. &c.

v. 38. the Son of God] God is the univerſall parent, and creatour of all men. See Deut. 32. 6. 18, 19. But Adams parentage extendeth to God his Maker, who had not as all other mere men, any humane parent: therefore the Syriac readeth דמן אלהא demen eloho, who was of God.

tempted of the devil] Matth. 4. 3. He was in the wilderneſſe fourty dayes, where the devil tempted him: he was manifeſted that he might deſtroy the works of the devil: therefore he preſently began his combate with him, that he might overthrow his kingdom: he would not exceed the faſts of Moſes and Elias; ſome think it was that Satan might not ſuſpect him to be greater then they; Theophylact, Euthymius, leſt otherwiſe, ſaith Chryſoſtom, ἄπιστος ἔδοξεν εἶναι ἡ τῆς σαρκὸς ἀνάληψις, his aſſumption of fleſh, ſhould ſeem incredible. So alſo Theophylact, on Matth. 4.

v. 3. If thou be the Son of God] Thus Chriſt preſently after his baptiſme is tempted, ſhewing us therein, that Satans temptations moſt rage in the ſanctified; quia victoria ei eſt magis exoptata de ſanctis. Hilar. in Matth. canon. 3. becauſe he moſt deſireth victory over the Saints: others; *ut captivos & victos contemnit & praterit, &c. word of God] The meaning is, by the ordinance and providence of God; whereby he enableth the creature to nouriſh man.

v. 5. taking him up, &c.] Matth. 4. 8. That he ſhewed Chriſt here, all the kingdoms of the world in a moment, declareth that this ſhewing, was by a viſion: otherwiſe all could not have been under view in a moment, as here it was.

v. 6. that is delivered unto me] This he ſpake of his own, as a lying ſpirit; John 8. 44. for he can do no more then God permitteth him. (Rev. 13. 7.) neither in giving nor taking away.

v. 7. worſhip me] or fall down before me: this the ſacrilegious impudent ſpirit ſaith, that failing in his other aſſaults, nunc vel ambitione corrumperet, Hilar. can. 3. he might (as he did the firſt Adam) corrupt him by ambition: it was ambition which caſt him out of heaven; in which ſin he ſtill continueth; affecting the honour due to God alone, in that he would have us ſerve and worſhip him; as idolaters do. 1 Cor. 10. 20.

v. 8. get thee behinde me] Avoid and get thee gone.

it is written] Deut. 6. 13. & 10. 20.

him onely ſhalt thou ſerve] Chriſt interpreteth Moſes words, by adding him onely, &c. becauſe this is the true worſhip of God, to ſerve him onely, and no creature with him. See Rev. 19. 10. and 22. 8, 9. Matth. 4. 10. this is an excellent ſhield againſt ambition: caret enim ambitione religioſa devotio, Ambroſ. in Luc. l. 4. c. 4. religious devotion is free from ambition.

v. 9. brought him to Jeruſalem] See on Matth. 4. 5.

caſt thy ſelf down] Thus he tempteth: perſwading men to hurt themſelves, becauſe without their own conſent, he can neither hurt them, nor compel them to do any evil: the conſent of the corrupted will is in every act of ſin.

v. 10. For it is written] Pſal. 91. 11. Thus the devil (as impious hereticks, his diſciples) perverteth ſcriptures, either citing part, and leaving out the reſt, as here he leaveth out (to keep thee in all thy wayes (not in any evil way) or miſinterpreting and miſapplying them to their own deſtruction. 2 Pet. 3. 16. the ſcripture ſaith not, caſt thy ſelf down, this Satan addes. Ireneus l. 5. c. 3. See Nicet. com. in Gr. Nazian. orat. 40. n. 11.

v. 12. Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord] Deut. 6. 16.

v. 13. for a ſeaſon] For he ſet upon him furiouſly in his paſſion See Luke 22. 53. John 14. 10. in which laſt aſſaults, he came not (as Ambroſ. ſaith) tentaturus, ſed apertè pugnaturus; not to tempt, but openly to fight.

v. 14. in the power of the ſpirit] That is, ſupported in that journey by divine power: ſo that he came ſpeedily, by the ſame ſpirit, by which he was ſuſtained without meat, fourty dayes in the wilderneſſe; and with which he was abundantly furniſhed for the execution of his Miniſtry.

v. 15. in their ſynagogues &c.] That is, in their churches, wherein they met to hear the lectures of the law every ſabbath-day. Acts 15. 21. Jeruſalem was the place which God had choſen for his Temple, ſacrifices, and other publike worſhip, there onely to be performed.

glorified of all] δοξαζόμενος, That is, magnified, admired and praiſed, as for his doctrine delivered with divine power and authority, beyond the manner of all other teachers. Matth. 7. 28, 29. and here, verſe 32. So alſo for his miracles, whereby he confirmed the ſame: by doing good to all, and in this (all) we muſt underſtand the moſt part: or excepting thoſe, who out of envy, and the ſpirit of contradiction, diſtaſted any thing that was good: all others glorified him: the preſent praiſed him, and the abſent celebrated his fame.

v. 16. on the ſabbath-day] See note on Matth. 12. 1. and Luke 6. 1. Matth. 13. 54.

and ſtood up for to read] As the manner was to read ſome portion of the law and the Prophets every ſabbath-day. See Acts 13. 15. and 15. 21.

v. 17. There was delivered unto him] By ſome officer of that ſynagogue; according to the cuſtom, to ſhew (ſaith Ambroſe in Luc. l. 4. c. 4.) that it was himſelf who ſpake in the Prophets; and to repell their ſacrilegious perſideouſneſſe, who ſay that there was one God of the old teſtament, and another of the new; &c.

v. 18. the ſpirit of the Lord is upon me] See Iſaiah 61. 1. The fulneſſe of the ſpirit; all the gifts thereof; not by meaſure, as it was on the Prophets and Apoſtles, and is on the faithfull Miniſters, in ſome good meaſure to enable them to their office and miniſtration. See Iſaiah 11. 2. John 3. 34. Col. 2. 9.

deliverance to the captives] To thoſe who were held captive of Satan and ſin (ſuch as we all were by nature. Epheſ. 2. 3. Rom. 7. 14.) this he did when he preached and proclaimed the new covenant of God, that is, free remiſſion of ſins to thoſe who beleeve in him: that he hath fully ſatisfied Gods juſtice for us: this whoſoever truely beleeveth, is by the ſame ſpirit (working faith and obedience in him) manumiſſed, and ſet at liberty from the kingdom of ſin and Satan; although yet they exerciſe ſome tyranny over him in this preſent life. See John 8. 36. Rom. 6. 13. 14. 18.

recovery of ſight to the blinde] That is, ſpirituall illumination to them who were as yet ignorant of Chriſt the true light. See chap. 1. 78. Matth. 4. 16. for ſo he diſcovered himſelf in deeds, that they might ſee him preſent in his works, of whom they uſed to read in the books of the Prophets. Hilar. can. 3. in Matth. See alſo Matth. 11. 5.

to ſet at liberty them that are bruiſed] The meaning is, to free them who are burdened with ſins, who wreſtling under their heavy weight, have not of themſelves, ſtrength to ſhake them off: who are throughly humbled with the ſenſe of their ſins, and miſeries. See Matth. 11. 28.

v. 19. the acceptable yeer] He alludeth to the yeer of Jubile. Levit. 25. 10. &c. ſignifying the time of grace, and reconciliation, wherein God ſetteth us at liberty in Chriſt, and ſheweth his ſpeciall goodneſſe on mankinde.

were faſtened on him] With deſire to hear how he would interpret the place of ſcripture which he had read unto them: as alſo for the fame they had heard of him; who without ſtudy, and ordinary means, became ſo incomparable a teacher. See John 7. 15.

v. 21 this ſcripture is] Or hath been fulfilled in your ears; meaning that the ſame ſcripture which by his reading, had ſounded in their ears, was fulfilled, in his preaching: he being that perſon of whom the Prophet there ſpake.

v. 22 all bare him witneſſe] All approved and commended his preaching, as extraordinary and admirable.

gracious words] Or words of grace: which by a divine ſweetneſſe drew their affections, with ſecret influence, and perſwaſion of the Holy Ghoſt wherewith he was filled. John 1. 14. See Pſal 45. 2. Cant. 4. 3. Iſaiah 50. 4.

v. 26. unto Sarepta] God oftentimes preferreth ſtrangers before them of the houſhold; for he is debtour to no man; therefore the men of Nazareth could not reaſonably claim any priviledge in Chriſt, becauſe they beleeved not as others did.

v. 27. and many lepers were in Iſrael] See 2 King. 5. 14.

v. 28. were filled with wrath] As commonly it cometh to paſſe among formall hypocrites, when their ſins and puniſhments are touched and ſpoken of.

v. 29. and roſe up] ἀναστάντες, riſing up, and diſmiſſing the aſſembly: going out of the ſynagogue, they thruſt him out of the city.

unto the brow of the hill] To the cliffe ſide, there to deſtroy him, by caſting him down.

v. 30. But he paſſing through the midſt of them, &c.] He eſcaped miraculouſly out of their hands, which probably he did, not by making himſelf inviſible, or any wayes changing the eſſentiall properties of his body; but by his divine power, making himſelf way through the midſt of his enemies. See Pſal. 18. 29. and that as ſaith Theophylact, οὐ τὸ παθεῖν φεύγων, ἀλλα τὸν καιρὸν ἀναμένων: not to avoid ſuffering (for which he came into the world) but waiting for the appointed time, for his hour was not yet come. John 8: 59.

v. 31. He came down to Capernaum] Being ſo evilly and unworthily entreated at Nazaret, he did not command fire from heaven, nor peſtilence to deſtroy them; but leaving all to him that judgeth righteouſly; in purſuit of his miniſtry he goeth to preach the Goſpel at a neighbouring city.

v. 32. for his word was with power] That is, full of majeſtie and convincing authority: ſo that it ſmote the conſciences of the hearers, with an awfull reverence and fear: as, Matth. 7. 29. Mark 1. 22.

v. 33. and in the ſynagogue, &c.] See Mark 1. 23.

v. 34. let us alone] Ἔα, Away, Syr. ſine me; ſuffer me, or let me alone.

v. 35. had thrown him in the midſt] Had thrown the poſſeſſed man in the midſt of the people then preſent.

v. 36. what a word is this?] τίς ὁ λόγος &c. what thing is this? what power is it, which with a word can do theſe things? See Matth. 8. 27. Mark 1. 27.

v. 37. the fame of him went out] One telling another what admirable things they had ſeen him do: and hereby God confirmed the Goſpel, and drew men to Chriſt, that they might beleeve and be ſaved.

v. 38. and he aroſe out of the ſynagogue, &c.] See on Matth. 8. 14. Mark 1. 30.

v. 41. and the devils] Mark 1. 34.

thou art Chriſt the Son of God] The devils confeſſed him in hope thereby to bring him into ſuſpect with the multitude, therefore Chriſt forbad him to teſtifie of him: for as Tertul. adverſ. Marcion. l. 4. c. 8. ſaith, Chriſt would have men, not unclean ſpirits acknowledge him to be the Son of God: he had ſent thoſe before him, who were to manifeſt him, utique digniores prædicatores; that is more worthy preachers.

to ſpeak] Or to ſay they knew him to be Chriſt.

v. 42. when it was day] See Mark 1. 35.

v. 43. I muſt preach] Mark 1. 37. ſheweth the occaſion of theſe words; all men ſeek for thee, ſaid the diſciples to Chriſt: therefore he ſaid unto them, I muſt preach, &c. he was not ſent for one city onely, but to be a Saviour of the world.

v. 44. in the ſynagogues of Galilee] Herein he giveth us an example of obedience to God; in that he, who might have lived in honour and eaſe in Capernaum, would with much labour and hazard, travell about to preach the Goſpel, and gain ſouls to God.

the people preſſed on him] ἐπικεῖσθαι ſometimes importeth, to be inſtant, or importunate; as, Luke 23. 23.
yet here it ſignifieth a preſſing near to, or thronging upon him to ſee and hear him.

lake of Genezareth] Which for the greatneſſe, was called the ſea of Galilee. Matth. 4. 18. Mark 1. 16. Geneſareth was a city in the tribe of Nephtali; which Herod beautified with munificent buildings, and called it Tiberias, in honour of Tiberias Cæſar: hence the adjacent region near Capernaum and Bethſaida; Mark 6. 53. as alſo this lake was ſo called, John 6. 1. It was anciently called כנרת Cinneret, and כנרות Chinneroth. Deut. 3. 17. Numb. 34. 11. Joſh. 11. 2. and in Chalde גינוסר Ginnoſar, from the corruption of both words, it was called Geneſareth. See on John 21. 1.

v. 2. ſtanding by the lake] That is, lying near the ſhore: this manner of ſpeaking is uſuall with ſeamen, concerning a ſhip under ſail; whereof they ſay, ſhe ſtandeth for the ſhore; or ſuch, or ſuch a place: and the Latines uſed to call a road, where ſhips uſed to lie at anchor, ſtationem, ſtatio malè fida carinis.

and were waſhing, &c.] to lay them up to ſome other time: as being for preſent without hope of taking any thing, after ſo much labour loſt.

v. 3. And taught the people] This Evangeliſt ſaith not what he taught, but Matth. 4. 17. It appeareth that the ſum was, repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

v. 4. Let down your net, &c.] By this miracle, he will ſhew his new called Diſciples his power, that they might not be offended at his poverty and form of a ſervant, which others contemned and deſpiſed.

v. 5. Maſter we have toiled, &c.] ἐπιστάτας properly ſignifieth him that is chief governour or ruler.

at thy word] according to thy word: at thy command.

v. 6. A multitude of fiſhes] So Chriſt bleſſed their labour; to teach them to depend on him.

v. 7. Began to ſink] That is, as the Syriac readeth, they were neer ſinking, here appeareth an evident motive and cauſe of the diſciples ſo ſoon leaving their ſhips, nets and callings, to follow Chriſt, for they heard his admirable doctrine, which they thus ſaw confirmed by miracle. See verſe 9. 10.

v. 8. Depart from me] This ſpake he out of conſcience of his own vileneſs, and the divine preſence of Chriſt. See 1 king. 17. 18.

v. 9. Aſtoniſhed, and all that were with him] Not onely Peter but the reſt were amazed to ſee the draught of fiſhes; apprehending a divine power in that work: therefore feared they the preſence of Chriſt, by whoſe command all was done.

v. 10. Fear not, from henceforth thou ſhalt catch men] To comfort them, he declareth what ſhall be the effect of his preſence; that they ſhould thereby be enabled by preaching of the Goſpel (which is that great draught-net of Gods kingdom. Matth. 13. 47.) to draw men out of the bitter floods of ſin to life everlaſting; hereto Chriſt enabled them as he promiſed, Matth. 4. 18. all our ſufficiency is of God. 2 Cor. 3. 5. who therefore did call, and ſo now can call ignorant men, to an effectuall and powerfull miniſtry of the word to ſave ſouls: but whom he thus calleth, he doth miraculouſly make able Miniſters of the new teſtament, 2 Cor. 3. 6. which when the falſe apoſtles, (who pretend to extraordinary calling) can make appear, that God hath wrought in them, we ſhall believe they are indeed called to preach the Goſpel: one thing is certain, Chriſt never called any idiot or unlearned man (to this office) to leave him ſuch, but to ſhew a miraculous power in enabling him to that, to which he called him, though Chriſt ſaid this to Peter, (who it ſeemeth, out of deeper ſenſe of his own ſins, and the Majeſty of Chriſt ſhining in this miracle, prayed Chriſt to depart from him) yet it was a common grace here promiſed to them all; and ſo no prerogative of Peters though Chriſt addreſſed this comfort by name to Peter whom he ſaw moſt afraid.

v. 11. Forſook all and followed him] They were called to be diſciples before, John 1. 39. but now to be Apoſtles: therefore though after their firſt hearing Chriſt, they returned to their calling again; yet now they leave all, and follow Chriſt in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel.

v. 12. And it came to paſs] See Matth. 8. 2. Mark 1. 40.

full of leproſie] this diſeaſe was ſomwhat common in theſe eaſtern parts, and very hard to be cured: ſo that when Chriſt (by his word and putting forth his hand to touch him) cured it immediatly, the power of his Godhead appeared, which could as eaſily repair as create by his word: See Matth. 8. 3. &c.

v. 13. And touched him] For, as Tertullian ſaith adv. Marcion. lib. 4. cap. 9. he touched him, à quo etſi homo inquinari potuiſſet, Deus utique non inquinaretur.. By whom though man might be made unclean, God could not.

v. 14. Charged him to tell no man] For the time was not yet come that Chriſt would be glorified, being now in the form of a ſervant: and leſt men who were not yet well acquainted with his doctrine, ſhould too much depend upon miracles.

go and ſhew thy ſelf to the Prieſt] he would not diſſolve the law, yet in force, but leave them more unexcuſable, in that ſeeing the miracle, they would not believe in Chriſt. See Levit. 14. 4. 10.

v. 15. So much more went there a fame of him] They the more admired, and ſpake good of him, becauſe they perceived that he did theſe miracles, neither for gain nor applauſe of men.

v. 16. Withdrew himſelf] He withdrew himſelf from the multitude which followed him, leſt he might ſeem to affect popular applauſe, or to move or occaſion ſedition againſt the civil magiſtrate; as alſo ſomtimes to reſt from labour of preaching and going to and fro to heal the ſick and infirm.

and prayed] thus he manifeſted himſelf God in his miracles, and man in performance of his mediators office, in preaching to, and praying for his.

v. 17. The Phariſees, &c.] See on chap. 14. 1.

the power of the Lord was preſent to heal] That is, at this time, the power of the Lord ſhewed it ſelf in healing the ſick: it was ever with him; but it did not alwayes ſhew it ſelf as now when he preached the Goſpel, and for the confirmation thereof, wrought theſe miracles. See Mark 6. 5.

v. 18. Men brought in a bed a man, &c.] See on Matth. 9. 2. Mark 2. 3.

v. 19. Let him down through the tiling] διὰ τῶν κεράμων through the pavements: for their houſes were flat roofed, and railed, or battlemented according to the law. Deut. 22. 8. to ſecure them from falling off; theſe pavements layed with tarrice, or the like materiall might keep out all wett, theſe they digged or brake through. Mark 2. 4. this ſetteth out the great faith of theſe men, and their confidence of Chriſt his power and will to heal their ſick: as concerning ſuch pavements, See Plin. lib. 36. cap. 25.

v. 20. When he ſaw their faith] That is, diſcerned it, the faith of the ſick, and the bearers.

man, thy ſins are forgiven thee] meaning both guilt and puniſhment: intimating that all miſery of body and ſoul, is an effect of ſin, this ſick man believed and is to be reckoned among them whoſe faith our Saviour ſaw, and therefore he pronounced his pardon and healed him.

v. 21. And the Scribes and Phariſees] See on chap. 20. 1.

who is this that ſpeaketh blaſphemies?] thus they blaſpemed in accuſing him of blaſphemy.

v. 22. Why reaſon you in your hearts] Why think you ſuch things? by diſcovering their thoughts he declareth himſelf to be God, the καρδιογνώστης; Act. 15. 8. ſearcher of hearts, and therefore that he alone hath power to forgive ſins.

v. 23. Thy ſins be forgiven thee] His Divine power appeared in the miracle, which when they either knew not, or malitiouſly diſſembled, he repeateth the mans pardon, that thence, and upon their confeſſion of that principle, that none but God could forgive ſins, they might conclude and acknowledge him to be God and man, and therefore the Saviour of the world.

v. 24. Power to forgive ſins] *S*ee on Matth. 9. 6.

v. 25. He roſe up] See on Matth. 9. 7.

v. 26. And glorified God] See on Matth. 9. 8.

v. 27. After theſe things he went forth, &c.] See on Matt. 9. 9. Mark 2. 14.

ſitting at the receit of Cuſtome] that is the cuſtome houſe, or place where they received cuſtomes or impoſts due to Cæſar.

v. 28. He left all, roſe up, &c.] See Matth. 9. 9.

v. 29. A great feaſt] Thus he expreſſed the joy of heart conceived from his preſent calling to follow Chriſt.

v. 30. Murmured] Calumniating him, as if he were a friend of, and companion to the wicked: thus they hoped to diſcourage his new called diſciples from following him.

v. 31. They that are whole need not the Phyſician] *S*ee on Matth. 9. 12. hereby he declareth their irrationall malice: they murmured that he converſed with ſinners, this was as Auguſtine ſaith de verb. Apoſt. ſer. 8. to finde fault, quòd in domum ægroti intravit medicus, that the Phyſitian went to the ſick man: Chriſt came that he might diſſolve ſin, the worke of man; and ſave man, the worke of God.

v. 32. I came not to call the righteous] Thoſe who ſeem ſo to themſelves: or it may be underſtood ſimply; before Chriſt called and juſtified them, none were righteous; had any been ſuch, Chriſt needed not have dyed for their redemption. *S*ee Matth. 9. 13. 1 Tim. 1. 15. Fulgentius de incarn. & gra. D. n. Jeſu. c. 22. ſaith well: if that man were not by any means curable, the heavenly Phyſitian would not have come to recover him: again, if he could cure himſelf, cæleſti medico non egeret, he ſhould not have needed an heavenly Phyſitian, if he could by any means have cured himſelf.

but ſinners to repentance] See Matth. 9. 12. That is, to the acknowledgement, confeſſion and deteſtation of their ſins, and to newneſſe and holineſſe of life: for repentance is not onely in ſaying I repent, God be mercifull unto me, but in changing our mindes, evil purpoſes and courſes of life; and forſaking our ſins: ſo the Syriac interpreteth it לתיבותא lattebo butho, ad converſionem, rightly, for as Tertullian ſaith, adverſ. Marcion. l. 2. c. 24. pœnitentiæ nomen, non ex delicti confeſſione, ſed ex animi demutatione compoſitum eſt: the name of repentance (μετάνοια) is not compoſed, or derived from confeſſion of ſin, but change of the minde.

v. 33. And they ſaid unto him] See Matth. 9. 14. Mark 2. 18. The Scribes and Phariſees ask this queſtion. v. 30. When their cavil about his company waſhed off, they bring a ſecond againſt his feaſting: as if they had ſaid; why do you and your Diſciples feaſt? why do you not rather keep ſome faſting dayes? the Diſciples of John came to Chriſt with the like queſtion: it is likely that the Scribes and Phariſees fomented the controverſie, on purpoſe to make diſſention between Johns Diſciples and Chriſts: this is the diſpoſition not onely of hypocrites, but alſo of ſome infirm men. John 3. 26. to deſire to draw all men to their way and to obtrude that for a law to others, which pleaſeth themſelves, ſpecially in the placing ſanctity in things ceremoniall and externall: ſo that Scribes and Phariſees and Johns Diſciples moved this queſtion, and ſo they are united. Mark 2. 18.

and make prayers] they mean ſome ſolemn, extraordinary, and long prayers, ſuch as Phariſees uſed in the ſtreets and open places. Matth. 6.

v. 34. Can ye make the children of the bride chamber faſt, &c.] Meaning that now was their time of rejoycing, not of mourning, while Chriſt their Saviour was with them; and that he would not burden his Diſciples with too much rigour, for which they were not yet ſeaſoned, nor more able to bear, then old veſſels to hold new wine.

v. 35. Shall be taken away from them] He meaneth that he would not be bodily preſent with them after his aſcenſion into heaven.

then ſhall they faſt] he intimateth the afflictions which his Diſciples ſhould endure after his aſcenſion.

v. 36. A parable unto them] See Matth. 9.17. Mark 2. 22 παραβολὴ a compariſon or ſimilitude it is of παραβάλλω, comparo, it is here a comparing of heavenly things with earthly. See on Matth. 13. 3. 18, &c.

no man putteth a piece of a new, &c. See on Matth. 9. 16. Mark 2. 21.

v. 37. No man putteth new wine] See Matt. 9. 17. Mark. 2. 22.

v. 38. New wine muſt be put into, &c. See Matth. 9. 17. Mark 2. 22.

v. 39. No man having drunk, &c.] The ſum and meaning is; that he diſalloweth not ſeaſonable faſts (for himſelf faſted) if they be without hypocriſie, ſuperſtition, & vain-glory; but would ſhew that men cannot ſo ſodainly bear a change of life from joy to ſorrow; but muſt be brought to it by little and little.

the old is better] commonly wholſomer, and to them that are accuſtomed thereto, now pleaſing: ſo the rule of teaching and living, which Chriſt preſcribed his, was of the eternall will of God, and accommodated to his Diſciples: but the faſts of the Scribes and Phariſees, as their other externall rites, were later inventions of their Elders.

CHAP. VI.

Verſe 1. A*Nd it came to paſſe*] See Matth. 12. 1. Mark 2. 23.

on the ſecond Sabbath] at the feaſt of Pentecoſt, when corn was ripe. Levit. 23. 15. 14, 15. ſome think; others at the Paſſeover: for it is ſaid Levit. 23. 15. ye ſhall count unto you from the morrow after the Sabbath (70. ἀπὸ τῆς ἐπαύριον τῶν σαββάτων.) ------ unto the morrow after the ſeventh Sabbath, ſhall ye number 50 dayes, &c. See alſo Deut. 16. 9. ſo that they underſtand here the morrow after the firſt Sabbath, or Paſſeover: but theſe feaſts continued divers dayes, and ſo conteined two Sabbaths; ſo that the Sabbath here termed δευτερόπρωτον was the Sabbath next after the ſixteenth of Niſan, or אביב Abib, (which ſignifieth an ear of corn, for herein their corn began to ripen, and this was their firſt moneth and conteined part of our March and part of April.) the Jews counting the formentioned 50. dayes, by numbring the weeks from the δευτέρα; whence the feaſt of weeks was named, according to the number of the Sabbaths following the δευτέρα: ſo the firſt Sabbath following was δευτερόπρωτον σάββατον: the ſecond δευτερο δεύτερον: the third δευτερότριτον, &c. plucked ears of corn] this was lawfull for any to do, Deut. 23. 25. and for them becauſe they were hungry. Matth. 12. 1. as it was for David in his neceſſity to eat of the ſhew-bread. 1. Sam. 21. rites and ceremonies may not ſtand againſt charity; which is the end of the law. 1 Tim. 1. 4.

v. 3. What David did] See on v. 1.

they which were with him] for though he went alone to the Prieſt, yet had he attendants ſtaying for him. 1 Sam. 21. 2. 4.

v. 4. Which is not lawfull to eat, &c.] See Levit. 24. 9.

v. 5. The Son of man, &c.] He that gave this law interpreteth the works of mercy, and neceſſity to be no breaches of the ſabbath day, Son of man often importeth man, as Pſal. 8. 5. Iſai. 56. 2. ſo ſaith Athanaſius. de com. eſſent. patris, &c. He calleth ἀνθρωπότητα αὐτοῦ, υἱὸν ἀνθρώπου, his humane nature, the ſon of man, Chriſt converſant as man with man, in the form of a ſervant: the Hebrews called obſcure vulgar men בני אדם bene adam, and the more illuſtrious and honourable בני איש ſo Pſal. 49. 2. which we give low and high Ezekiel is often ſtilled בן־אדם Son of man c. 2. 1. & 3. 1. &c. Chriſt willingly profeſſed humility who could have ſtiled himſelf the Son of the moſt high, intimating his glory: but thus he would for a time be clouded under the vail of his fleſh, in which he came to ſuffer for men that he might make them the Sons of God.

v. 6. On another Sabbath] Matth. 12. 9. Mark 3. 1.

was withered] After his former works, and doctrine concerning the Sabbath, he now proved by the teſtimony of God the Father, whoſe power concurred in this following miracle alſo, that he taught the trueth: this poor mans hand was dead and uſeleſſe before Chriſt healed it: ſo Jeroboams hand was withered. 1 Kings 13. ſome take it for the diſeaſe which the Greeks called ἀτροφίαν, a tabes, pining, drying up, and withering, for lack of naturall moiſture to nouriſh and ſtrengthen the diſſaffected part.

v. 7. Scribes] See on c. 20. 1.

Watched him] ſeeing they could not faſten their calumny on the diſciples, they watched an occaſion to accuſe Chriſt of Sabbath-breaking: malice is as reſtleſſe as the Devil.

v. 8. Knew their thoughts] Whereby his Divine knowledge might appear: for God onely knoweth the thoughts of men.

ſtand forth in the midſt] that the miracle might be evident, in that all preſent ſeeing his withered hand ſodainly changed and recovered, only by his word, might be convicted, or confirmed by the ſight of that cure, which none but God could work.

v. 9. I will ask you one thing] The Scribes and Phariſees had queſtioned, whether it were lawfull to heale on the Sabbath. Matthew 12. 10. now Chriſt asketh them a queſtion; is it lawfull on the Sabbath dayes to do good: taking that for granted which all would confeſſe, that it is indiſputably good to ſhew mercy and to heal: the whole controverſie was concerning the circumſtance of time, now indeed as Proſper ſaith, malè celebrat ſabbatum qui ab operibus bonis vacat, hee miſcelebrateth the Sabbath, who reſteth from good works, and he here putteth ψυχὴν, for life: (for concerning ſaving of ſouls on the Sabbath, there was no queſtion). So נפש is often uſed for the life, though it properly ſignifie the ſoul, Geneſis 9. 4. Leviticus 17. 11. Lam. 5. 9. 1 Chron. 11. 19. &c.

v. 10. Looking round] Upon his convicted adverſaries, as it were to ſee, if any would anſwer, he looked with anger. See Mark 3. 5.

v. 11. Filled with madneſſe] That is extreme anger and impatience, ſuch is the condition of carnall and proud hearers, when any thing ſpoken croſſeth their affection, or opinion though never ſo erroneous.

v. 12. Continued all night, &c.] To teach us vigilancy and perſeverance in prayer: what oughteſt thou to do for thine own ſalvation: ſeeing Chriſts ſpent whole nights in prayer for thee? Ambroſ. in luc. l. 5. c. 6.

v. 13. And of them he choſe twelve] Of them that followed him he choſe, according to the number of the tribes of Iſrael and the Patriarchs. Matth. 10. Mark 3. 14. & 6. 7.

Apoſtles] the word ſignifieth Ambaſſadours, or Meſſengers. See 2 Cor. 5. 20. So Clemens Romanus ſaid well, οἱ ἀπόστολοι ἡμῖν εὐηγγελίσθησαν ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. &c.

the Apoſtles being ſent by Chriſt Jeſus preached the Goſpel to us, as Chriſt did being ſent of God: ad Corinth. ep. pag. 54. he therefore choſe theſe Apoſtles, (being to aſcend into heaven) that he might commit the charge of preaching the Goſpel unto them; and that he might teach men by mans Miniſtry, ſufficiently confirmed by the efficacy of his ſpirit,and power of miracles.

v. 14. whom he named Peter] John 1. 22. Matth. 10. 2.

v. 15. Simon called Zelotes] Or the Canaanite. Matth. 10. 4.

v. 16. And Judas Iſcariot] See on Matth. 10. 4. and John 6. 71. Judas the traytour is choſen unto this office; non per imprudentiam, ſed per providentiam : not by ignorance, but by providence. Ambroſ. on Luc. l. 5. c. 6. how great is the mercy of Chriſt, how great his love to us? he took on him the infirmity of man, and therefore refuſed not theſe parts thereof: voluit deſeri, voluit prodi, voluit ab Apoſtolo ſuo tradi, &c. he would (for our ſakes) be forſaken; he would be betrayed by his own Apoſtle; to the end that if thou be forſaken of friends or betrayed by thoſe thou truſteſt; thou mayeſt patiently bear the errour of thy judgement, and loſſe of thy love and good opinion placed on the unworthy

v. 17. came down with them] That which Luke here recordeth, ſeemeth ſome part of that which Chriſt taught, Mattth. 5. 1. &c. though there it be ſaid, that he went up into the mountain, and ſate and taught: for he firſt went up and ſtood, and taught a ſmaller company. See Mark 3. 13. but perceiving greater confluences of people coming to hear, he deſcended from the top, for their better convenience of hearing him; and ſate down upon the edge of ſome plain which was more capacious.

v. 18. they were healed] Therefore deſcended he, that he might teach and heal, καὶ διπλῶς εὐεργετήσῃ Theophylact, and beſtow a double benefit; on their ſouls and bodies.

v. 19. there went vertue out of him] He had power of healing all that touched him by faith, becauſe he was God and man: the Prophets and other Saints had the gift of healing, but vertue did not ſo go out of them, for they were not πηγαὶ δυνάμεων; the fountains of vertue. Theophylact.

v. 20. on his diſciples] For, them chiefly would he inſtruct, incourage, and fit to be teachers of the word: though not them onely. See verſe 27.

poor] Poor in ſpirit. Matth. 5. 3. That is, you who being humbled with externall or ſpirituall wants or preſſures, wholly betake your ſelves to Gods mercy and providence.

v. 21. hunger now] Iſaiah 65. 13. Whoſe preſent afflictions being ſanctified unto you, cauſe you to aſpire to a better eſtate in Gods Kingdom, and to ſet your affections on things above, which cauſeth you to hunger and thirſt for righteouſneſſe. Matth. 5. 6. however theſe may ſeem to ignorant men, non poſſunt tamen eſſe aliud quam beati, Salvian de gub. Dei l. 1. yet can they be nothing leſſe then happy.

that weep now] Iſaiah 61. 3. In this preſent life: but he ſpeaketh all this concerning the Elect which ſhall eternally be comforted: neither the wicked poor, nor ſorrowfull can be bleſſed. See Pſal. 126. 1.

v. 22. and caſt out your name, as evil] This further expreſſeth what he meant by ſeparation, or caſting out of their ſynagogue. John 16. 2. when they expunge and put out your names from the regiſter of Gods people: this is a dreadfull ſentence, and the thunder of the Church, when denounced on juſt cauſe, and by the true Miniſters of Chriſt: if otherwiſe, whatever men think, they are bleſſed who keep not company with the wicked. Pſal. 1. 1. &c. nemo enim alieno ſenſu miſer eſt ſed ſuo, ſaith Salvian q. ſ. therefore can they not be unhappy in the falſe judgment of any man, who are truely bleſſed in their own conſcience.

for the Sonne of mans ſake] That is, falſely calumniating you for your profeſſion of Chriſt: this is to bear his reproach; Hebrews 13. 13. if any ſuffer deſervedly for his faults, what thanks ſhall he have. 1 Pet. 4. 13, 14. &c.

v. 23. leap for joy] As men ſurprized with abundant joy: intimating the certainty and fulneſſe of their joy in heaven, who here ſuffer any injurie for Chriſt his ſake.

v. 24. Wo unto you that are rich] Meaning thoſe who truſt in riches and ſerve them. Amos 6. 1. James 5. 1. or thoſe who being rich are unthankfull to God, or uncharitable and evil to men: non cenſus igitur, ſed affectus in crimine eſt Ambroſ. on Luc. l. 5. c. 7. wealth is not in fault, but the affections of men: ſuch have had their conſolation here, and cannot reaſonably expect it hereafter.

v. 25. Wo unto you that are full] See Iſaiah 32. 9. Iſaiah 65. 13. Amos 6. 1. Iſaiah 28. 7, 8. Ezek. 16. 49.

you that laugh] That live at eaſe, and in pleaſures diſtracting you from the ſervice of God.

v. 26. when all men ſpeak well of you] Either when wicked men ſpeak well of you, which ſhall then onely be, when you are like them: or when you affect the praiſe of men, and give not God the glory in all things: or becauſe it is very hard to hold humility in generall applauſes: for the firſt, Auguſtin ſaith truely, nemo enim laudat, niſi quod ei placet; in Pſal. 148. for the laſt, Ignatius epiſt. ad Tral. ſaith, μὲ ἐπαινοῦντες, μαστιγοῦσι; they that praiſe me ſcourge me: and Auguſtin To. 4. de ſerm. Domini in mont. Si ergo inter quos vivis te rectè viventem non laudaverint, illi in errore ſunt: ſi autem laudaverint, tu in periculo: if thy neighbours amongſt whom thou liveſt well praiſe thee not: they are in an errour, but if they do, thou art in danger.

v. 27. For I ſay unto you, &c.] See Matth. 5. 44. Rom. 12. 20.

v. 29. unto him that ſmiteth thee, &c.] See Matth. 5. 39. Meaning,be more ready to bear new injuries,then to avenge the old: it is not bearing, but doing injuries which maketh a man unhappy. See 1 Cor. 6. 7.

v. 30. ask them not again] That is, not by any violent, or unlawfull means of recovery: otherwiſe, the uſe of law and Magiſtrates is not denyed Chriſtians.

v. 31. as ye would that men ſhould do to you, &c] See Matth. 7. 12.

v. 32. For if ye love them, &c.] See Matth. 5. 46.

what thanks have ye?] What reward can ye expect from God? it is no good work which onely ſelf-love, carnall reſpects, or deſire of like favour from others cauſeth.

v. 34. And if ye lend] See Matth. 5. 42.

for ſinners] Such as have no fear of God to lead them to theſe civill offices.

v. 35. Love your enemies] Matth. 5. 44.

hoping for nothing again] This is to be underſtood with reſpect to mens abilities to give to the poor, as alſo that verſe 30. So that if our neighbours neceſſities require and we be able, we muſt lend without hope of being repayed by them: and in other caſes we muſt not violate charity, nor give ſcandall in requiring our debts. See Iſaiah 58. 3.

your reward ſhall be great] It may be men will requite us with injuries, or be unthankfull: it is ſufficient that God will reward; if our labour be loſt on the wicked, yet ſhall not our reward be loſt with a juſt God.

v. 36. as your Father &c.] See on Matth. 5. 48.

v. 37. Judge not, and &c.] See on Matth. 7. 1.

v. 38. with the ſame meaſure] See Matth. 7. 2.

v. 39. blinde lead &c.] Matth. 15. 14.

v. 40. The diſciple is not, &c.] Matth. 10. 24.

v. 41. a mote in thy &c.] A ſmall fault in thy brother, and canſt not ſee thine own great ſins. See on Matth. 7. 3.

v. 42. hypocrite] See on chap. 13. 15.

caſt out firſt] Firſt amend thine own faults, and then ſhalt thou be a more competent and fit reprover of other mens. See on Matth. 7. 4.

v. 43. a good tree &c.] As if he ſaid, deceive not thy ſelf, thou art not good,when thou doeſt evil. See Matth. 7. 16.

v. 44. for every tree] Matth. 12. 33.

of thorns] Matth. 7. 16.

v. 45. A good man] Matth. 12. 35.

of the abundance] Matth. 12. 34.

v. 46. Why call ye me Maſter, &c.] See Matth. 7. 21. Mal. 1. 6. The meaning is, you do in vain profeſſe your ſelves hearers of my word, except you do indeed that which I command therein.

v. 47. and doth them] See on Matth. 7. 24.

v. 48. when the flood aroſe] He meaneth by this metaphor to declare, that temptations will ſhew how every man hath profited in hearing the word, and that they ſhall put a manifeſt difference between the hypocrite, and the true diſciple of Chriſt.

CHAP. VII.

Verſe 1. HE entred into Capernaum] Matth. 8. 5.

v. 2. a certain Centurions ſervant] A captain of an hundred; he is not named; but it is likely that his company was in gariſon at Capernaum.

ſick and ready to die] Matth. 8. 6. The diſeaſe is ſpecified; it was a paralyſis or palſie; which oft times bereaveth of ſenſe and motion.

v. 3. be ſent unto him the Elders, &c.] Matthew ſaith he came unto him: whereby it appeareth, that Matthew attributeth to him, that which was done in his Name, and by his requeſt theſe whom he ſent, were not vulgar or ordinary meſſengers, but Elders: ſo the Jews called their Senatours and Magiſtrates of cities; ſuch as for yeers and authority were moſt reverend: probably he had heard of ſo great a Prophet riſen among them, who could, and readily would cure all diſeaſes: therefore firſt he ſent, then came his ſelf to Chriſt. Matth. 8. 13.

v. 4. ſaying he was worthy] This maketh nothing for merits of works before God (our merits are dona Dei, the gifts of God, as Alcvinus dom. 8. poſt. pentecoſt well obſerveth after Auguſtin. ep. 105.) well do theſe men acknowledge this benefit received, commending the Centurions love to their nation, and beneficence towards them, as intending this for a motive whereby to entreat Chriſt to help him, though he were a heathen, and a ſouldier.

v. 5. a ſynagogue] Or Church: it ſeemeth he was a proſelyte; this word is from the Greek συνάγω, to gather together: and συναγωγὴ, though it be uſed to other matters, yet here, as commonly in the Goſpel, it is taken for an houſe dedicated to the ſervice and worſhip of God, as preaching, prayer &c. the Hebrews called it בית הכנסת beth hacneſeth, the houſe of aſſembly: ſo the Syriac here calleth it בית כנושתא beth cenuſhetto: it cometh of the Hebrew word כנס Syr. כנס canas, cenas, or כנש cenaſh: which ſignifieth to aſſemble or gather together. Heſt. 4. 16. &c. the temple at Jeruſalem was as the Cathedrall Church, the ſynagogues as pariſh-Churches, for the eaſe of the people, who could not come every ſabbath-day up to Jeruſalem: there they offered ſacrifices, but in their ſynagogues they might not.

v. 6. ſent friends unto him ſaying] That is, to ſay in his Name.

trouble not thy ſelf] Weary not thy ſelf in taking ſo much pains to come to an unworthy man. See Mat. 8. 8.

v. 7. but ſay in a word] Command that it be ſo, and I am confident, it ſhall be done. See Pſal. 44. 4.

v. 8. a man ſet under authority] See Matth. 8. 9.

v. 9. marvelled] Matth. 8. 10. This is not to be underſtood of admiration properly taken, which is from ignorance of the cauſe, but of affecting and declaring a thing which was notable, and admirable to common reaſon; as that this Centurion being but an alien, ſhould excell all the Iſraelites (which had hitherto beleeved in Chriſt) in his profeſſion of faith: thus would Chriſt provoke them to beleeve. See Rom. 10. 19.

v. 10. found the ſervant whole] See Matth. 8. 13.

v. 11. Naim] Which was a town of Galilee, in the tribe of Iſſachar, not far from Tiberias; at the foot of mount Hermon; about four miles from Capernaum.

v. 12. There was a dead man carried] So ſoon as he had cured the ſick, he preſently doth a more admirable work in raiſing the dead: all things were poſſible to him and he omitted no opportunity of doing good.

v. 13. Weep not] Not forbidding naturall affection, but allaying her ſorrow, by comfort offered, as, 1 Theſ, 4. 13. and not onely in word, but in taking away the cauſe and occaſion of her preſent ſorrow.

v. 14. touched the bier] Or coffin, wherein the dead body was born toward the grave: this probably he did, that they which bare it might ſtay; and that the ſorrowfull mother, and others preſent might be the more attentive to obſerve the admirable power of his word, reſtoring the dead to life again.

I ſay unto thee] I command thee by that power which I have in heaven and earth, over the living and the dead, that thou live and ariſe to life again: theſe examples of Chriſts power, are our aſſurances of his raiſing up the dead in the generall reſurrection

v. 15. ſate up and began to ſpeak] This declared the evidence of the miracle, and a preludium of that which Chriſt ſaith, John 5. 28, 29. the hour is coming, in which all that are in the graves ſhall hear his voice, and ſhall come forth, &c.

v. 16. there came a fear] Becauſe of their ſenſe of a divine preſence ſhewing it ſelf in his raiſing the dead: it intimateth a more thankfull and more reverend opinion which they began to have of Chriſt, in whom they ſaw ſo divine a power.

hath viſited his people] The preſent eſtate of the Jews was calamitous and ſervile, as if God had forſaken them: their comfort was, that God would ſend the Meſſias to repair them: therefore from this which they ſaw done by Chriſt, they conclude that God now began to look upon them, in that (as they conceived) he had ſent them a great Prophet, as a forerunner of their expected deliverer: ſo weak and perplexed was their faith, in expectation of a glorious temporall Meſſias, and an earthly monarchie. See chap. 1. 68.

v. 17. This manner of rumour] That is, that God had now viſited them, and raiſed them up a great Prophet.

v. 18. The diſciples of John ſhewed him, &c.] See Matth. 11. 2. They probably were mooved with ſome envy and emulation; as, John 3. 26. ſuppoſing that the fame of Jeſus ſomewhat obſcured the honour of John, whom they might poſſibly hope to be the Meſſias and reſtorer of Iſrael.

v. 19. he that ſhould come] The expected Meſſias and redeemer; which John was aſſured of: but this he did to inſtruct and confirm his diſciples in the faith of Chriſt, by their own experience of his power working ſuch miracles, as none but God could do.

v. 21. in the ſame hour he cured many, &c.] At the very time that theſe meſſengers of John came to Chriſt, the providence of God ſo diſpoſed, that they ſhould ſee many cured of ſuch ſeverall and deſperate maladies, that their incredulity might be convinced, not by Johns words onely, but alſo by the divine works of Chriſt: and it is obſervable, that by the ſame providence, John Baptiſt, greater then a Prophet, ſhould yet herein be leſſe then divers of the Prophets, that he did no miracle. John 10. 41. while Chriſt (as alſo the Apoſtles afterwards) did many that Johns diſciples might the more eaſily be tranſmitted to Chriſt; who poſſibly might otherwiſe have been too tenacious of that ſuſpicion which then amazed moſt men. chap. 3. 15.

v. 22. tell John what things ye have ſeen, &c] Without any oſtentation of himſelf, he appealeth to their own ſenſes and reports, that they might conclude by that which was done and ſaid, that thoſe things which the Prophets long before ſpake concerning the Meſſias, were now done by Chriſt. See Iſaiah 35. 5, 6. Iſaiah 61. 1.

to the poor the Goſpel, &c.] That is, ſuch as are of obſcure and poor condition in the world: who feel their own miſery and diſability to ſtand in Gods judgement.

v. 23. offended in me] Who ſhall not ſtumble at my ſtate of humiliation, as a rock of offence: See Matth. 21. 42. Acts 4. 11. Rom. 9. 33. 1 Cor. 1. 23. 1 Pet. 2. 7, 8. Pſal. 118. 22. See on Matth. 11. 6.

v. 24. he began to ſpeak unto the people] How Johns diſciples behaved themſelves toward Chriſt, or what they anſwered, none of the Evangeliſts record: but Chriſt addreſſed his diſcourſe to the people preſent, to let them know that John Baptiſt (one of his witneſſes) was above exception, and conſtant for the truth, leſt they ſhould think him impriſoned for any evil by him committed.

a reed ſhaken with the winde] That is an inconſtant man, or a thing of little moment.

v. 25. a man clothed in ſoft raiment] See on Matth. 11. 8. a libertine or voluptuous liver? theſe interrogations have the valew of a certain appeal to their own knowledges, as if he had ſaid, did not your ſelves ever finde him a man of a moſt temperate, ſtayed, and auſtere life, void of all pride and delicacy, or ambition.

v. 26. more then a prophet] That is, an extraordinary or excellent prophet: for he had the honour to be the immediate forerunner of the Meſſias, to prepare his way, and to ſhew him preſent. See on Matth. 11. 9.

v. 27. Behold I ſend my &c.] Mal. 3. 1.

v. 28. there is not a greater] In office; becauſe he did not (as the former Prophets) onely tell of Chriſt to come, but pointed him out. John 1. 29. See on Matth. 11. 11.

in the kingdom of God] See on Matth. 11. 11. The meaning is, in the new ſtate of the Church, under the perfecter light of the Goſpel, in which the glory of God ſhineth: the meaneſt miniſter of Chriſt, who preacheth the fulfilling of thoſe things which John ſaw not, is in that regard greater then John: ſo that here is not a compariſon of the perſons, but of their kinde of doctrine. Or if we underſtand it of the kingdom of glory; the leaſt therein is greater then the greateſt mortall man.

v. 29. juſtified God] Meaning they gave witneſſe to the truth of God; and acknowledged him juſt, gratious, and merciful, according to the preaching of John, whoſe doctrine they had embraced.

v. 30. the Phariſees] See on chap. 14. 1.

againſt themſelves] To their own loſſe and deſtruction, which they did in themſelves, by their unbelief and contempt of the Goſpel, which declareth the counſell of God for mans ſalvation. See Acts 20. 27.

v. 31. Whereunto then] See on Matth. 11. 16.

v. 32. children ſitting in &c.] See on Mat. 11. 15. The meaning is, that whatever means God propoſeth to ſave the wicked, and however mercifully he complyeth with their infirmities, yet their obſtinacy will finde ſome let to their reception of the Goſpel.

v. 33. Neither eating bread] He lived not according to the ordinary cuſtom of men; but alone in the wilderneſſe. Matth. 3.

v. 34. Eating and drinking] that is, converſing friendly with men: John was a retired man: but Chriſt uſed a more gracious familiarity, and they, who then moſt profeſſed ſanctity and religion, calumniated both: and would not believe their preaching.

v. 35. But wiſdom] But yet they who are truely wiſe, embrace that as the wiſdom of God to ſalvation, which carnall men account the fooliſhneſſe of preaching. 1 Cor. 1. 21. Rom. 1. 16.

v. 36. One of the Phariſees deſired him] See Mark 14. 3. & Luke 14. 1.

and ſate down to meat] that is, according to their manner, lying on pallets covered like tables, and leaning on the left elbow. See Iſ. Caſaubon exerc. 16. n. 36.

v. 37. Behold a woman] The circumſtances ſhew, that this was not ſhe who is hiſtorified. Matt. 26, 6. and John 11. 2. who anointed the Lord with ointment; for that was a little before his paſſion; but this was a good time before it.

which was a ſinner] an harlot: a woman of a notorious levity, a bad liver, it is likely that ſhe had heard John Baptiſt, or Chriſt preaching repentance, grace, mercy and free remiſſion of ſins by faith in Chriſt; and ſeeing, or hearing of his works, believed him to be the very Savior of the world: therefore came ſhe, as the ſick to the Phyſitian.

v. 38. At his feet behinde him] They lying down to meat as v. 36. ſhe had convenience to weep upon his feet.

and anointed them] See on verſe 46.

v. 39. He ſpake within himſelf] That is, he thought as Fulgentius ad Monim. l. 3. interpreteth; nihil aliud eſt apud ſe dicere, quam apud ſe cogitare.

what manner of woman] the Phariſee had reſpect to the law, concerning their pollution, who touched the polluted. Num. 19. 22. he knew not the gratious mercy of God in Chriſt.

v. 40. Jeſus anſwering] That is, ſaid: the Hebrews ſo ſpeak of him that beginneth a diſcourſe: but here it properly betokeneth, that Chriſt being truly God the ſearcher of hearts, anſwered to the Phariſees prejudicate thoughts.

v. 41. A certain Creditor] The ſcope of this parable is, by proportion to ſhew. 1. That, what, or how little ſoever a man oweth to God, he is ever unable to make payment, and to ſatisfie his juſtice. 2. That as the debtor (whether of a greater, or ſmaller ſum) is abſolutely diſcharged of the whole debt, if his creditor (that is God) forgive him all; and therefore are no more to be condemned as ſinners: ſuch are al they who truly believe in Chriſt for their juſtification. See Rom. 5. 1. Rom. 8. 1. 33. 34. this, Simon who looked only on the law, knew not.

v. 43. Thou haſt rightly judged] From this principle of common reaſon Chriſt would make him underſtand, and condemn his own raſh judgement: and therefore ſpake he in a parable, that he might behold, as it were the ſun under a cloud.

v. 44. Seeſt thou this woman] Whom thou contemneſt, and condemneſt, as unworthy of this preſence: yet ſhe hath done more then thy ſelf, who haſt neglected ſome ſmal and eaſie things in thy entertainment.

thou gaveſt me no water] it was their manner of entertaining ſtrangers in thoſe hot regions to give them water for their feet, to waſh, and cool them. Gen. 18. 4. & 19. 2. Judg. 19. 21. this Simon neglected: but the woman waſhed his feet with tears of repentance, moſt acceptable to God, who would not the death, but converſion of ſinners; at which, the Angels in heaven rejoyce. c. 15. 7.

and wiped them with the hairs of her head] this was a token of her repentance: the unchaſt women are very carefull and induſtrious in adorning their heads, with this convert ſo much neglected now, that ſhe caſt off all dreſſings, and uſeth her diſhevelled hair to the meaneſt office, the wiping of his feet which ſhe had wet with tears.

v. 45. Thou gaveſt me no kiſſe] Which was the uſuall manner of ſalutations with the people of thoſe parts. Rom. 16. 16. 1 Cor. 16. 20. 2 Cor. 13. 12. 1 Pet. 5. 14.

to kiſſe my feet] this ſhewed her humility, the ſureſt ground of true converſion to Chriſt: God giveth grace to the humble.

v. 46. My head with oil, &c.] That is with ointment made of oyl, and other ſweet ingredients: it ſeemeth their cuſtom was, at ſolemn feaſts, to powre ſweet ointment on the heads of their gueſts, this Simon neglected; but this convert anointed his feet, thus uſe the proud to condemn others, of whom themſelves come ſhort in duties to God.

v. 47. Her ſins which are many] Many, that is, as Euthymius well interpreteth, all: for where God forgiveth one ſin, he forgiveth all.

are forgiven her] heres no ſatisfaction on her part, but free remiſſion on Gods. ſo, v. 42. ἐχαρίσατο, he frankly, and freely forgave both.

for ſhe loved much] as this forgiveneſſe of ſo great a debt of ſin, is a juſt cauſe of much love; ſo was that ſo great love a certain argument from the effect, of her ſins remiſſion: for where God remitteth great ſins, he alſo ſheddeth abroad great love in the converts heart: ſo that Chriſt alleageth her love to God, not as a cauſe, but as a certain conſequence of her ſins remiſſion, and ſo was ſhe (as Nazianzen ſaid of Cyprian. orat. 18. πολὺς ἐν ἀσεβείᾳ, ϗ πλείων ἐν εὐσεβείᾳ, abundant in ſin, but more in ſanctity.

v. 48. Thy ſins are forgiven thee] She came with faith, but wanted comfort for her afflicted ſoul which her abundant tears declared) as appeareth in his pronouncing peace to her, verſe 50. and thus ſhe heareth the judges voice abſolving her, whoſe preventing, free grace gave her confidence to flee to the ſanctuary of his mercy.

v. 49. To ſay within themſelves] ἐν ἑαυτοῖς may be as much as πρὸς ἀλλήλους, among themſelves, it ſkilleth not much whether of theſe we here underſtand: they thought what they ſaid, and Chriſt equally knew both. See on v. 39.

Who is this?] as in contempt of his perſon bearing the form of a ſervant. Phil. 2. and truly reſolving, that none can forgive ſins, but God only. Mark. 2. 7. ſale of indulgences and pardons of ſins by men, is but beguiling of ignorant ſouls.

v. 50. Thy faith hath ſaved thee] To confirm her, and to ſtop the gainſayers mouthes, he commendeth her faith, which alone can juſtifie us before God, and bring us aſſurance of our reconciliation with him, this is to be underſtood of faith which worketh by love. Gal. 5. ever fruitfull of good works: neither is our peace and ſalvation in the merit of faith, but in the ſole merit of Chriſt apprehended by faith.

go in peace] as chap. 8. 48. peace of conſcience; which ever goeth with remiſſion of ſins and juſtification (Mark 5. 34. Rom. 5. 1.) both which he ſpecified, ut de præterito ſit ſollicita, & ſecura de futuro, ſollicitous for her ſins paſt (that ſhe neither relapſe, nor become proud in forgetting them) and ſecure for the future; (that he who had once freely pronounced her pardon, would never recall it) Bernard. Serm. in feſt. B. Magd.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſe 1. E*Very city and village*] For being aſſigned of God, to the office of a Saviour, to ſeek that which was loſt; he would not expect that ſinners ſhould ſeek him: but as a good ſhepheard, he is found of them that ſought him not, offering mercy and preventing with his grace.

the glad tidings of the kingdom] of the kingdom of grace here, and glory in the world to come; that is of mans reconciliation to God by Chriſt, free pardon of ſins: juſtification, and ſalvation of thoſe, who were exiles and aliants from his kingdom. See Matth. 3. 2. Rom. 14. 17. Coloſſ. 1. 13.

v. 2. Mary Magdalene] This other name he addeth to diſtinguiſh her from that Mary which was Marthas ſiſter. chap. 10. and others of the ſame name, mentioned in the Goſpel: ſhe ſeemeth to have had this name, as Suidas, and ſome others ſay ἀπὸ τόπου, from the place: ſome ſay from a village called Magdala, (which ſeemeth probable from chap. 24. 10. where the denominative is firſt put, ἡ Μαγδαληνὴ Μαρία. Magdalen Mary, as it were Mary of Magdalen) or from a caſtle or tower, which the Hebrews called מגדל, migdal. Chalde. מגדל magdal. Gene. 11. 4. &c. others reject this opinion as improbable; ſee the learned Iſa. Caſaubon. Exercit. 16. n. 1. that Chriſt caſt ſeven Devils out of her, and a legion out of others, we may without controverſie conclude the Divine Power of Chriſt, out of whoſe hands no powers of hell can take his elect, John 10. as alſo our comfort in that Chriſt redeemeth ſinners out of conditions ſo hopeleſs and deſperate, as was this womans.

v. 3. Herods ſteward] ἐπιτρόπου Ἡρώδου, procuratoris Herodis: Pomponius Lætus ſaith, that unto Cæſars ſteward was all his perſonall eſtate committed: there was alſo an officer ſo called, whoſe power and truſt was ſuch, as that what he did, ſtood ratified, as if Cæſar had done or confirmed it under his own hand. Feneſtella de Magiſtr. Roman. c. 26. this our Evangeliſt here mentioneth to ſhew, that God can, and ſomtimes doth call ſome out of the moſt impious ſocieties of men. See Philip. 4.

of their ſubſtance] in token of their gratitude to him; this received he (though he that could feed ſo many thouſands with few loaves and fiſhes; and cauſe the fiſh to bring him tribute mony could as eaſily have rather given them riches and all other neceſſaries) that their reward might be the greater: that he might leave an example, that it is but juſt for thoſe who adminiſter ſpiritual things to receive the temporall of their hearers: hee pronounceth the labourer worthy of his hire; and threatneth them who receive not, and relieve not his Miniſters.

v. 4. Much people] See Matth. 13. 2.

v. 5. A ſower went out] See on Matth. 13. 3.

by the wayes ſide] See on Matth. 13. 4.

v. 6. Some fell upon a rock] See on Matthew 13. 5.

v. 7. Among thorns] See on Matth. 13. 7.

v. 8. Other fell on good ground] Matth. 13. 8.

v. 9. Ears to hear] To underſtand and believe theſe things.

v. 10. In parable] Matth. 13. 3. That is dark ſpeeches: the curſe was on them. Iſai. 6. 9. Matth. 13. 13. &c. becauſe they would not underſtand and obey.

v. 11. The parable is this] that is, it ſignifieth or repreſenteth this: and ſo underſtand the applications following, (is) doth not alwayes in Scripture ſignifie an exiſtence a literall or reall being: but ſomtimes a ſimilitude, Sacramentall repreſentation, and likeneſſe: God ſoweth when he cauſeth his word to be preached by his prophets, Apoſtles, and Miniſters: ſee 1 Cor. 3. 5. 6. &c. the field repreſenteth the hearers Matthew 13. 38. 1 Cor. 3. as there are divers veins of earth, ſome fruitfull, ſome barren; ſo is it with hearers: ſome bring forth to newneſſe of life, and ſalvation: ſome not amending, grow worſe, and neerer the curſe for their contempt of Gods word. Heb. 6. 7. 8.

v. 12. The word out of their hearts] The meaning is; Satan took out of their hardened hearts the word which they heard; leſt lying ſtill in their memories, like ſeed on the ground, it ſhould at laſt take root, and convert them.

v. 13. With joy] Who take pleaſure in hearing the promiſes in Gods word concerning eternall and temporall bleſsings, in which they would be glad to ſhare, though they hate to live the life of the righteous.

for a while believe] becauſe it was not rooted in Gods trueth and love, but on temporall ends, and reſpects meerly mercenary; theſe failing, their ſeeming faith withered: and here, to the heat of the ſun, is affection, tentation and perſecution reſembled, for as the kindly heat and influence thereof maketh fruitfull, and ripeneth the well rooted corn, but burneth up that which is not on good earth, ſo do afflictions, &c. More confirm, make fruitfull; and ripe for God, the elect and true believers, but cauſeth formal hypocrites to fall quite away: here appeareth the difference between temporary, or ſeeming faith, and that which is true and juſtifying, which never falleth away, or is finally loſt: becauſe he that believeth, hath already everlaſting life John 3. 36. again, the gifts and calling of God are without repentance Rom. 11. 29. again Chriſt prayeth for the elect, that their faith may not fail. chap. 22. 32. ſo that though they who ſeem to believe, may, and do fall away; yet they who truly do believe, ſhall never, vera fides remitti poteſt, amitti non poteſt, true faith may ſomtimes have leſſe evidence, but can never be quite loſt.

v. 14. Go forth, &c.] Return home to their affairs; and the cares and pleaſures of this world, leave no place for the word of God to grow in their hearts, nor any leiſure to think of it.

v. 15. Honeſt and good heart] That which God hath made ſo who taketh away the ſtony heart, and giveth an heart of fleſh: ſo that here is not mentioned any cauſe, but a certain conſequence, of a fruitfull and good heart, it is true, that God only who giveth the encreaſe, giveth faith and obedience towards the word; but wherever he giveth ſuch an heart, he alſo giveth grace to retain and hold faſt the word which ſhall bring forth good fruits.

with patience] with perſeverance unto the end: theſe bring forth fruits of ſanctification to ſome maturity. Rom. 2. 7.

v. 16. No man lighteth] See Matth. 5. 15. Mark 4. 21. Luke 11. 33. he warneth his to do good with the light they have, and ſhall receive, that it might guide men according to the intent of the giver.

v. 17. For nothing is ſecret] See Matth. 10. 26. Mark 4. 22. Luke 12. 2. 1 Cor. 4. 5. the meaning is, that though their preaching was yet but of obſcure beginnings, and clowded by the malicious oppoſitions of adverſaries, yet it ſhould once gloriouſly break out and ſhine to the world, whereby the ſecret machinations of wicked and hypocriticall enemies (who under pretence of religion perſecuted the Goſpel) ſhould plainly appear.

v. 18. Take heed therefore how ye hear] Take heed how ye come affected to Gods word (that it be with repentance faith, and due preparation,) how ye behave your ſelves in hearing (that it be with reverent attention) and how you practice when you have heard; that ye may bring forth fruits accordingly: See on Mark 4. 24. of Iſraels earings, was the Idol made; Exodus 32. 2, &c. qui malè audit, conflare ſacrilegium ſolet. Ambroſ. lib. 7. epiſt. 36. ſacriledge and moſt ſins come of careleſſe and evil hearing: as a defect or fault in the firſt digeſtion, cauſeth the like in the reſt, and conſequently many diſeaſes in the body; ſo is it proportionably in the ſoul: ſee more Matth. 13. 12. and 25. 29.

v. 19. Then came to him] See Matth. 12. 46. Mark 3. 32.

v. 20. Thy mother and thy brethren] See Matt. 12. 47. Theſe were not any ſons of Chriſts Mother: nor the ſons of Joſeph by another wife (ſee Jerom. contr. Helvid. cap. 8. & cap. 9.) but were called his brethren according to the Cuſtom of the Hebrews who ſo ſtiled couzens: it may be they were ſons of Joſephs brother, or Maries ſiſter; as was James.

v. 21. Mother, and my brethren] Meaning that he would not neglect the work of God for any ſecular reſpect, but chiefly attend them, who hear the word of God and live thereafter.

v. 22. Now it came to paſſe] Matthew 8. 23. Mark 4. 36.

v. 23. He fell aſleep] Into a ſound, or very heavy ſleep, as that doubled cry of his Diſciples awaking him importeth. v. 24.

they were filled] the ſhip began to founder, or to be filled with water, and ſo in danger of ſinking.

v. 24. Maſter, Maſter, we periſh] Matth. 8. 25.

v. 25. Where is your faith?] Matth. 8. 26. your confidence in me, which is an effect of faith.

v. 26. They arrived] Matth. 8. 28. See on verſe 27.

v. 27. A certain man, &c.] Matth. 8. 28. this is called the countrey of the Gergeſenes, which here, and Mark 5. is called the Country of the Gadarens: it ſeemeth that Gadar and Gergeſſa, or Geraſa were two Towns, but both in the ſame continent, neer the lake of Tiberias, over againſt Galilee. See note on Matt. 8. 28. and on Mark. 5. 1. and whereas Matthew ſpeaks of two men poſſeſſed meeting Chriſt, and hear is but one mentioned, the order and circumſtances, ſhew it to be one and the ſame hiſtory, but where Matthew ſpeaketh of both the poſſeſſed, Luke and Mark ſpeaks but of one of them, who either was better known, and more notorious fierce, dangerous, or more cruelly tormented, by a whole legion of Devils.

but in tombes] that is, (as the Syriac interpreter giveth it) in the place of Sepulchres: among the graves of the dead: ſome think in caves, or arches built by, or over the Sepulchres.

v. 28. What have I to do, &c.] The Devils uſurping the parts and faculties of his body and ſoul whom they poſſeſſed, made the poor man cry this in his own name; whereas the preſence of Jeſus, was his happineſs, but their torment.

torment me not] Meaning, before the time, as Matth. 8. 29. for they knew they muſt not only be executioners of reprobates, but alſo be tormented themſelves eternally and with the greateſt torments; for as much as their ſin is greateſt. 2. Peter 2. 4. Jude. 6.

v. 29. Caught him] συνηρπάκει: ſnatcht him up with violence.

therefore he was bound] that is, the poſſeſſed man was bound, that he might do no harm to paſſers by.

brake the bands] by the power of unclean ſpirits, he brake all chains and fetters: which ſheweth that none but God was able to reſcue this poor man out of their power.

driven of the Devil] ἠλαύνετο ſignifieth a violent and ſpeedy driving: ἐλαύνω, agito ſtimulo incito, exagito, &c. and that is here attributed either to one commander in chief; or it intimateth that it was done by a common conſent and inſtigation of all.

v. 30. And

v. 30. and he ſaid Legion] A legion conſiſted of 6100. footmen, and 726. horſemen: Vegetius de re militar. l. 2. c. 6. but here it ſeemeth put for a great indefinite number.

v. 31. into the deep] That is, into hell; where the devils are in darkneſſe. See Rev. 20. 3. 2 Pet. 2. 4. he calleth that here ἄβυσσον, which chap. 16. 23. the Evangeliſt calleth ᾅδην, Hebrew תהום, a gulfe, or depth without bottom: metaphorically, great, many deſperate affliƈtions, in which men periſh. Pſal. 42. 7. or things unſearchable. Pſal. 36. 6. literally for the depths of the ſeas: ſo ſome take it here: it is probable that the devils are confined to certain places; and permitted to infeſt ſome; but the ſumme of this petition was, that they might not be commanded to go out of this world, leſt that thereby they ſhould loſe their opportunity of deſtroying, or hurting men.

v. 32. an herd of many ſwine] Mark 5. 13. about two thouſand: but why ſay ſome, did the Jews keep ſwine; ſeeing Gods law made them unclean to them. Levit. 11. 7. we muſt know that Pompey had taken away Gadara from the Jews, which it ſeemeth they had ſeiſed into their hands by force: and that the Jews, there or elſe where inhabiting, which kept ſwine (which themſelves might neither offer in ſacrifice, nor eat) did it to make gains thereof in ſelling them to the Romans or others.

v. 33. choaked, &c.] Drowned in the waters.

v. 34. they fled and went and told, &c.] As being amazed, and afraid at that which was done.

v. 35. clothed, &c.] Clothed with ſomething which it ſeemeth they who were preſent could ſpare him to cover his nakedneſſe: for verſe 27. he ware no clothes.

v. 37. back again] Into Galilee.

v. 38. that he might be with him] Mark 5. 18.

v. 39. return to thine own houſe] Chriſt would not have him depend on his bodily preſence for proteƈtion againſt thoſe ſpirits which had tormented him: but to know that he was able (as being God) to countermand the devils, and to ſave his: and alſo that he might teſtifie to others, what God had done for him.

thorowout the whole citie] Of the Gadarens, which was one of the cities of Decapolis. Mark 5. 20. for Gadara was reckoned ſo. Plin. nat. hiſt. l. 5. c. 8.

v. 40. gladly received him] Becauſe they hoped that he would cure their ſick; and many alſo deſired to hear him.

v. 41. a man named Jairus] Mat. 9. 18. Mark 5. 22.

a ruler of the ſynagogue] Or Church of the Jews: See on chap 13. 14. and on Matth. 9. 18. Acts 13. 15. the office of theſe rulers was to be wardens of the ſynagogues, and to take care that all things might be decently and orderly done there.

v. 43. all her living] All that ſhe had in banck, or all that ſhe had to live on: for βίος ſignifieth life, or livelyhood, by which life is maintained; as, chap. 15. 30. &c.

v. 44. touched the border of his garment] Matth. 9. 20.

v. 45. who touched me?] Mark 5. 30. This he ſaid, though he knew her thoughts, and that ſhe was healed; ne fructus fidei apud ignorantes latere videretur. Optalus lib. 5. leſt the fruit of her faith might otherwiſe have been concealed from them who knew not what was done.

v. 46, ſome body hath touched me] He ſpeaketh of the end which ſome one of the multitude had propoſed to their ſelf, in aſſurance of being healed, if they could but come to touch his garments: this faith of the womans he manifeſteth to the multitude, to invite them alſo to beleeve, that they might be healed and ſaved; therefore he aſked who touched him, ut confeſſionem certè provocaret, ſaith Tertul. adverſ. Marc. l. 4. to cauſe her confeſſion.

vertue is gone out of me] Underſtand here with Fulgentius ad Thraſ. l. 2. divinæ curationis effectum: the effect of a divine cure: as if he had ſaid, I have given vertue or power to heal, according to the faith of that party who deſired to touch me.

v. 47. for what cauſe ſhe had touched him] For ſaith Matth. 9. 21. ſhe ſaid with her ſelf, if I may but touch his garment I ſhall be whole: ſhe was in modeſty aſhamed to tell men, but when ſhe ſaw that ſhe was not concealed, ſhe glorified God in declaring to others the admirable cure ſhe had: ſo, as Optalus ſaid, l. 5. invenit conſilium tacita fides; her ſilent faith found advice.

v. 48. thy faith hath made thee whole] Not the merit or vertue of thy faith, but His vertue upon whom thy faith relyed: he knew both her faith, and her cure.

go in peace] See on chap. 7. 50.

v. 49. trouble not the Maſter] This they ſaid as ignorant of the power of Chriſt to raiſe the dead: as if they ſhould have ſaid, ſhe is already paſt help, let not him loſe his labour, for he cometh too late.

v. 50. fear not] Do not deſpair of help: he forbiddeth not ſuch fear as is neceſſary to beget an holy reverence; and to bring them for refuge and help to the power and mercy of God, who ſaith, Hoſe. 5. 15. in their affliction they will ſeek me early, but would have them confident in his power and love: ſicut meliores ſunt quos dirigit amor: ita plures quos corrigit timor. Aug. epiſt. 50. as they are better whom love directeth; ſo are they more whom fear amendeth.

v. 51. he ſuffereth none to go in] Mark 5. 37.

v. 52. ſhe is not dead] Matth. 9. 24. Mark 5. 39. She is not ſo dead, but that ſhe may and ſhall be raiſed: this he ſpake to confirm their faith concerning the reſurrection from the dead, intimating, that it was as eaſie for him to raiſe the dead, as for one man to awake another out of ſleep: and it is probable which Euthymius ſaith; he permitted them to laugh, that they might be a manifeſt demonſtration or witneſſe of her being really dead and raiſed again: that they might not afterwards ſay that ſhe was not dead.

v. 54. he put them all out] All but thoſe forenamed; verſe 51. he would admit no profane ſcorners.

v. 55. give her meat] That they might know that ſhe was perfectly reſtored to life and health.

v. 56. tell no man what was done] That verſe 39. he bad the diſpoſſeſſed man tell what great things God had done for him, and here forbad the parents to divulge what he had done for them; the reaſon may be, that though he would aſſigne that man ſuch an office; to expreſſe his gratitude to God, and to prepare the inhabitants of Decapolis for their converſion to the faith of Chriſt; yet being come from thence, and doing this miracle in Galilee, he would not have it noiſed abroad, as for that he would decline the importune malice of the Jews towards him; ſo alſo juſtly to puniſh theſe excluded ſcorners, by permitting them to their own unbeliefe.

Verſe 1. T*Hen he called his twelve diſciples*] Matth. 10. 1. Mark 3. 13. and 6. 7. according to the number of the tribes of Iſrael: yet ſo far was the Prieſthood of Chriſt, (after the order of Melchiſedec. Hebr. 5. 6.) different from the prieſthood of Aaron, that he choſe not one Apoſtle out of the tribe of Levi, neither was he of that tribe, but of Judah.

authority over all devils] That is, to caſt any of them out of the poſſeſſed.

v. 2. he ſent them to preach] In that he gave them power to do miracles, it ſheweth his deity, for no meere man could give it: in that he ſendeth them to preach as well as to do ſuch works, it declareth the principal end of miracles, which is to confirm the doctrine preached; as alſo the difference between impoſtors and the miniſters of Chriſt; they work lying wonders to gain credit to ſome falſhoods, but theſe do true miracles for the confirmation and manifeſtation of the truth: the Goſpel having been confirmed ſufficiently, needeth no further confirmation: neither need the miniſters thereof any miracles to juſtifie them, when according to their lawfull calling they ſincerely preach the truth of the Goſpel.

v. 3. Take nothing for your journey] Meaning that they ſhould not be diſtracted with any cares, for God would cauſe thoſe who received ſpirituall good of them, to adminiſter temporall neceſſaries to them.

v. 4. and thence depart] As you have occaſion to go or ſtay.

v. 5. ſhake off the very duſt] Which was a ſigne of deteſtation, and their unworthyneſſe to have the Goſpel preached unto them. See Matth. 10. 14. Mark 6. 11. Luke 10. 11. Acts 13. 51.

v. 9. deſired to ſee him] Not to be converted by him, but to ſatisfie his own curioſitie; as, Luke 23. 8. in hope to ſee ſome miracle done by him.

v. 13. except we ſhould go and buy] This manner of ſpeaking ſheweth that the Apoſtles thought it impoſſible to feed and ſatisfie ſo great a multitude, having ſo little proviſion, which ſetteth off the truth and greatneſſe of the miracle.

v. 14. for they were, &c.] That is, there were preſent ſo many.

v. 15. fifties in a company] That which this Evangeliſt calleth here κλισίας: the Syriac interpreter giveth diſcubitus, and our tranſlation company. Mark 6. 39. is given συμπόσια, συμπόσια, as it were by tables; that is, as many in a company as a table would hold: this was done for the better convenience of ſerving them all diſtinctly and orderly, which in a confuſed throng they could not ſo have done.

v. 16. looking up to heaven] As ſhewing whence all bleſſings come and muſt be expected.

bleſſed them] Gave thanks. John 6. 11. praying that God would bleſſe and ſanctifie thoſe gifts to the receivers. See Tim. 4. 4, 5.

v. 17. were all filled] Whereby it appeareth, that man liveth not by bread onely, but by the word and providence of God: and that our life is not in abundance, but in Gods bleſſing, who can make a little ſufficient.

v. 18. And it came to paſſe] Matth. 16. 13. Mark 8. 27.

and he asked them] That is, when he had done praying.

Whom ſay the people that I am?] This he aſketh, not being ignorant of the thoughts of men, but becauſe the faith and confeſſion of the Apoſtles, whom he appointed to be the light of the world, ought to outſhine all vulgar faith and confeſſion; he requireth it of them, verſe 20. and Peter, as the ſpeaker for the reſt, anſwereth, the Chriſt of God; that perſon whom God fore-promiſed, and anointed, above all thoſe that (as his types) were anointed; in whom the offices of King, Prieſt, and Prophet met together, for the work of our redemption.

v. 19. John the Baptiſt. &c.] See Matth. 16. 14.

v. 20. the Chriſt of God] See on verſe 18. Chriſt the Son of the living God; the anointed of the Lord: the Meſſias and Saviour of the world.

v. 21. tell it to no man] Till the appointed time, when it was to be divulged to the world Matth. 10. 27. which he ſaith not, as if it did not highly concern all the Elect to know and confeſſe the ſame: but becauſe he would not yet have his glory manifeſted before he had accompliſhed the work of the croſſe, in ſuffering an ignominious death, to redeem us from death and hell; thus would he yet leave the devil in ſuſpence: but principally, leſt the faith of the diſciples thus confeſſing, ſhould be dangerouſly ſhaken in the ſight of his bitter paſſion; and leſt their auditours ſhould have ſuſpected the truth they preached (neither theſe, nor they yet fully underſtanding the myſtery of Chriſts death, reſurrection, and aſcenſion into heaven) and ſo the perverſion of order in things opportunely to be manifeſted and known, ſhould have proved, but as removing of the ſteps from them who were by ſuch degrees to have aſcended to that great myſtery of godlineſſe and ſalvation by Chriſt. v. 22. Son of man muſt ſuffer, &c.] See on chap. 6. 5. He that was God and man in one perſon; in his God-head impatible, was to ſuffer in his humane body and ſoul, to redeem us bodies and ſouls: to which God had aſſigned him from eternity: therefore as he is called the Lamb of God which taketh away the ſin of the world. his croſſe daily] Meaning, if God ſhould pleaſe to call us to daily afflictions, as it ſometimes cometh to paſſe. Rom. 8. 36. 1 Cor. 15. 31. we muſt yet endure and perſevere unto the end. Matth. 10. 22. and 24. 13. we are therefore here admoniſhed to be alwayes prepared to bear afflictions for Chriſts ſake, and to follow him in obedience and holy imitation of his humility and patience: ſo muſt all they who will follow Chriſt, deny themſelves, not regarding their own profits or lives, in reſpect of his will and glory: ſo Chriſt ſought not his own, but his Fathers will.

v. 24. will ſave his life, &c.] That is, whoſoever will ſet more by his own eaſe, ſafety, or life, then Chriſt the way, truth, and life; ſhall loſe himſelf to eternity: but he that will expoſe himſelf to perils and death it ſelf, where the honour of Chriſt ſhall require it, ſhall be ſaved: Salvian therefore adviſeth well, *de gub. when he ſhall come] To judge the living and the dead, with glory, and many Angels attending his tribunall: then will not Chriſt own him, who ſhall here before men, deny him, for fear or favour of men, or for love of this world, and the things thereof; this doth not onely concern apoſtates openly denying Chriſt, but (as Fulgentius l. 1. ad Thraſ. well noteth) him alſo qui ſilentio firmat errorem, who by his ſilence confirmeth errour ſilendo non adſtruit veritatem; and by holding his peace doth not confirm the truth; divinam contumeliam qui non refutarit, accumulat. He that repelleth not Gods diſhonour (what he poſſibly can) addeth to it; the negligent or ſleepy centinell betrayeth his princes tents.

till they ſee the kingdom of &c.] Some preſent ſhall not die (or ſee death; as, John 8. 27. Hebr. 2. 9.) untill they ſee the propagation of the kingdom of Chriſt, in and after his aſcenſion into heaven.

v. 28. it came to paſſe about an eight dayes after] Matth. 17. 1. Mark. 9. 2. Matthew and Mark ſay ſix dayes after. So that Luke taketh thoſe ſix with either limit included, that is reckoning to the ſix, the day preceding the firſt, and the day following the laſt thereof, which the other Evangeliſts take excluſively.

theſe ſayings] Or things.

took Peter and John and James] That they might firſt be ſpectatours of his glory, whom he would afterwards make witneſſes of his bitter agony, and ſad conflict with the pains of death and hell: what this mount was, we may not curiouſly diſpute, the ſcripture not declaring it: the common opinion is, that it was mount Tabor in the midſt of Galilee, ſpecified Pſal. 89. Hoſe. 5. Peter calleth it the holy mount. 2 Pet. 1. 18. See on Matth. 17. 1.

v. 29. his countenance was altered] Gre. ἕτερον other, or changed from the ordinary appearance, beginning to ſhine with an admirable and divine beauty: and ſo his garments were light and glorious; an heavenly glory ſhined in the Angels appearing. Matth. 28. 3. Rev. 4. 4. this light of Majeſty which they now ſaw, was a ſlender ray of his divine glory, but much more excellent, then that wherewith Moſes face ſhined, which the people were not able to behold. Exod. 34. ſhewing in the myſtery, the diſability of men under the vail, to look unto the end of the law Chriſt Jeſus. 2 Cor. 3. 13. by this they now ſaw, Chriſt would give them a taſte of that glory, which ſhall be ſeen when he ſhall appear glorious in his Saints. 2 Theſ. 1. 14. Coloſ. 3. 4. 1 John 3. 2. Phil. 3. 21.

v. 30. Moſes and Elias] Theſe alſo appeared glorified; poſſibly to ſhew theſe diſciples, that Chriſt was not againſt the Law and the Prophets, as the unbelieving Jews would perſwade men, for they gave teſtimony unto him: and becauſe theſe two were the moſt famous in the Old Teſtament.

v. 31. of his deceaſe] Of his death and paſſion at Jeruſalem.

v. 32. were heavy with ſleep] Either with joy, or fear and admiration, or a divine rapture: ſee Dan. 8. 18. and 10. 9 or overcome with watching, for they ſtayed there all night verſe 17.

v. 33. not knowing what he ſaid] So the Spirit of God opened his underſtanding to know Moſes and Elias, whom he never before had ſeen.

v. 34. overſhadowed them] Them, that is the diſciples, by means whereof Moſes and Elias were taken out of their ſight, after this conference ended: it ſeemeth the Apoſtles, imagined that his kingdom was now eſtabliſhed to him, and begun; or they ſpake to him that he might avoid the ſuffering of which they conferred, by ſtaying ſtill in the mount.

and they feared] Becauſe it was an extraordinary cloud wherein the glory of God appeared: and the voice was preſently heard ſounding from heaven, 2 Pet. 1. 17. Mark 9.

v. 35. This is my beloved Son] The onely Son of God by nature, for whoſe ſake we are beloved, Epheſ. 1. 6. in whom are all the treaſures of wiſdom: therefore under pain of rejection from God, we muſt hear and obey him. Deut. 18. 18, 19.

v. 36. was found alone] Having put off that glory and reſumed his forme of a ſervant.

and told no man] Until Chriſt was riſen from the dead, for ſo he charged them, Mark 9. 9.

v. 37. and it came to paſſe] See Math. 17. 14. Mark. 9. 17.

v. 38. look upon my ſon] That is, have mercy upon him, and help him: for we willingly look on thoſe whom we pity and would help.

v. 39. a ſpirit taketh him] That is, tormenteth him, making him foam and tear himſelf, and doth himſelf againſt the ground. See Matth. 17. 16. 17. Mark 9. 20.

teareth him] Mark 1. 26. & 9. 20.

v. 40. and they could not] See on Mark 9. 18.

v. 41. O faithleſſe and perverſe] Thus ſharply doth he reprove the Apoſtles unbelief. See Matth. 17. 20.

v. 42. the devil threw him down] Being enraged (as he uſeth to be) becauſe the childe was brought to Chriſt: and becauſe he knew, that thereby he ſhould be caſt out of poſſeſſion.

v. 43. at the mighty power of God] Which appeared in this admirable work of Chriſts commanding the unclean ſpirits.

v. 44. let theſe ſayings ſink down into your ears] That is, mark them diligently and remember them well.

v. 45. They underſtood not this ſaying] They were ſo confident of Chriſts temporal kingdom, that they could not underſtand him, when he ſpake of his ſuffering death: after his reſurrection they underſtood it, John 2. 22. now they feared to aſk him, becauſe he had a little before ſo ſharply reproved Peter about it.

v. 46. which of them ſhould be greateſt] Poſſibly the occaſion of this queſtion might now be his ſpeech concerning his death; they deſiring to know, which of them ſhould be the chief or head, of his ſuppoſed earthly kingdom in his ſtead; for yet they underſtood not his ſpiritual kingdom: but here, as alſo Chap. 22. Chriſt reproveth their ambition.

v. 47. perceiving the thoughts of their hearts] For he is truly God, as truly man: none can ſearch and know the heart but God, Jer. 17. 10. the very Heathens knew this: therefore ſome of them dedicated to their ſuppoſed Gods ὦτα ϗ τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς, ears and eyes of ſome precious materials, intimating that God heard and ſaw all things. Clem. Alexandr. ſtrom. lib. 5.

v. 48. he that is leaſt among you] True greatneſſe before God, is in ſincere innocency and humility, ſuch as is commonly in little children.

v. 49. and John anſwered] Mark 9. 38. it is an Hebrew manner of ſpeaking (See Chap. 7. 40.) occaſioned by the former paſſage, concerning their not caſting out the devil.

he followeth not with us] He followeth thee, not in our ſociety, it might ſeem ſtrange that any ſhould caſt out devils in the name of Chriſt, who did not follow Chriſt: but we muſt know, that though this power was principally given to the Apoſtles to confirm their preaching, yet was it not ſo confined to their office, but that Chriſt might give the ſame alſo to other believers. See Mark 16. 17.

v. 50. Is for us] Though he be not with us in body, or external communion; yet he adhereth to us in faith, affection, conſent, in doctrine and ſpiritual communion.

v. 51. received up] By his aſcenſion into heaven, after his death and reſurrection.

he ſtedfaſtly ſet his face] This is an Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, ſignifying a reſolving, and ſetling a mans ſelf to do a thing, Jer. 42. 15. Ezek. 4. 3. God ſaith there to the Prophet, והכינתה את פניך vahachinotha eth phanecha, ſet thy face againſt it: the word is of כון con, which among other things, ſignifieth to be prepared, firme, and conſtant, reſolved not to be diverted; or to be fitted, diſpoſed, or intent to do ſomething. So here, the time of Chriſts paſſion drawing neer, he reſolved (whatever fleſh and blood ſuggeſted; or Peter had perſwaded to the contrary Matth. 16. 22.) to go to Jeruſalem. See on Matth. 19. 1.

v. 52. to make ready for him] Which was needfull; becauſe Chriſt was attended, not onely by the twelve Apoſtles, but many others who followed him, as diſciples and hearers.

v. 53. his face was as though, &c.] The Samaritanes took ſpecial notice of any that went up to Jeruſalem to worſhip, becauſe they had a temple of their own for their falſe worſhip on mount Gerizim, built in oppoſition to the Temple of God at Jeruſalem. See John 4. 20. now it being neer the Paſſcover, the Samaritans took the more notice of their going that way, and therefore would not entertain them: moreover, the Jews having no commerce with the Samaritanes, John 4. 9. there was the more need of forerunners to make proviſion for them, who could not in an ordinary, or then uſual courſe have expected any neceſſary entertainment there.

v. 54. even as Elias did] See 2 Kings 1. 10.

v. 55. of what ſpirit ye are] You do not know what ſpirit moveth you herein: your counſel agreeth not with your calling: you ſhew a ſpirit of revenge, and therefore miſapply the example of Elias: for I am come to ſave, not to deſtroy. And indeed as Auguſtine ad Marcellin. ep. 5. well ſaith, vindicta ultima juſtè poſcitur, quando nullus jam reſtat correctionis locus, extremo ſc. ſummoq; judicio, final revenge is juſtly required, when there remaineth no place for amendment; that is, at the laſt judgment. So dangerous is imitation of miſapplyed examples of ſaints, eſpecially to the violation of charity.

v. 56. is not come to deſtroy] See 1 Tim. 1. 15. John 3. 17. he now came to ſhew mercy, and to ſave the penitent, who will come again to judge and deſtroy the impenitent, and unbelievers: it was now a time for mercie, not judgement.

v. 57. and it came to paſſe] See Matth. 8. 19.

v. 58. the Son of man hath not] Knowing his thoughts, he intimated to him, that he ſhould but deceive himſelf in following him for temporal gains, who now poſſeſſed nothing temporal, and came to propoſe ſpiritual and eternall gains.

v. 59. and he ſaid] Matth. 8. 21.

v. 60. Let the dead bury the dead] Meaning the unregenerate who are dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, 1 Tim. 5. 6. Epheſ. 2. 1. not that Chriſt diſalloweth a decent and ſeaſonable performance of that office of duty and piety, but that he preferreth the advance of Gods glory in preaching the Goſpel, and ſaving of ſouls before it. See Matthew 8. 22.

v. 61. bid them farewell] Mark 6. 46. the word ἀποτάξασθαι ſignifieth alſo to order or diſpoſe of: ſo that the ſence may be, ſuffer me firſt to go home, and order or diſpoſe of my eſtate and family: ſo that which the Prophet ſaith, Iſaiah 38. 2. to Hezekiah, צַו לְבֵיתֶךָ, tſau lebeitheca, command or give order to thine houſe, the 70 give τάξαι περὶ τοῦ οἴκου σου, diſpoſe of the houſe: this probably was the main care of the man, to bid farewell, or take leave of friends, though an act of humanity, yet was it of leſſe moment then to order and provide for them.

v. 62. and looking back] This is an Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, ſignifying repentance of that one had begun. See Gen. 19. 17. 26. The meaning is, that no man dedicated to the miniſtery of the Goſpel, having in his heart a reſolution to forſake his calling, and to embrace the preſent world, is fit for that holy work: the ſimile is derived from ploughmen, who looking backward cannot make ſtraight furrows.

CHAP. X.

Verſe 1. A*Fter theſe things*] See Matth. 10. 1.

other ſeventy alſo] After that the twelve Apoſtles had preached in the towns round about, now the hearers multiplying, there was need of more preachers to confirm them: therefore he choſe out of thoſe who had heard and followed him, ſeventy more to ſend abroad to that office: ſo the Syriack interpreteth, he ſeparated of his diſciples ſeventy other, and ſent them: the Greek word ἀναδείκνυμι here uſed ſignifieth, as to deſigne or appoint, ſo to ordain or conſecrate, as Chriſt here did: their return from Babylon was kinde of type of their redemption by Chriſt: ſo here are appointed ſeventy, as they had their Synedrion or Council of ſeventy Elders or Judges after their return. So Moſes appointed ſeventy Elders, or aſſiſtants to him, Exodus 18. 22.

whither himſelf would come] Whither he would follow them, more fully to preach the kingdom of heaven, and alſo confirme the ſame with miracles: he ſent them two and two; as to ſtrengthen and comfort each other; ſo for the more certain teſtimony of that which they were to affirme.

v. 2. the harveſt truly is great] Matth. 9. 37. meaning a great number of people, which were ready to be converted, and gathered unto God. See John 4. 35. thus he encourageth them.

v. 3. behold I ſend you, &c.] Matth. 10. 16.

among wolves] Theſe are tyranni, & raptores ſeculi, Bernard. ad Paſt. Ser. tyrants, ſpoilers, bloody perſecuters.

v. 4. carry neither purſe] Be not diſtracted with care concerning ordinary means to bear your charges for clothes or dyet: he that ſendeth you is able to provide neceſſaries for you, ſuch ought our confidence to be in Gods providence, that we may ever be aſſured, that he careth for us, while we are careful of his work; leſt otherwiſe, if the minde be too intent on the things of this world, minus aliis provideat æterna, Greg. hom. 17. in evang. he ſhould be leſſe carefull over others for things eternal.

ſalute no man] See on 2 Kings 4. 29. this he ſpeaketh, not forbidding comity and civility which he enjoyneth, verſe 5. but diſtraction from, and hindrance in their duty and miniſtration.

v. 5. into whatſoever houſe &c.] Matth. 10. 11.

peace be to this houſe] See 1 Sam. 25. 6. it was their manner of ſalutation, whereby they wiſhed all health, and happineſſe. See on John 19. 3.

v. 6. the ſon of peace] That is, if any man capable of that bleſſing, and diſpoſed to receive the doctrine of peace, which you preach, be therein.

v. 7. the labourer is worthy of his hire] See 1 Cor. 9. 7. 1 Tim. 5. 18.

go not from houſe to houſe] In reſpect of the charge you put them to; for while you miniſter the goſpel to them, you bring them greater gain.

v. 8. eat ſuch things] That is, be contented with ſuch things as you finde: which he ſaith, firſt that they might not ſeek themſelves, as they whoſe belly is their God, Phil. 3. ſecondly, that they might know, that he who forbade them to carry purſe or ſcrip, yet permitteth them neceſſaries in the execution of their miniſtery.

v. 9. nigh unto you] See Matth. 3. 2. and 4. 17.

v. 10. out into the ſtreets and ſay] Publikely and openly for a teſtimony againſt them.

v. 11. duſt of your city] See Matth. 10. 14. Luke 9. 5. Acts 18. 51.

kingdom of God] Chriſt the Meſſias, King of glory, preſented himſelf unto you by his meſſengers, to reign over you, and ſave you.

is come nigh unto you] That is, againſt you, further to condemn you, who contemn it, as Chap. 9. 5.

v. 12. more tolerable in that day] In the day of judgement. See Matth. 10. 15.

v. 13. Wo unto thee Chorazin] Matth. 11. 21. Chorazin was a chief city of Galilee, reckoned among the ten cities of Decapolis, that ſtood on the ſea of Galilee, in a creeke, over againſt Capernaum.

Bethſaida] Another city of Galilee, which was alſo one of the cities of Decapolis, ſtanding on a Creek of the ſame ſea.

Tyre] Tyrus the chief city of Phœnicia, which in the diviſion of the land, came to the tribe of Aſher, Joſh. 19. 29. but becauſe they could not drive out the inhabitants, Iſrael never poſſeſſed it, but the Tyrians kept it, and continued ſtill in Idolatry.

Sidon] Another city of Phœnicia of the like condition, Joſhua 19. 28.

ſitting in ſackcloth and aſhes] Which were ſignes of mourning and repentance.

v. 14. more tolerable] Becauſe, as Salvian ſaith de gub. Dei, lib. 4. fine, Minoris criminis reatus eſt, legem neſcire quam ſpernere: it is leſſe ſin to be ignorant of Gods will, then to contemn it known: he that knoweth his Maſters will, and doth it not, ſhall have moſt ſtripes. Chap. 12. 47. Jam. 4. 17. John 9. 41.

v. 15. and thou Capernaum] This was another city of Decapolis, which was the Metropolis of Galilee, ſtanding on the river Jordan, upon the borders of Zabulon and Nephtalim, that then flouriſhed with great trade, riches, and pride.

which art exalted to heaven] In regard of Chriſts preaching and working there: or in regard of their high ambition and proſperity.

down to hell] ἕως ᾅδου: ſo in the Creed, εἰς is put elliptically for εἰς οἶκον τοῦ ᾅδου, to the houſe, or place of hell. See in cap. 12. 5.

v. 16. he that heareth you] See Matth. 10. 40. John 13. 20. 1 Theſ. 4. 8.

v. 17. through thy Name] We uſing thy authority, and calling on thy Name.

v. 18. I beheld Satan] Satan is ſtiled Prince of the air, Epheſ. 2. 2. ruling in high places, Epheſ. 6. 12. whence he is ſaid to be caſt down, when his power is overthrown by preaching of the Goſpel.

v. 19. I give unto you power] See Matth. 16. 18. Acts 28. 5. Mark 16. 18.

v. 20. becauſe your names are written in heaven] Becauſe by the effects it appeareth, that ye are elected to life everlaſting. See Phil. 4. 3. Rev. 20. 12. and 21. 27.

v. 21. Jeſus rejoyced in ſpirit] Matth. 11. 25. being comforted in the ſucceſſe of the Goſpel, and in the conſideration of the performance of his Fathers will.

unto babes] νηπίοις, the word alſo ſignifieth ſimple or weak men. Heſiod ἔργ. καὶ ἡμέρ. νήπιοι, οὐδ' ἴσασιν &c. fools or ſimple men, neither do they know, &c.

v. 22. all things are delivered] Matth. 28. 18. John 3. 35. and 17. 2.

v. 23. bleſſed are the eyes] See Matth. 13. 16.

v. 24. Many prophets] Which he meaneth not onely concerning the bodily preſence, and ſight of things by him done; though that was much deſired, that they might ſee the worlds Saviour preſent (as we ſhall do in his kingdom of glory) but alſo to underſtand, and to be more fully aſſured of the admirable work of Gods mercy, and the acompliſhment of their redemption by Chriſt.

v. 25. a certain lawyer] One that profeſſed the knowledge and interpretation of the law of Moſes, though indeed he knew not the end of the Law, which was to be a Schoolmaſter to bring us to Chriſt.

Maſter, what, &c.] Thus he calleth Chriſt, who yet came not with a minde to learn, but to tempt, and to finde ſome occaſion of cavil: it ſeemeth that when he had heard Chriſt teaching, he roſe up to propoſe this queſtion, to try whether Chriſt would ſay any thing againſt the law, or mention any other way to life everlaſting.

v. 26. what is written] Knowing his ſubdolous minde, he remitteth him to the law, who boaſted of, and truſted in righteouſneſſe by the law.

v. 27. Thou ſhalt love, &c.] See Deut. 6. 5.

with all thy heart] As much as thou canſt: modus diligendi Deum eſt ſine modo diligere, Bernard. the meaſure of our loving God, is to love him beyond meaſure.

and thy neighbour as thy ſelf] Levit. 19. 18.

v. 28. This do and thou ſhalt live] This anſwer is ſhaped according to the Lawyers queſtion, verſe 25. what ſhall I do to inherit eternal life? becauſe he ſought eternal life by the works of the law, which he could not fulfill, he referreth his conſcience to the law, which onely ſhewed his ſin, Rom. 7. 7. & 3. 20. Gal. 3. 21, 22. knowing that it muſt either bring him to Chriſt, or leave him unexcuſable, Matt. 19. 17. otherwiſe when the keeper of the priſon (far from all opinion of any merit of his own) aſked; What muſt I do to be ſaved? Acts 16. 30, 31. Paul and Silas anſwered, believe in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and thou ſhalt be ſaved.

v. 29. Who is then my neighbour?] For they counted no man their neighbour but their friends and countrey men.

v. 30. leaving him half dead] We may not ſo wreſt theſe words in their application, as thence to conceive, that man in his fall, had left in him any life of grace, or ability to recover or raiſe himſelf to any moral good; ſeeing that the Scriptures ſo expreſly declare, that before our regeneration and new birth by the free grace and mercy of God quickning us by his holy ſpirit, we are all dead in treſpaſſes and ſins. Epheſ. 2. 1. See Rom. 7. 18. 24. 2 Cor. 3. 5.

v. 31. on the other ſide] As if the diſtreſſed man had been unworthy of his care or pity. See Pſalm 38. 11. Iſaiah 58. 7.

v. 33. but a certain Samaritane] Whoſe nation was odious to the Jews, John 4. 9.

v. 35. took out two pence] Theſe circumſtances are ſet to expreſſe the free mercie of God in our converſion; not only preventing us by his grace, but continually ſupplying us with neceſſary increaſes thereof, that we may perſevere and be ſaved: according to which Auguſtine de verb. Apoſt. ſerm. 15. ſaith, non putes te promerendo accepiſſe, qui non promereres, niſi accepiſſes; think not that thou receivedſt by deſerving, who hadſt not merited, except thou hadſt received: and again, thou giveſt (ſaith he) altogether freely, thou freely ſaveſt, who findeſt (in us) nothing to ſave us, thou findeſt much to condemn us.

v. 36. which now of theſe &c.?] Which of theſe did according cording to the law, which ſaith, thou ſhalt love thy neighbour.

v. 37. Go, and do thou likewiſe] Help him that hath need of thee, although he be thine enemy, or thou know him not.

v. 38. a certain village] Bethania, John 11.1.

v. 39. ſate at Jeſus feet] Here is not onely hiſtoriſied her poſture, but principally her attention, diligence, and compoſure of her ſelf (all things elſe ſet aſide) to hear Chriſt, See Acts 22.3.

v. 41. thou art careful and troubled, &c.] Thou art too much perplexed with theſe cares which hinder thy hearing the Goſpel, which is more neceſſary.

v. 42. Mary hath choſen that good part] Marthas entertainment of Chriſt, was good and commendable: but her too much care diſtracting and hindring her from better, as alſo her cenſuring her ſiſters hearing Chriſt, was not good, non tu malam, ſed illa meliorem, &c. Auguſt. de verb. Dom. ſer.27. Thou haſt not choſen a bad part, but Mary hath choſen a better.

which ſhall never be taken away] That which we here do for eternal life etiam poſt mortem ſervatur, Greg. hom. 27. in Evang. is kept after death. Such is the kingdom of Heaven Unde nullus ejicitur beatus: quo nullus miſer admittitur. Proſper. de vit. contempl. l.1.c.2. whence no bleſſed one is caſt out: into which none unhappy is admitted.

CHAP. XI.

Verſe 1. ONe of his diſciples] All his Apoſtles were Diſciples: but all his Diſciples were not Apoſtles. Whether this were a Diſciple but not one of the twelve Apoſtles, it is not certain: probably he was preſent when Chriſt taught this prayer to his Apoſtles, and the multitude, Matth.6.

Lord, teach us to pray] We know not what to pray as we ought, Rom.8.26. Deus ſolus docere potuit, ut ſe vellet orari, Tertul. l. de orat. c.9. Onely God could teach how he would be petitioned. Therefore his ſelf ordained and ordered the duty of prayer; and from his own Spirit, even then when it proceeded out of his mouth, animata ſuo privilegio, being animated and enlivened with his priviledge it [illegible]cended into Heaven, commending to the Father thoſe requeſts which his Son hath taught. Prayer is a principall part of Gods worſhip: & there can be none other ſo good a teacher of prayer as Chriſt our Mediatour and Redeemer, God and Man: who as he died to give us life, ſo doth he ſit at Gods right hand, to preſent our petitions in Heaven, which his own Spirit enditeth for us here on Earth, that we may obtain the ſame. He therefore taught us to pray, and to avoid the vain repetitions and oſtentation of Phariſees and Heathens, thinking to be heard for their much ſpeaking. Matth.6.7.

as John alſo taught] By giving them ſome form of prayer, it ſeemeth, that becauſe Religion was miſerably corrupted by the falſe Gloſſes, and ſuperſtitious traditions of Phariſees, as alſo by a general depravation of manners, ſo that it was no marvel, if very few among them, either rightly practiſed, or truly underſtood, that main part of Gods worſhip, which is in devout and faithful prayer. Therefore whereas now the long promiſed redemption of the faithful drew neer; it was neceſſary that their mindes ſhould be ſtrengthned, and lifted up to the firm hope and confident expectation thereof, by earneſt prayer: ſo that John Baptiſt, whoſe office it was to prepare the way of Chriſt, did out of the moſt evident places of Scripture thereto pertinent, compoſe his Diſciples (whom he was to inſtruct and fit to receive Chriſt the Meſſias) ſome private prayers ſuitable to their preſent condition, and the ſpiritual kingdom of Chriſt, which they were now to profeſs.

v. 2. when ye pray ſay] Compare Matth. 6. 9. with this place, and the circumſtances ſhew, that Chriſt did twice at the leaſt teach them this very form of prayer. And hence it appeareth, that as this is the moſt abſolute and compleat pattern of prayer, it comprehending all that we muſt ask, ſo is it the moſt exact and ſacred form of prayer, endited and taught the Diſciples (who were to teach the whole World the rules and practiſe of true Religion) by Chriſt himſelf, who is beſt able to teach his ſervants to pray.

Say] Chriſt preſcribed his Diſciples this form of prayer to be uſed by them; not rejecting others, which his Spirit taught or teacheth, but to abridge all neceſſary petitions, into this one Sum. See Auguſtin. ep. 121.c.12.

Our Father] Under one perſon of the holy Trinity named, we underſtand all three: according to that of Tertullian de orat. cap.2. In Patre, Filius invocatur, In the name of Father, the Son alſo (and the Holy Ghoſt) is invocated. This excellently agreeth with the ſtate of grace: firſt intimating our adoption in Chriſt; by whom we are to expect all that is profitable for us; as, remiſſion of ſins, preſervation, temporal and ſpiritual goods, all which God giveth as a loving and gracious Father: alſo in this (our) we learn that the faith onely which worketh by love, is available, Gal.5.6. So that as children of one merciful Father, we muſt be unanimous, and mutually ſolicitous for each others good: and laſtly, it ſheweth us with what confidence we muſt pray: for this appellation & pietatis, & poteſtatis eſt, Tertul. qu. ſ. is both a name of piety and power.

which art in Heaven] Who poſſeſſeſt, ruleſt, and diſpoſeſt of all things in Heaven and Earth, Dan.4.34,35. Filling Heaven which is thy throne, and Earth, which is thy footſtool with thy power and glory: comprehending all things, comprehended of none: It is to be confeſſed, ſaith Auguſtine, Dardan. ep. 57. that God is every where per divinitatis præſentiam, by, or in reſpect of the preſence of his Deity, but not ſo per habitationis gratiam, in reſpect of his grace dwelling in and manifeſting himſelf to the holy. Such onely can be the Father of all the elect, in all ages and places: this ſheweth us to whom our prayers muſt be addreſſed: that our God we call on is the true God: how we ought to lift up our mindes in prayer, how we ought to live, if we call him Father, 1 Pet.1.17. Phil.3.20. and with what humility, ſanctity, and reverence we muſt appear before him when we pray. See Eccleſ.5.2.

Hallowed be thy Name] By Name underſtand his Nature, Majeſty, eternal Power, Goodneſs, Wiſdom, Righteouſneſs, Mercy, Truth, &c. By Hallowed, or Sanctified we pray that we, and all may, rightly know him, adore, reverence, praiſe, magnifie, and ſet forth that his goodneſs which ſhineth in all his works, that we may rightly worſhip and fear him, as Tertullian ſaith, de orat. c.3. id petimus ut ſanctificetur in nobis, that it may be ſanctified in us: that we faithfully endeavour, as much as in us lyeth, that all others may do the ſame: that his Name which is ever holy etiam apud homines ſanctum habeatur, Auguſtin. Prob. ep. 121. may alſo be accounted holy of men. That we may think and ſpeak of him with all reverence, and never take his holy Name in vain. That we may live to his glory, that his ſacred Name be not blaſphemed among the enemies, through our impiety. See Titus 2.10. The ſum of all is, that God would manifeſt himſelf to us, and give and bleſs the means by which all may come to the knowledge of him in Chriſt, that his Name may be magnified in our ſalvations.

Thy kingdom come] The kingdom of God importeth firſt his abſolute ſoveraignty and univerſal government, under which, are all good and bad, Pſal.103.19. This is not here prayed for, as Auguſtin qu. ſ. ſaith, Quod ſeu velimus ſeu nolimus utiq; veniet, which ſhall come whether we will or no, it being alwayes every where and none can reſiſt it, Dan.4.32. Secondly, his ſpecial kingdom, whereby he ruleth in the elect, working his will in them. This is 1. The kingdom of Grace whereby he governeth the elect by his word (the Scepter of his kingdom) and his holy Spirit of Sanctification, whereby he cauſeth in them a voluntary ſubjection of the whole man body and ſoul, to his revealed will, Pſal. 110. 3. Rom. 4. 17.18. Pſal.2.13. with which underſtand the revelation of Chriſt and all the means of ſalvation. 2. The kingdom of glory; that is the eternally bleſſed eſtate of the elect in Heaven, as Auguſtine ſaith, Ut nobis veniat, atque nos in eo regnare mereamur, that it may come to us, and that we may reign therein. Neither may we conceive theſe to be two kingdoms of God: but one and the ſame, begun in the ſtate of Grace, and perfected in the ſtate of Glory: and it cometh by certain degrees, as firſt, illumination by the Goſpel, and all other divine ordinances, whereby Gods grace and favour in Chriſt is revealed, and his kingdom advanced and maintained. Secondly, ſubjection of the whole man, body, ſoul, will, and affections to Chriſt. Thirdly, true renuntiation of the World, Sin, Satan and our ſelves in ſhaking off the kingdom and rule of ſin, and not following the guidance of carnal wiſdom & affection. Fourthly, affections ſet above, deſires and converſations fixed on Heaven, Coloſ.3. Phil.3. Fifthly, accompliſhment of all Gods promiſes to the elect for the life to come; as Gods being all in all: perfection of every part and faculty of body and ſoul filled with glory and unſpeakable joy and bleſſedneſs in the preſence of God: So that the meaning of this petition is, as if we ſaid, O Lord govern us by thy Word and holy Spirit, that we may wholly and willingly obey thee in all things: encreaſe and preſerve thy Church, deſtroy the kingdom of Satan, Sin, and whatſoever power exalteth it ſelf againſt thy Divine Majeſty, Truth, and holy Ordinances: protect, and preſerve us in thy kingdom of grace, and in thy good time bring us into thy kingdom of glory.

thy will be done, as in heaven, ſo on earth] We are not here to pray that God would do what he will, by his abſolute will, whereby he unreſiſtibly ruleth in Heaven and Earth; but for as much as we are yet but partly fleſh and partly ſpirit, Gal.5.17. And as *Tertul. de orat.c.*4. ſaith, Earth and Heaven; we pray that we may be enabled to do what God will for his glory and our ſalvation: we pray (ſaith Auguſt. ep. 121.) for that obedience; that ſo his will may be done of us, as it is done by his Angels in Heaven. This will of his is firſt that we believe in Chriſt for our juſtification and ſalvation, ſee John 6.40. Secondly, that we endeavour to the works of ſanctification, 1 Theſ.4.3. and true conformity to our holy Saviour Chriſt. Thirdly, that we ſubmit to a patient and cheerful undergoing all that which the good providence of God ſhall lay upon us. See Acts 14. 2. Acts 21.13. 2 Sam.15.25. Matth. 26. 39. which we muſt do by renouncing our own wils (which are corrupt and unjuſt, ignorant, and commonly hurtful to our ſelves) and ſubmitting and rendring up our ſelves wholly to the will and good pleaſure of God: to this end, Chriſt propoſeth the pattern, as in heaven. The meaning is, that the Lord would frame us here on Earth to ſuch a holy, ready, and cheerful obedience, as now his holy Angels ſhew in the execution of his will, Pſal.103.20. and as we ſhall alſo do it in the kingdom of glory, in which we ſhall no more ſin, Revel.22.3. The ſum is, Lord give us grace to do thy will (for that we may do his will, opus eſt Dei voluntate, id eſt, ope ejus & protectione, quia nemo ſuis viribus fortis eſt, ſed Dei indulgentia, &c. Cyprian. de orat. Dom. (ſi ſit opus ejus) We have need of Gods will, that is, his aſſiſtance and protection; becauſe no man hath of himſelf ability thereto. Let thy will revealed in thy Word for thy glory and our ſalvation, be accompliſhed in our converſion, and mortification of our corrupt affections, (See Ezek. 33. 11.) denial of our ſelves, relying wholly on our Saviour Chriſt; ſanctification (1 Theſ.4.3.) and cheerful ſubmiſſion to thy good pleaſure in all eſtates proſperous and adverſe.

v. 3. give us day by day our daily bread] Firſt, he teacheth to pray for (as alſo to ſeek Matth.6.) the kingdom of God, and then things temporal, which may accommodate and ſerve us thereto. We muſt ſay, give, Ne putetur eſſe ex nobis, Auguſtine ep. 143. and, us; for he would not have our prayers ſuch, ut--pro ſe tantum precetur, &c. Cyprian qu. ſ. the God of peace and teacher of concord, ſo inſtructed his for unity, that he would have every one pray for all, quomodo in uno omnes ipſe portavit, as he being one, bore, and took care for us all. Day by day, τὸ καθ' ἡμέραν, day by day, or for the day: every day as much as is ſufficient. So the Syriac, כל־יום culjum, is rendred quo opus habemus quotidie. By Bread, underſtand all things neceſſary for the ſuſtenance of this mortal life, meat, drink, clothes, houſe, utencils, peace, health, liberty, maintenance, and whatſoever God knoweth needful to our natures, callings, and conditions, and thoſe whom he hath given us. So the Wiſeman prayeth Prov.30.8. Feed me with לחם חקי lechem chukki, bread of my allowance, or convenient for me; as is expreſſed Geneſis 47.12. לפי הטף lephi hattaph, to the mouth of the little one: τὸ κατὰ σώματα, according to their families; we give it, according to every ones eating. Chriſt doth not hereby prohibit lawful care and labour in our callings to provide things neceſſary for our ſelves and families, (ſee 1 Tim. 5.8. Epheſ. 4.28. 2 Theſ. 3.10.) but 1. That care which diſtracteth from Gods ſervice and dependance on his fatherly providence, who can bleſſe the leaſt; without whoſe bleſſing, the greateſt ſtore cannot profit us. 2. All fraud, oppreſſion, injuſtice, and cruelty in getting. 3. Diffidence in Gods providence for neceſſaries. 4. Covetouſneſs and deſire of more then enough, (ſee 1 Tim.6.9.10.) 5. Diſcontent and repining at that meaſure which Gods providence giveth us, (ſee 1 Tim.6.8. Hebr.13.5.) 6. Intemperance in the exceſſive uſe of his creatures, making Men unfit for the ſervice of God, and works of their calling. 7. That ingratefull looking on ſecond cauſes, and means of getting, which maketh carnal men forget to praiſe Gods providence, as if their own care and labours ſupplied them. The ſum of this petition is; Lord God whoſe providence deſcendeth to the preſervation and well being of all thy creatures, beſtow on us and ours, all things neceſſary for our preſent life, that we may daily and thankfully acknowledge thy fatherly providence, and faithfully and cheerfully depend thereon.

v. 4. and forgive us our ſins] In this petition Chriſt teacheth us what we muſt ask, and what we muſt do if we will attain (Ut qui a Deo paſcitur, in Deo vivat, Cypr. qu. ſ. that he who is fed by God, may live in God) we muſt ask remiſſion of all our ſins, guilt, and puniſhment, without which we muſt periſh eternally: *for that which S. Luke here calleth ἁμαρτίας, Matth. 6. 12. is called ὀφειλήματα, debts: to intimate what puniſhment we owe to Gods juſtice, except he remit and forgive it in mercy, (ſee Pſalm 130.3,4. Pſalm 143.2.) in asking pardon, we acknowledge and confeſſe our guiltineſs, and diſability to ſatisfie; as likewiſe our hope of mercy: thus he taught his Saints to pray: therefore as *Auguſtine ep.*29. ſaith, quantum libet profecerimus, how much ſoever we have profited, ſtill we have need to ſay forgive us; for if we ſay we have no ſin, we deceive our ſelves, &c. 1 John 1.8. The African Council contr. hæreſ. Pelag. cap. 67. condemned them who ſaid, that the Saints thus prayed in regard of other ſins, not their own, or rather in humility then truly: Quis enim ferat orantem, & non hominibus, ſed ipſi Domino mentientem, qui labiis dicit ſibi dimitti velle, & corde dicit, quæ ſibi dimittantur, ſe debita non habere; for who can endure one praying, and lying, not to men, but God himſelf: ſaying with his lips that he deſireth to be forgiven, but in his heart, that he hath no ſin to be forgiven. That which we muſt do, is to forgive our brethren who hurt us: which duty is not here annexed as a cauſe, but as a condition of our ſins remiſſion in Chriſt. It is impoſsible to obtain remiſsion of ſins, without true faith apprehending the merits of Chriſt for our juſtification: and as impoſsible for that to be without charity (Matth.6.14. & 18.33.&c.) therefore Chriſt herein gave us a law, Certa nos conditione & ſponſione conſtringens, binding us in a certain condition, bargain or covenant, ſo to forgive as we deſire forgiveneſs; Cyprian. qu. ſ. Here we ſee the neceſſity of that which Chriſt teacheth Matth. 5.23. The ſum is, O Lord forgive us all our ſins, guilt and puniſhment (for thy Son Chriſt his ſake) as thou haſt in thy mercy given us an heart to forgive all others, who have done any injury to us.

Lead us not into temptation] Matth.6.13. he teacheth us to ſupplicate not onely de remittendis, for remiſſion, but alſo de avertendis peccatis, for averſion and prevention of ſins, *Tertul. de orat. cap.*8. Lead us not; that is as Tertul. and Cyprian. qu. ſ. interpret, Ne patiaris nos induci, &c. Suffer us not to be led into temptation: leſt being deſtitute of his help, either deceived, we conſent to, or afflicted, we yeeld to temptation, ſaith Auguſtine epiſt. 121. cap. 11. As if we ſaid, Lord, leave us not to the malicious aſſaults of Satan, nor to the frailty and corruptions of fleſh and blood: We are of our ſelves unable to reſiſt the power of ſin; and have by our many wilful tranſgreſſions of thy holy Commandements deſerved to be given over and left to our own ſinful wills and affections, and thereby to deſtruction of body and ſoul: but Lord forſake us not in any temptation, but give an happy iſſue; ſo upholding us with thy merciful hand (who beſt knoweſt our weakneſs and neceſſities) that we may neither faint in our trials, nor yeeld to the power of ſin or allurements of Satan; but may ſo reſolutely ſtand, that, through thy good Spirit ſtrengthning us, we may at laſt obtain a perfect victory, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord.

but deliver us from evil] Serva nos a malo, keep us from evil, the interpreter of the Syriac giveth it. Herein we pray againſt all thoſe things which the Adverſary practiſeth againſt us in this World, who hath (ſaith Cyprian qu. ſ.) power granted him againſt us, either ad pœnam cum delinquimus, vel ad gloriam cum probamur, to our puniſhment when we ſin, or to our glory when we are tried. And we are here admoniſhed *Nondum nos eſſe in eo bono, ubi nullum patiemur malum, Auguſtine epiſt.*121. *cap.*11. that we are not yet in that good (eſtate) where we ſhall ſuffer no evil: This prayer (ſaith he cap. 12.) comprehendeth all that an afflicted Chriſtian can pray for: So that it is free to pray aliis atq; aliis verbis, in other words, but not for other things then thoſe which Chriſt hath taught us to pray for.

v. 5. Which of you ſhall have a friend] The ſcope of this ſpeech is to teach us fervency and conſtancy in prayer; by an argument from the leſſe to conclude the greater: if men think no time unſeaſonable to help a friend in want, how much leſſe will God who is ever ready, willing, and able to help his?

v. 6. in his journey is come, &c.] ἐξ ὁδοῦ, out of his way. Syriac מן ארחא men urecho, which word coming of ארח arach, iter fecit, is put to ſignifie, a journey, or way.

v. 7. trouble me not] Which of you will be ſo uncivil as to put off an importunate friend, ſaying, trouble me not? but rather (as v.8.) he will riſe and give him, becauſe of his importunity: how much more will the keeper of Iſrael who neither ſlumbereth nor ſleepeth; who is ever ready without any his trouble to relieve, having in himſelf that eternal and unſpeakable love to his elect, which can have no cauſe but it ſelf, which needeth none other Soliciter, or motive to entreat pity toward us) readily hear & relieve us?

v. 8. becauſe he is his friend, yet becauſe, &c.] Though he would not take ſo much pains for any love to his friend, yet will he do it to avoid more trouble and diſturbance, becauſe he loveth himſelf, and his own eaſe, quiet and reſt, rather (ſaith Auguſtine ep. 121. cap. 8.) vitando tædium, quàm benevolentiam cogitando; avoiding trouble, then thinking of good will: that we may hence underſtand, if he who ſleeping is awaked (awaked againſt his will) to give, how much more benignly, and willingly will he give us, who knoweth not ſleep, and awaketh us from ſleep, that we may aſk of him? This, as other ſimilitudes, is not to be drawn beyond the intent of Chriſt, whoſe purpoſe is to ſhew the excellent effects of fervency and perſeverance in prayer. (See Luke 18. 1. Matth. 15. 27, 28. Iſaiah 62. 7. Exod. 32. 10. 11. Exod. 17. 11. &c.) if importunity prevail ſo much with man, who loveth it not, what ſhall it do with God, who loveth it, commandeth it, and putteth the iſſues and condition of obtaining upon it.

v. 9. And I ſay unto you, &c.] See Matth. 7. 7. and 21. 22. Mark 11. 24. John 15. 7. Jam. 1. 5. 1 John 3. 22.

ask and it ſhall be given you] Underſtand this promiſe to be made to thoſe who aſk according to his will: See Matth. 18. 19. Matth. 21. 22. Mark 11 24. John 15. 7. John 16. 23. James 1. 6. Jam. 4. 2. 1 John 3. 22. 1 John 5. 14. he will not fruſtrate our hope of obtaining, whoſe own ſpirit both moveth us to pray, and indited our prayers: ſo that when he commandeth us to pray, he commandeth, not becauſe he wanteth our prayers, but becauſe we want his bleſſings; ſo true is that of Auguſtine de verb. Dom. ſerm. 29. ille quod hortatur, propter nos hortatur, that which he exhorteth, he exhorteth for our ſakes.

v. 11. if a ſon ſhall ask] Here is another argument or motive to prayer, from the leſſe to the greater, from the worſe to the better; if evil fathers will give their children nothing but good; how much more ſhall the good God (from whom cometh every good, who can neither be deceived in his choice, nor fail in his will) give his children that which is beſt? it is impoſſible for him to deceive his children by giving them any evil, when they pray for good.

will be give him &c.] As if he ſaid, I appeal to your own mindes and affections: do but examine your own hearts herein: would any of you natural parents, willingly hurt your own children?

v. 12. will be offer him a ſcorpion?] Would any man abuſe the ſimplicity, or betray the confidence of his infant aſking an egge, by giving him a deadly poiſon? a ſcorpion is a venemous ſerpent which bringeth forth young, ovorum ſpecie, like egges, Plin. nat. hiſt. lib. 11. cap. 25. that which the Hebrew calleth עקרב bacrab. Deut. 8. 15. עקרבין Chald. 70 σκορπιὸς. So Ezek. 2. 6. vid. Tertul. adverſ. Gnoſtic. cap. 1. init.

v. 13. the holy Spirit] That is, the graces of the holy Spirit, the moſt excellent gift, in which he inſtanceth to aſſure them, that he who will give himſelf to them, will not let them periſh for want of things earthly and temporal; he is therefore (as Fulgentius ad Monim. lib. 1. well ſaith) to be praiſed for his grace and favour of either gift; both when he awaketh us from ſleep to ſeek him, and alſo when he giveth himſelf to be found of us ſeeking him: who indeed, nullatenus invenitur, niſi ipſe nos excitet, ut quæratur, is by no means found, except his ſelf excite us to ſeek him.

v. 14. caſting out a devil] See Matth. 9. 32. and 12. 22.

and it was dumb] That is, it made the poſſeſſed dumb, or ſpeechleſſe.

the dumb ſpake] He who made the mouth, and the dumb, Exod. 4. 11. can diſpoſſeſs Satan and reſtore his creature, he onely can verbum proferre de clauſis, vocem elicere de mutis. Ambroſ. in Luc. lib. 5. cap. 6.

v. 15. he caſteth out] See Matth. 9. 34. and 12. 24.

through Beelzebub] ἐν Βεελζεβοὺλ. Syriack בבלזבוב by, or through Beelzebub. The Latines give it ſometimes Beelzebul, Tertul. adverſ. Marc. lib. 4. cap. 26. and commonly Beelzebub, it is all one, they meant (as our Evangeliſt here interpreteth) the chief, or moſt wicked of the devils. So the Jews called that unclean ſpirit, in deteſtation of the idol of that name, 2 Kings 1. 3. בעל זבוב Bahal Zebub: poſſibly not without a blaſphemous alluſion to the name of that ſpirit of the Magitians, which was called Baalzebub, muſcarum Dominus, the god or lord of flies: becauſe, as ſome report, they drave away flies, by ſwarmes. See Pauſan. Arcadic. Plin. lib. 19. 6. cited alſo by Bodin. Dæmonom. l. 1. cap. 3. See Shindl. Pentaglot. in בעל. Hanov. 1612. pag. 222. B. C.

v. 16. a ſigne from heaven] Matth. 12. 38. and 16. 1. it is likely, that ſeeing ſuch miracles, and through infidelity doubting, whether all might not be ſome compact or colluſion, they deſired ſome ſuch miracle, as they fancied would put them out of doubt; which was indeed to tempt God, by deſire to preſcribe him: or it may be they deſired to perſwade the people, that except he ſhewed them ſome ſuch miracle, he had no authority from Heaven: that is, ſuch as was in the Manna, thunder and ſhowers in Samuels time, &c.

v. 17. knowing their thoughts] As the ſearcher of hearts, knowing to what end they required ſome other ſigne from Heaven, being not ſatisfied with all thoſe ſignes which they had ſeen him do by a divine and heavenly power: knowing it was their infidelity, and impious minde to calumniate him.

every kingdom] Diviſion ruineth kingdoms; unity eſtabliſheth them: you ſee by woful experience, the kingdom of Satan powerful among you, not onely, not the wicked caſtawayes, but in that which is more apparent, ſo many which are now poſſeſſed of evil ſpirits in Iſrael: therefore Satans kingdom is not againſt it ſelf. Devils conſpire againſt all that which is good; but not againſt one another, or any thing which is evil: they are caſt out againſt their wills, Chap. 9. 39.

v. 18. If Satan be divided] See Matth. 12. 26.

v. 19. If I by Beelzebub, &c.] Matth. 12. 27.

by whom do your ſons &c.] That which ye allow in your children, why reprehend you in me? We may underſtand this, either of their Exorciſts, or of ſome of thoſe to whom God had formerly given this gift of healing.

v. 20. with the finger of God] ἐν δακτύλῳ Θεοῦ, meaning by the power of God, Exod. 8. 19. it is called אצבע אלהים etsbah elohim, 70 δάκτυλος Θεοῦ: which Matth. 12. 28. is called the ſpirit of God.

the kingdom of God is come upon you] Meaning not onely the preaching of the goſpel of the kingdom; but alſo the power of Chriſt deſtroying the works of the devil, caſting him out of his uſurped poſſeſſions, and tranſlating his elect from the powers of darkneſſe, into his kingdom of grace, Coloſ. 1. 13. and marvellous light: this was come to them who would not believe; which was a ſigne and argument of their greater condemnation.

21. When a ſtrong man.] Math. 12. 29. ἰσχυρὸς, ſtrong or powerful. Hebr. בן חיל ben chaiil, filius virtutis, 1 Sam. 14. 52. 2 Kings 2. 16. &c.

keepeth his palace] He compareth Satan in the heart of the unregenerate, to ſome uſurping prince, or powerful tyrant, or Goliah-like gyant domineering in confidence of his own ſtrength; and himſelf to the conquerer (who bare his type) till Chriſt come to conquer and caſt him out; Satan ruleth as it were a king in his palace, commanding all parts and faculties of man, in peace, that is quietly, none troubling or oppoſing his dominion.

v. 22. come upon him] At unawares ſubduing him.

all his armour] πανοπλία, ſignifieth all ammunition, or furniture appertaining to compleat arming, Epheſ. 6. 13.

divideth his ſpoils] As conquerours divide, or diſtribute the pillage to their ſouldiers: ſee Iſaiah 11. 14. Iſaiah 49. 24. his meaning is to ſhew how he came to redeem mankinde, which had no power to deliver it ſelf from the captivity and tyranny wherein Satan held the greateſt part of the world, until Chriſt came, and reſcued all thoſe impropriated veſſels of honour, reſtoring God his elect, and to them the graces and ſtate of holineſſe whereof Satan had deſpoiled them.

v. 23. He that is not with me] Matth. 12. 30. he that declareth not himſelf to be on my ſide; for there is no man but he is either Chriſts or Satans: Chriſt can have no communion with Satan, (as they blaſphemouſly imagined in his caſting out devils) for Satans work is onely to deſtroy and ſcatter: but Chriſt his work is to ſave and gather together the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael.

v. 24. when the unclean ſpirit] Matth. 12. 43.

is gone out of a man] Not that Satan ever leaveth any, except the Spirit of regeneration drive him out: but that in ſome vacations, and want of opportunities to precipitate them to ſins, he ſeemeth to be gone for a time: the purpoſe is, to ſhew the wretched condition of thoſe who abuſed light and grace offered them; or who being illuminated with the knowledge of God, ſeeming to have eſcaped from the ſnares and power of Satan, do yet relapſe to pride, envy, malice, luſt, drunkenneſſe, &c. for their laſte eſtate is farre worſe then the firſt: ſin never ſtandeth at a ſtay, but groweth worſe and worſe, 2 Pet. 2. 20. Heb. 6. 4. and the judgement ſhall be proportionable.

ſeeking reſt] Meaning ſome other heart, where he might rule without any reſiſtance: Satans reſt is in the worſt of motions to hurt men, and to make them as damnable as himſelf.

v. 25. ſwept and garniſhed] Matth. 12. 44. by a little formal repentance, or fruitleſſe reſolution to do ſome good.

v. 26. ſeven other &c.] That is, many worſe, and ſo that mans ſtate becometh more deſperate, as v. 24.

v. 27. a certain woman of the company] Admiring the power and wiſdom of Chriſt; while the envious Scribes and Phariſees ſtudied, and vented their blaſphemy, ſhe thus confidently profeſſeth his excellency.

v. 28. that hear the word, &c.] Without which no carnall priviledge can make happy; but we muſt keep it; for not the hearers, but the doers of Gods word are juſtified. See Rom. 2. 13. Jam. 1. 23. Matth. 7. 26.

v. 29. and when the people] Matth. 12. 38.

were gathered] when the multitude encreaſed, and were gathered to him.

v. 30. For as Jonah was a ſigne] See Jon. 2. 1. as Jonas deliverance out of the belly of the whale was a ſufficient proof of his miniſtery, ſo Chriſts reſurrection the third day, was, of his miſſion: and therefore as the Ninevites beleeved Jonas, after he had been three dayes in the whales belly, ſo ſhould theſe believe and repent after his reſurrection the third day; Acts 2. 37. 41. 47. or elſe be left excuſeleſſe.

v. 31. The Queen of the ſouth] See 1 Kings 10. 1. the Queen of Saba, or Sheba: ſee Matth. 12. 42.

a greater then Solomon is here] That is, Chriſt the Meſſias, God and man: the eternal word and wiſdom of God: it is true that God gave Solomon wiſdom and underſtanding exceeding much, and largeneſſe of heart, even as the ſand that is on the ſea ſhore: ſo that his wiſdom excelled the wiſdom of all the children of the Eaſt, and all the wiſdom of Egypt: he was wiſer then all men, 1 Kings 4. 29, 30, 31. but in Chriſt all fullneſſe dwelt, Coloſ. 1. 19. the fulneſſe of the Godhead, Coloſ. 2. 9. in him are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge, Coloſ. 2. 3. ſo that (as Bernard ſaith ſup. Cant. ſerm. 27.) he Non tam ſapiens, quam ipſa ſapientia eſt: is not onely wiſe, but wiſdom it ſelf: and ſo CHRIST excelleth all creatures: no creature is it own eſſence.

v. 32. The men of Nineve ſhall riſe up, &c.] See Jonah 3. 5. their example ſhall be an argument of condemnation againſt theſe, who regarded not the preaching of a greater then Solomon; then all men, as John Baptiſt ſaith, John 3. 31.

v. 33. no man when he hath lighted, &c.] See Matth. 5. 15. Mark 4. 21. Luke 8. 16. his purpoſe is to ſhew, that though his preaching found little good effect in that evil generation, yet would he not hide the light which he brought not in vain into the world: this ſimilitude of light accommodate to the office of the miniſtery, is often uſed in holy Scripture, to teach us what we ought to endeavour to.

under a buſhel] See Matth. 5. 15.

v. 34. the light of the body is the eye] See Matth. 6. 22. as a window is called a light becauſe it letteth light into the room: theſe words ſeem to give a reaſon why that generation continued blinde, in ſo clear a light of the goſpel preached to them: becauſe the eye of their minde was darkned with ambition, pride, envy, malice, covetouſneſſe, and other wicked affections; hence it came to paſſe, that they, not onely underſtood not the truth which Chriſt ſhewed them, but oppoſed the ſame, accounting it darkneſſe and errour.

ſingle] Clear without blemiſh, quickſighted.

whole body] Meaning that the whole body is directed by a ſufficient light.

v. 35. that the light] That which ſeemeth to be light, take heed it be no darkneſſe of errour.

v. 36. no part dark] He meaneth this of true illumination by Gods word and holy Spirit, not as if any man (though regenerate) were free from all ignorance; but becauſe in regeneration every part is ſanctified and renewed (though not in this life perfected) ſo that we thereby walk as children of light.

v. 37. a certain Phariſee beſought him, &c.] Some of theſe invited him ſometimes, though poſſibly with ſeveral intentions; he who came to ſave ſinners, omitted no opportunity thereto.

v. 38. Phariſee ſaw it] See Mark 7. 3. &c.

firſt waſhed] They waſhed often according to their ſuperſtitious tradition, and he wondred why Chriſt did not ſo alſo, Mark 7. 2, 3. &c.

v. 39. and the Lord ſaid] See Matth. 23. 25.

v. 40 make that which is within alſo] Both body and ſoul, that God may be ſerved in both according to his reveiled will, not your own tradition: you waſh the hands, and neglect the heart: it is deep hypocriſie to be ſolicitous for that which man ſeeth, and to neglect that which God ſeeth, and principally requireth. See Matth. 23. 26. 2 Cor. 7. 1. James 4. 8.

v. 41. But rather give alms of ſuch things as you have] Τὰ ἐνόντα, that is, κατὰ τὰ ἐνόντα, according to the things which you have: τὰ ὑπάρχοντα, as Chap. 12. 33. The Syriack interpreter giveth it id quod adeſt: as it is Geneſ. 32. 13. מן הבא בידו min habba beiad, of that which came to hand, which he had ready: the meaning is, as you are able and provided to give: it is not waſhing the body can make you clean or holy before God, but faith and a good conſcience within: ſpecially charity in giving according to your ability, wherein God will accept you, as clean.

v. 42. Wo unto you Phariſees] See Matth. 23. 23.

theſe ought ye to have done] As if he had ſaid; you Phariſees do well to pay tithes of all the increaſe of the earth, for ſo the Law commandeth Levit. 27. 30. and in Abrahams tithe payed to Melchiſedec, it appeareth to be due by the law of nature, (the ground of the moral Law, and long before the Levitical Law commenced, in force) the tranſcript whereof is the Law written by God on the tables of ſtone. Next we muſt conſider, that God (the beſt and ſureſt interpreter of his own Law) interpreteth detention of tithes to be ſacriledge, as it is written Mal. 3. 8. ye have robbed me— in tithes and offerings: notwithſtanding men otherwiſe interpreted, who ſaid, Wherein have we robbed thee? and ſo a breach of the eighth precept of the moral law, therefore ſtanding ſtill in force; for Chriſt came not to diſſolve the Law, Matth. 5. 17. this ſpeech then of Chriſt, at the period of the Levitical Law, affirming that they ought to pay tithes of all, even to the very herbs; ought not to be reſtrained, as relating onely to the prieſthood of Aaron, it doth as duly now concern the Miniſters of the Goſpel, as any other part or branch of the moral Law: it being ſufficient for that, once to have ſaid to all perſons, times, and places, Thou ſhalt not ſteal; the Prophet ſo expreſſely interpreting detention of tithes to be ſtealing and robbing; by ſo much more abominable, becauſe God hath vouchſafed to take tithes upon his own accompt in the Miniſters behalf, leſt it ſhould be thought an humane intereſt, and in the power of man to alienate them, under any pretence or colour whatſoever. It can be no leſſe then impious ingratitude to detain the tenth from God, who giveth us freely nine parts for our own uſe. Quid faceres ſi novem partibus ſibi ſumptis, tibi decimam reliquiſſet? ſaith Auguſtin. de Temp. ſer. 219, what wouldeſt thou do, if he ſhould have taken nine parts to himſelf, and left thee only one? All is his: he requireth but his own: he may diſpoſe of it as he pleaſeth. Neither doth he require tithes for his own ſake, but for our good: as for a maintenance which his wiſdom layed out for the Miniſters, which watch over our ſouls; ſo that he might bleſſe the other nine parts to us: as it is written, Proverbs 3. 9. 10. Honour the Lord with thy ſubſtance, and with the firſt fruits of all thy encreaſe: ſo ſhall thy barnes be filled with plenty, and thy preſſes ſhall burſt out with new wine. And again, Mal. 3. 10. Bring ye all the tithes into the ſtore-houſe, and prove me now herewith, ſaith the Lord of hoſts, if I will not open unto you the windows of heaven, and poure you out a bleſſing, that there ſhall not be room enough to receive it, &c. the curſe lyeth upon the detainers of tithes, not onely in particular, but in the general: Ye are curſed with a curſe; for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation, Mal. 3. 9. many fearful inſtances to this purpoſe do both our hiſtories, and memories afford us, too large for our preſent purpoſe. Two things are conſiderable by thoſe, who are of other opinion, and the third not contemptible: firſt, whereas they ſay, the Miniſters ſhall have otherwiſe a competency; let them conſider: how dangerouſly the wiſdom of man aſſaileth the amendment or bettering of Gods wiſdom and decrees. Secondly, whereas they ſuppoſe tithes were due in the ceremonial Law onely, not by the moral, let them conſider; firſt, what could tithes prefigure, accompliſhed, (and ſo repealed) in Chriſt: and next, that (whereas all the ceremonies of the Law are repealed in particular, or in the general, ſo in the goſpel or new Teſtament, as that their aboliſhing neceſſarily concludeth the abolition of all the particulars thereto appertaining) no one Text of the New Teſtament evidently, or by neceſſary conſequence prohibiting tithes, can be produced: whereas this preſent text ſaith, theſe ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone: and the forecited, interpreteth the detention of tithes ſacriledge, or robbing of God: denouncing the curſe to the detainers, pronouncing the bleſſing to the payers thereof; now whatſoever was commanded in the Old Teſtament, having it ground in the law of nature, and being not repealed in the new; muſt yet ſtand in force, as a duty of the moral law. Thirdly, it is conſiderable, that every branch of the moral law is indiſpenſable: ſo that if Miniſters and people ſhould conſent to any violation thereof: there can reaſonably be expected none other ſentence from the juſt God, then that forecited, Mal. 3. 9. ye are curſed with a curſe; for you have robbed me, even this whole nation: yet they ſaid, wherein have we robbed thee? confident that detention of tithes was no ſin. To conclude, that which Chriſt taxeth here, is their not being as well carefull for judgement, mercy faith (Matth. 23. 23.) and the love of God, as they ſeemed to be in paying ſmall tithes.

v. 43. Ye love the uppermoſt ſeats] See Matth. 23. 6. Mark 12. 38. Luke 20. 46.

v. 44. Ye are as graves] See Matt. 23. 27. your filthy corruptions within you, appear not unto men, ſo that deceived by your ſhews of ſanctity, they eaſily fall into a dangerous imitation of you.

v. 45. Then anſwered one of the lawyers] One of the expounders of the law.

thou reproacheſt us alſo] thus he ſaid, as taking it for granted that the interpreters of the law were unreproveable; he cenſureth Chriſts juſt condemning their hypocriſie: ſo hard is reformation, where pride, hypocriſie, and opinion of learning and wiſdom, prejudicate all inſtruction: this was the reaſon why ſo few Scribes, Phariſes, and Doctors of the Law were converted by the preaching and miracles of Chriſt, evidently enough ſpeaking him the expected Meſſias.

v. 46. And he ſaid] See Matth. 23. 4.

ye lade men] See Act. 15. 10. though they charged the people with many burdenſome traditions, yet here Chriſt ſeemeth not ſo much to ſpeak of theſe, as their rigid and imperious exaction of obedience to the whole law of ceremonies (w^ch Peter calleth, a yoke which neither we nor our fathers were able to bear. Act. 15. 10.) and in the mean-time they favoured themſelves, with eaſe and indulgence.

v 47. wo unto you] See Matth. 23. 29.

v. 48. Ye allow the deeds] your fathers building the Prophets tombs whom their fathers ſlew, therein condemned their fathers facts, by ſuch an honouring their memory, declaring their diſliking of their fathers cruelty; you doing the like ſhew your ſelves heirs alſo of your fathers impiety. Non igitur ædificatio, ſed æmulatio loco criminis æſtimatur. Ambroſ. in Luc. l, 7. c. 11. not the building of the Prophets tombs, but imitation of their fathers wickedneſs is condemned: as if he ſaid, you adorn their tombs, but will no more obey their doctrine then your fathers did: you will alſo kill the meſſengers of God under pretence of Religion and Godlineſſe.

v. 49. Said the wiſdom of God] Matt. 23. 34. as if he ſaid, I ſay, who am the eternall ſubſiſting wiſdom of the father. Prov. 8. 12. or, the wiſdom and goodneſs of God, thus diſpoſed to ſend Prophets, &c.

v. 50. That the blood of all, &c.] For in former ages they ſlew the Prophets of God, and the men of this generation continuing in their fathers ſins, and adding to the meaſure by crucifying Chriſt and perſecuting the Apoſtles and Miniſters of the Goſpel; God would now no longer bear, but powre down vengeance on the bloody nation; as was ſeen in the deſtruction of Jeruſalem: and as Chriſt foretold them. Matth. 23. 31.

v. 51. From the blood of Abel] See Gene. 4. 8. the meaning is, that God would call this nation to account for all the blood they ſhed; though in their blinde fury, and ignorant zeal they thought they had done God ſervice in ſhedding it (as John 16. 2.) he nameth Abel, becauſe his blood was the firſt that ever ſtained the earth; as if he ſaid no cruelty and effuſion of innocent blood, when ever ſhed, ſhall eſcape unpuniſhed: of Zacharias we read, 2 Chron. 24. 22. whoſe dying words, when they ſtoned him, were the Lord look upon it, and require it: which quickly came to paſſe: for the Aſſyrians invaded Joaſh (who commanded him to be ſlain) & deſtroyed Princes and people; and his ſervants conſpired againſt him and ſlew him in his bed, 2 Chro. 24. 25. concerning two named Zacharias, ſee the learned Iſ. Caſaubon. Exercit. 1. ad Annal. Eccleſ. 17. An. 1. n. 57.

v. 52. Wo unto you lawyers] See Matth. 23. 13.

taken away the key, &c. by your artifices, traditions, and uſurpation over mens conſciences, ſubjecting them to your erroneous opinions; and keeping them from the means of knowing the true ſenſe of holy ſcriptures, which is preaching the word; it being the key of heaven: as alſo in that you hinder them from believing in me, who am the end of the law, the way trueth, and life.

v. 53. To urge him to ſpeak, &c.] The word ἀποστοματίζειν here uſed ſignifieth, ex ore elicere: to draw ſomthing out of ones mouth: which the Syriac ſignificantly expreſſeth by ומתכסין vamthacſin & aucupabantur; as if it were ſaid, they went a birding: or layed wait to catch him and enſnare him in his words. תכס is a Syriac word, which, as Tremelius noteth, inter alia ſignificat aucupari, aut carpere verba alicujus. Rabbi Salomo expoundeth שמשף, viſco avibus inſidiari: Vatablus interpreteth it captioſe eum interrogare de multis, they began captiouſly to queſtion with him concerning many things. So they urged him to anſwer by propoſing ſeveral doubts and cavils, in hope that in many anſwers they ſhould catch ſomething whereof to accuſe him: ſo it is expreſſed, v. 54. by ζητοῦντες θηρεῦσαί τι, ſeeking as it were by hunting to catch ſomthing out of his words, whereof to accuſe him.

CHAP. XII.

Verſe 1. In the mean time] See Matth. 16. 6. Mark 8. 15.

leaven of the Phariſees] Leaven is Metaphorically put in Scripture, ſomtimes in the good part as Matt. 13. 33. ſometimes in the bad, as Mark 8. 15. 1 Cor. 5. 6, 7, 8. Gala. 5. 9. it relateth ſomtimes to doctrine, ſomtimes to practice: in either of theſe, men uſe to receive a certain influence of qualities from others whom they hear, or read, or with whom they converſe, whether good or evil; as the leaven conveigheth and communicateth it ſowreneſs to the meal in which it lieth: ſo they interpret this word ζύμη, farina ſubacta, quæ acrorem contraxit: Hebr. כמץ chamets, and Syr. חמיע acris, acerbas fuit as 1 Cor. 5. 6. מחמע machamah, here the Syriac hath חמירא chamiro, from the Hebrew word חמר Chamar mixed or confuſed. So that Chriſt here warneth them, that they be not infected with that ſame bitterneſs of hypocritical Phariſees, the bane of Religion: therefore is that πρῶτον uſed; not diſtributively to preſcribe an order of avoiding evil; but as a mark of eminency ſet upon that ſin; as if he ſaid chiefly (as Rom. 1. 8.) or above all evils, take heed of hypocriſie, with which there can be no truth of Religion.

v. 2. Nothing covered] See Matt. 10. 26. Mar. 4. 12. Luk. 8. 17.

v. 3. The houſe tops] Publikely and openly: he reſpecteth the manner of their buildings, which were flat rooft whence they might ſpeak to multitudes in the ſtreets. See 2 Sam. 11. 3.

v. 4. I ſay unto you my friends] He ſpeaketh thus to comfort them, and to encourage them to preach the Goſpel boldly. See Matt. 10. 28. John 15. 14. 15.

v. 5. Into hell] To hell fire and eternal condemnation, of this no creature hath power, therefore God onely is to be feared: Chriſt calleth it γέενναν which ſome derive as a contract of גי-חנם ge-hinnon. Joſh. 15. 8. the valley of Hinnom: hence the Syriac גהנא gihanno or gihannah. Gr. γέεννα: it was a pleaſant and fruitfull valley neer Jeruſalem upon the brook Cedron, wherein was Topheth, where they offered their ſons and daughters to devils by the idol Moloch (as the heathens did to Saturn (Minuc. Fel. Octavio.) burning them between two fiers, with hideous noiſes: for the aboliſhing whereof Joſias commanded, that all manner of carrions from the city ſhould be caſt there; ſo that there was continuall fire to burn and conſume the ſame, leſt they ſhould ſtench the city. See 2 Kings 23. 10. hence by a metaphor the Hebrews uſed to call hell (the place for torments of the damned) גיהינם ghehinnon as a place moſt abominable impious and terrible. See Joh. Drus. ad voc. N. T. com. 1. Gehenna.

v. 6. Are not five ſparrows] Matth. 10. 29. This he addeth to confirm and comfort his diſciples againſt perſecutions, the poor birds cannot be deſtroyed, except God permit it; how much leſs ſhall you? it is injury to the divine providence to diſtruſt his care over us who keepeth the creatures provided for us: he forgetteth not one of theſe; can he forget you? certainly you being of more vallew, are more deer to him.

v. 7. The very hairs of your head] See on Matth. 10. 30.

v. 8. Alſo I ſay unto you] Matth. 10. 32. 2 Tim. 2. 12.

v. 9. Whoſoever ſhall deny me] To the foregoing argument he adjoyneth the mention of reward: Chriſt will own them who ſuffer for his ſake; & that before the holy Angels who ſhall attend him in his judging the living and the dead. Mark 8. 38. as alſo the puniſhment of them, who (for fear, favour of men, or love of this world, or the things thereof) ſhall any wayes deny him before men: as if any deny him to be very God and man: to be our Saviour, juſtifier, redeemer, and ſole mediatour: or if any deny the Goſpel, or any part thereof to be the trueth: if any out of malice oppoſe it, for fear of men be aſhamed of it; or by an impious ſilence betray the trueth thereof: To confeſs him relateth, either to all Chriſtians, of which, 1 Pet. 3. 15. or to thoſe who are called out before perſecutours to give teſtimony to the trueth of Chriſt: he will deny and caſt off all thoſe who deny him: which is to be underſtood in caſe of finall impenitency: otherwiſe Peters denyall of Chriſt, (through deep perturbation of minde in ſodain fear) and his bitter tears of repentance following, ſhew how far the elect, in ſome diſtempers are ſometimes over born in temptations; and yet by Gods mercy are recovered again.

v. 10. Speak a word] See Matt.12. 32. Mark 3.28. 1 John 5. 16.

it ſhall be forgiven him] he that ſpeaketh againſt Chriſt through ignorance and unbelief, it ſhall be forgiven him when he repenteth: but he that ſhall blaſpheme the holy Spirit of God, the Godhead, out of deſtinate malice; againſt his knowledge and conſcience, wittingly and willingly, perſevering therein unto his end, it ſhall not be forgiven him: for otherwiſe, we know Pauls blaſphemy, was forgiven him, for he did it ignorantly. 1 Tim. 1. 13.

v. 11. When they ſhall bring you unto the Synagogues] See Matth. 10. 19. Mark 13. 11. Luke 21. 14. the meaning is, when they ſhall convent you before the conncels of Jews, High Prieſts Phariſees, &c. or the tribunals of heathen Princes, Magiſtrates, or Governours, fear not, yon ſhall finde a preſent aſſiſtance of Gods Spirit, in ſuch words and wiſdom as your enemies ſhall not be able to overthrow. c. 21. 15.

v. 14. Who made me a judge] Chriſt would not intermeddle with ſecular government, when he was to redeem man, by ſubjecting himſelf to the judgement of man: not hereby diſſallowing the right of Magiſtracy and government by civil judicature, but intimating that God had now given him another calling: teaching every one to contain himſelf within the limits of his own calling, and not to uſurpe and intermeddle with others; admoniſhing all men, to beware of covetouſneſs the fountain of contention: and laſtly laying the ground for that which the Apoſtle urgeth. 2 Tim. 2. 4. that the ſtate of a Miniſter ſhould herein be proportionable to the condition of a Souldier, diſſentangled from the affairs of this life, that he may pleaſe him who hath choſen him to another office: not that the Miniſter may not meddle with any affairs ſecular, but that he may not thereby be entangled, and hindered from the work of his Miniſtry to which God hath choſen him, and ſet him apart, as Rom. 1. 1. nor be impropriated to the execution of civil offices of judicature or the like, becauſe it can be no leſs then ſacriledge to convert that in whole or any part to common uſes (which is ſacred by a peculiar dedication to God and his Religious ſervice) incompatible with that conſecration and miniſtration, therefore Chriſt refuſed this office of civil judicature; becauſe he had no calling thereto, but to be a Prieſt for ever after the order of Melchiſedec (Hebr.5. 4,5,6.) though he were in his own perſon of infinite abilities to have performed both theſe offices, the fourth Councel of Carthage. c.20.decreed, that the Biſhop ſhould not ſo much as be troubled with the care rei familiaris of domeſtick buſineſſe, but, lectioni, & orationi & verbi prædicationi tantummodo vacet, attend onely to reading, prayer and preaching the word: the third Councell of Carthage. chap. 15. citing thoſe words. 2 Tim. 2. 4. decreed, that neither Biſhops, Prieſts, &c. ſhould be farmers, ſtewards, &c. it is not unlikely that they had alſo in their minde that of the Apoſtle 1 Tim. 4. 15. that which ſome alleadge out of Poſſidonius, vit. Auguſtin. cap. 19. that he ſpent whole dayes in compounding controverſies; and that which they bring out of Augnſtin. de opere Monach. c. 29. To. 3. conclude nothing againſt us herein; ſeeing it appeareth not that Auguſtin executed any civil office of judicature; but that which was Eccleſiaſticall and immediatly ſubordinate to Religion, as are peace, mercy and charity; which the firſt Councell of Antioch allowed and enjoyned, chap. 20. it was ordeined that twice a year the Biſhops ſhould meet διὰ τὰς ἐκκλησιαστικὰς χρείας, καὶ τὰς τῶν ἀμφισβητουμένων διαλύσεις, for Eccleſiaſticall cauſes, and to compoſe controverſies, &c. and c. 25. of the ſame: it was decreed that the Biſhop ſhould have τῶν τῆς ἐκκλησίας πραγμάτων ἐξουσίαν, &c. power of things belonging to the Church; to give almes and to relieve his own wants: now although theſe controverſies, did not all ariſe from matters of faith and religion, but probably ſome, or many from ſecular intereſts (which might be the reaſon why Auguſtin de op. Monach. cap. 29. nameth thoſe ſecular buſineſſes in compoſing whereof he was ſo much diſtracted) yet was the making of peace immediatly ſubordinate to the duties and acts of Religion unto which none are, or can be well & duly fitted, without peace, unity, & charity. (Mat.5.23.24. 1 Cor.1.10. 1 Cor.3.3. Phil.2.1.&c. pſ.133.3.&c) & ſo, though this office wel became al the children of God. Mat.5.9. yet queſtionleſs, beſt thoſe who were, or are aſſigned to the Miniſtery of the Goſpel of peace: yet is it conſiderable, that Auguſtin eſteemed this, ſuch a diſtraction from his Miniſtry in the word, and ſuch a burden unto him, that he calleth God to witneſs, multo mallem per ſingulos dies, &c. aliquid manibus operari, &c. I had much rather every day ſome hours labour with my hands, that I might have others free to read, pray, and do ſomthing concerning divine Scriptures, and that he not onely complained hereof, but obtained leave in an Eccleſiaſtical aſſembly of the people to tranſmit and put over this burden to Eradius his ſucceſſour elect. See Aug. ep. 110. if to ſpend time to make peace were a known diſtraction and heavy burden to good Biſhops; we may ſecurely conclude with Ambroſ. ep. 33. ad Marcellin. tyrannis ſacerdotis infirmitas eſt---numquam ſacerdotes tyranni fuerunt, ſed tyrannos ſæpe ſunt paſſi.

v. 15. Beware of covetouſneſſe] Beware of inſatiable deſire of having more; which the Apoſtle calleth the root of all evil. 1 Tim. 6. 10. ſo is it indeed, of fraud, lying oppreſſion, murder, &c. non ille liber qui ſervit avaritiæ. Ambroſ. l. 2. ep. 7. he is no freeman who ſerveth avarice: all abundance cannot preſerve life; that is in Gods hand to give or take away, as he preſently ſheweth in the parable of the ſecure rich man: and truely non cenſus divitem ſed animus facit: Ambroſ. lib. 10. ep. 82. it is not ſo much wealth, as the minde which maketh a man rich: the law of nature is rich enough to all: unto which you may quickly finde abundance; but to deſire all abundance is ſcarcity: nemo pauper naſcitur ſed fit: no man is born, but becometh poor: therefore poverty is not by nature, but opinion: therefore you may quickly finde natures rich man, hardly deſires.

v. 16. Brought forth plentifully] He teacheth that God giveth temporall bleſſings even to the wicked. (as Matth. 5. 45.) many times for their greater deſtruction. Jer. 12.3. Pſal. 73. 18. therefore we may not ſet our hearts on them; but aſpire to thoſe riches which he giveth to his elect only.

v. 18. Build greater] This he ſaith, not to condemn an holy providence of ſaving and laying up that which God giveth us (for he commanded the broken meats to be gathered up. Joh. 6.12. See alſo 2 Cor.12.14. 1 Tim.5.8.) but to ſhew us how evil, confidence in riches is, how vain and fooliſh; ſeeing they may be ſo ſodainly taken away from their ſecureſt owners, or they from them.

v. 20. Fool, this night] He was fooliſh in reckoning upon many yeers to come, who could not be certaine of one night. longa noſtra deſideria increpat via brevis. Greg. hom. in Evang. 32. ſo ſhort a way of life, reproves our long deſires.

Then whoſe ſhall theſe things be] no man (ſaith Ambroſ. lib. 8. ep. 10.) is rich, qui quod habet ſecum hinc auferre non poteſt: which cannot carry hence that which he hath: that which we muſt leave behinde us, is not ours, but ſome others.

v 21. layeth up treaſure] He that heapeth up riches to ſatiſfie his worldly deſires without the good proviſion of faith, and good works, ſhall be like this fooliſh rich man: ſee Mat. 6.20. 1 Tim. 6.19. Jam. 1. 5.

v. 22. Take no thought] See Matth. 6. 25. 1 Pet. 5. 7, Pſal. 55. 22. he forbiddeth not προνοίαν, care for our ſelves and families; that we owe. 1 Tim. 5. 8. but this μέριμναν diſtracting and diffident care proceeding from a greedy deſire & love of the world, diſtruſt in Gods providence, & undervaluing of the true riches of Godlineſs. 1 Tim. 6.5.6.

v. 23. The life is more] Matth. 6. 25. as if he ſaid: God hath given the life and ſoul, which is far better then food and raiment; therefore he will not fail to give theſe for the preſervation of the other, the Creatour never ceaſeth from the work of providence John 5. 17.

v. 24. Conſider the ravens] Matth. 6. 26. God that provideth for the moſt abject and vile creature as ravens, &c. Job 38. 41. Pſal. 147. 9. will certainly much more feed, and provide for man made to his own image; whom he redeemed with no leſs a price then the pretious blood of Chriſt Jeſus. See Rom. 8. 32.

v. 25. Which of you by taking thought] Matth. 6. 27. this is another argument to diſſwade from worldly care, from the vanity & unprofitableneſs thereof: as if he ſaid, all your care cannot make you rich; God onely giveth or reſtraineth. See 1 Kings 3. 13. 1 Chron. 29. 12. Hag. 1. 6, 9, 10, 11. Job 8. 18. it is vain to riſe up early, to ſit up late, to eat the bread of careſulneſs, or ſorrows: except the Lord bleſs it, you cannot thrive. Pſal. 127. 2.

v. 26. For the reſt] For that which is of greater importance, the preſervation of your ſelves.

v. 27. Conſider the lilies] See on Matth. 6. 28. 29. this argument is like the former, from Gods liberality ſhewed on the creatures made for mans delight, to aſſure us that he is more liberal to man himſelf: he that thus clothes the ſoonfading flowers, will not let man want clothing: the ſcope of all is to teach us in an holy and prudent endeavour, to caſt our care upon God. See Pſal. 55. 23. 1 Pet. 5. 7.

v. 28. If then God ſo cloth the graſſe] Matth. 6. 30.

v. 29. Neither be ye of doubtful minde] μὴ μετεωρίζεσθε, it ſignifieth, be ye not in ſuſpence or of mindes doubtfull and wavering: ſo Suidas expreſſeth it: ἤγουν δὲ μετέωροι ταῖς ψυχαῖς, καὶ πρὸς τὸ μέλλον ἔτι σαλεύοντες erant autem animis ſuſpenſis, & ob incertum rerum futurarum eventum adhuc fluctuantes. So Thucidides, by him alſo cited, ſaith, that Greece was μετέωρος, that is ſaith he, ἐκεκίνητο, καὶ οὐχ ἡσύχαζον; they were troubled, and did not reſt, So he calleth ſhips at ſea μετεώρους, that is, πελαγίους, καὶ μὴ ἐπ' ἀγκυρῶν ἱσταμένας: that which we may not improperly render ſhips a drift, or at hull, which are not come to an anchor: the interpreter of the Syriac gives this word, neque diſtrahatur cogitatio veſtra in iſtis: the whole ſenſe is, be ye not of wavering and doubtfull mindes, about temporall neceſſaries, as they muſt needs be who depending onely on ſecond cauſes, do not put their confidence in Gods providence, which never faileth thoſe who truſt in him. See Pſal. 9. 10. Hebr. 13. 5.

v. 30. the nations &c.] This laſt argument is taken from the difference which ought to be between us Chriſtians, and the profane and unbeleeving heathens: we acknowledge and profeſſe that God is our Father; we call on him who knoweth we have need of theſe things; and as a tender Father, he provideth theſe things for us; but the Gentiles and worldly minded men, have not faith to depend on God.

v. 31. theſe things] Theſe temporall neceſſaries, common to good and bad.

ſhall be added] See on Matth. 6. 33. Shall be added over and above that ye ſeek for; as Solomons riches were to his requeſt for wiſedom. 1 Kings 3. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13.

v. 32. The kingdom] Of heaven, therefore fear not: he that giveth an eternall intereſt in heaven; will not ſuffer you to want temporall and earthly neceſſaries.

v. 33. ſell that ye have] Mat. 19. 21. Act. 2. 45. Act. 4. 34.

provide you bags] See chap. 16. 9. Matth. 6. 20. 1 Tim. 6. 19. This command condemneth not propriety of goods; neither reacheth it to all times, places and perſons; but reſpecteth caſes of neceſſity: and teacheth that charity much more ſafely layeth up riches in Gods hands (who will bountifully repay for the poor) then any care of worldly men, can otherwiſe do: and laſtly this ſheweth which are true riches: illæ ſunt veræ divitiæ, quas cum habuerimus perdere non poſſumus; Auguſt. de verb. Domini ſerm. 35. thoſe are true riches which we can never loſe when once we have them.

v. 34. where your treaſure is] Matth. 6. 21. Becauſe your mindes and affections will be commonly on that which is moſt loved, dear, and precious unto you: therefore be mercifull, and ſo lay up treaſure in heaven, that your hearts and converſations may be there.

v. 35. let your loins &c.] See 1 Pet. 1. 13. Meaning that they ſhould be alwayes ready to execute their charge; alluding to their habit, and manner of girding their long looſe garments unto them when they were to do any work; he willeth them to contrive all worldly neceſſaries ſo, that they may not hinder them in the ſervice of God.

v. 36. When he will return from the wedding] The meaning couched under this metaphor is, that we ſhould ſtand upon a ſpirituall watch, conſtantly expecting the coming of our Lord Jeſus to judge; ἀναλύσει return, properly ſignifieth to diſſolve or break up: ſo Athen. lib. 1. ἀπὸ τῶν δείπνων ἀναλύοντες which may be interpreted breaking up company, to go home: ſome take it tranſlatitiouſly from ſhips breaking ground, to return whence they came.

v. 37. and ſerve them] That is, God will abundantly requite their ſervice in Chriſt, with eternall bleſſings.

v. 38. in the ſecond watch] They were wont to divide the night into 4. watches; ſo often they relieved and changed the turnes of their watchmen or centinels, from the courts of guard. See Matth. 14. 25. Exod. 14. 24. Theophylact underſtandeth here τὰς διαφόρους ὥρας τῆς ζωῆς ἡμῶν the divers hours or times of our life; the meaning is, whether he come ſooner or later, to take thee out of this life; this know, quos diu ut convertantur tolerat, non converſos, durius damnat. Greg. hom. 12. in Evang. thoſe whom he long tollerateth, that they may be converted, he more heavily damneth if they convert not.

or in the third] The meaning is, becauſe the hour of death or judgement is uncertain; therefore we muſt alwayes be provided for it. See Job 14. 14. See verſe 40.

v. 39. and this know] See Matth. 24. 43. 1 Theſ. 5. 2. 2 Pet. 3. 10. Rev. 3. 3. & 16. 15.

v. 41 this parable unto us] Whether doth this parable appertain to us Apoſtles, Miniſters and watchmen over the houſe of Iſrael; or unto all men.

v. 42. Who then is that faithfull, &c.] Matth. 24. 45. He anſwereth, not Peters quære directly, but ſo as that we may underſtand here, as Mark 13. 37. What I ſay unto you, I ſay unto all, watch: though it principally concern thoſe to whom God hath committed the charge of ſouls, yet all that will be ſaved, are alſo to watch.

v. 43. Bleſſed are &c.] He exhorteth to the duty by the reward propoſed.

v. 44. ruler of all] Matth. 24. 45. that is, he will highly honour and recompence his diligence; as in things ſecular, Joſeph was honoured by Pharaoh, and ſet over his houſhold. Gen. 41. 43. what this honour ſhall be, eye hath not ſeen, &c. 1 Cor. 2. 9.

v. 45. But if that ſervant] By puniſhment threatned, he dehorteth from ſecurity, tyranny, oppreſſion, and injury towards one another.

v. 46. Cut him in ſunder] Or cut him off: διχοτομήσει. So Matth. 24. 51. Tertul. adv. Marc. l. 4. c. 29. giveth it by ſegregabitur: ſo the Syriac giveth it נתפלג, as Martin Troſtius readeth; as Tremelius ויתפלג & dividet: of פלג phelag, of phalag Hebr. פלג, ſignifying both: diviſit or ſeparavit, all to one purpoſe; for ſo will the Lord cut off the impious ſervant by ſeparating him from the number and ſociety of them that ſhall be ſaved: as, Matth. 25. 46. thus will he deal with deceivers of ſo great a truſt; this penalty is added to terrifie the idle, injurious, and thoſe who in the Church ſerve not the Lord Jeſus, but their own bellies. Philippians 2. 21. to theſe will he once give their portion or ſhare with hypocrites and unbeleevers in hell-fire.

v. 47. which knew his Lords will] As if he ſaid; if the ſervant which offendeth out of ignorance be worthy of puniſhment; what is he who knowing it wilfully, or negligently tranſgreſſeth it? ignorance is leſſe ſin then wilfulneſſe. 2 Pet. 2. 21. it is vain to pretend ignorance (where all are bound to know, that cannot excuſe) and moſt wretched to abuſe knowledge.

v. 48. worthy of ſtripes] That is, who hath committed ſome fault worthy of puniſhment: he alludeth to the cuſtom of correcting ſervants.

v. 49. to ſend fire] Matth. 10. 34. Cyril. Hieroſol. Catec. 17. underſtandeth this of the Holy Ghoſt: others more probably of the fiery tryal, afflictions, to which they ſhall be expoſed who will live godly in Chriſt. See verſ. 51. &c. he ſpeaketh this of that effect which the Goſpel ſhould produce, not of it ſelf, but by reaſon of mans corruption and abuſe of it.

and what will I?] That is, though I deſire unity, not diſſention, yet I would not for wicked mens ſakes, that the Elect ſhould want the comfort, which ſhall come to them by the publiſhing of the Goſpel: hereby he inciteth them to diligence in preaching the Goſpel, notwithſtanding the tumults which they ſhould ſee following the ſame.

v. 50. baptiſm to be baptized with] Matth. 20. 22. meaning that his ſelf muſt firſt ſuffer: this in the Saints is the baptiſm of martyrdom: ſo by waters, the ſcriptures ſometimes expreſſe many or great afflictions. Pſalm 66. 12. & 69. 1.

how am I ſtraitned] Pained, or much preſſed: as if he ſaid, I much deſire that it were accompliſhed, and the redemption of man thereby.

v. 51. ſuppoſe ye &c.] Matth. 10. 34.

but rather diviſion] See on verſe 49. He ſheweth them before, what would follow by the impious perverſeneſſe of men, leſt finding ſuch unexpected effects, they might be ſcandaled, and impute thoſe diviſions to the preaching of the Goſpel, which are onely accidentall thereto: ſo muſt we accompt all theſe inteſtine quarrels in or about religion here ſpecified: See on Matthew 10. 34.

v. 53. the Father] Matth. 10. 35.

v. 54. When ye ſee a cloud riſing] Matth. 16. 2. The ſea bare weſtward from Judea, ſo that commonly clouds thence ariſing brought rain: ſo Elias ſervant ſaw a little banck of cloud ariſing from the weſt, before that great rain which followed the drought of three yeers. 1. Kings 18. 43.

v. 56. Ye hypocrites] See on chap. 12. 15.

that ye do not diſcerne this time] As if he ſaid; you have wiſedom to obſerve naturall cauſes, and ſignes; why can you not conſider ſpirituall things, of far greater conſequence, that is, this accepted time, and day of ſalvation, wherein God offereth you ſuch abundant means thereto.

v. 57. why of your ſelves judge ye not?] He diſcovereth the fountain of their impiety and ſecurity: they would not deſcend ſeriouſly to examin their own conſciences, neither would they there enquire, as in the ſight of God, what was right: therefore had they much more underſtanding, for any thing, then for matters divine and heavenly; if they were ſued, or in danger of arreſts, they would preſently make means to compound with their adverſary, leſt they ſhould be put to more charge, or fall into greater dangers: but for reconciliation with the holy Majeſtie of God offended, they cared not; Proſpicere [illegible] well obſerveth here, that Chriſt did not ſpeak this, as intimating that they had either freedom of will, or poſſibility thereby to that which was good of themſelves: but that they might know that they had loſt it ſuo vitio, by their own fault or ſin, and that therefore Gods exaction was not unjuſt, though they were not able to perform that which they ought; but that man, (à litera occidente, confugiat ad ſpiritum vivificantem, & facultatem, quam ante non invenit in natura, quærat ex gratiâ) might from the killing letter (of the law) flee to the quickning ſpirit, and ſeek that ability of grace which he could not before finde in nature: which if he did (he ſhould finde that) great is the mercy of God: if he did not, that the puniſhment of his ſin is juſt.

v. 58, When thou goeſt with thine adverſary] See on Matth. 5. 25 The meaning is, break off contentions with thine adverſaries, before thou come to dangerous iſſues: repent thee quickly of all thy ſins, for which God hath a controverſie with thee: beleeve in Jeſus Chriſt, the onely Mediatour between God and man, and the price of our redemption; that being juſtified by faith in him, thou mayeſt have peace with God, (Rom. 5. 1.) in this life; abuſe not the patience and long-ſuffering of a gracious God, leſt he judge thee according to the rigour of his juſtice, which thou canſt never ſatisfie, which is here meant by the laſt mite. See on Matth. 1. 25.

mite] See Mark. 12. 42. Theophylact on this place well ſheweth, that the torments of the damned ſhall never end, becauſe they can never by ſuffering, pay the laſt mite, or ſatisfie the juſtice of God.

CHAP. XIII.

Verſe 1. WHoſe blood Pilate] We finde not in any other ſcriptures, mention of this fact: it ſeemeth he cauſed them to be ſlain, as they were ſacrificing, ſo that their blood was mingled with the blood of the beaſts which they offered: not that they were ſlain in Galilee, whereof Pilate was not Governour: but it may be that theſe were of the ſect of Judas the Galilæan, mentioned, Acts 5. 37 as Anaſtaſius ſinait. quæſt. 146. affirmeth they were; Chriſt here correcteth the rigid cenſures of hypocrites, over quick and ſharp in cenſuring others in their afflictions; forgetting that the ſame rod is over themſelves for their ſecuritie in ſinne: whereas we ought by ſuch examples to examine our own corruptions, and by preſent repentance to prevent Gods judgements: however we may not judge of mens finall conditions, by their preſent calamities.

v. 2. ſuppoſe ye that theſe, &c.] As if he ſaid; you may not think that God alwayes layeth the moſt heavy ſecular puniſhments, on the greateſt ſinners; he doth not preſently ſmite all great ſinners: but he maketh ſome exemplary, that thereby others may be moved to amend the like faults. See Numb. 16. 32. Acts 5. 3. 5. &c.

v. 3. I tell you nay] Becauſe men are too apt to condemn thoſe as plagued of God, whom he exerciſeth with temporall puniſhments, without regarding their own faults; he admoniſheth every one to look home to his own deſerts.

v. 4. the tower in Siloe fell] Neither do we read this hiſtory any where elſe in ſcripture: it ſeemeth to have been one of the towers on the walls of Jeruſalem, which ſtood by the waters of Siloe. See John 9. 7. Iſaiah 8. 6.

think ye they were ſinners] Gre. ὀφειλέται Debters, that is, ſinners. See Matth. 23. 16. ſo the Syriac tranſlateth it; and ſo the word is uſed, Matth. 6. 12. Luk. 11. 4.

v. 5. ye ſhall all likewiſe periſh] The word ὁμοίως, which the Syriac giveth, as they, doth not here ſignifie the ſame kinde of judgement; but is to be underſtood of puniſhment in generall, hanging over the impenitent; as if he ſaid, all impenitency is under the curſe temporall and eternall; as may appear in the following parable of the barren fig-tree. See alſo Matth. 3. 12. Epheſ. 5. 6. ye ſhall all (whether Jews, Galileans, or Samaritans) be judged alike, by the impartiall God, who reſpecteth not perſons. 1 Pet. 1. 17. Rom. 2. 5.

v. 6, this parable] See Matth. 21. 19.

A certain man had a fig-tree] This parable our Saviour ſpake, as prepoſſeſſing a ſecret objection which a ſecure ſinner might make againſt that which he ſaid: the ſcope is to ſhew that many impenitent ſinners who are worthy of preſent deſtruction, are yet ſpared for ſome time; all which ſhall but adde to their finall ruine, except they truely and timely repent: continuance in ſin is an high abuſe of Gods long-ſuffering, whoſe juſtice ſleepeth not; neither is he ſlack, but patient. See 2 Pet. 3. 9. Romans 2. 5. as the planter will try all means to make the barren tree fruitfull: ſo the good God will not preſently cut down and deſtroy men; but uſe all means to better them: when nothing will ſerve, then he layeth the ax to the root. See Iſaiah 5. 4. &c. Matth. 3. 10.

v. 7. theſe three yeers] That is, theſe many yeers: it ſignifieth the patience and long ſuffering of God toward ſinners: ſome underſtand the time before, and under the law, and Goſpel. Greg. hom. 31. See Irena. l. 4. c. 7.

why cumbreth it the ground] καταργεῖ ſignifieth among other things, to conſume or work out the heart of the ground: the meaning is, that they who are not fruitfull in good works, do but make others barren by their example; and as Gregorie ſaith, aliis operandi occaſionem negat, deny others the occaſion of working.

v. 8. He anſwering ſaid] This deſcribeth the affection of thoſe who faithfully plant in Gods vineyard; they do not forthwith deſpair when they ſee not preſent fruits of their labours; but take the more pains with their plants, their auditours, by how much neerer they perceive Gods judgements are on their barrenneſſe; and pray the Lord to ſpare them. See 2 Tim. 24. 25. Exod. 32. 31.

v. 9. then after that thou ſhalt cut it down] The Syriac readeth and if not, why ſhould it live? thou ſhalt cut it down: Chriſts purpoſe is hereby to ſhew the Jews, and in them all others planted in Gods vineyard the Church, what God looketh for, that is our fruit. Iſaiah 5. 2. and what they muſt look for, who after much pains and culture beſtowed upon them by the Miniſters, remain yet unbettered and unfruitfull; that is, cutting up and deſtruction of body and ſoul. See 2 Chron. 36. 15. 16. Jer. 1. 10. Iſaiah 5. 5, 6. Mat. 3. 10.

v. 10. on the ſabbath] Signifying that this miracle was done publikely, when the multitude were aſſembled.

v. 11. a ſpirit of infirmity] It was not any naturall infirmity, but by the malicious working of the devil; who delighteth in the miſery and infirmity of man, and therefore doth not onely infect and afflict the minde, but alſo the body, where and as far as he can obtain leave to hurt, as may appear in the hiſtory of Job, and many in the Goſpel.

v. 12. thou art looſed] It hath reference to that which is ſaid, verſe 16. (whom Satan hath bound) and to ſhew that he had power to diſſolve the work of the devil, and to reſcue his captives, and the key of the bottomleſſe pit, with the chain to binde Satan. Rev 20. 1, 2.

v. 13. immediately ſhe was made ſtraight] Syr. She ſtretched out her ſelf, ἀνωρθώθη, ſhe ſtood up ſtrait again: this ſheweth that it was the immediate power of God, which perfectly cured her, without any ordinary means applyed.

and glorified God] This is an effect of faith, to give God the honour of all the bleſſings which we receive. See Chap. 17. 16, 17. and it ſheweth that this was no obſcure work, but an evidence of Gods power and mercy.

v. 14. the ruler of the ſynagogue] That is, one of the rulers, for it ſeemeth there were divers, Mark 5. 22. Acts 13. 15. the Syriack calleth him רב Rab, which in the Chalde and Syriack ſignifieth great, major, doctor, prince or ruler. See on Acts 18. 8.

there are ſix dayes] concerning the errour of Phariſees prohibiting works of mercy on the *S*abbath day, See cha. 6. 2. obſerve here, that there can be nothing free from the cenſure of malicious ignorance, the moſt ſacred and Divine actions of Chriſts mercy doth Satan ſtrive to black over with ſome imputation of evil, leſt the ſpectatours ſhould beleeve and be ſaved.

v. 15. Thou hypocrite] ὑποκριτὴς ſignifieth alſo that which the latines call, hiſtrio, an acter or perſonatour of others, as ſtage players, in habit, words and actions imitate or counterfeit that which they are not, but for preſent would by all means ſeem to be: ſo do hypocrites, counterfeit, ſeem, or reſemble Saints; when they are indeed and truely no more ſuch, then he that acteth an Emperour on the ſtage, is an Emperour in power, Eſtate, and honor; the Syriac excellently expreſſeth it, by נסב באפא naſeb baphe aſſumens vultum, or accipiens perſonam, faciem, &c. thou who aſſumeſt the countenance, or taking on thee the perſon or face of another. Matth. 7. 5. Luke 6. 42. this diſſembling of the ruler (who under pretence of much zeal to the ſanctification of the ſabbath, calumniated Chriſt the Lord of the ſabbath) Chriſt here reproveth: as alſo their perverſe zeal, who did not think the ſabbath violated, by works of mercy towards their beaſts, but towards men: thus he convicteth them by their own practice.

v. 16. daughter of Abraham] She was ſuch, either by nature, imitation, (Rom. 2. 12. Luk. 19. 9.) or both: in any of which reſpects they were extream perverſe, in denying that comfort to a Saint of God, bound 18. yeers together, with the bonds of Satan, in great affliction, and pain of body, which they would not deny to a beaſt, by themſelves tyed up with the bonds of men, for their own good, and for a convenient time onely, malice is ever blinde, and impiety unreaſonable.

theſe eighteen years] the time of her ſuffering which Chriſt well knew, he reciteth, as to convince their peeviſh malice; ſo to comfort thoſe who ſuffer long, God meaſureth all, and in due time will help. Pſal. 9. 10. long this afflicted woman ſuffered, long the lame man. John 5. 5.9. much longer Iſrael in Egypt; yet God delivered at laſt.

v. 17. All his adverſaries were aſhamed] They were aſhamed as convicted of calumny: it doth not appear that they were converted: but a more happy effect of this miracle appeared in the reſt who rejoyced for the power and mercy of God ſhining in theſe works of Chriſt.

v. 18. Unto what is the kingdom of God like] Mark. 4. 30. that kingdom of God which is now offered unto you which he governeth by the ſceptre of his word, ſhewing the way thereto.

v. 19. Like a grain of muſtard ſeed] This he ſpeaketh to declare the admirable encreaſes and power of the Goſpel, whoſe beginnings were ſo ſlender, and that the Church hath divers ſtates, ſomtimes it is ſmall and hardly diſcerned for the paucity of profeſſours and true believers (Reve. 11. 12.) ſomtimes glorious with multitudes, and by them very conſpicuous ſtretching out her branches. (Pſal. 8. 9. 10. 11.) to the river, and her boughs to the ſea.

v. 20. Whereunto ſhall I, &c.] Matth. 13. 33.

v. 21. It is like leaven] This ſimilitude is to the ſame purpoſe. See chap. 12. 1.

v. 22. Journeying towards Jeruſalem] Matth. 9. 35. the firſt part of this verſe ſheweth the unwearied induſtry of Chriſt in teaching the people the way to ſalvation, in the ſecond appeareth his zeal to the ordinances of God: for in that he made journeys to Jeruſalem, it ſeemeth to have this meaning, that how ever he preached conſtantly in the towns and villages, yet ſo often as their appointed feſtivals approached, he went up to the ſolemn aſſemblies to worſhip at Jeruſalem.

v. 23. Are there few that be ſaved?] This ſeemeth a captious queſtion, occaſioned by Chriſt his preſſing repentance: as if it had been ſaid; what ſhal become of the Iſrael of God, if ſo few as you pretend ſhalbe ſaved? therefore he anſwereth not directly, but admoniſheth rather to be very careſull for their own ſouls health (Matt. 7. 13.) then inquiſitive after the counſels of God concerning the number of the elect: and to avoid that common roade to hell, following multitudes to ſin. See Exod. 23. 2.

v. 24. Strive to enter in] See on Matth. 7. 13. Chriſt according to his uſuall manner, anſwered not directly to their queſtion, to ſatisfie their curioſity, but to that which more concerned them to know and do.

many, I ſay unto you will ſeek] that is, they will endeavour for ſalvation, by a blinde deſire thereof, but not uſing the right means, nor going the right way (by Chriſt the onely door thereto) ſhall not attain it. See John 7. 34. & 8. 21. & 13. 33. Rom. 9. 31. 32. many ſhall ſtrive in vain, as they who ſeek righteouſneſs and ſalvation by their own merits and works of the law, not by faith in Chriſt: or who continue willfully in known ſins: yet muſt we ſtrive in that way of faith w^ch^ worketh by love. Gal. 5. w^ch^ God hath appointed, in whom our labour is not in vain. 1 Cor. 15. it is true, few ſhall be ſaved, in reſpect of the multitude of unbelievers which ſhall periſh: there is little wheat in reſpect of the chaff, yet enough to fill Gods granary: as many as are written in his book of life: that certain number, whoſe election is ſure and immutable, having this foundation, the Lord knoweth who are his: our wiſdom therefore ſhall be, not to trouble our ſelves with thoſe things, which are within the vaile, and ark of Gods ſecret counſell, but to ſtrive to make our calling and election ſure to our own conſciences (which is ſure in Gods decree) by doing thoſe things which may as happy fruits of our election, calling and regeneration, aſſure us that we ſhall never fall. 2 Pet. 1. 9. 10.

v. 25. And hath ſhut the door] He meaneth, that God affordeth us time, & opportunity of ſalvation which if we omit, we ſhall be ſhut out like thoſe fooliſh virgins. Matth. 25. 10. Pſal. 32. 6. Iſai. 55. 6.

I know you not] that is, I own you not for mine.

v. 26. We have eaten] He meaneth here the Jews, who had opportunity of ſalvation offered them, by Chriſts preſence, and familiar converſing with them; and yet they neglected it, it ſhall not profit to have eaten and drunk with Chriſt on earth; nor to have heard him preach, except we believe, and forſake our ſins: Judas, and the Phariſees heard him, yet were ſons of perdition.

v. 27. But he ſhall ſay] See Matth. 7. 23.

v. 28. Weeping and gnaſhing of teeth] Matt. 8. 12. & 13. 42. & 24. 51. This expreſſeth the miſerable and hopeleſs condition of the damned; who ſhall indeed riſe again to eternall ſorrows which the ſcripture expreſſeth in ſeveral terms; everlaſting torments in hell fire, unquenchable; the worm that dieth not, utter darkneſs, and here weeping and gnaſhing of teeth: that is the moſt intenſe ſorrows and torments of ſoul and body, the pœna ſenſus and pœna damni, in that they ſhall be ſenſible of the bleſſedneſs of the Patriarks, Prophets, and all the elect, in the preſence of God, which they willfully loſt. See Matth. 8. 11.

v. 29. Come from the eaſt] He ſeemeth to ſpeak here principally concerning the Gentiles, alluding to Iſai. 43. 5. 6. the ſenſe being, God will call his elect out of all nations, and they ſhall have eternall life and bleſſedneſs with faithfull Abraham, which he expreſſeth by the ſimilitude of a feaſt or banquet, as c. 14. Matt. 22. Matt. 8. 11. Luke 22. 20.

v. 30. There are laſt, which ſhall be firſt] Matt. 19. 30. & 20. 16. Mark 10. 31. in this ſpeech he overthrows the vain confidence of the Jews, who ſo pretended to be the peculiar people of God, that they would diſintereſt al other nations, whom they deſpiſed as caſt-aways, themſelves preſuming on Gods favours, as if he were bound to them, how ever they degenerated from holy Abraham, he telleth them here, that ſhortly that order ſhould be changed; the Gentiles being perferred before them, and they through their invincible obſtinacy and unbelief, being rejected, and becoming a ſcorn and reproach to all nations.

v. 31. Herod will kill thee] Herod Antipas: This ſeemeth not advice proceeding of any good wil to Chriſt, but in hope to rid him away, that he might not teach there. See Amos 7. 12.

v. 32. Tell that fox] He calleth him ſo for his ſubtilty, and fraudulent diſpoſition (See 2 Tim. 4. 17.) which Chriſt hereby intimateth was well known to him, though Herod lurked like a fox, to finde advantage to hurt.

I caſt out devils] intimating that he had no cauſe to fear Herods power, who commanded the powers of hell: and his ſelf had taught, that in the ſervice of God, they are not to be feared who can only kill the body: which muſt teach us conſtancy in our miniſtry.

to day and to morrow] that is for a ſhort time by God appointed, and therefore not in the power of man to prevent or abridge.

be perfected] namely in being offered up, and perfecting the work of mans redemption. See John 19. 28. 30.

v. 33. Periſh out of Jeruſalem] He ſheweth that he muſt ſuffer at Jeruſalem, where ſo many of the prophets had been murdered, that few, or none in reſpect of them, periſhed elſwhere; the ſence is, as if he ſaid, tell you me that Herod will kill me? nay but more bloody enemies are you and your high Prieſts.

v. 34. O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem] Matth. 23. 37.

how often would I have, &c.] in this ſimilitude he declareth, as the tender love of God to them (Joh. 11. 25.) ſending them many prophets to inſtruct them (Jer. 7. 2. Chron. 36. 15.) ſo alſo their obſtinacy in contemning his counſel againſt themſelves: here is no freedom of will to good, but onely ſelf deſtruction by ſin.

v. 35. Behold your houſe is left unto you deſolate] See Matt. 23. 38. that is, the temple in which you glory. Jere. 7. 12. this city Jeruſalem, and this whole people ſhalbe ruined, here is uſed the preſent for the future, both for the certainty of that he ſaith, and alſo becauſe it was then hard at hand.

Ye ſhall not ſee me] That is, after my death and reſurrection, ye ſhall not ſee me again untill I come in glory. See c. 19. 38. Pſal. 118. 26. Matth. 23. 39.

CHAP. XIIII.

Verſe 1. O*Ne of the chief Phariſees*] Either one of their Sanhedrin, or chief councell in matters Eccleſiaſticall; or elſe one of the rulers of a Synagogue: for Matth. 9. 18. Jairus is called ἄρχων, a Ruler, who Mark 5. 22. is named ἀρχισυνάγωγος, a Ruler of a Synagogue: alſo there was a difference between theſe; Elders, Scribes, and Chief Prieſts, as between the offices of civil and Eccleſiaſticall rulers. See c. 24. 20. Act. 4. 5. as Moſes alſo diſtinguiſheth them. Deu. 19. 17. for al rulers of Synagogues were not Phariſees. Joh. 7. 48. for Phariſee a was name of a ſect, of פרש פרש pharaſh ſeparavit, or expoſuit פרושים as it were, ſeparated from others ſociety in ſanctimony of life (at leaſt in their own opinions, as Luke 18. 11. ſo Theophylact ſaith they were ἀποκεκομμένοι τῶν ἄλλων, ſeparating from others. See Epiphan. lib. 1. 16. Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 17. cap. 3. & lib. 18. cap. 2. ſo alſo Suidas interpreteth φαρισαῖοι, by ἀφωρισμένοι, ſeparates, thoſe who derive the name from interpreting, muſt conſider, that their interpreters and doctors were called סופרים Sopheim, ſcribes, from the word ספר ſaphar ſcripſit, but the Phariſees obſerved the law and expoſition thereof from tradition of their elders.

to eat bread] this known Hebrew phraſe importeth to dine or ſup, the like hiſtory we have chap. 7. 36. why he would eat with ſuch treacherous inviters, the cauſe might be, leſt he ſhould ſeem to hate their perſons, or eccleſiaſticall order, and that in his affability, he might finde occaſion of converting or convincing them, and leaving them without excuſe at the day of judgement.

they watched him] they obſerved his words and behaviour, that they might finde ſomthing to accuſe him of.

v. 2. Which had the dropſie] Whether he came of his own accord, or was ſent in by the Phariſees, for that frequent occaſion of quarrell about the *S*abbath, it is not certain: the diſeaſe is mentioned; he was ὑδρωπικὸς, ill of the dropſie, either a Tympany, or that which is the Anaſarcha, or dropſie univerſally ſpread over the whole body, the ſwelling fleſh becoming ſpongie and ſenſeleſſe; and ſo much the more uncurable by how much longer time, the crude humour from the corruption of the liver, hath prevailed, and ſetled an evil habit upon every part: what ever, how deſperate ſoever to man; he that made man, can repair any ruin in man, and perfectly cure him, but here Chriſt provoketh the Phariſees to a diſpute concerning the *S*abbath, firſt, becauſe he knew their thoughts who watched what he would do; again becauſe on the like occaſions, he formerly had ſundry conteſts with them.

v. 3. Jeſus anſwering] The Hebrew manner of ſpeaking many times ſignifieth, hee began to ſpeak.

is it lawfull to heal on the Sabbath day?] Matthew 12. 10.

v. 4. They held their peace] Not able to contradict as v. 6. nor daring to incur the hatred of the people, for whom Chriſt wrought ſo much good, or thinking there was no preſent danger of death in the ſick man, and having alſo been ſo lately put to ſhame in the ſame argument. *S*ee c. 13. 17.

v. 5. Which of you ſhall have an ox, &c.] *S*ee chap. 13. 15.

v. 7. A parable] Matth. 13. 3. 9. That is, a dark ſpeech covertly to tax their ambition, and to teach them humility.

chief rooms] Gr. πρωτοκλισίας. κλισία as Suidas ſaith is κλίνη, or κραββάτιον a bed on which they lay down: though that ſame diſcubitorius lectus in Plinie. l. 33: c. 11. on which they uſed to ſup, differed from the bed on which they ſlept, as alſo their triclinia, which were three beds or pallets ſet together to ly down & to eat on, ſpecially at their feaſts: the Syriac word here uſed is of סמך Semach: as John 13. 23. Matth. 26. 7. 20. Luke 7. 37. & 22. 27. 1 Cor. 8. 10. &c. the ſame which the Hebrew סמך Samach in the pallets it ſeemeth there was (as at our tables) ſome obſervation of places for gueſts reſpectively to be ſet, which ſome ambitiouſly affected, as thinking themſelves more worthy then others preſent, this Chriſt reprooveth as an effect of pride, and occaſion of many breaches of charity.

v. 8. Sit not down in the higheſt] This he ſaith to beat down ambition, and to perſwade to modeſty and humility, as the Apoſtle admoniſheth. Phil. 2. 3. that in lowlineſſe of minde they eſteem others better then themſelves.

v. 9. He that bade thee, &c.] See Prov. 25. 6. 7.

v. 10. Sit down in the loweſt] ἀνάπεσον, of ἀναπίπτω decumbo, according to the cuſtom of thoſe countreys. *S*ee on chap. 7. 36. he giveth not this as an univerſall rule to all men, but forbiddeth ambition in all. See on c. 11. 43. Matt. 12. 38.

v. 11. For whoſoever exalteth himſelf] Matth. 23. 12. Job 22. 29. Prov. 29. 23. Luke 18. 14. Jam. 4. 6. 1 Pet. 5. 5. whoſoever arrogateth to himſelf, or thinketh too highly of his own worth.

he that humbleth himſelf] to humble ones ſelf, is to think lowly of ones ſelf, attributing all the good he hath, to God: which Samuel expreſſed by קטן בעיניך katon bebenecha, little in thine own eyes. 1 Sam. 15. 17. not overvalewing thy ſelf, he ſaith not, he that is humbled, &c. but he that humbleth himſelf, it may be no fault to be exalted, and ſo no vertue to be humbled, therefore he ſpeaketh not here of that humility which is ex triſtitia or neceſſitate as Bernard ſup. Cant. ſerm. 34. ſpeaketh, for that may be with pride and an unſubdued minde, but that which is, ex voluntate, of a will either meekly bearing afflictions, or humbly enjoying proſperity, the ſum is, that which Fulgentius, de prædeſt. ad Monim. l. 1. ſaith, ſicut ---- fit elatione humilis: ſic fit humilitate ſublimis. as a man is made low by pride, ſo is he exalted by humility: for God reſiſteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble. 1 Pet. 5. 5. not that God findeth any thus humble before he giveth them grace, but becauſe dando gratiam humiles facit: by giving grace, he maketh them humble,

v. 12. When thou makeſt a dinner or a ſupper] This forbiddeth not entertainment of Parents, brethren or friends, but condemneth the errour of Phariſees, who thought thereby they ſatisfied the law of charity, which is indeed in relieving the poor and needy.

v. 13. Call the poor] For theſe are the objects of charity: the good thou doeſt to theſe Chriſt taketh as done to him. Matth. 25. 35.

v. 14. For they cannot recompenſe thee] meaning, that in juſtice, a recompenſe ſhall be made, which becauſe the poor cannot, God certainly will.

at the reſurrection of the juſt] where the juſt ſhall receive reward (the wicked ſhall riſe again, but to eternall puniſhment) ſee Matth. 25. 34. Eccleſ. 11. 1. Pro. 19. 17. the poore mans hand is gazophylacium Chriſti, Chriſts treaſury, and a bill of exchange for heaven, whereby we may there lay up treaſury, where we ſhall be ſure to finde and enjoy it, in tuto hæreditas ponitur, quæ Deo cuſtode ſervatur. Cyprian. de ep. & miſericord. in ſafety is that inheritance laid up, which God keepeth.

v. 15. Bleſſed is he] Reve. 19. 9.

that ſhall eat bread in the kingdom of God] chap. 13. 29. the Hebrews by this manner of expreſſion meant, to be partaker of the joyes of heaven: poſſibly this ſpeaker dreamed of ſome imaginary heaven in which men ſhould eat and drink: but Gods kingdom conſiſteth not in ſuch things.

v. 16. Then ſaid he unto him] Matth. 22. 2.

a certain man made a great ſupper] that is, God rich in mercy, who by his ſervants inviteth man, propoſing the bread of life, which remaineth to eternity. John 6.

bade many] Matt. 22. 1. many were and are called to the knowledge of God, of the Jewes and Gentiles: in reſpect whereof it is called a great ſupper, or feaſt, as alſo in regard of that which is ſet before them, which is eternall life and compleat happineſs in Chriſt. See Matth. 22. 14. Rom. 10. 18. this is a great feaſt which laſteth not for ſome dayes onely, as did *S*olomons. 2 Chron. 7. 8. Nehemiahs. Nehem. 8. 18. or that of Ahaſhueroſh Eſter 1. 3. 5. and 2. 18. but to eternity: neither is it for the nation of the Jews only Rom. 3. 29. or like Belſhazzars Dan. 5. 1. to a thouſand lords, but to all nations and people, without acceptation of perſons. Acts 10. 34. 35.

v. 17. Sent his ſervant] Meaning his Prophets; who though many, yet having one commiſſion, meſſage and Spirit by which they all ſpake, are here ſignified by the name of a ſervant.

come, for all things] Prov 9. 2. 5. intimating ſpeed, and undelayed apprehenſion of Gods mercy offered in the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, as Hebr. 3. 15.

v. 18. All with one conſent] with one accord, though they alledge ſeverall cauſes, yet they all agree in refuſing to come.

v. 19. Another ſaid I have bought] In theſe excuſes, it appeareth, how dangerous a Remora and obſtacle to the kingdom of Chriſt, the care of ſecular things is, and that all things and buſineſſes of this world, how ever ſeaſonably lawfull and neceſſary, muſt yet give place to thoſe, which concern Gods honour, and our eternal life and ſalvation.

v. 21. Maſter of the houſe being angry] Matth. 22. 7. is mentioned the injury done to the ſervants ſent to invite the gueſts (meaning the perſecutions of the Prophets and Miniſters) and the juſt puniſhment inflicted; deſtruction of the fooliſh and ingratefull people who ſo requite the Lord; which Luke omitteth.

into the ſtreet and lanes, &c.] hereby ſignifying the calling of the Gentiles, wretched unregarded ſinners, intimated by the poor, lame and blinde (*S*ee Reve. 3. 17.) and a people gathered as it were from the high-wayes and hedges.

the poor] The poor in ſpirit, Matth. 5. So, Peccatores ſuperbi reſpuuntur, ut peccatores humiles eligantur, Greg. hom. 36. Proud ſinners are refuſed that the humble may be choſen. God chuſeth thoſe whom the World deſpiſeth: the infirm and deſpicable of the World, commonly do more readily hearken to the voice of God, by how much leſſe they have in the World to pleaſe and diſtract them: ſo hold all worldly things, that you be not thereby held from God, ut terrena res poſſideatur, non poſſideat, Greg. qu. ſ. that you may poſſeſs earthly things, but not be poſſeſſed thereby.

v. 22. and yet there is room] Many being collected of the Jews, yet was there place left for a greater fulneſs of the Gentiles. Auguſt. de verb. Dom. ſer. 34. nicely diſtinguiſheth, the Gentiles came from the Streets, and Hereticks from the Hedges. The meaning is, to ſhew Gods inexhauſtible mercy to all ſorts of penitent ſinners.

v. 23. compel them] Not by violence, but by the power of preaching, ſo Theophylact underſtandeth it, as Rom. 1. 16. God compelleth no man to ſanctity, but enclineth the will thereto: he forceth none by violence, though he draw them by perſwaſions, promiſes, or threatnings, which is the ſpiritual compulſion here intended, when the rigour of the Law preached terrifieth the ſinners conſcience, and ſo fear of judgements forceth him to ſeek ſalvation and comfort in Chriſt. So John Baptiſt compelled his hearers, by telling them that the ax was laid to the root of the tree, Matth. 3. 10. So Miniſters are commanded to do, 2 Tim. 4. 2. So God draweth us to Chriſt, John 6. 44. which is never done Sine inclinatione mobilis, without the inclination of him that is moved, it being an immediate effect of the will ſanctified, moved, and enabled by the Spirit of God. This he doth, ſaith Bernard, de gra. & lib. arbitr. Cum terret aut percutit ut faciat voluntarios non ſalvet invitos, when he terrifieth, or ſmiteth to make them willing, not to ſave them againſt their wills: when he changeth the will from evil to good, he doth but change, he doth not take its liberty away: as for the coercive or compulſory power of Magiſtrates, it belongeth not to this place, becauſe, not to Miniſters: certainly the civil Magiſtrate beareth not the Sword in vain, Rom. 13. 4. Therefore ought he to revenge all wickedneſs, ſpecially that wherein Gods honour and truth are intereſſed: yet is it moſt requiſite that a tender hand be uſed toward the weak, on the Miniſters part, as is commanded, 2 Tim. 2. 24. On the Magiſtrates, by providing all probable means to enform them better; ever conſidering the difference between him that erreth out of that which they call invincible ignorance, & him, that not only erreth wilfully, in fundamentals, but alſo ſeduceth others therein: See Deut. 13. 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. 13, 14, 15. Deut. 17. 7. and it is by proportion conſiderable, if he that murdereth the body may not be ſpared (Numb. 35. 31, &c.) much leſſe may he who murdereth bodies and ſouls to eternity, by making their Proſelytes children of Hell, Matth. 23. 15.

v. 24. none of theſe men which were bidden] None of thoſe who abſolutely and finally refuſed the grace and mercy of God offered in the Goſpel. He meaneth not here, an abſolute, but a general rejection of the Jews; as if he ſaid, few of them (in reſpect of the multitudes of the Gentiles to be called) ſhall be ſaved. See Rom. 11. 1. &c.

v. 25. ſaid unto them] There were many followers of Chriſt preſent, but not all of one minde and reſolution: he who ſaw all their thoughts, addreſſeth his ſpeech to ſome of them: and ſo proſecuteth the former argument concerning mens excuſing themſelves from Gods ſervice, by ſecular buſineſſes: ſhewing, that except men can put off that minde and vain love of this World, they cannot be any true Diſciples of Chriſt.

v. 26. if any man come unto me] Matthew 10. 37. Matth. 16. 24.

and hate not his father] That is, removeth not all carnal affections, contrary to the calling of God; or he who is not diſpoſed (where theſe loves are incompatible) to hate Father and all for the love of Chriſt, can be none of his: ſo that theſe things are by no means ſimply to be underſtood (as if the ſervice of Chriſt required any violation of the laws of God and Nature) but comparatively: I ought dearly and tenderly to love Father and Mother; but to prefer my Creator and Saviour before all: as Ambroſ. orat. funebr. de ob. Valent. very well ſaith, Debeo affectum parenti, ſed magis obſequium debeo ſalutis auctori. I owe affection to my parent, but I rather owe obedience to the Author of my ſalvation.

v. 27. bear his croſſe] That is (as may appear from the following compariſon) when the Lord ſhall call men thereto, to be ready and willing to endure afflictions for Chriſts ſake. The Croſſe here, as elſewhere, ſignifieth torments, miſeries, calamities, in alluſion to thoſe ſorrows and torments which Chriſt on the Croſſe ſuffered for us, though all that we can ſuffer are incomparably leſſe then thoſe. And in this manner of ſpeaking he intimateth that we cannot reaſonably expect, that the condition of us ſervants ſhould be better then Chriſts our Lord and Saviour. See Matth. 10. 38.

v. 28. ſitteth not down firſt] This ſheweth the means how to bear the Croſs patiently and conſtantly; that is, by reſolving beforehand ſo to do. That which maketh men ſtartle away in afflictions, is principally their unpreparedneſs thereto, and vain hope of ſecular proſperity. Concerning preparation hereto, he propoſeth two ſimilitudes: Firſt, of the unconſiderate builder, who for want of forecaſt, loſeth much charge on that which he is not able to perfect: So ſhall they who do much in Chriſts ſervice, if they reckon not upon the Croſs if need require. Secondly, of the unadviſed Souldier, who will not timely conſider the power of thoſe with whom he muſt encounter: this life is a warfare, and that truceleſs; it is great folly ever to be ſecure.

v. 33. forſaketh not all that he hath] That is, when Gods glory ſo requireth.

v. 34. Salt is good] By Salt, he meaneth the uncorrupted integrity and vigour of minde in the midſt of afflictions (which ſeaſoneth, hardneth, and keepeth from corruption of fleſh and blood, ever indulgent to its own eaſe) without which, we can be profitable for nothing: eſpecially if Miniſters be not wiſe to ſeaſon themſelves and others herewith, they are utterly unprofitable.

but if the ſalt hath loſt its ſavor] Matth. 5. 13. Mark 9. 50. The Diſciple of Chriſt muſt be as Salt, not onely good in himſelf, but alſo by his Miniſtery communicating that ſavor to others, that they may be ſound: as it is written Titus 1. 13. Rebuke them ſharply, that they may be ſound in the faith.

v. 35. He that hath ears to hear] He that heareth let him mark diligently. This admonition, as we have continually need of when ever we hear any part of Gods Word, ſo ſpeciall where this ſubject, the Doctrine of the Croſs is preached; which we moſt unwillingly hear of.

CHAP. XV.

Verſe 1. D*Rew neer unto him all the Publicans, &c.* Who were odious to the Jews, becauſe they gathered up the cuſtoms and taxes for Cæſar: by all, he meaneth many: or all that came to him to be converted: Of ſinners there were (and are) two ſorts: Some acknowledged or were aſhamed of their ſin and miſery; ſome were juſt in their own eyes. Of the firſt ſort were thoſe who came to hear Chriſt preaching mercy to penitent believers in him. Of the ſecond ſort were the Scribes and Phariſees, who highly valued their own merits, and pretended righteouſneſs by the works of the Law; therefore they embraced not the faith in Chriſt for their juſtification. So that Chriſt came not to call them, but thoſe other ſinners, Mat. 9. 13. by ſinners here underſtand notorious ſinners; for all are ſinners.

to hear him] They came not to make their liberty from the curſe of the Law, a cloak for ſin, but to hear his Doctrine and to convert: they came as the ſick to the Phyſitian, to be healed and ſaved.

v. 2. murmured, ſaying, this man, &c.] They calumniated Chriſt among the people; which he perceiving, anſwered, as in the following Parables: they being puffed up with vain opinion of their own righteouſneſs blamed him: firſt, for admitting ſinners into his company: Secondly, for eating with them: this οὗτος, this Man, is emphatical: as if they had ſaid; this your excellent Doctor, whom you count the Meſſias and teacher of righteouſneſs, look what company he keepeth, Publicans and notorious ſinners. Pride and Malice are ever cenſorious and blinde. See cap. 7. 39. And in this example it appeareth, that it is more poſſible to be without fault, then unjuſt cenſure.

v. 4. What man of you] The ſcope of all theſe Parables, is to teach them the bounty of God, and his care of poor ſinners recovery, and how they that are truly ſanctified, are ſo far from envying the converſion of other ſinners, that they heartily rejoyce thereat.

having an hundred ſheep] See Matth. 18. 12. He compareth ſinners to ſheep going aſtray. So Pſal. 119. 176. Iſaiah 53. 6. and himſelf to a careful ſhepherd, as John 10. Ezek. 34. 15. Acts 20. 28. he leaveth ninety nine for a time; not meaning any deſertion of the flock, but a ſolicitous intending the recovery of that which is ſtrayed, ſpeaking to mans ſenſe. He compareth Publicans and ſinners to ſtray cattel, intimating his care to ſave the elect and joy in their recovery from Sin and Death. Wherein he ſecretly taxeth the envy of Phariſees for impious and Satanical, which ſo much differed from the joy of holy Angels in the preſence of God at ſinners converſion: So layeth he down a ſingular ground of comfort to the converted: for if God bear ſuch love to the elect, that he would own them, and ſeek them, who had no hearts to ſeek him, being yet dead in treſpaſſes and ſins; how ſhall he not much more know them and hear them, when being found of him, they ſeek him in truth, See Eſay 65. 1. Rom. 5. 10. Rom. 8. 32. & 10. 20.

until he finde it] Chriſt the good ſhepherd came to ſeek that which was loſt, and will never give over his work unperfected: the ſinner is then prevented by Gods grace, and enabled to ſeek him, as Fulgentius de incarn. & grat. Dom. Jeſu ſaith, quando illuminatur ut credat, when he is illuminated that he may believe.

v. 5. layeth it on his ſhoulders rejoycing] Hereby alſo Chriſt declareth his love and care of ſinners, who hath born all our infirmities, Matth. 8.17. And the duty of Paſtors which is to labour, as well to recover the loſt, as to preſerve the remainder of their flock. See 2 Tim. 2.24, 25, 26. Matth. 18. 14, 15, &c.

v. 7. joy ſhal be in heaven] Which he interpreteth v. 10. joy in the preſence of the Angels of God; and thus he accommodateth his ſpeech to vulgar capacities: underſtanding by juſt perſons, thoſe who ſeem ſo to themſelves, having no ſenſe of their ſins and need of repentance. See Prov. 30. 12. Eccleſ. 7.22. or thoſe who continue in the right way, Pſal 119.1. Thoſe who being juſtified by faith, yet daily pray, forgive us our treſpaſſes. This underſtand as joy is defined, an affection ariſing from ſome freſh or new good: Hence we may conceive how God and his good Angels are diſpleaſed at ſins, whereas his Spirit is ſaid to be grieved at them. Epheſ. 4.30. Ezek. 18.23.

v. 8. ten pieces of ſilver] This ſimilitude is to the ſame purpoſe, Drachma's, here tranſlated, pieces of ſilver, is the eighth part of an Ounce, which cometh to ſeven pence half penny, and is equal to the Roman penny, Mat. 18.28.

if ſhe loſe one] As if he ſaid, you would all juſtifie that care and pains which were beſtowed in ſeeking that ſecular thing which is loſt, abroad or at home: would you allow the ſeeking of loſt Beaſts, and not of loſt Man? Is it juſtifiable to uſe all lawful means for the recovery of a little piece of ſilver with Cæſars image upon it; and is it with you condemnable to ſeek a loſt Man, who hath Gods image on him? By this reaſon he evidently convinceth their malice: So doth he admirably comfort the elect, intimating, that God will leave no means unattempted for the recovery of them.

v. 9. calleth her friends] Here he proveth by an argument, from the leſſe to the greater, that the Angels rejoyce at the converſion of a ſinner; becauſe they have greater love and joy then Man: alſo he ſheweth what the captious Phariſees ſhould have done, if they would imitate the holy Angels, who were ſo far from envying any Mans ſalvation, that they rejoyce with one another for it: alſo here appeareth the great pains and care which ought to be taken for the recovery of loſt ſinners, contrary to the courſe of proud Phariſees, who ſwelling with a deluding conceit of their own holineſs, eſteemed penitent ſinners and Publicans no better then forlorn caſtawayes.

v. 11. a certain man had two ſons] By this third ſimilitude, he declareth the wretched condition of thoſe who live in ſin and unbelief, which he propoſeth in the yonger brother: as alſo how ready God is to forgive the penitent.

v. 12. Give me the portion of goods] That which thou intendeſt to give me for my portion.

he divided unto them his living] Τὸν βίον importeth here, as elſewhere, that by which life is maintained, which the Syriac interpreteth, his poſſeſſion. See Mark 12.44. Here is a character of an evil ſon. Firſt in deſiring a diviſion of the eſtate, his father being yet alive. Secondly, in that having poſſeſſion of his portion given him, he preſently forſaketh his father. Thirdly, in that he quickly conſumed all in riotous living: in all which is ſeen an image of Man fallen into ſin; when ambitious (as it were) of ſharing with God, and ſeeking happineſs in himſelf, and his own fooliſh wayes and inventions, rather then in God, the onely Fountain of true happineſs, he departed from God, ſin ſeparating him: thus evilly uſing that freedom of will which God gave him for good, he loſt himſelf and all will and ability to good: Hence flowed in that Deluge of ſin and miſery on men, God permitting the Heathens to their own luſts and errours, Rom. 1.24. Hence alſo thoſe miſeries ſhadowed under this yong mans poverty and extream want.

v. 15. he ſent him into his fields to feed ſwine] Here in the letter appeareth the ſad condition of ungoverned young Prodigals, to be vilified moſt by them on whom they vainly ſpent their eſtates: as alſo the juſt judgement on the raſh and diſobedient: he that would not cleave to a loving father, that it might have been well with him, is compelled to adhere to an unkinde ſtranger, and to be made a ſervant of the vileſt beaſts, who undervalued the dignity of a ſon: he that would not underſtand the bleſſing of plenty, is better inſtructed by extream want: and in the Moral, the baſe ſervitude which the Devil putteth his ſervants to, in feeding and communicating with the moſt unclean affections.

v. 16. and would fain have filled his bellie with the huskes] by theſe κεράτια, huskes (whether we underſtand thoſe ſiliquas or pods of pulſe, peaſe or beanes: or, as Theophylact ſeemeth to underſtand, and others ſay, of the fruit of the carob tree, which beareth a pleaſant fruit in pods alſo, it ſkilleth not much; though the latter ſeem a very probable opinion, the Syriac reading here חרובא charubo ſome give it καῤῥȣ́βια: Siliqua dulcis, a ſweet pod. Strabo cited by, V. Shindler, Penteglot. ſaith, multum hæc cognita Nicea, & maris Liguſtici accolis, ubi eam eſitant, pueri, etiamque porci: this is much known in Nicea, and to thoſe who dwell by the ſea of Liguria, where children, and alſo hogs uſe to eat thereof. Galen alſo mentioneth this tree bearing theſe κεράτια, by latter writers called the Carob tree, and the fruit thereof S. Johns bread; (that which John Baptiſt eat, Matth. 3.) or locuſts. See John Gerard. hiſt. plant. lib. 3. cap. 82. J. Drus. prætterit. lib. 3. Plin. lib. 15. c. 24. whatever they were, no man gave unto him: as if he ſaid, they who allowed their Swine a certain meaſure thereof, would not allow him to fill his belly therewith. The Moral is, that in Gods houſe his children are ſatisfied, as it were with fatneſs, Pſal. 63.5. there is diſtributed the bread or portion of ſons, Matth. 15.26. 32. but out of his family, husks of unclean Swine, the lying fables of traditions, which do rather puff up with vain pride, then nouriſh to eternal life: ſo are profane men compared to Swine, 2 Pet. 2. Of the famine of Gods Word ſee Amos 8. 11. See Theophylact hereon.

v. 17. when he came to himſelf] Hitherto he was beſide himſelf, like a mad or drunken man, not knowing what he did, but neceſſity brought him to his right minde.

have bread enough] The moral is, the meaneſt in Gods family abound with ſpiritual comforts, and are in a condition incomparably better then any out of it. See Pſalm. 84.11.

v. 18. I will ariſe and go, &c. Not that any ſinner can prevent Gods grace, ſee John 6.44. Jer. 31.33. Ezek. 11.19.20. God alone giveth repentance, who in Chriſt forgiveth the penitent: the ſinner indeed ſaith in his heart, as this young man, I will ariſe and go, &c. but never until God works ſuch a reſolution in him. See Phil. 2.13. So that here are repreſented the effects of Gods mercy in the converſion of a ſinner. 1. Diſlike and deteſtation of the former courſes of life. 2. Ariſing from the drunken ſleep and dotage of ſin. 3. Certain purpoſe to leave ſin, and to return to God in newneſs of life. 4. Confidence of grace and merciful reception with our heavenly Father. 5. Ardent and longing deſire of the ſweet and true comforts which are in Gods houſe and family. 6. Ingenuous confeſſion of our ſin before God. 7. Humble acknowledgement of our unworthineſs (I am no more worthy to be called thy ſon) I have indeed forgotten the duty of a ſon, yet, O unchangeable God of mercy, forget not thou the love of a Father. See Pſal. 130. 3.4.

againſt heaven] againſt God.

v. 19. As one of thy hired ſervants] Let me be any thing, ſo I may be thine. See pſal. 84.10.

v. 20. He aroſe, and came] This action deſcribeth an inſeparable condition of true repentance, which is not ſo much in reſolving, or ſaying, as in doing according to holy reſolutions of turning to God.

yet a great way off] this intimateth Gods preventing grace toward us.

his father ſaw him, and had compaſſion, &c. the meaning is, as if he ſaid; if men, naturally deſirous of revenge, and too tenatious of priviledge in puniſhing, can yet out of fatherly affection, ſo eaſily forget childrens offences, and be reconciled; how much more will God who is of infinite mercy, pitty, and receive penitent ſinners? certainly (ſaith Salvian. ep. Tpatio, &c.) though parents have juſt cauſes of being angry, yet nothing can more happily, or which they more wiſh, fall out; then that their children may ſo ſatisfie for their faults, ne neceſſe habeant vindicare, that they need not revenge, the word ἐσπλαγχνίσθη, had compaſſion, ſignifieth, a vehement moving to pitty, ſuch as proceedeth ex intimis viſceribus from the bowels and earning of the heart. See Pſal. 103.13. Iſai. 49.15. Ezek. 16.6. Jer. 2.2.

v. 22. Bring forth the beſt robe] ſignifying the robe of Chriſts righteouſneſs.

a ring on his hand] it may import the riches of Gods bounty, as alſo the ſaints honour and ornament, the pledge of Gods love, or ſeal of faith.

and ſhooes] the morall may be that which the Apoſtle expreſſeth. Epheſ. 6.15. in all theſe things are ſignified Gods goodneſs and our happineſs in our converſion; wherein ſo much more is reſtored then was loſt, by how much more excellent that ſtate is, whence we ſhall never fall, then that from whence we all did fall.

v. 23. And kill it] That is, Chriſt to be offered in ſacrifice on the croſſe, when the Gentiles (the younger brother Japheth) returned to the tents of Shem, and to the God of the fathers: and he is brought (as it were) to be ſlain for every beleever, when the goſpel is preached to him. See Galat. 3. 1. Auguſtine To. 4. queſt. ſup. Evang. lib. 2. cap. 33.

v. 24. this my ſon was dead and is alive] The unregenerate is dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, Epheſ. 2. 1. converſion and regeneration is a reſurrection from the dead works of ſin, to newneſſe of life, Revel. 20. 6. Rom. 6. 11. 13, &c.

they began to be merry] This is the ſame which is expreſſed verſ. 7. 10.

v. 25. his elder ſon] By which is meant, he that taketh himſelf to be juſt, as verſe 29. or is ſo accounted of others; who never ran out into any apparant exorbitancy, as the Gentiles did, and ſo the elder brother might ſignifie the Jews, or thoſe that continued in an upright courſe of life: indeed the proud Jews envied the mercy which God ſhewed the penitent Gentiles, as Acts 10. 13. So Auguſtin. q. ſ. underſtandeth it: Theophylact of the Phariſees envying the reception of ſinners.

v. 27. ſafe and ſound] ὑγιαίνοντα, in health.

v. 28. would not go in] That is, would not believe and partake with the Church of Chriſt, ſpecially of the Gentiles, whom they counted deſperate ſinners unworthy of Gods favour, as Rom. 11. 28. 31.

his father came out] Signifying that God left no means unattempted to win the Jews to Chriſt: but ſent his Miniſters to preach the goſpel to them firſt, until they put the word of God from them, and judged themſelves unworthy of everlaſting life, Acts 13. 46.

v. 29. theſe many yeers] This ſhadoweth out the arrogancie of the Jews, preſuming on their merits and righteouſneſſe by the Law; not that they did not continually tranſgreſſe the law of God and provoke him to anger, but becauſe they had been many yeers his Church and peculiar people; and becauſe they were as high minded, as if they had never ſinned: and as unthankful, as if God never had done any thing for them worthy of their ſervice.

v. 31. all that I have is thine] Intimating his abundant goodneſſe toward that nation. See Pſalm 147. 20. Iſaiah 5. 4, &c. Deut. 32. 7, &c. Jer. 31. 9.

v. 32. was loſt, and is found] This importeth the dangerous alienation of ſinners, ſpecially of the Gentiles, from the covenant of grace, until they were called by the goſpel according to the propheſies; wherein Noahs prophetical prayer took effect, and Japheth (of whom came the Gentiles) was perſwaded by the word and Spirit of God, to dwell in the tents of Shem, Geneſ. 9. 27. that is, with that people of the Jews which beleeved in Chriſt.

CHAP. XVI.

Verſe. 1. T*Here was a certain rich man*] The drift of that which followeth is to ſhew us, that they who beſtow their riches, or other gifts of God on their pleaſures, or worldly intereſts onely, muſt give account to God for them: and that charity ſhal ſtand us in ſuch ſtead in the day of judgement, that God will accept thereof, and abundantly acquite it.

v. 2. give account of thy ſtewardſhip] By this manner of ſpeaking he mindeth us, that we are Gods ſtewards of all thoſe temporal goods, which he putteth into our hands for a time, to uſe them to his glory, others good, and our own comfort: and that we muſt at laſt give a ſtrict account hereof to God. ſee 1. Pet. 4. 9. 10. Hag. 2. 8. Pſal. 50. 10.

v. 4. I am reſolved what to do] This perverſe reaſoning of his, is not propoſed to our imitation, neither ſuch robbing of his maſter, by deceiving truſt, and making up falſe accounts: that being forbidden of God, and the contrary commanded. See Pſalm 37. 3. Epheſ. 4. 28. 2 Theſ. 3. 10, 11, 12.

v. 6. an hundred meaſures of oil] ἑκατὸν βάτους, Syr. interpreter, metretas: the Hebrew word בַּת bath, ſignified a meaſure of liquid things, oil, wine, &c. Iſaiah 5. 10. 1 Kings 7. 26. 2 Chron. 4. 5. it contained nine galons three quarts: the ſame in quantity with the Ephah, a common meaſure among the Hebrews; the חֹמֶר homer, contained ten baths (Ezek. 45. 14.) or ephahs; and the ephah contained ten עֹמֶרִין omers, Exod. 16. 36. ſo that it contained about nine galons: ſome ſay much leſſe. See Godwin. Moſes and Aaron lib. 6. cap. 9.

v. 7. an hundred meaſures of wheat] ἑκατὸν κόρους, Solomons proviſion for a day (1 Kings 4. 22.) of fine flower, was thirty כּוֹרִים chorim, meaſures. See Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 8. cap. 2. and lib. 15. cap. 12. where he ſaith, corus autem capit decem medimnos Atticos. It contained as much as the homer, Ezek. 45. 14. which ſome reckon five buſhels and five galons (See Godwin q. ſ. Jo. Druſius præterit. lib. 3. in loc.) Some about 14 buſhels, ſome much more.

v. 8. commended the unjuſt ſteward] We muſt not ſtrain ſimilitudes beyond the intent of the ſpeaker to make every particular agree: the meaning is, that God commended them, who ſo uſed their temporal goods that thereby they might prepare them treaſure for the life to come. Matth. 6. 19, 20. 1 Tim. 6. 18. 19.

are in their generation] Meaning that worldly men commonly ſhew more care and providence for ſecular things, then others for things eternal.

children of light] That is, the children of God illuminated by his word and holy Spirit: the ſum is, that the maſter of that ſteward (commending the wit, not the fidelity of his ſervant) repreſenteth Chriſt ſtirring up our mindes to a prudent and careful providence for our future ſafety; ſeeing that even the blinde worldlings (who minde onely ſecular things) are ſo circumſpect for things which periſh in uſing.

v. 9. make to your ſelves] This figurative manner of ſpeaking, is accommodated and fitted to the allegory: the meaning is, by your beneficence to the poor, give them occaſion to pray for you, and make your advantage of being rewarded by God. See Proverbs 19. 17.

Mammon of unrighteouſneſſe] The Greek calleth that here μαμμωνᾶ, which the Syriack calleth מָמוֹנָא mamuno: ſo they ſaid, mamon, mamuna, or mamonas: as Satan, Satana, or Satanas. See Jo. Druſ. ad voc. N. T. com. 1. and ib. com. 2. cap. 14. Irenæus lib. 3. cap. 8. Auguſtin. de verb. Domini ſer. 35. and lib. 2. ſ. ſerm. Domini in monte, ſaith, that mamon in the Punick tongue ſignifieth gain: or as he ſaith de verb. Dom. in Luc. ſerm. 35. and queſt. Evang. lib. 2. cap. 34. divitiæ ſeculi, riches of this world. Suidas interpreteth μαμμωνᾶς χρυσὸς, γήϊνος πλοῦτος, ὁ περιττὸς, καὶ ὑπὲρ τὴν χρείαν, gold, earthly riches, ſupervacaneous or more then neceſſary: ſo Anaſtaſ. Sinait. q. 12. M. Troſtius deriveth it from the Hebr. אָמַן aman, among other things ſignifying nutrire, ſuſtentare, and ſo mamon ſignifieth food or ſuſtenance for this life: as alſo it may come of the ſame root, as it ſignifieth credere, becauſe men uſually truſt therein; See Pſalm 37. 3. and Jo. Buxtorf. Jun. lex. Chald. & Syr. מָמוֹן, it is called here mammon of unrighteouſneſſe: not that we ſhould give for almes or holy uſes, goods unjuſtly gotten: (for all ſuch muſt be reſtored again to their right owners; and as Baſil ſaith well, Reg. Fuſius expl. ἐξ ἀδίκων κερδῶν, almes are not acceptable to God, though almes be a ſacrifice wherewith God is pleaſed, Heb. 13. yet as Iſidor. epiſt. ad Euſeb. Epiſc. noteth, οὐ χρῄζει ὁ Θεὸς ἐξ ἀλλοτρίων θυσίας, he hath no need of ſacrifice out of other mens goods, but abominateth it, as him that offereth a dog, or buildeth up Zion with blood) but riches are ſo called, becauſe commonly either in their getting, uſing or keeping, they adminiſter matter of ſin, 1 Tim. 6. 9.

that when ye fail] That is, when ye die.

everlaſting habitations] What manner of habitations theſe ſhall be in Heaven whereof Chriſt ſpeaketh, John 14. 2. potius debet credi, quam dici, Proſper de vit. contempl. lib. 1. cap. 2. See 1 Cor. 2. 9. 10. the meaning of this place is not, that we ſhall merit to finde favour with God by our almes, for he was our friend, when we were his enemies (Rom. 5, 10.) and of no ſtrength to do any good: and merit is between them, where there is no debt, or grace: but here, where man can never diſcharge his debt of ſin, all our merit is Gods mercy: the meaning therefore is; if the unjuſt ſteward wanted not friends for giving his maſters goods; how much leſſe ſhall we, if we give ours to relieve Gods poor, for whom God hath promiſed repaiment? Works of mercy ſhall both here teſtifie to the givers conſcience, that he is the elect of God, who hath given him ſo happy an uſe of thoſe ſecular riches he gave him, and it ſhall be rewarded in the everlaſting life to come, Matth. 25. 2 Pet. 1. 10, James 2. 22, 23.

v. 10. he that is faithful, &c.] This ſeemeth a proverbial ſpeech, commonly true: as if he ſaid; he that is found unfaithful in a little, ſhall not be truſted with much; he that is true and truſtie in a little, ſhall be truſted in much; if you uſe ſecular things well, whereof God hath made you ſtewards for a time, he will give into your hands heavenly and eternal riches.

v. 11. unrighteous mammon] If you abuſe temporal riches, whereof you are but ſtewards to an omniſcient God, how can you hope, that he will truſt you with ſpiritual and heavenly which are true riches.

v. 12. That which is another mans] He calleth external goods another mans, becauſe we are but ſtewards thereof, and muſt leave them to others: ſpiritual goods are our own, becauſe they ſhall never be taken away; not but that God gave them all, nor that we may uſe them any otherwiſe then to Gods honour.

who ſhall give you that which is your own?] That is, God will not give you.

v. 13. can ſerve two maſters] See on Matth. 6. 24.

ye cannot ſerve God and mammon] You may poſſeſſe and be ſerved of riches, and withall ſerve God, and lay up a good foundation for your ſelves, 1 Tim. 6. 19 treaſures in heaven: but you cannot ſerve riches, but with Gods diſſervice: to ſerve riches is to be an idolater, and ſo, no ſervant of God.

v. 14. And they derided him] As the manner of carnall men is, in any thing which croſſeth their corrupt minds theſe men thought none happy but the rich, ἐξεμυκτήριζον, naſo ſuſpendebant, Clem. Roman. ep. ad Corinth. p. 51. ſaith, χλευάζουσι ἡμᾶς ϗ μυκτηρίζουσι. Suidas interpreteth it by ἐξουθενεῖν, to contemn as a thing of nought, and unconſiderable: therfore theſe men being rich, covetous, and making wealth their God, derided him, as if he broached vain paradoxes, excentrick, and far out of the way to the worlds affections: and ſuch eſteem have all covetous men of the doctrine of alms, and an holy contempt of the world.

v. 15. ye are they which juſtifie your ſelves] Who magnifie, or excuſe your ſelves: or you would fain ſeem juſt before men: here he toucheth the ſecret cauſe of their contempt of his doctrine, their impious pride: and thus he, as it were conventeth them before Gods tribunall, by the teſtimony of their own conſcience, ſhewing that ſuch pride and hypocriſie, is abominable before God the ſearcher of hearts, however beguiled men applaud or canonize them. See Job 10. 4. 1 Sam. 16. 7. Matth. 23. 25. Iſaiah 5. 15. and on Matth. 6. 2.

v. 16. the law and the prophets] Matth. 11. 11. when John Baptiſt ſhewed Chriſt preſent, all propheſies concerning his coming ceaſed, and all the types prefiguring him in their accompliſhment, μετ᾽ ἐκεῖνον γὰρ οὐδεὶς ὅλως προφήτης παρ᾽ ὑμῖν γεγένηται ſaid Juſtin Martyr to the Jew: after him (that is John Baptiſt) was there not one prophet born amongſt you, which is true, if he mean, none ſpeaking of a Meſſias to come.

preſſeth into it] See Matth. 11. 12. every one who doth believe, zealouſly followeth the Goſpel.

v. 17. eaſier for heaven and earth to paſſe, &c.] See on Matth. 5. 18. Gods decree for our ſalvation ſhall not fail.

v. 18. whoſoever putteth away his wife] See on Matth. 5. 32. and 19. 9. Mark 10. 5. 1 Cor. 7. 11. except in caſe of adultery: the bill of divorce was permitted for a time, becauſe of the hardneſſe of their hearts, and cruelty towards their wives, Mal. 2. 15, 16. and that by their judiciall law, not by the morall, which admitteth of no diſpenſation: and therfore Chriſt recalleth all his to the firſt inſtitution.

v. 19. there was a certain rich man] Having ſpoken concerning the right uſe of temporal goods, now he proceedeth to ſhew the horrible puniſhment of thoſe who do not uſe them well: this was one of thoſe rich men, who (as Cyprian l. 2. ep. 2. ſaith) poſſident ad hoc tantum, ne poſſideri alteri liceat, poſſeſſe goods only to keep others from poſſeſſing them.

in purple and fine linnen] By theſe things which were in uſe among them, he deſcribeth the luxury of worldly men, as Revel. 18. 16. alſo their unhappineſſe who abuſe riches, and their happineſſe who make an holy uſe of poverty; which he doth by propoſing one, as Fulgentius ſpeaketh ad Gal. ep. 2. in divitiis & ſanitate miſerum; and another in egeſtate & vulnere multum beatum, one unhappy in wealth and health, the other abundantly bleſſed in wants and ſores. The abuſe of his riches was, 1. in curious clothing: 2. in gluttony: 3. in neglect, and contempt of the poor. Clem. Alexandrinus, Pæd. lib. 2. ſaith, the ancient Lacedæmonians were wont to permit whores onely to wear gorgeous apparel. See 1 Pet. 3. 3, 4.

v. 20. a certain begger named Lazarus] Some write the name Eleazarus, Tertul. de idolatr. cap. 13. (as ſome copies have it) Hebr. אלעזר Eleazar; and the Syr, לעזר lahazar, this was a poor diſeaſed man, therfore not that Lazarus, John 11. the brother of Mary and Martha. In theſe we ſee an image of the world, wherein the wicked flouriſh, and the righteous often want: the antitheſis is remarkable; in the one riches, in the other poverty and beggery; he clothed with purple and fine linnen, this with rags; he feaſting, this lying hungry at his gate, deſiring but ſome crumbs or ſcraps, falling from the rich mans table, or left after meals; this full of ſores, a pitiful creature, he more pitileſſe then his dogs.

v. 21. dogs came and licked his ſores] Sine cibo, ſed non ſine Chriſto: canibus expoſitum, ſed ſocium angelorum, ſaith Fulgent. q. ſ. ad Galat. ep. 2. without meat, not without Chriſt: expoſed to the dogs, yet accompanied with angels.

v. 22. into Abrahams boſom] He meaneth the communion of ſaints and faithful, who walked in the ſteps of Abrahams faith and ſanctity, therefore called his ſons, Rom. 4. 12. 16. Gal. 3. 7. 9. Luke 19. 9. ſinus Patriarcharum, receſſus quidam eſt quietis æternæ, Ambroſ. orat. Funebr. de obit. Valent. the boſom of the Patriarchs is a certain retiring place of eternal reſt.

the rich man alſo died] This is common to all eſtates and conditions: poor and rich die alike: See Pſalm 49. 10. the future maketh the difference: to the one, whom men regarded not living, in his death the Angels are miniſtring ſpirits to convey him ſafe to heaven: (a precious ſoul is ſometimes lodged in a diſeaſed body; the graces of Gods ſpirit, are ſo covered with the deformity of afflictions, as that carnal reaſon can ſometimes diſcern nothing therein, but the appearance of the curſe) he ſaith no more of the rich man, then that he was buried, leaving his paſſage to be gathered from verſe 23.

and was buried] Poſſibly with great pomp: no funerals or tombs can ſhelter men from the wrath of God.

v. 23. in hell lift up his eyes] Gr. ἐν τῷ ᾅδῃ, in that lightleſs or dark place where nothing can be ſeen, elſewhere called utter darkneſſe, Matth. 25. 30. Syr. בשיול baſheiul, Heb. בשאול, in hell the place of the damned, Numb. 16. 33. ſometimes it ſignifieth horrour of minde, Pſal. 116. 3. ſometimes the grave; ſo Gen. 37. 35. Jacob ſaith, I ſhall go down שאלה, Chald. לשאול, 70. εἰς ᾅδου, ſubaud. οἶκον or τόπον, to the houſe or place of the grave. The Greek fathers uſed this terme, as the Latines, apud inferos, promiſcuouſly for any ſtate or condition of the dead. See Irenæus lib. 5. cap. ult. Tertul. de Idolatr. cap. 13, &c. Chryſoſt. hom. de divite &c. (in that lifting up the eyes, is attributed to a ſpirit, it muſt either be humanitùs dictum, as Phil. 2. 10. bowing the knee is ſpoken by things in heaven: or it muſt conclude this rather a parable then an hiſtory) ſometimes the word importeth an afflicted, wretched, hopeleſſe, and irreparable condition. See on Matth. 11. 23. Acts 2. 27. here it expreſſeth the torments of the damned, aggravated v. 25. by their remembrance of worldly proſperity, and the conſideration of the elects happineſſe whom they formerly deſpiſed.

v. 24. and he cried] The meaning is, that they who will not now hear and pitty the cries of the poor, ſhall crie in hell and not be pitied: See Matth. 25. 11. Prov. 21. 13. James 2. 8. he that would not give the crumbs, which fell from his table, ſhall crie in hell for a drop of water, and not obtain it; that is, the leaſt comfort to aſſwage his torment ſhall be denied him, though he eternally beg for it: flammæ infœlicium mortuorum divitiis non refrigerantur hæredum; the flames of the unhappy dead, are not cooled by the riches of their heirs. Tim. ad Eccleſiam Catholicam lib. 3.

v. 25. Son remember] This is a common manner of ſpeaking; otherwiſe the wicked are not to be accounted ſons of Abraham, John 8. 39. Gal. 3. 9.

receivedſt good things] In the end that appeareth true which Chryſoſtome proveth conc. 3. de Lazaro, proſperous impiety is very dangerous: there are two reaſons of his denyal, 1. from equity: thou haſt had thy part of comfort on earth, where Lazarus hath been afflicted; it is but equal, that now, thou who ſo much abuſedſt proſperity, ſhouldſt be afflicted, and holy Lazarus comforted. See 2 Theſ. 1. 6. Secondly from impoſſibility, there is a vaſt diſtance, ſo that none can paſſe from heaven to hell, nor from hell to heaven; as the bleſſedneſſe of theſe, ſo the miſery of the other, is unchangable, and eternal.

v. 27. ſend him to my fathers houſe] Herein is deſcribed their vain deſires, who tempt God in the neglect or contempt of his ordinances, requiring miracles, or teſtimony from the dead to perſwade them; whereas God (the onely ſufficient witneſſe, and teacher of things divine and heavenly) ſendeth all men to the law, prophets and holy Scriptures. See Iſaiah 8. 19, 20. John 5.

v. 28. may teſtifie unto them] That he may teſtifie to them, what woful torments are in this place, that they may not come hither by their ſins and unbelief.

v. 29. Moſes and the prophets], That is, the Law given by Moſes miniſtery: and the writings of the prophets, and alſo preachers of the ſame word.

v. 31. neither will they be perſwaded] He that will not believe the Spirit of God ſpeaking in the prophets, will not believe a man pretending that he came from the dead, and telling what the wicked ſuffer there; for who could believe a creature, who cannot reſt aſſured in the infallible teſtimony of God himſelf? neither would the Jews believe Lazarus, who had been four dayes dead, and was raiſed again from the dead, John 11.

CHAP. XVII.

Verſe 1. IT is impoſſible] Matth. 18. 7. It muſt needs be that offences or ſcandals come: or, I foreſee that it will be ſo, becauſe of mens wickedneſs, σκάνδαλα· σκανδαλίζω is of σκάζω, claudico: it importeth impingere facio. See 1 Pet. 2. 8. Theophylact interpreteth here, by τὰ κωλύματα τῆς ἀγαθῆς καὶ θεοφιλοῦς πολιτείας, hinderances to a good and godly life, and that which is pleaſing to God. Nazian. orat. 1. interpreteth by πρόσκομμα, offendiculum, as λίθος προσκόμματος a ſtone of ſtumbling, 1 Pet. 2. 8.

v. 2. offend one of theſe little ones] That is, to make them halt, or fall away from God: he diſcovereth the ſin of thoſe times (which was to think it little or no ſin, by their pride & imperious importunity, to ſcandal an infirm, poor, or inferiour brother) here he telleth alſo of the puniſhment; ſpeaking of ſcandals given by Hereticks, Schiſmaticks, apoſtates, or the like, whether in word or deed: (See Rom. 16. 13. Titus 1. 16.) for otherwiſe offences are often taken, by perverſe and ignorant men, from good and laudable things done or ſpoken, becauſe they croſſe their blinde and corrupt opinions: ſo were the Scribes and Phariſees ſcandaled and offended at Chriſts doctrine and works of mercy: but bleſſed are thoſe who are not offended in Chriſt, Matth. 11. 6. It were better, or more tolerable (as the Syriac hath it) for a man thus ſcandaling one of the meaneſt of Gods children, to be caſt into the moſt deſperate or helpleſs condition of this life, then to endure the eternal torments which await him in Hell.

v. 3. take heed to, &c. This may be referred either to that he ſaid of ſcandals, or that which he will now ſay concerning love and mercy; ſeeing there is the like hazard in both.

if thy brother treſpaſſe] See Matth. 18. 21. This is ſpoken concerning private or perſonal offences of the publick. See 1 Tim. 5. 20. Matth. 18. 15. are layed down certain degrees of admonition and Eccleſiaſtical diſcipline.

rebuke him] Or reprove him: both are joyned 2 Tim. 4. 2. but it muſt be done reſpectively, or with regard had to the perſon. See 1 Tim. 5. 1. for charity muſt not connive at ſin, but diſcreetly reprove it. See Levit. 19. 17. Epheſ. 5. 11. 1 Cor. 5. 6.

if he repent forgive] That is, call him not into queſtion, or ſue him not: forgive as much as concerneth thee, yea though he offendeth thee not onely ſeven, but many times; if he do not acknowledge his fault to thee, yet let thy heart be ready to forgive: commit thy cauſe to God: as often as he offendeth, forgive, which is meant by ſeventy times ſeven times. Matth. 18. 22.

v. 4. ſeven times] Many times. See v. 3. as often as he offendeth and repenteth.

v. 5. encreaſe our faith] Herein they acknowledged that faith is his gift, as Epheſ. 2. 8. and that their faith wanted confirmation: for, ſaith Fulgentius ad Prob. ep. 4. though the Lord give new ſtrength to his, in their conflicts, leſt they ſhould fail, permittitur tamen fatigari, propriæ infirmitatis onere, &c. yet overladen mortality is permitted to be wearied with the burden of its own infirmity; that, finding no ſtrength in it ſelf, it may quickly addreſs it ſelf to implore aid and Divine aſſiſtance.

v. 6. and the Lord ſaid] Matth. 17. 20. Mark 11. 23.

it ſhould obey you] See Mat. 17. 20. This manner of ſpeech he uſeth to ſhew the admirable power of faith; to wit, that it ſhould overcome all difficulties, as Mark 9. 23. All things are poſſible to him that believeth: certainly the effects of faith in fervent prayer have been more then removing trees or mountains. See Hebr. 11. 29, 30, 33, &c. James 5. 15, 17, 18. 1 John 5. 16. John 10. 12, &c. Exod. 17. 12. By grain of Muſtardſeed is meant the leaſt meaſure, Matth. 13. 32. by (be thou plucked up by the root) he meaneth that they ſhould do wonderful things.

v. 7. which of you having a ſervant plowing] By this ſimilitude taken from the duty of ſervants to their maſters, he prepoſſeſſeth a concluſion which haply the Apoſtles would have gathered from their merit, who had followed Chriſt, and therefore might expect ſo much favour of him, as to give them ſuch faith to do great works: but he ſheweth them that God is debter to none, (Rom. 4. 4, 5.) that they muſt do all their duty and expect Gods leiſure for the reward.

v. 10. we are unprofitable ſervants] ἀχρεῖοι] this title is alſo given to evil ſervants, Matth. 25. 30. Phil. 11. to ſhew us what our merit is if God ſhould be ſevere, Job 22. 2. Pſal. 143. 2. See alſo Job 35. 7. and Pſal. 16. 2. as alſo by an argument from the leſſer to the greater, to ſhew that we cannot merit any good at Gods hand, for if a ſervant be ſo bound in duty to a mortal and ſinful maſter, that whatſoever he doth, and how diligently ſoever he ſerveth, yet ſhall he not deſerve ſo much as thanks at his maſters hands: much leſſe can we, that are not onely ſervants, but unprofitable ſervants (continually falling ſhort of our duties) and alſo creatures of God, with all our beſt endeavours; merit at Gods hands? we owe our ſelves, and all that we have, are, and poſſibly can do, to Gods ſervice, by whom we live and are: thou therefore that dreameſt of meriting renounce thy intereſt in and claim to grace, (for grace and merit are incompatible, Rom. 4. 4. Rom. 11. 6.) and as Ambroſ. de pœnit. l. 2. c. 8. ſaith (if thoſe books be his) prius ſolve debitum, ut quod ſperaveris impetrare merearis. Firſt pay thy debt, that thou mayeſt deſerve to obtain that thou hopeſt for. We are indeed faithful, good, and profitable ſervants; not of our ſelves, or by any works which we can do, but by the free imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſs. See Hebr. 13. 21.

v. 11. thorow the midſt of Samaria] Omri king of Iſrael, 1 Kings 16. 24. bought the hill Samaria of Shemer, and built thereon, and called the name of the city which he built after the name of Shemer owner of the hill, Samaria; Hebr. שמרון, Shomeron, 70 Σεμηρῶν. See Anaſtaſius Sinait. qu. 45.

v. 12. which ſtood afar off] As unclean perſons were to do, leſt they ſhould infect othets. See Levit. 13. 45, 46.

v. 13. and ſaid, Jeſus Maſter, have mercy] It was a cauſe common to them all, and they joyned in one and the ſame petition, ſhort, but pithy; they ſay not wherein they deſired him to inſtance his mercy; their miſery was evident; and ſpake their meaning, for a cure which they were confident he could work: however (as often it cometh to paſſe) ingratitude in nine of them extinguiſhed the ſparks of grace.

v. 14. ſhew your ſelves unto the prieſts] See Levit. 14. 2. to them it belonged to judge of the Leproſie, and hereby the unbelieving Prieſts might be convinced: it may alſo teach us humility and ſubjection to authority: Sacerdotem adhuc appellabat quem ſciebat ſacrilegum eſſe, Cyprian lib. 3. ep. 9. he yet called him Prieſt, whom he knew to be ſacrilegious.

v. 15. turned back] Whether he came back to Chriſt, before he had ſhewed himſelf to the Prieſt, as Chriſt injoyned him, it is not certain. It is moſt probable that theſe were not ſent to the Prieſt to know that they were clean, or to pronounce them ſo, for that evidently appeared, but to convince the Prieſts unbelief, ſeeing that Chriſt had done ſuch evident things to confirm his doctrine.

v. 16. fell down on his face, at his feet] So adored he the divine power of Chriſt: and this ſheweth that he was perfectly cured; otherwiſe he ought not to have come ſo neer.

and he was a Samaritan] Theſe words condemn the Jews of high ingratitude, who being inſtructed in the law of God, and having received the ſame favour from Chriſt to be cured, yet not ſo much as came back to thank Chriſt; which this Samaritan did, though he were a ſtranger from the Common-wealth of Iſrael, and of a Nation which they condemned as moſt impious, and vile, ſo that they held no commerce with them.

v. 17. where are the other nine] As if he ſaid, I have healed ten of you, will none be thankful but this ſtranger? Not that he did not foreſee their ingratitude, but that he might note and declare it.

v. 18. there are not found] He compareth the Jews with this ſtranger: when the Samaritan ſhewed himſelf not only thankful in his own perſon, but modeſt in not accuſing the reſt: Jeſus thus ſpeaketh to his Diſciples and others preſent; there are not found, that is, no man appeareth thankful.

to give glory to God] By confeſſing that Chriſt had cured them by a Divine power.

ſave this ſtranger] For the Samaritans were Colonies brought into thoſe parts by Salmanaſar King of Aſſyria out of divers Provinces. See 2 Kings 17. 24, &c. he calleth him ſtranger, not to diſgrace him, but to ſet off the fault, and to condemne the ingratitude of the Jews; that no ſtranger might deſpair, nor any glory of holy parents, if their ſelves be degenerate.

v. 19. ariſe, go thy way] He graciouſly raiſeth him that was proſtrate before him, neither doth he diſmiſſe him without commending his faith and gratitude.

v. 20. the Phariſees] See on c. 14. 1.

not with obſervation] Or with outward ſhew: meaning that it ſhould not be, as they dreamed a kingdom temporal, and glorious with external pomp and Majeſty; but ſpiritual, and ſo not to be diſcovered or obſerved by the World: for otherwiſe it appeared to the faithful by many evident ſignes and demonſtrations, that Jeſus was indeed that long expected Meſſias and King of Iſrael, John 1. 49.

v. 21. Withi

v. 21. within you] Or among you, in the Goſpel preached, which is the Scepter of his kingdom: and the Meſſias whoſe kingdom you have with ardent votes deſired, is now among you in your houſes and Synagogues, and ye acknowledge him not, John 1.27. and the ſpiritual kingdom of God is alſo in the hearts of the faithful, and ſo to be diſcerned by them onely who are ſubjected thereto, Rev.2.17.

22. v. when ye ſhall deſire to ſee, &c.] For the great afflictions which ye ſhall ſuffer, ye ſhall after my departure out of the world, deſire this my bodily preſence with you again, to comfort you. See Matth. 9.15. John 17.12. but I ſhall be no more converſant on earth, after my aſcenſion, untill I come again to judgement: therefore beware of ſeducers coming in my Name.

v. 23. and they ſhall ſay] See Mat.24.23. Mark 13.21.

go not after them] He ſpeaketh here of the ſeducers and falſe Apoſtles, whereof he warneth. See alſo Deut.13.3.8. Jer.23.16. Jer.27.9. It is a dangerous thing to tempt God by liſtning to the tempter: God oftentimes therefore giveth them over to ſtrong deluſions, to believe lies and be damned, who believed not, neither reſted contented with the truth. 2 Theſ.2.11,12.

v. 24. as the lightning] Meaning, that it ſhould be ſudden.

ſo ſhall alſo the Son of man be in his day] He ſpeaketh here of Chriſts ſecond coming, which v. 30. is called the day wherein the Son of man, Chriſt, ſhall be revealed: the Apoſtle calleth it the day of the Lord, 1 Theſ. 5.2. and Jude 6. the great day. and Paul 1 Cor.1.7. the coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. See alſo 2 Theſ.1.7. 1 Theſ.4.14, &c. Mat.24.30. this ſhall be ſudden, as the appearance of lightning in the air, in the twinkling of an eye, 1 Cor.15.

v. 25. firſt muſt he ſuffer] See Mark 8.31. Luke 9.2. that is, Chriſt muſt firſt ſuffer.

and be rejected] that is, be diſallowed, contemned and deſpiſed of the Jews, as evil or unprofitable; which phraſe ſeemeth to relate to Pſal.118.22, See alſo Mat.21.42. 1 Pet. 2.4 in theſe words Chriſt would remove the ſcandal of the Croſſe, telling them before hand what he muſt ſuffer, leſt they ſhould ſtartle and be offended at it, when they ſhould ſee him ſuffer: he would alſo teach us patience in his own example, and confute the vain dreams of Jews concerning his temporal kingdom and glory: for as the Prophets foretold of his ſufferings, ſo did he enter into his kingdom of glory, through ignominy, ſufferings, the Croſs, and Death. See c.24.26. 1 Pet.1.11. Mark 8.31.

v. 26. in the dayes of Noe] Gen.7. Mat.24.37. 1 Pet.3.20. as if he ſaid, no warnings could then perſwade men, to leave their ſins and turn to God, in newneſs of life, but ſecurely flattered themſelves, untill they all periſhed: ſo ſhall it be when I come to judgement. Auguſtine ſaith truly, de verb. Dom. Luc. ſer. 37. Sæculi lætitia, eſt impunita nequitia, the joy of this world, is unpuniſhed wickedneſs: How ſhort and beguiling muſt that needs be, ſeeing man is ſo ſhort lived, and God ſo inevitably juſt? magna miſericordia eſt, nequitiæ impunitatem non relinquere; it is Gods great mercy not to leave wickedneſs unpuniſhed here, leſt he ſhould be compelled at laſt to condemn to Hell, he now vouchſafeth to correct with the rod.

v. 27. they did eat and drink] Chriſt doth not herein condemn any holy uſe of the creatures or the ordinance of God, but ſecurity in ſin, and contempt or neglect of Gods warnings, as 2 Pet.3.4.9,10, &c. 2 Pet 2.5,6, &c. there is a time and meaſure to eat and drink: a time and meaſure for all things, Eccleſ. 3.1. 1 Cor. 7.5. So that we ſuffer not our hearts to be ſurcharged hereby, and that day of the Lord come upon us unawares, c.21.34.

v. 28. likewiſe alſo, &c.] Geneſis 19.

v. 30. is revealed] From heaven, coming in flaming fire to render vengeance to the ungodly, 2 Theſ.1.8. 2 Pet.3. 10. Matth. 24.30.

v. 31. he which ſhall be on the houſe top] Matth. 24.17,18. theſe things are related as ſpoken promiſcuouſly concerning the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and the coming of Chriſt to judgement: this place mentioneth them as ſpeaking of the general judgement: ſome things in Mat.24. are to be underſtood as peculiar to the deſtruction of Ieruſalem; ſome things as common to both: that is ſudden deſtruction, and vain care to flie, reſiſt, or ſave any temporal poſſeſſion out of the flames.

v. 32. remember Lots wife] Gen.19.26. A memorable example is propoſed in her who contrary to Gods command, but looking back to that which ſhe unwillingly left behind her, was thereby overtaken with the judgement: and the monument thereof remained after the time of Chriſt. Clem. Rom. ep. ad Corinth. p. 15. σημεῖον ἐτέθη, ὥστε γενέσθαι αὐτὴν στήλην ἁλὸς ἕως τῆς ἡμέρας ταύτης, ſhe was for a ſigne, being turned into a pillar of ſalt (which, ſaith he, continueth) unto this day.

v. 33. whoſever ſhall ſeek to ſave, &c. See Matth.16.25.

v. 34. there ſhall be two] Mat.24.40. he calleth it night, in reſpect of the dreadful afflictions and horror of mens ſouls.

v. 35. two women] Mat.24.41.

v. 36. two men ſhall be in the field] Meaning, that no ſociety of man in this world ſhall not then be diſſolved, neither ſhal any be joyned in their future condition, as in this preſent.

one ſhall be taken] It importeth a reception to ſafety, as Pſal. 27.10. the Lord יאספני Jaaſpheni, will gather me.

v. 37. they anſwered] That is, the Diſciples.

where Lord?] Mat.24.28. in v.22. he addreſſeth his ſpeech to the Diſciples: now they having heard him ſpeak of the taking of ſome, ask him where they ſhall be taken.

thither will the eagles] Chriſt anſwereth them by a ſimilitude, and ſentence taken out of Job 39.30. uſed alſo Mat. 24.28. ſignifying by the flight of the Eagles, the ſudden aſſembling of the Saints unto Chriſt coming unto judgement, whereof ſee 1 Theſ.4.17. 1 Cor.15.52.

CHAP. XVIII.

Verſe 1 A*Lwayes to pray*] That is, in every opportunity, ἐν παντὶ καιρῷ; as often as need and ſeaſon require: this πάντοτε, is that which 1 Theſ.5.17. the Apoſtle expreſſeth by ἀδιαλείπτως, which the Syriac giveth by omni tempore, as Pſal.34.1. Hebr. בכל־עת becol gheth, at all times. 70 ἐν παντὶ καιρῷ, in every opportunity: according to that of Auguſtine ep. 121. c.10. the brethren in Egypt are wont Crebras quidem habere orationes, ſed eas tamen breviſſimas & raptim quodam modo jaculatas, to have frequent prayers, but yet very brief, and in a manner ſuddenly ejaculated. The meanning here is, as the next words interpret, and not to faint; not to be diſmayed by the length of any afflictions, ſo as to let go their hope and exerciſe of prayer, but to watch therein. See on c.2.37.

2. there was in a city a Judge] The ſum and ſcope of this place is to encourage us to fervency and conſtancy in prayer: by an argument from the leſſer to the greater: if the unrighteous judge, which neither feared God nor reverenced man, was intreated by the importunity of the Widow, to do juſtice to her whom he regarded not; how much more will God be intreated to relieve his dear children, whom he ſo loved, that he gave his only Son to death for them, whoſe neceſſities he knoweth before they ask? See Iſaiah 65.24.

neither regarded man] He deſcribeth a wicked Judge, firſt by the cauſe of all ſuch injuſtice, want of the fear of God. See 2 Chro.19.6,7. next by a miſchievous effect thereof come to ſuch an heigth of impudency, and preſuming to abuſe power & law, that (all bonds of modeſty broken down) he would not ſo much as vail or diſſemble his injuſtice: but (as outdaring cenſure, & not caring who knew it) openly exerciſe it. So the Syriac giveth this neither reverenced man, & from the ſons of men לא מתכחר הוא non ſe abſcondebat, he concealed not himſelf. He was ſo openly wicked, that he feared not the judgement of God nor man. See Hoſ. 4.18.

v. 3. and there was a widow] In the deſcription of this Widow are certain degrees of comfort to be gathered, and motives to perſeverance in prayer. 1. She was a Widow: by ſo much more helpleſe; therefore God cautioned in his law for ſuch, Exo.22.22. Deut.24.17. Iſai.1.17. 2. She was injured. 3. She had a wicked Judge to appeal unto, & ſo little hope of relief. 4. ſhe complained long without anſwer: yet her importunity at laſt prevailed; how much more ſhall Gods children for mercy, which he is readier to ſhew, then we to ask?

v. 4. though I fear not God, &c.] This further encourageth us to prayer: the Judge, who could ſay to his own conſcience, that he neither feared God, nor reverenced man; whom neither equity of the cauſe, pity to the Widow, loathing of injury, zeal of juſtice, nor love of any good, could move; yet had another motive to make him Judge for the widow, leſt ſhe ſhould, by continual ſolicitation, weary him: the word ὑπωπιάζῃ, here uſed, is borrowed from combatants and ſignifieth, leſt ſhe ſhould, as with continuall ſtrokes beat my ears: the Latines expreſſe it by obtundere.

v. 7. though he bear long] Though he long ſuffer the wicked to inſult, and though he long delay the execution of his judgements; yet will he hear his elect, and be their refuge in due time. Many times, quod dare vult, differt, he deferreth that w^{ch} he will give, that we may the more fervently deſire that w^{ch} is delayed, ne vileſcat cito datū, leſt that w^{ch} is quickly given ſhould be undervalued. Aug. de. verb. Dom. ſerm. 29.

v. 8. he will avenge] When he knoweth it moſt ſeaſonable, Pſal.9.9. Hebr.10.37. 2 Pet. 3.9. So is it on Gods part μακροθυμία long-ſuffering, v.7. (See Exod.34.6. Num.14. 18. Rom.2.4. Rom.9.22. 1 Pet.3.20. 2 Pet.3.9.) but on the ſinners part ſpeedy vengeance, v.8. becauſe it cometh long beſore they would or did expect it. See Mat.8.29. 1 Theſ.5.3. Prov.24.22. & 29.1. Eccleſ.9.12. Iſai.29.5. & 30.13. Hab.2.7. Jer.50.24. Mat.24.44. Luke 12.39. Rev.3.3.

when the Son of man cometh] When Chriſt ſhall come to judge the world, he ſhall finde few truly faithful on earth: and therefore wonder not at the evil of the times. See Matth. 24. 12. where the immediate cauſes of ſo general an apoſtacie ſeemeth to be rendred: that is, perſecution of Gods miniſters: breaking out of falſe Apoſtles, or Prophets: malice, the grand nurſe of all impiety: abundance of iniquity, and charity (without which faith is dead, James 2. 20.) growing cold; it muſt needs be hard to finde faith where theſe things are found: yet ſtill God will have a reſerve, his elect, here to be excepted, as alſo in judgement, Ezek. 9. 6. Rev. 7. 3.

v. 9. which truſted in themſelves, &c.] Or, as being righteous; that is, in their own merit and worth, as if for that God were bound to hear them; whereas indeed this is a certain effect and ſigne of their ſpiritual blindneſſe, ſecurity, hypocriſie and pride, all which is abominable before God; for ſaith Salvian de gub. Dei, lib. 3. though one ſtudy to pleaſe God, yet this is a kinde of the greateſt wickedneſſe, ſi ſe juſtum præſumat, if one preſumeth that he is juſt: and again, lib. 4. he ſaith, the greateſt accuſer of guilty men, is that arrogance which uſurpeth (a ſhew of) innocency; for among many who are guilty of the ſame crimes, nullus eſt criminoſior, qui quàm ſe non putat criminoſum: none is more guilty then he who thinketh not himſelf guilty: this onely can we adde to our ſinnes, that we judge our ſelves not ſinners.

and deſpiſed others] ἐξουθενοῦντας, ἐξουθενίζω, pro nihilo duco: here is meant ſuch a deſpiſing, as counteth others as nothing worth; ſo do proud hypocrites undervalue all but themſelves, the worſt of all.

v. 10. into the temple to pray] For that was, בית תפלה beth tephilla, an houſe of prayer, Iſaiah 56. 7. οἶκος προσευχῆς, Matth. 21. 13. See Acts 3. 1. they went up becauſe the temple ſtood on mount Moriah, 2 Chron. 3. 1. in the threſhing floor of Ornan. See 2 Sam. 24. 16. 22. where Abraham would have ſacrificed his onely beloved ſon Iſaac, (Geneſ. 22. 2.) a type of Chriſt: hither came ſaints and hypocrites (as the clean, and unclean into Noahs ark) the juſt and wicked pray: but with much different ends and effects. Prayer was ever eſteemed a principal part of Gods worſhip: ſee 1 Kings 8. 29, 30. Pſalm 138. 2. here God is ſaid to have put his name, 1 Kings 8 16. not that God hath confined his grace and mercy to that place (See 1 Tim. 2. John 4. 21. 22. 23.) but that the people of God might be reſtrained from the temples and ſervice of idols: and that this temple might bear a repreſentation of him who was to come thither, Mal. 3. 1. through whom alone the prayers of the faithful are heard, John 14. 13. John 16. 23. Matth. 7. 7. Mark 11. 24.

the one a Phariſee the other a Publican] The Phariſees being of a ſtrict life, ſwelled with great opinion of their own ſanctity: the Publicans were eſteemed of the Jews, an impious, ungodly and profane people: See concerning Phariſees, Chap. 14. 1. Chap. 15. 1. and of Publicans, Chap. 3. 12. Chap. 15. 1, 2. yet Chriſt ſaid, except your righteouſneſſe exceed the righteouſneſſe of Scribes and Phariſees, ye ſhall not enter into the kingdom of heaven, Matth. 5. 20. and here the humble Publicane is juſtified before the proud Phariſee: ſo much do Gods judgements differ from mans.

prayed thus with himſelf] σταθεὶς πρὸς ἑαυτὸν, ſtanding, or ſetting himſelf apart: or by himſelf: ſo the Syriack interpreter giveth it, he ſtood alone: this Scripture ſheweth his proud heart, as far from the true fear of God, as his opinion had ſet him from the vulgar, whom he counted wicked and unclean: See Iſaiah 65. 5. This word σταθεὶς, here determineth not any poſture or bodily geſture; (for they uſed alſo to kneel in prayer, 1 Kings 5. 24. Michah 6. 6. Dan. 6. 10. Luke 22. 41. Acts 7. 60. and 9. 40. and 20. 36.) it alſo importeth a commencement or beginning of an action, or perſeverance therein: he ſtood (ſome think) alone, above in the temple, leaving the deſpiſed Publican in the utmoſt porch, or court of the people; ſo far it was lawfull for reputed ſinners to come, and ſtrangers alſo. See Joſeph. contr. Appion. lib. 2. 1 Kings 8. 41. he prayed thus; Greek ταῦτα, theſe things; ſo Syriack: inſtead of a prayer, he ſayed theſe things.

God I thank thee] Though he attributed to Gods grace all the good he ſpeaks of himſelf: yet becauſe he placed not all his confidence in the free mercy of God through Chriſt, in humility accounting all that he had, loſſe for Chriſt, (Phil. 3. 7, 8.) that he might not be found in his own pretended righteouſneſſe which was of the law, but in that which is through the faith of Chriſt; he was not juſtified: though he did not here proclaim his merit unto men, but ſpake to God: yet the ſearcher of hearts condemned that ſecret pride, and confidence in his own merit, which ſhewed it ſelf: 1. in contempt of others (whom he counted ungodly) 2. in magnifying himſelf as free from the ſins of others, and juſt in doing thoſe things he ſpake of, which probably he did, and poſſibly might be unreprovable herein before men. (See Phil. 3. 6. how dangerous is ſpiritual pride, even in the moſt glorious and greateſt excellencies of men? humility is a ſafe vertue: leave all to God, who is a plentiful rewarder of the holy, and will abundantly crown his own gifts: and be aſſured thou ſhalt loſe nothing thereby: See Matth. 25. 34, &c. Hebrews 6. 10. Hebr. 10. 35. and 11. 26. 2 John 8. Rev. 22. 12.

as other men, extortioners &c.] As if other mens vices were his vertues, to juſtifie himſelf he contemneth and condemneth others: his ſelf being by ſo much worſe then others, by how much more proud then others: he confeſſeth no faults, but as faultleſſe caſteth ſtones at others: which is, as if the ſick man ſhould onely tell what parts of his bodie were well affected and ſound: it ſeemeth he praiſed God, (as hypocrites uſe) onely to colour his oſtentation.

or even as this Publican] Hypocriſie is blinde at home, and too quick-ſighted abroad: it is natural to the malilitious, to judge all thoſe evill, whom they hate; when proud hypocrites cenſure the juſt, God yet ſeeth how much more damnable the judge is, then the condemned.

v. 12. I faſt twice in the week] That is, on the ſecond day of the week, to which our munday anſwereth; and the fift, which is on our Thurſday, according to the tradition of the Phariſees, as their writers ſay; he that had reckoned others faults, will be ſure to put his own pretended vertues to account; as if he had perfectly learned that precept, Iſaiah 1. 16, 17. Ceaſe to do evil, learne to do well; yea more then the Lawe required; as though he were better then the beſt: he mentioneth two things of which the Phariſees much gloried, faſting and paying tithes. See Matthew 9. 14. and 23. 23.

I give tithes of all] See on Chap. 11. 42.

v. 13. the Publicane ſtanding afarre off] In that part of the Temple where all ſorts of people, Publicanes and ſinners might come, 1 Kings 8. 41. here he ſtood in humilitie, and deepe ſence of his own unworthineſſe.

not lift up] This was alſo an argument of an humble and lowly heart.

ſmote his breſt] See Chap. 23. 48.

God be mercifull to me a ſinner] He well maketh haſte to his ſins remiſſion who is diſpleaſed with himſelf; for with the juſt and merciful judge, qui ſe accuſat, excuſat; he excuſeth, who accuſeth himſelf. Proſper.

v. 14. juſtified rather then &c.] Acquitted of his ſins, and received to mercy; ſo was not the other, becauſe he juſtified himſelf, and was ſo far from forſaking his ſinnes, that he did not ſo much as confeſſe them. See Proverbs 28. 13.

for every one that exalteth himſelf] Matth. 23. 12. Luke 14. 11. ſo that it is true which Proſper ſaith after Auguſtine, Melior eſt in malis factis humilis confeſſio, quam in bonis ſuperba gloriatio; humble confeſſion in evil deeds, is better then proud boaſting in good.

v. 15. brought unto him alſo infants, &c.] Matth. 19. 13. Mark 10. 13.

touch them] Lay his hands upon them, bleſſe, or pray for them: for impoſition of hands was anciently a ſigne thereof. See Gen. 48. Exod. 29. and a common ſymbolum of bleſſing among the Jews.

they rebuked them] That is, thoſe that brought them: as Mark 10. 15.

v. 16. called them] Thoſe that brought the infants.

for of ſuch is the kingdom, &c.] Meaning infants, and thoſe who in ſimplicitie, humilitie, contempt of the world, innocencie, harmeleſſeneſſe, freedom from malice, ſoon forgetting injuries, and the like, become like little children; if the inheritance of the kingdom of heaven be theirs, who can reaſonably barre them of the ſeal of adoption, baptiſme? of which it may not improperly be ſaid (which Jacob ſaid of the place he reſted in) this is the gate of heaven, Gen. 28. 17. where did God ever forbid children to be baptized? It is a true ſpeech of Optatus, lib. 7. Quicquid enim Deus fieri noluit, ore ſuo prohibuit; whatſoever God would not have done, he hath forbidden with his own mouth: that is, the holy Scripture.

v. 17. whoſoever ſhall not receive &c.] Mark 10. 15.

v. 18. a certain ruler asked him] Matth. 19. 16. Mark 10. 17. See alſo on Chap. 14. 1.

v. 19. Why calleſt thou me good, &c.] Becauſe they commonly abuſed this word, Jeſus ſheweth him that he could not confeſſe him to be good, except he alſo acknowledged him to be God.

v. 20. Thou knoweſt the commandments] It was a very neceſſary queſtion which he aſked concerning a way to eternal life; and a bleſſed care of a young man: neither doth he put it on good words, or any thing leſſe then good works really to be done: yet becauſe he aſketh a legal queſtion, verſe 18. What ſhall I do? Chriſt accommodateth his anſwer thereto: thou knoweſt the commandments: but when the terrified keeper of the priſon aſked Paul the like queſtion, he anſwered, believe in the Lord Jeſus, and thou ſhalt be ſaved, Acts 16. the ſcope of this ſpeech is to ſhew, that it is but vain to enquire for the way to heaven, while men truſt in their own holineſſe, or have their hearts ſet on this world. Here good works and obedience to the Law are propoſed, as Levit. 18. 5. Deut. 30. 19. as the whole Law, that ſhewing us our ſin, Rom. 7. 7. and miſerable condition and diſability to be juſtified by the Law, it may be our Schoolmaſter to bring us to Chriſt, Galat. 3. 24. teaching us that we can no wayes be ſaved, but by his merits: thus Chriſt would convict the dangerous confidence of this man by remitting him to the ſecond Table of the Law, againſt which mens ſins are more evident and apparent.

Do not commit adultery] Exod. 20. 13,&c.

v. 21. All theſe have I kept] This anſwer is full of youthful confidence, wherein he was neither ſenſible of the rigorous weight of the Law, nor his own diſability to avoid the curſe thereof.

v. 22. Yet lackeſt thou one thing] This he ſpeaketh, firſt by way of conceſſion, admit it be as thou ſayeſt; next he tryeth him by his own precept, that he might make the corruption of his heart appear, who pretended unto ſo abſolute an obedience to all the commandments.

v. 23. he was very ſorrowful] Becauſe he loved the world, and yet would fain be ſaved in the world to come; it grieved him that he could not have both: carnal goſpellers would fain go to Heaven, if they could finde a cheap way.

v. 24. how hardly ſhall they that have riches &c.] That is, as Mark. 10. 24. they that truſt in riches.

v. 25. it is eaſier for a camel,&c.] This ſeemeth to have been a proverb, whereby they ſignified ſome impoſſibility: this he ſaith, arguens cupiditatem ejus, taxing his covetouſneſs. Irenaus lib. 4. cap. 26.

v. 26. Who then can &c.] That is, what rich man can be ſaved?

v 27. are poſſible with God] Who alone ſo governeth the hearts of his, that their riches do not blinde them, nor take away their hearts from God, Jer. 32. 17.

v. 28. then Peter ſaid] See Matth. 19. 27. Mark 10. 28.

v. 30. more in this preſent time] For, the ſweet fruit of the Spirit, and aſſurance of eternal life, which the faithful here receive, is more to them then all the world, Phil. 3. 8.

v. 31. Then he took unto him the twelve] Matth. 20. 17. Mark 10. 32. He ſpake not concerning his paſſion before the multitude, but to his diſciples apart: for the multitude was not yet capable of this great myſtery, neither did his diſciples underſtand it, when he told it them plainly, verſe 34: for two reaſons, ſaith Theophylact: firſt that he might ſhew them that he ſhould ſuffer ȣ̓κ ἄκων ȣ̓δὲ ὡς ψιλὸς ἄνθρωπος, neither unwillingly, neither as mere man, not knowing that he ſhould be crucified: ſecondly, to teach them to bear patiently that which was to come, being thereof foretold.

we go up to Jeruſalem] There he was to ſuffer, that the truth might anſwer the type, which ſo many ages before preceded in Iſaac, Gen. 22. and here he foretelleth certain degrees of his paſſion: 1. how he ſhould be delivered to the Gentiles, Pilat and the Roman ſouldiers: 2. how he ſhould be mocked and ſpitefully entreated, and ſpitted on: 3. how he ſhould be put to death after ſcourging,&c. theſe things are fulfilled, and to balance theſe ſad things he propoſeth three things conſolatory: 1. that he foreſaw, and foretold what he was to ſuffer; ſo that it was neither fortuitous, compulſory, nor by the counſel of man; but voluntary, and by the determinate counſel of God for mans redemption. See Act. 2. 23. Acts 4. 28. 2. that herein ſhould be fulfilled all that God had declared (concerning theſe ſufferings of our Redeemer) by his Prophets. See Acts 3. 18. Pſalm 22. 1. Matth. 27. 46. Pſalm 69. 20, 21. Dan. 9. 26. Iſaiah 53. 3, 4,&c. 3. that he ſhould riſe again the third day according to the Scriptures, Hoſea 6. 1. Pſalm 16. 10. which was prefigured in Jonahs being three dayes and nights in the belly of the whale, Matth. 12. 39. Luke 11. 29. 30.

v. 32. the Gentiles] See on verſe 31.

Spitted on] ſee Math. 26. 67.

v. 33. they ſhall ſcourg him] Math. 27. 26. John 19. 1.

v. 34. this ſaying was hid from them] It was the great infirmity of the diſciples ſtill dreaming of Chriſts temporal kingdom, and reſtitution of Iſraels proſperity by ſome glorious victories over their enemies; which errour after Chriſts reſurrection being cleered by the holy Ghoſt, better inſtructing them, they remembred what Chriſt had ſaid unto them, John 2. 22. thus we ſee how blinde carnal reaſon is, (ſpecially being infected with ſome perverſe opinion) until it be illuminated by the ſpirit of regeneration: the things here mentioned were plainly preached without any trope; yet that which they had once fancied concerning a temporal kingdom, ſo prepoſſeſſed them, that they could not at preſent underſtand any thing ſpoken concerning Chriſts death and paſſion; but poſſibly they ſuppoſed that he ſpake concerning ſome other perſon, or ſome other myſterie.

v. 35. it came to paſſe] Matth. 20. 29. Mark 10. 46.

nigh unto Jericho] Jericho was a city in the tribe of Benjamin, Joſh. 18. 21. once great and populous. See concerning it, Joſh. 2. 1. and 6. 1. it was deſtroyed by Joſhua, and there was a curſe pronounced on the repairer thereof, Joſh. 6. 16. it was reedifyed by Hiel, 1 Kings 16. 34. in the ſiege of Jeruſalem by the Romans, propter perfidiam civium, for the perfidiouſneſſe of the citizens (ſaith Jerom de loc. Hebraic.) it was taken and deſtroyed, and repaired again, a third city being there built, which Jerom ſaith remained to his time.

a certain blinde man] Bartimæus, Mark 10. 46. this Evangeliſt nameth one blinde man, (ſo doth S. Mark alſo) who, it ſeemeth, was beſt known of the two mentioned by Matth. 20. 29. that which is here hiſtoriſied of Bartimæus. verſe 35, 36, 37, 38. probably was at Chriſt entrance into Jericho, but that which followeth to the end of the Chapter concerning reſtoring his ſight,&c. was done at his going away from the city, as the other two Evangeliſts write.

v. 36. hearing the multitude paſſe by] Matth. 20. 30.

v. 38. Jeſus thou Son of David] Matth. 20. 30.

v. 39. rebuked him] Matth. 20. 31.

but he cryed ſo much the more] The multitude reproved him, and enjoyned him ſilence, as not willing that he ſhould trouble Chriſt with clamours; but he cryed ſo much the louder; not that his mercy needed to be awaked with ſuch cries, nec clamoribus admonendus eſt, qui cogitationes videt, Fulgentius de perſona Chriſti lib. 2. neither is he to be admoniſhed with clamours, which ſeeth the thoughts: but this was an effect of the petitioners confidence: true faith (like water ſources) by ſo much more ſtrongly breaketh over all lets, by how much more it is dammed up: all oppoſitions ſtrive with it, as the winde with the fire, to enflame it more: let no afflictions ſtop our mouths, but rather adminiſter matter of more fervencie in our prayers. See Chap. 22. 44.

thou Son of David] They uſed ſo to ſtile the Meſſias, becauſe they knew he ſhould come of the ſtock of David, Pſalm 132. 11. Acts 2. 30.

v. 40. Jeſus ſtood and commanded] Chriſt loveth the importunity of faith, as verſe 1. See Pſalm 9. 18.

v. 41. what wilt thou,&c?] Thus he ſpeaketh, not becauſe he was ignorant what the blinde man deſired, who could reſtore him ſight. (See Matth. 6. 8.) but for the ſpectatours ſake, that they might take the more notice of the miracle done: God beſt knoweth what we want, but will have us performe our duty in aſking (ut cor ad orationem excitet, Greg. hom. 2. that he may ſtir up, and awake our heart to prayer) and as occaſion ſerveth, teſtifie to others what we beg of him, that others may with us be moved to praiſe and glorifie him.

v. 42. thy faith hath ſaved thee] Here, as in many other like places, Chap. 7. 50. Chap. 17. 19.&c. he attributes that to faith, which is proper to Chriſt, whoſe power to ſave, faith apprehendeth, and applyeth to us for our ſalvation.

v. 43. and immediately he received his ſight] This ſheweth that he is that eternal word John 1. 1. which made all things, and who alone can repair that which is decayed: and thus he exemplieth his promiſe; Ask and ye ſhall have, Matth. 7.

glorifying God] This is the double effect of the miracle: he aſcribeth the power and mercy which cured him to God: here was his gratitude. So did that Samaritan, Chap. 17. 15. and the people which ſaw it, they praiſe God on his behalf, while their blaſphemous doctors, attribute that which he did, to Beelzebub.

CHAP. XIX.

Verſe 2. C*Hief among the Publicans*] That Chriſt vouchſafed his preſence in Jericho (once ſubject to ſo grievous a curſe, c.13.35.) exemplifieth two notable things. Firſt, that he who came to ſave ſinners, and deliver from the curſe, called and ſaved ſome out of the moſt infamous and deſpicable places; as Samaria, John 4.39. Galile, Mat.4, &c. that we may know, that in Chriſt, there is neither Jew nor Grecian, bond nor free; all are one in him, who is rich in mercy to all that call upon him. See Rom.10.12. Gal.3.28. Secondly, that it was poſſible for rich men to be ſaved, he demonſtrateth in the example of Zacheus; becauſe, though it be very rare, yet is it poſſible that God ſhould touch the heart of rich men, cauſing them to give liberally to the poor, and to reſtore all that which they have evilly gotten, or detained from others; ſo repenting and believing they may be ſaved. Zache is here called ἀρχιτελώνης, a chief Publican, or chief Officer among them, or a Collector-general for that place.

v. 3. who he was] That is, what manner of perſon he was, of whom he had heard ſo much.

becauſe he was of a low ſtature] Having heard much of the fame of Jeſus, and by the multitude attending him, that he was now come into Jerico, he might poſſibly out of a natural deſire to ſatisfie his own minde, reſolve to overcome the lets thereto: but God had another work in hand, which was to bring ſalvation to his houſe; and therefore by his ſecret providence, all hinderances wrought to the greater evidence of Zache's converſion: ſo his low ſtature ſending him up into the Sycamore-tree: and his wealth (which was a common impediment to others) being the matter of almes and reſtitution, rendred him the more exemplary to the multitude, and conſpicuous to Gods glory, his own and others comfort, who can imitate him. So all things work together for good to thoſe who love God, Romans 8. becauſe he loveth them firſt, 1 John 4.19. yea thoſe very things which to carnal reaſon ſeemed impediments thereto.

v. 4. into a Sycamore] It concerneth not much preciſely to know what tree this was, concerning which there are ſo many opinions: it was not of that kinde which is mentioned c.17.6. that was συκάμινος, a Sycomine tree, a kinde of Mulbery tree. See Dioſcorid. l. 1.c.144. Galen de aliment. l.2. But this is συκομορέα (as Suidas and Theophylact writeth it) or συκομωραία, as here. And ſo Greg. Nazianzen, orat. 39. readeth: The Syriac calleth it תאתא פביתתא titho phacchibotho, a wilde Fig, Hebr. שקמים, which grew plentifully in thoſe champain countries, 1 Kings 10. 27. 2 Chron. 1. 15. See Chryſoſt. Tom.7.p.404. edit. Savil. Gregor. Nazianzen orat 29.

v. 5. to day I muſt abide at thy houſe] Chriſt expected not his invitation, but in mercy prevented him, who probably durſt not have invited him: he that was ambitious but to ſee Chriſt, obtaineth much more, to entertain him at his houſe, and to hear him open the myſteries of eternal life and ſalvation: God every where preventeth us, ſaith Theophylact, he is a plentiful rewarder of them that ſeek him, giving them who but ſet themſelves in the way, more then they could ask or think, Eph.3.20. See c.1.13. 1 King.3.12,13. when Chriſt asketh of us, he meaneth to give ſome unvaluable bleſſing to us.

v. 6. and he made haſte and came down] Chriſt had made him willing, præparavit ſibi ejus animum cujus elegit hoſpitium, Proſper. cont. Collat. he prepared his minde to receive him whoſe entertainment he choſe. Thus Zache's faith brake out, in a ready and ſpeedy obedience. So Gen.22.3. Mat.4.22. And ſecondly in the joy which he conceived at Chriſts calling him. See Acts 8.39. Rom.14.17. Gal.5.22. true faith cannot be concealed, its own flame will diſcover it.

v. 7. they all murmured] That is, the moſt part of thoſe preſent, which were adverſaries; neither entertaining him their ſelves, nor willing that others ſhould, that he might ſhew them mercy: the main cauſe of their murmuring was, their malice to him, & envy to others who believed in him: theſe murmuring ſpeeches they caſt out in hope to poſſeſſe the people that he could not be the Meſſias, who frequented the company of ſinners. So c.5.30. Matth. 9.11. Luke 7.39. This was upon the matter to murmure, *quod in domum ægroti intravit medicus, Auguſt. de verb. Apoſt ſer.*8. that the Phyſitian went into the ſick mans houſe, they arranged Publicans with notorious ſinners.

v. 8. And Zacheus ſtood] Doubtleſs Chriſt ſpake many things to inſtruct him: and poſſibly Zache might ſay many, which are not here recorded in the Goſpel, whoſe ſcope is to ſet down that which may ſerve to bring us to faith and ſalvation, Joh.20.30,31. This was a ſure ſigne of Zache's converſion, effected by the providence of God, to ſtop the mouthes of murmuring and unbelieving Jews.

I reſtore him fourfold] According to the Law, Exod.22.1. Numb.5.7. And this is true repentance in caſe of injurious taking away, or detaining anothers goods, which without reſtitution, were but counterfeit and vain.

v. 9. this day is ſalvation come to this houſe] In his converſion and doing the works of holy Abraham, by Gods mercy ſhewed to him and his Family.

is the ſon of Abraham] To be a ſon of Abraham, is to be choſen freely, Rom.9.8. to walk in the ſteps and faith of Abraham, Rom. 4.11,12. and generally to do the good works of Abraham, John 8.39, whereby we may be aſſured of our election to eternal life, Rom.8.29,30. 2 Peter 1.10.

v. 10. the ſon of man is come to ſeek, &c.] Matthew 18.11. Hereby he confuteth their murmuring; ſhewing the end of his coming into the World, which was to ſeek and ſave ſinners, 1 Tim. 1. 15. Mark 2.17. Matth. 9.31. therefore among the reſt he came to call Zacheus. That which was loſt by original, as alſo actual ſins, as Auguſtine ep. 106. underſtandeth. As alſo Ambroſ in Luc. l.7. 15. and *Proſper. adverſ. Collat.c.*18. and ſo as Fulgentius ſaith, de incarnat, &c. c.8. pro mortuis natus eſt ad mortem: he was born to dye for the dead, that we, after the death of our firſt nativity which we have of the fleſh, by the grace of the Spirit might be born again to life eternal.

v. 11. kingdom of God] Meaning a temporal and earthly kingdom, ſuch as they expected by the Meſſias.

v. 12. he ſaid] See Matth.25.14.

went into a far countrey] By this parable he deſcribeth his going up again into his kingdom of glory, and his return to judgement: by the ſervants are meant the faithful and Miniſters of the Church: by Citizens, verſ 14. the Jewes who rejected them: by the money, their ſeveral gifts: by their trade, the uſage of the ſame to Gods honour, and the ſalvation of his people.

v. 13. pound] Mina here tranſlated a pound, is twelve Ounces and an half: which pound according to five ſhillings the Ounce, is three pound two ſhillings and ſix pence Sterling money.

v. 14. we will not have this man reign over us] By this he taxeth the rebellion of the wicked againſt Chriſt; to whoſe power they ſhall be unwillingly ſubject, if they will not willingly be ſo to his kingdom of grace.

v. 15. when he was returned] That is, Chriſt coming in glory to judge the quick and the dead.

v. 16. then came the firſt, ſaying] In theſe ſeveral ſums and accounts, he deſcribeth the ſeveral graces and gifts of God, of which there muſt be variable accounts at the day of judgement: the firſt greatly advanced Gods glory; he ſhall have a proportionable reward: the ſecond endeavoured according to his gifts; though far ſhort of the firſt, he ſhall have a proportionable reward, and be full of glory and bleſſedneſs, though leſſe then the other. See Daniel 12.3. 1 Cor. 15.41. The third is the negligent ſervant, who making no good uſe of thoſe gifts which he had received, with his vain excuſes is condemned out of his own mouth: and that is taken away which was entruſted to him, as was the Goſpel from the Jews, Matth. 21. and given to the Gentiles, as Acts 13 46. ſee Luke 8.18. And the Spirit from Saul, 1 Sam 16.14. which was beſtowed on David; and the gifts and Apoſtleſhip from Judas beſtowed on Matthias, Acts 1.26.

v. 17. well thou good ſervant] See on Matth 25.21.

v. 18 the ſecond came] Matth.25.22. See on v 16.

v. 19 over five cities] This is to ſignifie, that the glory of his kingdom in his ſecond coming ſhould be much differing from that which now appeareth. We now painfully, through ſcorn, injury, and contempt of the World, negotiate (as it were) for our abſent Maſter; but then we ſhall be full of glory, joy, and happineſs, which Matth. 25.23. is more plainly expreſſed, by enter thou into thy maſters joy.

v. 20. and another came] Matth.25.24.

v. 21. I feared thee] Matth.25.25.

v. 22. out of thine own mouth, &c.] By the confeſſion of thine own conſcience, which telleth thee that thou oughteſt not to ſuppreſs the gifts of God, and live in idleneſs.

v. 23. my money into the bank] ἐπὶ τὴν τράπεζαν, that is, τοῖς τραπεζίταις, to the common ſtock of Bankers, which made profits of moneys by exchange, and lending out for intereſt.

v. 24. take from him] See Mat.25.28. and on v.16.

v. 25. Lord he hath ten, &c.] He is rich enough, or hath grace and glory enough: which we may not conceive Men or Angels ſhall ſay in the laſt judgement, as envying the fulneſs of glory or bleſſedneſs to any of the elect, but as witneſſing and admiring the abundant liberality of God.

v. 26. to every one that hath] Matth.13.12. and 25.29. Mark 4.25. Luke 8.18.

from him that hath not, &c.] The meaning of all is, he that faithfully uſeth the graces of God, ſhall have them increaſed: but even the common graces ſhall be taken away from him that uſeth them not to Gods glory. Some underſtand here want of charity making all gifts and excellencies void; quiſquis charitatem non habet, etiam dona quæ percepiſſe videbatur amittit, Alcvinus (after Gregor.) de confeſ. whoſoever hath not charity, loſeth alſo thoſe gifts, which he ſeemed to have obtained. See 1 Cor 13.1, &c.

v. 27. and ſlay them before me] He alludeth to the manner of men, executing rebells: the meaning is, that eternal deſtruction is prepared for Gods enemies, as Mat.25.41. this Chriſt ſpeaketh to comfort the perſecuted, and others who obſerve that the wicked flouriſh, and ſecurely deſpiſe Gods laws; aſſuring them, that though he ſuffer them to go on for a time, he will yet once appear a ſevere revenger of iniquity.

v. 28. he went before] Mark 10.32.

v. 29. when he was come nigh unto Bethpage, &c.] Mat.21.1. Mark 11.1. Here is deſcribed his laſt going up to Jeruſalem. Bethpage was a little Village of the Prieſts at the foot of the Eaſt-part of the Mount of Olives. See on Matth.21.1. of Bethany. See John 11.1.

v. 30. at your entring you ſhall finde, &c.] Mat.21.5. Chriſt being omniſcient God, as well as truly Man, ſaw the abſent as if they had been preſent. See John 1.48. all this was done that that might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the Prophet, Zachary 9.9.

v.31. if any man ask you] Chriſt preventeth ſuch difficulties as might in the execution of his command have troubled his Diſciples, though he were Lord of all, yet would he not deſtroy the civil rights of men, by taking away any thing without the owners conſent. See Matth.21.3.

v. 32. and they that were ſent, &c.] Mat. 21.6. Mark 11.4.

v. 33. the owners thereof] Mark 11.5.

v. 34. the Lord hath need of him] Mark 11.6.

v. 38. bleſſed be the king] Pſal.118.26.

peace in heaven] That God may be reconciled unto us by the Meſſias: that all glory may be given to him for his mercy ſhewed us in theſe works of Chriſt: and that the Angels, formerly our enemies for our ſin, may become friends and miniſters of our ſafety. See Coloſ.1.20.

v. 39. Maſter, rebuke thy diſciples] Matth.21.15. That this acclamation ceaſed not in the way, but came into the very Temple, the children there crying Hoſanna, it ſtung the hearts of envious Phariſees, ſo that they came to Chriſt to ſilence them.

v.40. the ſtones would immediately cry out] Meaning that they laboured in vain to ſuppreſs his teſtimony; for God would rather cauſe the ſenſeleſs creatures to teſtifie for him (as in the renting of the vail of the Temple in his paſſion, and of the Rocks, &c. Mat.27.51.) then that his will ſhould not be done by him: and indeed Chriſts perſon, doctrine, and miracles, were ſo evident, that they could not be concealed.

v. 41. he beheld the city and wept over it] In his love to the people of Iſrael, zeal of their ſalvation, and knowledge of their final deſtruction at hand; in grief and pity he burſt out into tears: plangit eos qui neſciunt cur plangantur, Gregor. hom. 39. in Evang. he bewaileth them who knew not why they ſhould be bewailed, who rejoyced when they did evil: all this ſheweth that he took on him, as our nature, ſo all our affections without ſin: ſo oft times the Deity (as it were) reſted & clouded it ſelf under the vail of his humanity, when the accompliſhment of the work of our redemption required his paſſion, or compaſſion. See Hebr.4.15. He was the Miniſter of the circumciſion, Rom. 15. 8. ſent to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, Mat.15.24. Seeing therefore how wilfully they periſhed, for whoſe ſalvation principally he was ſent; and that the elect city which God had choſen to put his name there, rejected their Saviour, out of a fatherly and deep compaſsion, he wept for them who were not ſenſible of their own miſery.

v. 42. if thou hadſt known] It is a pathetical ſpeech, and therefore abrupt: abundance of affectionate thoughts, as it were thronging the heart, like ſome violent preaſe of people at a door, hinder each others paſſage: the ſentence may be ſupplyed with would God, or how happy were it for thee, if, &c. The ſum is, I do now preſent the fulfilling of the promiſe for thy ſalvation; but thy deſtruction is near, becauſe thou wilt not receive it, nor underſtand that which is ſo plainly taught thee: thus hath your pride, who ſay you are wiſe and holy, blinded you. Extrema dementia eſt, imprudentiam ſuam non ſentire, & iniq; agentes non agnoſcere peccatum, it is extream dotage not to be ſenſible of ones own folly; and ſinning, not to acknowledge our iniquity. (Theodoret in Ger. 8.) and to be unwilling to learn: for as Chryſoſtom de reprehenſ. ferend. ſaith, it is no fault to be ignorant, but to be unwilling to learn.

the things which belong unto thy peace] which thou now heareſt ſpoken, and ſeeſt done by me; all but for thy malice and obſtinacy blinding thee ſhould bring thee to believe, to be juſtified, and to have peace with God.

See Matth.7. 28. 29. Joh. 7.46. the Syriac giveth it, all the people appenſus erat ei, ut audiret eum; where, all, is put for a great or major part of them that heard.

and the Scribes] γραμματεῖς: Suidas interpreteth this by νοτάριος: a Notary, whoſe office was to write, and recite the written publick acts: but in the New Teſtament, they were interpreters of the Law alſo: There were of thoſe two ſorts. 1. Laiks which were called γραμματεῖς λαοῦ, Scribes of the people, Matth. 2.4. publick Notaries in drawing up Deeds, Contracts, and ſuch like ſecular writings. To theſe Pſal 45.1. alludeth, My tongue is the pen (סופר מהיר ſopher mahir. 70. γραμματέως ὀξυγράφου) of a ſwift writer: out of theſe poſsibly the Kings choſe ſome to be Secretaries of State: ſuch were called γραμματεῖς τοῦ βασιλέως, 2 Kings 12.10. ספר המלך ſopher hammelech. So, 2 Sam. 20. 25. 2. The other ſort were Eccleſiaſticks: their office was to tranſcribe, reade, and expound the Law of God, and therefore were called δευτερωταὶ τοῦ νόμου. Epiphan. adv. hæreſ. lib. 1. cap. 15. Interpreters, and Doctors of the Law. So was Saphan, 2 Kings 22.3. ספר בית יהוה Sopher beth Jehova, a Scribe of the houſe of God. So was alſo Ezra, Ezra 7.6. סופר מהיר בתורת משה, A ready or a ſwift Scribe in the Law of Moſes: Theſe being converſant in Scriptures, were principally Text-men, cleaving to the written Word of God, whereas the Phariſees were mainly for traditions of the Elders. And it is obſervable, that the Scribes and Phariſees, agreeing in one reſolution of malicing and calumniating Chriſt, yet much differed in their grounds. So Matth. 9. 3. the Scribes accuſed him of blaſphemy; but v. 11. the Phariſees accuſed him of eating with Publicans and Sinners: So Mark 7.3, &c. They queſtion him concerning the breach of traditions.

came upon him] Gr. ἐπέστησαν; the ſame word is uſed, c.2. 9. though there concerning good, but here for evil. The Syriac giveth it, there aroſe up againſt him; ſee Matth. 21. 23. Mark 11.27. See note on c.14.1.

v. 2. by what authority] See Matth. 21.23. Mark 11. 28. Gr. ἐν ποίᾳ ἐξουσίᾳ, by what power, ἐν. here ſignifieth by, as alſo Hebr. 1. 1. he hath ſpoken unto us ἐν υἱῷ, by his Son, becauſe he caſt out the buyers and ſellers out of the temple, and alſo taught the people; they not knowing or acknowledging him to be the Meſſias; and conceiving that the government of the temple, and matters of religion was in their power and diſpoſing, queſtion him by what authority he did thoſe things. See 1 Kings 22. 24.

v. 3. I will alſo ask you, &c.] See Matth. 21. 24.

v. 4. the baptiſm of John, &c.] By baptiſme he ſignifieth the doctrine and whole miniſtery of John, bearing witneſſe to Chriſt.

was it from heaven or of men?] That is, of divine, or humane inſtitution? See Acts 5. 38. Chriſt underſtanding their intention to be onely that they might calumniate, not that they might learn and believe; anſwereth their queſtion by a queſtion, and that very ſatisfactory, if they would have underſtood: for ſeeing John Baptiſt teſtified concerning Chriſt, that he was the promiſed Meſſias, the Son of God; they ought to have believed John, whom they believed ſent of God: and in ſo doing, they ſhould not have doubted his authority to purge his temple, and to preach: withall he taxeth their perverſe unbelief, who knowing in their conſciences that Johns doctrine was from heaven, and that he baptized in the name of Chriſt, yet would not believe his teſtimony concerning Chriſt. See John 3. 36.

v. 5. they reaſoned with themſelves, &c. Matth 21. 25.

v. 6. but if we ſay of men] Matth. 21. 26. they feared to be ſtoned by the people as blaſphemers; but fear not Gods judgement on their hypocriſie, who withheld the truth in unrighteouſneſſe: diſſembling their knowledge, leſt their ſecular gains or reputation ſhould be impeached.

v. 7. they anſwered that they could not tell] Matth. 21. 27. thus doth Gods wiſdom non-plus mans, and drive it into unrecoverable ſtraits and diſadvantages, whence it cannot unwinde it ſelf. See 1 Cor. 3. 19. here was a miſerable refuge, to lye againſt their own conſciences, before him who is greater then all hearts, and knoweth all things: 1 John 3.

v. 8. Neither tell I you] You diſſemble this becauſe you would not confeſſe your wilful unbelief, and therefore I will not anſwer you. Matth. 21. 27.

v. 9. a certain man planted a vineyard] Matth. 21. 33. Mark 12. 1. Iſaiah 5. 1. Jer. 2. 21. which is interpreted, Iſaiah 5. 7. to be the Jews: the noble vine which God brought out of Egypt, Pſalm 80. 8.

v. 10. ſent a ſervant] meaning the Prophets, to require in the name of God, fruits worthy amendment of life. See Matth. 21. 34.

beat him, and ſent him away empty] Matth. 21. 35. the meaning is, they abuſed, and perſecuted the prophets. See 2 Chron. 36. 16, &c. and ſent them away empty, without the fruits which God expected; which fruits are ſpecified, Iſaiah 5. 7. Gal. 5. 22, 23. in general, their ſalvation, the fruits of preaching: otherwiſe they have not laboured in vain, their work and reward being with God, Iſaiah 49. 4.

v. 11. he ſent again, &c.] See Matth. 21. 36.

v. 12. he ſent the third] By this definite number is meant many prophets, at ſeveral times.

v. 13. it may be they will reverence him] This ſheweth how Gods invincible goodneſſe ſtriveth with mans wickedneſſe, their unbelief cannot make void his truth, Rom. 3. 3. God had promiſed them a Saviour, and now he ſent him, to confirme and accompliſh the promiſes made unto the fathers, Rom. 15. 8. this ἴσως, it may be, importeth not ignorance of the event, which God foreſaw: but as it is uſually in parables, he thus accommodateth humane affections to God, that it might more evidently expreſſe their deſperate impiety in raging againſt Chriſt, whom God ſent into the world to ſave them.

v. 14. that the inheritance may be ours] Matth. 21. 37. this is to ſhew the vain and impious hope of Jews crucifying Chriſt; wherein they thought, that by taking him away, who by his mighty works appeared to be the Son of God, they ſhould keep the holy city, honour of the prieſthood, and domination over the ſaints in their own hands: two things are here remarkable: 1. the blinde ambition and avarice of the Prieſts, who would fain their uſurped authority and tyranny over mens conſciences might ſtill be upheld, to which rather then their deſires ſhould fail of effect, they would make way through the precious blood of the Lord of life: 2. the admirable goodneſſe of God which could not be defeated by ſo matchleſs wickedneſs of men; all which he wel foreſaw: but in mans greateſt malice, he made his love moſt clearly ſhine, turning it to his glory in our redemption and ſalvation.

v. 15. they caſt him out of the vineyard] Thus did they, when apprehending Chriſt, they delivered him as a blaſphemer and excommunicate perſon to the power of the Gentiles to be crucified. See Chap. 23. 1, 2, 21. 23. John 9. 22. 28.

what therefore ſhall the Lord of the vineyard do to them?] Matth. 21. 40. it is a kinde of appeal to their own conſciences; as if he had ſaid, Make the caſe your own, and tell me, what would you do to ſuch tenants? See the like, Iſaiah 5. 3, &c. Gods judgements are ſo clear, that the ſinners own conſcience ſhall acknowledge their equity, in their own ſelf-condemnation.

God forbid] Matth. 21. 41. Chriſt firſt extorted this confeſſion from themſelves: they ſaid unto him, he will miſerably deſtroy thoſe wicked men, &c. which they ſaid, when at firſt they thought ſome others, not themſelves concerned in this parable: but perceiving that themſelves were the wicked men herein perſonated, they retract their ſentence, & ſay to Jeſus, pronouncing the ſentence from their own mouth (which this Evangeliſt, and Mark. 12. 9. record) μὴ γένοιτο, let it not be. God forbid: the Syriac giveth it, this ſhall not be. We ſhall not kill the Son of God &c.

head of the corner] Matth. 21. 42. the Syr. interpreter hath præcipuum cornu anguli, קרנא here uſed, as the Hebrew קרן keren, among other ſignifications, importeth an high and eminent place, ſtrength, power, &c. So Chriſt uniteth two walls together, meeting in one angle of the corner ſtone, by which is ſignified, that Chriſt is the moſt high and powerful head of the Church of Jews and Gentiles to be united into one. See John 10. 16. Epheſ. 2. 15.

v. 18. ſhall fall upon that ſtone] They to whom he ſhall prove a rock of offence through their unbelief, 1 Cor. 1. 23. and thereby alſo provoke Chriſt to fall upon them, as a ſevere Judge to their utter deſtruction.

v. 19. againſt them] Greek, πρὸς αὐτοὺς: the Syriack giveth it, concerning them: the word is often uſed as here, for againſt: as they ſay, πρὸς φάρμακα θανάσιμα, againſt deadly poiſon; ſo was this monition of Chriſt to them, wholſome againſt their ſelf-deſtructive malice; had they not (by deſpiſing the counſel of God againſt themſelves) made that to be againſt themſelves, which otherwiſe would have been for them, becauſe it was againſt their ſin, which had infected and poyſoned their ſouls.

v. 20. ſent forth ſpies] Matth. 22. 16. v. 22. is it lawful for us] For us who are the peculiar people of God, who gave us this land according to his promiſe: thus they and the Herodians (who, as Hieronym. on Matthew 22. 16. ſaith, ſtood mainely for payment of tribute to be made to Cæſar) would have found ſomething in his anſwer, whereof they might accuſe him to the Romans, to whom they were now become tributary.

v. 23. he perceived, &c.] See Matth. 22. 18.

v. 25. Render therefore, &c.] God commanded to give every man his due, tribute to whom tribute, cuſtom to whom cuſtom is due, Rom. 13. 7. they are deceived who think ſtealing of cuſtoms due to Princes or States is no ſin, becauſe a penal ſtatute lieth thereon; if they be taken, to forfeit all: for in the Levitical law, it was penal to reſtore fourfold, for him that was found, or convicted of ſtealing ox or ſheep, &c. Exod. 22. 1, &c. yet ſuch ſtealing was no leſſe theft then before God, then now; the moral Law ſaying, Thou ſhalt not ſteal.

v. 26. could not take hold of his words, &c.] Their purpoſe being to render him odious unto the people, they hoped by this queſtion to have enſnared him, whatever he ſhould have anſwered; as if he had ſaid, It is not lawful; then they would poſſibly have cryed; Behold a ſeditious man, who (like that former Galilean) would imbark us in rebellions againſt Cæſar, and ſo bring the Roman ſword upon us; if he had ſaid, it is lawful: they would have murmured among the people that he was a flatterer of Caſar, endeavouring to confirm the ſervitude and oppreſſion of Gods people; and in caſe they could have wrought but an ill opinion of him in the people, they might deſtroy him without tumult: their chief aim was that they might finde ſome occaſion to have given him up to power and authority.

v. 27. came to him certain of the Sadduces] Matth. 22. 23. Mark 12. 18. the Sadduces, denying the reſurrection, and holding that the ſoul dyed, were off ſets of Doſitheus the Samaritan, who rejected the writings of the prophets: and theſe Sadduces received onely the five Books of Moſes: *Hieronym. adv. v. 33. Whoſe wife of them is ſhe] One abſurdity by them received, begat them many: they believed no reſurrection: thinking, that if they ſhould grant a reſurrection, they muſt hold alſo that it muſt be to an eſtate like unto this preſent; ſubject to infirmities and neceſſities: whereas Theophylact ſaith well, marriage is βοήθεια τοῦ θνητοῦ, an aid of the mortal, and ſupplement of that which periſheth in time: where then all are eternal, what needeth marriage? alſo they poſſibly thought, that if they ſhould have confeſſed that there were any angels or ſpirits, ſubſiſting without a body; then they muſt alſo have confeſſed, that ſeparated ſouls might live; therefore they denied all: that is, the beeing of angels and ſpirits, and the reſurrection of the body, and immortality of the ſoul, which the ſober Heathens believed. See Matth. 22. 29. Chriſt ſheweth them the cauſe of their groſſe errour, ignorance of the Scriptures, and power of God to raiſe the dead.

(as the Chaldees called it, and the name was now in uſe, קרבן Corban, which Joſephus lib. 4. cap. 4. Antiq. interpreteth, the gift of God) ſo is it interpreted, Mark 7. 11. κορβᾶν (ὅ ἐστι δῶρον) and Matth 15. 5. where the Greek hath δῶρον, the Syriack hath קורבני curbanni, my gift, or oblation, of the Hebrew קרב kerab: Joſephus alſo lib. 1. adv. Ap. calleth it δῶρον Θεοῦ. So here verſe 5. ſuch gifts are called ἀναθήματα, gifts conſecrated to God and holy uſes: yet by a Synechdoche, this alſo imported their treaſury in which they kept the gifts offered to God, Matth. 27. 6. it is not lawful to caſt it εἰς τὸν κορβανᾶν, which there the Syriack calleth בית קורבנא beth Curbono, the houſe of oblation: for which Mark 12. 41, 43. is ſet, γαζοφυλάκιον, the treaſury of the temple: So Suidas ſaith, Κορβονᾶς, παρὰ Ἰουδαίοις ἱερὸς θησαυρός: the Corban with the Jews was the ſacred treaſury.

one ſtone upon another] Chap. 19. 43. God would have Jeruſalem (the place which he had choſen to put his Name there, and to which he had for a time reſtrained the publick ſervice, and ſacrificing, prefiguring Chriſt the Saviour to come and ſuffer there) utterly deſtroyed, with the temple in which the Jews ſo much gloried; after that Chriſt was come, and had ſuffered there, and had accompliſhed the work of our redemption: to give the Jews to know that now all their ceremonies were ended, he being come and having finiſhed all things which they prefigured; and that they ought no more to ſtick in the now dead and antiquated letter of that Levitical law; circumciſion, ſacrifices, &c. but to come to Chriſt the end of the law to every believer. And becauſe God well knew, how unwillingly they would part from their rites, in which they had been inſtructed hitherto; and wherein they eſteemed themſelves more excellent and holy then any nation in the world, to joyn in the faith of Chriſt, and therein to be equalled with the Gentiles whom they deſpiſed; therefore God (who as Chryſoſtome adu. Jud. orat. 1. ſaith) every where preſent, and filling every place yet reduced τὴν μὲν λατρείαν, εἰς θυσίας, τὰς δὲ θυσίας εἰς τόπον, τὸν δὲ τόπον εἰς καιρὸν, τὸν δὲ καιρὸν εἰς μίαν πόλιν; his worſhip to ſacrifices, ſacrifices to a certain manner, that manner to a certain time, and that time to one city; and again overthrew that city, to declare the utter determination and abolition of that law and ceremonies, which were tyed to that place, which were no where in the whole world to be uſed but there.

v. 2. how they might kill him] The cauſe of this their ſolicitous counſail is hereto annexed: they would deſtroy Chriſt, but feared the people, leſt they ſhould reſcue him: or fall on them who aſſaulted him, who did ſo many admirable works of power and mercy among them: therefore they conſulted what probable fault they might pretend againſt him: ſo that although they would take him away, more like theeves and murderers, then Judges; yet would they have ſome ſhew of juſtice to colour their wickedneſſe.

v. 3. Then entred Satan] Matth. 26. 14. God taking from him his common graces, the devil took poſſeſſion of him. (See 1 Sam. 16. 14. v 5. and they were glad] So ſweet is revenge where the devil ruleth: ſo welcome is any thing to ſuch, which complyeth with their own miſchievous deſires and deſignes: probably they thought it ſome advantage to their cauſe, that one of Chriſts own diſciples and domeſticks, appeared on their party againſt him: therefore how ever they might think of the traytor, as Auguſtus Cæſar, or Aurelianus are ſaid to have done in ſuch caſes, yet they were glad of the treaſon.

v. 11. where is the gueſt-chamber?] Where we may eat the Paſſeover.

v. 12. a large upper room] See Mark 14. 15. the word ἀνώγεον here uſed, ſignifieth, as Suidas interpreter giveth it, cœnaculum in ſuperiore domus parte ſitum: a room in the upper part of an houſe, where they uſed to eat: ſo called in the Greek, of it diſtance from the earth; ſo the Syriac קליתא halitho which coming of קלה hala aſcendit, &c. ſignifieth a room into which they aſcended by many ſteps: ſuch rooms they had, as for ordinary entertainment of ſtrangers, ſo ſpecially for the feaſt of Paſſeover.

v. 13. and found it as he had ſaid] Both the ſignes and marks told them by Chriſt, whereby they might know the place, and be aſſured of the ſucceſſe: all which was extraordinary in reſpect of the dangerous and active malice of the Scribes and Phariſees, againſt any that ſhould entertain Chriſt, or ſo much as confeſſe him. John 9. 22. alſo in regard that it was ſo neer the feaſt, that their rooms were generally taken up before hand, by reaſon of ſo great a confluence of people, then coming up from all parts of Judea and other nations: the conſideration of all this, gave them to know that his providence ruled all; that they might not be dejected at any thing which they ſhould ſee come to paſſe contrary to their expectation in his paſſion.

v. 24. there was alſo a ſtrife] Matth. 20. 24. the occaſion of contention about ſuperiority is ſet down; whether it revived again on this occaſion: or that this Evangeliſt relating the ſame thing, followeth not the ſame order of the ſtory, it ſkilleth not much: the ſame controverſie was on foot at other times among them, Matth. 18. 1. it was a dangerous ſymptome of a great remainder of the old man in them: ſee 1 Cor. 3. 3. which ought to be a document of caution and humility to us; conſidering men otherwiſe ſo excellent, had yet ſuch failings: as alſo of confidence, that God will not caſt us off for our infirmities, who tolerated ſo much in them, whom he made lights of the world.

called benefactors] Job 12. 21. εὐεργέται: the Hebrews callled their nobles נדיבים nedibim liberall, beneficent. Pſal. 113. 8. Pſal. 47. 10. from נדב nadab, he gave willingly, or liberally. So was Ptolome king of Egypt ſtiled εὐεργέτης, from his beneficence to the cities of Greece: being at firſt given to princes and great Lords, for their perſonall vertue; at laſt it became common to Princes and Lords, as Auguſtus and other titles, whether in their perſons they were ſuch or not: the meaning of Chriſt here is, that he would not have his Miniſters of the Goſpel affect any high and ambitious titles of domination.

v. 26. is greateſt among you] In gifts, authority, or other qualities: meaning that ſuch muſt carry themſelves without pride, arrogance, ambition, violence, oppreſſion, and contempt of others; and with that humility and moderation, which would become the meaneſt in the Church: not that he appointed equality of Miniſters; for he appointed orders in the Church, which cannot be without the relations of inferiour and ſuperiour, only he prohibiteth tyranny and domineering. Rom. 12. 8. 1 Cor. 12. 28. 1 Tim. 5. 17. Hebr. 13. 17. 24. 1 Pet. 5. 3.

v. 27. Whether is greater] By another argument he teacheth them, that they are not called to rule, and domineer, but to ſerve: as if he ſaid, I might juſtly challenge dominion: yet have I taken on me the form of a ſervant, who am Lord over all; I came to ſerve, not to be ſerved: how much leſſe ought you to dream of dominion, and worldly greatneſs?

v. 28. Ye are they which continued, &c.] Matth. 19. 28. he declareth that they who had ſhared with him in his ſuffering, ſhould alſo communicate with him in glory.

v. 29. I appoint unto you a kingdom] As if he ſaid: your preſent contention is vain: you are appointed to an heavenly kingdom: only learn patience of me: and be contented to go to that joy (as I ſhall do) by the way of temporall afflictions: ſhake off this dream of ſecular greatneſs and lift up your mindes to eternall bleſſedneſs: here we muſt ſerve, that we may reign there.

v. 30. That ye may eat and drinke] Matth. 19. 28. from his laſt ſupper, he deriveth this manner of ſpeaking to ſignifie the effect thereof, life eternall, by their participating of him.

ſit on thrones] Matth. 19. 28. the meaning is, that you may partake with me in glory and happineſs: now if this condition remain for you, why do you contend for a miſerable and momentary primacy in this world?

v. 31. Simon, Simon] This ingemination and doubling of his name, is to ſtir him up to a ſerious attention, & to him doth Chriſt addreſs his ſpeech, before the reſt, though all of them were concerned, firſt becauſe, he foreſaw that Peter (being more fervent and confident then the reſt, and ſo, more expoſed to Satans charges) would more grievouſly fall then his fellow diſciples: ſecondly, becauſe afterward he ſhould excel them alſo in a ſingular example of conſtancy: or as Chryſoſtom. (on John 17. 12.) thinketh, becauſe he had high thoughts, as truſting to ſome merit, of his more fervent love to Chriſt.

ſatan hath deſired, &c.] as if he ſaid: I have indeed told you of a kingdom, which I intend you: but be you not ſecure, who have a fierce and ſubtile adverſary to encounter with: ye are the good wheat: for many trials muſt you look, to cleanſe you that ye may not be caſt away with the unhappy chaffe to unquenchable fire, ſee Matth. 3. and thou Simon Peter, Satan hath deſired to overthrow thee, but he ſhall only cleanſe, and refine thee, by humbling thee in the knowledge of thy infirmity.

ſift you as wheat] this σινιάσαι Suidas interpreteth by σεῖσαι, κοσκινεῦσαι, θορυβῆσαι ταράξαι, and πειράσαι; that is to ſhake to and again, as in a ſive: to trouble, terrifie and diſcompoſe as the tumultuous waters in a ſtorm, here is the malice of Satan principally aiming at the ruin of the beſt, he paſſeth by wicked men, as his own ſlaves and vaſſals of whom he is already ſure: eos quærit dejicere quos videt ſtare. Cyprian. lib. 3. ep. 1. he is ambitious to caſt them down whom hee ſeeth ſtanding. See Iſaiah 30. 28. Amos 9. 9.

v. 32. I have prayed for thee] not for Peter only doth Chriſt mediate, but for all the faithfull. John 17. 20. and therefore he will not ſuffer us to be tempted above that we are able: whoſoever therefore faileth not in tribulation, ab illo ſe non dubitet adjuvari. Proſper. contr. Collat. let him not doubt but Chriſt ſoliciteth for him and helpeth him; ſo admirable is Gods patience, quâ contemptus parcit--- he ſpareth even being contemned, never can he want mercy, quando homini & indulgentiâ conſulit, & flagello. Seeing he provideth for man, both in indulgence and the rod. ib. Proſp. ſent.

v. 33. I am ready to go with thee, &c.] Peter ignorant of his own infirmity is thus confident; but having learned by experience that the beſt meaning man eaſily falleth into the moſt grievous ſin, if God take away his ſuſteining hand, he afterward anſwered more modeſtly Lord thou knoweſt all things, thou knoweſt that I love thee. John 21. it is a very hard matter to excell in any gifts and not be too confident thereof; which is the cauſe why God uſually humbleth thoſe by ſome great tryals whom he furniſheth with gifts extraordinary, as Paul alſo acknowledgeth. 2 Cor. 12. 7.

v. 34. And he ſaid] Matth. 26. 34. Mark 14. 30. John 13. 38.

v. 35. He ſaid unto them] Matth. 10. 9. Luke 10. 4.

ſent you without purſe] he compareth his abſence from the Diſciples before his paſſion, with that which followed after his paſſion; noting the variation of the times; as if he had ſaid, the inſtruction which I gave you for the execution of your firſt commiſſion (Matth. 10. 9. 10.) was but temporall, and for that time onely obſervable: at that time though you took no viands with you, you wanted nothing, for I did extraordinarily provide for you: by enclining their hearts to whom I ſent you, to ſupply you with all neceſſaries: I then complyed with the weakneſs of children, inſtancing my miraculous providence, now the time requireth that you be armed to encounter many difficulties, like men, to give example to ſucceeding miniſters, who are not always to expect or depend on miracles for their ſupplies in things temporal: and this which he ſaith concerning a purſe or ſword. v. 36. is to intimate their neceſſities and dangers imminent which he ſpeaking of, allayeth their unſeaſonable ambition: as if he ſaid, you contend about ſuperiority; but you muſt all undergo many neceſſities and dangers, thus he warneth and armeth them againſt imminent afflictions, ſpecially with ſpirituall arms, wherewith externall means are not to be neglected.

v. 37. Muſt yet be accompliſhed in me] that is, I who am your Lord, am now to ſuffer for the redemption of man, according as it was foretold by the Prophets.

the things concerning me] that is, which the Prophets have written, or the Law prefigured, concerning me.

have an end] all is, and ſhortly ſhall be fulfilled, for the accompliſhment of your redemption, ſo that it ſhould be an argument of your confidence, not of fear and dejection. (See Matth. 27. 38. Mark 15. 28) ſeeing that Chriſt doth indeed fulfill all that was foretold of him, thus Chriſt confirmeth the authority of Scriptures, the ſcope whereof is to bring us to Chriſt, eternall life and true happineſſe. John 17. 3.

v. 38. Here are two ſwords] this ſaid they, not underſtanding of what armour he ſpake.

it is enough] thereby teaching them that he ſpake not of a bodily armour, for which, againſt a world of enemies, many thouſand ſwords had been too few.

v. 40. And when he was] Matthew 26. 41. Mark 14. 38.

pray that ye enter not into temptation] as if he ſaid, if you are not ſolicitous for me now entring into my ſad paſſion: yet be carefull for your ſelves: you alſo are in preſent danger of being ſurpriſed with a fearfull temptation (of which v. 31. ſee 1 Pet. 5. 8.) to enter into temptation, here importeth, to be overcome thereof: we being not able of our ſelves to reſiſt, are to beg aſſiſtance and deliverance at Gods hands, in vigilant and intentive prayer.

v. 41. He was withdrawn from them] the word ἀπεσπάσθη here uſed, ſignifieth he was pulled or drawn away: it is of σπάω traho, or evello: the Syriac interpreteth it by פרק perach. which among other ſignifications, is ſeparare, ſegregare ſe, ſecedere, and thence פריק parich. remotus, abſens, diſtans. he withdrew himſelf a ſmall diſtance from his diſciples, that he might pray alone: poſſibly as men in bitterneſs of ſpirit, and anguiſh of minde, uſe to turn away, or withdraw from company. (See Gene. 43. 30. Gene. 42. 24.) to give their paſſion freer vent. ſo Chriſt having taken on him all our infirmities with out ſin, being now to wreſtle with this heavy agony and deep ſenſe of his fathers anger againſt ſinners in whoſe place he now ſtood, withdrew a little from his diſciples, leſt he ſhould have hazarded their yet weak faith, by their too neer ſenſe and apprehenſion of his bitter ſorrows.

v. 42. Remove this cup from me] this is an Hebraiſme כוס cos, by a metaphor ſignified that condition which was prepared, and imminent, whether good, or evil See Pſal. 11. 6. Iſai. 51. 17. Lam. 4. 41. Matt. 26. 22. Pſal. 75. 8. Pſal. 16. 5. & 73. 10. Ezek. 23. 33. zach. 12. 2.

not my will, but thine be done] as God, he was of the ſame wil with the father and holy Spirit: but as he was man ſubject to all our infirmities (ſin only excepted) ſo was he of another yet not a contrary will, becauſe (by the unmeaſured grace which he had received in his divine unction. John 3. 34.) he ſubjected that humane will (naturally deſiring to preſerve the humanity) unto the will of the father, even unto death, teaching us his precept. c. 11. 2. by his own preſent example, and as Bernard ſaith de. quat. mod. orandi, Deo magis committere, quàm temere aliquid apud nos definire, to commit our deſires and neceſſities to God rather then raſhly determine any thing of our ſelves, we may and do often erre in petitioning; God cannot erre in giving, we know not what to pray as we ought. Rom. 8. but God knoweth what is beſt to beſtow on us, what is good for the ſick, the Phyſitian better knoweth then the patient himſelf.

v. 43. Strengthning him] Not by communication of any vertue; but by preſenting his humanity the certain aſſurance of his ſpeedy victory and glory, while the deity, as it were hid his light and comfortable preſence.

v. 44. In an agony] That is, a vehement conflict in his ſoul, through the deepeſt ſenſe of his fathers wrath againſt ſinners, for whom he now ſtood as a ſurety and redeemer 2 Cor. 5. 21.

prayed more earneſtly] more fervently, for he wreſtled not onely with the terrours of death as other mere men are wont to do (for then many Martyrs might have ſeemed more conſtant and reſolute then he) but with the terrible juſtice of God powring out his anger on ſins, then which nothing more dreadfull can be thought of; for he bare the burden of all our ſins, Iſai. 53. 4. 5. 6. and what ever puniſhments were thereto due, this conflict therefore, and paſſion of Chriſt is the ſum of our conſolation: he having therein fully overcome, death and hell, for us; and the fear and horrour thereof: ſo that all this, leſſened not his Majeſty: but encreaſed our aſſurance of reconciliation with God and ſalvation with Chriſt riſen from the dead, Gods juſtice which we have provoked, being fully ſatisfied, by the ineſtimable merit of Chriſts paſſion.

great drops of blood] θρόμβοι αἵματος, clottered, or congealed blood: Dioſcor. l. 3. c. 44. θρόμβους αἵματος διαλύει, it diſſolveth congealed blood. So Suidas θρόμβοι ἁλῶν---παχεῖς ἅλες congealed ſalt, the Sy. giveth it droppings down of blood that is in greater and groſſer drops diſtilling.

v. 45. Sleeping for ſorrow] it ſeemeth they were ſtupified with an heavy grief, for that which he had told them: otherwiſe ſorrow and care are uſually ſleepleſs: mark how little truſt there is in frail fleſh and blood: they who had boldly promiſed (and doubtleſs meant no leſs) to go to priſon and death for Chriſt, could not ſo much as watch with him one hour in ſo grievous an affliction.

v. 46. Riſe and pray] Matth. 26. 41. See. v. 40.

v. 47. Behold a multitude] Matth. 26. 47. Mark 14. 43. John 18. 3.

to kiſs him] which was their manner of friendly ſalutation. Luk. 7. 45. Judas had given them that ſigne by which they ſhould apprehend Jeſus. Matth. 26. 48.

v. 48. Betrayeſt thou the Son of man with a kiſſe] doeſt thou clothe thy treaſon with ſhews of love? Judas would after ſuch evident detection, yet vaile his treaſon; therefore he would not act it openly: poſſibly he might fear, leſt otherwiſe he might eſcape their hands, as he had ſomtimes done: therefore he maketh ſemblance of love and friendſhip: but Chriſt diſcovereth his vain hypocriſie, under which they could not have taken him, had he not offered himſelf to that paſſion whereby he was to reedem man.

v. 49. ſhall we ſmite with the ſword] it ſeemeth they were confident of an extraordinary aſſiſtance, who durſt draw two ſwords againſt a multitude; but underſtood not that Chriſts kingdom was ſpirituall, not ſecular; and ſo not to be defended with arms and violence, but with ſpiritual armour 2 Cor. 10. 4. v. 53. But this is your hour] the time wherein God hath permitted you to rage againſt me; and wherein the Devil the Prince of darkneſs, endeavoureth by you to deſtroy me, who am the light of the world.

v. 54. Then tooke they him] Matth. 26. 57. Mark 14. 66. John 18. 12.

v. 55. When they had kindled a fire] Matth. 26. 69. Mark 14. 66. John 18. 25.

v. 56. A certain maid] Matth. 26. 69. Mark 14. 66. 67. John 18. 17.

v. 57. Woman I know him not] So dangerous a temptation is carnall fear: it was an undoubted effect of love that Peter followed Chriſt into that danger, as alſo of a violent perturbation of minde by fear, that he denied him: they that truly love God (by the grace of God) are yet of themſelves infirm, becauſe, yet, but partly fleſh, here were three immediate cauſes of Peters failing. 1. Too much confidence in himſelf. 2. The company of Chriſts enemies, with whom it is very difficult, not to fall: becauſe he ſeemeth to correct their errour, who diſſenteth from their practice. 3. The wiſdom of fleſh, here ſuggeſting to himſelf, what he once ſpake to Chriſt ſpeaking of this his paſſion. Matthew 16. 22. Ἵλεώς σοι, regard, or favour thy ſelf.

v. 58. Man, I am not] Once fallen, he could not preſently recover: the fals of a ſinner take away the preſent ſenſe of ſin, and affect the minde with ſuch a ſtupor, that therein it cannot underſtand the evil done: ſo eaſie is it for the beſt to fall, ſo hard to riſe again.

v. 59. About the ſpace of an hour after, another] Satan (who never wanteth variety of imployers) doubleth his charges, and violently followeth his miſchievous advantages upon thoſe whom he caſteth down: it ſhould enforce the Apoſtles admonition. 1 Cor. 10. 12. Wherefore let him that thinketh he ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall.

v. 60. Peter ſaid, man, I know not what thou ſayeſt] here ſeemeth much difficulty (which hath wreſted ſome learned pens into very dangerous inconveniences) in the reconciliation of the ſeeming differences between the Evangeliſts, relating the ſame ſtory of Chriſts convention before the High Prieſt, and Peters denyal, but with ſome different circumſtances: as for example.

1. The three firſt Evangeliſts relate all as acted before Caiphas, to whom Chriſt was led. Matthew 26. 57.

2. That Peter followed him thither. Matt. 26. 58. and warmed himſelf there. Mark 14. 54. Luke 22. 55.

3. That they ſtroke Chriſt in Caiphas preſence. Mark 14. 65. Matth. 26. 64. and here v. 63.

4. That two maids accuſed Peter. Matth. 26. 69. 71. Mark 14 66. 69. but here v. 58. another man ſaid: which was the ſecond charge.

5. That John 18. 24. ſaying, Annas had ſent him bound to Caiphas; yet he ſaith v. 25. Simon Peter ſtood and warmed himſelf: and then upon a ſecond charge denyed Chriſt, and upon a third v. 26. 27. that he denyed a third time.

For the reconciliation of theſe ſeeming difficulties, we muſt know. 1. That all the word of God is infallibly true, and ſuch as there cannot be any errour or falſhood in it. 2. That one of the Evangeliſts reciteth ſome things, which another, or all the reſt omitted. So that, all that which they or any of them wrote, is certainly true, though neither any one, nor all of them wrote all that which was true. See John 20. 3. and 21. 25. for inſtance: John wrote concerning Chriſts being carried to Annas firſt. (John 18. 13.) who was father in law to Caiphas (which Caiphas was High Prieſt, that is ſuffragan to Annas the High Prieſt. (See on John 18. 13. the ſame year.) this, the other three Evangeliſts omit: but relate the main actions, without this circumſtance. 3. They alſo relate Peters following of Chriſt into the High Prieſts hall: Mark and this Evangeliſt, ſpeak of his warming himſelf; but omit the place, Annas hall, which John mentioneth: alſo John ſpeaketh of his ſtanding and warming himſelf, which circumſtance appertaineth to that part of the ſtory which was acted in Annas hall, except we ſhall ſay that Malcus charge was againſt him ſtanding by a ſecond mentioned fire in Caiphas hall alſo: there being the ſame reaſon for a fire in that place as well as the other. 4. that John ſaith Chriſt was ſtrucken in Annas houſe John 18. 22. but the reſt relate it as done in Caiphas hall: either thoſe Evangeliſts obſerve not the circumſtances and order of the ſtory (omitting, that he was firſt carried to Annas, which John relateth) contented to hiſtoriſie the things themſelves: or elſe, which is poſſible, they did twice ſtrike Jeſus: ſo John ſheweth the occaſion was, their ill taking the manner of his anſwering the High Prieſt Annas Joh. 18. 22. but the other Evangeliſts relate to the matter of his anſwer. (Mat. 26. 64. &c. Mar. 14. 62. &c) as the end of their ſmiting him, & the occaſion ſubordinate thereto: that is their blindfolding him, & bidding him propheſie who ſmote him; becauſe the people eſteemed him a Prophet. 5. That Matthew and Mark ſay two maides accuſed Peter, the firſt, and ſecond time, but Luke 22. 58. it is ſaid, that firſt a maide, and then a man charged him: both are true; and John 18. 25. it is clearly reconciled, where mentioning the ſecond charge, he ſaith, εἶπον, they ſaid; that is the maid, and a man at leaſt, it may be with ſome others alſo; ſo Matthew and Mark, mention the woman in the ſecond charge: and this Evangeliſt mentioneth the man; but John ſignifieth both, if not divers others. 6. That after John had ſaid (Annas ſent him bound to Caiphas) he recordeth the ſecond denyall, it maketh not that this ſecond denyall was at Caiphas (the ſurrogates) houſe: for who knoweth not the many anticipations in ſacred hiſtories; wherein that is not firſt ſet down, which was firſt acted; as ſo, that is not alwayes to be underſtood, to be firſt in time, which is firſt ſet down in the ſeries of a ſtory: underſtand therefore the two firſt denyalls to have been at Annas houſe, and the laſt at Caiphas houſe, whence he went out and wept bitterly; for between the two firſt, and the laſt denyall, verſe 59. it evidently appeareth, that there was about an hours ſpace: and this laſt denyall was occaſioned by Malchus (whoſe ear Peter had cut off) his charge: which the other Evangeliſts omit, as alſo their carrying him to Annas, and his ſending him bound to Caiphas; which John recordeth. John 18. 13.

the cock crew] Peter Could not take warning by the word and premonition of Chriſt himſelf: but hearing the cock crow, he came to himſelf and remembred: that ſtayed him not from ſin; this occaſioned his repentance: in the firſt, Chriſt left him to himſelf; the ſenſe and ſad experience of his own diſability to reſiſt a temptation: in the ſecond, he minded him of the ſignall whereof he foretold him. The moſt powerfull means cannot awake the ſinner, untill Gods remembring ſpirit make them effectuall, the leaſt ſhall, where he ſo doth.

v. 61. Then the Lord turned back and looked on Peter] He looked back as Theophylact ſaith, ἀγαθῷ βλέμματι with a benigne aſpect: then Peter remembred; forgetting Chriſts words he fell; but recalling them to minde, he repented.

v. 62. went out and wept &c.] This was the effect of his ſight, deteſtation of his ſin, and grief that he had ſo offended a gracious God: we read that he wept, we read not that he ſatisfied: God accepteth the ſole merit of Chriſt for a full ſatisfaction for our ſins, but yet he juſtly requireth our repentance, that his mercy may have place: repentance is the key to the kingdom of grace. See Matth. 3. 2 Matth. 4. 17. Such is Gods mercy and patience (as Proſper forecited ſaith) quia parcit contemptus, parcit etiam negatus: wherein being contemned, yea being denyed, he ſpareth, and forgives.

v. 63. mocked him] Matth. 26. 67. Mark 14. 65. John 18. 22. παίζειν, whereof the word here uſed is, properly ſignifieth, to jeſt childiſhly. or fooliſhly: or that which the Hebrews expreſſe by קלס kalas which in its firſt ſignification importing, to praiſe, by an antiphraſin ſignifieth, in Hithpael, deriſit, ſubſannavit, he jeered, which is a ſcoffing by ſeeming to admire, praiſe or approve him whom he derideth: or by ſome diſgracefull terme, as, 2 Kings 2. 23. ſo עלל halal, among other ſignifications, importeth a doing or ſaying ſomething in ſcorn and contempt: ſo ſaith Theophylact; ὁ τῶν προφητῶν δεσπότης ὡς ψευδοπροφήτης χλευάζεται, the Lord of the Prophets, is mocked as a falſe Prophet; or an impoſtor.

v. 64. propheſie, who is it that ſmote thee] With theſe ſcoffing blaſphemies they inſult; becauſe the people honoured him as a Prophet.

into their councell] Their conſiſtory, or Sanhedrim; which ſate about matters of religion. See Matth. 5. 22. Matth. 26. 3. thus would they colour their malice with ſhews of juſtice and legall proceeding.

v. 67. art thou the Chriſt?] The expected Meſſias, promiſed by the Prophets; the King of Iſrael; as thy diſciples beleeve? thus they hypocritically and captiouſly aſk, not with any intent to beleeve the truth, but to finde ſomething whereof to accuſe, and condemn him as an enemy of Cæſar, or blaſphemer of God.

If I tell you, you will not beleeve] You, who would not beleeve for ſo many miracles as you have ſeen me do, will not beleeve my words; unbeleevers are ſometimes importunate to hear the word, which ſhall ſerve onely to condemn their diſobedience and unbelief. See Jer. 42. 2, 3. Jer. 43. 2. and 44. 16.

v. 68. you will not anſwer me] See chap. 20. 3, 4. 7. 17. 44. you will not be inſtructed, being reſolved, not to put my cauſe on truth, and evincing reaſon, but violence.

nor let me go] You are already reſolved to deſtroy me.

v. 69. Hereafter ſhall the Son of man] Matth. 26. 64. Mark 14. 62. at his ſecond coming he whom you now judge and condemn as a malefactour, ſhall judge you; though you deſtroy this life, he ſhall live again in heavenly Majeſty and glory.

at the right hand] In the power and glory of his heavenly kingdom. Hebr. 1. 3. and 8. 1.

v. 70. Art thou then the Son of God] As if in blaſphemous ſcorn they ſaid; thou Carpenters ſon, thou friend of Pulicans and ſinners: thou profaner of ſabbaths: thou the Son of God? See verſe 65.

ye ſay that I am] That is, I am. Mark 14. 62. or, you ſay the truth, for I am ſo.

v. 71. what need we any further, &c.] The Syriac readeth, what need we (חזוב) again any witneſſe; as the Hebr. עוד hod importeth, any addition, or a ſecond time; for they had in the night ſought for witneſſe againſt him, but found none: for many bare falſe witneſſe againſt him, but their witneſſe agreed not together. Mark 14. 55, 56. as if they ſaid, we had before, and have enough againſt him now; for he profeſſeth himſelf the Son of God: The wicked think the very profeſſion of the truth of Chriſt evidence enough to condemn the profeſſours thereof.

v. 2. perverting the nation] See Acts 17. 7.

forbidding to give tribute to Cæſar] This was a falſe calumny, as appeareth, Matth. 17. 27. & 22. 21. and here chap. 20. 25. but this they ſaid, that they might ingage Pilate the Roman deputy, in their impious quarrell. See Iſaiah 53. 2. John 6. 15.

Chriſt a King] Gre. an annointed King; Syriac that he was the king Meſſias; they took that for granted (which was moſt untrue) that the Meſſias ſhould have an externall and ſecular kingdom, glorious for wealth, armies and victories: and that under him they ſhould be delivered from all other powers, or juriſdictions; by this complaint to Pilate, they laboured to intimate, that the intereſt of Cæſar was highly concerned, by Jeſus profeſſing himſelf to be a king, and the Meſſias, or by any of the Jews beleeving the ſame.

v. 3. Pilate asked him] Matth. 27. 11. Mark 15. 2. John 18. 33.

art thou the king of the Jews?] He aſked him not whether he perverted the nation, or forbid men to pay tribute to Cæſar: it is likely that he being a vigilant deputy, had his intelligence and information concerning Chriſt: the rather for that the Herodians went with the Phariſees to catch him in this point. See Matth. 22. 16. &c. who, if he had denyed the right of Cæſar, would quickly have enformed againſt him: nor doth he mention the third cavill, as ſuſpecting him of competition for his deputyſhip, becauſe he knew him to be poor, unarmed, and a contemner of ſecular honour; but to ſatisfie the impious Jews, leſt by any malitious complaint to Cæſar, they ſhould have begotten him trouble.

thou ſaieſt it] See on John 18. 37. I have no need to affirm it, ſeeing thou ſayeſt it; thou anſwereſt thy ſelf for me.

v. 4. Then ſaid Pilate] After he had examined him in the Pretory, he giveth the Jews there attending, this anſwer at the door; I finde no fault in him worthy of death, as you ſuggeſt.

v. 5. they were more fierce] They grew more violent: as the Syriac hath it, they cryed out upon him: thinking by violence to prevail, ſeeing by right and equity they could not.

beginning from Galilee] They mention Galilee, partly to minde him of the ſedition there formerly bred: and partly to intimate that Herod might finde ſome dangerous advantage againſt him, in caſe he ſhould not hearken to their informations concerning the maintenance of Cæſars right.

v. 6. a Galilean] That is, a native, or an inhabitant of Galilee, and ſo of Herods juriſdiction.

v. 7. he ſent him to Herod] As to acquit himſelf of him; ſo to ingratiate with Herod: this was Herod Antipas; the murderer of John Baptiſt. chap. 3. 19, 20. Herod the great his ſon. Matth. 2.

was at Jeruſalem at that time] In thoſe dayes of the Paſſeover, Herod was at Jeruſalem, at the feaſt. See Exod. 23. 17.

v. 8. he had heard many things of him] See on Matth. 14. 1.

hoped to have ſeen ſome miracle] He rejoyced that Pilate ſo much honoured him, as to ſend him one that had done ſo many admirable works: as alſo in hope to ſatisfie his own curioſity, in ſeeing ſome miracle done: ſo do impious men abuſe the holy power of God, as if it were ſome ſcenicall ſpectacle, ordained for admiration, and paſtime.

v. 9. he anſwered him nothing] He knew Herod aſked not with any intent to be converted; but for his curioſity, which Chriſt would not ſatisfie.

v. 10. accuſed him] Wickedneſſe is ever jealous: they fearing leſt Chriſt might ſatisfie and ingratiate with Herod, and ſo eſcape their fury who had reſolved to deſtroy him: they repeat to Herod thoſe things whereof they had accuſed him before Pilate: the more admirable was Jeſus preſent ſilence, verſe 9. who neither by the preſence of ſo great a Prince, nor the importunate malice of his enemies, was moved to anſwer any thing.

v. 11. a gorgeous robe] Rich and honourable clothes, which they put on him in ſcorn. Gr. λαμπρὰν glittering, ſhining, or coſtly, the Syriac giveth it זהורירתא zecburitho, skarlet χλαμύδα κοκκίνην. Matth. 27. 28. a skarlet robe. So Hebr. 9. 19 skarlet wooll; all this in deriſion, becauſe Jeſus would not ſatisfie Herods vain deſires, in ſhewing ſome ſigne; had he found him guilty, he would other wayes have proceeded againſt him; this injury they did him, becauſe the Jews accuſed him of affecting a kingdom.

v. 12. Pilate and Herod were made friends] It ſeemeth their former conteſt was about juriſdiction. See chap. 13. 1. which Pilate in this inſtance ſalving, ambitious Herod was ſatisfied: curſed friendſhip and unhappy peace is that, which is made to the injury of Chriſt: nor was this blaſphemous ſcoffing of Herod long unrevenged; as Joſephus writeth Antiq. Jud. l. 18 c. 9. being accuſed to Caius Caſar, he was by him put out of his kingdom, or Tetrarchie, and his goods given to Agrippa; himſelf condemned to perpetuall baniſhment into Lions in France (ſome ſay into Spain) he died with grief.

v. 13. called together the chief Prieſts] Their Sanhedrin or great councel.

v. 14. no fault in this man] This heathens juſtifying Chriſt, condemned the Jews malice againſt him.

v. 16. I will therefore chaſtiſe him, &c.] Matth. 27. 26. Mark 15. 15. John 19. 1. Offences not capitall, the Roman preſidents uſed ſo to puniſh with ſtripes, or ſcourging: this Pilate would have done to appeaſe the Jews rage: he had not learned, that we may not do evil, that good may come thereof. Rom. 3. 8. much leſſe may we do evil, to avoid evil: he ought to have defended the innocent, and to have delivered him: but once declining from juſtice, he fell to that impious complyance with the Jews malice, which was againſt juſtice, and the teſtimony of his own conſcience.

v. 17. for of neceſſity] Of cuſtome granted them by the Romans. See Matth. 27. 15. Mark 15. 6. John 18. 39.

v. 18. they cryed out all] That is, the generality: Iſrael the now peculiar people of God, rageth and thirſteth for the holy blood of Chriſt; Pilate the heathen abhorreth ſuch cruell injuſtice. See 1. how eaſily an holy people may be miſled, or degenerate. 2. What truſt there is in fickle multitudes, who ſo quickly can change their Hoſannas to crucifiges. 3. Whither enraged malice will carry men, making profeſſours of truth do that which ſober heathens loath and are aſhamed of.

v. 19. for a certain ſedition, &c.] See on Matth. 27. 16.

v. 20. willing to releaſe Jeſus] See on Matth. 27. 17.

v. 21 but they cryed ſaying crucifie him] The vehemency of their impious deſire, cauſeth them to double their cries, to make the voice ſeem the ſtronger: thus wicked men uſe to ſecond their ſins with greater and greater wickedneſſe.

v. 22. the third time] Peter, for fear denyed Chriſt three times, and yet repented: Pilate three times juſtified Chriſt, and yet for popular favour condemned him: it may teach us, neither to deſpair if we repent, nor to preſume though we have begun well.

v. 23. chief Prieſts prevailed] Theſe voices overſwayed Pilates conſcience.

v. 24. Pilate gave ſentence] Or conſented: neither according to law, conſcience, nor cuſtome, but to pleaſe the people: poſſibly he thought to avoid an inſurrection hereby, but this injuſtice followed him: for about ſeven yeers after, being baniſhed to Lyons, and reduced to miſerable ſtraits, he ſlew himſelf.

v. 25. Jeſus to their will] That is, to crucifie and do what they would with him.

v. 26. as they led him away] Matth. 27. 32. Mark 15. 21.

they laid hold upon Simon a Cyrenian] That is, the ſouldiers took him to carry the croſſe of Chriſt: there are many Simons mentioned in the Goſpel; Simon Peter. Matth. 10. 2. Simon the Canaanite. Matth. 13. 4. Simon the leper. Matth. 26. 6. Simon father of Judas Iſcariot. John 13. 2. Simon the tanner. Acts 9. 43. Simon Zelotes. Marcellin. l.* 22. hom. de Paſtor. aſcript. Auguſtino. here Simon the Cyrenian; that is, ἀπὸ Κυρήνης Suidas. Simon a man of Cyrene, father of Alexander and Rufus. Mark 15. 21. Chriſt firſt bare his croſſe, but as they went between the Pretorie and Calvary, they met with this Simon coming out of the countrey. Mark 15. 21. and they compelled him to bear the croſſe of Jeſus. Hierom on Matth. 27. 32. Chriſt being wearied with watching, ſtripes, and ſo long attendance on the varieties of judges, was not able any further to bear ſuch a weight, as being man ſubject to all infirmities, without ſinne, to ſuffer for mans redemption; therefore the next ſeeming-ſtrong man they meet, they command him to carry it for him: ſo he firſt ſet up the trophe of his croſſe, and then delivered it to the Martyrs to erect it, ſaid Ambroſ. in Luc. l. 10. this came to the lot of Simon father of Alexander and Rufus (which were either Chriſts diſciples, or men well known of them; for of ſuch he ſeemeth to ſpeak.) Such was the unbridled liberty of the Roman ſouldiers, under whoſe command the Jews then were; which their inteſtine ſeditions brought upon them: by the quarrels of ambitious Ariſtobulus and Hircanus, calling in forreign forces to aid them: So that they who would not, according to Gods ordinance maintain the ſweet bond of mutuall peace, nor obey their ſuperiours, now ſuffered the grievous inſolencies of ſtrangers, ruling over them, in an arbitrary way: the like diſſentions in the republikes of Greece and Rome, have found the like event: we have ſmarted for the ſame fault, God grant we do not again.

v. 27. and of women which bewayled him] A great multitude followed him: ſome to inſult, ſome of thoſe of whom the Phariſes ſpake. John 7. 49. among them many women, ſome who beleeved in him: and becauſe they are uſually more compaſſionate, them Chriſt admoniſheth to weep for themſelves, for the imminent deſtruction which would be moſt grievous to them.

28. daughters of Jeruſalem] Women of Jeruſalem; it is an Hebraiſme.

weep not for me, but weep for your ſelves] He relateth in this prohibition, as to the ſupream cauſe of his preſent paſſion (Gods counſell and his complyance thereto) ſo alſo to the end thereof, Gods glory, his exaltation to Gods right hand, and mans ſalvation hereby accompliſhed: in his admonition he pointeth at the ſad calamity in their ſiege by the ſword, peſtilence, and famine, ſo grievous, that mothers ſhould eat their own dear children.

v. 29. The dayes are comming] In the deſtruction of Jeruſalem by the Roman.

Bleſſed are the barren] He further deſcribeth the bitter ſorrow of that tender ſex in publike calamities, more afflicted with their helpleſſe childrens ſufferings, then their own.

v. 30. then they ſhall begin, &c.] See Iſaiah 2. 19. Hoſ. 10. 8. Rev. 6. 16.

fall on us] He expreſſeth the paſſions of men in extream agonies, wiſhing rather to die ſpeedily, then to live in the lingring miſery of famine: or deſiring rather any wayes to hide themſelves, then to be expoſed to publike ruine.

v. 31. For if they do theſe things, &c.] He compareth himſelf to a green tree, leſſe combuſtible and apt to take fire? and the Jews to a dry tree: as if he ſaid, if ſo ſevere be the fire of Gods judgement, and the rage of men permitted to execute the ſame on me, who have no ſin, and matter of puniſhment in my ſelf, but onely as I ſtand in the place of ſinners: what ſhall become of thoſe veſſels of wrath. (Rom. 9. 22.) the Jews who have in them ſuch abundant matter of condemnation: in this the more, becauſe they now crucifie their Saviour and Lord of life. See Iſaiah 5. 24. and 33. 11. & 47. 14. Obad. 1. 18. Mal. 4. 1. the ſum of this proverbiall manner of ſpeaking is, if judgement be ſo heavy on me, in whom they can finde no fault, what ſhall they ſuffer who are the fuel of Gods wrath? 1 Pet. 4. 17.

v. 32. and there were alſo] Matth. 27. 38. Iſaiah 53. 12.

two other malefactours] Two other men which were malefactours; ſo that not onely on the croſſe, which Mark noteth, chap. 15. 28. but alſo in his leading out, was fulfilled that which Jeſus foretold, chap. 22. 37. out of Iſaiah 53. 12.

v. 33. is called Calvarie] Or the place of a ſkull. Matth. 27. 33. Mark 15. 22. Joh. 19. 17. See note there and Druſ. ad voc. N. T.

there they crucified him] It was then in uſe the moſt ignominious death. See Hebr. 12. 2.

v. 34. Father forgive them] Acts 7. 60. Acts 3. 17. Being now in ſuch intenſe torments, ſo purſued in death, with the inplacable malice of his undeſerved enemies, before he provided for his weeping Mother (Joh. 19. 26, 27.) he prayeth for his enemies: there is no temporal thing of ſo great importance as ſaving of ſouls: Chriſt taught us to love our enemies, not onely by precept, Matth. 5. 44. but here, by his moſt admirable example thus began he on the Croſſe, to ſhew himſelf not onely a Redeemer by his bloodſhed, but alſo a Mediatour by his interceſſion, the effect of this prayer appeared, Acts 2. 36. in Peters Sermon (addreſſed to them who had crucified the Lord of life) and the converſion of his auditors added to the Church that day. See alſo Acts 4. 4. Acts 6.7. So that by the mercy of God, they who in their ignorance impiouſly ſhed the blood of Jeſus, in the myſtery, through faith, drank the ſame to their ſalvation.

v. 35. derided him] See on c.16.14. This was an addition of ſorrow to his paſſion, that all ſorts of Jews deſpiſed him, inſulting over him: all this was that our ſin (who fell by Adams ambition) might thus be expiated, by the bitter ignominy of Chriſts paſſion.

the choſen of God] This is an epithete and title of the Meſſias. See Iſaiah 42.1.

v. 36. offering him vineger] Mixed with Myrrhe and Gall. See on John 19.29. herein was fulfilled that which was ſpoken, Pſal.69.21.

v. 37. if thou be the king of the Iews] That is, the Meſſias whom the Jews expected to deliver them: this alſo they inſultingly ſpeak, implyedly charging him with vain ambition and uſurpation of regality, and name of a King, being (as they thought) not able to deliver himſelf from the power of the Romans.

v. 38. a ſuperſcription] See on Matth. 27. 37. a title, or cauſe of his death, Auguſtine epiſt. 8. So Mark 15.26. and Matth. 27. 37. to make the ſpectators beleeve that he was therefore condemned and crucified, becauſe he affected the kingdom of Iſrael. Pilate finding no fault in him, ſet down this in place of an accuſation, which yet the Jews (ſuſpecting it, reflecting on their reputation) quarrelled at, John 19. 21.

Greek, and Latine, and Hebrew] That the thing which concerned all Nations, might thereby be divulged to all Nations. To the Eaſt by the Hebrew, to the South by the Greek, to the Weſt by the Latine: This was neceſſary in regard of the preſent confluence of people to the feaſt at Ieruſalem, from all Nations, Iohn 12.20. There were Proſelytes of all Nations, and Jews of the diſperſion among the Gentiles, who (though born of Jewiſh parents) yet ſpake the tongue of that people among whom they had been born and bred. See Acts 2.8.

v. 39. were hanged] Being nailed to the Croſſe, as the Roman manner of execution then was.

v. 40. doeſt not thou fear God] Doeth not the puniſhment thou ſuffereſt, cauſe thee to fear God, whoſe hand hath thus overtaken thee? It is a deſperate condition in the bitter effects of ſin, not to be ſenſible of the cauſe thereof.

v. 41. but this man hath done nothing amiſſe] Ipſe ſine culpa pertulit, quod nos cum culpa toleramus, Greg. hom. 22. in Evang. he ſuffered without ſin that which we ſuffer for, and with ſin.

v. 42. Lord remember me] When thou comeſt into thy glory, receive me to mercy as one of thine.

v. 43. to day thou ſhalt be with me, &c.] This day thou ſhalt be with me in Heaven. See 2 Cor. 12.2,4. Rev.2.7. By the Garden of Paradiſe where Adam was placed in his ſtate of innocency, is ſignified here (as elſewhere) the ſtate of eternal bleſſedneſs.

v. 44. about the ſixt hour] See on Mat. 27.45. Mark 15.33. about noon. His paſſion began about nine of the clock in the morning, which was their hour of prayer, and the ordinary hour of the morning Sacrifice daily offered; and ended at the ninth hour, that is about three of the clock in the afternoon: at the time of the evening Sacrifice, Mark 15.25,33. and this was the time for the Paſſeover. By this time of the day God foreſhewed the ſufferings of Chriſt in times evening (the laſt dayes, Hebr.1.2. 1 Pet. 1. 19,20.) about the ſame time of the day when the Paſchal Lamb uſually died. See Exod. 12.6. בין הערבים between the two evenings, that is, as the 70. give it πρὸς ἑσπέραν, towards the evening, in the afternoon, before Sun-ſetting. All the forenoon was counted morning, and all the afternoon evening: ſo their later evening began at Sun-ſetting. Joſh. 10.26,27.

over all the earth] Or land.

v. 45.]the vail of the temple was rent] Syr. the face of the port of the temple. Gr. καταπέτασμα τοῦ ναοῦ, the hanging, which divided (as ſome think) the Holy of Holies, from the holy place: as others, with Jerome, the holy place into which the Prieſts went to officiate, from the outward Court: it is uncertain which was rent now. See *Iſ. Caſaubon exerc.*16.*N.*127. *Ioh. Druſ. præt.l.*1.*in Mat.*27.51. In this relation Luke prepoſſeſſeth that part of the ſtory, which ſhould have fallen with Chriſts giving up the ghoſt, Mat.27.50. omitting ſome things wch the other Evangel. recite. See *Aug. de conſ. Evan.l.*3.*c.*19.

v. 46. into thy hands I commend, &c.] Pſal.31.5.

he gave up the ghoſt] Mat.27.50. He died. It appeareth that this his bitter paſſion on the Croſſe laſted full three hours.

v. 47. when the centurion] Mat.27.54. the Roman Captain, who commanded the Souldiers who crucified Chriſt.

he glorified God] Convinced in conſcience by that he ſaw, he confeſſed the truth. See Mat. 27.54. See John 7.17. confeſſing the truth in ſuch caſe is to glorifie God.

v. 48. ſmote their breaſts] c.18.13. As being toucht at heart for that which they and the reſt had done, in giving their voices to crucifie Chriſt.

v. 49. all his acquaintance] All who were preſent.

ſtood afar off] For fear of the Jewiſh fury, they durſt not appear neer him: So was that fulfilled in him, which was written, Pſal.88.18.

v. 50. a man named Joſeph] Mat.27.57. of Arimathea, to diſtinguiſh him from others named Ioſeph, Acts 1.13. Matth.1. 18. &c. Some think Arimathea the ſame which is called Ramah in mount Ephraim, where Samuel dwelt, about 20 miles diſtant from Ieruſalem, 1 Sam.1.1. &c. Ierom. de loc. Hebraic. calleth it Armatha Sophim, Unde fuit Ioſeph qui in Evangeliis, ab Arimathi eſſe ſcribitur, whence Ioſeph was, who in the Goſpels is called Ioſeph of Arimathea. Matthew calleth him a rich man, and Mark 15.43. an honourable Counſellour. This Evangeliſt, to Counſellour, addeth the beſt Epithets, good and juſt. All to ſhew how he had the eaſier acceſſe to Pilate, and the more ready favour to take down the body of Jeſus; which probably a poor obſcure man could not have obtained; he was a Diſciple of Chriſt, Iohn 19.38.

v. 51. waited for the kingdom of God] He looked for the Redeemer, the Meſſias, and his kingdom.

v. 52. begged the body, &c.] Mat.27.58.

v. 53. never man before was layed] Thus Gods providence diſpoſed it, leſt, had he been buried in ſome old Sepulchre, the unbelieving Jews ſhould have ſaid after his reſurrection, that it was ſome other riſen from the dead, & not Chriſt. *Ier. in Mat.*27. Or that he was raiſed again by the vertue of ſome other there interred, 2 as Kings 13.21.

v. 54. that day was the preparation, &c.] Wherein they prepared all neceſſaries for the feaſt.

v. 55. and beheld the ſepulchre] Mat.27.61.

v. 56. according to the commandement] Which forbad them to do any ſervile work on the Sabbath dayes.

CHAP. XXIIII.

Verſ 1. V*Pon the firſt day of the week*] Matth. 28. 1. Mark 16.1. Iohn 20.1. which was the firſt day after the firſt Sabbath of the feaſt, which is the Lords day, 1 Cor.16.2. Rev. 1.10.

very early in the morning] Mat.28.1. Gr. the deep of the morning, Mark 16.2. ſaith λίαν πρωΐ, very early, while the Sun was riſing, though not very neer the horizon (for John 20.1. it was yet dark) but riſing toward it, as in the dawning and day-break; probably it was dark when they began to ſet out, and much more light before they came to the Sepulchre.

they came to the ſepulchre] That is, the women which came with Chriſt from Galilee, c.23.55. Mary Magdalen, Ioanna, and the other Mary (v. 10. and c. 8.2. Matth. 28.) that is Mary the mother of Iames and Ioſes, alſo the mother of Zebedes children, with many other women, Mat.27.55,56.

v. ſtone rolled away] See Mat.27 60.66.

v. 3. entred in] Into the Sepulchre, which was hewed out of a rock, like ſome vault or arched room.

v. 2.4. two men ſtood] That is, two Angels, in the form and habit of men. See Acts 1.19. Gen.18.2. Geneſis 19.5.

in ſhining garments] Of an extraordinary and heavenly luſtre. The word ἀστράπτω, ſignifieth to lighten. Vatablus interpreteth here by inſtar fulguris relucentibus. Beza: Veſtibus fulgurantibus; ſhining like lightning.

v. 5. bowed down their faces] as we uſe in aſtoniſhment and fear.

they ſaid] The Angels ſaid this unto them.

the living] Him, (that is Chriſt) who liveth.

v. 6. he is not here] The humanity of Chriſt is definite, and his body circumſcribed, and therefore cannot be in more places at once.

remember how he ſpake unto you] Chriſt had foretold them of his death & reſurrection, Mat.17.22. Mark 9.31. Iohn 9.22. And theſe women were among the Diſciples, but underſtood not, or forgat what they had heard concerning theſe things; now the Angels minde them hereof, that conſidering that nothing had befaln Chriſt but that which his ſelf had foretold them, they might beleeve that he was riſen from the dead.

v. 7. Son of man muſt be delivered, &c.] Matth.17.22.

and be crucified] Matth. 17.23.

v. 8. they remembred his words] That is, theſe words which Chriſt ſpake to them in Galilee, Matth.17.22.

v. 9. and told all theſe things] Matth.28.8.

v. 10. Ioanna and Mary] c.8.3. Μαρία Ἰακώβου, Mother, or wife of James, as Druſius thinketh. See on Matth. 10. 3.

v. 11. ſeemed to them as idle talk] Gr. before them: it is an Hebrew phraſe importing, to them, or their underſtanding: that is to the Apoſtles, and others which heard theſe things ὡσεὶ λῆρος, nugæ, ineptiæ, vain rumours, or womens tales: Theophylact interpreteth ληρεῖν, to dote; Syr. שניותא ſhoniotho, deliramenta: of the Hebr. שנה ſhana, the Syr. שנא, mutatus fuit mente, inſanivit, (ſee 1 Sam. 21. 13. Prov. 24. 21.) ſo John 10. 20. for which the Gr. have μαίνεται, he is mad: the Syr. readeth ומשנא שנא umeſhno ſheno, & inſaniendo inſanit, he is altogether mad. Thus ſeemed the womans relation to the Apoſtles, velut ægri inſomnia, as feveriſh dreams: ſuppoſing them either deluded by ſome apparition, or ſome fantacies begotten of their own fears: note here, how ſlowly the ſeeds of faith take in the thoughts of fleſh and blood: we eaſily beleeve fables, but hardly truth, how ever taught or teſtified.

v. 12. then aroſe Peter] John 20. 6. Though Peter had, out of much infirmity denied Chriſt, yet he returned to his old love and zeal to him again: ſuch is their condition who ſin not of malice, but infirmity: Iohn ran with Peter to the ſepulchre, John 20. 3. 4. wherewith they diligently examine all circumſtances, they ran with fervent deſire of ſatisfying themſelves concerning the report, but with unequall ſtrength: Iohn outran Peter, but Peter firſt entred the ſepulchre.

v. 13. and behold two of them went] Mark 16. 12. Two Diſciples, one is mentioned v. 9. among the eleven, and named Cleopas, v. 18. whoſe wife ſtood by the Croſſe, John 19. 25. Who the other was, is uncertain. Theophylact ſaith ſome ſay it was Luke. Epiphanius l. 1. hæreſ. 23. 6. ſaith Chriſt appeared to Nathanael and Cleopas. It is ſo uncertain who it was, becauſe he is not named.

called Emaus] Jerom. de loc. Hebr. ſaith, it was the place where Cleopas dwelt: it was a little old Town which the Romans afterward called Nicopolis. See Ierom. Tom. 1. Epitaph. Paul. The Evangeliſt ſeemeth not to recite it for any excellency of the place, but for the certainty of the Hiſtory.

about threeſcore furlongs] About ſeven miles and an half.

v. 14. talked together] As it commonly cometh to paſſe when ſome extraordinary accident amuſeth men.

which had happened] Concerning Chriſt, his death and reſurrection reported by the women.

v. 15. while they communed] Filled with grief they eaſe their mindes, by talking of their yet ſuppoſed dead Maſter: nor could the barbarous ingratitude of the Jewes towards Chriſt, and his ſufferings; neither the admirable works which they had ſeen him do, eaſily fall out of their mindes: now therefore he evidently fulfilleth that promiſe, Mat. 18. 20. then in a bodily preſence, which he now doeth by a ſpiritual; like a Traveller by the way he joyneth with them in company.

v. 16. but their eyes were holden] So hindred by the power and providence of God, that they could not know him. See John 20. 14. and 21. 4. in which ſenſe the Syriac ſaith, their eyes were ſhut :-So Mary Magdalen ſaw him in the Garden, but knew him not. So were theſe mens eyes held, not, that they ſaw no form, but that they miſtook the true. For though Chriſt had now a glorified body, freed from all humane neceſſities; yet was and is it a true body; which he really ſhewed to the witneſſes thereto appointed: his ſtate of glory gave immortality, it took not away nature.

v. 17. and are ſo ſad] σκυθρωποὶ, ſower countenanced, as Matth. 6. 16. So men uſe to look in ſorrow.

v. 18. named Cleopas] See on v. 13. This ſeemeth to be none of the Apoſtles: for v. 33. theſe men came the ſame hour to Ieruſalem and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them: neither could the other here mentioned, be Luke, as may appear, if we conſider the preface of the Acts of the Apoſtles.

art thou onely a ſtranger] The things they talked of were ſo publick, that it ſeemed ſtrange to them, that any man neer Ieruſalem could be ignorant thereof.

v. 19. mighty in word and deed] Powerful in divine doctrine and miracles. See Acts 7. 22.

before God] Approved for ſuch of God, and the conſciences of all good men. See Luke 2. 52.

20. chief prieſts and rulers] For they did that evil, who ſet on others to do it; the people cryed crucifie him, but per Sacerdotum perſuaſionem. Bernard. de duob. diſcip. &c. by the perſwaſion of the Prieſts: So true is that of Gregory Nazianzen orat. 1. οὐδὲν οὕτω ῥᾴδιον, ὡς τὸ γενέσθαι κακὸν: there is nothing ſo eaſie as to be made wicked, though no body lead or teach us.

v. 21. but we truſted] We hoped: they yet underſtood not what was the deliverance which Chriſt purchaſed for the elect, but looked for ſome worldly kingdom, and therein deliverance from the power of the Romans.

v. 22. women of our company] Of Chriſts diſciples. See v. 1.

made us aſtoniſhed] This ſetteth out their ſlowneſs to believe: ſo far were they from any compact in the matter of the Goſpel which they preached to the World; that after many inſtructions by Chriſt concerning his riſing again the third day, and the event it ſelf demonſtrating the truth thereof, their ſelves were very hardly brought to believe it.

v. 23. found not his body, &c.] See v. 3, 4.

v. 24. certain of them which] Peter and John, this was ſufficient confirmation of the Womens teſtimony, ſo that their unbelief was ſtrange, conſidering that they had the Word of Chriſt to forewarn them: the Womens, the two Diſciples, and the Angels teſtimony to aſſure them of the ſame: no wonder that Chriſt reproved their incredulity and hardneſs of heart, Mark 16. 14.

v. 25. O fools and ſlow of heart] ὦ ἀνόητοι: Syriac, O mindleſſe men: it is indeed the greateſt fooliſhneſs, rather to believe our own reaſon then Gods Oracles. Chriſt hitherto ſpake to them in the perſon of a ſtranger; that ſeeming to ſpeak in another mans cauſe, he might the better perſwade them; and that they being not onely Iſraelites, but alſo Chriſts Diſciples, might be aſhamed of their unbelief; in that a ſeeming-ſtranger not onely believed, but was able to convince their unbelief, by evident teſtimonies of the Prophets.

v. 26. ought not Chriſt] See 1 Pet. 1. 11. Chriſt, knowing their thoughts, cureth their unbelief, by that which they took for a ground thereof: they thought he could not riſe again, neither be the Meſſias promiſed by the Prophets, who ſuffered an ignominious death, by their hands whom (if he were the Meſſias) he came to ſave. Chriſt will therefore ſhew them out of the Prophets, that Chriſt the true Meſſias, promiſed by the Prophets, ought to ſuffer thoſe very things, which alſo were foretold by the Prophets. & that they ought not to look ſo much on the Jews malice and injuſtice, as on Gods decree, who had ſo appointed it for mans redemption, and foretold it for our confirmation. This (ought not) relateth to the predictions concerning it: as if he had ſaid; did not the Prophets foretel it? muſt not their words be true? See on Matth. 26. 54.

and to enter into his glory] This he ſaith to comfort their drooping mindes, who ſaid, v. 21. we truſted that it had been he.

v. 27. and beginning at Moſes] He began to interpret that which was written of Chriſt by Moſes; and that which the law prefigured concerning him: as alſo the writings of the ſucceeding Prophets. See v. 44.

v. 28. nigh unto the village] That is, unto Emaus.

he made as though] He ſeemed to them prepared and reſolved to go.

v. 29. they conſtrained him] They over-intreated him by their importunity, they compelled him by intreaty, not by violence; for they urged that it was neer night: probably, as Jerome ſaith, Cleopas entertained him at his own houſe, whom he found ſo expert in the Prophets; his heart burning in him with muſing who this ſhould be, who ſo admirably diſcourſed of theſe things.

30. and bleſſed it] According to the cuſtom of the Jews, among whom the Maſter of the family, or chief man of the company, gave thanks, or prayed; and then diſtributed the bread, or carved to all the company. See Matth. 14. 19. It is probable that Chriſt uſed ſome accuſtomed form of thankſgiving, or elſe ſome other action or geſture, by which theſe men knew him again, v. 35.

v. 31. vaniſhed out of their ſight] Or ceaſed to be ſeen of them; by a miraculous and unuſual manner they loſt ſight of him.

v. 32. did not our hearts burn] Were we not inwardly moved, as by a divine fervour of Gods Spirit? It intimateth a ſoveraign power and authority in the words of Chriſt. See Matth. 7. 29. John 7. 47. Pſalm 45. 2. Pſal. 39. 4. This ſheweth that they were terrified and thoughtful, as v. 37, 38. in which the ſudden recourſe of the vital ſpirits to their fountain the heart, uſe (as it were by thronging it) to make it hot and throbbing with extraordinary pulſes.

v. 33. and they roſe up the ſame hour] Conſidering the ſorrow into which the Diſciples were now plunged, they thought long to comfort them, by aſſuring them that Chriſt was riſen from the dead: therefore leaving their own preſent affairs and reſt, they intend that which was far more neceſſary: ſuch was their joy, and deſire to communicate the ſame to others: All private intereſts muſt give place to Gods honour, and the comfort and ſalvation of ſouls. Nor may we therein defer that until to morrow which can be done to day.

v. 34. ſaying, the Lord is riſen indeed] It muſt needs be late at night, when theſe two came back after ſupper from Emaus to Jeruſalem to the diſciples; yet they found them together conferring about the paſſion and reſurrection of Chriſt: and they who came to bring comfort to them, found it of them: thus God rewarded their mutual care to confirm each other: they tell how Chriſt was riſen and appeared to Cephas: ſee 1 Cor. 15. 4. that which we read, Mark 16. 13. neither believed they then, is to be underſtood diſtributively; as if he ſaid, ſome (as Thomas, John 20. 25.) believed not yet: but ſome of them believed.

v. 35. what things were done in the way] Though yet they were not fully ſetled, yet they conferred teſtimonies; ſo confirming each other: faith hath it infancy and growth.

v. 36. as they thus ſpake] Mark 16 14. John 20. 19.

peace be unto you] It was an uſuall manner of ſalutation with them: as we uſe to ſay, God ſave you, as Chap. 10.5.

v. 37. but they were terrified] Though they now confidently believed his reſurrection, yet the ſuddenneſſe of his appearing ſtartled them: poſſibly they might think it rather preſented unto them in a viſion; then that Jeſus himſelf, lately crucified, was now ſtanding alive by them: ſo hard is it to believe divine and certain truths; ſo timerous is unbelief (See Levit. 26. 36.) Faith giveth courage or confidence in greateſt dangers (Pſalm 23. 4. Pſalm 46. 3.) but unbelief cauſeth fear, where no fear is. See Matth. 14. 25.

v. 38. why do thoughts ariſe?] That is perplexities, and doubts concerning ſome deluſion.

v. 39. handle me, &c.] See John 20. 20. he admitteth the teſtimony of their own ſenſes to aſſure them it was no viſion, or ſpirit; but a true and real body riſen from the dead, which they now ſaw: what ever is eſſential to a true body glorified, is yet in Chriſts body: Fulgent. de fide orthod. ad Donat. ſaith well, If any ſhall ſo preach the truth of the Deity in Chriſt, ut ejus veram carnem negare contendat, non eſt Chriſtianus catholicus, ſed Hæreticus, &c. as that he ſhould ſtrive to deny the truth of his fleſh, or that his fleſh is true fleſh, he is not a Catholick Chriſtian, but an Heretical Maniche: and Auguſtine ep. 146. Conſentio, ego proinde Domini Corpus ita in cœlo eſſe credo, ut erat in terra quando aſcendit in cœlum, &c. I therefore believe, that the body of our Lord is in heaven, ſo as it was on earth, when he aſcended into heaven: for he ſaid to his diſciples, See my hands and my feet, handle me and ſee, &c. and again a little after he ſaith, jam igitur illa caro ſpiritale erat corpus, nec tamen ſpiritus erat, ſed corpus, &c. therefore that fleſh was then a ſpiritual body, yet was it not a ſpirit, but a body: See 1 Cor. 15. 44. if a true body obvious to ſenſe, then circumſcribed (it could not elſe be ſeen and felt) and ſo not carnally in the Sacrament under the ſpecies of bread and wine.

v. 40. he ſhewed them his hands and feet] With the prints of the nails wherewith he was faſtned to the croſſe. See John 20. 27. he that with a touch healed Malchus ear, could as eaſily have healed and taken away both wounds and ſkars; but that he who roſe again for us, would for our ſakes yet bear theſe remainds of the croſſe for a time; that he might aſſure us, that it was he, who was indeed the firſt fruits of the dead: we may not think he retaineth theſe ſtill; if while yet he bare mortal fleſh and blood, his face ſhined like the ſun in his brightneſſe, and his clothes were white as the light; what is he now in his divine glory? as he would eat before his diſciples (who had no need of meat) to teſtifie his reſurrection; ſo would he yet bear theſe ſkars: by all this, the Spirit working thereon, he fitted them with great power to teſtifie unto the world, the reſurrection of the Lord Jeſus, Acts 4. 33.

v. 41. have ye any meat?] See John 21. 5.

v. 42. a piece of a broiled fiſh] John 21. 9. 13.

v. 43. and did eat before them] Not that he was now ſubject to humane neceſſities, but onely for the greater confirmation of his diſciples faith.

v. 44. theſe are the words] As if he ſaid, this is that which I told you concerning my death, burial, reſurrection, &c. and what ever elſe was foretold of me: therefore this ſhould not ſeem any ſtrange or new thing unto you.

v. 45. Then opened he their underſtanding] As Acts 16. 14. by his holy Spirit giving them underſtanding: the word of God ſhineth as a true light, yet as the cloudy pillar was darkneſſe to the Egyptians; ſo is this to carnal and corrupted mindes: it is ſpiritually diſcerned, 1 Cor. 2. until the holy Ghoſt open the underſtanding, it cannot apprehend: ſo much need is there of the Apoſtles rule, Let him become a fool, that he may be wiſe, 1 Cor. 3. 18. there is no worſe cloud to obſcure the light of the Spirit, then confidence in our own wiſdom. See 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4. Pſal. 119. 18. 1 Cor. 3. 7.

v. 46. thus it is written] Iſaiah 53. 7. Pſal. 22. 16, &c. Pſal. 16. 10. Jonah 2. 10. Hoſ. 6. 2.

thus it behooved] That is, neceſſitate conſequentiæ, becauſe Gods counſel had ſo appointed to accompliſh mans redemption, by the death and reſurrection of Chriſt.

v. 47. ſhould be preached in his name] By his commiſſion and authority: as concerning preaching of the word: and by his grace and holy Spirit, as concerning the effect thereof in remiſſion of ſins. He began to preach repentance and remiſſion of ſins, Matth. 4. 17. and after his reſurrection commiſſionated his Apoſtles and ſucceſſours in the Miniſtery to do the ſame. See 2 Cor. 5. 20. Acts 2. 38. Acts 10 42, 43. or his name &c. that is, by his merit and mediation remiſſion of ſins is to all that believe in him.

among all nations] Pſalm. 22. 27. Pſalm 2. 8. Iſaiah 49. 6. Michah. 4. 2. Iſaiah 60. 1. See Chap. 2. 32.

v. 48. ye are witneſſes] Ye have been witneſſes of that which hitherto paſſed: and you ſhall be my witneſſes hereof unto all nations (Acts 1. 8.) concerning my doctrine, miracles, death, reſurrection, and aſcenſion into Heaven.

v. 49. the promiſe of my Father] He ſaith ἀποστέλλω, I do ſend, for, I will ſend, as the Syriack giveth it; becauſe he would ſhortly ſend: he calleth it the promiſe of his Father, becauſe God promiſed it by him: the promiſe, that is, the gifts and graces of the holy Ghoſt promiſed them. See John 14. 6. and 15. 26. Iſaiah 44. 3. Ezek. 36. 26. Joel 2. 28.

but tarry ye] You who are now fearful, ſtay at Jeruſalem expecting the fulfilling of this promiſe to confirme and aſſure you: thus will he have them ſtay, till they are compleatly armed.

endued with power] Until ye be furniſhed with the gifts of tongues and healing; as alſo with enlarged hearts, enabling you to performe the great work to which I have aſſigned you: and alſo the ſpirit of divine and undoubted fortitude.

v. 50. and he led them out as far as, &c.] Underſtand this leading out to be on the fortieth day after his reſurrection; for ſo long he was ſeen of them. Bethanie was near Jeruſalem, on the mount of Olives, Mark 11. 1. Acts 1. 12. Chriſt being to aſcend into heaven, leadeth his diſciples hither, out of Jeruſalem, leſt being ſeen, there might ariſe new troubles: and becauſe he reſerved the knowledge thereof to certain witneſſes thereto foreordained.

and bleſſed them] Like a father before his departure, praying for his children, and bleſſing them. See Gen. 27. 4. and 48. 9. and 49. 1, 2. that he lift up his hands was a fit geſture for prayer. See Exod. 17. 11. and 19. 11. as it were expreſſing whence they expected the bleſſing, 1 Tim. 2. 8. which ſeemeth a very dictate of nature, teaching men that heaven is the throne of God; ϗ ὑπέρτατα δώματα ναίειν, and that he dwelleth in the higheſt habitations; ſo alſo another, duplices tendens ad ſydera palmas.

v. 51. and it came to paſſe] Mark 16. 19. Acts 1. 9.

v. 52. and they worſhipped him] They fixed their eyes upon him, as far as they could ſee him, until the cloud took him out of their ſight, and the Angels admoniſhed them to look no longer after him with bodily eyes, Acts 1. 9. &c. which when they underſtood, they adored him in ſpirit, and confeſſion of him their Lord and Saviour, to whom all power in heaven and earth is given.

v. 53. were continually] That is daily, for otherwiſe we cannot underſtand that, Acts 1. 13. concerning their aboad in an upper room.

Amen] This word importeth the conſummation and certainty of all that which the Evangeliſt hath written. See on Matth. 28. 20. Mark 16. 20. and on John 3. 11.

ANNOTATIONS

On the Goſpell according to

S. JOHN.

The ARGUMENT.

THe holy Penmen appointed by God to write the Goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, were ſome Apoſtles, as Matthew and John; and ſome Apoſtolical men their Diſciples, as Mark and Luke.

John was one of thoſe whom Chriſt named Boanerges, Sons of Thunder; James his brother, and ſon of Zebedeus (Mark 3. 17.) His calling is recorded, Matth. 4. 21. He was the beloved Diſciple, uſually preſent at Chriſts chief miracles; as, on Tabor (Matth. 17. 1.) in raiſing Jairus daughter from the dead(Mark 5. 37.) and ſo in his Paſſion in the Garden, at the high Prieſts Hall, and under the Croſſe while he ſuffered, where he commended his Mother to his care. He lived longeſt of the Apoſtles. In Domitians time, he was baniſhed into the Iſle Pathmos, where he wrote the Revelation: After which, under Nerva, he was recalled to Epheſus, (being aged about 97 yeers, which was the one hundreth yeer of our Lord) where he wrote this Goſpel, ſome ſay, at the entreaty of the Chriſtians of Aſia, for the Refutation of Ebion, Cerinthus, and others, who blaſphemouſly denied the Deity of Chriſt: Having therefore read the other three Evangeliſts, recording principally thoſe things which concerned the Humanity and Miracles of Chriſt; that which they omitted concerning his Deity and Doctrine, this high-flying Eagle diſcovereth; his main end being to ſhew, that Chriſt is indeed the very Son of God, God manifeſted in the Fleſh, coequal, coeternal, conſubſtantial with the Father; and that we believing in him may have eternal life, John 20. 31. which he layeth down by three main Arguments: Firſt, from the effects; as before his Incarnation, in the Creation of the World; after his Incarnation by his Miracles. Secondly, from the teſtimony of men (Moſes, the Prophets; John Baptiſt, and the Apoſtles) and of God the Father and the Holy Ghoſt, evidently declaring him ſuch. Thirdly, from his Doctrine peculiar to the Meſsias, ſpeaking with power, as he that had the word of eternal life; not as the Scribes and Phariſees, as Matthew noted, Matth. 7.

Firſt therefore, he ſheweth that Chriſt is very God, as very man: as alſo, how he was manifeſted, what Diſciples he firſt had, and what beginning of miracles, unto his firſt aſcenſion to Jeruſalem, Chap. 1. 2.

Secondly, how about the firſt Paſſeover here mentioned, he entred on his publick Miniſtery, caſting the buyers and ſellers out of the Temple; inſtructed Nicodemus concerning Regeneration; returned into Galilee; diſcourſeth with the Samaritan at Jacobs Well, about true worſhip; and healeth the Rulers daughter, Chap. 3, 4.

Thirdly, How at the Feaſt he went again to Jeruſalem, and healed the Lame man at Betheſda, Chap. 5.

Fourthly, How at another Paſſeover he fed 5000. walked on the ſea, and taught concerning the Bread of Life, at which many were offended, Chap. 6.

Fifthly, How he went up to the Feaſt of Tabernacles, and taught in the Temple, Chap. 7. He diſmiſſed the Adultreſſe, by touching the Conſcience of her accuſers, Chap. 8. Healeth the blinde, Chap. 9. Diſcourſed of the good Shepherd, Chap. 10. Raiſed Lazarus, Chap. 11. Returned into the city with great Acclamations of the people, Chap. 12. Waſhes his Diſciples feet: Admoniſhed concerning Judas treaſon: And Peters denyal, Chap. 13. Taught and comforted his Diſciples, Chap. 14, 15, 16. Prayed to his Father, Chap. 17. Suffered, Chap. 18. and 19.

Laſtly, How he roſe again from the dead, and appeared to many, Chap. 20, 21.

CHAP. I.

I*N the beginning*] 1 John 1. 1. ἐν ἀρχῇ, that is, ἀπ' ἀρχῆς from before the beginning of any creatures: quod in principio erat, nunquam non erat, Fulgentius ad Thraſimund. that which was in the beginning was ever. So Chryſoſtom. hom. 2. ſaith in the beginning was, is nothing elſe, but τὸ ἀεὶ, &c. ever to be, from eternity, in the beginning, not temporal, determinate, or to be meaſured by time; but indeterminate, eternal, and before all time, Coloſ. 1. 17. ἡ ἀρχὴ ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ λόγος, Greg. Nazianzen. orat. 35. the word was the beginning in the beginning: the meaning is, the Word, that is the Son of God, had not beginning with the creatures, but was before their beginning, from eternity.

was] Not made when the creatures were, but before any of them were, he was. This ἦν is, as much as ὑφίσατο, he was in being. Being is moſt proper to God, who is יהוה; that name is of היה Haia, fuit, extitit: it ſignifieth God, qui fuit, eſt & erit. See Avenar. in היה. The Greeks expreſs it by ὁ ὢν, who is, or truly ſubſiſteth: by whom all things were made, in whom they have their being. See Revelations 1.4. See V. Shindler. Pentaglot. in היה. See Exodus 3.14. The 70. there have, ὁ ὢν, the being or exiſtence, as Suidas giveth it, ὑπάρχων, it is properly ſpoken ἐπὶ Θεοῦ, of God, & is as much as ἀΐδιος--eternal: for he is his own eternal being; ſo is none of the creatures; they have being of and in him, Acts 17.28. and had beginning in time from him.

the word] The promiſed Meſſias of whom God ſpake before to all the Fathers (it is uſual with the Hebrews to put דבר dabar: for, a word, or work, and thing, as Gen.24.50. where the 70. have τὸ πρᾶγμα, ſee Deut.19.3. 1 Kings 6.19. and 12.24. Pſal.28,2.&c) and he is the ſame who is the only interpreter of the Father, v.18. by whom God revealed his will to the Prophets, Hebr.1.1. See Jer. Paulin. ep. 2. l.2. this is, verbum ſubſtantiale, non prolativum. As Fulgent. ad Thraſymun. l.1. expreſſeth a ſubſtantial or ſubſiſting word, &c.

was with God] Coeternal, conſubſtantial, coequal with the Father, Æqualis vera divinitate, equal in his true Divinity, leſſe in his true Humanity. Fulgent. de fide orth. ad Donat. See Prov.8.22 1 Cor.1.24.

and the word was God] Chriſt is eternal God, Deus Patri, ὁμοούσιος, and συναΐδιος, conſubſtantial and coeternal with the Father. See the Nicen Creed. Athanaſ. Tom.1. ad Jovian. ep. de fide. Chriſt the Son of God did not then begin to be, when he was manifeſted in the fleſh; but was God from all eternity, made fleſh in the laſt times. Primam quippe nativitatem filii, nullatenus præceſſit æternitas patris: cujus tamen ſecundam nativitatem præceſſit temporalis nativitas matris: For the eternity of the Father did not at all precede the firſt nativity of the Son; whoſe ſecond nativity yet the temporal nativity of his Mother preceded. Fulgentius qu. ſ. de fi. orth. ad Donat.

v. 2. the ſame was, &c.] Geneſis 1. 1. God of the ſame ſubſtance with the Father. God of God; not by multiplication of the eſſence, but by unity of the Deity: For as Greg. Nazianzen ſaith, Orat. 37. The Father was that true light, &c. and the Son was that true light, &c. and the holy Ghoſt was that true light, ἦν, καὶ ἦν, καὶ ἦν, ἀλλ' ἓν ἦν. Φῶς, καὶ Φῶς, καὶ Φῶς; ἀλλ' ἓν Φῶς, εἷς Θεός. Here is a was, and was, and was, and yet but one was, or being; light, and light, and light, yet but one light, one God. So that the Word was in the beginning with God, ὡς μὲν πρὸς τὴν πηγὴν ποταμός, as Athanaſ. Tom.1. ad Serap. expreſſeth it, as the ſtream to (or in reſpect of) the Fountain.

v. 3. all things were made by him] See Col.1.16. Hebr.1.2.3. This declareth the Deity of Chriſt, for none can create, but God only. So is he equal with the Father, becauſe all things were made by him; and leſſe then the Father (in reſpect of his Humanity) in that he was made of a woman, &c. Gal.4.4. all things ſubſiſting were made by him: yet no ſin was made by him, becauſe that is no ſubſtance or nature; but the corruption of nature, as Proſper ſheweth, Epigr. See Geneſis 1. and 2. He onely is the true God: falſe Gods made not Heaven and Earth, Jer. 10.11.

v.4. in him in Chriſt the eternal Word; before he created the World: or ἐν is put for διά; ſo it ſhews the cauſe of the creatures life effectricem, and conſervatricem; effecting and preſerving, Hebr.1.2.3. Acts 17.25.28.

was the light of men] The Fountain of reaſon and underſtanding to Men, made to Gods own image: he ſpeaks not here of Angels, but of Men; nor of the Jews only, but of all ſorts of Men, as Chryſoſtome notes.

v. 5. and the light] Chriſt, who illuminateth by the holy Ghoſt, ὁ χριστὸς ἐστιν ὁ ἐν αὐτῷ φωτίζων, Athanaſ. ad Serap. it is Chriſt who enlightneth in (or by) him. And as the Sun is not leſſened, or made more dim, by giving his light to multitudes; ſo neither is Chriſt after he created the World, and theſe numberleſs creatures, ἀνεκλιπὴς, μένει μηδὲν ἐλαττούμενος, οὐδὲ ἀπονῶν ἐκ τῆς δημιουργίας τῆς πολλῆς, Chryſoſt. hom.4. in Ioh.1. He remaineth indeficient, perfect, neither diminiſhed, nor languid by that great work.

ſhineth in darkneſs] In mans minde (after the fall, full of darkneſs, Rom.1 21. Such is carnal wiſdom, Rom.8.7. and in the world, as that is a clear ſpeculum of Gods wiſdom, Ro.1.20.

comprehended it not] Underſtood it not, 1 Cor.2.14 neither acknowledged Chriſt, as v.10. to know things appertaining to the kingdom of Heaven, non-- dat natura, ſed gratia, nature giveth not, but grace, ſaith Fulgentius ad Theod. ep.6.

v. 6. there was a man] Mat.3.1. Luke 1.57.80. and 3.2.

ſent from God] Therefore (Mal.3.1.) he is callled מלאך malach, 70. ἄγγελόν μου, my Angel, which ſignifies, a Meſſenger or Ambaſſadour of Chriſt (Mark 1. 2,3.) to prepare his way, by manifeſting him to Iſrael. See Luke 3.2.

whoſe name was John] Luke 1. 13. 60. 63. Syriac יוחנן Juchannan; which name (ſaith Theophylact) is interpreted Θεοῦ χάρις, the grace of God; Hebr. יוחנן or יהוחנן Jochanan or Johhanan (See V. Shindl. pent. in חנן) Gr. Ἰωάννης; thence our name John.

v. 7. witneſſe of the light] Chriſt the light.

through him] That is, Johns teſtimony and miniſtery: not becauſe he wanted mans teſtimony, as Chryſoſt. notes, hom.5. but that men might beleeve: it was onely for our ſakes that he became man, and ſubjected himſelf to the teſtimony of man.

v. 8. he was not that light] Iohn Baptiſt was not Chriſt, that increated light, which the Jews once ſuppoſed, Luke 3.15.16.

v. 9. that was] Chriſt was the eternal light, before Iohn teſtified of him.

the true light] αὐτοφῶς, light it ſelf, original light; which properly deſerved the name of light, a light by nature; not onely by participation, as the creature hath light.

that cometh into the world] Which is born: he ſpeaketh of the common benefit of reaſon and underſtanding: no man is born without this light: though Infants have little or no uſe of reaſon, yet have they a reaſonable ſoul, apt to underſtand, though by reaſon of the infirmity of body, they little do.

v. 10. the world was made by him] As v. 3. Hebr.11.3.

knew him not] Gods wiſdom, power, and glory ſhined in all the creatures, yet they knew him not, nor glorified him as God. See Pſalm 19.1. Rom.1.21. of his manifeſtation in the fleſh he ſpeaketh, v. 11. They of whom the World was not worthy (Hebr. 11.38.) knew him, but they who love the World, know not the Maker thereof. The worldly man acknowledgeth him not; though he know as much, as ſhall ſerve to convince his conſcience: here he calleth the wicked multitude, ignorant and blinde ſinners, the World, as Chryſoſtome noteth: the Saints before his Incarnation, knew him, and expected ſalvation by him.

v. 11. he came unto his own] To Iſrael his own peculiar people: though he were in the World before (for he made, and by the ſame power, ſtill ſuſtaineth and continueth all the courſes of nature in all the creatures, Heb.1.2.3. John 5.17.) yet he ſeemed not to be preſent τῷ μήπω γνωρίζεσθαι, for that he was not yet known, or manifeſted, Chryſoſt. hom. 7. He came to his own land, Pſal. 33.12. and 78.71. and 79. 1, &c. which he choſe of all the World, for the people by whom, and the place in which he would be worſhipped: ſo as being of the ſeed of Abraham, the land of Canaan was his own countrey; and as the ſon of David, Ieruſalem was his: to theſe he came, not becauſe he had need of them; but becauſe they had need of him their promiſed Saviour and Redeemer, yet ſo fooliſh was this ingrateful people, that they would not receive him.

v. 12. but as many as received him] By true faith and obedience: which (ſaith Fulgentius ad Monim. de præd. l.1.) becauſe the evil wil of man could not deſerve, non eſt ejus cauſa, niſi ſola Dei voluntas bona; there is none other cauſe thereof then the good will of God (See Phil. 2.13.) who, though he would have all men good, yet compelleth he no man: but perſwadeth and draweth as Chryſoſtome noteth: making men willing of unwilling, by his preventing grace.

power to, &c.] This dignity, right, or priviledge, 1 John 3.1. adoption of ſons, Gal.4.5. to be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, 2 Theſ.1.5.

on his name] In Chriſt, our Mediatour and Saviour.

v. 13. the will of the fleſh] That corrupt nature of man which is contrary to the Spirit: nor by any natural courſe. See Gal.5.17.

but of God] Of God, the Fountain of regeneration and free grace.

v. 14. the word was made fleſh] Matth.1.16. The Word, the Son, not the Father, nor the holy Ghoſt, became Man, not by confuſion of natures, but by uniting the Divine and humane natures in one perſon of Chriſt, God and Man. Thus would the eternal Word become fleſh, Quando, quod fecerat, factus, opus ſuum dignatus eſt reparare. Fulgentius de myſt. mediator. ad Thraſym. l. 1. When being made, ſuch as himſelf made, he vouchſafed to (become man for the) repair (of man) his own work. He became fleſh, that is, man of a reaſonable ſoul and humane body; for ſo the Hebrews by בשר baſhar, fleſh (as the Greeks by σάρξ) underſtand the whole man conſiſting of body and ſoul, Gen.6.12. Job 12.10. Iſaiah 40.5. Rom.3.20. &c. he became man, non mutando quod erat, ſed aſſumendo quod non erat. Auguſt. Paſcent. ep. 174 Not by changing the God-head, but by aſſuming the Man-hood. So he became man as ſtill remaining God: the God-head became not a man-hood; nor the humanity, a Deity: he was made fleſh, that is, made himſelf, or aſſumed fleſh, in which, manifeſtaretur ſenſibus hominum, Aug. de trin. l.5. c.11. he might be manifeſted to the ſenſes of men: the Nicene Synod excellently determined it, ὥσπερ ἡμεῖς τὸ πνεῦμα λαμβάνοντες οὐκ ἀπολλυμεν τὴν ἰδίαν ἑαυτῶν οὐσίαν· οὕτως ὁ Κύριος γενόμενος δι' ἡμᾶς ἄνθρωπος, καὶ σῶμα φορέσας, οὐδὲν ἧττον ἦν Θεός. (*Athanaſ. Tom.*1. Synod. Nicen. contr. Ar. decret.) the meaning is; as we receiving the Spirit of God, do not thereby loſe our own being: So the Lord Jeſus, becoming Man for our ſakes, and bearing an humane body, doth notwithſtanding ſtill remain God unchangeable. His taking on him the form of a ſervant, was not any leſſening of his Deity; becauſe (ſaith *Fulgentius de incarn. & gr. Dom. c.*2.) hoc habet, ſemper eſſe quod eſt: he hath ever the ſame being. Be comforted ye ſons of God in the ſorrows of tranſitory fleſh and blood: we now decay, and muſt ſee corruption; but who can fear the reſurrection of this now corruptible fleſh? who can but ſeriouſly conſider that Chriſt, God eternal, became fleſh, to redeem this body (as well as ſoul) of ours? Quid futurus eſt homo, propter quem, Deus factus eſt homo? Proſper. ſent. ex Aug. 310. what ſhall Man once be, for whom God became Man? and again, the Deity of the eternal Word, coequal with God the Father, became partaker of our mortality, that we might be made partakers of his holy Spirit. And as Chryſoſtome ſaith, hom. 10. the beloved Son of God became the Son of Man, that he might make the ſons of Men the ſons of God.

and dwelt among us] ἐσκήνωσεν, It ſignifieth a dwelling in Tents, or Tabernacles: a ſhort time he was bodily preſent with men, until his aſcenſion: quaſi habuit inter nos tabernaculum. Budæus.

beheld his glory] the manifeſtation of his divine Majeſty, not only in his transfiguration. Matth. 17.2. 2 Pet.1.16. but alſo in many works, which ſhewed his power and glory, John 2.11. and 11.4.

as the onely begotten] As, ſignifieth not here ſimilitude, but identity, the very truth: ſuch glory as became the Son of God, and was a certain teſtimony of his Deity. Fulgentius object. Ar. diſcuſ. noteth the difference between unigenitus, the onely begotten, and primogenitus, the firſt begotten: in that Divine and Incomprehenſible generation, in which before all times he is God of God, he is the onely begotten, the Son by Nature: but in this generation wherein he became fleſh, he is the firſt-born of every creature, or the firſt-born among many brethren, Rom. 8. 29. that is, of thoſe whom he vouchſafed, through faith, to adopt his brethren.

full of grace] See Coloſ.1.19. and 2.9. As if he ſaid, he did indeed viſibly converſe, as man with man among us, but with that fulneſs of grace and truth, which never before appeared in any of the ſons of men. By grace, underſtand all the eſſentiall properties of the Godhead, power, wiſdom, righteouſneſs, goodneſs, mercy, truth, &c. which were in the Son, by that eternal and incomprehenſible generation, wherein the Father communicated his eſſence unto him. And we ſaw his glory, in many effects of his Deity, miracles, transfiguration, reſurrection, aſcenſion, and miſſion of the holy Ghoſt, enabling us with gifts of tongues, and knowledge of truth to preach the Goſpel, and to confirm the ſame with miracles.

v. 15. cried] Freely and publickly.

cometh after me] As one baptized of me: before whom I am ſent to prepare his way.

for he was before me] More excellent then I: before me, as the Lord is before his ſervant: incomparably better then I: for when John preached theſe things, Chriſt was not much known by great works done, as afterwards: and the people enclined to think that Iohn was Chriſt, Luke 3.15.

v. 16. of his fulneſs] Coloſ.1.19. Chriſt is the Fountain of grace, then fully opened, and flowing out when he came and ſhewed himſelf to the World, Zach. 13. 1. John 4. 14. and 7.38.39. Of whoſe fulneſs all we who believe, have received the gifts of grace and ſanctification, every one according to the meaſure of the gift of Chriſt, Epheſ. 4. 7. Epheſ.2.8.

grace for grace] Or grace upon grace: abundance of grace, and encreaſes of graces one by another, according to which Chriſt ſaith, to him that hath it ſhall be given, and he ſhall abound, Matth.13.12. A following grace, after a right uſe of the grace received: ſo the Goſpel is the power of God to ſalvation to every one that believeth, Rom. 1. 16. God giveth all, both the planting and increaſe; the talent and the right uſe thereof: and ſo in giving more and more grace, he doth but crown his own gifts: as when he giveth knowledge, and an heart to live thereafter; adding thereto, conſtancy, perſeverance, patience, more lively hope of ſalvation by Chriſt, &c. here is an accumulation and giving of grace upon grace, and one grace by mediation of another; yet all is but his own gift to us, and work in us, who worketh all according to the good pleaſure of his will, Epheſ. 1. 5.9. Phil.2.13. On the contrary part alſo it is very conſiderable (which the learned Iſ. Caſaubon, Exercit. 15.3. obſerveth) that God in his juſt judgement puniſheth wilful ignorance, with neceſſity of not knowing his will to ſalvation (ſee 2 Theſ. 2. 10, 11. Rom.1.21, &c.) to which he citeth the ſaying of a *Rabbin, in Pirke Aboth. c.*4. Merces præcepti eſt præceptum, & merces tranſgreſſionis eſt tranſgreſſio; the meaning is, that God rewardeth the keepers of his laws, by giving them grace every day more and more carefully to keep them; and (juſtly puniſhing ſin by ſin) he giveth over the neglecters and tranſgreſſors of his law to more and more negligence, and therein to final deſtruction. *Fulgentius de præd. ad Monim. l.*1. underſtands by grace for grace, the grace of eternal glorification, for the grace of undue juſtification; ſo as the grace of juſtification, by an undeſerved benefit putteth away all evil merit, and confirmeth the good by a continual aſſiſtance, &c. And it is therefore not unjuſtly called grace, becauſe God not only rewardeth his own gifts with gifts, but alſo becauſe there the grace of divine retribution ſo much aboundeth, that it incomparably and unſpeakably exceedeth all merit of mans will and work, though good, and given of God. That all is of free-grace, the ſame expreſſeth de incarn. & gra. &c. ſaying, a man willingly hath faith, Sed deus, qui fidem donat, ipſe hominis mutat & dirigit voluntatem: but God who giveth faith (Epheſ.2.8.) his ſelf changeth and directeth the will of man, ſo, that he may believe and obey the Goſpel.

v. 17. by Moſes] By the miniſtery of Moſes, Gal.3.19.

but grace and truth] That is, the exhibition of thoſe things which were promiſed and prefigured in the law: ſo he oppoſeth the law, to grace and truth; and becauſe the moral law did but ſhew the diſeaſe, Rom.7.7. which Chriſt onely healed; and the ceremonial law onely ſhadowed out that which Chriſt performed for us: ſo as Proſper ſaith; the law was given, that grace might be ſought for: grace was given that the law might be fulfilled, &c. ſo grace and truth are by Chriſt; for as much as, by the ſacrifice of his death-prefigured in the legal ſacrifices, he ſatisfied the juſtice of God, for the ſins of the elect, obtained favour and peace with God for them, and regenerateth them with his Spirit. For grace is it, by which God rendreth, malis bona, good to evil, (who as Proſper ſaith, *de vocat. Gent. l.*1. *c.*8. Opus ſuum, opere ſuo reparat, repaireth his own work, with his own work) whereby he freely preventeth the evil to make him juſt, and followeth the juſt (with ſupplies of grace) that he may not (again) become wicked: he preventeth him that is fallen, that he may riſe again; and followeth him whom he hath raiſed, that he may not fall away: prævenit, donans homini bonam voluntatem: ſubſequitur bene volentem, operando in illo boni operis facultatem, Fulgentius de prædeſt. l. 1. he preventeth, by giving man a good will: he followeth him willing well, by working in him ability to do the good work.

v.18. No man hath ſeen God] 1 John 4.12. 1 Tim. 6.16. That is the eſſence of God: See hereof Auguſtine ep. 6. we do not (ſaid Minucius Felix octav. anſwering an Heathen Idolater) ſhew our God, whom we adore, neither do we ſee him: yea, hence we believe him to be God, becauſe cum ſentire poſſumus, videre non poſſumus: we perceive him preſent when he thundreth, raiſeth ſtorms, reſtoreth calms — in all his works, but ſee him with mortal eyes we cannot, who is more pure then any ſenſe can apprehend. The eyes ſay, If he be not coloured per nos non intravit: he hath not paſſed in by us: the ears ſay, if he made no noiſe, he paſſed not in by us, &c. *Auguſtine tom.*9. Soliloq. c. 31. Lo he goeth by me, and I ſee him not, Iob 9.11. Wouldeſt thou ſee God with carnall eyes, when as yet thou canſt not ſee thine own ſoul, by which thou liveſt, ſpeakeſt, (and ſeeſt?) The Winde bloweth, thou heareſt the ſound, and feeleſt the violence thereof, yet canſt not ſee it; how much leſſe canſt thou in this dark houſe of clay, ſee the incomprehenſible being of God. When he appeared to Abraham, Moſes, or the Prophets, he did comply with their preſent infirmity, ſhewing them his preſence, by ſuch an appearance as they could apprehend. We ſee him now in his works, we know and believe in him through Chriſt: For as Fulgentius ſaith well, Object. Ar. diſcuſ. True faith is not ignorant, of that it believeth, though as yet it cannot ſee, that which it hopeth and believeth: we ſhall more clearly ſee him in the life to come, 1 John 3.2.

the boſom] Moſt dear, united in nature, and acquainted with all his ſecrets. See c.13.22,23.

declared him] Gave us the knowledge of God, otherwiſe unſearchable.

v.19. who art thou] For they doubted whether he were not the Chriſt, Luke 3.15.

v. 20. he confeſſed. Plainly and openly, as Acts 13.25.

v. 21. art thou Elias?] They underſtood that literally which is ſpoken Mal.4.5. which Chriſt interpreteth of Iohn Baptiſt, Matth.17. 14. And the Angel plainly told his father Zachary, Luke 1.17. that he ſhould go before the face of Chriſt in the ſpirit and power of Elias, *Non in anima ejus, nec in carne, Tertul. de anim. c.*35. fine. Neither in his ſoul, nor fleſh, but in that excellency of Spirit which the Lord would give him, as he gave of the Spirit of Moſes to the ſeventy elders. Numb. 11. 16. 17. 25. John here denyeth that he is Elias in their ſenſe.

art thou that Prophet] or a Prophet; ſpoken of Deut. 18. 15. they expected ſome notable Prophet. v. 25. John 7. 40. 41. & 6. 14. whereas Moſes ſpake of a ſucceſſion of prophets, ſuch as God would raiſe them, untill the coming of Chriſt the head of all Prophets.

v. 22. That we may give an anſwer to them] To the Sanhedrin, or great Council; whoſe authority they tacitly alleage, that they might receive from him ſome ſatisfactory anſwer, to carry back with them.

what ſayeſt thou of thy ſelf?] ſeeing thou art not as we ſuppoſed thee; declare thy ſelf; whom profeſſeſt thou thy ſelf to be?

v. 23. I am the voice] Iſaiah 40. 3. Matt. 3. 3. Luke 3. 4. one whoſe office is to lift up his voice, and cry in the ears of deaf ſinners.

in the wilderneſs] See Luke 3. 2.

make ſtrait] εὐθύνατε make plain: Iſaiah, in the letter ſpake of their marvellous deliverance under Cyrus, which was a type of our ſpirituall deliverance by Chriſt.

v. 24. The Phariſees] a moſt ſtrict ſect of the Jews. Acts 26. 5. See on Luke 14. 1.

v. 25. why baptizeſt thou?] by what authority? or, who gave thee authority, to inſtitute a new Sacrament, that indeed belongeth to God alone, of whoſe covenants the Sacraments are ſeals.

v. 26. I baptiſe with water] unto amendment of life Matth. 3. 11. that you may repent. Acts 19. 4. but Chriſt giveth the inward effect, who is the authour of baptiſme, whereof John was but a Miniſter.

v. 27. He it is who coming after me] Matth. 3. 11. See Act. 19. 4. this ὀπίσω μου, after me, relateth to that which Zachary ſaid Luke 1. 76. Thou ſhalt go before the face of the Lord, to prepare his way, the meaning is, he that followeth my outward baptiſme with the inward effect thereof: not baptiſing with water onely, as I, who am but a ſervant; but with the Holy Ghoſt, not only exhorting men to repent, and leave their ſins; but giving repentance, forgiving and waſhing away all their ſins. See v. 15.

v. 28. Bethabara] Judg. 7. 24. it was a paſſage into Canaan, and as well a type, as place of baptiſme, the entrance into the Church of Chriſt, and the eternall reſt which remaineth for us. Hebr. 4. 9.

v. 29. Behold] John ſheweth and pointeth out Chriſt preſent; herein he was more then a Prophet.

the lamb of God] alluding to the Paſcall Lamb: in Chriſt is the ſubſtance of all legall ſacrifices to take away ſins; which he did, ſuffering for them as man, and remitting them as God, he was the lamb metaphorically, in reſpect of his meekneſs, and patience. See Iſai. 53. 7. and alſo as he was a ſacrifice for our ſins, ὁ ἀμνὸς τοῦ θεοῦ: ſent of God, and accepted of God: the article hath much emphaſis, to expreſs his dignity and to diſtinguiſh him as from the typicall lamb, and other legall ſacrifices; and alſo to ſhew his relation to all that the law prefigured, or the Prophets foretold concerning him, as if hee ſaid, this is hee, to whom all theſe point.

which taketh away the ſin, &c.] ὁ αἴρων, who taketh away, as Luk. 6. 29. 30. or who beareth: the Syriac interpreter giveth it, ille qui tollit, &c. it was not poſſible that the blood of bulls and goats ſhould take away ſins. Hebr. 10. 4. this onely is he who doth it, he taketh them away continually; for though he ſuffered but once, yet the vertue thereof floweth as a continuall fountain to cleanſe us, from our ſins though not altogether, ut non ſint, (for yet we are partly fleſh and partly Spirit) yet ut non imputentur, that they ſhall be no more imputed: be comforted you penitent ſinners who can at laſt repent; no length of time can prejudicate Gods mercy: no repentance (if true and ſerious) can be too late with God, in whoſe ſight, all things both paſt and future, are preſent: If the continuance of ſins could have overcome the mercy of God; Chriſt would not have come in the laſt age of the world to take away the ſins thereof. Fulgent. venant. ep. 7. he taketh them quite away ita ut non ſint, quorum memor non erit. Ambroſ. l. 5. ep. 18. ſo that (in effect) they are not, which he will no more remember.

ſin of the world] the root (originall ſin) and the branch, the actuall, which is mortified, in them by the ſpirit, who in baptiſme put on Chriſt, the new man, and put off the old man, crucified dead and buried: See hereof Rom. 6. & 7. where he mentioneth σῶμα τῆς ἁμαρτίας, the body of ſin, and τὴν ἁμαρτίαν, ſin; becauſe he treateth not there, of remiſſion of ſins, as it is one part of juſtification, but concerning ſanctification in us begun: which remiſſion and ſanctification, though they are never divided in the ſubject (for whoſoever God juſtifieth by faith in Chriſt, them he doth alſo certainly ſanctifie by his holy ſpirit living in them) yet may they in reaſon be diſtinguiſhed: here then underſtand, a taking away of all ſin, and all the works of the devil: he ſaith of the world; that we may know that the benefit of redemption appertaineth not unto the Jews onely; but to all beleevers, of any time, place or age of the world, ſince the beginning to this preſent: therefore is he ſaid to be the lamb of God; ſlain from the foundation of the world, Reve. 13. 8. See 1 John 2. 2. Rom. 3. 29. 30. John 17. 20.

v. 30. this is he of whom, &c.] he whom you now ſee preſent: though he appear in the form of a ſervant, is incomparably more excellent then I.

v. 31. I knew him not] he knew him not by ſight, but by revelation, till he came to be baptized.

v. 32. John bare record ſaying] Matt. 3. 16. Mark 1. 10 Chriſt was teſtified to be the Son of God, by the viſible deſcenſion of the ſpirit; the fathers voice from heaven; and Johns witneſs on earth: ſee alſo 1 John 5. 7.

I ſaw the ſpirit deſcending] Mark ſaith, he ſaw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove deſcending which ſome think was by a ſpirituall viſion onely; as Ezek. 1. 1. the Prophet ſaw the heavens open: others take this to have been a viſible opening; ſo that John and the multitude preſent might perceive that it was no humane, but ſome divine buſineſs in agitation, the holy Ghoſt is God inviſible 1 Tim. 1. 17. Heb. 11. 27. and every where preſent. Pſal. 139. 7. &c. Therefore can neither be ſeen with any mortall eye; nor aſcend or deſcend; he cannot change place, who filleth all places, and is comprehended of none: but the inviſible, and incomprehenſible God; for the comfort and confirmation of his elect, manifeſted his preſence in a viſible ſhape: So, deſcended he in the form of a dove, not in the form of an Eagle, Vulture, or bird of prey: as, to intimate his goodneſs; ſo to teach us, of what ſpirit we ought to be, in harmleſſe converſation. See Matthew 10. 16. Jam. 3. 17. See Tertul. de bapt. c. 8.

v. 33. Upon whom thou ſhalt ſee the Spirit, &c.] Upon what man thou ſhalt ſee the Spirit deſcending in a viſible form, &c. he is the Chriſt: by this ſigne God revealed him to John.

with the holy Ghoſt] who giveth the effect of baptiſme, ſanctification and cleanſing from our ſins.

v. 34. That this is the Son of God] ὁ υἱὸς, That Son of God: Chryſoſtom and Cyril note the emphaſis of this article, that Son of God: the onely Son by nature (not by adoption, as are the Saints, 1 John 3. 1. 2.) the very Meſſias promiſed by the Prophets, and expected by the faithfull: this is he; look not for any other: there is not ſalvation in any other name. Acts 4. 12.

v. 35. John ſtood] In Bethabara where he uſed to baptize.

two of his Diſciples] he had many hearers; but ſome more intimate; whom he alſo privately inſtructed and prepared for the ſchool of Chriſt, he nameth here onely two in whom the effect of Johns preſent teſtimony concerning Chriſt, more evidently appeared and wrought; poſſibly more might alſo hear the ſame.

v. 36. Looking on Jeſus] Intentively, and doubtleſs with ſingular comfort, as knowing him to be the Lord and Saviour of his elect.

behold the Lamb of God] this is but a ſhort ſermon of John; but the ſum of all that he had to ſay, whoſe office was to declare Chriſt now exhibited: & this he repeates to awake the attention of his drowzie hearers, who before did not much heed what he ſaid, ſo uſe faithfull Miniſters to repeat fundamentalls of Religion untill their auditors marke and underſtand them, and make ſome good uſe thereof.

v. 37. Two Diſciples heard him ſpeak] John gathered not diſciples for himſelf, but Chriſt: theſe two are mentioned, who heard and conſidered what John ſaid: they probably heard the ſame the day before; but we read of no effect then; now we finde how they move towards Chriſt. God hath his times to call; and his word like ſeed, (though on good ground) doth not preſently ſpring up in all hearers; in due time it ſhall in all the faithfull.

v. 38. What ſeek ye] This he ſaith, not doubting, but affording them occaſion of conference; though indeed it much ſkilleth what they ſeek, who pretend to come to Chriſt. See 1 Cor. 10. 33. 2 Cor. 2. 17. 2 Pet. 2. 3. Phil. 2. 21.

ſaid unto him Rabbi] this was a title which they uſed to give great and eminent men; but now it was commonly given to all teachers: he was called רבי rabbi, who by impoſition of hands was declared a wiſeman. Syr. רבן rabban, and John 20. 16. רבולי in ſome editions for the Greek Ραββονί See Joh. Druſ. praeter. lib. 4. in Joh. 20. 16. and ad v. N. T. Rabbi. Caninius. de locis N. T. Marian. Troſtius. varia lection, in John 20. 16. the Evangeliſt interpreteth there, as here by διδάσκαλε, maſter or teacher; it is of the Hebr. root רבב rabab great, thence רב rab excellens, or peritus in aliquâ arte, Magiſter, Doctor; here we may conceive that though they yet underſtood not, that Chriſt was the only teacher of his Church, yet moved with Johns teſtimony concerning him, they eſteemed him as a prophet and doctour which was the firſt ſtep of their hearing him.

where dwelleſt thou] or abideſt thou? where lodgeſt thou? dwelling at Nazareth, it ſeemeth he was a ſtranger there where John was baptizing, and where he now ſaw, and pointed at him, if any now enquire the like of him, let him come and ſee in his word and ordinance: every river, if thou follow it home, will bring thee to finde the ſea, whence it came: ſo every part of the Goſpel will lead thee (as the Star the wiſe men, Matth. 2.) to Chriſt.

v. 39. Come and ſee] Thus Chriſt readily entertaineth them who ſeek him in truth; he putteth none of them off (See c. 6. 37.) yea, he inviteth all that labour under the heavy burden of their ſins, Matth. 11. 28.

about the tenth hour] that was two hours before night: the day they divided into 12. hours, which in the ſummer, they made proportionably the longer; in the winter, the ſhorter: but ſo little before night, they conſider not the importunity but in deſire to hear Chriſt, they preſently follow him: formall Goſpellers (like Felix. Act. 24. 25.) uſe to diſcuſſe the word, and preachers thereof, unto their convenient ſeaſon; which they will ſeldom finde; but to thoſe who indeed hunger and thirſt for righteouſneſs, no time is unſeaſonable to learn.

v. 40. Simon Peters brother] The Evangeliſt here nameth him Peter, by way of anticipation, for he was not yet ſo named. See v. 42.

v. 41. The Meſſias, &c.] The anointed. So the Hebr. משיח Maſhiach, of משח Maſhach unxit oleo, now becauſe Kings, Prieſts, and Prophets, were anointed with ſacred oyl, the confection whereof might not be imitated to any other uſe, therefore Chriſt in whom all theſe offices met, was by an eminence called the משיח Meſſias. Dan. 9. 26. ſo often in the New Teſtament Μεσσίας is put for, and interpreted Chriſt: Χριστός: the anointed, or Chriſt, yet was he not anointed as they in the type with material oyl, but with the holy Ghoſt. Act. 10. 38. and that above his fellows, Pſal. 45. 7. See c. 3. 34. Coloſ. 2. 9. thus the Chalde often interprets propheſies concerning him. Gene. 49. 10. until שילה Shilo come Targ. משיחא.

v. 42. And he brought him to Jeſus] you muſt underſtand this of Andrew and Peters firſt coming to Chriſt, after which they returned to their fiſhing again; their calling to the Apoſtleſhip, when they left their nets and followed Chriſt as Apoſtles, was afterwards, and is recorded, Matt. 4. 18, &c. Luk. 5. 10, 11.

Jer. 4. 29. See Jo. Druſ. ad voc. N. T. com. prior. Thou art Peter (ſaid our Saviour Matt. 16. 18.) and on this rock will I build my Church: not on the perſon, but on the confeſſion of Peter ſaying, thou art Chriſt the Son of the living God: for (as Iſidor. de etymol. l. 7 ſaith) Chriſt was the rock on which foundation, even Peter alſo was built. See Epheſ. 2. 20. to which ſenſe Gregor. l. 3. ep. 33. ſaith, vitam veſtram in Petrâ eccleſiæ, hoc eſt in confeſſione beati Petri---ſolidate, ground your lives on the rock of the Church, that is, on the confeſſion of bleſſed Peter: in Chriſt all the faithful are λίθοι ζῶντες, living rocks or ſtones. 1 Pet. 2. 5. this name Chriſt giveth Peter, intimating his firm conſtancy in the treth.

v. 43. Follow me] be my diſciple: and he preſently followed him: ſo powerfull is his word: he but ſaid at firſt let us make man, Gen. 1. 26. and he was made, and here, but follow me, and he (as others after) left his former calling, and followed Chriſt: profane Porphyry and the apoſtata Julian ſcoffed hereat, not knowing the power of Chriſts calling; nor believing that the dead ſhall once hear his voice, and come out of their graves John 5. 28. 29. nor do wicked hearers feel the power of his word calling them to repentance and newneſs of life; becauſe they are deaf adders and belong not to Chriſt. c. 8. 47. 2 Cor. 4. 3. 4. here is comfort on two firm grounds, firſt (as Chryſoſtom. ho. 17. noteth) God preventeth our wills with his grace: our ſanctification, and ſalvation, beginneth not of, or from our ſelves, when, or how could we ever hope to be ſaved; if that work muſt not otherwiſe be accompliſhed then by our own ability and goodneſs? Secondly, though this work, in relation to mans ſtrength, be as impoſſible, as for a mortall man to climbe up into heaven, yet with God our Saviour, how eaſie is it? why ſhould I deſpair of his ſaving me, who can as eaſily repair me, as he made me? if he but ſay follow me: I ſhall follow him into eternall happineſs: ſhall I doubt that he who hath ſuffered the moſt bitter death for me, will not ſo much as ſpeak the word to ſave me?

v. 46. Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth] he had a prejudicate opinion of the place, either becauſe he conſidered the propheſie. Mich. 5. 2. which ſaith that Chriſt ſhould be born at Bethleem: ſo the Phariſees reaſoned. Iohn 7. 41. 42. or as they ſaid (Iohn 7. 52.) to Nicodemus, ſearch and look, for out of Galile ariſeth no prophet: The place maketh neither good nor bad: the earth is the Lords; who is no accepter of perſons.

Come and ſee] be not withheld from Chriſt by other mens prejudicate opinion; but try. Philip could not, or would not contend with him; but appealeth to his own further experience, as if hee had ſaid, doe but come to him and you will ſee, that ſome good may come from thence.

v. 47. No guile] A man of ſincere and ſimple integrity, which maketh the difference between the true, and feigned Iſraelites.

v. 48. Waſt under the fig-tree] Chriſt ſeeth us where ere we are, and when we think not of him: ipſe timendus eſt in publico, ipſe in ſecreto; Auguſtin. de verb Dom. in Joh. Ser. 46. he is to be feared in publike, he is to be feared in ſecret.

v. 49. Thou art the ſon God] Chriſts word begate this faith, which brake out into a confeſſion, of more then he heard of Philip: he called him the ſon of Ioſeph, but Nathaneel, acknowledged him the Son of God.

king of Iſrael] he knew not yet the extent of Chriſts kingdom. Pſal. 2. 8. Reve. 17. 14. therefore according to his meaſure he confeſſeth.

v. 50. Believeſt thou?] This queſtion is in effect a vehement aſſeveration, and as it were an admiration at his excellent faith.

thou ſhalt ſee greater things] which ſhall more evidently maniſeſt me to thee.

v. 51. Verily, verily] this repetition intimateth the certainty of his aſſertion; concerning the word ἀμὴν here uſed, ſee the marginall note of the learned Tremelius on this place.

heaven open] the kingdom of heaven opened to men in Chriſt, which their ſin and ignorance ſhut up.

and the angels of God] He alludeth to Jacobs ladder. Gene. 28. 12. See Coloſſ. 1. 20. Epheſ. 2. 19. Pſa. 34. 7. Heb. 1. 14. and he ſignifieth his Divine power, which ſhould be ſeen in the miniſtery of the angels to him the head of the Church, and the elect his body, the ſum is; they who were enemies, are reconciled to us in Chriſt and we are made fellow Citizens with them, Epheſ. 2. 19. and they our guardians. Pſal. 34. 7. Hebr. 1. 14. all this is the advantage of true believers.

CHAP. II.

Verſe 1. C*Ana*] Cana the leſſer, as Jerom ſaith: of which was Nathaneel. John 21. and Simon. Mat. 10. 4.

Galilee] The lower near the lake of Tiberias, called Galilee of the Gentiles. Iſaiah 9. 1. Matth. 4. 13. 15.

the mother of Jeſus] It ſeemeth Joſeph was dead before Chriſt began to preach: See Epiphan. hæreſ. 78.

v. 2. both Jeſus was called] Invited as friends: Jeſus came not into the world to aboliſh humane ſocieties, and civill cuſtoms; but to ſanctifie them with his holy preſence: for as in him the right to the creatures (loſt in Adam) was reſtored; ſo would he ſhew, and by example teach men the right uſe of them: ſometimes in a more plentifull (but ſober) manner, as in feaſts and feſtivities. See Deut. 16. 14.

v. 3. when they wanted wine] It ſeemeth theſe married couple were of a ſlender eſtate, and ſome of their gueſts unexpected: the main thing conſiderable is, Gods providence, diſpoſing this want (as often he doth with his) to his own glory: as it is ſaid of Lazarus death. chap. 11. 4. and the blinde mans want of ſight, chap. 9. 3.

his mother ſaid unto him, they have no wine] Why ſhe thus ſpake is uncertain; Chriſt having yet done no miracle, to give her confidence that he could ſupply the want: poſſibly ſome other things ſpoken, not here recorded, gave the occaſion: or that ſhe, who long before had laid up in her heart, thoſe things which were ſpoken of him (Luke 2. 51.) marked alſo what John Baptiſt teſtified of him; as alſo what the Angel Gabriel told her: and it is more then probable, that in theſe many yeers, wherein Chriſt lived with her, ſhe had often conferred with him, concerning the great work of redemption by him to be accompliſhed: and if there were here any place for conjecture; why may we not conceive it probable, that he might acquaint her with his gathering diſciples, preaching, and manifeſting himſelf to Iſrael, by ſignes and mighty works? and that this declaration had the force of a petition, as had that of Mary and Martha. John 11. 3. Lord, behold he whom thou loveſt is ſick: and his anſwer ſeemeth to make for this; for when he ſaith, mine hour is not yet come, he ſeemeth not ſo much to deny a ſupply, as to blame the unſeaſonableneſſe of the motion for it.

v. 4. woman, what have I &c.] Though he were incomparably greater, as being God, yet being the Son of Mary, as man, he ſpake not any otherwiſe, then became the reverence due to a parent: but becauſe he was not her Son in that nature, by which he would do the miracle, he inhibiteth preſcribing God; and therein recalleth her from all reſpects of motherhood, ſo far as they hindred the conſideration of Gods power and glory, in the following miracle. See Luke 2. 49. Matth. 12. 48. Hebr. מה לי ולך ma li valach. 2 Kings 9. 13. what have I to do with thee?

mine hour is not yet come] The fit time appointed by God, which is, when it ſhall beſt ſerve for his honour.

v. 5. whatſoever he ſaith unto you] It is probable that ſhe had an expectation of ſome extraordinary ſupply, becauſe ſhe prepared the ſervants to obey him, in order to the ſame.

v. 6. ſix water-pots of ſtone] Wherewith they uſed often to waſh and purifie themſelves. See Mark 7. 3. waters were very ſcarce in Paleſtine, fountains being there but rare, as Chryſoſt. noteth, hom. 21. therefore the Jews kept ſuch veſſels of waters filled by them. The Heretick Hebion would have brought into the Chriſtian Church, this now antiquated cuſtome of the Jews.

containing two or three firkins apiece] Meaſures which the Syriac gives רבעין, rebbin of the Hebr. רבע rebah a quartall, continet quadrantall octavam partem cadi, ſive modii. Tremel. Gre. μετρητὰς δύο. Some conjecture that theſe ſix contained about half a tunne, each veſſel being about half a terſe: ſo that Chriſt gave a bountifull ſupply, which ſet off the excellency of the miracle.

v. 7. fill the water-pots with water] He ſaid not, fill the wine caſk, but thoſe water-pots there ſtanding; into which they uſed not to put any wine: neither doth he bid them fill ſome other the like pots (that might have admitted ſome jealouſie of a compact) but thoſe out of which they had now drawn water for their uſe; all this, for the clear evidence of the miracle. See 1 Kings 18. 44.

filled them up to the brim] Though theſe waiters knew not what Chriſt meant to do, yet thus the providence of God directed it, leſt any ſhould object, or conceive that ſome wine might happily be afterward ſecretly conveighed into the ſame veſſels, and ſo deceive the gueſts, with an appearance of a falſe miracle.

v. 8. governour of the feaſt] The ſteward, or ruler of the houſe: as, Geneſ. 43. 16. among them it ſeems his office was onely to order the feaſt.

v. 9. water that was made wine] Water converted into wine; by which he ſhewed himſelf the God and Lord of nature; here doing that in an inſtant, which he doth every yeer in the vine, by turning water and the moiſture of the earth, by ſlow and inſenſible degrees, into the juice of the mature grape whence the wine is preſſed: he could here without their miniſtry, as eaſily have turned the air in the pots into water, as the water into wine; but he would ſo do this miracle, that all preſent might be certain witneſſes thereof.

v. 10. well drunk] That is, liberally, as Gen. 43. 34. for the word שכר ſhachar with the Hebrews anſwering to the Greek word μεθύειν, is not alwayes to expreſſe intemperance, as Gen. 9. 21. 2 Sam. 11. 13. but ſometimes to ſignifie, onely a liberall uſe of wine without exceſſe, as here, and in the forecited place. Gen. 43. 34. See on Luk. 1. 15.

v. 11. This beginning of miracles] Chriſt adorned this wedding with his preſence and firſt miracle.

and manifeſted] He wrought this miracle ſo evidently, that his divine power appeared therein.

diſciples beleeved on him] For the end of miracles, is to bring us by faith to Chriſt: whereas lying miracles carrying men away from Chriſt into ſuperſtition, are Satans deluſions. 2 Theſ. 2. 9, 10, 11.

v. 12. Capernaum] A rich city on the ſea coaſt, in the borders of Zabulon and Nephtali, where Chriſt dwelt when he left Nazareth. Matth. 4. 13.

and his brethren] That is, his kinſmen, whom the Hebrews called brethren. Gen. 13. 8. and 14. 14. Matth. 13. 55.

v. 13. Jews Paſſeover was at hand] See Exod. 12. 2. and 13. 3. and 23. 14, 15. and the morall thereof. 1 Cor 5. 7, 8.

v. 14. and found] Chriſt appointed to purge the temple; Mal. 3. 1, 2, 3. preſently repaireth thereto: this was the firſt Paſſeover after Chriſts baptiſm; and therefore this is not the ſame hiſtory which is recorded, Matth. 21. 12, Mark 11. 15. Luke 19. 45. that was when his paſſion drew neer.

in the temple] In the outward court of the temple.

ſold oxen] They that dwelt far from Jeruſalem, were by the law, to make their offerings into money, and to furniſh themſelves there. Deut. 14. 25, 26. but not in the temple, which was the houſe of God, or houſe of prayer.

changers of money ſitting] To fit all ſtrangers with exchange of moneys there currant; to buy ſacrifices.

v. 15. of ſmall cords] Probably, thoſe which bound the oxen and ſheep.

v. 16. make not my Fathers houſe an houſe of &c.] He blameth not the ſale of ſheep and oxen and doves (the law allowed that) but that they ſold them within the court of the temple; and ſo made it an houſe of merchandize: that he condemneth: becauſe, that through it, it was not lawfull ſo much as to bear a burden. Mark 11. 16. If Chriſt thus purged his temple from elſewhere-lawfull merchandize and profanation, when yet he well knew it ſhould ſhortly after be utterly demoliſhed; if he would not have them buy and ſell there, thoſe things without which they could not then ſerve him according to his own law; thoſe things which doubtleſſe many bought with a ſincere purpoſe for the ſervice of God; with what ſcorpions will he at laſt revenge the profanations of thoſe houſes of prayer, which have been ſo ſhamfully abuſed among us, and made dens of theeves and murderers?

v. 17. The zeal of thy houſe] Pſal. 69. 9. Zeal is here taken for the heat of indignation conceived at any thing unworthyly done or attempted, againſt thoſe we love: as alſo 2 Cor. 7. 11. Sometimes it importeth fervent affection; as, Col. 4. 13. Sometimes good intention, though without knowledge or right levell. Rom. 10. 2. Phil. 3. 6. Sometimes envy. chap. 7. 9. and 13. 45. and 17. 5. Sometimes for emulation. Gal 5. 20. So Clemens Romanus ep. ad. Cor. p. 6. 7. ſaith, ζῆλος καὶ φθόνος zeal and envy (that is, anger and envy) were the cauſe of Cains killing his brother; no ſuch zeal had Chriſt, who had no ſin; but an holy zeal to the ſervice and honour of God his Father.

eaten me up] As it were a ſecret fire feeding on my thoughts, ſo that it will not ſuffer me to be mindfull of my ſelf: as, Pſal. 102. 4. and 119. 139.

v. 18. that thou doeſt theſe things] Whereby it may appear, that thou haſt divine authority, to do and ſay ſuch extraordinary things.

v. 19. deſtroy this temple] See Matth. 26. 61. If you deſtroy, or when you deſtroy: thus he ſheweth his divine preſcience, foretelling of his paſſion: theſe things he ſpake, not plainly, becauſe he knew they would not have beleeved, the diſciples could not yet, how much leſſe the vulgar?

v. 20. Fourty and ſix yeers was this temple in building] This was not the temple built by Solomon. 1 Kings 6. 37. 2 Chron. 3. 1. that was deſtroyed by the Caldeans. 2 Chron. 36. 19.

but the ſecond temple built after their return from Babylon. Ezr. 4. So much hindred, that it was fourty ſix yeers in hand. See hereof Iſ. Caſaub. exercit 13. N. 38.

v. 21. of the temple of his body] That is, his humane body the temple of the Godhead. Coloſ. 2. 9.

v. 22. his diſciples remembred, &c.] For then he opened their underſtanding, that they might know what he had ſaid and done. Luke 24. 45. Thus Gods word (which Chriſt compared to ſeed ſowed. Matth. 13.) ſometimes lyeth long (as under frozen clods) not appearing, but as dead and loſt; yet in Gods good time it is quickned, and brought to memory again, and the uſe and fruits thereof ſhew an admirable life of the holy Ghoſt working thereon.

v. 23. many beleeved in his Name] With a temporall faith, ſuch as uſually is theirs who depend on miracles: it was no ſound or juſtifying ſaith; which Chriſt would not truſt.

v. 24. did not commit himſelf unto them] He truſted them not; neither with the ſecret myſteries of his doctrine, as Chryſoſtom, Auguſtine, and Theophylact conceive; nor with his own ſacred perſon: he did not ſecurely converſe with them, nor did he truſt himſelf with them, as he did with his diſciples, and well known friends.

he knew all men]what they had in the ſecret of their hearts; what they had been, were and would be. chap. 13. 18. & 6 71.

v. 25. needed not that any] Chriſt being the ſearcher of all hearts, hath no need that any ſhould enform him concerning man.

come from God] Divinely, & extraordinarily ſent to teach us.

v. 3. born again] Or, from above, regenerated by the holy Ghoſt.

ſee the kingdom of God] That is, enter into it, as verſe 5.

v. 4. How can a man]To examin ſpirituall myſteries by carnall reaſon, is a main let to the underſtanding thereof.

v. 5. of water] Of baptiſm the ſacrament of regeneration, which is the ordinary way into the Church and kingdom of God, though his grace be not tied to external means: and it is the contempt, not the the privation of the ſacrament which condemneth.

ſpirit] Which giveth the inward effect of baptiſm.

kingdom of God] Of grace here, and glory in the life to come. See. on verſe 6.

v. 6. born of the fleſh] The corrupted nature of man, (oppoſite to regeneration) concerning which the Apoſtle ſaith, it cannot inherit the kingdom of God. 1 Cor. 15. 50. the whole ſenſe is; no man can know the myſteries of the kingdom of grace, without a regenerate minde; and therefore no man can be ſaved by the grace of adoption, without regeneration and renovation of the whole man: we are born aliants to the kingdom of God, (Ephe. 2.1. &c.12. 13.) and mere enemies. (Rom. 5. 10.) until we are born again of water and the holy Ghoſt; hence is it, that the Apoſtle requireth, a new man, a new creature. 1 Cor. 5. 7. 2 Cor. 5. 17. Gal. 6. 15. Epheſ. 4. 24. Col. 3. 10. the unregenerate man perceiveth not the things of the ſpirit of God, neither can he, becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned. 1 Cor. 2. 14. the carnall man ſaith Theophylact (in Luk. 14.) μηδὲν ὑπὲρ φύσιν πιστεύων, he beleeveth nothing ſupernaturall: now as the creature can be but once properly created; and a man can be but once born; ſo neither can he be more then once regenerate: quomodo enim uterus non poteſt repeti, ſic nec baptiſmus iterari, ſaith Proſper.

is fleſh]Is carnall, ſubject to ſin and death: underſtand herewith, the wiſdom, will and affection of the naturall man. See Rom. 7. 14. &c. & 8. 7. why of holy parents carnall ſons are born. See Auguſt. To. 7. part. 2. de nuptiis & concup. c. 18. of the neceſſity of regeneration. See Proſp. contra. Collator. c. 18.

is ſpirit] Is ſpirituall: ſubject to the ſpirit, ſanctifying man, and ſtiling him ſpirituall; notwithſtanding the remainds of ſin ſtriving againſt the ſpirit; and thoſe works of the fleſh, like the wilde fruits growing on the ſuckers of the ſtock, on which the adopted branches are engrafted, bearing fruits of regeneration.

v. 7. born again] Or from above.

v. 8. winde bloweth where it liſteth] That which the Hebrews call רוח ruach (with them a πολυώνυμον) the Greeks expreſſe by the word πνεῦμα, ſignifying amongſt other things winde, or a blaſt of winde: ſo Ariſtot. de mundo. Thucid. l. 4. and other authors uſe it: in ſcripture it often ſignifieth the holy Ghoſt; the meaning here is; as the power of God is perceived in the winde moving the air, though we cannot ſee it; ſo is it in the changing and renewing of us, though the manner be hid from us: where it liſteth: ſignifieth, without any reſtraint by the power of man: this manner of ſpeaking is taken from creatures, voluntary moving themſelves, as they ſay libero ac vago impetu.

v. 9. How can theſe things be?] Chriſt had preached this point unto him, that except a man be regenerate he cannot ſee the kingdom of God; and Nicodemus is now an example of the ſame: being ſo great and learned Scholar, yet being not regenerate, he could not underſtand the very rudiments of that kingdom.

v. 10. and knoweſt not theſe things] Theſe words are quick and reprehenſory: as if he ſaid, it is a foul ſhame for a profeſſed teacher of Iſrael, to be ignorant in the very fundamentals of religion; the more, ſeeing this point is layed down in many places of Scripture, Jer. 31. 19. Ezek. 11.12. and 36. 26. Pſalm 51. 10. circumciſion ſignified it: it is the end of all the Law, purity of heart, and ſanctimony of life; it is that which puts difference between ſinful worldlings, and the holy ſons of God. Now, the otherwiſe learned Nicodemus knew not theſe things, becauſe they are no otherwiſe then ſpiritually diſcerned, 1 Cor. 2. 14.

v. 11. Verily, verily] Ἀμὴν, ἀμὴν, the word is from the Hebrew אמן aman, verax, verus, fidelis; and אמן amen, as much as, ſo be it; they uſed it as a ratification of their prayers, Jer. 11. 5. and deſiring the fulfilling thereof; ſo Deut. 27. 15. all the people ſhall ſay אמן, amen. 70. γένοιτο, let it come to paſſe, or be ſo; ſometimes it was doubled to the more vehement confirmation or aſſeveration, as Num. 5. 22. the woman ſhall ſay, אמן אמן, amen, amen; hence in the Primitive Church after prayers, and ſome other repetitions in their aſſemblies, the people anſwered, Amen. 1 Cor. 14.16. how ſhall he ſay, τὸ Ἀμὴν. So Revel. 1. 7. ναὶ Ἀμὴν, yea, ſo be it. And ſo our Saviour often uſed it doubled, for a vehement aſſeveration; as if he ſaid, faithfully, truly, or aſſuredly it is ſo.

we ſpeak that we do know] In that Chriſt ſaith οἴδαμεν, we know, &c. the cauſe and ſence is, I and all the Prophets (which ſpake by my Spirit, and of me) well know what we ſpeak and teach; thus joyneth he with their miniſtery; whence appeareth their errour, who would have the authority of ſcriptures to depend on the Church: that were to ſubject the truth of Chriſt to the examination and approbation of men.

that we have ſeen] This is to expreſſe the certainty of the Goſpel: becauſe, with us the ſenſe of ſeeing is moſt certain; we uſe to ſay we have ſeen a thing, when we will affirm a certainty of knowledge.

ye receive not our witneſſe] That is, few of you receive it. So chap. 1. 11. his own received him not, that is, few of them received him: it hath been the miſery of all times: Lord who hath received our report? Iſaiah 53. 1. let us not think the worſe of truth, becauſe it hath few ſincere followers; mans unbelief cannot make void the truth of God. Rom. 3. 3. let them take heed, who out of opinion of new light, contemn the old invariable truth of Chriſt; who will be teachers of the law, and yet underſtand not what they ſpeak, neither whereof they affirm. 1 Tim. 1. 7. It is but juſt with God to ſend them to their damnation; ſtrong deluſions that they ſhall beleeve lies, who receive not the love of the truth, that they might be ſaved. 2 Theſ. 2. 10, 11. read it in Ahabs example. 1 King. 22. 29. &c.

v. 12. earthly things] Naturall things, as concerning the winde: or in a plain and common manner, as he delivered his heavenly doctrine: for it is moſt true which Chryſoſtome noteth, hom. 26. in regard of his hearers weakneſſe, he attemperateth to them.

v. 13. came down from heaven] By aſſumption of the humane nature. chap. 1. 14.

the Son of man] Chriſt God and man: Son of man is often put for man. Pſal 8. 4. Iſaiah 51. 12.

which is in heaven] Not becauſe the humane ſubſtance of Chriſt was diffuſed to an ubiquity; but becauſe one and the ſame Son of God, and Son of man, very God of his father, and truely man by the aſſumption of our fleſh and blood, though according to his true humanity, localiter tunc eſſet in terrâ, he was then locally on earth, yet according to his deity, which cannot be contained in place, he filled heaven and earth; and was then in heaven in reſpect thereof, whoſe properties are attributed to the perſon of Chriſt, conſiſting of thoſe two united natures; hereof, See Fulgent. de perſon. Chriſti ad Thraſimund. l. 2.

v. 14. as Moſes lifted up the ſerpent] Numb. 21. 9. As the brazen ſerpent lifted up had the true form of a ſerpent, but not the venome; ſo had Chriſt the true form and nature, but not the ſin of man: that ſerpent was a ſigne of grace, and a remedy againſt evill, that all who were ſtung with fiery ſerpents, might ſee him, and be healed; ſo was Chriſt lifted upon the croſſe. chap. 12. 32. and is now lifted up in the word and ſacraments (Iſaiah 49. 22. Gal. 3. 1.) that the faithfull may look into heaven after him, and be healed: this he did not openly ſpeak, but remitted his hearers to the old type, as Chryſoſtom noted. Hom. 26. to ſhew the admirable conſent between the Old and New Teſtament; and to intimate, that he went not unwillingly to his paſſion: alſo to help the faith of the weak: if any doubt, how can they who believe in Jeſus crucified, be ſaved? let him conſider how he that but looked on the ſimilitude of a Serpent, was healed; how much more ſhall they who with true faith look upon Jeſus, the life, through the vaile of his crucified fleſh? there the Serpent ſtung, and the Serpent healed; here death (whoſe ſting is ſin. 1 Corinthians 15.) in the firſt Adam, deſtroyed: here the death of the ſecond Adam Chriſt ſaved and gave us life.

v. 15. Whoſoever believeth in him] whoſoever; without reſpect of perſons (Acts 10.34 35.) believeth that Jeſus Chriſt, the true Meſſias, and Saviour of the elect, died for our ſins and roſe again for our juſtification (Rom. 4.25.) and in aſſurance of the truth of Gods promiſes propoſed in the Goſpel, apprehendeth his particular intereſt and propriety therein, as chap. 20. 28.

v. 16. For ſo God loved, &c.] In this verſe Chirſt ſheweth theſe four concurrent cauſes of our redemption and ſalvation. 1. The principall, firſt, impulſive; the love of God, which can have no cauſe but it ſelf. 2. The materiall, or price of our redemption, his only begotten Son. 3. the inſtrumentall; faith in Chriſt: that whoſoever believeth in him. 4. the finall, eternal life.

the world] That is, mankinde, for Chriſt ſpeaketh not here of that common love of God, whereby he willeth the good of conſervation to the creature; ſo he loveth all the creatures; but of his ſpecial love, whereby he willeth man ſhould be ſaved by Chriſt, and he is truly ſaid to love the world, becauſe they whom he loveth to eternall life, are in the world, a part of the world, and gathered by his word, and holy Spirit into the body of the Church, out of all ages and parts of the world, God loved all that he made: he loveth not ſin which is neither in him, nor of him, he loved a ſinning world (for when we were enemies, he reconciled us. Rom. 5. 10.) but not the ſins of the world: if we ſpeak of Gods peculiar love which is to eternal life; we muſt underſtand the elect onely, oppoſed to that part thereof, concerning which it is ſaid; the whole world lieth in wickedneſs. 1 Joh. 5. 19. and, I pray not for the world- c. 17. 9. Chriſt prayed for thoſe whom he loved to ſalvation; that is, for the elect only I pray for them I pray not for the world, the elect are in the world, not of the world (c. 17. 16.) that is, of that party which lieth in ſin and unbelief; ſo two ſorts of men are intimated, ſub uno mundi nomine; under this one name, world (ſaith Proſper) ſicut enim dicitur mundus in impiis, ita dicitur mundus in ſanctis--- the wicked are called the world, and here the ſaints are called the world which God loveth, God loveth us ſuch as we ſhall be by his gift, non quales ſumus noſtro merito. Auguſtin. de C. D. l. 17. c. 4. not ſuch as we are by our deſert, he loved, quod fecerat & elegerat in filio, ſaith the ſame tr. 110. in Joh. 17. that which he had made, and choſen in his Son; out of whom he loveth no man to eternall life: a Prince may be truely ſaid, to love his Subjects ſpecially then, when he puniſheth the perverſe, rebellious, and ſeditious among them; and a Phyſitian his patient, ſpecially when he moſt endeavoureth to correct the corrupt and malignant humours which diſaffect him: ſo neither can it prejudicate the love of God that he cutteth off and condemneth reprobates, or when with ſevere corrections, he fetcheth in, amendeth, and ſaveth thoſe whom he loved and elected from eternity, thus then the creatour, and Lord of lords, loved the world; that is wretched mankinde diſperſed, upon the face of the earth, without difference of nation, dignity, ſex, or age: all the world with his common love, (of which all have ſome taſt) the elect only, according to the effect thereof, his purpoſe of ſaving them in Chriſt. See more concerning the acceptation of the word (world) Auguſtin. To. 7. Contr. Jul. Pelag. l. 6. c. 1.

v. 17. For God ſent not] c. 12. 47. God gave, and ſent his Son, by his incarnation: he confirmeth that which he ſaid, ſhould not periſh. v. 16. by declaring the end of his preſent coming into the world.

to condemn the world] Chriſts coming condemneth not, but unbelief and contempt of Chriſt, c. 9. 39. & 12. 47. he came not now to judge (that ſhall be at his ſecond coming) but to propoſe terms of peace, and mercy; that they might believe and be ſaved.

that the world through him, &c.] not only Jews, but Gentiles alſo, as many as ſhould believe in him.

v. 18. Is condemned already] By the ancient ſentence, Gen. 3. 19. & 2. 17. Gal. 3. 10. which muſt needs ſtand, except it be reverſed by Chriſt apprehended by faith; ſo is the believer abſolved and pardoned; but the unbeliever (by nature the childe of wrath, dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, Epheſ. 2. 1.) ſtandeth already condemned, as Chryſoſtom ſaith, κἂν μὴ τῷ πράγματι τέως, ἀλλὰ τῇ ψήφῳ if not actually and declaratively, yet in the (univerſal) ſentence, on Adam; and in reſpect of his own actual ſins; for whoſoever ſinneth, is guilty before God, and ſo under puniſhment.

in the name of, &c.] that is, in Chriſt.

the only begotten] all the Saints are Gods children by adoption in Chriſt; but he is the only begotten Son, by nature. See on c. 1. 14.

v. 19. The condemnation] The cauſe of condemnation.

their deeds were evil] mans wickedneſs is the cauſe of his rejecting the Goſpell of Chriſt, (which as a light diſcovereth it and convinceth ſinners) and his neglecting and hating the ſame either in the word of trueth, or miniſtery thereof: So Ahab, ſold unto ſin, hated Michaiah 1 Kings 22. and inceſtuous Herodias John Baptiſt.

v. 20, Hateth the light] This is a proverbiall ſpeech, which Chriſt accommodateth to his preſent purpoſe, which was to ſhew the immediate cauſe of the Jews unbelief, rejection of the Goſpel, and their not coming to Chriſt, the light, which was their ſin and incorrigible wickedneſs, ſin would be concealed in darkneſs; it abhorreth nothing more then the light which diſcovereth it deformity, which is ſuch as cannot hurt except it be loved, nor poſſibly beloved, if cleerly ſeen. Ahab took Eliah for his enemy, 1 Kings 21. 20. becauſe he diſcovered and reproved his ſin: ſtill truth begets us enemies, the word of God to the wicked, is as a true glaſſe to the ugly; you offer an odious affront if you ſhew it them.

v. 21. Doth the truth] That doth ſincerely and holily.

wrought in God] as they do, who ſet God only before their eyes, and follow the rule of his word: hoc autem in Deo facimus, quod Deo in nobis faciente, datur nobis ut faciamus. Fulgent. de præd. ad Monim. l. 1. and we do this in God; which, God working in us, giveth us ability to do.

v. 22. The land of Iudea] into the territories of Judea: from Jeruſalem into the villages, and places neer.

and baptized] by his Diſciples Miniſtry. See chap. 4. 2.

v. 23. baptizing in Enon] a town in the tribe of Manaſſe, nere Jordan (there was another of this name neer Damaſcus. Eze. 47.17.) and neer Scythopolis on the other ſide of Jordan (See Iſ. Caſaub. Exerc. 13. *N.*42.) and Salim. See Ierom. de loc. Hebr. A. fine.

v. 24. Iohn was not yet caſt into priſon] See Matth. 14. 3. &c. Mark 6. 17, &c. Luke 3. 19.

v. 25. And the Iews] Chryſoſtom readeth μετὰ Ἰουδαίου --- with a Jew: ſo the Syriac, with a certain Iew, very likely that the controverſie began with one, and after grew more general: ſo are national quarrels oftimes kindled.

about purifying] how they might be purified before God, which the waſhings under the law did, and baptiſme now doth repreſent.

v. 26. was with thee beyond Iordan] they were affected with perverſe zeal and emulation, fearing that their maſters credit ſhould be impaired by Chriſt.

to whom thou bareſt witneſſe] c. 1. 7. 34. they come with this complaint, that all the people now ran after him, whom their maſter baptized; as fearing an eclipſe of their maſters honour, by his interpoſition, to whom (it ſeemed to them) their maſter had lent his light.

v. 27. A man can receive nothing] or, take unto himſelf; nothing, no gift: no man ought to uſurpe a miniſtry, which God hath not given him. Heb. 5. 4 as the Syr. interp. hath it ex voluntate ſui ipſius, of his own will; or at his own pleaſure, nor can be fit for it, except God give the ability. 2. Cor. 3. 6.

v. 28. I am not the Chriſt] chap. 1. 20.

v. 29. is fulfilled] in that he heard the voice of Chriſt the bridegroom ſpeaking to his ſpouſe the Church: it is as if he ſaid, now my work is done; my office fulfilled; whereof I rejoyce. I have done my part and rejoyce in the deſired effect.

v. 30. He muſt encreaſe] I came to prepare his way, and to manifeſt him to Iſrael: the confluence of people to hear and follow him, is the end of my proclaiming him, and teſtifying concerning him, he muſt be exalted, and all the people ſhall follow him, and I muſt be obſcured; as a ſtar at the riſing of the ſun.

and ſpeaketh of the earth] ſavoureth not the things of God, but of men: as Matth. 16. 23.

v. 32. No man receiveth his teſtimony] that is as Chryſoſtom interpreteth ὀλίγοι, very few believe in Chriſt, concerning whom John bare witneſs, that he is the Son of God, if he had ſimply meant, none; why ſhould he have added, he that receiveth his teſtimony, hath ſealed, &c. verſe 33. and how ſhould we think that the Diſciples and others were not herein concerned? but this he ſaith, to ſhew his Diſciples, why they, and the other Jews yet believed not, becauſe Chriſt was heavenly and they earthly.

v. 33. He that hath received his teſtimony] That is, διδασκαλίαν αὐτοῦ: Theophylact. the doctrine of the Goſpel.

hath ſet to his ſeal] See Rom. 3. 4. Theophylact interpreteth it by ἔδειξεν, and ἐβεβαίωσεν he hath demonſtrated, and confirmed, that God is true.

v. 34. He whom God hath ſent] God herein ſent his Son, as the Sun ſendeth out his rayes to the earth, in that they are not in their emiſſion divided from their fountain, ita de ſpiritu ſpiritus, & de deo deus, ſaith Tertullian Apol. cap. 21. ſo is he Spirit of Spirit, and God of God; that there is but one trueth, as one God, ſo that he who believeth him that is ſent of God, believeth God; as on the contrary, he that beleeves not him that is ſent, believeth not God who ſent him, ſee Luke 10. 16.

ſpeaketh the words of God] this ſheweth a reaſon why they ſhould believe him, becauſe he ſpeaketh onely the words of God; which is the onely ground of faith in which there can be no falſhood; opinion may be on probabilities; but faith is on certainties, becauſe they are reveiled by God who cannot deceive.

not the ſpirit by meaſure] but an unmeaſurable fullneſſe. Coloſſ. 1. 19. & 2. 9. he meaneth by Spirit, the gifts and graces of the Holy Ghoſt: to every one of us is given grace according to the meaſure of the gift of Chriſt: Epheſians 4. 7. but his powerfull working is, as Chryſoſt. ſpeaks, ἀμέτρητος, unmeaſurable: for he hath τὸ πνεῦμα ὁλόκληρον, and οὐσιωδῶς, the whole Spirit, ſubſtantially: the Prophets and Apoſtles had, and the faithfull Miniſters have a meaſure; but Chriſt, the fulneſs whence all receive grace and truth, hath it above all meaſure.

v. 35. The father loveth the Son] Matt. 11. 27.

all things into his hand] that is, hath given the rule and power over all things in heaven and earth, to him. See Matt. 28. 18.

v. 36. He that believeth, &c. Hab. 2. 4. 1 John 5. 10.

hath everlaſting life] the Syr. interpreter hath it, eſt ei vita, quæ eſt in æternum, it ſeemeth indeed to expreſs a preſent and indefeaſable intereſt and poſſeſſion; not onely apprehenſible by hope, but even now in being to preſent ſenſe, for as much as the elect regenerate do now feel the power of the life of Chriſt in them, and the dayly motions of his ſpirit working the decay and death of ſin, and enabling to ſome comfortable meaſure of ſanctification. See Gal. 2. 20. they by experience know, how Chriſt is made of God, their wiſdom, righteouſneſſe, ſanctification and redemption. 1 Cor. 1. 30. wherein his kingdom is eſtabliſhed in them; that is, the kingdom of grace and life eternall, the kingdom of life and glory begun here on earth to be perfected in heaven.

ſhall not ſee life] ſhall not enjoy, no nor ſo much as lay an eye upon it.. See v. 3. & c. 8. 24. he ſhall neither be ſenſible of the life of grace here, nor of the life of glory in the world to come: the Syr. interpreter giveth it, qui non acquieſcit filio: he that reſteth not or dependeth not on the Son, in faith for his juſtification, but ſeeketh righteouſneſs by the works of the law, &c. he ſhall not be ſaved.

but the wrath of God abideth on him] for none but thoſe only who are juſtified by faith in Chriſt have peace toward God. Rom. 5. 1. out of Chriſt there can be no reconciliation, by the wrath of God he means the whole curſe of the law, & whatſoever it threatneth impenitent ſinners. Salvian expreſſeth it wel, de Gub. Dei. l. 1. ira eſt autem divinitatis, pœna peccati: Gods anger, is the puniſhment of ſin, and as Fulgentius. de incarn. & grat. ira igitur ejus, noſtræ iniquitatis eſt meritum, his anger is the deſert of our iniquity, he ſaith not Gods anger ſhal come, but, it abideth: all are born children of wrath. Ephe. 2. 1. becauſe in ſin: but this is done away in our regeneration, wherein we are reconciled to God in Chriſt only (See Act. 4. 12. but it abideth on the impenitent, and unbeleevers, becauſe they are not reconciled to God by faith in Chriſt.

CHAP. IIII.

Verſe 1. WHen therefore the Lord knew] When Jeſus knew; that is, Jeſus knowing what the Phariſees heard, and conſulted.

v. 2. Jeſus himſelf baptized not] he baptized inwardly by the Holy Ghoſt giving the effect of the outward baptiſme here ſpoken of: and as Optatus l. 5. ſaith, he baptized indeed; but by the Apoſtles hands, quibus leges baptiſmatis dederat, to whom he gave the laws (or rites) of baptiſme; ſo Tertul. de bapt. c. 21. ſemper dicitur is facere cui præminiſtratur, he is ever ſaid to do a thing, for whoſe ſervice it is done.

v. 3. he left the Iews] to avoid their rage: that mean muſt be held in our miniſtry, neither to be diſcouraged by cauſeleſſe fear, nor raſhly to provoke, or expoſe our ſelves to enemies.

v. 4. He muſt needs go] it was his way from Judea to Galilee.

v. 5. A city of Samaria] See on Luk. 17. 11. Herod, in honour of Auguſtus Cæſar, called it Sebaſte, according to the Greek. Iero. To. 1. Epitaph. Paulæ. Chriſt thus leaving the proud & malicious Phariſees, opened the treaſures of grace and mercy to the deſpiſed Samaritans.

that Iacob gave] Gene. 33. 19. & 48. 22.

v. 6. Sate thus on the well] weary as he was; or, becauſe he was weary.

the ſixth hour] about noon: in the heat of the day.

v. 7. give me to drink] thus he that is rich and Lord of all, became poor for us, that he might make us rich. 2 Cor. 8. 9. we had loſt all right and intereſt in the creatures, ſo that we could not ſo much as (in our own right) take a cup of cold water, but as uſurpers: untill Chriſt reſtored us that intereſt and right in the creatures, which we forfeited by our attainder in Adam: and thus he aſketh, who giveth to all creatures. Pſal. 104. 27. as to refreſh himſelf in his wearineſs and thirſt; ſo ſpecially to give occaſion of diſcourſe, for her ſalvation and many others.

v. 8. Into the city] Sychar v. 5.

v. 9. For the Iews have no dealings, &c.] the Samaritans claimed kinred of the Jews in their proſperity, but in their publike afflictions, would never acknowledge them. Joſeph. Antiq. Iud. l. 11. c. 8. See alſo l. 9. c. ult. the Iews eſteemed them wicked and profane, likewiſe the Samaritans, thought themſelves polluted, if they touched a Jew. See 2 King. 17. 26. &c. they mutually hated and deſpiſed each other, hence was that blaſphemous calumny againſt Chriſt, whom the Iews called Samaritan, &c. Iohn 8. 48.

v. 10. gift of God] that excellent gift ſpecified. c. 3. 16. or c. 7. 38. 39. or himſelf ſent to convert her; or the opportunity of ſalvation hereby offered her.

. living water] the graces of the holy Spirit, which ſhal never fail. See c. 7. 39. Ier. 2. 13. Ioel. 3. 18. Zach. 13. 1. Cyril underſtandeth here, the love of God, and τὴν ζωοποιὸν τοῦ πνεύματος δόσιν, the quickning gift of the Spirit, ſo Theophylact, τὴν χάριν τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος, the grace of the holy Spirit, which faileth not, but bringeth to eternal life.

v. 11. Nothing to draw with] and the Jews and Samaritans held it a pollution, to uſe the veſſels of each other: this it ſeemeth, ſhe ſpake, as deſpiſing and contradicting what he ſaid.

v. 12. Art thou greater, &c.] as if ſhe had ſaid; whom makeſt thou thy ſelf? Iacob that great Patriarch was content with this water, for himſelf, and his family; what better water ſpeak you of?

then our father Iacob?] thus theſe mixed and degenerate people bragged. See (2 King. 17. 24.) whence they came: thus hypocrites ever boaſt of their fathers and anceſters. See chap. 8.

v. 13. whoſoever drinketh of this, &c.] as if he ſaid, hence you may gather whether I am greater then Jacob or not, if you underſtand the difference between that myſtical and ſpiritual water which ſhal nouriſh to eternity (which Jacob could not give) and this which Jacob gave his ſons, which can onely quench a preſent thirſt, but not free you from a future.

v. 14. The water that I ſhall give him] the grace and ſpirit of regeneration, of which v. 10. & c. 7. 38. 39.

ſhall never thirſt] it ſhall ſo refreſh the weary ſoul, that all deſire of good ſhall be ſatisfied, in the preſence of God: ſee Pſal. 39. 8. 9. Iſai. 49. 10.

v. 15. Give me this water] it is likely that ſhe perceived that he ſpake of ſpirituall water, but under the notion of a Jew, ſhe was diſpoſed to ſlight all that he ſpake: ſo hard it is to believe their word, of whoſe authority we are not well perſwaded; probably ſhe ſpake this ironically; this alſo is an example of that which Chriſt ſaid, c. 3. 3. except a man be born again, he cannot ſee the kingdom of God.

v. 16. Go, call thy husband] Chriſt having a while patiently born with her perverſe anſwers, wil now ſmite her conſcience with the ſenſe of her own ſin, and his Divine Majeſty before whom ſhe deported her ſelf ſo ſecurely and audaciouſly: ſo are over confident ſinners to be wounded that they may be healed, ſhe knew that ſhe lived in ſin, yet her conſcience could not awake, untill a divine hand ſeemed to touch the wounds thereof: So 2 Sam. 12. 13. here alſo the tender mercy of Chriſt is to be obſerved: he ſaid not, go thou adultreſſe, and call thy partner in ſin, thy pretended huſband, that you may hear your dooms, (as 1 Cor. 6. 9, 10.) but he mildely ſtileth him huſband, whom he knew to be an adulterer, that ſhe might neither preſume any longer to conteſt with the ſearcher of hearts, nor deſpair of his mercy, whoſe lenity in reproving ſpake him mercifull to cure and amend; not buſie, or malicious to finde fault, or accuſe.

v. 17. I have no husband] Thus ſecurely dallieth ſhe in ſo great an intereſt as her own ſalvation; it is hard for ſinners (not onely aſleep, but) dead in ſins and tranſgreſſions, to awake at the firſt call of God, and to acknowledge his voice therein: ſhe ſuppoſing that ſhe talked with meere man, thought with her womaniſh artifices to elude him, denying her matrimony, and diſſembling her adultery; but no captions or fallacies can deceive God.

thou haſt ſaid well] Chriſt telleth her plainly of her faults (who could not before underſtand what he ſaid) in mentioning the fifth man whom ſhe now had in place of an husband, but truely an adulterer.

v. 19. I perceive that thou art a Prophet] The mentioning of her ſin, ſmiteth her with a greater reverence of Chriſt, as of a Prophet, who would know thoſe errours of her former life.

v. 20 in this mountain] Mount Garizim, near Shekem. Jud. 9. 7. in which Sanaballath, by Alexander of Macedon his leave, built them a temple. Joſep. Antiq. l. 11. c. 8. See Iſ. Caſaub. exer. 13.

Jeruſalem is the place, &c.] See Deut. 12. 5, 6. 1 Kings 8. 29. 2 Kings 21. 4. 1 Kings 14. 21. thus would ſhe divert the diſcourſe concerning her ſin and ſhame, by embarking in a nationall controverſie, which had long been banded between the Jews and Samaritans.

v. 21. nor at Jeruſalem] The publike worſhip of God ſhall be no more reſtrained to that place, which was appointed thereto for a time, to exerciſe their faith in expectation of Chriſt, in whom alone we can appear acceptable to God. See Mal 1. 11. 1 Tim. 2. 8. Epheſ. 2. 13, 14.

v. 22. Ye worſhip ye know not what] See 2 Kings 17. 29 &c.

for ſalvation is of the Jews] It ſeemeth to allude to Iſaiah 2. 3. the meaning is, that the doctrine of ſaving health, is that which the Prophets have taught.

v. 23. in ſpirit and in truth] Spirit is here ſet in oppoſition to ceremonies, which are called carnall. Hebr. 7. 16. which prefigured that which Chriſt performed: he requireth now (ſaith Euthymius) non corporaliter, ſed ſpiritualiter immolantes, thoſe that ſacrifice not bodily, but ſpiritually; remiſſion of ſins being accompliſhed in Chriſts one oblation of himſelf once offered, there remaineth no more ſacrifice for the ſins of the living or the dead. See Hebr. 10. 18. there remaineth ſtill ſpirituall ſacrifice of prayer and praiſes by us to be offered. 1 Pet. 2. 5. Rev. 8. 4. but no more bodily, proper or externall ſacrifice: he will be worſhipped now, not in the figure (as under the law) but in the truth prefigured: and herein he ſecretly taxeth the Samaritans blinde errour, for that they held no certainty from Gods word, neither was their pretended zeal and devotion according to truth and knowledge, both which are fundamentall to the acts of religion. See Iſaiah 8. 20. and in this compariſon Chriſt ſheweth the preeminence of the Jewiſh religion, grounded then on Gods infallible word, and the vanity of the Samaritan ſuperſtition and will-worſhip, built on traditions, and opinions of men, which are ever uncertain: for ignorance of the truth, as Lactantius well noteth, maketh incertam, labentemque ſententiam, an uncertain, and ſlippery aſſertion: will-worſhip is no religious act; neither are good intentions enough, we muſt be certain of Gods reveiled will, to direct us in his worſhip, otherwiſe we cannot do it in faith.

v. 24. God is a ſpirit] 2 Cor. 3. 17.

muſt worſhip him in ſpirit] This ſheweth wherein Gods ſervice principally conſiſteth; excluding the Jewiſh antiquated ceremonies, but not that bodily worſhip which is requiſite, either for our acknowledgement of God before men, order in his publike worſhip, or the ſtirring up our own affections in the private.

v. 25. which is called Chriſt] Theſe words (omitted by the Syriac) ſeem to be the Evangeliſts interpretation of the name Meſſias: though the Samaritan religion was very impure, confuſed and mingled with ſundry errours, yet held they this principle concerning the coming of the Meſſias: ſo manifeſt was this light, that it ſhined to them that ſate in darkneſſe, the very heathens, the Samaritans out of Moſes writings. Deut. 18. 18. the impious Balaam. Numb. 24. 17. and the devil his ſelf acknowledged ſome ſenſe thereof: it is probable that this woman underſtanding by the ſpeech of of Chriſt, that ſome extraordinary change of the Church, and Eccleſiaſticall ſtate was nigh, preſently thought of the Meſſias; the rather, becauſe the marks of his coming, ſpecially the departure of the ſcepter from Judah appeared to the world: in her referring the certainty of all things in religious worſhip to the Magiſtery of Chriſt, preferring him before Moſes and all the Prophets, ſhe is a good preſident, where we may learn in him to look for all the treaſures of wiſedom and knowledge. Coloſ. 2. 3. and to hear him. Matth. 17. 5.

v. 26. I am he When the Jews preſſed him ſaying, how long doeſt thou make us doubt (or hold us in ſuſpenſe) if thou be the Chriſt, tell us plainly. chap. 10. 24. he anſwered not ſo poſitively; but here he manifeſteth himſelf: he that ſaw all hearts, knew that the Jews aſked not to believe and be ſaved, but captiouſly, and to finde ſome calumny againſt him; and that this preſent hearer ſhould convert, and be a means of the converſion of many others, when ſhe ſhould know who it was that talked with her. Chriſt is never wanting, where he knoweth the revelation of himſelf will profit to ſalvation, Chap 6. 64. where his goſpel is hid, it is hid to them that periſh. 2 Cor. 4. 4.

v. 27. Upon this] Even as he ſpake theſe words.

came his diſciples] From Sychar, verſ. 5. 8. into which they went to buy meat: thus long by Gods providence they were abſent, but ſo ſoon as he had declared himſelf to be Chriſt, they came; leſt out of zeal, not yet well informed, they might (as ſometimes they endeavoured, Matth. 19, 13, 14. Mark 10. 13, &c.) hinder a work of mercy.

v. 28. left her water pot] Having a taſte of thoſe waters of life, of which Chriſt ſpake, ſhe quickly forgat her thirſt and ſecular neceſſitie, which brought her out to Jacobs well; and haſted into the city, to draw others to Chriſt: when our affections are indeed taken up to things above (Col. 3. 1. &c.) our worldly cares, in a great meaſure, fall off like Eliahs mantle when he was taken up to heaven, 2 Kings 2. 13. See Pſal. 69. 9. and 102. 4. Matth. 17. 4. Matth. 4. 20. 22. Matth. 16. 27. Job 23. 12. Pſal. 19. 10. and 119. 127.

v. 29. Come ſee a man] Such is the excellency of heavenly treaſures (ever moſt diffuſive of themſelves) if one finde them, there is no reſt until he communicate the ſame to others: if one finde any ſecular treaſure, he will carefully conceal it; becauſe the more communicate therein, the leſſe muſt every ſharer have: but the more by thee are brought to Chriſt, the more thou haſt of that divine riches. She ſaith not go out and ſee a man, &c. but come and ſee: the ſeed of this knowledge cannot lye dead in our heart. See Pſalm 116. 10. 2 Cor. 4. 13. it is like the widows oil, 2 Kings 4. 5, 6. encreaſed by pouring out: they have but a doubtful ſhare in Chriſt, who pretending to ſend others to him, will not go themſelves: nor doth ſhe take upon her to define, or teach; ſhe only leadeth them to hear Chriſt, contented to perſwade them to ſee what ſhe had found.

all things that ever I did] My great and many ſins: that is, multa quæ erant occulta, Euthymius: many things, which were ſo reſerved, that I am confiident, he could have told me all; thus ſhe ſeemeth, not to ſpare her own reputation, that ſhe might therby bring others to Chriſt. See 1 Tim. 1. 15. Acts 22. 3. 1 Cor. 15. 9. Gal. 1. 13.

v. 30. went out of the city] Out of Sychar, verſe 5. it was by the inſtinct of Gods ſpirit, that they came, therefore the vility of the reporter hindred them not: we ought not to have the Goſpel in reſpect of perſons, nor ſo much to regard, who ſpeaketh, as what is ſpoken: they have little affection to beleeve in Chriſt, who are ſo intent to the meſſengers perſonall failings, that they thereby chiefly valew their meſſage: theſe do not object her former ſins, or infamie, becauſe they were willing by any means to be led to Chriſt: a contrary minde was in thoſe who ſaid to the man that had been blinde, John. 9. 34. thou art altogether born in ſin, and doeſt thou teach us?

v. 31. Maſter eat] Of theſe things which we have bought.

v. 32 I have meat to eat that ye know not of] That which I moſt deſire; or, more hunger for then meat; to wit, that I may do the will of God, in ſaving ſinners. See Job 23. 12. becauſe he would make his diſciples teachers of the word; he thus teacheth them by his own example, to have a greater care of others ſalvation, then of their own bodily neceſſities; and of the kingdom of God, then of all worldly emoluments: he ſaith not, I do not hunger; but I have meat, &c. thus would he erect their thoughts, and make them attentive to that great work, which they were preſently to ſee in the converſion of the Samaritans: thus would he teach all, rightly to order their deſires: firſt for Gods kingdom, and then for things neceſſary to this preſent life: this one thing duely obſerved, would both open the windows of heaven to pour us out bleſſings, and ſupplies of all neceſſaries, and make our ſtore a bleſſing, which without this one method ſo often proveth a meere curſe and occaſion of damnation to many.

v. 33 hath any man brought him ought &c.] They could underſtand nothing but concerning bodily food: ſo hard is it to raiſe the thoughts above carnall reaſon. See alſo Matth. 16. 7. John 11. 11.

v. 34. to do the wil of him] That is, to proſecute the calling of the Samaritans to the knowledge of the goſpel & to ſalvation. ſee C.

which he deſired more then bodily food: a document is here to the Miniſters, of diligence, and fervency in the execution of their charge; and alſo of conſolation to us all; Chriſt who then ſo much zealed the ſalvation of Samaritans then to be called, hath not leſſe care for us whom he hath called.

v. 35. Yet four moneths] ἔτι τετράμηνόν ἐστι, the Syriac interpreteth, poſt quatuor menſes; after four moneths: it is an Hebrew manner of expreſſion; as Jonah 3. 4. עוד ארבעים יום hod arbahim jom; yet fourty dayes, Aquila, Symmachus &c. τεσσαράκοντα, fourty dayes. See Auguſtin. de C. D. l. 18. c. 44.

white already to harveſt] Matth. 9. 37. The ſpirituall harveſt is now ripe. as Luke 10. 2. therefore as the ripe corn cannot bear delay (without the owners great loſſe) but muſt be gathered in, ſo muſt the Jews and Gentiles now ready for Gods kingdom: by regions white to the harveſt, he meaneth, (as Chryſoſtom, Theophylact, Euthymius, &c. interpret) τὸ πλῆθος τῶν προσερχομένων Σαμαρειτῶν, the multitude of the Samaritans coming to him; and their chearfull mindes, ready to beleeve: Cyril more generally and better underſtandeth, thoſe who being prepared by the voice of the Prophets, were to be inſtructed in the faith of Chriſt: we may not unaptly ſay of them, as Ambroſ. l. 10. ep. 82. ſaith of Eliah; Prophetam Domini agnoſcebant corvi, quem non agnoſcebant Judæi, paſcebant corvi, quem genus illud perſequebatur: the ravens acknowledged the Prophet of the Lord, whom the Jews acknowledge not: the ravens fed him whom this generation perſecuted.

v. 36. that reapeth, receiveth wages] The doctrine of the Prophets, is compared to ſowing, and the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, to gathering of ripe fruits; in either, the faithfull ſervant ſhall have his reward.

v. 38. other men laboured] Meaning the Prophets, and John Baptiſt. See on verſe 36.

v. 39. many of the Samaritans, &c.] This was a præludium to the calling of the Gentiles; as were, the coming of the wiſe men to ſeek Chriſt, and the Centurion &c. Matth. 8. 5. howbeit the fulneſſe of the time for their generall calling, being not yet come, he gave in charge to his diſciples, not to go into the cities of the Samaritans, &c. Matth. 10. 5. for he was a Miniſter of the circumciſion. Rom. 15. 8. ſent ſpecially to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael. Matth. 15. 24. therefore he would not yet give the Jews matter of offence.

v. 40. beſought him that he would tarry] They who have any true and reall ſenſe of their intereſt in that which the Goſpel propoſeth to them, cannot but love and deſire their company & preſence who preach the ſame: therfore the Samaritans hearing the gratious words of Chriſt himſelf, deſired to entertain him: Paul deſired to die, that he might be with him. Phil. 1. 23.

v. 41. more beleeved] For faith is by hearing. Rom. 10. 17. which, whoever planteth and watereth, God giveth. 1 Cor. 3. 7.

v. 42. not becauſe of thy ſaying] λαλιάν; Commonly importing talkativeneſſe: Suidas interpreteth it by δημηγορία; which Budæus expreſſeth by the oratoricall fluentneſſe of tongue in thoſe who are more ſtudious to pleaſe, then to profit: as Suidas inſtanceth in Arceſilaus, ſatis in loquendo liber; as the Hebrews aptly expreſſed it by איש דברים iſh debarim a man of words; that is, eloquent, as Exod. 4. 10. So Cant. 4. 3. מדברך midbarech thy ſpeech is pleaſant: where the 70. give it by the word here uſed, ἡ λαλιά σοῦ, thy ſpeech &c. God, complying with our infirmities, hath many wayes and means to bring us to beleeve: he will provoke the Jews by emulation of the Gentiles. Rom. 11. 11. others, by the honeſt and harmleſſe converſation of profeſſours. 1 Pet. 3. 1. Some by the ordinary means, preaching of the word and adminiſtration of the ſacraments: ſome by the authority and credit of the Church; whereas, who, or whatſoever the occaſion be, the word of God is the ground on whoſe certain authority we reſt, and for which we beleeve: as here, at the womans report, they beleeved, and came forth: but all that ſerved onely to bring them to Chriſt: ſo ſaith Auguſtin. tract. 15. in Joh. Chriſt is preached to thoſe who are without, and yet not Chriſtians; by Chriſtian friends, tanquam illa muliere, hoc eſt Eccleſiâ nunciante, as it were that woman, that is, the Church, declaring, one might well ſay of himſelf, I had not beleeved the Goſpel, except I had beleeved the Church: becauſe the voice of the Church (as this woman the Samaritans) firſt moved him to come to Chriſt: not that he finally built his faith on the authority of men, much leſſe preferred it before the authority of Gods word; but becauſe he acknowledgeth the means (the Miniſtry of man) by which God brought him to beleeve his divine word, which onely is infallible; as a man ſhut up in ſome dark Labyrinth; being thence led out by ſome obſcure lamp carried before him, to the clear and open ſun, might truely ſay, I had not come to the light of the ſun, except I had followed this lamp; yet could it not be thence concluded, that now in the ſunſhine, he muſt ſtill truſt to the light of the lamp, or that the ſuns light ſhould depend on the dimme light thereof; humane reaſon looketh on immediate means and occaſions as a cauſe, ſine quâ non; between which, and the ſupreme cauſe, in a clear view, it diſcerneth a vaſt diſtance; we honour the authority of the Church, and the Miniſtry of men, but put much difference between the authority of theſe, and God, on hoſe infallible truth our faith is grounded.

Saviour of the world] Chriſt having preached to them, that the ſalvation which he brought, was univerſall without reſpect of perſons; they apprehend their right and intereſt therein, and ſo conclude, that he brought conditions of peace to them, who were indeed far off from the covenants of grace. Epheſ. 2. 17. their admirable improvement of two dayes hearing; to the appehenſion of this ſum of the Goſpel, muſt needs riſe in judgement and condemn, not onely the Jews two yeers fruitleſſe hearing Chriſt, but alſo our many yeers hearing the ſame word without fruits of faith and repentance.

v. 43. departed thence] From Sychar in Samaria; he would not now ſtay long there, for the infirm Jews ſakes, his courſe being not finiſhed in Judea.

v. 44. Jeſus himſelf teſtified] The Evangeliſt rendreth the reaſon why Jeſus went not into his own countrey Nazareth; they honoured him not as they ought. See Luk. 4. 24. Mar. 6. 4.

v. 45. the Galileans received him] The proud Jews deſpiſed this people. ch. 7. 52. ſo did they the Samaritans, yet both Samaritans and Galileans received Chriſt, when the Jews rejected him and his doctrine; many times they, whom arrogant hypocrites deſpiſe, as impious and unconſiderable, more happily receive Chriſt, and the Goſpel then proud boaſters.

v. 46. made the water wine] Chap. 2. 1. &c.

a certain noble man] A courtier, or ruler of Herods houſe, or ſome principall officer, counſellour or chieftain; the Syriac ſtileth him עבד מלכא habed malco, a ſervant of the king, a Preſident or viceroy; ſo the interpreter of the Syriac hath it gerens vices regis. (See If. Caſaubon. Exer. c. 13. N. 55.) for though Herod Antipas was but a Tetrarch and no king, yet doubtleſſe he was by his friends and followers, vulgarly ſtiled king, and ſo the Evangeliſts themſelves accordingly call him. Mark 6. 14. &c.

v. 47. when he heard] Having heard of the fame of Jeſus healing all diſeaſes; and hearing alſo where he now was; he addreſſeth himſelf to him for help for his ſon.

v. 48. ye will not beleeve] Yet he beleeved, otherwiſe he would not have come to him for help; but he beleeved not aright in him, who thought he could not help, except he were bodily preſent; had he been well informed, he would have beleeved him to be God every where preſent. Greg. hom. 28. in Evang.

v. 49. come down ere my childe die] This ſheweth the weakneſſe of his faith relying ſo much on the bodily preſence of Chriſt, as if his ſon could no otherwiſe be cured.

v. 50. the man beleeved] The man ſpecified, verſ. 46. ſo that here Chriſt at once cured two; the childe of the fever, and the father of unbelief; the man departed, relying on Chriſts power and mercy.

v. 51. as he was now going down] In the way between Cana and Capernaum: which ſtood upon the lake or ſea of Galilee, on the banck of the river Jordan, in the borders of Zabulon and Neptalim.

his ſervants met him] Being ambitious to comfort their Maſter with ſpeed, by bringing him the welcome news of his ſons recovery, it is probable, that contending among themſelves who ſhould be the meſſenger, more came to meet him, where one could as eaſily have brought the tidings.

v. 52 Then enquired he of them the hour] Deſiring further confirmation of that which he ſo much wiſhed.

v. 53. and his whole houſe] The Maſter finding his ſon recovered, by the word of Chriſt, bodily abſent, beleeved the divine power of Chriſt; and relating the whole paſſage of the buſineſſe to all that were in his family, they alſo beleeved with him.

v. 54. This is again the ſecond miracle] The ſecond which he did in Galilee, in Judea he had done many. Thus will Chriſt confirm that which he hath begun; and ſo precious are the ſouls of a few beleevers in his ſight; we read here but of one houſe gained to the faith; yet he (who foreſaw all events to come) for that one ſake, came again to viſit what he had planted; he hath regard and care to ſave one Noah in a periſhing world, one Lot in five cities. Gen. 18. 32. he expreſſeth it in two parables. Luke 15.

v. 2. by the ſheep market] or gate, ἐπὶ τῇ προβατικῇ, the firſt tranſlation underſtandeth ἀγορὰ, market, becauſe there was neer, a ſheep market, or beaſt market, to accommodate ſacrificers, who might there buy, the ſecond tranſlation underſtand πύλη, gate: for, ſaith an author, by it the beaſts to be offered in ſacrifice, were brought in. Nehe.3.1.& 12.39. we read שער הצאן ſhabar hatzon. 70. τὴν πύλην τὴν προβατικὴν: the ſheep-gate. So Junius and Tremelius give it portam gregis: this gate was to the ſouthward of the city,in that part of the valley which looketh toward the front of the temple, and city of David. *Adricomius. Betheſda] Syr. בית חסדא beth cheſda, the houſe of beneficence, or bounty: for, God there bountifully exerciſed his power in curing all diſeaſes of his people.

having five porches] the word ςοὰ here uſed, hath divers ſignifications; Suidas expreſſeth it by ταμεῖον (a barn,or granary where corn or fruits were layed up) διὰ τὸ περιμήκης εἶναι-because it was a long room (*So Clem. Alexandr. Pæd.l.*2. ſaith, δις ὐκ ἔςι ταμεῖον ϗ ἀποθήκη) the Latines commonly give it porticus, which we call porches, galleries, or walkes, to ſhelter from violent heat or rain: it ſeemed they had made ſuch about this pool, to ſhelter ſick and lame men, repairing to that place, and watching for the moving of the water, which being ſodain,and at no fixed time,they could not have been able to attend, had they had no cover to defend them from the weather,and place to reſt in.

v. 3. blinde, halt, withered] the Evangeliſt mentioneth ſome, to declare that they were no eaſie or common cures there wrought, but even of the greateſt and moſt deſperate maladies.

v. 4. an Angel went down at a certain ſeaſon] not in any viſible ſhape, but by the ſodain moving of the water, and the admirable effect following in the preſent cure of him that firſt went into the water after that motion, it appeared to be the extraordinary work of God, who as he hath made his Angels miniſtring ſpirits for the good of his, ſo doth he powerfully work by them, in extraordinary diſpenſations.

at a certain ſeaſon] there are divers conjectures concerning this ſeaſon; but when, and how often he deſcended, we have no certainty.

whoſoever then firſt, &c.] God could have cured all at once in a moment, but in his wiſdom he inſtanceth his preſence, power and mercy in a few and at certain times, that all may depend on his providence, and patiently expect him; in reſpect both of the time and manner of their relief, here are ſundry things conſiderable in theſe cures, 1. that all diſeaſes, how old,great, or deſperate ſoever,were here cured. 2. that, in a moment, or very quickly, 3. that but one at once was healed, of ſo many who expected Gods mercy therein, one onely attained health, and all the reſt, to their no ſmall grief were unhelped. 4. that he onely was helped who firſt ſtepped in,or was put in; after the moving of the water, as if that one,took up all the healing vertue. 5. that the ſame water could not alwayes heal, but at certain times, when it had been troubled, as a wrought ſea, or from the bottom to the top: for ſo the word, ἐταράσσετο, importeth, as ἐτάραξε δὲ πόντον. Hom. ὀδ. ε. 6. that no other moving, but that of an angel deſcending from heaven, made thoſe waters healing: all was to teach us to caſt our cares on the Lord, to depend on his providence, who can help, with ordinary means, without them, and contrary to them. See 2 Kings 5. 10. and 2. 20. Exodus 14. 22. and 16. 15. 35. Judg. 3. 11. and 15. 15. 19. 2 Kings 4. Mark 8. 23. Joſh.9.6.

v. 5. had an infirmity thirty and eight years] Chriſt choſe out this man, whoſe condition and diſeaſe might ſeem moſt incurable, by reaſon of the long continuance thereof, and he moſt unlikely to have benefit of the water, who neither was able to move himſelf, neither had any man to carry him into the pool in due ſeaſon, this was, as to ſet off Gods goodneſs in the eminency of the miracle; ſo in this pattern of patience, to teach us the Prophets rule, though it tarry, wait for it, becauſe it will ſurely come, &c. Hab. 2. 3. (God often delayeth that which he will certainly give at laſt) alſo to make the afflicted ſeriouſly conſider their faults for which God puniſheth them; ſee Lam. 3.39.40.41. by a divine diſpoſall it cometh ſo to paſs, that, prolixiora vitia ægritudo prolixior excurat. Greg. hom. 19.in Evang. long ſickneſs burneth long vices.God delayeth to help,to exerciſe the faith and patience of the afflicted,to kindle their zeal to prayer,to render his mercies more dear and remarkable;ſee Joh.9.1.21 John 11.39. Matth.9.20. Luke 13.11.

v. 6. wilt thou be healed?] there ſeemed no doubt but that he (who had with thirty eight years patience endured) would gladly be healed: but this Chriſt ſaid,to make both him and the ſpectators the more attentive to that which he was now about to do: thus he preventeth us with his mercy, ſee Iſa.65. 24.this indeed is proper to the Almighty and true God,*inexorata beneficia præbere feſſis,&c. Arnob. adv.Gent.l.*3. to give unbegged benefits,to the weary and infirm:which when he doth in matters ſpiritual,he maketh us willing to receive who freely giveth of his own good will,ſo that there, as Syneſius de inſomn. ſaith καθαρμοῦ τὸ μέγιστον μέρος ἡ θέλησις, the greateſt part of the cleanſing, is the will, to be clean.

v. 7. I have no man, &c.] ſo uncharitable was that Jewiſh nation become; they thought all religion conſiſted in ſacrificing, but held not charity, the ground and ſum of the law: in ſo great a city,ſo much pretending to Religion, no man, in ſo long time, ſhewed ſo much mercy to this poor man, as to help him into the water: no wonder that Chriſt ſent the learned doctors to learn that neceſſary leſſon, I will have mercy,not ſacrifice (Matt. 9. 13. 1 Sam. 15. 22.) that is, mercy rather then ſacrifice.

v. 8. take up thy bed] for the evidence and manifeſtation of the cure.

v. 9. immediately the man was made whole] though he had been ſo many yeers lame,Chriſt preſently healed him, in the ſame hour, as the interpreter of the Syriac giveth it.

v. 10. the Jews therefore ſaid] they pretend religion,to overthrow the ground and fundamentals therof,faith in Chriſt,and charity to men. (See 1 Tim.1.5. 1 Cor.13.2.3.)becauſe Chriſt healed on the Sabbath,whereas indeed that ſhews,that works of mercy are works of the Sabbath made for man.

it is not lawfull for thee to carry thy bed] Jer.17.22. it was not lawful to carry, except that carrying had bin within the compaſs of ſanctifying the Sabbath, as was the advancement of Gods glory, a work of mercy and neceſſity, in which Chriſt ſhewed it lawfull.

v. 11. He that made me whole] he replyeth not concerning works of the Sabbath, but citeth the authority of him, who had divine power to cure him: take heed of raſh cenſure;and conſider, not only the letter, but alſo the intent of the law; which is faith and charity. See on v. 10.

v. 12. What man is that] they would not acknowledge Gods hand in this work, but enquire after a man by them pretended to oppoſe the expreſs commandment of God concerning the Sabbath; as if they ſaid, do but name that man, and what ever he be,he ſhall not go unpuniſhed,thus were they prepoſterouſly zealous, and ſuperſtitiouſly religious, not conſidering the ſenſe but the letter of the law.

v. 13. Conveyed himſelf away] this ſheweth the reaſon why the man that was healed was ignorant who had healed him, and had not enquired concerning the authour of ſo admirable a bleſſing on him beſtowed: the unexpected ſenſe of perfect health, and ſtrength ſodainly recovered, might poſſibly take up all his thoughts in admiration; and while he was riſing and taking up his bed as he was commanded, Jeſus went away through the preſent multitude.

a multitude being] or from the multitude that was] the Syriac giveth it, had hid himſelf in the multitude: which might eaſily be, ſeeing there were many of ſundry ſtatures there; and in multitudes it is not eaſiy to diſcern one from another: the word here uſed is ἐξένευσεν which properly ſignifieth, to ſwim out; the multitude is often compared to fluctuant waters. Reve. 17. 2. 15.

v. 14. Sin no more] he thus warneth to ſhew him the cauſe of his infirmity, and the right uſe of health, which is,amendment of the former ſinfull life: thus good Phyſitians not only cure, but preſcribe for the avoidance of a more dangerous relapſe: God delighteth not in our ſorrows, but therefore ſmiteth us with infirmity,that he might not condemn us with the periſhing world, and certainly worſe muſt needs befall them, who will not be warned by lighter corrections, either in this life, or that to come.

v. 15. told the Jews,that it was Jeſus] they aſked him, who it was. v. 12. now being enformed (probably by enquiring of his Diſciples)he telleth them: ſhewing them that divine and admirable Phyſitian if poſſibly they alſo might want him for themſelves or friends.

v. 16. Therefore did the Jewes perſecute Jeſus] for it is the property of hypocrites,under pretence of zeal for religion,to execute their private malice.

v. 17. my father worketh hitherto] my father is beneficent in preſerving you all on this very Sabbath: & my works are his, & ſo,no violation of the Sabbath: I work by the ſame power, which not only at the beginning created,& ſtill preſerveth all the creatures(Heb.1.2.3.)but alſo healed this man,& ſo,as *Hil. de trin.l.*7. ſaith well,in eo ergo quod operatur filius,opus patris eſt: therfore the work of the father is in that wch the ſon worketh, they have one power & work.God in the beginning reſted the ſeventh day wch he ſanctified:he ceaſed then,(ſaith Aug.Confeſ.

ep. 146. 9. 2. ab ipſis naturis condendis — non ab earum adminiſtratione) from creating natures, or new ſpecies, but not from his adminiſtration, and preſervation of thoſe kindes which he then created, for as the ſame ſaith l. 12. de C.D.c. 17. novit quieſcens agere, & agens quieſcere, he knoweth how to work reſting, and to reſt working; who doth all things without labour, and laſſitude, only by his word.

v. 18. Becauſe he had broken the Sabbath] this relateth to the Iews ſenſe: he had not broken the Sabbath, for he came not to deſtroy, but to fulfill the law. Matt. 5. 17. but they thought he had broken it.

that God was his father] this was proper and peculiar to him, as a father by nature, not adoption.

making himſelf equal with God] they underſtood not that he was God of God, coequall, conſubſtantial and coeternal with the father.

v. 19. Nothing of himſelf] or, as diſtinct from the fathers work: ſeeing, as they are one God, ſo have they one will and one working: for ſaith Fulgentius de fide orthod. in that nature of the Trinity, ſic totum unum eſt, ut nihil ibi poſſit ſeparari vel dividi— ſo is all one, that there nothing can be ſeparated or divided: ſo is all equall, that nothing greater or leſſer can there be found.

what things ſoever he doth theſe alſo doth the ſon likewiſe] whatſoever the father doth, the ſon doth, becauſe they are one God, have one will power and working. So Nazianzen. orat. 36. well interpreteth, this υἱὸς ὁμοίως ποιεῖ doth the Son likewiſe; οὐ κατὰ τ̃ τῶν γινομένων ὁμοίωσιν, ἀλλὰ κατὰ τ̃ τῆς ἐξουσίας ὁμοτιμίαν — not for the ſimilitude of thoſe things they do, but in reſpect of the ſame power and authority of both, the ſon doth not imitate, but cooperate; he worketh not the like, but the ſame work which the father doth.

v. 20. Sheweth him all things] by a Divine and unſpeakable communication.

v. 21. Quickneth whom he wil] ζωοποιεῖ, maketh alive, or giveth life, underſtand here by life, righteouſneſs, all the gifts of the H. Ghoſt, and al things belonging to our ſalvation, with all the parts & degrees therof: he findeth us al dead in ſins. Ephe. 2. 1. therefore in the work of our Salvation he muſt needs begin from our firſt reſurrection to the life of grace: and theſe words, raiſeth up, and quickneth; ſhew that he both raiſeth up, and delivereth from ſin, and alſo ſanctifieth us by the ſame ſpirit (See Rom. 8. 10. 11.) which he doth, (as all other acts of mercy, or, ad extra) with the father: therefore alſo when he would raiſe Lazarus he prayed, and gave thanks to his father c. 11. 41. that we might know, that they joyntly wrought in the ſame work.

v. 22. The father judgeth no man] c. 8. 15. he ſaith, I judge no man: that is in point of civil judicature: or, I alone judge no man: and indeed he came not then into the world to judge, but to preach the gladſome tidings of ſalvation: ſo the father judgeth not alone, becauſe he judgeth by the ſon, Act. 17. 31. Rom. 2. 16. the word (judgeth) here, as v. 27. 30. ſignifying full power to rule in heaven and earth: as Matt. 11. 27. & 28. 18. he ſaith the father judgeth no man, as they imagined, who ſeparated him from the Son; by whom as he created all, ſo ruleth he, and judgeth he all: ſo he ſaith he came not to do his own will, but the will of his father. See v. 30. and c. 6. 38. c. 7. 16. not ſimply, but in their ſenſe who would divide the father and the Son, ſo he often times ſpeaketh. See c. 9. 3.

v. 23. Honour the Son] In the unity of the Godhead; neither of them can be truely worſhipped without the other.

v. 24. but is paſſed from death unto life] that is, ſhal as certainly, as if it were already done.

v. 25. the dead ſhall hear the voyce] in the firſt, or ſpirituall reſurrection See Reve. 20. 6.

and they that hear ſhall live] they that believe, and obey the voice of Chriſt, ſhall live eternally.

v. 26. ſo hath he given to the Son] he rendreth a reaſon of that he ſaid, the dead ſhall hear the voice of the Son of God, and live: becauſe God the father, who is the eternall fountain of life, communicateth his whole eſſence to the ſon: ſo that, as he is the eternal word and wiſdom of God, he hath all things of himſelf: but as he is the Son of man, he hath received all things of the father, as, authority and power to execute judgement; which underſtand principally of the laſt general judgement, as that, c. 3. 17. God ſent not his Son into the world, to condemn the world, &c. that is not now in his ſtate of humility.

v. 27. To execute judgement] ſupream power to govern and adminiſter all things.

becauſe he is the Son of man] not only as he is God, but alſo as he is man; that all men may ſee their judge, Reve. 1. 7.

v. 28. All that are in the graves] that is, all the dead, in ſea and land: this he ſaith to ſhew that he will not only raiſe the believers to the life of grace here, but alſo to the life of glory in the world to come: & though the obſtinate ſinners would not hear his voice, preaching conditions of mercy and ſalvation to them now; yet ſhall they againſt their wills, hear his voice and feel his power raiſing them from the dead, and ſummoning them to judgement.

v. 29. They that have done good] See Mat. 25. 46. wherein they ſhalbe rewarded according to, not for their works; life eternal is Gods free gift, not mans merit. See Rom. 6. 23.

v. 30. as I hear, I judge] as I know my fathers judgement.

v. 31. if I bear witneſſe of my ſelf] c. 8. 14. if I only teſtified, ye might diſtruſt; but now, God, the only ſufficient witneſs of himſelf, teſtifieth of me.

v. 32. There is another] that is, God the father as c. 7. 18. he acknowledgeth me his only Son in whom he is well pleaſed. Matt. 3. 17. & 17. ſo that I arrogate nothing to my ſelf, which God my father doth not avow.

v. 33. ye ſent unto John] he preſſeth them with Johns teſtimony, wch they durſt not deny: & with their own judgment, who ſent unto him to be reſolved concerning Chriſt; why ſhould you ſend to him except you would ſtand to his teſtimony? he gave witnes to the truth, wch ye condemn as falſhood.

v. 34. receive not teſtimony from man] I ground not on mans witneſs: man can no more prove Gods truth, then a lamp can ſhew us the ſun.

v. 35. he was a burning and a ſhining lamp] he was not that light of light mentioned c. 1. 8. but one bearing witneſs of him: he was an eminent light, ardent in the zeal of faith and piety: ſo that the unbelieving Jews were wilfully darkened, and voluntarily erred in their inconſtancy, wherein they never liked any long, were they never ſo admirable lights, in ſincerity of zeal, and truth of doctrine.

v. 36. I have greater witneſs] See Mat. 3. 17. Mat. 17. 5. 1 Joh. 5 7. he ſaith, greater, not truer both were true, but the works which Chriſt did, more evidently concluded that he was the Son of God, and are ſo ſaid to teſtifie of him, as the heavens are ſaid to declare the glory of God. nor ſeen his ſhape] See on c. 1. 18. Deut. 4. 12.

v. 38. ye have not his word abiding in you] they had the true word of God (as many now have) in their cloſets, but not in their hearts: they neither underſtood the meaning therof, nor did they ſet their hearts to obey it, ſee c. 8. 19. 37. they who receive not Chriſt, are no true diſciples of Moſes & the prophets.

v. 39. ſearch the Scriptures] or, ye do ſearch, as Act. 17. 11. he proveth himſelf to be the Meſſias, 1. by the fathers teſtimony. 2. by John Baptiſts witneſs, 3. by his works. 4. now by the Scriptures, the word ἐρευνᾶτε, may be either the indicative, and ſo tranſlated ye do ſearch, or the imperative, and ſo it is to be given ſearch ye, the firſt ſenſe implyeth a juſt reproof of their prepoſterous diligence; as if he ſaid, you do indeed read and ſearch the Scriptures, rightly thinking that the doctrine of Salvation is thence to be drawn: yet you obſtinately diſbelieve him of whom the ſcripture witneſſeth, that there is ſalvation in none other: and here, that which Hil. l. 7. de tra. ſaith is very conſiderable; it cannot (ſaith he) be denied, that from miſunderſtanding, the controverſie concerning faith aroſe, dum quod legitur ſenſui potius coaptatur, quàm lectioni ſenſus obtemperat: while that which is read is rather fitted to the ſenſe (of the reader) then (his) ſenſe ſubjected to that he readeth: and again (contr. Conſtant.) he ſaith there is none of the hereticks which doth not feigne, or falſly pretend that he preacheth according to ſcriptures; even thoſe things in which he blaſphemeth: they all ſpeak ſcriptures, without their ſenſe, and pretend faith, without faith; Scripturæ enim non in legendo ſunt, ſed in intelligendo: for the Scriptures are not in reading (or the letter) but in underſtanding (that is, inward ſenſe and true meaning) and again; optimus enim lector eſt, qui dictorum intelligentiam expectet ex dictis potiùs quam imponat, & retulerit magis quem attulerit; neque cogat id videri dictis contineri, quod ante lectionem præſumpſerit intelligendum, &c. for he is the beſt reader, who rather expecteth the meaning of the ſayings from the words, then imposeth it (on them) and rather carrieth away from, then bringeth (ſenſe to that he readeth) and who forceth not the words to ſeem to carry that ſenſe, which before his reading, he preſumed muſt be underſtood, therefore when the ſpeech ſhall be concerning God, let us yeeld God the knowledge of himſelf, and attend his words with holy reverence: for he is a competent witneſs of himſelf, who is not (cannot be) known, except he reveile himſelf, the ſecond ſenſe importeth an exhortation to ſearch the ſcripture, not ſuperficially, but as Euthymius after Chryſoſt. ſaith, he commandeth them to dig deep that they may finde: ἐν τῷ βάθει κείμενα, thoſe things which are in the depth; for it is not in the ſuperficies, ἀλλ᾽ ὥσπερ τις θησαυρὸς ἐν πολλῷ τῷ βάθει κατάκειται: but as a treaſure hid in great depth.

ye think ye have eternal life] he ſaith not, ye have, but ye think ye have: teaching that they (as now too many,) deceived themſelves, in opinion that hearing, or reading the word was ſufficient without faith and obedience thereto: See Rom 2. 13. Hebr. 4. 2.

v. 40. he will not come to me] The meaning is, that they labour in vain in reading the ſcriptures, who make it not their principall aim, to finde Chriſt therein: and that it was their malice which hindred them from receiving the benefit of eternall life offered them in the Goſpel; in ſaying ye will not come, he taxeth their contumacy as the chief cauſe of their ignorance and blindneſſe: opinion of having in themſelves ſufficient ſanctity to ſave them, is a dangerous obſtruction; they who think themſelves healthy, ſeek not to the Phyſician.

v. 41. I receive not honour from men] That is, not humane applauſe (had I been ambitious thereof, I would never have taken on me the form of a ſervant) Chriſt is greater, then that opinion or judgement of men can either take from, or adde to his glory: to an infinite, nothing can be added, nothing can be taken from it.

v. 42. ye have not the love of God in you] As if he ſaid, I well know why ye come not to me, becauſe ye have no true love of God in you: you may blaſphemouſly pretend other cauſes of your not beleeving in me, you may impoſe upon an ignorant vulgar, but I know you: he taketh the love of God here, for the ground of all true religion and ſanctity, the ſumme of the law. Deut. 6. 5. God ſeeth the hypocriſie of thoſe, who have God, truth, and godlineſſe in their tongues, but devilliſh malice, pride and vain glory in their hearts.

v. 43. If another ſhall come] If a falſe Prophet ſhould come, you would be too apt to receive him: ſo did they in Traians time follow their Barcocheba, whom almoſt all the Jews took for their Meſſias: this impoſtor cauſed great effuſion of blood between the Jews and Romans: but when they perceived the miſchief he had led them into, the Jews called their Barchocheba (which ſignifieth, the ſon of a ſtar) Barchoziba, that is, the ſon of a lie. See Pet. Galatin. de arcan. Cathol. veit. Jo. Drus. praterit. l. 4. in Joh. 5. 43. and ib. ad. v. N. T. par. ult. Joh. 5. 43.

v. 44. how can ye beleeve] That is, ye cannot beleeve, becauſe of your ambition, which is contary to the love and honour of God.

which receive honour one of another] Which love the praiſe of men more then the praiſe of God. cha. 12. 43. one flattering another with the characters of juſt, wiſe, and godly: deſirous onely to pleaſe men, and to ſeem holy to them, that they may ſpeak well of them, not valuing the judgement or praiſe of God. See Rom. 2. 29. 1 Cor. 4. 5.

v. 45. there is one that accuſeth you] Moſes, or the law (in the works whereof ye truſt to be juſtified) ſhall condemn you, who continue not in every thing written therein, neither beleeve in Chriſt of whom he teſtified.

Moſes in whom ye truſt] They boaſted that they were Moſes diſciples, and oppoſed him to Chriſt (chap. 9. 28, 29.) he telleth them that the law given them by the Miniſtry of Moſes, will accuſe and condemn them.

v. 46. If ye had beleeved Moſes] He ſheweth why Moſes ſhould accuſe and condemn them; becauſe they beleeved him not: ſo dangerous is it to pretend to that which we will not obey, nor beleeve.

he wrote of me] Gen. 3. 15. Deut. 18. 15. Gen. 49. 10. Numb. 24. 17. &c. indeed the whole ſcope of the ceremoniall law was to prefigure Chriſt to come, ſuffer for our redemption, and cleanſe us from all our ſins: for he is the end of the law to every beleever: ſee the whole aim of the epiſtle to the Hebrews and Acts 7. 2. &c. Luke 24. 27.

v. 47. how ſhall ye beleeve in me] That is, ſeeing you pretend highly to reverence Moſes, and yet beleeve him not any further then you finde in his writings compliance with your own opinions, how ſhould you beleeve in my words of which you have no ſuch eſteem? This vail yet laid over their hearts in reading the ſcriptures, ſhall be taken away, when fulneſſe of the Gentiles is come in. See 2 Cor. 3. 16. Rom. 11. 25.

CHAP. VI.

Verſe 1. THe ſea of Tiberias] The lake of Genezareth: Tiberias, Bethſaida and Capernaum, were on this ſide the lake, in reſpect of Galilee: but it is here ſaid, that he paſſed over, becauſe he croſſed ſome creeks running up into the land, or ſome bayes, that he might go the nearer way: See on Luke 5. 1. and on John 21. 1.

v. 2. becauſe they ſaw his miracles] This was the cauſe why they followed him into the deſarts: ſeeing his admirable power, healing all diſeaſes, they conceived that he was ſome great Prophet ſent of God: hence was that zeal to attend him ſo, as that they neither minded their want of meat, or lodging in the deſart: which muſt riſe in judgement and condemn our careleſſeneſſe toward Gods word, from which the leaſt let uſeth to detain or diſtract us, though we are not to follow Chriſt now into the deſart mountains; his word is near us. Rom. 10. 8.

v. 3. went up into a mountain] Probably for the ſame reaſon which is expreſſed, Mark 6. 31. that they might reſt a while.

v. 4. and the Paſſeover] Levit. 23. 5. Deut 16. 1. See chap. 2. 13. this muſt be the third Paſſeover after Chriſts baptiſm, if that feaſt mentioned, chap. 5. 1. was the Paſſeover.

v. 5. lift up his eyes and ſaw a great multitude] Thus he undertaketh the care for them, who for his ſake neglect themſelves. See Matth. 14. 15, 16, 18, 19. &c.

ſaith unto Philip] He ſpake to Philip, becauſe it ſeemeth he ſpake the ſence of his fellow diſciples: we may not conceive that Chriſt thus ſpake, as ſoon as he ſaw this multitude: for the other evangeliſts ſhew that he firſt taught them many things concerning the kingdom of God, & healed thoſe who were infirm, by which time it was almoſt night, then took he care to feed and diſmiſſe them. See Mark 6. 37. Luke 9. 13.

v. 6. This he ſaid to prove him] Not that Jeſus knew not before hand, what Philip would anſwer, but as Gen. 22. 1. God tempted, or tryed Abraham, to make Abraham know his own faith and obedience; ſo here to make Philip know his faith, whether (ſeeing in the ordinary way of nature there were no means) he would have recourſe to Chriſts omnipotency, of which he had ſeen ſo much experience? and to ſhew him the defects thereof in the following miracle.

v. 7. two hundred peny worth] As if he ſaid, neither know we where timely to buy ſo much for them before night, neither is that a little money in our caſh.

v. 9. there is a lad here which, &c.] He had ſaid firſt unto them how many loaves have ye, go and ſee, Mark 6. 38. which when Andrew had enformed himſelf of, in the name of the reſt, he ſaith, here is a lad, &c. five loaves, that is, to ſell: for it is probable that their own ſtore, after their repaſt in the mountain, was very ſlender: this ſetteth off the truth of the miracle of feeding ſo many, ſo fully, when there was neither in the diſciples keeping, nor among the multitude, any more, then ſo incompetent a ſtore for them all.

what are they among ſo many] Neither did he yet think of any more then humane and ordinary ſupplyes.

v. 10. make the men ſit down] When theſe loaves and fiſh were brought him; he doth not here reprove their unbelief, but confirm their faith by the miracle done.

So the men ſate down] ἀνέπεσον, they fell or lay down; as their manner was to eat: they were uncertain of the event, but yet readily obeyed his word: ſuch readineſſe was alſo in the waiters at the Cana wedding, to fill the water-pots with water when they wanted wine. chap 2. 7. this is a tryall of faith, when God commandeth men to do that, whereof for preſent they apprehend neither event, nor reaſon: mans reaſon would have ſaid to this multitude, high you away leaſt you be famiſhed here, by a little more delay; but ſitting down here as he commanded, where there appeared no probability of ſupply, they found abundance to ſuffice them all: thus will he teach us not to relie on our own wiſedoms, but to depend on his providence and word, who never fruſtrateth the hopes of his. See Matth. 14. 21.

v. 11. When Jeſus had given thanks] That is, as the Syriac hath it, וברך ubarec, and bleſſed it: So alſo Matth. 26. 26.

he diſtributed] By the Miniſtry of the diſciples, to every one as much as fully ſatisfied them to a perfect refection: which is added to ſet out the truth and excellency of the miracle, thoſe victualls being not ſparingly, but fully and freely given to every one preſent.

v. 12. gather up the fragments] This he commanded, as for the evidence of the miracle; ſo alſo that none of Gods bleſſings might be loſt, wherein would have appeared a contempt or undervaluing of them: to teach us an holy frugality in the uſe of Gods creatures: of which we are but ſtewards, and muſt once give account; and that we muſt rely on Gods providence, who can make the leaſt meaſure ſufficient.

v. 13. filled twelve baskets] So wonderfully had he encreaſed the ſmall ſtore. See alſo 1 Kings 17. 15, 16. and 2 Kings 4.

v. 14. this is of a truth that prophet] ὁ ἐρχόμενος, the Prophet which was to come; that is, whoſe coming we have hitherto expected: or as the Syriack interpreter hath it, qui venit in mundum, who is now come into the world: this is the Meſſias promiſed by God, Deut. 18. 15. ſuch is the vulgar, more ſenſible of bodily and temporal benefits (which they expected in Chriſt) then ſpiritual and eternal: we read not that they thus acknowledge him in his moſt divine and unparaleld preaching to them the myſtery of eternal life: but when he feeds their bellies, then they cry, this is that prophet.

v. 15. to make him a king] This alſo ſhews how much they regarded their bellies, more then their ſouls: when he gave them the beſt ſpiritual food, they offered him no ſuch honor, but becauſe he thus fed them, they would proclaim him the king Meſſias; under whom they dreamed of health, wealth, fulneſs, victory, protection, and all ſecular bleſſings. So much lived they to carnal ſenſe; ſo few underſtood the true end of Chriſts coming into the world.

into a mountain himſelf alone] Where he uſed to pray: his kingdom is ſpiritual, not of this world; therefore offended at their perverſe ſervice, who would thus honour him, he withdrew himſelf from them.

v. 16. when even was now come] Matth. 14. 23.

v. 17. went over the ſea] That is, ſome creeke or arme thereof, as verſe 1. Mark 6. 45. he bade them go before to Bethſaida, while he ſent the people away (becauſe Bethſaida was in their way as they went toward Capernaum) while he was diſmiſſing them, it ſeemeth they were conſpiring to make him king, and therefore he went from them into the mountain alone.

v. 18. and the ſea aroſe] Swelled, as the Syriack hath it; was rough and high running.

19. about five and twenty or thirty furlongs] Above three miles from ſhore; ſo little way had they made from the evening to the fourth watch of the night. See Matth 14. 25.

v. 20. It is I, be not afraid] They were troubled for his abſence, and terrified with his preſence, when they thought they had ſeen ſome ghoſt walking on the water; therefore he diſcovereth himſelf to them: thus are the faithful ſecure and full of comfort in the preſence and protection of Chriſt; at whoſe voice the wicked tremble, and are caſt down: Chap. 18. 6.

v. 21. they willingly received him] Though they were afraid of him at firſt, when they knew him not, yet hearing his voice, they were glad of his ſaving preſence, and received him into the ſhip, Matth. 14. 32. Mark 6. 51. John ſheweth another part of the miracle by them omitted, that is, the ſudden arrival of the ſhip, which before Chriſt came aboard, with all their art and labour, rowing and what ever they could do made ſo little way. See verſe 19. So Chriſt not only comforteth in word, but alſo in real deliverance of his.

v. 22. which ſtood on the other ſide] Which lodged thereabouts, and ſuppoſed that Jeſus had been there ſtill, where the miracle was done.

but that his diſciples were gone away alone] That is, by themſelves without Jeſus with them: it is doubtful with which of the two, the diſciples (as in this our tranſlation) or with the noun collective, the multitude, this verb ἀπῆλθον, went away, is to be conſtrued: the latter ſeemeth probable, and the ſence may be, when the multitude ſaw that the diſciples onely took ſhipping, and that Jeſus went not with them, they, that is, the multitude, went away or departed.

v. 24. they alſo took ſhipping] That is, in ſome of thoſe which came from Tiberias, ſo the Syriack hath it, they went into theſe ſhips: we read of no ſtorm in their paſſage, but onely upon the diſciples ſhip: God exerciſeth the greateſt gifts with the greateſt tryals. It bare a type of the world ſailing before the winde with a fair gale, while they that are Chriſts feel the ſtorms and wreſtling windes of afflictions, the more to confirme them in their deliverance.

v. 25. when cameſt thou hither?] Seeing we have waited on thee, and marked that there was none other ſhip here, ſave that in which thy diſciples went over before thee; when, and how couldſt thou come over ſea? Theophylacts conjecture is probable; they might poſſibly ſuſpect, that he went on foot to the other ſide miraculouſly.

v. 26. but becauſe ye did eat] He anſwereth not to their queſtion, but knowing their thoughts, reproveth them, for that they valued not his doctrine, or confirmation thereof by miracles, ſo that they might believe and be ſaved, but cared principally for their bellies; the fault that our carnal goſpellers are commonly guilty of: they think they do excellently ſeek Chriſt, when yet their chief aim and care is to finde eaſe, peace, wealth, credit, or ſome temporal bleſſings in their practiſe, or profeſſion of the goſpel: thus would the covetous Jews have impropriated Chriſt himſelf unto ſecular uſes; ſo unworthy a value ſet they upon that ineſtimable mercy of God in giving them his onely begotten Son, as if he had onely given them ſome ſecular, and ſoon-periſhing bleſſing in him, and not eternal life and ſalvation: ſo hard a matter is it to caſt off the importunate cares and deſires of fleſh and blood, that we may affect, and receive the unvaluable mercy of God for our ſalvation in Chriſt. Vix quæritur Jeſus propter Jeſum, ſaid Auguſtine on this place; rarely is Jeſus ſought for his own ſake: but indeed, then the heart is right to God, quando propter Deum quæritur Deus, Proſper. ſent. when God is ſought for his own ſake: and how great ſhould our happineſſe be in heaven, if we did not with profane Eſau, undervalue it for temporal ſupplies? See on Matth. 6. 2. and Matth. 5. 12. Seek in Chriſt firſt the kingdom of God and his righteouſneſſe, and be confident, he that for thy ſalvation aſſumed a reaſonable ſoul and body, that he might ſuffer ſuch things therein for thy redemption, will not loſe thee again by leaving thee deſtitute of temporal neceſſaries. See Rom. 8. 32. by this examine whether thou ſeek God for love of God, or out of ſelf-love: doeſt thou patiently bear afflictions, in regard that God thereby tryeth thee? doeſt thou love and depend on God as well ſmiting thee, as giving temporal bleſſings unto thee? but if thou be impatient, or deſperate in thy ſufferings, as 2 Kings 6. 33. Job 2. 9. thy ſeeking God hath been for thine own ſake.

v. 27. Labour not for the meat which periſheth] Or work not, not forbidding labour for things neceſſary to this life. See Gen. 2. 15. Gen. 3. 19. Gen. 9. 20. 2 Theſ. 3. 10. Epheſ. 4. 28. but preferring the care for things eternal, as Matth. 6. 33. So Matth. 9. 13. he excludeth not ſacrifice, but preferreth mercie.

that meat which endureth unto life everlaſting] That is, thoſe things which are appointed by God to refreſh and ſuſtain their ſouls to eternity.

for him hath] Matth. 3. 17.

God the father ſealed] Or allowed and confirmed to the office of our redemption: a ſimile derived from them who give commiſſions under hand and ſeal.

v. 28. the works of God] pleaſing to God, or which he requireth.

v. 29. This is the work of God] 1 John 3. 23. his commandment and will: as alſo his work and gift, Epheſ. 2. 8. that which God requireth of you, that ye ſhould believe in me: having ſpoken of works and life eternal; leſt they ſhould imagine it could be merited or gained by the works of the Law without Chriſt (for if ſo, Chriſt had dyed without cauſe or in vain, Galat. 2. 21.) he recalleth them to faith in him, wherein onely is eternal life.

v. 30. What ſigne ſheweſt thou] This one thing manifeſted how little they profited by the miracles they ſaw: admiring his works, and thence being perſwaded that he was the Meſſias, in ſo much as they would have made him their King, yet now they require a ſigne, as if he had done nothing among them: Chryſoſtome here noteth their ſtupidity, who having preſent ſignes, yet aſk a ſigne: ſo unconſiſtent are the deſires and votes of the giddy vulgar: becauſe Chriſt would not comply with their fancies, and become ſuch as they dreamed their Meſſias ſhould be (but on the contrary reproved their ſenſuality and ſpiritual blindneſſe) they conteſt as with one no further to be heard or followed: as if they had ſaid, What ſigne ſheweſt thou, that we ſhould thereby be perſwaded to forſake Moſes Law, in which we and our fathers have been brought up to follow thee; and caſt our ſelves and the hope of our ſalvation on thee? if Chriſt will not anſwer their deſires, he ſhall no longer be a Maſter for them.

v. 31. Our fathers did eat Manna] Exod. 16. 15. Numb. 11. 7. As if they ſaid, under Moſes conduct whom we yet follow, our fathers were fed fourty years in the wilderneſſe: what greater work doeſt thou; that we may cleave to thee?

he gave them bread from heaven] Wiſd. 16. 20. So is the Manna called, Pſal. 78. 24. דגן שמים dagan ſhamaiim, the corn of heaven. So Jerom after the Hebrew, triticum cœli: the 70 give it ἄρτον οὐρανοῦ, the bread of heaven; ſo is it called לחם אבירים lechem abbirim, 70 ἄρτον ἀγγέλων, the bread of Angels. Hebr. the bread of the mighty or the ſtrong. So Jerom after the Hebrew, panem fortium, not that the Angels do eat, but becauſe (ſay ſome) God by their miniſtery fed Iſrael therewith. Some underſtand אלהים, elohim, as if it were the bread of the mighty God; or as others, the bread of Princes and Potentates, the moſt excellent bread. See V. Shindler. in אבר. Jerom underſtandeth Chriſt (of whom the Manna was a type) ex hoc enim pane cœli (ſaith he) ſancti reficiuntur & angeli; with this bread of heaven ſaints and angels are refreſhed and fed; this ἄρτον ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, underſtand, as fera è ſylvis (i.e.) ſylveſtris So Joh. Druſ. prætet. lib. 4. becauſe it diſtilled from the clouds; not that it was heavenly bread nouriſhing to eternal life; that Chriſt denyeth, affirming himſelf onely to be that bread. So 1 Cor. 10.

v. 32. Moſes gave you not that bread] Moſes gave not your fathers, ſo much as that periſhing bread the Manna, which was for a temporal uſe, but God gave it; and he now giveth you in me the bread of life the true bread from heaven] That which being apprehended by faith ſhall nouriſh you to eternal life; here this ἀληθινὸν, is put in oppoſition to the type which their fathers did eat in the wilderneſs, in the type true, to typifie, as the thing figured, ſo the figure; for that Manna was a figure of Chriſt, that ſame ἄρτος ζωτικὸς, life giving bread (Nazianzen orat. 35.) truely, but ſpiritually and myſtically to feed our ſouls to eternal life.

v. 33. He which cometh down from Heaven] That is Chriſt, verſe 35.

v. 34. evermore give us this bread] Either they ſpake ironically, and ſcoffingly, as the Samaritan. chap. 4. 15. So Matth. 27. 42. or they herein diſcover, that their mindes were all on their bellies.

v. 35. cometh unto me] By true faith. See verſe 36.

ſhall never hunger] See chap. 4. 24.

v. 36. ye alſo have ſeen me and beleeve not] He noteth their voluntary blindneſſe (as Matth. 13. 13, 14, 15.) who ſufficiently ſeeing the admirable effects of his divine power, yet would not beleeve in him: the curſe was upon them which was threatned. Iſaiah 6. 9. So, auribus apertis, ſurdi erant, Auguſtin. they were deaf with open ears.

v. 37. all that the Father giveth me] All whom he elected, ſhall beleeve in Chriſt, and obey the Goſpel, and ſo not periſh.

v. 38. I came down from heaven] The deity could not deſcend by changing place, becauſe he comprehendeth all, and can be comprehended of none; neither came his humane body from heaven, but was truely of the ſeed of Abraham, (See Hebr. 2. 16.) but he is ſaid to come down from heaven, in reſpect of his incarnation, wherein the deity united to the humanity, makes one perſon of Chriſt, God and man.

v. 39. This is the Fathers will, &c.] Becauſe they underſtood not, what he meant by that will of God; for which he came from heaven, he expreſſeth it here, to be, that he ſhould ſave all the Elect.

v. 40. and beleeveth on him] He here ſheweth the means of ſalvation, faith: as, Epheſ. 2. 8. and who are they whom the Father hath given him; thoſe onely that beleeve in him: here look for thy calling and election. See Rom. 8. 30. 2 Pet. 1. 10. 2 Cor. 1. 22. Epheſ. 1. 13.

v. 41. murmured at him] Becauſe they underſtood the words of Chriſt carnally; when he filled their bellies, they had him in the opinion of their long expected Meſſias, they would have then made him their king: but when he telleth them the truth, and teacheth them divine and heavenly things, they murmur and ſtart back: obſerve here the ſeed and beginning of their fearfull apoſtacie and falling from Chriſt; it was murmuring at the truth through unbelief: it is commonly ſo ſtill.

v. 42. Is not this Jeſus the ſon of Joſeph?] See Matth. 13. 55. Luke 4. 22. becauſe they expected a magnificent and externally glorious Meſſias: they were offended at Chriſt in the form of a ſervant, and man of ſorrows, though ſo coming to ſave them: and probably they underſtood him, as if he had ſaid, that he was not born in this world among men, but came down as an Angel from heaven; they knew not, that he was truely God, as truely man: ſo perverſe is carnall reaſon; that which ſhould have been an argument of gratitude, (that he vouchſafed to make himſelf of no reputation, to honour them with the title of the ſons of God) they make the ground of their impious contempt of him.

v. 43. murmur not among your ſelves] As if he had ſaid, my words contain no matter of ſcandall; the fault is in your ſelves, who can neither beleeve, nor underſtand them; becauſe God hath juſtly given you up to ſpirituall blindneſſe and unbelief, for your pride and obſtinacie.

v. 44. No man can come to me] No man can underſtand and beleeve theſe things, except God teach, enlighten, and give him faith; no man can know God, niſi Deo docente; that is, ſine Deo, non cognoſci Deum. Irenæus l. 4. c. 14.

except the Father, &c.] As if he ſaid, no marvell that ye beleeve not; your bellies, not my Father, drew you hither, to come to Chriſt, is here, to beleeve on him, and to depend on him; as verſ 35. by drawing, he meaneth illuminating, and framing mens hearts to faith and obedience, which God doth by the holy ſpirit inwardly, working on his word and ordinance, as, verſe 45. ſo true is that of Proſper, quod duce Deo, veniatur ad deum, de vocat. Gent. l. 1. c. 24. God leading us, we come to God: here then is left no place for pride or contempt of others; for as the ſame well ſaith (q. ſ. c. 25. tales fuerunt, qui ſunt attracti, quales hi, qui in ſuâ duritie ſunt relicti;) they who are drawn (to Chriſt by the Father) were ſuch as theſe who are left in their hardneſſe of heart.

v. 45. it is written] Iſaiah 54. 13. Jer. 31. 34.

v. 46. not that any man hath ſeen the Father] Meaning, you may not look for a call from heaven, or viſion of God, by whom you ſhould be admoniſhed to beleeve in me; he calleth by me, and by his ſpirit: thus ſpeaketh he to a carnall people, leſt they ſhould miſtake him, as in the reſt they did. See 1 Cor. 2. 10. Matth. 11. 27. John 1. 18.

v. 47. hath everlaſting life] He thus ſpeaketh in reſpect of the certainty of Gods election, and the ſeals thereof in our regeneration; they have eternal life here begun, to be accompliſhed in the life to come.

v. 48. I am the bread of life] In the participation whereof onely, is eternall life.

v. 49. and are dead] Becauſe it is not the ſhadow, or figure, but Chriſt the ſubſtance, which can nouriſh to eternall life.

v. 50. this is the bread] Meaning himſelf.

v. 51. the living bread] Which lives and gives life to the world.

If any man eat of this bread] If any man beleeve in Chriſt: for as Auguſtin ſaith tract. 26. in Joh. credere enim in eum, eſt manducare panem vivum: for to beleeve, is to eat the living bread; and again ſaith the ſame qui manducat intus, non foris, qui manducat in corde, non qui premit dente: he that eateth within, not without, he that eateth with (or in) his heart, not he that cruſheth it with his teeth.

v. 52. how can this man give us, &c.] They underſtood that carnally, which he ſpake in a ſpirituall ſence.

v. 53. except ye eat the fleſh] Except ye ſpiritually apprehend Chriſt by faith. See on verſe 51.

v. 54. whoſo eateth my fleſh] By faith: for properly, and carnally, we cannot eat living bread, and ſuch is Chriſt, verſe 51. nor could that bread which came down from heaven, be that fleſh of Chriſt carnally to be eaten; but whole Chriſt, God and man (See on verſe 38.) the bread of life ſpiritually to be received.

v. 55. is meat indeed] Or truely, but ſpiritually: for that which is ſpiritually ſo, is truely ſo.

v. 56. dwelleth in me] This ſheweth it to be meant of a myſticall and ſpirituall eating; becauſe to eat his fleſh, is to dwell in him; and that as bodies are ſuſtained with meat and drink, ſo are our ſouls nouriſhed with the body and blood of Chriſt.

v. 57. he that eateth me] That beleeveth in me. See on verſe 51. and 56. and on verſe 54.

even he ſhall live by me] For though faith (by which the juſt ſhall live) looketh ſtrait on the fleſh of Chriſt crucified, yet it well knoweth that the power of the merit ſaving us, dependeth on the dignity of the perſon crucified, who is truely God and man; therefore Acts 20. 28. the Apoſtle ſaith concerning the Church, that God had purchaſed it with his own blood: ſo 1 John 1. 7. the blood of Jeſus Chriſt his Son, cleanſeth us from all ſin. So 1. Cor. 2. 8. they would not have crucified the Lord of glory.

v. 58. which came down from heaven] As verſe 50. See on verſe 38.

not as your fathers did eat Manna] It ſhall not be with him that feedeth on me by faith, as with your fathers in the wilderneſſe, when they had eaten Manna, they yet dyed; but he that beleeveth in me ſhall be ſaved, to eternall life.

v. 59. in the ſynagogue] Openly, in the Church or place where the Jews weekly aſſembled for the publike worſhip of God.

v. 60. This is an hard ſaying] σκληρὸς, troubleſome, or irkſome to be heard; becauſe they took Chriſts words in a literall ſenſe, hard to be underſtood, ſaith Chryſoſtom. hom. 46.

who can hear it] Who can endure to hear it? who would not be offended at it? to eat the fleſh and drink the blood of man, is unnaturall, and therefore the more ſtupid they to take thoſe words litterally; mark here the wretched effects of careleſſe hearing and miſunderſtanding the word of God.

v. 61. doth this offend you] Probably he ſpake this to them after he came out of the ſynagogue, and heard their murmuring, and cenſuring his ſermon.

v. 62. What and if] Chap 3. 13.

aſcend up were he was before] Are you troubled that I attribute ſuch vertue to the eating my fleſh? that I affirm it to be the bread of life which came from heaven? you ſhall ſee me ſhortly put off this aſſumed ſtate of humiliation, and be exalted above the heavens. See Rom. 1. 4. chap. 3. 13. Epheſ. 4. 9. they thought he would give them his body, carnally to eat, but he affirmed (ſaith Auguſtin) ſe aſcenſurum in cœlum, utique integrum: that he woul aſcend into heaven, and that entire: then ſhould they know how he giveth his body, quia gratia ejus non conſumitur morſibus: and that his grace is not eaten by bits: that they ſhould ſee the Son of man aſcend: underſtand it of the witneſſes thereto appointed: poſſibly ſome of them who now murmured might be ſome of them: theſe words, where he was before: underſtand according to his deity: that the Son of man ſhould be ſeen aſcending where he was before, underſtand by conſidering the uſuall communication of properties, whereby that which is proper to either nature, is attributed to the whole perſon of Chriſt: ſo it is true: Chriſt ſuffered, his humanity did, his deity could not: So the Son of man aſcended where he was before: his deity was in heaven before, but his humanity then firſt arrived in heaven, when after his reſurrection he aſcended up into glory.

v. 63. it is the ſpirit that quickneth] You muſt underſtand theſe things ſpiritually, not carnally; for they are ſpirituall, the fleſh profiteth nothing] That is (ſaith Auguſtin) ſola caro: the fleſh onely, as the Apoſtle ſaith, knowledge puffeth up, that is, ſola, ſine charitate, if it be alone without charity.

(as Chryſoſtom interpreteth) and the ſpirit united to the humane nature, giveth life.

v. 64. ſome of you that beleeve not] he ſaith not, who underſtand not theſe things; but he telleth them the cauſe of their miſunderſtanding, which was unbelief: he taxeth not all; leſt if any preſent were curable, they might otherwiſe have been caſt down to deſpair.

for Jeſus knew] This the Evangeliſt inſerteth, leſt any ſhould think that Chriſt raſhly cenſured them of unbelief: many hypocritically followed him, which though men knew not, Chriſt well knew.

and who ſhould betray him] Who would betray him, as if he ſaid, he did not only know all things paſt, and preſent, but alſo all things to come.

v. 65. therefore I ſaid unto you] He repeateth what he ſaid, (verſe 44.) with application to the unbelievers: as if he ſaid: therefore are you offended through unbelief, becauſe my Father hath not given you faith to believe in me to your ſalvation: you are joyned in bodily preſence, but not in ſpirit, not in faith.

v. 66. from that time] ἐκ τούτου, the Syriack hath it, from that word; for thoſe things which they could not underſtand concerning eating his fleſh, and drinking his blood; many who had given their names to him deſerted him: thus was the Prophecie fulfilled, which foretold that he ſhould be a rock of offence, Iſaiah 8. 14. See 2 Tim. 2. 15. 1 John 2. 19. 1 Cor. 11. 19. no wonder if many are ſcandaled at our doctrine, and ſeparate from our miniſtery; they that were not elected, were offended and ſeparated from Chriſt.

v. 67. Will ye alſo go away ?] Which he ſaid, not that he was ignorant of the future (for he knew all from the beginning, verſe 64.) but to occaſion a cleerer confeſſion of Peter in the name of the reſt, and to propoſe his, as an example of conſtancy: alſo to admoniſh them not to joyn themſelves with Apoſtates & ſeparatiſts, which none ſhal do that are grounded in Chriſt: and not to follow multitudes to evil and forſaking of Chriſt. It may teach us not to be offended, when many fall away, who ſeemed heretofore very zealous followers of Chriſt, and profeſſours of truth: for as multitudes can give no patronage to ſinners; ſo neither ſhall the paucity of believers hurt the faithful: they onely who continue to the end ſhall be ſaved; that is, they onely to whom God giveth perſeverance; for (as Auguſtine ſaith, Tom. 7. reſponſ. ad art. fal. 8.) Dei voluntas, ut in bona voluntate maneat, qui & priuſquam deſeratur, neminem deſerit, & multos deſertores ad ſe convertit, it is the will of God, that one ſhould continue in a good will, who alſo before he be forſaken, forſaketh no man, and converteth many to him, who had forſaken him: he ſaith, will ye alſo; it is in our power to fall, but not to riſe again: that we do not fall away, it is onely Gods mercy preſerving us: and Proſper ſaith well, de vocat Gent. lib. 2. cap. 12. Ideo liberum eſſe diſcedere, ut non diſceſſiſſe ſit præmium, therefore it is free to depart, that it may be a reward not to have departed.

v. 68. the words of eternal life] The Goſpel teaching us all the myſteries of eternal life and ſalvation.

v. 69. and we believe] See Matth. 16. 16.

v. 70. Have not I choſen you, &c.] We muſt underſtand the one party to be choſen per miſericordiam, and the other per judicium, as Auguſtine ſaith, de cor. & gra. cap. 7. To. 7. thoſe he choſe to preach, and obtain his kingdom; but this to ſhed his blood.

is a devil] A malitious wicked man, an informer, a traitour, poſſeſſed and put on by the evil ſpirit: this he foretelleth, that they might not be ſcandaled, when they ſhould ſee his end.

v. 71. Judas Iſcariot] Ἰσκαριώτης. Hebr. איש קריות iſh Kirioth; Jeroms firſt conjecture is probable, Iſcariotes, vel à vico, aut urbe in quâ ortus eſt, &c. (wherein Chryſoſtome hom. 33. in Matth. agreeth with him) Cairioth is a town in the tribe of Judah, Joſh. 15. 25. ſome therefore will have him ſo called, as if it were ſaid, Judas a man of Cairioth. Some derive the name from that which ſignifieth defection, for a reward.

CHAP. VII.

Verſe 1. W*Alked in Galilee*] Went about from place to place, to preach the goſpel, and to heal the ſick for confirmation thereof.

v. 2. feaſt of tabernacles] Levit. 23. 34. 42. 43. in this feaſt, they were to dwell ſeven dayes in Booths and tents, in remembrance of their dwelling in tents in the wilderneſſe, Exod. 23. 16. it is called חג האסף chag haaſiph, the feaſt of gathering fruits, and Levit. 23. 34. חג הסכות chag haſſuccoth, the feaſt of coverings or tabernacles, 70. ἑορτὴ σκηνῶν; σκηνοπηγία: Chryſoſtome reckoneth it five moneths after the Paſſeover; but Levit. 23. 34. ib. verſe 5 it appeareth ſix.

v. 3. that thy diſciples] That is, thoſe whom thou wouldeſt have to follow thee: for his diſciples who now did follow him, had ſeen his miracles: this they ſayed probably in deriſion: for in the fifth verſe it appeareth that they believed not in him: faith is not by any carnal prerogative, but a ſpecial gift of God, Chap. 1. 13.

v. 4. ſhew thy ſelf to the world] Go up to the feaſt, and do thy miracles in ſuch great confluences of people, that thereby thy fame may be ſpread abroad to al other nations alſo.

v. 5. Neither did his brethren believe] His kindred. See on verſe 3.

v. 6. My time is not yet come] My opportunity is not yet. So verſe 8.

v. 7. The world cannot hate you] That is, the unregenerate do not hate you, becauſe you are of them; the world loveth her own: the Prieſts and Phariſees do not perſecute you, becauſe you communicate with them in their unbelief, they embrace you as their obedient children: me they hate, becauſe I reprove their ſins. So dangerous a vice is pride, it can abide no reproof: ſo impoſſible is it to have peace with the world, except we will ſhare with them in their wickedneſſe; and impoſſible is it to preach the truth ſincerely, without the malice of impious men, whoſe ſins we muſt reprove. The Jews pretended that they were angry with Chriſt, only becauſe he profaned the Sabbath, &c. but the truth was it was becauſe he diſcovered, and ſpake againſt their ſin and hypocriſie; for he profaned not the Sabbath.

v. 8. Go ye up unto this feaſt] This ſaith he, juſtly leaving them to themſelves, who would not believe in him. See Pſalm 81. 12.

I go not up yet] Ἐγὼ οὔπω ἀναβαίνω, I do not yet go up: See the reaſon verſe 6. my opportunity is not yet come. I do not go up with you, who believe not in me.

for my time, &c.] Chap. 8. 20.

v. 9. He abode ſtill in Galilee] He ſtaied a while after they were gone up to the feaſt, until he knew it fit time.

v. 10. but when his brethren were gone up] The Galileans were wont to go up to thoſe ſolemnities, by kindreds, & companies of neighbours, Luk 2. 44. Chriſt would not now go up ſo publickly; but when he knew that the malice of the Jews was ſomething more allayed, then he went up privately with his diſciples, and ſome few followers.

v. 11. the Jews ſought him] That is, the people who had formerly heard him, ſeen his miracles, or heard of him.

v. 12. much murmuring] γογγυσμὸς, whiſpering, or ſecret talking concerning him, muttering, ſome malitiouſly blaſpheming him; ſome praiſing and defending his parts, but ſecretly for fear.

v. 13. for fear of the Jews] No man ſpake well openly, for fear of the rulers and prieſts. See Chap. 9. 22. nor poſſibly durſt they ſpeak evil freely and publickly, for fear of the people.

v. 14. about the midſt of the feaſt] About the fourth day of this feaſt, verſe 2. now was his time to preach the goſpel: what he now preached the Evangeliſt recordeth not: it was ſome divine learning, and to the admiration of the auditors, as appeareth verſe 15.

v. 15. How knoweth this man letters] That is, τὰ ἱερὰ γράμματα, the holy Scriptures, as 2 Tim. 3. 15. they would not in their unbelief acknowledge him to be the Meſſias of whom the Prophet Iſaiah 11. 2, 3 ſaid, the ſpirit of the Lord ſhall reſt upon him, the ſpirit of wiſdom and underſtanding, the ſpirit of knowledge &c. and ſhall make him of quick underſtanding in the fear of the Lord. Which the Apoſtle alſo teacheth, Coloſ. 2. 3. They admiring the doctrine, and knowing that he had it not by ordinary and uſual means, ſhould have concluded that it was divine, and immediately from God, and ſo have acknowledged the evidence of the ſpirit therein: but ſo miſerable a blindneſſe doth unbelief bring with it, that all (the moſt indiſputable) arguments, are there retorted and perverted, to the deſtruction of the wicked. See Acts 2. 17. Mark 6. 3. Matth. 13. 55. neither is here any patronage for thoſe who neglect or deſpiſe learning. See 1 Tim. 4. 13, 15, 16. Titus 1. 5. 9.

v. 16. My doctrine is not mine] He ſpeaketh, as he is man: I learned it not of man, but of God.

v. 17. If any man will do his will] He ſecretly toucheth the cauſe of their miſunderſtanding his doctrine, that is their want of the true fear of God, and obedience to him. (See Chap. 14. 15. 16. 17. 21. 23.) take away your doubting, anger, envy, and vain hatred towards me, κ᾽ οὐδὲν τὸ κωλῦον ὑμᾶς nothing ſhall let you to know this, that my words are the words of God. Chryſoſtom.

whether I ſpeak of my ſelf] See Chap. 14. 24. the meaning ing is, if any man truly fear God, and will indeed ſet his heart to believe and obey him; he ſhall be ſatisfied, and clearly reſolved, of the divine truth of the Goſpel: it muſt be a ſound and wel affected palate which muſt judge of taſts, the ſick and diſaffected cannot: the precepts of righteouſneſs are bitter to evil livers. Lactantius l. 1. So alſo Jerome l. 1. ep. 16. ita ſe natura habet, ut amara ſit veritas; it cometh naturally to paſſe that truth is bitter; that is, to the wicked. See 1 Cor. 2.15. here Chriſt intimateth that the Jews were incompetent Judges of his doctrine; becauſe their malice and wickedneſs had blinded them.

v. 18. he ſpeaketh of himſelf] He who teacheth his own inventions, affecteth praiſe of men.

v. 19. did not Moſes] Exod. 24.3. he anſwereth their objection concerning healing on the Sabbath, by their own practiſe in that they circumciſed on the Sabbath, v. 22.23.

why go ye about to kill me] c. 5.18.

v. 20. thou haſt a devil] This ſeemeth a common manner of ſpeaking among the Jews, when they would expreſſe a man furiouſly diſtracted, or dangerouſly erring, which they blaſphemouſly apply to Chriſt.

v. 21. and ye all marvel] Becauſe I did it on the Sabbath day, τῷ σαββάτῳ, ταράττεσθε, Chryſoſtome, ye clamour and are troubled.

v. 22. Moſes therefore, &c.] Levit. 12.3.

but of the fathers] Gen. 17.10.

v. 23. that the law of Moſes ſhould not be broken] or without breaking the law of Moſes. The law given by the miniſtery of Moſes.

v. 24. judge not, &c. Deut. 1.16. Judge me not according to any outward appearance, to be meer man; but conſider the Divine Power in my works, which ye calumniate.

v. 25. then ſayed ſome] They wondred that the authority of the rulers could not yet prevail againſt him, but yet acknowledged the power of God therein, that they could not with all their power ſilence him.

v. 26. do the rulers know indeed, &c.] Do our High Prieſts and Elders certainly know that he is the promiſed Meſſias, and therefore ſuffer him thus publickly and freely to control and reprove them? if not, how eaſily might they take him; ſo might it ſeem to men, who conſidered not herewith, the coercive power of God limiting their fury, until the appointed time, that Jeſus was to ſuffer for our redemption.

v. 27. no man knoweth] This tradition ſeemed to have beginning from ſome miſ-underſtood propheſies, as Iſaiah 53. 8.

v. 28. whom ye know not] He upbraideth their confidence of knowing him, ſeeing they know not his Father, nor his unſpeakable generation.

v. 29. but I know him] As if he ſaid, you think you know me and my Father, but you are deceived, not knowing that I am coequal and coeternal with God the Father, and that I took not this honour of being a Mediatour and Saviour; but that, in the fulneſs of time, by my incarnation, I came into this world, appointed thereto by God. See Hebr. 5.4,5. and c. 1.18. Mat. 11.27.

v. 30. but no man layed hands on him] Becauſe the iſſues of life and death, with the time and manner, are onely in Gods hand: ſee how their malicious fury is bridled, as Chryſoſtome ſaid, ἀοράτως inviſibly, by a ſecret and unſeen hand of divine providence: ſo God ſtill protecteth his, reſtraining the precipitate malice of the enemy.

v. 31. many of the people believed] Though many were hardned in their obſtinate unbelief, yet the Word of God was not without good effect with others, whoſe hearts he had opened. It is one and the ſame Sun which giveth light to ſound eyes, but blindeth the infirm; one and the ſame truth preached, hardneth and more blindeth ſome hearers, and cauſeth others to believe and obey to ſalvation, Nazianzen, Orat. 17. It ſeemeth by their ſpeech that Chriſt wrought many miracles among the people, which the Evangeliſt mentioneth not.

more miracles] This Evangeliſt ſpeaketh not of many (the turning Water into Wine, c. 2. the diſcovery of the Samaritans ſin, c. 4. and the healing the Rulers Son: curing the paralytical, c. 5. feeding 5000 with five loaves, &c. John 6. his walking on the Sea) therefore probably many more are omitted. See c. 20.

v. 32. Phariſees and chief prieſts ſent officers] Theſe deſiring to appear the chief zelots, moſt oppoſed Chriſt, envying the peoples good opinion of him, and conceiving their own honour eclipſed thereby; this vexing them, they break out into open violence; the uſual armour of Hypocrites, where they cannot prevail with arguments: thus is authority (appointed to defend truth) abuſed to impious tyranny. See Acts 22.24.

v. 33. yet a little while] Till the appointed time, I ſhall preach and do my fathers will, whether ye will or no.

v. 34. ye ſhall ſeek me] c. 13.33. In your extream calamities ſhortly to come upon you, ye ſhall wiſh me with you again; but I ſhall return to him that ſent me, and be ſecure from your malitious inquiſition.

v. 35. among the Gentiles] Or Greeks. Will he go teach the Jews who are ſcattered here and there, among the Gentiles?

v. 36. what manner of ſaying is this] What meaneth he hereby? ſuch a quære was among the Diſciples, c. 16.17, 18. only that there was a deſire to be enformed of the truth; wherein Chriſt ſatisfied them: but here is a captious agitation of Chriſts words, without any ſerious care to underſtand their ſcope and meaning, therefore Chriſt here leaveth them in ſuſpence.

v. 37. in the laſt day, that great day, &c.] Wherein they were to have a ſolemn aſſembly, and to abſtain from all ſervile works. See Levit. 23.36. the choice of this time imported, the end of thoſe ceremonies was to bring men to Chriſt; and now being to depart home, he thus gave them to carry with them ἐφόδια σωτήρια viaticum viands to ſalvation, as Chryſoſtome noteth.

Jeſus ſtood and cryed] Ἔκραξε: He ſpake with a loud voice, that the multitude might hear him, and to ſhew his authority and liberty of ſpeaking to the people. The occaſion of this ſpeech concerning water, might poſſibly be that which ſome write; that the Jews went on this day with great ſolemnity, to draw water out of the Fountain of Siloam, at the foot of Mount Sion, and to bring it to the altar, ſinging out that of Iſaiah 12.3. With joy ſhall ye draw water out of the wells of ſalvation, &c. By this and many other traditions, they having perverted the law (which commanded a ſpiritual rejoycing) into ſuperſtitious clamours, Chriſt cried out, to recal them from earthly to heavenly waters.

v. 38. he that believeth] He citeth not here any particular place of Scripture; but this may be gathered out of Scriptures, where mention is made of the effuſion of the gifts of the holy Ghoſt, as Joel 2.28. Iſaiah 44.3. and 55.1.11. So Acts 2.18. is interpreted: therefore the Syriac Interpreter giveth it, as the Scriptures have ſaid.

v. 39. this ſpake he of the Spirit] The Evangeliſt interpreteth the words of Jeſus, Joel 2.28. Iſaiah 44.3.

the holy ghoſt] The viſible graces of Gods Spirit, ſpoken of by the fore-cited Prophets, which did accordingly flouriſh in the Church after the aſcenſion of Chriſt. Theſe ſeveral gifts were all the effects of one and the ſame Spirit (Ephes. 4.4. 7. &c.) and therefore were uſually called, the holy Ghoſt. Acts 2.4. and 4.8.31. and 6. 35. and 7.55. and 8.15.18. and 10. 44.47. and 11.15. and 19.2. &c. as there is but one kinde of water diſtilling on the herbs in rain, which in the effects thereof admirably varieth in the production of fruits, plants, and flowers, it ſhewing it ſelf (as Cyril. cat. 16. expreſſeth it) λευκὸν μὲν ἐν κρίνῳ, ἐρυθρὸν δὲ ἐν ῥόδῳ, white in the Lily, but red in the Roſe: ſo is there but one holy Ghoſt working varieties of gifts in men, for the edification of the Church.

v. 40. This is the prophet. Deut. 18.15. &c. See c. 1.21.

v. 41. but ſome ſaid, ſhall Chriſt come out of Galilee] Such is the condition of truth, it ever meeteth with ſome oppoſers: had not their envy blinded them, they might have found that Chriſt was born at Bethlehem, and of the linage of David: the wicked are quick ſighted to finde out arguments from perverted and miſ underſtood Scriptures to ſtrengthen their unbelief; but ſlow and dull to learn the truth, this is Satans malice, and mens unhappy weakneſs, to turn that to deſtruction which God in mercy gave for comfort, and ſalvation.

v. 42. hath not the Scripture ſaid] Mat. 2.5. Mic. 5. 2.

v. 43. ſo there was a diviſion] Σχίσμα, a ſchiſm, or diviſion, or rent, Auguſtine tom. 7. contr. Creſcon. Gram. l. 2. c. 6. intimateth that a Schiſm is, Recens congregationis, ex aliqua ſententiarum diverſitate diſſentio, a new or late-ſprung-up diſſention of the congregation or Church, out of ſome diverſity of opinions. An Hereſie he ſaith is, Schiſma inveteratum, an old Schiſm.

becauſe of him] No wonder if there be Schiſms now among us, ſeeing, in the ſacred preſence of Chriſt, and when his ſelf preached the moſt infallible truth of the Goſpel, there were Schiſms and Diviſions. See Mat 10.5. the cauſe is in the ſecret corruption of mens hearts, not in the Goſpel of peace.

v. 44. but no man laid hands on him] See v. 30. Superſtition is ever cruel, but Gods providence over-ruleth all.

v. 45. why have ye not brought him] Theſe greedy Wolves were ſo impatient, that they are angry with their Meſſengers returning without him, not hearing or regarding why they took him not.

v. 46. never man ſpake, &c.] They admired the grace in his lips, Pſal. 45.2. So Matth. 7.28,29. but malice makes men ſo blinde and ſtupid, that they cannot be ſenſible of any the moſt excellent graces in thoſe they hate. See 1 Kings 22.8. 1 John 3.12. It is natural to judge them evil whom we hate:

but ſuch is the power of God, they who went with purpoſe to take him, were taken with his excellency, their malice being turned to love and admiration, and they made proclaimers of his divine excellency. See 1 Sam. 19.20.

v. 47. are ye alſo deceived] Blinded with envy, they would not admit, that Jeſus could preach any thing worthy of admiration, therefore they conclude that they were beguiled by his fair ſpeeches: pride ever thinks it cannot erre, and that rather all the World is dark, then it ſelf blinde.

v. 48. have any of, &c.] Thus they alleage mans authority againſt Gods: ſuppoſing that the Chair of Rulers and Phariſees had infallibility entailed on it.

v. 49. are curſed] It was their high ambition which made them conceive all men bound to follow them, though to deſtruction, and a proud opinion of themſelves and their authority, cauſed them to deſpiſe and curſe all others diſſenting from their impiety and unbelief. It is a dangerous Paradox which Card. Bellarmine holdeth de Roman. pontif. lib. 4. cap. 5. Si autem Papa erraret præcipiendo vitia, vel prohibendo virtutes, teneretur Eccleſia credere vitia eſſe bona, & virtutes malas-- but if the Pope ſhould erre by commanding vices, or forbidding vertues, the Church were bound to believe that vices were good, and vertues evil:--and an uncharitable preſumption of the Council of Trent, to ſeal up their many Canons with ſo many anathema's to them who diſſent from their errours. See Concil. Tridentin. concil. tom. 9. Severin. Bin. See more on v. 51.

v. 50. he that came to Jeſus by night] c. 3. 2.

v. 51. doth our law judge any man before, &c.] Doth our law condemn? See Deut. 17. 8, 10. and 19. 15. their part it was to have inſtructed the people, not to upbraid their ignorance; and to pray for them and bleſſe them, not to judge, damn, and curſe them: Quid temerarius Dei tribunal aſcendis? ſaith Optatus, l. 2. Who art thou that judgeſt another mans ſervant? to his own maſter he ſtandeth or falleth, Rom. 14. 4. It was Conſtantines anſwer to the Donatiſts; Petitis a me in ſeculo judicium, cum ego ipſe Chriſti judicium expectem; you deſire judgement of me in this World, whereas I my ſelf expect the judgement of Chriſt. So Rom. 14. 10. We ſhall all ſtand before the judgement ſeat of Chriſt.-- Thoſe whom God hath ſet in authority may and ought to judge of ſecular buſineſſes; but of mans final eſtate Chriſt onely is to judge. That Judge which pronounceth before he hath heard both parties, is unjuſt, even where he giveth a juſt ſentence; but to condemn any man unheard, is an injuſtice againſt which the laws of God and Nature caution; as alſo to execute any man uncondemned. See Salvian. de gub. D. lib. 8. fine. Tertul. Apol. cap. 1. Lactant. divin. inſtit. l. 5. c. 1. See alſo Acts 25. 16. Poſſibly Nicodemus ſaid this, not onely to diſſwade them from ſuch injuſtice, but alſo in hope that if they would but hear Jeſus, they ſhould either be converted or convicted. Indeed, as even Julian could ſay in the cauſe of Numerius, who can be innocent if it be enough to accuſe. Ammian. Marcellin. lib. 18.

v. 52. art thou alſo of Galilee] By way of reproach and contempt they named Galilee, though poſſibly they knew him to be no Galilean.

ſearch and look] They bid Nicodemus go learn, as intimating his ignorance or reproving his incogitancy.

ariſeth no Prophet] They would have no man think Jeſus ſo much as a Prophet; therefore would they preſcribe Gods power by cuſtome. So ſlender a ground had they, as commonly all Schiſmaticks and Hereticks have, which is, at leaſt to beg one principle, and to take ſome falſehood for granted, on which they would build the reſt. As here: Firſt they make no queſtion but that Jeſus is a Galilean. Secondly they conclude, that becauſe God never had raiſed any Prophet thence, therefore, he never would. The firſt was falſe, for Jeſus was of Bethlehem, and the ſecond in their ſenſe not true: for God called thence divers eminent Apoſtles; and ſo their ſuperſtructions were all falſe and impious; as, that they ought not to follow Chriſt: that they who did, were ignorant of the Law, and curſed: that they who were in authority ought to reſtrain them by excommunication, or other puniſhments due to Hereticks, and to perſecute Chriſt, and thoſe that believed in him. Thus one abſurdity or falſehood granted, many more will follow.

v. 53. every man went, &c.] Divided in opinion and confounded in counſel, they could effect nothing until the time by God appointed. See Acts 28. 29. being at preſent fruſtrate of their hope to apprehend and deſtroy Chriſt; in great indignation they diſſolved their malignant council, laying aſide, not leaving their blaſphemous malice.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſ 1. THe mount of Olives] An hill neer Jeruſalem, on the Eaſt; ſo called for the abundance of Olives there growing: it was there Chriſt uſed to be in the night, Luke 21. 37.

v. 2. early in the morning] Here is deſcribed the peoples diligence to hear the Word, as Luke 21. 38. as alſo Chriſts zeal to preach the ſame, that he might inſtruct and ſave them.

all the people] πᾶς, All, that is, many who had formerly heard him teaching in the feaſt of tabernacles, c. 7. 14. 37. Some of theſe came to be edified, and ſome to cavil.

3. and the Scribes, &c.] See on Luke 20. 1.

brought unto him a woman taken, &c.] Poſſibly the man (equally faulty, and liable to the ſame puniſhment, Levit. 20. 10. Deut. 22. 22.) had eſcaped from them.

v. 4. this woman, &c.] They call him Maſter; now they meant to entangle him, as Matth. 22. 16. whom they uſed to ſtile a Seducer, to the people; and they who were Judges, here act the part of accuſers.

v. 5. now Moſes in the law] Levit. 20. 10. &c. They could remember and urge the Law againſt others ſin, but could not apply that to themſelves which it ſaith againſt injuſtice; to wit, condemning without cauſe, lawful witneſs, or hearing the parties accuſed. Concerning the Law by them here mentioned; we muſt know, that it was ſo ſevere, that evil might be taken away from the Land, and to terrifie the ſinners, by making offenders exemplary: See Numb. 25. 11. Sin is not known in impunity: that which they here did, was with purpoſe to enſnare Chriſt; they thinking, if he abſolved her, he ſhould appear to the people as an adverſary to the law of God, and ſo not the Meſſias, but an Impoſtor liable to a ſevere cenſure: but if he condemned her, he ſhould ſeem to annul the very purpoſe of his coming, who profeſſed to ſave them, and to propoſe grace and mercy, Ambroſe ep. 76.

v. 6. that they might have to accuſe him] As a breaker of Moſes's law, if he acquitted her, as they conceived he would, becauſe he ſhewed mercy to ſinners; and, as they pretended, taught concerning the Sabbath, contrary to Moſes.

wrote on the ground] Some think he wrote that which he anſwered, or ſome more ſecret thing concerning the conſciences of the informers: but ſeeing the Scripture ſpeaketh not what he wrote, we muſt not curiouſly enquire. S. Ambroſe lib. 9. epiſt. 76. ſaith, he wrote on the ground with his finger, who wrote the Law on the Tables of Stone. For the reſt we may ſay with Auguſtine, epiſt. 121. cap. 15. Init. Eſt ergo in nobis, quædam, ut ita dicam, docta ignorantia: There is therefore in us, that I may ſo ſpeak, a kinde of learned ignorance: and as Jerome, Melius eſt aliquid neſcire ſecurè, quam cum periculo diſcere: tis better be ſecurely ignorant of ſome thing, then to learn it with danger.

v. 7. he that is without ſin] See Deut. 17. 7. As if he had ſaid, ſhe is juſtly to be condemned; but you that accuſe others look home, examine your own conſciences whether you are not guilty of the like, or as great ſinnes. Quomodo enim feras alieni ultorem, & proprii criminis defenſorem?---Nonne ſe magis ipſe condemnat, qui in alio damnat, quod ipſe committit? Ambroſe qu. ſ. How could you endure a revenger of anothers faults, and a defender of his own? ---Doth not he more condemn himſelf, who condemneth that in another, which he committeth himſelf? The Jews urged him again and again (while he ſeemed to ſlight their information) confident in his forbearance to anſwer, that they had now caught him in an unavoidable difficulty what ever he anſwered; Chriſt therefore replyed with due reſpect to the law, maintaining the equity thereof; ſo anſwering, that they could not calumniate him for abſolving the ſinner, nor object againſt his doctrine of grace and mercy freely juſtifying ſinners; thus retorting the calumny, and ſtriking the ſleepy conſciences of the malepert accuſers, who vainly inſulted, as if others vices were their vertues: teaching all who will be accuſers of their brethren to begin at home; for as Gregory Nazianzen ſaid epiſt. 16. Cæſario frater. how ſhall they reprove others ſin, who have not ἀφ' ἑαυτῶν τὴν παῤῥησίαν, that is, confidence in their own innocency: but as the moſt ravenous and hurtful birds, are commonly moſt quick-ſighted; ſo are the moſt wicked moſt ready and skilful to finde out others faults: the eye ſeeth not it ſelf, nor any thing which is too neer it; ſo neither ſee we our own faults, except ſet at ſome diſtance, and in another perſon: ſo David ſaw his fault, in the perſon of the rich oppreſſour; till then he could not in himſelf. 2 Sam. 12. See on Matth. 7. 5.

v. 8. again

v. 8. again he ſtooped down] Thereby giving them with their convicted conſciences, opportunity to bethink themſelves, and to ſteal away, that they might not at preſent be further detected and ſhamed.

v. 9. being convicted by their own conſciences] Hearing ſuch an unexpected anſwer, and out of hope to accompliſh their deſigne upon him, their conſciences accuſing them, and fearing to confeſſe themſelves ſinners (leſt their reputation with the people ſhould thereby be impaired) or to bring their pretended innocency to the teſt before him, who as they might poſſibly ſuſpect, might know and detect their ſecret failings; they choſe rather to take the opportunity of his ſtooping down, to go away; though in that receſſe, indeed confeſſing his impregnable wiſedom, and their own guiltineſſe.

beginning at the eldeſt] Either (ſaith Ambroſe lib. 7. ep. 58.) becauſe they who had lived longeſt, had more ſins; or becauſe they being more prudent, firſt apprehended the force of the ſentence. That which Theodoret ſaith (in Jer. 17. 1.) is true: there is nothing more powerful then the conſcience.

Jeſus was left alone] That is in reſpect of all thoſe accuſers; not ſimply alone; for theſe things were acted before his diſciples, and a great multitude of people: therefore it is ſaid, and the woman ſtanding in the midſt, ἐν μέσῳ muſt relate to a company.

v. 10. and ſaw none but the woman] None belonging to that cauſe: no accuſer, nor officer attending her.

where are thoſe thine accuſers] Not being ignorant of their departure, but making manifeſt to all preſent, that he abſolved her not contrary to the law, ſeeing the informers and witneſſes deſerted the cauſe.

v. 11. She ſaid, no man, Lord] She anſwereth to the ſecond quære, not weighing the firſt, ſeeing her accuſers were gone: ſhe knew that condemnation ought not to go before conviction.

neither do I condemn thee] Neither will I condemn thee, Ambroſe readeth, lib. 7. ep. 58. others read with us κατακρίνω, neither do I condemn. I will not uſe leſſe clemency then they: See Chap. 3. 17. this he ſaid, not to diſſolve the Law, but to ſhew mercy, and to call to repentance: and for that he would not take upon him to be a temporal Judge, as Luke 12. 14. as if he ſaid, I leave the Magiſtrate his right of judicature; and ſeeing they condemn thee not, neither do I, who came to pardon ſins, and ſave ſinners: he ſaith not, no man ought to condemn thee (that had been to pervert juſtice, to condemn the Law, and to juſtifie the wicked, for certainly there are many ſins in adultery,) but he ſaith, hath no man condemned thee? He ſo ſheweth mercy, as not thereby to aboliſh political order: and here is a ſweet motive to repentance, that we may flie to his mercy, from whoſe juſtice we cannot fly. Fulgent. ad Venan. ep 7.

go and ſin no more] This ſaid he that he might ſhew them, ſe homini pepercisse, &c. (Auguſtin. Macedon. ep. 54. that he ſpared man, but was not pleaſed with mans ſin: this is true repentance, not onely to lament, but to forſake our ſin: the end why God ſheweth mercy, is that we may ſerve him more holily. See Rom. 6. 4. Luke 1. 75. and this was here the greateſt and moſt abſolute condemnation of this womans ſin. For where the guilty is put to death, rather the perſon is executed then the ſin: but where the ſinner leaveth his ſin, there is a diſcharge of the perſon whom Chriſt came to ſave, and a killing of ſin: which he came to condemn in the fleſh. Rom. 8. 3.

v. 12. I am the light of the world] Chap. 1. 4, 5. and 9. 5.

v. 13. thy record is not true] ἀληθὴς is here taken for authentick, or worthy to be credited; that which the Hebrews call נאמן neeman, the Syriack שרירא ſhariro, (that is, firmum, validum) of שריר ſharar.

v. 14. though I bear record] Chap. 5. 31.

yet my record is true] Becauſe God is the onely ſufficient witneſſe concerning himſelf.

v. 15. ye judge after the fleſh] According to outward appearance, Chap. 7. 24.

I judge no man] That is, I do not now judge; I now am come to teach and propoſe conditions of mercy and ſalvation to penitent ſinners: or, I judge not raſhly, as you do.

v. 16. for I am not alone] He doth not plainly and expreſſely affirm his Godhead (that was yet vailed under the infirmity of the fleſh) but mentioneth his Father, whoſe Deity they acknowledged, to intimate the power he had to judge, who yet ſpared them, and inſtructed them how to avoid the judgement to come: he was not alone, the Father and the holy Ghoſt were with him, nunquam enim poteſt à ſe Trinitas ſeparari, Ambroſ. in Luc. lib. 2. cap. 3. for the holy Trinity can never be divided from it ſelf. See Fulgent. de fide orthod. ad Donat. See 1 John 5. 7.

v. 17. it is alſo written in your law] Deut. 17. 6. See Matth. 18. 16.

the teſtimony of two men is true] That is, ſo taken in law, not that it is alwayes ſo. See 1 Kings 21. 13. Matth. 26. 60. Acts 6. 11. but this he ſaith by way of conceſſion: and by this ſecret antitheſis he ſheweth, how unjuſt they were who profeſſed the law, according to which they took that for granted which two men witneſſed; but would not believe what God the Father and himſelf teſtified.

v. 18. I am one that bear witneſſe, &c.] He declareth that which he before ſaid, I am not alone, verſe 16. as God he teſtifieth of himſelf, (the Meſſias, God and man) and in the ſame act the Father teſtifieth with him, for they are one God, and their works are undivided. See on verſe 16. Chriſt argueth (as Lyranus noteth) from the leſſer to the greater: the witneſſe of two men, according to Moſes law, is ſufficient to confirm a truth, therefore much more ſufficient is the witneſſe of two perſons of the holy Trinity; men may deceive and lie, but God cannot: he might here alſo have cited the ſame teſtimony of the holy Ghoſt; but that doctrine was not yet opportune, and ſeaſonable for them.

v. 19. ye ſhould have known my Father alſo] For they are one God.

v. 20. Theſe words ſpake Jeſus] See on Luke 21. 4. in their treaſury their offerings were kept, Mark 12. 41. this ſhewes his undaunted conſtancy in the preſence of his enemies, and heat of their malice: no man yet medled with him, becauſe the providence of God limited all things to the appointed times, therefore they were yet reſtrained: to teach us conſtancy and confidence in the truth. The Devil himſelf cannot reach beyond the length of his chain, (Rev. 20. 1, &c.) nor hurt the leaſt of Gods children, more then, or before he permitteth) who will make all things work for good to them that love him. Rom. 8. 28.

v. 21. Ye ſhall ſeek me] See Chap. 7. 34.

v. 22. Whither I go] See Chap. 7. 35.

v. 23. ye are from beneath] He ſheweth here the cauſe of their blindneſſe and unbelief: ye are earthly and carnal, therefore apprehend you not the heavenly things which I teach you, no man is an apt Diſciple of Chriſt, whom Gods Spirit doth not make ſo: hence is the rarity of faith in the world.

I am not of this world] He denyeth not his humane nativity, of the ſeed of Abraham; but he denyeth that he hath any communion with ſin, and the corruptions of fleſh and blood: in which ſence he ſaith, the Apoſtles were not of this world, Chap. 15. 9. and 17. 16. though not free from ſin by nature (Epheſ. 2. 3.) but by grace and regeneration; nor abſolutely (as Chriſt) but comparatively, and in reſpect of their juſtification by the merit of Chriſt. See Galat. 1. 4. Phil. 3. 20.

v. 24. I ſaid therefore unto you, &c.] Theſe words relate to the precedent declaration; the meaning is, the world periſheth in ſin and unbelief (1 Cor. 11. 32.) if you are of this world, and come not to me by faith for your juſtification, you muſt needs periſh in your ſins.

that I am he, &c.] That I am the Meſſias and ſole Saviour of the world: this ſheweth that there is ſalvation to none, but thoſe who conſtantly hope for, and expect in Chriſt, whatſoever the Prophets have foretold concerning the Meſſias.

ye ſhall die in your ſins] For there is ſalvation in none other, Acts 4. 12. he onely taketh away the ſins of the world, Chap. 1. 29. he onely juſtifieth ſinners by ſuffering for them, paying the full price of their redemption, and making their peace with God. (See Rom. 3. 24. and 5. 24. and 5. 3. and 8. 1, 2.) therefore if your ſins be not done away in Chriſt, you ſhall in them die eternally.

v. 25. even the ſame that I ſaid] The Son of God, and Saviour of the world, as I taught you from the beginning.

v. 26. I have many things to ſay, and to judge of you] As if he had ſaid, I could detect, and object againſt you many things, but becauſe I ſee my word is to you, but as the ſun-beams to the clay, more hardening you, I forbear now; yet my Father, who ſent me to teſtifie the truth to you, will once appear true in all that he hath threatned unbelievers, and will vindicate his word againſt all impious deſpiſers of the ſame. See 2 Tim. 2. 13. It may be a comfort to all that conſtantly adhere to the truth of Gods word; though the world and generality of men oppoſe or contemn it, God will be true: as the aſcending fumes and vapours may for a time obſcure the light of the Sunne toward us, they cannot extinguiſh it; ſo may emergent hereſies, and oppoſitions of men, veil the truth a while, they ſhall never finally prevail againſt it.

v. 27. they underſtood not] He noteth the ſtupidity of ſome of the hearers, who could neither underſtand promiſes, nor threatnings.

v. 28. When ye have lift up] That is, when ye have crucified me, your own conſciences ſhall be convinced that I am the Son of God. See Matth. 27. 54. Acts 2. 37. Luke 23. 47, 48.

v. 29. The Father hath not left me alone] That is, the power of the Spirit of God ever aſſiſteth me and my miniſtery; it is your own fault, if you feel it not in your hearts, active to faith and obedience, 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4.

v. 30. many beleeved] The Bee ſucketh honey where the Spider gathereth venom: the word of Chriſt falleth like the ſnow and rain, (Deut 32. 1, &c. Iſaiah 55. 10. Hebr. 4. 12. and 6, 7.) which maketh the venemous weeds grow up more ranck to the fire, and the wholſom herbs more fruitful for the owners bleſſing.

v. 31. If ye continue in my word] It is the end which crowneth all good actions. See Matth 24. 13. Revel. 2. 10. Coloſ. 1. 23. it is not enough to begin well, Non quæruntur in Chriſtianis initia, ſed finis: Paulus male capit, ſed bene finivit: Judæ laudantur exordia, ſed finis proditione damnatur Jerom. Furiæ ep. 21. in Chriſtians, not ſo much the beginning as the end is conſiderable: Paul began ill, but ended well: Judas beginnings are commended, but his end was damnable for his treaſon.

v. 32 the truth ſhall make you free] For otherwiſe they were ſlaves to ſin and errour: the good man even in ſervitude is free, but the wicked etſi regnet, ſervus eſt, though he reign is but a ſlave, and that not unto one man, but that which is more grievous, to ſo many maſters, as he hath ſins. Proſper. out of Auguſtine de C. D. lib. 1. cap. 18: and then is the will free, when it ſerveth not vice and ſin: that is the gift of God, which being loſt, niſi à quo potuit dari, non poteſt reddi, can be reſtored by none, but him who could firſt give it. Proſper. ex Aug. de C. D. lib. 14. cap. 11.

v. 33 they anſwered him] They, who were heard to calumniate, who believed not, though they had often been made vaſſals, & now were by the Romans, yet they conceived that by right they ought to have been free; and that (however degenerate they were) yet that they had the priviledge of Abrahams ſons: not underſtanding, that onely regeneration by the Spirit of God could make them free, and the true children of Abraham, Rom. 2. 29. Luke 19. 9. Matth. 3. 9. Rom. 9. 7, 8. Gal. 3. 9. 29.

ye ſhall be made free] That is, as if we were not ſo already? thus are we generally ſecure under the title of Chriſtians, whereas that ſacred name ſhall more grievouſly condemn the wicked: and we may too truly ſay with Salvian de gub. D. lib. 6. O deplorable miſery, quam diſſimilis eſt nunc à ſeipſo populus Chriſtianus, id eſt, ab eo qui fuit quondam, how unlike is the Chriſtian people to it ſelf, that is, to ſuch as it was wont to be.

v. 34. whoſoever committeth ſin] You boaſt of your freedom: but ſin is the greateſt ſervitude (Rom. 6. 16. 20. 2 Pet. 2. 19.) and the cuſtom thereof, the moſt unhappy tyranny, and the bonds thereof moſt hard to ſhake off. Sin reigning, a man hath a free will (ſaith Fulgent. de incarn. & gra. cap. 19.) but free without God, not free under God, and thereforefore peſſimè atque ſerviliter liberum, wickedly and ſervilely free, becauſe not freed by the free gift of God, ſhewing mercy.

v. 35. the ſervant abideth not in the houſe, &c.] This is the puniſhment and miſery of the ſervants of ſin: though they ſeem for a time to enjoy the priviledge of Gods houſe, and to inſult over, and perſecute his children, yet are they not heirs, but muſt at laſt be caſt out, as Iſmael was from Abrahams family, Gen. 21. 9. Gal. 4. 30.

v. 36. if the Son therefore ſhall make you free] This he ſaith to ſhew, that whereas all men are born ſervants of ſin, they are freed by grace onely, and the ſpirit of adoption, by faith in Chriſt, and that all other prerogatives are vain: what could the Empire of the world advantage a ſervant to ſin? The moſt happy freedom, is to be a ſervant of God, that ſin may not reign in thee. But from this ſervitude of ſin, no man is freed, but by the Son of God, Fulgent. de incarn. &c. cap. 19. for by him ſpiritualiter renaſcimur. See Auguſtine ep. 157. See alſo the epiſtle of the Council of Carthage. I*nnocent. ib. ep.* 90.

v. 37. ye are Abrahams ſeed] That is, according to the fleſh.

v. 38. ſeen with your father] What your father the devil teacheth you. See verſe 44.

v. 39. works of Abraham] You would be heir to him in faith and obedience.

v. 40. this did not Abraham] Your works are contrary to Abrahams; he loved and believed God, you through unbelief perſecute the Son of God: he obeyed God, you ſerve the ſpirit of malice.

v. 41. the deeds of your father] Your works ſpeak you the ſons of another father whom you imitate.

we have one Father, even God] We worſhip one God, who choſe us to be his people, who often acknowledged us for his children, Exod. 4. 22.

v. 42. if God were your Father] If ye were indeed the ſons of God by adoption, you would imitate him in love.

v. 43. cannot bear my word] That is, you will not hear and obey, being filled with malice and prejudicate opinion. See Matth. 13. 14. 15.

v. 44. ye are of your father the devil] Not by nature, but by imitation of his malice. See 1 John 3. 8. So Cyril. Catech. 7 Satan is the lyars father, ὀ κατὰ φύσιν, ἀλλὰ κατὰ ἀπάτην, not by nature, but by fraud and deceit.

from the beginning] From the beginning of the world he led men into ſin and death.

abode not in the truth] He kept not his firſt eſtate, Jude verſe 6.

he ſpeaketh of his own] According to his cuſtom and diſpoſition; if ever he ſpeak truth, he borroweth that, to the end that he may more deceive.

he is a lyar, and the father of it] Lyars are the devils children by imitation: herein they meerly reſemble him: none would believe him whom they knew to be the devil; neither will they believe a notorious known lyar: it is madneſſe not to know, quod mendacia non diu fallunt, Cyprian. lib. 1. ep. 3. that lies cannot long deceive.

v. 45. becauſe I tell you the truth] Thus he proveth them Satans ſons, not Gods, becauſe they hated the truth, nor is there any more evident mark of a reprobate minde, then hatred of trueth, and love of lies: See 2 Theſſ. 2. 10, 11.

v. 46. Which of you convinceth me of ſin?] This is a ſecret prepoſſeſſion of an objection: if they ſhould ſay, we diſbelieve not becauſe thou ſpeakeſt truth, but becauſe thou violateſt the law; he challengeth the accuſers to ſhew wherein: they could accuſe, and did malitiouſly, but who can convince, or prove him to be a tranſgreſſour of the law. This word could fit the mouth of holy Jeſus onely, it is too high a challenge for any of the mere ſons of men: in Chriſt onely there was no ſin.

v. 47. He that is of God] This a peculiar of thoſe who are of God; who are led by the Spirit of God, and ſincerely endeavour to do his will, they will hearken to his word; they will love to hear. See 1 John 4. 6. you believe not becauſe you are not Gods ſons, but Satans, who hates and reſiſts the truth. See Acts 13. 48.

v. 48. Say we not well that thou art a Samaritan, &c.] Thus groweth unbelief and contempt of Gods word into open blaſphemie: thus convicted impiety breaks out into railing: they accounted the Samaritanes Apoſtates, and impious; therefore when they would deſcribe a wicked man, they called him Samaritan.

v. 50. and judgeth] And will avenge this blaſphemy, wherewith ye diſhonour me.

v. 51. He ſhall never ſee death] Shall not die eternally: it is an Hebrew manner of expreſſion, as alſo, to taſte of death. verſe 52. Hebr. 11. 5.

v. 52. we know thou haſt a devil] Thus obſtinate were they in their malitious blaſphemie; and ſo high an opinion had they of themſelves, that they concluded all muſt be true which they thought, who thought themſelves infallible.

v. 53. Art thou greater then our father Abraham?] So injurious are they to God and to the ſaints, who uſe their name and memory to Chriſts diſhonour: we can never make more honourable mention of them, then when we ſtile them the ſervants of Chriſt.

v. 54. if I honour my ſelf] If I onely ſpeak glorious and great things of my ſelf, as you ſuppoſe; but my Father teſtifieth of me, and honoureth me, by the prophets, by his voice from heaven, by many miracles by me done.

Ye ſay that he is your God] They profeſſed ſo, (as alſo many now) but they denied God in their actions.

v. 55. ye have not known him] Therefore is he not your God: ye know him not, who dare ſo willfully diſobey him: he that ſaith, I know him, and keepeth not his commandments, is a lyar, and the truth is not in him 1 John 2. 4.

v. 56. Abraham rejoyced to ſee my day] That is my coming in the fleſh, which he ſaw far off by faith, Heb. 11. 13. (Proſper referreth it to the day of his paſſion, figured in his ſon. de promiſ. & prædict. part. 1. cap. 17.

v. 57. Thou art not yet fifty years old] He was about thirty and three yeers old. See Luke 3. 23.

v. 58. Before Abraham was, I am] I who according to my humanity am not fifty yeers old; according to my divine nature am eternal, and ſo before Abraham, and all the creatures: the Deity hath neither paſt, nor future, ſed ſemper eſſe habet, Greg. hom. 18. in Evang. He ſaith not to Moſes, I was, but I am hath ſent thee. Exod. 3. 14.

v. 59. Then took they up ſtones, &c.] Such is the fury of blinde zeal, and impatient errour, they have no ſober ears for trueth, but hands quickly armed for ſlaughter. See Acts 7. 57.

but Jeſus hid himſelf] How, we read not, but certainly Gods power ſo protected him; becauſe the time of his paſſion was not yet come. See Luke 4. 30. he could eaſily have deſtroyed all his enemies, but qui pati venerat, exercere judicium nolebat. Gregor in Evang. hom. 18. he that came to ſuffer would not now exerciſe judgement: it may teach us, to decline the fury of our enemies by withdrawing our ſelves from their preſence, if it may be, to reſerve our ſelves to better times and auditors: certainly Chriſt ſtayeth not with the bloody, and cruell; though in his abſence they have the poſſeſſion of the externall; materiall Churches.

CHAP. IX.

Verſe 1. Blinde from his birth] Born blinde: this ſetteth out the greatneſs of the miracle: they who are blinde by ſome diſeaſe growing in the eye, (any part of that curious fabrick being hurt or diſaffected) may poſſibly finde ſome help by the art and induſtry of the Phyſician: but thoſe who are born blinde, without eyes, or without the naturall frame and diſpoſition thereof, can be cured by none but the Lord of nature: therefore the Evangeliſt mentioneth this, that we may know that this cure was non artis, ſed poteſtatis, Ambroſ. ad Bellic. ep. 75. l. 9. not of art but power.

v. 2. or his parents] This they aſked, being confident of his omniſcience, otherwiſe they had in vain moved this queſtion; and alſo knowing that all miſery is the effect of ſin (chap. 5. 14.) and that God often viſiteth the Parents ſin upon their dear children, ſee 2 Sam. 12. 14, &c.

v. 3. Neither hath this man ſinned, nor, &c.] which he ſaith not ἁπλῶς, ſimply, for ſo, both he and his parents had ſinned (as Chryſoſtom noteth) but neither this mans ſins, nor his parents were a cauſe why he, rather then all other ſinners, was born blinde, but that Gods glory might appear in his cure.

v. 4. While it is day] While I live here, or while I have opportunity.

when no man can work] He calleth the hour of the wicked, and power of darkneſs (to which he was in his paſſion, ſhortly to be ſubjected) the night, wherein he ſhould not have opportunity of healing, and doing miracles for the confirmation of the Goſpel, by his own viſible and bodily preſence: he did that after his death and reſurrection by his diſciples and their ſucceſſours in the Primitive Church for a time: the words therefore expreſs not an impoſſibility, but an importunity: when no man can work; that is, when it is unſeaſonable to work: it muſt teach us, while we have time, to improve it to Gods ſervice; the time is coming on, wherein there ſhall be no faith, labour, propheſying, nor place for repentance. See Iſai. 55. 6. John 12. 35. 36. 1 Cor. 13. 8.

v. 5. I am the light] Chap. 1. 9. He is alwayes in the world, and ſtill illuminateth every one that comes into the world: but not now by a viſible preſence, and externall operation, but by his divine and ſecret power. See chap. 8. 12.

v. 6. Spat on the ground] Chriſt uſed means, to mans reaſon improbable, that his power might be the better ſeen in the cure.

anointed the eyes of the blinde] Or ſpread the clay upon the eyes, &c.

v. 7. go waſh in the pool of Siloam] Siloam was a fountain at the foot of mount Sion. See on Luke 13. 4.

Cor. 10. ſo alſo) the Siloah, ſent of God to illuminate and ſave men, to be the fountain of all good to believers: it was not the vertue of this water (wherein doubtleſs many had waſhed without any extraordinary effect) but his power who was ſent of God, that gave this man ſight: and this bare a type of baptiſme, as Ambroſe (forecited. v. 1.) noteth which was called of the Greeks φώτισμα. Clem. Alexand. Pӕd. l. 1. Nazianz. orat. 40. Cyril. Cat. 1. 2. Chryſoſt. on Heb. 6. 4. where the Apoſtle calleth the baptized φωτισθέντας, enlightened, as Ambroſ. ſaith, refuſo lumine, as if Chriſt the light touching the blinde, infuſed illumination.

v. 8. he that ſate and begged] Their law concerning beggars, and proviſion for the poor, Deuteronomy 15. 4. (as in other diſordered governments) it ſeemeth was now not carefully executed. See Act. 3. 2.

v. 9. I am he] As impiety is ingenious to conceal and obſcure the works of God, ſo is faith and holy gratitude ingenuous and free to confeſs the ſame to Gods glory: their doubting occaſioned this recovered man to proclaim, the work of Chriſt on him; wherein as Chryſoſtom noteth, ὐκ ᾐσχύνθη [illegible] προτέραν πήρωσιν — he was not aſhamed of his former blindneſs (no nor of his beggery) nor feared he the peoples fury, neither diſſembled he the benefit received.

v. 10. thine eyes opened] ἀνεῴχθησαν, after the Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, the eyes of the blinde are ſaid to be ſhut: and ſo their eyes are ſaid to be opened, who of blinde, are reſtored to ſight: ſomtimes we read of eyes, held, or opened in another ſenſe, as Gene. 21. 19. Luk. 24. 16. ſo Hagars were opened, that ſhe might ſee that, which before, though preſent, and ſeeing, ſhe could not ſee: and the diſciples eyes were held; not that they might not ſee, but that they might not at preſent know Chriſt.

v. 11. I went and waſhed] He relateth the trueth ſimply and as it was acted; ſhewing the effect of his faith, and obedience, the receiving his ſight.

v. 12. I know not] Whether they aſked, as admiring the cure, or to accuſe him who had wrought it on the Sabbath, it is not evident, though this ſeemeth moſt probable: it appeareth that though the cured man had learned his name who cured him, of others (as Mark 10. 47. Matth. 20. 30.) poſſibly of thoſe who led him away to Siloam, yet had he not yet ſeen Jeſus, who likely went away from the place where he cured him, ſo that he found him not after he returned from the water, ſeeing.

v. 13. they brought him to the Phariſes] Whether to ingratiate with them, or to enform them what admirable things Jeſus (whom they perſecuted) did, it is not manifeſt.

v. 14. It was the Sabbath day] See on Matth. 12. 2. 5. 8.

v. 15. again the Phariſes] Theſe buſie enemies of Chriſt, intended by this reexamination of the man, to have found ſome advantage againſt Chriſt; but, they did but condemn themſelves the more, by how much more apparent their malice made this admirable work of Chriſt.

v. 16. becauſe he keepeth not the Sabbath] See on chap. 5. 9. 10.

v. 17. A Prophet] A man of God, of whom he muſt have ſuch power.

v. 18. Until they called his parents] Hoping that they being over-awed with fear of their power and authority, would rather deny that their ſon was born blinde, then by confeſſing a known trueth, incurre their diſpleaſure: but the more they ſtrive to obſcure the truth the more evident they made it: ſo God turneth the counſells of the wicked againſt themſelves and taketh the wiſe in their own craft.

v. 19. who ye ſay was, &c.] They will not acknowledge that he was ſo born, but interrogate the parents in a threatning manner, which in effect was to bid them deny it, as they tendered their favour.

v. 20. we know this is our ſon] We cannot but know and confeſs this, they would not for fear deny their ſon, how wretched is it for fear, or favour to deny the Saviour.

v. 21. he is of age, ask him] Of age to be a competent witneſs; and he can beſt enform you hereof who hath many years endured the miſery of blindneſs, and now enjoyeth his ſight: it may be the cure was not wrought in their ſight, and therefore they more willingly put off the fuller anſwer to their ſon.

v. 22. becauſe they feared the Jews] That is, the Phariſes and thoſe who were of their conſiſtory, or Sanhedrin.

put out of the Synagogue] That is caſt out of the Church as a notorious and contumatious malefactour profane, and wicked heretick; which caſting out, we call excommunication. See Matth. 18. 17. 1 Cor. 5. 2. 5. 1 Tim. 1. 20. this ſheweth [illegible] the abuſe of excommunication among them, ſo the uſe [illegible] in all ages.

v. 24. give God praiſe] Tell truth, that God may be glorified. See Joſh. 7. 19. as if they had ſaid, remember, that thou ſpeakeſt in Gods preſence: thus (as hypocrites uſe) they pretended the honour of God, to colour their own implacable malice againſt Chriſt.

we know] They would have them in blinde obedience to their authority, reſt on their judgment (though it were againſt Chriſt himſelf) and believe that they could not erre.

this man is a ſinner] By this they blaſphemouſly meant, a notoriouſly impious man.

v. 25. I know that whereas I was blinde, I now ſee] He ſaid before, he is a Prophet, but perceiving the Phariſes ſo eager againſt Chriſt, refuſing to ſpeak of the perſon;

he affirmeth the admirable work done.

v. 26. They ſaid to him again] In theſe many reexaminations, they would have found him forgetfull of what he had ſaid, that by croſſing his own teſtimony, he might have made it void: ſo extream diligent is Satan, to overthrow, or obſcure the truth.

v. 27. ye did not hear] Ye believed it not.

v. 28. we are Moſes Diſciples] Thus they boaſted, but were indeed wicked hypocrites.

v. 29. whence he is] They knew his parents, but doubted of his authority.

v. 30. herein is a marvellous thing] He might well admire their ignorance, ſeeing opening the eyes of the blinde, was a foretold ſigne and mark of the Meſſias. Iſai. 35.4.5. ſo Matt. 11.5. Luke 7.20. &c.

v. 31. God heareth not ſinners] Pſal. 66. 18. Which may not be underſtood ſimply and univerſally: for God ſometimes heareth in judgement, as he ſomtimes denieth in mercy, by this argument he would overthrow their blaſphemous cenſures of Chriſt: God will not hear the prayers of ſuch wicked men as you mentioned, ſee Iſai. 1.11. Rom. 8.15. Pſal. 50. 16. Jam. 5. 16. therefore he cannot be wicked who obtaineth power of God to do ſuch things. See c. 3. 2.

but if any man, &c.] 1 John 3. 22.

v. 32. ſince the world began] As if he ſaid, that which cometh to paſs by nature, is commonly, or uſually ſo, that which by art, often; but that which is done againſt the courſe of nature, above the power of art, & ſo rarely, muſt needs be by the immediate hand of God: and conſequently Chriſt is of God.

v. 33. he could do nothing] None of theſe extraordinary good things.

v. 34. altogether born in ſins] They meant, a wicked rude idiot, as if he had by his affliction been marked for a notorious ſinner; or a curſed man. as c. 7. 39.

Caſt him out] Or excommunicated him. See v. 22.

v. 35. when he had found him] They that are excommunicate for confeſſing Chriſt aright are thereby brought neerer to Chriſt: but they who are juſtly excommunicate, are thereby delivered to Satan, 1 Cor. 5.5. 1 Tim. 1.20. which is a terrible puniſhment.

doeſt thou believe?] This he ſaith, οὐκ ἀγνοῶν, ſaith Chryſoſtom. hom. 58. not being ignorant, but being willing to maniſeſt himſelf.

v. 36. who is he Lord, &c.] Not yet knowing Jeſus by ſight, yet affectionately deſiring to know him who had done him ſo great a favour: not aſhamed of his ignorance, he prayeth to be enformed that he might believe.

v. 37. It is he that talketh with thee] He ſaith not, I am he; but it is he, as in a third perſon, intimating that the deity of the Son of God was vailed in that form of infirm man which he ſaw: happy man who had his bodily eyes opened to ſee the Son of God in the fleſh, but incomparably more happy in that his ſouls eyes were enlightened to apprehend and know him by faith to ſalvation; Chriſt who gave the firſt, now followeth him with this new and greater beneficence. So do Gods mercies increaſe upon the elect.

v. 38. worſhipped him] Fell down and worſhipped him: ſo the Syriac interpreter hath it.

v. 39. for judgement I am come] Meaning, the Phariſes arrogate all juriſdiction to themſelves, as if they onely ſaw all things; but I ſhall judge, or execute authority far otherwiſe: for I will enlighten thoſe whom they account blinde, and deliver them to darkneſs of minde, who think themſelves the only knowing men.

they which ſee not] That is, wretched ſinners, who acknowledge and bewail their innate ignorance, ſhall be enlightened by the Goſpel.

and that they which ſee] They who think they are wiſe (See Iſai. 5.21.) as did the Phariſes, who arrogated to themſelves the name of wiſe, anciently the Prophets were called ראים roim ſeers. 1 Sam. 9.9. let us go הראה. 70. πρὸς τὸν βλέποντα: to the ſeer. So was a Prophet called, ὁ βλέπων: ſo here οἱ βλέποντες; ſo Syr. חזין which ſee of the Hebr. חזה vidit, whence alſo חוזה a ſeer, or a Prophet. Iſai. 30. 10. the Scribes and Phariſees vainly affecting ſuch high titles (as Matth. 23.7.24.) are threatned, as Iſai. 6.9. See Matt. 13.15.

v. 40. are we blinde alſo?] what? will you ſay that we alſo are ignorant?

v. 41. ye ſhould have no ſin] That is, you ſhould not be ſo much in fault, as now you are, if you erred ignorantly, but it is a greater ſin to contemn the known law of God, then to be ignorant thereof (See chap. 15.22. Matth. 15. 14.) or, you were neerer the cure, but for your opinion of knowledge and ſanctity; many had long ſince been wiſe, and good, but that they too ſoon thought themſelves ſo. See Reve. 3. 17. 1 John 1.8. 1 Cor. 3. 18. Jam. 4.17.

CHAP. X.

Verſe 1. ENtreth not by the door] Chriſt compareth the Church to a ſheep fold, (as Mich. 2. 12.) into which God gathers his ſheep, that is, the elect; and himſelf to the door: becauſe there may be no entrance into the Church, but through him: they who lead not this way, are no true paſtours.

v. 2. he that entreth by the door] That is, by Chriſt: the prieſts, ſcribes, and phariſes, as falſe prophets, came in ſheeps clothing, who within were ravening wolves. Matth. 7. 15.

v. 3. to him the porter openeth] The meaning is; God alloweth none for paſtours, but thoſe who lead their hearers to him through Chriſt.

the ſheep hear his voice] The elect know and follow the voice of Chriſt in his word.

he calleth his own ſheep by name] He knoweth who are his, 2 Tim. 2. 19. and their names are written in the book of life. Phil. 4.3.

v. 4. when he putteth forth his own ſheep] See Pſal. 23.1. &c. Jer. 17.16. 2 Sam. 7.8. he leadeth them out to green paſtures, that is to refection and comfort; he goeth before them in doctrine and example: his ſheep know his voice, by that diſcerning ſpirit, by which we are commanded to try the ſpirits. 1 John 4. 1. So did the Bereans, Act. 17.

v. 5. know not the voice of ſtrangers] They approve not, or hearken not to the voice of thoſe who bring any other doctrine. Gal. 1.8. 2 John v. 10.

v. 6. This parable] See Matth. 13.3.

v. 7. Then ſaid Jeſus again] Or therefore, becauſe they underſtood not what he ſaid, he repeateth it again, further expreſſing it to them.

I am the door of the ſheep] The meaning is, that in Chriſt is the ſum of all doctrine wherewith the ſouls of the elect are nouriſhed: therefore the Apoſtle cared for nothing elſe. Phil. 3. 1 Cor. 2. 2. and that no man can come into the kingdom of God, but through him: ſo, as Gr. Nazianzen ſaid orat. 36. ὁδὸς ἐστιν ὡς δι᾽ ἑαυτὸν φέρων ἡμᾶς: he is the way leading us (to eternall life) through himſelf: his Saints and elect, per eum, intrant ad eum, through his truth and merit to life eternall in him.

v. 8. All that ever came before me] Meaning the falſe prophets, who came not in by him, but Satan and their own ambition: whoſoever called himſelf the door or way to life; or all that went into the miniſtry and he ſent them not; for he ſaith not, all that were ſent: for as Auguſtin ſaith, To. 6. contr. adv. leg. &c. l. 2. c. 4. he meaneth here all thoſe qui miſſi non fuiſſent: who were not ſent; whom the Prophet Jeremie reproveth chap. 14. 14. ſo Beda ſaith, Cum illo venerunt, qui cum verbo dei venerunt, qui non per ſe venerunt; they came with him who came with the word of God, who came not by themſelves, So Clem. Alexandrinus, l. 1. ſtrom. ἀλλ᾽ οἱ μὲν προφῆται ἅτε, &c. The Prophets truly, for as much as they were ſent & inſpired of God – οὐ κλέπται εἰσί καὶ λῃσταὶ ἀλλὰ διάκονοι – were not theeves and robbers, but miniſters: by theeves and robbers are here meant, thoſe who ſeek their own eaſe and profit, not caring for the flock of God.

v. 9. I am the door] As men come by the door into the houſe, ſo come we to heaven through Chriſt only.

and ſhal go in and out] Not meaning going out of the Church, by ſeparation from the body of Chriſt; (for as Lactantius ſaith well. l. 4. c. ult) if any go out of Chriſts Church, à ſpe vitæ ac ſalutis æternæ alienus eſt; he is an aliant from hope of eternall life and ſalvation, but alluding to the uſe of a door: it is an Hebraiſme importing ſecurity of life and converſation, and actions: as Pſal. 121. 8.

v. 10. have it more abundantly] Which is in reſpect of the encreaſes of Gods graces through Chriſt here, and the fulneſs of happineſs in the life to come.

v. 11. I am the good ſhepheard] Iſai. 40. 11. Ezek. 34: 23. Thus ſaith, Cyril. Hieroſol. cat. 10. he is ſomtimes called a ſheep or Lambe; διὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα: in reſpect of his incarnation; and alſo a ſhepherd: διὰ τὴν φιλανθρωπίαν τῆς θεότητος; for the benignity of his deity.

v. 12. Seeth the wolf coming] By wolf he meaneth falſe prophets and ſeducers, as Matth. 7. 15. ſo Act. 20. 29. or perſecutors: ſome adde hereto, Satan; qui caulas fidelium, inſidians circuit. Gregor. hom. 14. in Evang. who laying wait, goeth round about the folds of the faithfull.

v. 13. the hireling fleeth] That is, he that adminiſtreth for his own profit ſake, leaveth the people to ſeducers, & deſtruction. See Rom. 16.18. Phil. 3.19. Ezek. 13.4.5. & 34.2. here are deſcribed three properties of falſe Prophets, or hirelings. 1. they have no proper charge; they are but intruders and uſurpers, whatever right they pretend to, or ſeem to have. 2. when the wolf, any danger or trouble cometh; they fly and deſert the cauſe; if not leaving the place, yet in connivance and ſilence; as Auguſtin ſaith hereon, fugiſti, quia tacuiſti: thou fledſt for as much as thou heldſt thy peace: they betray ſouls for fear of men; non mutando locum ſed ſubtrahendo ſolacium, fugit: quia injuſtium vidit, & tacuit: fugit, quod ſe ſub ſilentio abſcondit, Gregor. hom. 14. he flyeth, not by changing place, but by withdrawing (or withholding) comfort; becauſe he ſaw wickedneſſe and held his peace: he flyeth, in that he hideth himſelf in ſilence. 3. They leave their people to the ſeducements of falſe Prophets and impoſtors.

v. 14. The good ſhepherd] As verſe 11. he knoweth his. 2 Tim. 2. 19. John 13. 18. but here is an Hebraiſme, γινώσκει he knoweth, that is, he loveth, approveth, or holdeth dear, ſo Gregor. q. ſ. interpreteth cognoſco, hoc eſt, diligo, I know, that is I love. So the Hebr. ידע jadah, is uſed, Pſal. 1. 6. and 37. 18. See alſo Matth. 7. 23.

v. 15. I lay down my life for the ſheep] Hirelings betray the ſheep to the wolf, but Chriſt ἐις λύτρον for a ranſome, and ſo the faithfull paſtours, ἐις μαρτύριον, for a witneſſe to the truth, lay down their lives for the ſheep. See 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19. Iſaiah 53. 6. 8. 12. Acts 20. 28. John 6. 51. 1 Joh. 3. 16.

v. 16. other ſheep have I] He meaneth among the Gentiles, which then were ſtrangers to the Church of God. See Ezek. 37. 22. So Hoſ. 2. 23. I will call them my people which were not my people, and her beloved, which was not beloved. Rom. 9. 25. 26. Sic autem Moſes Ethiopiſſam accipiebat uxorem, Irane. l. 4. c. 37. So Moſes took the Ethioplan to wife, Numb. 12. 1. in a repreſentation of that which was to come, making her an Iſraelite, who was an aliant: So was the wilde Olive implanted. Rom. 11. 17. &c.

and there ſhall be one fold] One Church of Jews and Gentiles; the partition-wall being broken down Epheſ. 2. 14. & 3. 6. & 4. 4. if but one Church, quomodo poteſt gregi annumerari, qui in numero gregis non eſt? how can he be reckned to the flock, which is not in the number of the flock? Cyprian l. 1. ep. 5. See more there concerning the unity of the Church.

v. 17. becauſe I lay down my life] Iſaiah 53. 12. Becauſe I willingly perform his will, for mans redemption becoming obedient unto the death, even the death of the croſſe. Phil. 2. 8.

v. 18. power to take it up again] To raiſe my humane nature from the dead, as being very God, the reſurrection and the life. chap. 11. 25.

v. 19. there was a diviſion] As chap 9. 16. the Goſpel reproveth ſin, and detecteth hypocriſie, therefore the impious world is troubled at the preaching thereof.

v. 20. he hath a devil &c.] So ſaid they chap. 7. 20. and 8. 48. μαίνεται: Syr. inſaniendo inſanit, or omnino inſanit, an uſuall Hebraicall auxeſis: that which we ſay, he is ſtark mad, and lunatick: thus impudently blaſpheme they the wiſedom and mercy of God. See 1 Kings 9. 11. Acts 2. 13. 17. & 26. 24.

v. 21. not the words of him that hath a devil] They that had received ſome taſtes of Gods ſpirit, reliſhed a divine grace in his lips, in the words of ſobriety and truth, and therefore loved and admired him. as ch. 7. 46. Mat. 7. 28, 29. affirming ſecretly that which they were ſenſible of, by denying an improbable collection of the malicious adverſaries: as if they ſaid, wicked, poſſeſſed, or mad men do not uſe to ſpeak thus.

can a devil open the eyes &c.] δαιμόνιον, a devil, or δαιμόνιον ἔχων, he that hath a devil: by this reaſon they refell the others blaſphemous aſſertion, they intimate that the devil hath no ſuch power as to be able to create eyes to him that was born blinde; they might alſo ſay, neither any ſuch goodneſſe, as to be willing to do any good for man, except in order to ſome greater miſchief: if then this work done exceeded all power of the creature, it remaineth that it was poſſible onely to God the creatour: and then if God wrought in him, without controverſie the ſame ſpake in him; if his work could not be aſcribed to the devil, neither ought his words: if the work was of a good God, how blaſphemouſly do any ſay that the words proceeded from a malitious devil, who would gladly deſtroy and afflict all mankinde?

v. 22. the feaſt of the dedication] Or inſtauration; which feaſt was not that we read of, 2 Chron. 7. &c. this was inſtituted by Judas Maccabeus, to be held eight dayes, in remembrance of their deliverance, and reſtitution of their temple and religion, which Antiochus had corrupted. 1 Maccab. 4. 59. See Beza not. major. ad loc. and Tremelius on the ſame.

v. 23. in Solomons porch] That is, that part of the temple which was built again after the pattern of that porch which Solomon builded.

v. 24. make us in doubt] Or hold us in ſuſpence: indeed their malice and unbeleif made them fluctuant and doubtfull, his words and works evidently enough declared him to be the Meſſias, to beleevers.

tell us plainly] Not that they were willing to know and beleeve, but that they might have occaſion to calumniate and deſtroy him, by accuſing him of conſpiracie againſt Cæſar; foraſmuch as they held this princple that their expected Meſſias, Chriſt muſt be an abſolute Monarch & glorious King, ſee c. 19. 12 therefore did he prohibit his diſciples from divulging that which he had declared to them in private concerning this (ſee Mat. 16. 20.) and forbade others to ſpeak of thoſe great things which he had done for them, which otherwiſe would have teſtified as much; for his hour was not yet come. Note here how hypocrites ſhut their eyes, and require more light: they ſeem to caſt an aſperſion on Chriſt, as if he were in fault, as the cauſe of their unbelief, becauſe he had not dealt ſincerely enough with them, in a cleer revelation of himſelf to them, who deſired nothing more then to know and acknowledge the Meſſias; whereas his works which they often ſaw, ſo evidently ſpeaking him the Chriſt, they had yet decreed to excommunicate any that ſhould confeſſe him to be ſo, Ch. 9. 22. thus ſome hypocrites accuſe the goſpel of obſcurity; and others the miniſters teaching of ambiguity, or ſome other defect, when God knows the fault is apparently in themſelves.

v. 25. the works &c.] As if he had ſaid, what need more words, where works evidently teſtifying, are diſbelieved?

v. 26. becauſe ye are not of my ſheep] For faith is the gift of God, which he gives onely to his. See Epheſ. 2. 8. ſpiritual deafneſſe toward the word of God is a certain effect of unbelief. See Chap. 8. 47. and 1 John 4. 6.

v. 27. my ſheep hear my voice] Thoſe that are ordained to life eternal, hear, believe, and obey the goſpel which is the voice of Chriſt their ſhepherd.

I know them] I own and acknowledge them for mine. See 2 Tim. 2. 19. Pſal. 31. 7. and 1. 6. &c.

they follow me] They obey my precepts, and imitate my example.

v. 28. neither ſhall any] Neither men, nor devils, nor any creature (See Matth. 16. 18. Rom. 8. 38, 39.) neither by fraud nor violence, οὐχ ἁρπάσει τὶς, none ſhalbe able to pluck them out of my hand: for as Auguſtin. ſaith, To. 7. de correp. & gra. c. 7. horum ſi quiſquam perit, vitio humano vincitur Deus: ſed nemo eorum perit, quia nullâ re vincitur Deus: if any one of theſe periſh, then God is overcome by mans ſin; but God is not overcome by any thing. See alſo the Author of that book, de fide ad Petrum Diac. cap. 35.

v. 29. greater then all] More powerful then all creatures; for in his almighty power they move, and have their being.

v. 30. I and my Father are one] Two perſons, but one God. He ſpeaketh this as he is God; one in ſubſtance, being, and deity, nature, glory, and power, &c. as God he ſaith, I and my Father are one; but ſecundum formam ſervi, in reſpect of the form of a ſervant (his aſſumed humanity) he ſaith, chap. 14 my Father is greater then I, Auguſtin. ep. Paſcent. ep. 174. See alſo ib, ep. 177. See alſo Fulgent. de fide orthod. ad Donat. poſt med. Cyril. cat. 11. Hilar. de Trin. lib. 7. Etſi perſonis duo, poteſtate unum ſunt, Ambroſ. in Luc. lib. 2. cap 2. though they are two perſons, they are one in power.

v. 31. took up ſtones again] As Chap. 8. 59. this ſhews with what minde they ſpake verſe 24. they would have him tell them plainly whether he were Chriſt, with purpoſe to ſtone him as a falſe prophet, Deut. 13. 5. Levit. 20. 16. unbelief is the mother of fury: the ſpirit of Satan never diſcovers it ſelf more evidently in men, then by ſtirring them up to perſecute Chriſt, and the Preachers of the goſpel.

v. 32. for which of them, &c.] Seeing you can object no evil by me done, and yet ſtone me, it appears that you perſecute me for the good I have done you: the implacable enemie hath in all ages ſtirred up perſecution againſt the prophets for the good they did: no wonder that Chriſt bids us rejoyce herein. See Luke 6. 23. James 1. 2. nothing more evidently marketh them for dear to God, then the devils malice to them: as (Tertullian adv. Gent. cap. 5.) ſaid of their perſecution under Nero, We may alſo, we alſo glory in ſuch an avoucher of our condemnation; Qui enim ſcit illum intelligere poteſt, non niſi grande aliquod bonum a Nerone damnatum; for he that knoweth him may underſtand, that nothing but ſome great good is condemned by Nero.

v. 33. for a good work we ſtone thee not] The wicked would fain ſeem, but not be juſt: they will never acknowledge any perſecution of Chriſt or his, by themſelves acted; their practice is to load them with pretended crimes, ſuppoſing therby to juſtifie themſelves in their outrages; wheras they do by ſo much more make themſelves guilty, by how much greater injury they do the juſt, by ſlandering them, and by hurting not onely their perſons, but alſo their good names: it was more injurious cruelty to put the ſkins of beaſts on perſecuted Chriſtians; that they might thereby make their dogs worry them to death, then if they had ſlain them in their own habits: it is an undeniable curteſie in cruelty, to have ones throat cut with a clean knife, to be condemned without foul and defamatory language, or under pretended and falſe crimes.

v. 34. is it not written] Pſal. 82. 6. That is in the holy ſcriptures (So chap. 15. 25. which your ſelves hold and profeſſe. Hebr. בתורתכם in your law תורה torah, ſomtimes imports only the five books of Moſes; ſometimes, the whole ſcriptures, and the doctrine thereof, as here: ſometimes, Moſes, the Prophets and the Pſalms are diſtinguiſhed.

ye are gods] אלהים elohim in ſcripture ſignifieth either the true God, or ſomething excellent; as Angels. great and honourable men, princes &c. Exod. 21. 6. 1. Sam. 2. 25. Exod. 4. 16. 1 Sam. 28. 13. becauſe in government and judging the people (as Jehoſaphat told his judges. 2 Chron. 19. 6) they judge not for man, but God.

v. 35. unto whom the word of God came] To whom God ſpake in that ſcripture; that is to kings, his vicegerents, whom he calleth gods, becauſe they rule on earth for him.

cannot be broken] λυθῆναι, violated or made void. as Mat. 5.17. or deſtroyed. as chap. 7. 23. or denyed, as falſe and erroneous.

v. 36. ſay ye of him] Who is indeed, King of kings, and Lord of lords. Rev. 17. 14.

whom the Father hath ſanctified] If ye grant this title (according to ſcriptures) to Princes who are but men, and too often the worſt of men (the corruption of the beſt beeing in the effects thereof, ever worſt and moſt dangerous) will ye not permit it me, who am by nature divinâ origine, by an incomprehenſible generation, the holy one of God; God of God, very God, as alſo very man?

v. 37. if I do not the works of my Father] That is, ſuch works as none but God onely, can do; which indeed Chriſt did with the Father, by the ſame power and deity: thus proveth he himſelf the Son of God by nature; the ſubſtance, and eſſence of the deity none can apprehend, the works and effects thereof, all ought to conſider and underſtand, therefore Chriſt here, as it were, appealeth to his own works done among them, that they might teſtifie of him.

v. 38. and I in him] See chap. 14. 10. See Hilar. de trin. l. 7.

v. 39. ſought again to take him] See chap. 7. 32. Malice is reſtleſſe and deaf; the voice of the moſt prudent cannot charm it: the more Chriſt laboureth to enform and convert them that they might be ſaved, the higher riſeth their ambition to deſtroy him.

but he eſcaped] By the ſecret power of his deity; his hour being not yet come.

v. 40. where John at firſt baptized]* John 1. 28. Bethabara: there John firſt baptized, but afterward changed the place. chap. 3. 23. this place Chriſt now choſe, as remote, and ſafe from the Jews, ſo alſo to minde the people of thoſe things which John teſtified of him. as verſ. 41.

v. 41. John did no miracle] He neither caſt out devils, reſtored ſight to the blinde, raiſed the dead &c. yet the people beleeved him ſent of God, and in doubt were they whether he were not the Chriſt, though he did no ſuch works (Luke 3. 15.) why then (might they ſay) ſhould we not rather beleeve this to be the Chriſt, who hath done ſo many and ſo admirable works; the rather for that John teſtified of this man. (Matth. 3. 11. John 1. 26. and 3. 27. &c.) and all that ever he ſaid of him, the event ſheweth to be true.

v. 42. many beleeved] For Johns teſtimony, and their own experience of Chriſts words and works to which he remitted the unbeleeving Jews. ch. 5. 33. 36. Though the ſeed of Gods word ſeem ſometimes beſtowed in vain, yet in it ſeaſon by God appointed, it ſhall appear in the elect & beleevers: where ever Jeſus went he ſaw the fruits of his gracious labours, except onely in the obſtinate hearers, whom their own malice marked out to deſtruction. See 2 Cor. 4. 3, 4.

CHAP. XI.

Verſe 1. Out of Bethany] A village about two miles from Jeruſalem, beyond the mount of Olives, mentioned. Luke 10. 38.

town of Mary] Where they dwelt.

v. 2. it was that Mary] Matth. 26. 7. This is here ſpoken by way of anticipation; as if he ſaid, the ſame of whom ye ſhall read. chap. 12. 3. (Matth. 26. 6. Mark 14. 3.) there were divers of that name.

v. 3. Behold, he whom thou loveſt, is ſick] He of our family whom thou loveſt, is ſick: he loved others alſo, as this Evangeliſt. chap. 13. 23. &c. they ſay not, our brother, as pretending to any merit of their own; nor do they ſay Lazarus, as relating to any thing in him for which Chriſt honoured him with the name of friend; they ſeem onely to remember him of his own love, which indeed, being infinite and eternall, could have no cauſe but it ſelf: a ſhort, but an effectuall meſſage: a longer form of prayer is not prohibited, where need requireth, but the main is, to unload our wants and deſires into the boſome of Chriſt, and to deſire his help; which they ſufficiently did in this modeſt and implyed ſupplication; they preſcribe him not, but beleeve it to be enough to enform ſo divine a lover of their danger and want: their confidence was not in any length, or compute of their meſſage, but in the ſureſt ground of confidence, the love of Chriſt, who never deſerteth thoſe he loveth, and beſt knoweth how and when to relieve and deliver them.

v. 4. not unto death]Becauſe he purpoſed to reſtore and raiſe him again preſently.

v. 5. Now Jeſus loved &c.] This the Evangeliſt inſerteth, the better to expound the meſſage, verſ. 3. this family was religious, therefore Chriſt loved that therein, which himſelf had given; as God, the fountain of all good, as man, he had not onely a reaſonable ſoul, but alſo humane affections, as ſorrow, love, joy, anger, being in all, like us, ſin onely excepted: thus loving, he juſtified the degrees of love, and honoured that ſacred life of this life, holy friendſhip, which can be onely between the good and wiſe.

v. 6. he abode two dayes ſtill] That Lazarus might die, and be buried, leſt they ſhould have ſaid, ὅτι οὔπω τελευτήσαντα αὐτὸν ἀνέϛησεν. Chryſ. ho. 61. that he had raiſed him up who was not yet dead: by this delay we may learn that he doth not forget, or neglect us in our diſtreſſes, but onely ſtay for that time, which ſhall beſt ſerve to advance his glory and our ſalvation.

v. 7. after that, he ſaid to his diſciples] After two dayes, verſ. 6. leſt his diſciples might have thought that he neglected Lazarus, for fear of danger to himſelf.

into Judea again] Into the region of the tribes of Juda and Benjamin, (for, Judea is here ſtrictly taken. See Mat. 2. 1. Luk. 6.4) whereof Pilate was Governour. Luk. 3.1. for they were at this time beyond Jordan. chap. 10. 40. under the juriſdiction of Herod the Tetrach. ſee Luk. 13. 31. he had a litle before left Judea. c. 10. 39, 40. to avoid the perſecution of the enraged Jews; & now leſt his diſciples ſhould fear to return with him (who were to be principal witneſſes of the enſuing miracle) he acquainteth them with his purpoſe, & armeth them againſt their fear.

v. 8. lately ſought to ſtone thee] Chap. 8. 59. & 10. 31.

v. 9. are there not twelve hours in the day?] The Jews, both ſummer and winter, divided the day into 12. hours: for they made them long or ſhort, according to the length of the day, betwee ſun and ſun.

if any man walk in the day] Meaning, that he that walketh in his calling, and hath the light of God for his guide, needs not fear: he that hath but day-light, walketh ſecure; how much more ſhould you be confident, who have me with you: or he meaneth, the appointed hour of my ſuffering is not yet come; no man can precipitate the day, nor any worldly power cut off the hours thereof, which God hath appointed: we need not fear night before the apointed hour (See Job. 14. 5. Matth. 10. 30.) neither our ends before the determined time: Chriſt often eſcaped and fled from his perſecuters; his miniſtry being not yet accompliſhed, (who came to teach, as well as to ſuffer for us) that we might learn not to tempt God by any wilfull and needleſſe expoſing our ſelves to our enemies malice.

v. 10. he ſtumbleth &c.] He continueth in his allegory, to ſhew them that they had yet no cauſe of fear while they went with him, who was the light of the world. chap. 9. 5. for, as Euthym. ſaith, the power of Chriſt leadeth or protecteth them; perpetuall fear of falling into deſtruction have they who are not with Chriſt.

v. 11 Lazarus our friend ſleepeth] The Hebr. were wont to call death a ſleep, to intimate their aſſurance of the reſurrection.

that I may wake him] Herein he comforteth them by declaring his power, who had the iſſues of life and death in his hands: it was as eaſie to him to raiſe the dead, as to awake one from ſleep.

v. 12. if he ſleep he ſhall do well] Or ſhall amend or recover: that is a good ſigne of health; why wilt thou go into hazard, to awake him?

v. 13. Jeſus ſpake of his death] Their fear of going again to Judea, made them not to underſtand (which they eaſily might; for who would go a dayes journey or more, to awake a ſleeping friend?) that Jeſus ſpake of Lazarus death, and his raiſing him up again.

v. 14. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them plainly] Without any allegory, or metaphor.

v. 15. that I was not there] That I was not bodily preſent at Bethany with Lazarus: in his deity he was.

ye may beleeve] That your faith may be ſtrengthened, when you ſhall ſee me raiſe one that had been four dayes dead.

v. 16. called Didymus] a twinne Δίδυμος, Suidas interpreteth Δίδυμοι by συμφυεῖς ſimul nati, ſo the interpeter of the Syriac Thauma, qui dicitur, Gemellus תאומא it is of the Hebrew תאם taam geminus fuit: profane hiſtories mention many of this name.

let us alſo go &c.] Which he ſpeaketh, either encouraging his fellow diſciples to follow Chriſt: or intimating the danger they ſhould run into, if they went into Judea with him.

v. 17 Then when Jeſus came he found &c.] ἐλθὼν οὖν ὁ Ἰησοῦς, then, or therefore coming found &c. not that he found that by coming thither which he knew not before: but that ſo it was indeed as he had ſpoken concerning Lazarus death; which ſerved to confirm the diſciples in the aſſurance of his divine omniſcience, when they reckned the dayes: and of his omnipotence, when they ſaw him raiſe one to life, who had been ſo long dead.

v. 18. about fifteen furlongs off] That is almoſt two miles. See chap. 6. 19.

v.19. to comfort them concerning their brother] Syr. interpreth ut loquerentur cum corde earum, an Hebr. manner of expreſſion, for, to ſpeak comfortably: as Iſai. 40. 1. 2 Sam. 19. 7. 2 Chron. 30. 22. & 32. 6. Hoſ. 2. 14. it appeareth that Lazarus death was divulged in Jeruſalem, not without Gods divine providence, that the malicious Jews might not give out that Lazarus was not dead: and the Evangeliſt mentioneth this company to ſhew the certainty of the miracle whereof there were ſo many witneſſes, and thoſe not only of the neigbours and family, but alſo of Jeruſalem.

v.20. Mary ſate ſtill in the houſe] Martha being firſt enformed of the approach of Chriſt, goeth out to meet him in hope of ſome better comfort then any of her former viſiters could ſpeak, but Mary not yet hearing of his coming, ſate ſtill in the houſe, as a mourner with her comforters.

v. 21. Lord if thou hadſt been here] This was an effect of her infirmity, wherein ſhe came ſhort of the Centurions faith. See Luk. 7. 7.

v. 22. but now I know] Now, though my brother be dead, yet do I believe that which thou ſaidſt to our meſſenger, v. 4. this ſickneſs is not unto death, but for the glory of God, &c.

v. 23. thy brother ſhall riſe again] Be of good cheer, thy brother ſhall live again: he anſwereth nothing to her complaint for his abſence, he would give account thereof in his act of raiſing the dead, rather then in words; but to comfort her, ſpeaketh of his preſent raiſing him; ſo explaining that w^{ch} he had ſaid to his diſciples, v. 11. neither doth he ſay, I wil aſk of my Father that he may riſe; but, thy brother ſhall riſe, that ſhe might not think that he ſhould obtain as a meer man, but that he alſo is the reſurrection and the life. See v. 25.

v. 24. I know that he ſhall riſe again, &c.] In the general reſurrection, this it ſeems ſhe ſaid, becauſe Jeſus ſaid indefinitely, thy brother ſhall riſe again, not adding, now preſently; taking it, as we all do, for a general comfort, that we ſhall be raiſed again, and not periſh in death.

v 25. I am the reſurrection] That is the authour therof; theſe words contain a ſecret, or implied promiſe, (of which, v. 40.) as if he ſaid, I can and will now raiſe thy brother again.

and the life] c. 6. 35. giving life to all that live.

he that believeth in me] Faith is a ſpirituall reſurrection of the ſoul; wherein believers begin to lead a new life. See chap. 5. 2. 24. &c. Epheſ. 2. 5. Rom. 5. 17. 1 Cor. 15. 21.

though he were dead] In Body, yet ſhall he live Body and Soul to eternity, ſo incorruptible a ſeed is the word of God, by which we are born again, that it liveth and abideth for ever. 1 Peter 1. 23.

v. 26. ſhall never die] ὐ μὴ ἀποθάνῃ εἰς τ̀ αἰῶνα, he ſhall not die eternally: he ſhall not die the ſecond death (Rev. 20. 6.) which is a ſeparation of body and ſoul from God eternally. Reve. 2. 11.

v. 27. I believe] πεπίστευκα, I have believed, and now do believe: meaning, that it was with her no new, or light opinion, but that in which ſhe was, and had been conſtant: and ſo c. 6. 69. 1 John 4. 16.

which ſhould come] as Mat. 11. 3. meaning the Meſſias whom God promiſed by the prophets.

v. 28. ſhe went her way, and called, &c.] very likely, Chriſt bid her ſo do, though the Evangeliſt for brevity ſake, doth not mention it.

ſecretly] Whiſpering to her, that the Jews might not hear, as Euthymius thinketh; Jeſus would not go into the houſe before he had done that admirable work for which he came; that the Jews accompayning Mary, and following her out of the houſe (v. 31.) to the grave of Lazarus, might (though againſt their wills) be made witneſſes of the miracle.

and called for thee] Commanded me to call thee.

v. 29. ſhe aroſe quickly] Not acquainting the Jewes with the occaſion of her ſodain leaving them, who came to comfort her; probably ſhe knew the diſaffection of ſome of the Jews then preſent, towards Chriſt (See v. 46) and therefore would ſay nothing to them concerning his coming; neither did ſhe yet know what Chriſt would command, or do for them.

v. 30. was not yet come into the town] Into Bethany. See on verſe 28.

v. 31. ſhe goeth unto the grave] εἰς τὸ μνημεῖον, to the tomb or monument of her brother Lazarus, which was according to the manner, out of the town; and their cuſtome was to build them ſo, as that there was paſſage into them when the covers were taken off. See c. 20. 5. 6. 8. 11. and here verſe 38.

to weep there] To ſit by the grave, and eaſe her grief with weeping.

v. 32. Lord if thou hadſt been here, &c.] Theſe ſiſters grief was one, and their infirmity of faith a like. verſe 21. poſſibly the ſiſters, in Chriſts long delay, had ſpoken theſe things one to another: her words were brief, the reſt ſhe ſupplied with tears.

v. 33. he groned in his Spirit] Such ſympathy and compaſſion had he, to weep with thoſe that wept (See Rom. 12. 15.) that he inwardly groned, or from the heart.

was troubled] ἐτάραξεν ἑαυτὸν, he troubled himſelf, conſidering the miſery of man ſubject to death by reaſon of ſin. Chriſt had humane affections, and perturbations of minde, without any ſin: much like the agitation of ſome clear and pure water in a glaſs, ſo did they move his humane ſoul, but ſtirred up no pollution of ſin in exceſs or defect.

v. 34. where have ye layd him] He aſked not becauſe he was ignorant (for he that knew of his death being abſent, knew alſo where they had buried the dead) but for their ſakes who were preſent, attending to ſhew him the place, expecting what he would do, he aſketh (ſaith Nazianzen orat. 35. for he was man; but he raiſed him from the dead Θεὸς γὰρ ἦν, for he was alſo God.

v. 35. Jeſus wept] As man, he wept, as God he raiſed the dead; there was humane affection (as v. 33.) here divine power; there he wept as man, but far above man was he, when he commanded the dead to come out of the grave bound hand and foot. Ambroſ. ep. l. 7. 47. See Hilar. de trin. lib. 10. near the end. ille flevit, ne tu homo diu fleres, ſaith Ambroſ. de fide. l. 2. he wept (and ſuffered all things as man for thee) that thou, O man, mightſt not weep long, or to eternity.

v. 36. Behold how he loved him] They judge of his love by his tears, as of the cauſe by it effect; we moſt bewail that loſt, which we loved moſt.

v. 37. Which opened the eyes of the blinde] c. 9. 6. ſome think that they here queſtion his doing that miracle, as if they intimated, either that the man was not indeed born blinde; or that there was ſome colluſion, or they dreamed of ſome defect of his power. See Pſal. 78. 19.

v. 38. again groaning] as v. 33.

in himſelf] In his Spirit. v. 33.

a ſtone lay upon it] To defend the dead from injury; as the manner among them was. See Matth. 27. 60. this made the miracle more evident, and freed it from ſuſpition of any compact or impoſture.

v. 39. take away the ſtone] He could have commanded that away by the unſeen miniſtry of Angels; but he would have them ey-witneſſes of that which he did, leſt they ſhould have ſaid here, as of the blinde man cured. c. 9. 9. he is like him, but not the ſame.

v. 40. See the glory of God] That is, a miracle which I ſhal do by the ſoveraign power of God, whereby he ſhalbe glorified.

v. 41. father I thank thee] Jeſus being in one perſon both God and man, calleth him father, as God, and giveth thanks as man.

v. 42. I knew that thou] It is not new or unexpected, I knew thou alwayes heareſt me. So it is ſaid, Hebr. 5. 7. that he was heard, in that he feared; yet he taſted of that cup which he deprecated: Matt. 26. 39. note here that God even then heareth us, when he giveth not to our will and deſire, but to his own ever bleſſed will w^{ch} we ſhould ever ſubmit to & moſt deſire.

that they may believe] This expreſſeth that which he ſaid, becauſe of the people, they might poſſibly think that I do theſe things by magicall power, as the blaſphemous Phariſes ſaid, but I thus ſaid, that they may believe that thou ſenteſt me, and workeſt by me.

v. 43. with a loud voice] that all might hear: he whiſpered not as inchanters uſe; but cryed aloud, that this voice might be a ſymbolum of that trumpet which ſhall once awake and call all the dead out of their graves. 1 Cor. 15. 52. 1 Theſ. 4. 16. John 5. 28. 29.

Lazarus come forth]. It was now only the carcaſe of Lazarus, a liveleſs body, untill the Lord of the ſpirits of the juſt, cauſed the ſoul to return unto it again, thus quickneth he the dead, and calleth thoſe things which be not, as though they were Rom. 4. 17. come forth, of the ſepulchre; thus calleth he the dead, as if they lived; (ſo do they, who are dead to men) this ſhewed what he meant by waking Lazarus, v. 11. ariſe from the dead, and come out, that all theſe preſent may ſee thee truely and really raiſed from the dead.

v. 44. came forth] That bands giving ſo much way that he might come forth; which, it ſeemeth, Chriſt would not ſo much looſe, but that his preſent friends might ſee, that they were, as they had tyed them when they buried him.

v. 45. Believed on him] that he was the very Meſſias and Saviour of the world, ſent of God: thus were they ſtrengthened in Lazarus infirmity, and God glorified in his death and raiſing again. as v. 4.

v. 46. but ſome of them went, &c.] Euthymius conjectureth that they were ſome of them who ſaid, could not this man, &c. v. 37. ſo invincible is malice, if we could and ſhould evidently reſtore ſight to the blinde, and raiſe the dead; neither would they ſo believe: theſe not only believed not, but went to the Phariſees as it were to admoniſh them to take ſome courſe with Jeſus, that others might not believe in him, yet did they herein but caſt on oyl to quench the fire; they ſerved as witneſſes to condemn their own and the Phariſes unbelief and obſtinacy; but they more confirmed the truth of the miracle which believers teſtified, and unbelievers confeſſed. So their ſealing and guarding Chriſts ſepulchre tendred the truth of his death and reſurrection more evident, and undoubted, it is a dangerous thing to erre from the truth: there is in man a miſchievous ſelf love, putting him on to defend his errours, by erring more. Arnobius adv. Gent. l. 6. noted it well: quod ſemel ſine ratione feciſtis, &c. that which ye have once done without reaſon, ye defend, leſt ye ſhould ſeem to have once been ignorant: ye think tis better, non vinci, not to be overcome, then to yeeld to a confeſſed trueth.

v. 47. Then gathered the chief prieſts] See Matthew 26. 3.

v. 48. If we let him thus alone] thus endeavour they to reſiſt Gods will by their counſells: too common a practice among men of this world.

take away both our place and nation] that is, they will diſpoſſeſs us of our countrey, as the Chaldes have formerly done, thus they pretend a neceſſity of ſtate againſt Chriſt; whereas Tertullian ſaith wel, certè nulla neceſſitas prætendi poteſt delinquendi ab iis, quibus una incumbit neceſſitas non delinquendi, certainly no neceſſity to ſin can be pretended by thoſe, on whom lyeth one neceſſity, not to ſin.

v. 49. that ſame year] for that preſent time he was ſuffragan. See c. 18. 13. and on Luk. 3. 2.

v. 50. nor conſider] See c. 18. 14.

and that the whole nation periſh not] that is, rather then the whole nation ſhould periſh: Caiphas took it for concluded, that either Chriſt, or their nation muſt periſh, and as he fooliſhly thought, that of two evils he deſigned the leaſt to be choſen; that is, that Chriſt ſhould rather periſh, then their nation.

v. 51. But being High Prieſt that year] he ſpake not this by his own Spirit or inſtinct, but God would have this propheſie come from the High Prieſts mouth, to leave the Jews more inexcuſable in their unbelief, he being ſo publike a perſon.

v. 52. gather together in one, &c.] that he might gather the Church, the elect of Jewes, and Gentiles, diſperſed by the providence of God, diſtributed, and dwelling in every nation of the world. See chap. 10. 16. & 12. 32. Epheſ. 2. 13.

v. 53. from that day forth they took counſel] they all unanimouſly conſented to Caiphas advice, as if that had been an oracle, ſufficient to take away all ſcruple of conſcience, and to aſſure them, that they might juſtly deſtroy Jeſus; ſo wretchedly can Satan blinde the malicious, that they ſhall be confident they do wondrous well to perſecute Gods elect to death. See chap. 16. 2. they took counſell: συνεβουλεύσαντο, by a common conſent of the whole Sanhedrim.

v. 54. Walked no more] converſed no more publikly, becauſe his hour to ſuffer, was not yet come. See c. 7. 30. and 8. 20.

v. 55. To purifie themſelves] to prepare themſelves by prayer, ſacrifices, and paying of vows, or other legall ceremonies; which though (as being carnall rights) they could not ſanctifie (Hebr. 9. 9. 10.) yet the faithfull both acknowledged their ſins, and (under theſe ſhadows) that purification which was to be accompliſhed in them by the ſacred blood of Chriſt.

v. 56. then ſought they for Jeſus] for he uſed to come up before the feaſt day, to teach the people.

v. 57. knew where he were] they thought becauſe they ſaw him not yet at the feaſt, that he had hidden himſelf for fear, but he came in now more publikly, and with greater ſolemnity then at any time before, and five dayes in the temple and city, freely ſpake and converſed before their faces, neither could they hurt, or apprehend him untill the time appointed, wherein he was to be offered up a living and conſummatory ſacrifice for our redemption and ſalvation.

he ſhould ſhew it] to the high prieſts and elders, that they might according to the decree of their councill apprehend him, yet we read of none that did, or could obey this mandate of theirs, but that ſon of perdition, Judas that betrayed him.

CHAP. XII.

Verſe 1. Six dayes before the Paſſeover] πρὸ ἓξ ἡμερῶν, &c. before ſix dayes of, &c here is a trajection of the word πρὸ, before, as if it were written ἓξ ἡμέρας πρὸ τοῦ πάσχα, as we give it, ſix dayes before the Paſſeover. Tremelius ſaith it is a Syriac manner of ſpeaking.

v. 2. There they made him a ſupper] in the houſe of Simon the leper, for there Mary anointed him with precious oyl: Lazarus is here mentioned as a Trophe of Chriſts victories over death; and therefore is reckoned among the gueſts, to expreſs the certainty and reality of his raiſing from the dead; that we may know that it was no viſion, or appearance of things which were not: and that he did not preſently die again, but lived to eat, drink and converſe with men as formerly; that believers might have certain teſtimony of the divine power of Chriſt in his reſurrection, and that the enemies might alſo thereby be convicted.

v. 3. of ſpikenard] it was a cuſtome in thoſe parts, to uſe pretious odours and oyntments at ſolemn feaſts.

anointed the feet] the other Evangeliſts ſay ſhe powred it on his head. Matth. 26. 7. Mark 14. 3. whereas this Evangeliſt ſaith, ſhe anointed his feet, we muſt know that both are true: for ſhe anointed as Auguſtine ſaith, de conſenſ. Evang. l. 2. c. 79. non ſolum caput. ſed & pedes Domini: this ſeemeth to have been beyond the uſuall cuſtom, to anoint the feet, Plin. nat. hiſt. l. 13. c. 3. noteth it among the Romans, for a kinde of forraign luxury: vidimus (ſaith he) etiam veſtigia pedum tingi, and further that P. Licinius Craſſus, and L. Julius Cæſar, being Cenſors, made a decree, that none ſhould ſel unguenta exotica, forraign ointments: but theſe things were much uſed among the Eaſtern people; and here, as Mary did it in thankful acknowledgement of the mercy of Chriſt ſhewed them, as alſo of her love to him; ſo alſo he juſtifying her fact, declareth the uſe of Gods creatures, good and reſpectively lawfull, where the abuſe is condemnable.

and wiped his feet with her hair] this was a ſigne of her officious humility; but it is probable which ſome conjecture, from Luke 7. 38. that the order of things here done is inverted: for either ſhee firſt wiped his feet and afterward anointed them, as Luke 7. 38. or elſe ſhee ſhould have more anointed her own hair, then Jeſus feet.

v. 4. One of his Diſciples] the other Evangeliſts ſpeak of more; this nameth only Judas, poſſible becauſe he was the author and beginner of the murmuring; and it may be (which Auguſtin conjectureth) the reſt were ſimply led thereto, propter pauperum curam: for, and becauſe of the true care they indeed had of the poor, which Judas only pretended to, for a vail of his covetouſneſs: ſo eaſily are good intentions abuſed to ſchiſme and faction: and ſo commonly do hypocrites diſguiſe and cloke their moſt impious deſignes with fair ſhews of religious charity. Judas is here called Ἰούδας Σίμωνος Ἰσκαριώτης Judas ſon of Simon (ἀπὸ τοῦ Καριώτου, as ſome read) of Cariot, or Iſcariot.

v. 5. Sold for three hundred pence] See on Matth. 18. 28. and on Mark 14. 5.

v. 6. he was a thief] that is, as Nonnus interpreteth φύλαξ κακός, a bad keeper of the ſtock, from whence he impropriated, to lay up for himſelf, that he might make himſelf an eſtate and ſtore for his ſubſiſtance, when he had forſaken Chriſt, as it is likely he had already deſigned; becauſe he had often heard Jeſus mention his ſuffering and the diſperſion and perſecution of his diſciples at hand.

had the bag] c. 13. 29. he had charge of the purſe and ſtock of money wherewith they that adminiſtred to Chriſt furniſhed him to buy neceſſaries: ſee Luk. 8. 3. Gr. γλωσσόκομον, a purſe, or bag, linguæ ſpeciem habens, ſaith Æmilius Portus. interp. Suid. hereof Judas was treaſurer or ſteward: Jeſus knew his minde, yet committed that office to none other of the twelve: Judas was fitteſt for the bag, it is ſin & pity to impropriate the faithfull miniſters of Chriſt, or with any ſecular imployments to diſtract them from the miniſtry of the word and Sacraments. Judas was diſcontented for that this precious oyntment had not rather been brought in ready money, and put into his bag, that he might have ſhared therein. The hypocrites own private intereſt croſſed, is that which troubleth him, when he pretendeth the Cauſe of piety and religion, for which he taketh as much care, as Judas did for the poor.

v. 7. hath ſhe kept this] thus the providence of God had diſpoſed her pious intention, which was to honor Chriſt with the beſt of her ſubſtance, who eſteemed nothing too good or coſtly to beſtow on him; though poſſibly ſhe might not at preſent think of his death, and buriall nere, which he knew: therfore ſaid he, let her alone; ſhe hath not beſtowed this coſt in vain, it is in ſtead of embalming and preparation of me to my grave, who muſt very ſhortly dy; ſhe ſhall not then perform this office, permit her now: ſee Matt. 26. 12. Mark 14. 8.

v. 8. The

v. 8. the poor alwayes] See Matth.26.11. Thus he anſwereth Judas objection; and this verb plural ἔχετε ſheweth, that he had led ſome of his fellow Diſciples into their murmuring.

v. 9. not for Jeſus ſake onely] They would fain ſatisfie their own curioſity, by ſeeing whether that were true which they had heard reported of Lazarus raiſing from the dead: they would either congratulate, hear, ſee, and ask him ſome queſtions concerning the truth of his death, and poſſibly of the ſtate and condition of ſeparated ſoules in the other World. It may well be, that many before this time had come from Ieruſalem to ſee and enquire of Lazarus; but now they came to ſee Jeſus and Lazarus together, both the dead man raiſed, and the author of the miracle, the reſtorer of his life.

v. 10. that they might put Lazarus alſo to death] Such is the miſchievous reach of malice: now they had nothing to calumniate, neither the violation of the Sabbath, aſſiſtance of Beelzebub, &c. this ſtingeth them ſo, that they conſult how to ſuppreſs the very memory thereof, by deſtroying him whom Chriſt had delivered from death.

v. 11. becauſe that by reaſon of him many, &c.] Becauſe many ſaw, heard, and conferred with Lazarus, whom many knew dead four dayes, and ſaw raiſed from the dead again by the voice of Jeſus calling him out of his grave: therefore, convicted by ſo evident a miracle, they withdrew themſelves from them who conſpired to deſtroy Jeſus, and believed on him as the Meſſias.

v. 12. on the next day] Matth.21.8.

v. 13. took branches of palm trees] They took, τὰ βαΐα, boughs or branches of palm trees: this they were wont to do in token of rejoycing and victory. See 1 Mac. 13.51. They entred with praiſe ϗ βαΐων, &c. So 2 Mac. 10.7. They bare branches and fair boughs, ἐπὶ δὲ φοίνικας and palms alſo, and ſang pſalms unto him who had given them good ſucceſs. So Revel. 7.9. ϗ φοίνικες, and palms in their hands. The Iews were commanded to take ſuch branches at the feaſt of tabernacles, Levit.23.40. כפת תמרים cappoth temarim, boughs of palm trees; which the Greek, in ſome Copies give by the word βαΐα here uſed, in others κάλλυνθρα φοινίκων: the Chalde by לולבין lulabin, as growing out of the heart of the tree: It was in uſe alſo among other nations to carry the branches of this tree in their hands, in ſigne of victory. See Pauſan in Arcadic. and Cal. Rhodigin. lect. antiq. lib.5. c.6. the palm tree is green and flouriſhing, Pſal. 92.13. the leaves thereof fall not (Plin. Nat. Hiſt. l.16. c.20. and ſo like the Saints, Pſalm 1.3.) of tall and upright ſtature: hereto the Church is likened, Cant.7.7,8. With theſe branches in their hands the Iſraelites went about the Altar, & ſaid הושיעה נא, Hoſanna, Save now I beſeech thee Lord, Pſalm 118.25. This now the people (though at another time of the yeer) by Gods providence did, to ſhew that all the legal feaſts were to have their accompliſhment in Chriſt who was ſhortly to triumph over all ſpiritual enemies, and that the honour of thoſe ſolemnities did of right appertain to him.

v. 14. when he had found] Gr. εὑρὼν; The ſenſe is, having gotten, or obtained. So Luke 1.30. εὗρες χάριν, he ſent his Diſciples to fetch it for him, Mat.21.2. &c. Luke 19.30.

v. 15. fear not] Zech.9.9.

daughter of Sion] That is, Church of Iſrael, uſed to aſſemble for Gods publick worſhip in their ſolemnities, in the Temple built on Mount Sion in Ieruſalem.

behold thy king] Chriſt thy ſpiritual and eternal King: this his humility ſheweth that his kingdom was not of this world, and conſiſting in external ſecular pomp, magnificence, or outward things.

v. 16. theſe things underſtood not his diſciples] Being commanded in that manner to fetch the Aſſe, they were ſo far from doing it to the end that the Scripture might be fulfilled, that they underſtood not theſe things.

they remembred that theſe things were written] Some refer this to the Diſciples (and that moſt probably) that they acted, but for preſent, underſtood not that it was to fulfil any Scripture, but after that Chriſt was aſcended, and the holy Ghoſt given, to lead them into all truth, and to bring all things neceſſary to their remembrance: others refer it to the multitude in entertaining him ſo as was propheſied: in either we may obſerve the truth of God fulfilled; and the ſincerity of the Goſpel, free from all compact and fraud, in ſo much that the very acters, and witneſſes of others actions therein hiſtorified, for preſent knew not what theſe things meant.

v. 20. certain Greeks among them] Either Proſelytes or Heathens converted to the true religion profeſſed in Iſrael; as 1 Kings 8.41. or Jews of Greece; that is, whoſe anceſtors were Iews, though their ſelves were bred & born in Greece; for theſe alſo came up to the Feaſt. See Acts 6.1.

v. 21. Sir we would ſee Jeſus] That is, ſpeak to him, or hear him in private: no doubt but they had heard much of his admirable works; and probably they might ſometimes ſee and hear him in the multitude; but they deſired favour to be admitted to his preſence.

v. 22. Andrew and Philip told Jeſus] As not preſuming to bring any to him without his leave.

v. 23. that the ſon of man ſhould be glorified] He anſwereth not to the information of his Diſciples, or the deſires of the Greeks, but that which was of importance to his hearers; that the time of his death, reſurrection, aſcenſion, and manifeſtation to the world by the Goſpel preached, was now at hand: and ſo might poſſibly intimate that the Grecians ſhould more happily be ſatisfied very ſhortly, in hearing and believing the Goſpel declaring him their Saviour and Redeemer, then in ſeeing him now in the form of a ſervant and man of ſorrows.

v. 24. except a corn of wheat] He taketh up this Allegory to prepoſſeſſe an objection which ſome might have made when they ſhould have ſeen his death and paſſion: how ſaid Chriſt, the Son of Man ſhould be glorified, when now we ſee him dead and buried? why, conſider that which is neer, and familiar unto thee: Frumentum ſi ſervas, perdis, ſi ſeminas renovas, Greg. hom. 32. in Evang. If you keep the grains unſowed, you loſe your crop; but by caſting them into the ground you renew them. The death of Chriſt was as ſowing of corn, which ſeeming loſt, proveth our greater advantage.

v. 25. he that loveth his life] ὁ χαριζόμενος αὐτῇ παρὰ τὸ δέον, he that indulgeth thereto more then he ought, Chryſoſt. hom. 66. or, if the love of this life, eaſe, or pleaſures, let him from coming to Chriſt (ſee Matth.10.39. and 16.25. Mark 8.35. Luke 9.24. and 17.33.) or, ſhall, to ſave it, deny me.

he that hateth his life] That ſetteth not deer by his life for Chriſts ſake, as Acts 21.13. He that is ready to loſe his life, Qui retinendæ vitæ non nimis cupidus eſt, Euthymius. So that he may ſeem to hate, or not value it when the truth and honour of Chriſt requireth his expoſing it. See Matth. 10.39. Luke 14.26.

v. 26. let him follow me] That is, imitate me, in my ready obedience of God, to the death.

and where I am, there alſo, &c.] For there ſhall neither be errour in the way, nor end in death, where any man followeth me; he cannot but be happy that is with Chriſt.

him will my father honour] Making him a coheir with Chriſt, Rom.8.17.

v. 27. now is my ſoul troubled] Out of a deep ſenſe of Gods wrath againſt ſins, for which he was to ſuffer, he flyeth to prayer, yet preferreth his fathers will and glory, and our ſalvation, before his own life.

ſave me from this hour] Of death now inſtant. See Luke 22:42. Matth.26.39. Mark 14.35. ταῦτα τῆς ἀνθρωπίνης φύσεως τὰ ἀσθενήματα, Chryſoſt. hom. 66. Theſe are the infirmities of humane nature; but without ſin, becauſe in ſubjection to Gods will.

came I unto this hour] That I might in the appointed time ſuffer for the redemption of thine elect.

v. 28. glorify thy name] Let thy holy Name be praiſed and magnified through the world for mans redemption wrought in my paſſion.

then came there a voice from heaven] A voice was heard from Heaven. See Matth.3.17.

I have both glorified, &c.] I have hitherto glorified my Name by thee in the many divine works done by thee, and I will in thy death, reſurrection, and aſcenſion glorifie the ſame, as alſo by the miſſion of the holy Ghoſt, preaching of the Goſpel, converſion and ſalvation of the elect, both of Jews and Gentiles, to the uttermoſt part of the Earth, the end of time, and all eternity.

v. 29. ſaid it thundred] Many of them ſo ſaid. This ſheweth that it was no obſcure whiſpering, but loud as thunder; though the unbelievers underſtood it not.

others ſaid, an angel ſpake to him] They who heard the words, ſaid an Angel ſpake to him, ſo conjectured they though they heard them delivered in the perſon of the Father to whom he prayed.

v. 30. came not becauſe of me] Not onely for me, to comfort me, but alſo to inſtruct you.

v. 31. now is the judgement of this world] The reformation and reſtoring of thoſe things, which were out of order.

the prince of this world] Satan (So c.14.30.) ſhall be overcome by my death, Hebr.2.14.

v. 32. if I be lifted up] That is, crucified and taken away (c.3.14.) from the earth; as the Syriac giveth ܐܬܪܝܡܬ by אתרימת etherimeth, which is from the Hebrew word רום rom, which ſignifieth both lifted up, as Gen. 7.17. Gen.31.45. and taken away, Dan.8.11.

draw all men unto me] All the elect, of all ſorts, not onely Jews, but alſo Gentiles; Ex omni gente & conditione, — ſome of every nation and condition: — he ſaith all, Quia nemo ſalvus fit, ſit, niſi quem ipſe traxerit, No man is ſaved, but he whom Chriſt draweth. Fulgen. de incarn. & gra. D. Jeſu c. 31. I will draw all the elect, as captives, ὑπὸ τυράννου κατεχομένους Chryſoſt. hom.66. held by ſome Tyrant.

v. 33. What death] What manner of death; to wit, the death of the Croſſe.

v. 34. We have heard] Pſal. 110.4.

out of the law] The Scriptures. Pſal. 89. 36, 37. Ezek. 37. 25. See on c. 10.34.

that Chriſt abideth for ever] That he ſhall continue amongſt the living: this they collected out of miſunderſtood Scriptures. See Pſal. 72.17. Pſal. 89.30. they marked not thoſe places which concerned the ſtate of his humiliation and death, as Dan. 9. 26. Iſai. 53. Pſal. 22.17,18. had they well compared the one with the other, it would have better appeared to them, that Chriſt was by death to enter into his glory.

v. 35. yet a little while the light] He confirmeth that which he ſaid concerning his death; and ſecretly taxeth their wilful blindneſs, who would neither in his doctrine nor miracles underſtand him to be Chriſt, therefore reſolveth them not concerning that they asked; but intimateth that both Chriſt and the Goſpel, which now, as a clear light ſhined among them, ſhould ſhortly be taken from them, and they delivered up to their own obſtinacy, and ignorance of the means of ſalvation. See Mat. 21.43. Acts 13.46. Rom. 11.

v. 36. departed and hid, &c.] After his teaching in the day, now when it grew toward night (Mark 11.11.) he went out of Ieruſalem to lodge at Bethany, Mat. 21.17. Secretly with his Diſciples, that his enemies who laid wait for his life, might not know where to finde him: for though we reade not here that they took up ſtones, yet he that knew their hearts, ſaw them now growing hot, and ready to kill, therefore would he not ſtay there until it brake out into action. Chryſoſt.

v. 37. yet they believed not] That is, many of them believed not, ſome did.

v. 38. Lord who hath believed, &c.] Iſai. 53.1. Rom. 10.16.

the arm of the Lord been revealed] That is, the Goſpel, which is the power of God to ſalvation to every one that believeth, Rom. 1. 16. by זרוע zeroah, an arm, the Hebrews uſually expreſſed power, vertue, aid, relief, &c. See Luke 1.51.

v. 39. therefore they could not believe] This is ſpoken to ſhew us, that contempt of Gods Word, and wilful ſhutting the eyes againſt the light of the Goſpel, taketh away all ability of believing to ſalvation. See Mat. 13.14,15. they could not; that is, ſay Chryſoſtome and Theophylact, they would not. They will not indeed believe, nor is it in a wicked mans power velle credere, to be willing to believe: for as faith is the gift of God (Epheſ. 2.8.) So is a true and hearty deſire thereof which God beſtoweth on them onely whom he will therein ſatisfie and make bleſſed, Mat. 5.6. and juſtly giveth not unto thoſe who under-value his mercies and deſpiſe his ordinance.

v. 40. he hath blinded their eyes] See on Matth. 13.14,15. Rom. 1.21,28. 2 Theſ. 2.10,11,12.

v. 41. when he ſaw his glory] Iſa. 6.1,2.

and ſpake of him] Of Chriſt. The Evangeliſt collecteth that the propheſie and doctrine of Iſaias concerned ages then to come: for he ſaw the glory of Chriſt under the Goſpel, and accommodateth it to thoſe times of which he ſpake: the viſion indeed was in the yeer wherein King Vzziah died, Iſai. 6.1. yet was it of things appertaining to the time and kingdom of Chriſt under the Goſpel.

v. 42. put out of the Synagogue] That is, excommunicated, ſo c. 9.22.

v. 43. they loved the praiſe of men] c. 5.44. To be honoured of men, and to juſtifie themſelves before them. See Luke 16. 15. the Evangeliſt here noteth the cauſe why few of the great men ſincerely profeſſed the Goſpel, not becauſe their conſciences were not ſufficiently convicted; but becauſe they loved their own eaſe, honour, and riches, more then Gods honour, or their own ſalvation. So dangerous a thing it is for fear of men to diſſemble faith. See Hebr. 11.27. Matth. 10.33.

v. 44. he that believeth on me, &c.] This is not ſimply to be underſtood, but with reference to the Jews ſence, who took him to be meer man: to them he ſaith, the way to faith in God is to believe in me, and that he ſpake not of himſelf, as v. 49.50. but that which God the Father gave him commiſſion & command to ſpeak. See Luke 10.16. And that it is the greateſt injury to God to disbelieve the Goſpel, as if his truth were not ſufficient for us: and laſtly, that they who hear the Goſpel, muſt be confident, that therein they hear not men, but God, whoſe Word and truth it is.

v. 45. he that ſeeth me] For he is the lively image and pattern of his perſon, Heb. 1.3. & one God with the Father, c. 14.9.

v. 46. I come a light] c. 3.19.

v. 47. if any man] c. 3.17.

Judge him not] I condemn him not now, but he ſhall be judged at the laſt day: I came now to call ſinners to repentance, to preach the Goſpel of peace.

v. 48. the word that I have ſpoken] The doctrine of Chriſt, the Goſpel, which the wicked now ſo ſecurely contemn, ſhall once riſe in judgement againſt them, and condemn them (ſee Mark 16.16. John 3.18.) by ſo much more heavily, by how much greater means of ſalvation they have neglected.

v. 49. what I ſhould ſay] God therefore anointed him, Iſai. 61.1. So that whatever he taught concerning faith, juſtification by it, rewards, puniſhments, the reſurrection, baptiſm, &c. was the eternal counſel of God revealed by Chriſt, of all which he changed nothing in the delivery thereof.

v. 50. I know that his commandement is life] That is, that the doctrine of the Goſpel which I have, at the command of my Father, preached unto you, is the Word of life (as Peter confeſſed, c. 6.68.) that which truly ſheweth you the onely way and means to eternal life, if you believe and obey it. And ſo he aggravateth their unbelief, who were ſo blinde and malicious in their own wrong.

CHAP. XIII.

Verſ. 1. N*Ow before the feaſt of Paſſeover*] See Matth. 26.1. Mark 14.1. Luke 22.1. See Iſ. Caſaubon, Exercit. ad Annal. 16. Num. 8.

he loved them unto the end] Not onely his Diſciples, but all his elect which are here called his own; thoſe which his Father gave him. See John 17.20. He loved them even to the death, which he ſuffered for them; and ſo inceſſantly; and when he ſaw the danger coming towards him, he took the more care for them.

2. ſupper being ended] Or when they were at ſupper; wherein they eat the Paſſeover, a little before the inſtitution of the Lords Supper.

v. 3. given all things into his hands] See c. 3.35. This is ſaid, to ſet off his admirable humility, to which for our ſakes he deſcended, who knew and remembred the power which God had given him.

v. 4. riſeth from ſupper, &c.] Leaving his Diſciples ſitting; layeth aſide his garments (which they uſed to wear, long, and looſe) τὰ ἱμάτια, Hebr. שִׂמְלָה ſhimlah, Gen. 9.23. which the 70. give thereby τὸ ἱμάτιον.

v. 5. began to waſh his diſciples feet] Partly to ſhew his admirable love to them, to give them an example of humility, and love one to another; and partly to intimate, that he onely cleanſeth us from our ſins: as 1 John 1.7.

v. 6. Lord doeſt thou waſh my feet?] This he ſeemeth to ſay as fearing it had been too much diſhonour for Chriſt the Son of the immortall God, to waſh a ſinners feet (See Luke 5.8.) not then fully underſtanding (as after he did. 1 Peter 1.19.) that he came to redeem us, with his own precious blood: in effect he ſaith; O my Lord, ſhouldſt thou waſh my feet with thoſe ſacred hands, with which thou openedſt the eyes of the blinde, with which thou didſt exerciſe divine power in healing the ſick, raiſing the dead, &c. I am unworthy to perform this office to thee; and wouldſt thou do it for me?

v. 7. what I do thou knoweſt not now] hereby Chriſt ſignified, that he now did ſomthing, more then ſimply waſh their feet; there was in this his action, a teaching myſtery, which at preſent they knew not, until they were further inſtructed, they yet perceived not, that it was not ſo much materiall for them to have clean feet, as to be cleanſed by the blood of Chriſt, and to have true humility and love to another.

v. 8. If I waſh thee not] And make thee clean from thy ſins, freely pardoning them, and ſanctifying thee.

thou haſt no part with me] So the Hebrews expreſs an alienation, or diſclaim of that wch we call right, title or intereſt. So Deut. 14.27. it is ſaid of the Levite אין לו חלק ונחלה עמך en lo chelek vena chala himmach—70. οὐκ ἔστιν αὐτῷ μερὶς οὐδὲ κλῆρος μετὰ σοῦ, he hath no part nor inheritance with thee. So Deut. 18.1. See 1 Kings 12.16. 2 Sam. 20.1. Optatus. l. 5. ſaith hereon, negat illi Chriſtus regnum, niſi accepiſſet obſequium. Chriſt denyeth him the kingdom, except he had accepted the obſequie.

v. 9. Lord, not only my feet] Either terrified with the threatning, or now better underſtanding the myſtery, he wholly ſubjecteth to Chriſts will: as if he ſaid, if it be of that conſequence; if thou didſt mean, waſhing from my ſins, waſh me throughly: as Pſal. 51.2.

v. 10. needeth not] That is, to be purged, ſave onely to the ſenſe of the ſinners own conſcience, by daily renewing of repentance for the remainder of thoſe corruptions which defile him. Optatus forecited lib. 5. underſtandeth this waſhing, of baptiſm, which may not be iterated: Abſit (ſaith he) ut jam lotum revocemus ad fontem---abſit ut iteremus quod ſemel eſt; aut dublicemus quod unum eſt. God forbid that we ſhould recal him who is already waſhed to the Font;—— that we ſhould iterate that which is (but) once:

once ; or ſhould make double that which is but one ; the Apoſtle ſaying, there is one Lord, one Faith, one Baptiſme, Epheſ. 4. 5. if (ſaith he) ye give another baptiſm, date alteram fidem, give another faith : if ye give another faith, give alſo another Chriſt, another God.

ye are clean] Your ſins are remitted and done away ; not that there ſhall no ſin remain in you henceforth, but becauſe none ſhall be imputed (ſo Chap. 15. 3.) ye are regenerate, and in part ſanctified.

but not all] Not all of you, not abſolutely any of you ; Judas muſt be excepted in their company ; and the remainder of the old Adam in the beſt of their perſons : a Canaanite left to exerciſe, not to overcome, nor condemn them that are in Chriſt. Rom. 8. 1.

v. 11. who ſhould betray him] τὸν παραδιδόντα, who it was that now agitated that treaſon : therefore he ſaid to him verſe 27. that which thou doeſt, do quickly.

v. 12. after he had waſhed their feet] The Evangeliſt leaveth it to be underſtood, that after the conteſt with Peter, he waſhed both Peters feet, and the reſt of the Apoſtles without further contradiction.

taken his garments] After he had put on his upper garment, which he had layed by, verſe 4.

ſat down again] ἀναπεσὼν πάλιν, falling, or lying down again according to their manner of eating ; to invite his diſciples to a new ſupper, ſpiritual and myſtical, the truth, which the former ſupper repreſented, as a forerunning ſhadow of that which more neerly repreſenteth his feeding the Church with his body and blood ; not onely as the fathers (who fed on him to come, 1 Cor. 10. 3, 4.) but as his body the Church, unto the worlds end, which in the Sacrament of the ſupper here inſtituted, feed on his body and blood (by faith in the repreſenting myſtery) once offered on the altar of the croſſe, and therein fully ſatisfying the juſtice of God, and accompliſhing the redemption of all the elect.

Know ye what] That is, as he ſaid to Peter, verſe 7. ye do not yet know, but now will I teach you.

v. 13. Maſter and Lord] διδάσκαλος καὶ ὁ κύριος, Maſter, or teacher and Lord : the Syriack words here uſed, רבן rabban, and מרן maran, (as in Maranatha, the Lord cometh, 1 Cor. 16. 22.) ſoundeth ſomething more ſacred and divine, then ordinarily διδάσκαλος and κύριος. So that he now taketh up an argument from their own mouths, to ſhew what they ought to do in imitation of him, except they will contradict themſelves, and in actions diſſent from their own words of common uſe.

v. 14. Ye alſo ought to waſh] That is, If there be need, and mutual edification require it (as 1 Cor. 9. 19.) you ought to be ready, and willing to ſerve one another in love, Gal. 5. 13. and to this he urgeth his own example ; as alſo Matth. 11. 29. ſo that here, καὶ ὑμεῖς, and you, is put for πολλῷ μᾶλλον καὶ ὑμεῖς, much more ought ye, ſeeing you are not (as you confeſſe me) lords over one another, but fellow-ſervants, equally bound in mutual duty : for as Optatus ſaith, lib. 5. eſt univerſis ſervientibus non dominium, ſed miniſterium : all ſervants have belonging to them miniſtration, not dominion.

v. 15. given you example] See on verſe 13. example is the powerful Rhetorick : prius diſce qui doces, Lactant. lib. 4. c. 23. firſt learn thou who teacheſt : men had rather have examples then words : it is eaſy to ſpeak, but hard to perform : would we had as many good doers, as ſpeakers : the perfect teacher ought both dicere præcipiendo, and confirmare faciendo, ib. c. 24. ſpeak in giving precepts, and confirme the ſame in his own practiſe.

v. 16. ſervant is not greater &c.] Chap. 15. 20. Matth. 10. 24. Luke 6. 40.

v. 17. if ye do them] If ye be indeed ready to ſerve one another in love (which is the ſumme of the law, Rom. 13. 9.) and humility, which is the ground of religion.

v. 18. I know whom I have choſen] 2 Tim. 2. 19. I know whom I have choſen to eternal life.

he that eateth bread with me] Pſal. 41. 9. 10.

lift up his heel againſt me] Hath endeavoured to tread me underfoot. See Pſalm 41. 10. ſo that by lifting up the heel is meant, to hurt by treachery : it is a metaphor derived from beaſts, which ſuddenly turn heels againſt their maſters, when they have full fed them. See Deut. 32. 15.

v. 19. now] ἀπ' ἄρτι, from henceforth.

I tell you before] How one of you ſhall betray me, leſt when you ſee it come to paſſe, you ſhould ſtartle, and your faith in me ſhould be too much ſhaken.

that I am he] That is, the Chriſt whom the Scriptures fore-promiſed, and the ceremonies of the law prefigured.

v. 20. Verily, verily, I ſay, &c.] Matth. 10. 40. Luke 10. 16.

v. 21. When Jeſus had thus ſaid] Matth. 26. 21. John 11. 33. and 12. 27. he was troubled by the concourſe of ſeveral paſſions, fear, ſorrow, indignation at Judas odious treaſon.

v. 22. looked one on another] Being troubled and very anxious becauſe of Jeſus ſpeech. See Matth. 26. 21, 22. Mark 14. 19. not yet knowing which of them he meant.

v. 23. leaning on Jeſus boſom] Which by reaſon of their poſture at meals he had convenience to do. See Luke 7. 38.

whom Jeſus loved] That is more tenderly then the reſt, though he loved all his, verſe 1.

v. 24. beckened to him] Νεύει, nodded the head ; giving thereby a ſilent ſigne, that he would deſire him to aſk Jeſus whom he meant, he having convenience by reaſon of his neerneſſe to aſk privately.

v. 25. then lying on Jeſus breaſt] That is, leaning neerer to Jeſus breaſt, that he might tell him in his ear, which of them was the traitor ; ſo probably he whiſpered unto Jeſus, and Jeſus anſwered him that the others might not hear.

v. 26. I ſhall give a ſop] Or morſel of bread. Cyril notes that he gave no other ſigne whereby to deſcribe the traitor, then that which the Prophet gave, Pſal. 41. 9, 10. and Chryſoſtoms conjecture was not improbable, (that Chriſt gave this ſigne to remember him of the table and bread, whereof he did partake, that he might not betray him and rage againſt his feeder) if Chriſt had ſpoken openly, that all might hear : which if he had done, the diſciples could not have ſo doubted as we ſee, verſe 28.

v. 27. Satan entred into him] And took poſſeſſion of him : not that the morſel hurt him ; but becauſe by that ſignal conſcious Judas perceived, or feared that his treaſon was diſcovered ; therefore being embittered and vexed, he reſolved to proſecute it with ſpeed and effect.

do quickly] He permitteth onely, he encourageth not the traitour, he knew his hour was come, and deſired to accompliſh the work of mans redemption, for which he ſhewed himſelf ready : and hereby he caſt him out of his family whom Satan poſſeſſed.

v. 28. no man at the table] Except John into whoſe ear Chriſt had revealed it, verſe 26.

v. 29. Judas had the bag] See on Chap. 12. 6.

give ſomething to the poor] Thus they conjectured ; becauſe though his ſtock was but ſlender, yet they knew he uſed to ſpare ſomthing to the poor, that he might therein leave us an example.

v. 30. and it was night] It might have ſeemed unſeaſonable for the traitor then to repair to the high prieſts, not to diſcover, but to deſigne a treaſon : but no importunity hindreth ardent malice : and thus alſo we ſee that word is true, evil doers ſhun the light, chap. 3. 20, ſo when they had taken Chriſt he told them, this is your hour, and the power of darkneſſe. Luke 22. 53. night beſt ſuits with ſhameful acts, which the prince of darkneſſe loves.

v. 31. Now is the Son of man glorified] That is, he ſhall ſhortly be glorified in the admirable work of mans redemption : for in death to overcome death is, as Chryſoſtom ſaith well, hom. 71. δόξα μεγάλη, great glory : this, Chriſt onely could do.

v. 32. if God be glorified in him] That is, in his obedience to the death, and mans redemption in his death, then however ſcandalous and ignominious his ſufferings may ſeem to the world ; yet ſo ſhall he enter into his true and unſpeakable glory. See Chap. 21. 19. Phil. 2. 8, 9. Luke 24. 26. teaching us that it is glorious to ſuffer for the honour of God.

v. 33. little children] Becauſe his departing from them by the croſſe muſt needs afflict their hearts, therefore he prepareth them to patience, by the intimation of his fatherly love and care of them, as of tender children.

as I ſaid unto the Jews] Chap. 7. 34.

ye cannot come] Ye cannot now preſently come after me to heaven, as you were wont on earth to follow me when ye miſſed me.

v. 34. A new commandment I give, &c.] Levit. 19. 18. it appeareth it was an old precept, and the ſumme of the Law, Matth. 22. 39. 46. 1 John 3. 11. but continually to be renewed, Chap. 15. 17. 1 John 4. 21. Epheſ. 5. 2. he made the pattern new, whereof he ſaith (as I have loved you) I did not pay any debt of your merit (ſaith Chryſoſtom) I began to love you freely, ſo love you thoſe who have not deſerved your love : love is the moſt certain and undoubted mark of Chriſts ſervant (verſe 35.) for it is πάσης ἀρετῆς ὑπόθεσις, the foundation of all vertue. See 1 Cor. 12. 1. &c.

v. 35. By this ſhall all men know] By this, or in this, ἐν τούτῳ, it is an Hebrew manner of expreſſion, Gen. 42. 15. בזאת bezoth, in this. 70. ἐν τούτῳ φανεῖσθε. Moſes diſciples are known by their circumciſion, &c. others have their marks and habits : but this is the mark by which I will own you, and by which alſo you ſhall know your ſelves, and the world alſo may know you to be mine. It is a vain brag of Chriſtianity without love and charity : Satan will permit men any diſguiſes, ſemblances, or external works of religion, upon condition that he may but ſet his own image (that is, malice) on them: becauſe he well knows, that all ſeeming excellencies in the world, without true charity, are nothing. See 1 Cor. 13.1, &c. Charity is the life of religion, by which faith it ſelf worketh, Gal. 5. 6.

v. 36. Thou canſt not follow me now] Yet thou art not ripe for thy diſſolution: thou ſhalt follow me into glory; but yet thy courſe is not finiſhed: the Saints may deſire to be diſſolved, and to be with Chriſt, Phil. 1. 23. but their dayes are numbred, which they muſt firſt accompliſh.

v. 37. I will lay down my life for thy ſake] Matth. 26. 33. Luke 22. 33. He meant it now, and at laſt did it: but this example teacheth us, not to preſume on our own ſtrength; ſeeing that God onely giveth conſtancy in good, and many times permitteth us to ſtrong tentations, to ſhew us our own weakneſſe, and to correct our over-daring confidence in our ſelves

v. 38. The cock ſhall not crow, &c.] See Matth. 26. 34. and Luke 22. 34.

CHAP. XIIII.

Verſe 1. BE troubled] So verſe 27. Chap. 16. 1. which he ſpeaketh not commanding or approving any ſtoical apathie, as if he would have men put off natural affections, and to be troubled at nothing; but forbidding dejection of minde, and diffidence in afflictions, proceeding of unbelief.

believe in me alſo] In me whom God hath appointed to be your peace and reconciliation: they were now to encounter ſtrong tentations, therefore he armeth them with conſolations, leſt the novelty and ſuddenneſſe of unexpected tryals ſhould overcome them.

v. 2. many manſions] This whole ſpeech being Metaphorical, the meaning is, there is place in the kingdom of heaven for all the elect, (which are many) according to their ſeveral degrees of glory aſſigned them. See on Luke 16. 9.

v. 3. I will come again] At the latter day, Acts 1. 11. Acts 3. 21. Acts 17. 31.

v. 4. Whither I go ye know] By theſe often repetitions of his going hence, he intimateth, that his death ſhould be onely a receſs, and withdrawing out of this world for a time, into the preſence of God in heaven, that we may reſolve how we muſt follow him our head, and whither: this way he ſaith they know, becauſe he had declared to them, that by death he muſt enter into his glory.

v. 5. We know not whither thou goeſt] That is, but imperfectly know; for they did not yet well underſtand, nor remember what he had taught them.

v. 6. I am the way] ἡ ὁδὸς, that way, by which onely man can enter into eternal bleſſedneſſe, Acts 4. 12. Cyril. cat. 10. readeth ἡ θύρα, the door, as John 10. 7. to the ſame ſence: as Cyril. Alexandr. here ſaith, ἅπαντα τοίνυν ἡμῖν ἐν αὐτῷ, we have all in him, he only is that way which leadeth to heaven; the truth prefigured by all the legall ceremonies, as chap 1. 17. the life; the authour and giver of eternall life, as chap. 11. 25.

v. 7. from henceforth] See c. 13. 19.

have ſeen him] By ſeeing the father, he here meaneth, knowing him in Chriſt: no man hath ſeen, or can ſee his eſſence: but he that believeth hath ſeen his mercy.

v. 8. Shew us the Father] Shew us him, as he was reveiled to the Prophets, τοῖς σωματικοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς (as Theophylact expreſſeth it) to our bodily eyes.

v. 9. Have I been ſo long with you, &c.] He taxeth their ignorance, who conceived that the knowledge of God was, or could be by ſence: know you not me? who I am by nature? and whence I am? that I am one in eſſence, and eternal ſubſtance with the Father. See Chap. 10. 38. See alſo Chap. 12. 45.

v. 10. I am in the Father, and the Father in me] For the fulneſſe of the Deity remaineth in Chriſt, Coloſ. 1. 19. and 2. 9. See Fulgent. ad Monim lib. 3 (paulo ante finem) and Auguſtin. Paulinæ ep. 112. cap. 4. fine. The Son is in the Father (ſaith Athanaſius To. 1. Contr. Ar. orat. 3. ὡς τὸ ἀπαύγασμα ἐν τῷ φωτί, as the ſplendor in the light: truly in an incomprehenſible manner: for Chriſts divine generation, as Fulgentius well ſaith, object. Ar. diſcuſ. inenarrabilis eſt, ignorabilis non eſt; Such as none can declare, nor may be ignorant of.

not of my ſelf] Not of my ſelf as man:

he doeth the works] The miracles which ye have ſeen me do, are all wrought by divine power, not humane.

v. 11. for the works ſake] If the infallibility of my words prevail not with you, let the excellency of my works and miracles which you have ſeen me do (works exceeding all power of the creature) perſwade you to believe that I am in the Father, and the Father in me.

v. 12. Shall he do alſo] He exhorteth them not to be offended at his paſſion, for as much as this power of doing miracles ſhall be derived to themſelves alſo, whereby it ſhall appear that he which ſuffered in the infirmity of his aſſumed humanity, is alſo truly God, who alone could give ſuch power to men.

and greater works then theſe] He ſeemeth to mean hereby the converſion of men to the faith by their preaching the goſpel, as Acts 2. 41. &c.

becauſe I go unto my Father] Becauſe going up unto the right hand of my Father, I will ſend the holy Ghoſt upon you, by whoſe power you ſhall preach, and do miracles to the converſion of men to God, and their ſalvation.

v. 13. whatſoever ye ſhall ask in my name] See Matth. 7. 7. 1 John 5. 14. and Chap. 16. 23. if it be according to the will of God, I will do it for you; for the Father hath committed all power unto me.

v. 14. in my name] Through my mediation; for my merit ſake.

I will do it] I will hear and grant your requeſts which are to Gods glory: I who am coequal with the Father will do it for you.

v. 15. If ye love me, keep my commandments] As if he ſaid, ſorrow, and ſad dejected countenances at the knowledge of my departure hence, are not the arguments of love which I require of you, but faith and obedience: love indeed cannot be fruitleſſe; but probatio dilectionis exhibitio eſt operis, Greg. hom. 30. the proof of love is in the exhibition of the work: obedience to Chriſt ſheweth how men love him. See verſe 21.

v. 16. another comforter] Becauſe they could not be without much trouble in an impious world; he promiſeth to ſend the holy Ghoſt to comfort them, and remain with them, to ſupply his bodily abſence, wherein he comforted them during his abode with them in the world.

v. 17. Spirit of truth] Who is truth becauſe very God, inſpiring his with knowledge of the truth, and giving them ſweet and comfortable taſtes of the graces of ſanctification; thus dwelleth he in them.

v. 18. I will not leave you comfortleſſe] Or Orphans, as forſaken Orphans, who have none to take care of them; but will come again to you after my reſurrection, ſhewing my ſelf to confirm your faith; but ſpecially by inſpiring you with the admirable gifts of the holy Spirit.

v. 19. yet a little while, &c.] A few hours; for his death drew neer: and after that, he would not be ſeen of any, but his elect witneſſes, to whom he ſhewed himſelf alive from the dead according to the Scriptures, and whereas they might poſſibly fear, that they muſt now die with him, he ſaith, ye ſhall live alſo, to be my witneſſes; and ye ſhall believe, and live in me eternally.

v. 20. and you in me] As ye are lively members of my Church, my body of which I am the head, Col. 1. 18. 24. Rom. 12. 5. to whom I communicate grace and life, Epheſ. 1. 22. Epheſ. 4. 16.

v. 21. is he that loveth me] See on verſe 15.

I will love him] Not that he did not firſt love that man, to whom he gives an heart to love him and keep his commandments; but ad hoc diligam, ut manifeſtem; I will ſo love, as that I will manifeſt the ſame in happy effects, Proſper. now he loveth us, to give us faith and obedience: but in the life to come he will love us in rewarding us: prorſus donum eſt Dei, diligere Deum: ipſe ut diligeretur dedit, qui non dilectus, dilexit; it is altogether the gift of God that we love God; he gave us hearts to love him, who when we loved him not, loved us.

and will manifeſt my ſelf unto him] Chap. 7. 17. underſtand this of a ſpiritual exhibition of himſelf, not a bodily preſence, ad hoc diligam, ut manifeſtem, Auguſtine tract. 75. I will ſo love him as to manifeſt my ſelf to him. He now loveth us to give us faith to believe, then he will love us ſo as that we may ſee him, and in ſeeing receive the reward of faith: now we love in believing that which we ſee not, but then we ſhall love in ſeeing that which we now believe.

v. 22. not Iſcariot] Not the traitor Judas, but the ſame who was called Lebbeus or Thaddeus, Matth. 10. 3. See hereof Jo. Druſius ad Voc. N. T. Com. 1. Thaddæus & ibid. Lebbæus.

v. 23. He will keep my words] He will obey me: to him will he come, as to his ſanctified temple.

v. 24. is not mine] Not mine as man: it is his that ſent me, that is, Gods word. See Chap. 6. 38. and Chap. 7. 16.

v. 25. being yet preſent with you] I have ſpoken theſe things to your outward ears, and though you perceive not the fruit thereof as yet, you muſt expect a better increaſe when the Holy Ghoſt the Comforter ſhall ſpeak them to your hearts and underſtandings, after my aſcenſion into Heaven.

v. 26. the comforter] c. 15.26. παράκλητος, or the Advocate. So Chriſt is called παράκλητος, 1 John 2.1. See Rom. 8.26. they were called Advocates, παρακλήτους, who were called or retained to ſpeak or plead for them who had enditements againſt them, or otherwiſe were impleaded in any Court of judicature. One entreated to favour another in judgement: an interceſſour. Philo de vit. Moſ. l. 3. See Vlpian. l.3. D. de prævar. Ioh. Druſ. præter. l.4. John 14.16.

he ſhall teach you all things] He is that good ſanctifier of his Church, ϗ Βοηθὸς, ϗ διδάσκαλος--the helper and teacher of his, Cyril. c.16. if he teach not within, Doctoris lingua exterius in vacuum laborat, the teachers tongue laboureth externally in vain. We all hear one voice of a Preacher, but what different apprehenſions, affections, and reſolutions of and concerning the ſame have we; the Word is one and the ſame; but in ſome it proveth a ſavour of death, in others a ſavour of life unto life: the difference is, as this, Magiſter interior, inward Maſter teacheth ſome, and leaveth others to their own obſtinacy, and blindneſs, to pervert all they hear to their own deſtruction, 2 Pet.3.16.

whatſoever I have ſaid unto you] For there is but one truth, which Chriſt taught, and the holy Ghoſt remembred them of, and opened unto them. οὐ γὰρ ἄλλα χριστοῦ διδάγματα, ϗ ἄλλα ἁγίου πνεύματος, the doctrines of Chriſt and the holy Ghoſt, are not divers, but one and the ſame truth of God. Cyril. qu. ſ.

v. 27. my peace I give unto you] He yet continueth in the ſame argument of conſolation; according to the cuſtome of friends departing, taking a ſolemn leave, giving charge, and wiſhing all proſperity and happy ſucceſſe; all which the Hebrews comprehended in שלום ſhalom, Geneſis 43.26. 2 Chron. 15.5. Exod. 4.18. &c. but Chriſt here intimateth a peace which the World can neither give nor take away, peace with God, peace of conſcience, and true comfort and happineſs in Chriſt.

v. 28. if ye loved me you would rejoyce] They loved him, but their love was not yet well enformed concerning the iſſue of thoſe things: becauſe there was a dangerous mixture of ſelf-love with their love to Chriſt, ſo were they moſt ſorry for their own ſecular loſſe, in Chriſts departure from them, who ſtill dreamed of a temporal kingdom of Chriſt.

greater then I] Underſtand this, not of the Deity (for ſo he is equal with God the Father) but as, to the office of a Mediatour, he took on him the form of a ſervant, Phil. 2.7. Minor natus, non minoratus, leſſe born, not leſſened in his birth, the Deity continuing one and the ſame. Homo ſcilicet factus & permanens Deus, becoming man, but continuing God. See Fulgentius de f. orthodox. Alex. Alexandr. init. Concil. Nican. Bin. concil. tom. 1. Hilar. de trin. l. 9. Greg. Nazianzen. orat. 4. Baſil. contr. Eunom. l. 1. Auguſtin. l. 2. de tradit. Auguſt. ep. 66. Maximo, he ſaith this in reſpect of that nature, quam nec exinanitus amiſit---which he loſt not in his ſtate of humiliation: Homo enim aſſumptus eſt a Deo, non in homine conſumptus eſt Deus: ib. Aug. God aſſumed the Manhood, but the Manhood leſſened not the Godhead.

v. 29. that ye might believe] That is, increaſe in faith, and be aſſured, that I am indeed the Son of the living God, and Saviour of the elect (as Auguſtine expreſſeth it) Qui potuit hoc facere cum prædixiſſet, & prædicere, antequam hoc faceret, who could do it when he had ſaid it, and foretel it before he did it. See c. 13.19.

v. 30. prince of this world] The Devil: as c.12,31. He will ſtir up all the malignity of wicked men againſt me. See Luke 22.52.

and hath nothing in me] Nihil juris in me, no right nor power: that is, he ſhall not have his will in me, becauſe he cannot tempt me to ſin, though according to the holy will of my Father, I ſubject my ſelf to death for mans redemption.

v. 31. but that the world may know] As if he ſaid, power is permitted to Satan and his accomplices to perſecute me to death, that dying for mans redemption, the world may ſee the obedience and love I bear to the Father, who hath thus determined.

ariſe let us go hence] They were yet ſitting at table; now he haſtneth to meet and encounter with his paſſion: let us go to the place where the Prince of darkneſs hath prepared his armed troop, to take and deſtroy me. See Matth. 26.46. Thus appeared his love to God the Father, whom he willingly obeyed to death, and to all the elect for whom he died.

CHAP. XV.

Verſ 1. I Am the true vine] By theſe manner of ſpeeches he teacheth, that being by the Father ſpiritually implanted into Chriſt, we have life by faith in him; and bring forth fruits of good works by vertue of his Spirit working in us; whereas we are by nature barren and unfruitful. Probably theſe ſpeeches were occaſioned by their paſſing through or by ſome vineyard; his uſual manner being to take occaſions of leading his hearers from the ſight of things temporal, to the conſideration of the ſpiritual. See c. 4.10,32,35. c.6.27. &c. By true Vine he meaneth here, the moſt excellent, that which beareth fruit for the elect of the whole World, at all ſeaſons, in all ages.

v. 2. every branch in me that beareth not fruit] Every one in my Church, (into which they are implanted by baptiſm, Rom. 6.3,5. and 11.17,20.) that beareth not good fruit, he pruneth off, as unprofitable and dead branches, Mat.3.10. and 15.13. to ſhew that the regenerate have need of continual aſſiſtance and culture, without which they can do no good; he enlargeth his allegory, to ſhew Gods care of his vineyard, the Church (Iſai. 5.1. &c.) in pruning and correcting, to make it more fruitful: but for afflictions, men would grow high and barren; the mindes of men are commonly luxuriant and barren in proſperity.

are clean] Sanctified by my Spirit.

word which I have ſpoken unto you] Being accompanied by the power of my Spirit (See c. 17.17. Epheſ. 5.26. 1 Pet. 1. 22.) he meaneth the word of the Goſpel, which they believed, Judas excepted, c.13.11.

v. 4. abide in me, and I in you] Perſeverance is a condition of ſalvation, Col.1.23. Mat.24.13. Ab arbore frange ramum, fructus germinare non poterit, break a bough from the tree, that which is broken off cannot bud forth, Cyprian tr. 3. de ſimpl. prælat. Out of Chriſt there is no life of grace, no ſalvation. Nec perveniet ad Chriſti præmia, qui relinquit eccleſiam Chriſti, neither ſhall he come to the rewards of Chriſt, who leaveth the Church of Chriſt: ſo dangerous is the ſtate of a ſeparatiſt.

v. 5. without me ye can do nothong] Or ſevered from me, ye can do no good: members divided from the head cannot live. Ye can do nothing truly good, but by me. See Hoſea 14.8. Phil.2.13. Are ye afraid of taking away Free-will? Operante--Spiritu Dei juvatur arbitrium, non aufertur: & hoc agit gratia ut voluntas peccato corrupta--non remaneat in languoribus ſuis, ſed per opem miſerantis medici curata revaleſcat, &c. Ambroſ. l. 10. ep. 84. The Spirit of God working the will is helped, not taken away: and grace worketh ſo, that the will corrupted by ſin--remaineth not in its ſickneſs, but by the aſſiſtance of the merciful Phyſitian, being cured groweth well again. To the like purpoſe ſaith Proſper, contr. collat. on that, Matth.16. Bleſſed art thou Simon ſon of Jona, for fleſh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee, but my Father which is in Heaven. Hac regula nulli hominum aufertur voluntas: quia virtus gratiæ, non hoc in voluntatibus operatur ut non ſint; ſed ut ex malis bona, &c. This rule taketh not away any mans will: becauſe the power of grace doth not work this in wills, that they ſhould no more be, but that they ſhould become good of evil; of unfaithful, faithful; and that they who were of themſelves darkneſs, ſhould become light in the Lord; that that which was dead, might be quickned, &c.

v. 6. he is caſt forth] Out of the vineyard, as a branch cut off, &c. fit for nothing but the fire. See Mat. 3.10. Ezek.15. 2,3,4, &c. Here alſo appeareth the great danger of ſeparation from Chriſt: there can be nothing but Hell and damnation out of him. See on v.4.

v. 7. my words abide in you] If you continue grounded and eſtabliſhed in my doctrine.

ye ſhall ask what ye will, &c.] αἰτήσεσθε, that is, you may freely ask, if you ask any thing according to Gods will.

v. 8. herein is my Father glorified] See Mat.5.16. Phil.1.11. Epheſ.1.12. Good works declare men the ſons of God; as the fruits ſhew the tree, as the effect the cauſe.

v. 9. as the Father loveth me, &c.] As the Father loveth the Son, and communicateth all good to him, ſuſtaineth him in his ſufferings, and delivereth him from death; ſo doth Chriſt love all his.

ſo have I loved you] I have loved you to the death. See 1 John 3.16. giving my ſelf for you. Epheſ.5.2. greater love can no man ſhew, v.13.

continue ye in my love] Onely this have I required for all my love to you, that you conſtantly love me. See Deut.6.5. & 10.12. But how ſhall we continue in the love of Chriſt, who neither have any ability in our ſelves to do any good, nor conſtancy to perſevere in that we are moved to? he ſaid, v. 7. ask what ye will, &c. Whereas we muſt needs feel a want of the grace of perſeverance; we ought to beg it of him, who onely can give us to do that which he commandeth us. If any enquire concerning the rule, it followeth in the next verſe.

v. 10. if ye keep my commandements] 1 John 2.5. Specially that which he nameth v. 12. We can never love God if we love not our neighbours alſo. See 1 John 4.20. Keeping Chriſts Commandments, importeth a remembring them and laying them up in faithful memories, with reſolution to do them.

v. 11. that my joy may remain in you] That is, the joy and comfort which ye conceive in me your Mediatour and Redeemer. See Rom. 14.17.

v. 12. this is my commandement] chap. 13.34. 1 Theſ. 4.9. 1 John 3.11. This is the ſum of the ſecond Table, and the mark by which Chriſt will own his Diſciples. Without this all gifts are vain. See Mat. 22. 37. c. 13.35. 1 Cor. 13.1. &c. This is the end of the Commandement, 1 Tim. 1.5.

v. 13. greater love] A man will rather loſe his riches, and all that he hath, then his life; better, ſaid the Philoſopher, when he caſt his merchandize over-boord in a ſtorm) that theſe ſhould periſh for us, then with us: when a man therefore layeth down his life for his friend, it appeareth that he loved him better then any thing he had in this world.

v. 14. ye are my friends if, &c.] This was Abrahams great priviledge, James 2.23. But here is the condition of Gods holding friendſhip with us, if we do what he commandeth: principally if we love one another. See v. 17. 1 John 3.16. For ſins cometh the wrath of God upon the children of diſobedience, Epheſ. 5.6. The juſt God can have no peace nor amity with wilful contemners of his holy Commandments; and the chief end and ground of all the Commandements is love to God and Man. See on v. 12. and 1 Tim. 1.5.

v. 15. all things that I have heard of my father] all things neceſſary to ſalvation. See 2 Tim. 3.15.

v. 16. ye have not choſen me] He ſetteth off his love in the freedom thereof, it began not from any merit of theirs leſt they ſhould be proud. Miſericordia ejus prævenit eos ſecundum gratiam non ſecundum debitum; Auguſtine de prædeſt ſanct. lib. 1. cap. 17. His mercy prevented them according to (his) grace, not (their merit, or) debt. Elegit ergo Deus fideles, ſed ut ſint, non quia jam erant; ibid. Auguſtine. God therefore choſe the faithful, but that they might be ſuch, not becauſe they were already ſuch. Gods love is eternal, and therefore can have no cauſe but it ſelf: For as Auguſtine ſaith, Non eſt .. gratia, ſi præceſſerint merita; it is not grace (but debt) if merits preceded it. See Rom. 4.4. God made man at the beginning, not becauſe he had any need of man or his ſervice; but as Irenæus, lib. 4. cap. 28. ſaith well, Ut haberet in quem collocaret ſua beneficia, that he might have one on whom he might confer his benefits; and therefore doth he require mans ſervice, that becauſe he is good and merciful, he might do good to them who perſevere in his ſervice, ſaith the ſame.

that ye ſhould bring forth fruit] This is true in two ſenſes. Firſt, that election is the cauſe of our fruits of ſanctification. See Rom. 8.30. 2 Pet. 1.10. and theſe fruits ſhall remain to eternity, Pſal. 1.3. Matth. 25.34. &c. Rev. 14.13. Secondly, that the Diſciples ſhould go forth, and their preaching ſhould have fruit and ſucceſſe to the converſion of the Gentiles, and that the Church ſo planted by them ſhould continue to the worlds end, in ſpight of all her enemies; the perſecutions and all the machinations of Satan, becauſe God giveth the encreaſe, 1 Cor. 3.7.

whatſoever ye ſhall ask] Here he layeth down a ſingular encouragement to Miniſters, in that they ſhall have free acceſs to the Father to beg and obtain whatſoever they have need of in their miniſtery: there are indeed ever many lets, and enemies to our preaching the Goſpel, whoſe aſſaults we are no wayes able to bear, except the power and providence of God ſuſtain us; therefore he ſaith in effect, though you are unſufficient, the Father will not be wanting to you.

v. 17. that ye love one another] This he ſaith moſt ſeaſonably to admoniſh the Miniſters of the Goſpel to mutual love and concord: if there be ſtrife of tongues, they muſt needs build to confuſion: they ought to love the rather, becauſe the world will ever hate them who love the truth. Love is the fulfilling of the law, no pretence will ſerve to the breach of this precept, ſeeing God hath commanded mutual love: thou wilt ſay, he is evil; and what art thou who hateſt thy brother? thou ſayeſt thou hateſt the evil onely: but malice is a falſe medium, making that ſeem evil which God accepteth as good: but indeed, as Auguſtine ſaid to Macedonius, ep. 54. Omnes odit, qui malos odit: he hateth all, who hateth the evil, ſeeing all men ſin. But therefore Diligendi ſunt mali, ut non ſint mali: we muſt love the evil that they may not continue evil, as we love the ſick to make them well.

v. 18. If the world hate you] That is, if the wicked hate you, as c. 14.19. for ſuch onely hate Chriſt, and good men.

ye know that, &c.] γινώσκετε, Know ye, or conſider ye; that you may be comforted in that therein you do but ſhare with me in my ſufferings.

v. 19. therefore the world hateth you] The wicked of the world (guided by the malicious ſpirit of Satan) hate the elect, for God favours beſtowed on them. See Gen. 4.4,5. 1 Iohn 3.12.

v. 20. the ſervant is not greater, &c.] Mat. 10.24. c. 13.16.

if they have kept my ſaying] That is, ſeeing they have not believed and obeyed my ſaying, but contemned it, it muſt not ſeem ſtrange to you that they will alſo contemn and diſobey your words.

v. 21. becauſe they know not him that ſent me] They knew not, or for malice will not acknowledge that which you preach to be the Word of God. See Jer. 43.2. and 44.16. Ignorance of God is the cauſe of the perſecution of his Miniſters.

v. 22. if I had not come] If I had not come unto the Jews according to the word of the Prophets concerning me.

they had not had ſin] Either not ſo much ſin, if they had not deſpiſed ſo cleer light, and a truth ſo confirmed, as v. 24. or they ſhould ſtill have ſeemed innocent, if I had not diſcovered their hypocriſie. See c. 9.41. And truly, Minor erat culpa, ubi erat culpa ignorantia, Ambroſe l. 9. ep. 71. there was leſſe fault, where there was no knowledge of a fault. See Luke 12.48. and Mat. 10 15. But they that ſin againſt knowledge, have no cloak or excuſe for their ſin.

v. 23. hateth my Father] For they are one God.

v. 24. not had ſin] Not ſo much ſin: the more men ſin againſt a convicted conſcience, the greater and more deſperate is their ſin. See on v. 22.

v. 25. written in their law] Pſal. 35.19. See c. 10.34.

they hated me without a cauſe] Undeſervedly: for he did all things well, good to all, harm to none; ſo Davids enemies hated him, Pſal. 35.19. חנם chinnam. 70. ὁι μισοῦντές μεδωρεὰν, freely; that is, without any my offence given them, hating me. So Jonathan ſaid to his father King Saul, 1 Sam. 19.5. why ſhouldeſt thou ſin againſt innocent blood חנם, δωρεὰν undeſervedly.

v. 26. when the comforter is come] c. 14.26. Luke 24. 49.

whom I will ſend] So the holy Ghoſt is ſaid to be ſent of the Father (c. 14.26.) and the Son, of the Father and holy Ghoſt, Iſai. 61.1. Luke 4. 18. not by change of place, but illo miſſionis nomine, under that name of miſſion, we muſt underſtand, opus manifeſtationis indulta, the work of manifeſtation indulged, as Fulgentius ſpeaketh, de miſ. ſp. S. ad Monim. l. 2. and as Greg. hom. 26. in Evang. ſaith well, ejus miſſio, ipſa proceſſio eſt, his miſſion, is his proceeding of the Father and the Son, he is coequal, conſubſtantial, coeternal with the Father and the Son: for as Auguſt. de temp. ſerm. 184. ſaith, in the holy Trinity is nothing minus aut majus, leſſer or greater. He came down on his, in ſeveral gifts (as the ſame ſaith, ſerm. 185.) velut imber ſanctificationis illapſus-- falling as it were a ſhowre of ſanctification. How great, how unſpeakable is the goodneſs of our Redeemer? Hominem portavit ad cælum, & Deum miſit ad terras · ib. He carried man to Heaven (in his aſcending humanity) and ſent God (the holy Ghoſt) unto the earth. See alſo Hilar. de trin. l. 8.

v. 27. ye alſo ſhall bear witneſſe] You who were eye-witneſſes, who have heard and ſeen the very ſame which the Spirit alſo teſtifieth. Acts 1.8.21,22. and 5.32. 1 Iohn 1.1,2,3.

CHAP. XVI.

Verſ 1. SHould not be offended] σκανδαλισθῆτε, cometh of σκάζω, to halt; σκάνδαλον, of the ſame, is a ſtumbling-block, or ſtone in the way, at which, ſuddenly ſtriking the foot, we fall or ſtumble. See Rom. 14.13. 1 Pet. 2. 8. In both which places it is interpreted by πρόσκομμα, offendiculum; of προσκόπτω, impingo, to daſh ones foot againſt ſomething in the way. Here Chriſt telleth them before hand, what troubles they muſt look for in preaching the Goſpel; leſt ſtumbling at that which they expected not, they might fall from their patience, hope in, and profeſſion of Chriſt, fleſh & blood (ever too indulgent to it ſelf) being apt to ſuggeſt to them in their perſecutions & continual troubles, that God favoured not the preaching and doctrine of the Goſpel which all the world diſliked and perſecuted, and for which ſuch grievous things were inflicted on the preachers and profeſſors thereof: therefore Chriſt fore-armeth them by forewarning them what they muſt expect: for that which ſuddenly falleth upon one, may trouble a great and conſtant minde, but that which is foreſeen and expected, is more eaſily born, as Cyril noteth. But herein is a ſingular argument of the truth and ſincerity of Chriſtian Religion; that it could ever take root, and ſo many generations according to the word of Chriſt, Mat. 16.19. in ſpight of the gates of Hell, and powers of darkneſs, it yet flouriſheth; though it hath been ſo conſtantly perſecuted in all times & places; and ſeeing that Chriſt at the firſt propoſal thereof never allured any one Diſciple to follow him by promiſe of honours, pleaſures, ſecular gains, or any thing which fleſh and blood liketh; but on the contrary told them plainly, as here, ſo many other times, that they muſt expect perſecutions, malice of all the world, loſſe of goods, and life it ſelf for profeſſing the ſame: He that on theſe terms and conditions is a reſolved Chriſtian, muſt, by the Spirit of truth, be aſcertained of the truth of his religion, otherwiſe he would never ſuffer ſuch things for the profeſſion thereof the very ſpectatours of the Martyres ſufferings (when they have ſeen them torn with ſundry torments, and under the tired hands of their tormentors; hold an invincible patience) have thought, as the truth is, that neither the conſent of ſo many, nor the perſeverance of dying men could be vain, nec ipſam patientiam ſine Deo, cruciatus tantos poſſe ſuperare, Lactant, lib. 5. cap. 13. neither that patience it ſelf without God could overcome ſuch great torments: hence came it, that the blood of the martyrs was the ſeed of the goſpel.

v. 2. put you out of the ſynagogues] Excommunicate you. See Chap. 9. 22.

whoſoever killeth you will think] They ſhall in their blinde zeal think you ſuch pernicious and evil men, that you are worthy to die, as was commanded concerning the idolaters, Exodus 32. 27. and blaſphemer, Leviticus 24. 16. See Acts 22. 22.

v. 3. becauſe they have not known the Father] See Chap. 15. 21. ignorance of God, is the cauſe of perſecuters rage: ſo unhappy a mother of devotion is ignorance, this made them perſecute Chriſt in his ſacred perſon, Acts 3. 17. and in his ſervants, Acts 9. 5. 1 Tim. 1. 13.

v. 4. I ſaid unto you at the beginning] He would not at firſt ſo expreſſely tell them of all theſe things which they muſt ſuffer, but conſidered their weakneſſe: and indeed while he was with them, the rage of the adverſaries fell upon him; but after his aſcenſion, when Satan could no more reach him, he ſtirred up all the fury of wicked men againſt the profeſſours of the truth of Chriſt: it was therefore neceſſary, both that now before his departure, they ſhould be forewarned of their dangers; and after his aſcenſion, that they ſhould be armed with a greater meaſure of the holy Ghoſt, as to inſtruct them in all truth, ſo to confirm them in their profeſſing and preaching the ſame, which was alſo done accordingly.

becauſe I was with you] He ſpeaketh as if he were not now with them, becauſe he was upon his departure from them.

v. 5. and none of you asketh me] This is not ſimply to be underſtood, for Peter aſked it, Chap. 13. 36. but he greatly reproveth their negligence, for that they no more cared to be further enformed what ſhould be the effect of his departure.

v. 6. ſorrow hath filled your hearts] Becauſe I tell you now of my departure, and your afflictions to come: whereas if you would have diligently enquired concerning the end of theſe things, you ſhould have found matter of rejoycing, in the aſſurance of my glory, and the accompliſhment of your redemption therein.

v. 7. it is expedient for you] It ſhall make for your advantage. Such are the works of Gods power and unſearchable counſel, whereby he bringeth light out of darkneſſe, good out of evil, and comfort out of ſorrow: ſo he giveth them his peace in the worlds malice, and ſpiritual joy of the holy Ghoſt in the bitter ſorrows and afflictions of fleſh and blood: ſo he advantageth them in manifeſting to themſelves, and the world, their righteouſneſſe, by permitting them to be condemned of the world for malefactours: ſo he giveth them life, by permitting them to death: ſo tryeth he the elect, and blindeth the carnal hearted.

if I go not away, the Comforter, &c.] Could he not have given the holy Ghoſt being preſent with them? Yes, but God had otherwiſe determined to confirme the truth of the Goſpel, by the manifeſt graces of the holy Ghoſt, and them therin, who were now to be weaned from the deſire of Chriſts bodily preſence, and to be awaked out of their dream of a temporal and wordly kingdom of Chriſt.

v. 8. he will reprove the world of ſin] ἐλέγξει, he will not onely accuſe, but alſo convince the world of ſin, by ſuch evident and concluding arguments, as that πᾶσαν ἀπολογίαν αὐτῶν ἐκκόψει, Chryſoſt. hom. 77. he ſhall take from them all excuſe, he ſhall convince their obſtinacy and unbelief, by the power of truth making it clearly appear, that I am the Chriſt. See Acts 2. 37.

v. 9. of ſin] Of unbelief: See Chap. 15. 22. 24.

becauſe they believe not] And therefore are ſtill lyable to the power and curſe of the law againſt ſinners, ſo long as they continue in unbelief, being not made free by the Son, who onely freely juſtifieth ſinners. See Chap. 8. 34, 35, 36. Rom. 3. 19. 24. and 5. 1, &c.

v. 10. of righteouſneſſe] Not the worlds, but Chriſts: becauſe they contemned the true righteouſneſſe of God in Chriſt (1 Cor. 1. 30.) whom they blaſphemed, and condemned as a malefactour: hereof their conſciences ſhall be convinced, when they ſhall perceive the goſpel confirmed, by the admirable power of the holy Ghoſt, evidently working by the Apoſtles.

v. 11. of judgement] Becauſe they condemned him whom God the Father juſtified (which was not his injuſtice, but theirs) and appointed Judge of the living and the dead, Acts 17. 31. or of my power of judicature exerciſed againſt Satan in part already, Chap. 12. 31. Luke 10. 18, &c.

prince of this world] Satan; not that he is ſo; for God alone is king, and his providence ruleth over every creature, but becauſe he arrogateth to himſelf that high title (Luke 4. 6.) lying to deceive, and becauſe the wicked are permitted to his government, 2 Cor. 4. 4. of this ſee Acts 2. 22, &c.

is judged] Shall preſently be judged, that is, overcome, and his kingdome overthrown by Chriſts paſſion, and the preaching thereof. See Hebrews 2. 14. Luke 11. 22. and 10. 18.

v. 12. I have yet many things to ſay unto you] Thus he attemperateth to his hearers capacity: his doctrine diſtilleth like rain upon the herbs, (Deut. 32. 1.) by little and little as the hearers can receive it to nouriſh them, not by Cataracts to drown them. See 1 Cor. 3. 1. I have many deep myſteries, which you cannot now underſtand, or bear them without offence by reaſon of your weakneſſe, but the holy Ghoſt will reveal them unto you: See John 6. 56. 60. 1 Cor. 3. 1.

v. 13. he will ſhew you things to come] concerning the kingdom of Chriſt, which they knew not till after his reſurrection.

v. 15. he ſhall receive of mine] He ſhall ſhew you the ſame truth which I have ſpoken to you, opening the treaſure of wiſdom and ſanctification, which are yet hid in me: he ſhall fill you with my Spirit, and make you underſtand that which I have taught you, ſealing you up to the redemption which I work for you, and aſſuring you of your intereſt in, and conjunction with me.

v. 15. all things that the Father hath are mine] This he ſpeaketh in the perſon of the Mediatour; becauſe of his fulneſs we all receive. Chap. 1. 16. and herein ſheweth the unity of eſſence in the holy Trinity, and community of power, wiſdom, ſanctity, truth, eternity, glory, majeſty, &c.

ver. 16. becauſe I go to the Father] See Chap. 14. 18, 19. I paſſe by death and reſurrection into the glory which I had, and have eternally with the Father; yet ſhall I be more ſpiritually with you then ever, becauſe ye ſhall then have more experience of my ſpirit. See Matth. 28. 20.

v. 17. Then ſaid ſome of his diſciples] Often had he mentioned his death, and going to the Father, yet underſtood they not; ſo death is fleſh and blood to the doctrine of the croſſe, and ſo blinde are we until the Spirit of God illuminate us, 1 Cor. 2. 14.

v. 18. what is this that he ſaith] What meaneth he hereby? they underſtood not, that he ſhould ſo ſoon die, and ſo quickly riſe again from the dead, the third day: therefore that ſame τὸ μικρὸν, a little while, was obſcure and hard to them, until this propheſie opened it ſelf in the fulfilling thereof.

v. 19. that they were deſirous to ask him] They like good auditors, are not offended at that they do not preſently underſtand, but reſolve to aſk that they may learn: he as a gratious Saviour, preventeth their enquiry by a further explanation of himſelf.

v. 20. ye ſhall weep &c.] Ye ſhall have ſorrow and trouble of heart, when impiety and popular rage ſhall triumph: but you ſhall have a ſpiritual joy in receiving the holy Ghoſt; which ſhall take away, and make void ſecular and worldly ſorrows (as Aarons ſerpent did the inchanters, Exod. 7. 12.) ſo had they many ſharp encounters, injuries, preſſures, ſorrows (as Chriſt foretold them, Matth. 9. 15. &c.) but they rejoyced that they were counted worthy to ſuffer for the name of Chriſt: ſo are the ſaints advantaged in their ſufferings. See Acts 5. 41. 2 Cor. 4. 16, 17, 18. Rom. 5. 3. when the ſaints weep, the world ſhall rejoyce, but when all tears ſhall be wiped from their eyes (Revel. 7. 17.) then ſhall all the kinreds of the earth wail, and mourn, Matth. 24. 30. Rev. 1. 7. ſo do the ſaints and the world take their turns of ſorrow and tears, as Gideons fleece and floor did of the dew. Judg. 6. 37. &c.

v. 21. her hour is come] The time of her travel appointed of God.

v. 22. I will ſee you again] After my reſurrection from the dead.

no man taketh from you] αἴρει, taketh, for ἀρεῖ, ſhall be able to take away: Becauſe Chriſt is their joy (ſaith Auguſtine) who ſhall die no more, but be to them the fountain and authour of eternal joy. See 1 Pet. 1. 8. this joy is begun in this life, and compleated in the life to come.

v. 23. in that day ye ſhall ask me nothing] When ye ſhall ſee me riſen from the dead, ye ſhall not then enquire of me thoſe things which you now doubt of; as Chap. 13. 36. and 14. 5. you ſhall be taught of the holy Ghoſt, and ſo underſtand theſe things, 1 John. 2. 27. or ye ſhall not aſk of me as now ye do.

v. 24. ye asked nothing in my name] Hitherto you have not grounded your requeſts to God through my mediation and interceſſion, which you ſhall now learn to do in my bodily abſence.

v. 25. in proverbs] Or parables, in ſimilitudes, in dark ſayings, but openly, as verſe 29 and Chap. 10. 24. and Chap. 11. 14. Mark 8. 32.

no more ſpeak unto you] I will henceforth clearly enlighten you.

v. 26. Ye ſhall ask in my name] Chap. 14. 13. 14. for my ſake, through my mediation, and according to the will and promiſe of God: otherwiſe the name of Chriſt is but vainly pretended, Nam ſi id quod non expedit petitur, non in nomine Jeſu petitur pater, Gregor. hom. 26. for if that which is not expedient is aſked, the Father is not entreated in the name of Jeſus.

I ſay not unto you] Not that he will not mediate: but to ſhew the readineſſe of Gods love to hear the believers.

v. 27. becauſe ye have loved me] This ὅτι becauſe, here as Luke 7. 47. ſheweth a conſequence not a cauſe of Gods love to believers, See on Luke 7. 47. we love Chriſt, becauſe God loved us firſt, which love of his can have no cauſe but it ſelf: our love to Chriſt is therefore a certain ſigne of Gods love to us.

v. 28. I leave the world] In reſpect of my bodily preſence; but as his Deity left not heaven to come into the world by his incarnation; ſo neither left it the world by going to the Father in his aſſumption.

v. 29. ſpeakeſt no proverb] No parable, or obſcure thing; now we better perceive what thou meaneſt.

v. 30. Now we are ſure] This they ſay as men fluctuant between fear and hope; therefore Chriſt preſently telleth them of that effect of their faiths weakneſſe which he foreſaw, that is, their forſaking him, whom they here profeſſe come from God: ſo infirme is the ſtrongeſt faith, ſo inconſtant the beſt reſolutions.

v. 31. Do ye now believe?] This interrogation hath in it the ſignification both of pitty, and reproof of their too early confidence in themſelves, as if he ſaid, Ah poor ſouls, who ſeem to your ſelves thus ſtrong in faith, you know not how quickly you ſhall be ſcattered for feare. See verſe 32.

v. 32. Behold the hour cometh] Matthew 26. 31. Mark 14. 27.

yet am I not alone] This alſo he addeth to confirm them againſt their tryal now at hand; as if he ſaid, let not go your confidence in me, when you ſhall finde your own infirmity in your forſaking me for fear, God will ſtill be with me, when men deſert me.

v. 33. that in me ye might, &c.] That truſting in me, ye may have peace of conſcience, the ſureſt armour againſt ſecular afflictions.

I have overcome the world] Chriſt his victory is our victory. See 1 John 4. 4. neither the world, Satan, ſin, death, nor any creature could overcome him; ſo neither ſhall they us, Rom. 8. 37.&c. though we muſt through many afflictions enter into the kingdom of heaven, Acts 14.22. (for as Jerom lib. 2. ep. 19. ſaith, quis ſanctorum ſine certamine coronatus eſt? which of all the Saints hath been crowned without a conflict?) yet herein is our comfort and aſſurance, we have overcome the world, becauſe Chriſt hath overcome it: this is the victory of our faith; we have overcome, though the fight be not yet done, becauſe we are certain of victory in Chriſt, who hath overcome for us, both the world and whatſoever is adverſe to our ſalvation: the world may ſtill afflict us and try us, to advantage us, not finally to hurt us, becauſe we are in Chriſt by faith. See 1 John 5. 5. Rom. 8. 1.

CHAP. XVII.

Verſe 1. T*He hour is come*] This he ſaith, becauſe though Chriſt were manifeſted by doctrine and miracles, power and great works; yet his ſpiritual kingdom, which after this more cleerly ſhined forth, was yet but obſcure towards the world: now the hour which the Father had appointed was come.

glorifie thy Son] He prayeth for that he was aſſured of: aſſurance of the truth of Gods promiſes is the cauſe and ground of faithful prayer, 2 Cor. 4. 13. ſo we daily pray for remiſſion of our ſins, becauſe we are aſſured that they are remitted in Chriſt: God hath appointed that we ſhall attain through the merit and mediation of Chriſt, but the condition on our part to be performed is, that we aſke like dutifull children, that he may give like a loving Father.

that thy Son may alſo glorifie thee] That I may glorifie thee in the afflictions which I ſhall ſuffer for the elect, that men may know that I loved thee. Euthym.

v. 2. as thou haſt given him power] Authority over all men, and all creatures.

v. 3. the only true God] Not excluding himſelf and the holy Ghoſt; but intimating the whole Deity in the name of God.

v. 4. I have glorified thee] By doctrine and miracles; by my whole life on earth: now therefore glorifie me in my death and reſurrection, that thou mayeſt alſo therein be glorified. See Chap. 5. 23.

v. 5. with the glory which I had, &c] That the divine majeſty which I had from all eternity may now ſhine forth in the perſon of the Mediatour; for the nature of the fleſh was not yet glorified, and taken up to Gods right hand, as Chryſoſtome noteth: this glory was (towards the world) clouded for a time by the veil of his fleſh, in the form of a ſervant, but nothing in himſelf leſſened thereby.

v. 6. unto the men] To my diſciples choſen out of the world, whom I have inſtructed.

thine they were] By eternal election.

v. 7. are of thee] The elect believing know, that all that which they have in Chriſt is divine and heavenly, no invention or power of man, but the will and power of God to ſalvation to every one that believeth, Rom. 1. 16. See Chap. 6. 69. 1 John 5. 20.

v. 8. and have known] Chap. 16. 27. for faith cannot be without knowledge. See Chap 9 36. Rom. 10. 14. faith is the aſſent of the minde unto that it knoweth.

v. 9. I pray for them] Specially for the Apoſtles deſigned to ſo great and dangerous a work, as was their preaching the goſpel to the obſtinate Jews and Idolatrous Gentiles. I pray not for the reprobates of the world.

v. 10. thine are mine] For God the Father made him Heir of all things, Heb. 1. 2. this he ſaith to give them aſſurance that the Father heard him; as if he had ſaid, I commend none unto thee, but thoſe whom thou gaveſt me, and ſtill owneſt for thine.

I am glorified in them] As in their believing and ſanctification, ſo in that they ſhall preach my triumphs over ſin, the croſſe, death and hell, to all the world, out of which believers ſhall continually be gathered.

v. 11. I am no more in the world] I am preſently to depart from this world, and after my aſcenſion will be no more in it by my bodily preſence (Acts 16. 21.) by his governing and aſſiſting ſpirit, he ever is See Matth. 28. 20.

keep through thine own name] That is (as the interpreter of the Syriack hath it) by thy name; by thy power, mercy, and goodneſſe; for thy holy name ſake; or by the knowledge of thee: becauſe they are thine, and bear thy name; διὰ τῆς σῆς βοηθείας, through thy help, or aſſiſtance. Chryſoſt.

that they may be one] Joyned in unity of faith and love, as brethren in me.

v. 12. ſon of perdition] This is an Hebraiſme. So 2 Theſ. 2. 3. ὁ υἱὸς τῆς ἀπωλείας, that ſon of perdition, Epheſ. 2. 3. τέκνα ὀργῆς, children of wrath. Judas was a ſon of deſtruction; or who deſerved deſtruction; deſtinated to deſtruction; not that Judas was without ſin (becauſe deſigned to perdition) or that God was the author of ſin; no, no: Fulgent. de præd. ad Monim. lib. 1. ſaith it very well, quos prædeſtinavit ad pœnam, non prædeſtinavit ad culpam; thoſe whom he predeſtinated to puniſhment, he predeſtinated not to ſin; and therefore illius rei Deus ultor eſt, cujus author non eſt, ib. God is the revenger of that, whereof he is not the author, that is iniquity, which he can puniſh, but not do: there is no ſin in him, and therefore none can be of him. The Hebrews uſed to ſay, בן מות ben maveth, 1 Sam. 20. 31. and 26. 16. 2 Sam. 12. 5. &c. a ſon of death, that is, one deſperately periſhing, notoriouſly wicked. So they ſaid, a ſon of Belial. Deut. 13. 13. 1 Sam. 2. 12. without profit, lawleſſe, rebellious, given over to wickedneſſe. Judg. 19. 22. 1 Kings 21. 10. 1 Sam. 25. 25.

that the Scripture, &c. Pſal. 109. 8.

v. 13. I ſpeak in the world] That is, being yet bodily preſent, I pray for and with them.

my joy fulfilled] Chap. 15. 11. by (in themſelves) he meaneth in their hearts; and in their comfortable aſſurance in this life, and accompliſhed ſalvation in the life to come; which he duely calleth his, who rejoyceth in our good, and cauſeth the ſame in us, by the preſence of his ſpirit, ſanctifying us, and living in us, Gal. 2. 20. whereas we have of our ſelves nothing but unreſt, terrour, and matter of deſpair; Chriſt onely is our peace, and joy.

v. 14. they are not of the world] Becauſe being ſeparated by the ſpirit of regeneration, they diſſent from it in affection and converſation, 1 Pet. 4. 4.

v. 15. take them out of the world] By preſent death; becauſe it was appointed that they ſhould preach the goſpel to the nations of the world.

v. 16. they are not of the world] Verſe 14. this he repeateth for their ſakes, that they might remember that they were but aliants here; and ſo no wonder if the World hated them, which loveth onely her own.

v. 17. ſanctifie them through thy truth] Conſecrate, prepare, and enable them to preach thy truth to the World; as if he ſaid, let them firſt receive the rowl and digeſt it; to wit, the Word, which they muſt preach to others. See Ezek.3.1,2, 3,4. Rev.10.9,10,11.

thy word is the truth] Thus he meeteth with their hypocriſie, who boaſt much of truth and godlineſs, yet ſecurely contemn or neglect the Word of God; whereas, that only containeth the truth and will of God for our ſanctification and ſalvation: all other truths pretended to, or alledged by men, are hereby to be examined. Aaron and his ſons were ſanctified to the miniſtration of the Levitical Prieſthood, with cleanſings and ſprinkling the blood of thoſe ſacrifices (Exod.29.7.) which could never make them perfect (Heb.9.9.) but, O my Father, ſanctifie and conſecrate theſe in the truth of thoſe ſhadows (now to be antiquated and done away, Epheſ.5.26. 1 Pet.3.18. John 10.15. and 15.3. 1 Pet.1.22.) which more cleerly ſhineth forth in the Goſpel, then in thoſe figures of the Law.

v. 18. as thou haſt ſent me] Thou haſt ſent me to preach the Goſpel, thy will for mans ſalvation, I now having finiſhed my courſe, aſſigne them to the ſame office, and aſſiſt and keep thou them that they may perform it.

v. 19. for their ſakes] That I may for them merit remiſſion of ſins and eternal life.

I ſanctifie my ſelf] That is, I conſecrate and voluntarily offer up my ſelf an holy and unblemiſhed ſacrifice to thee for their redemption. So Euthymius, after Chryſoſtome interpreteth.

might be ſanctified] Through the imputation of my righteouſneſs to them; in that I have been obedient to the death for them. See Hebr.10.10.

through the truth] ἐν ἀληθείᾳ, in the truth, or truly, and ſo it intimateth our true and real ſanctification by the one oblation of Chriſt, in oppoſition to thoſe cleanſings under the law by the offering up of beaſts in ſacrifice.

v. 20. for theſe alone] That is, the Apoſtles now with me; but for all the elect which ſhall hereafter believe. Here was comfort to the Apoſtles in that many ſhould believe through their miniſtery; ſo is there to all true believers, in that Chriſt (whoſe prayer and interceſſion preſerved Peters faith from failing in his dangerous trial) hath prayed for us alſo. God will deny him nothing.

v. 21. that they may all be one] Members of one body of Chriſt, whoſe unity is life.

in us] Not one in evil, ſin, malice; but in faith, charity, ſanctity, conſent in good, holding the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. Sin ſeparateth man from God; Chriſt can have no communion with Belial; unhappy ſinner. Magna hominis miſeria eſt cum illo non eſſe, ſine quo non poteſt eſſe. Proſper. Epigram. It is a mans great miſery not to be with him, without whom he cannot be (happy.)

that the world may believe] Being convicted by their holy unity, may confeſſe the power of my Spirit in them, and be united to their ſociety of faith and holy obedience.

v. 22. and the glory] That is, Chriſtian unity, which is the honour of God, the gift of Chriſt, and the glory of true Chriſtians: or the heavenly felicity whereof the elect ſhall participate in Chriſt.

v. 23. I in them] That the life of my Spirit may appear in their holy converſation, as Gal.2.20.

thou in me] By thy divine nature united to my perſon; and communicating the fulneſs of thy Spirit to me.

they may be made perfect in one] Being joyned to the Lord, and ſo united to him; and one to another, as true members of the myſticall body of Chriſt, they may be partakers of the divine nature, 2 Pet. 1.4. See alſo 1 Cor.6.17. 1 John 1.3. John 6.57,58.

may know that thou haſt ſent me] See on v.21. That men ſeeing their godly converſation who profeſs to be my Diſciples, may thereby know that I am of God.

and haſt loved them] That is thy grace, love, and favour towards them which directeth and preſerveſt them.

as thou haſt loved me] That thou loveſt them for my ſake: all the effects of Gods love are directed to us through his love to Chriſt.

v. 24. Father I will, &c.] c.12.26. and 14.3.

be with me] In eternal glory and happineſs, in which I ſhall ſhortly be with thee.

v. 25. the world hath not known thee] The greateſt part of the World, hath not known thee as they ought, (See Acts 17.23. Romans 1.21, 28.) in the unity of the Trinity: I only have known thee, and they to whom I have revealed thee, and thy counſel. Matth. 11. 27. John 8. 55. and 7.29. and 10.15.

v. 26. thy name] Thy mercy and goodneſs.

that the love, &c.] That thou mayeſt love them for my ſake as thou haſt loved me their Head: and that they may by faith feel in their hearts, that love wherewith thou loveſt me, and themſelves in me. See Rom.5.5.

and I in them] Dwelling in their hearts by the Spirit of Faith and Sanctification, Epheſians 3. 17. Perfectius eis notus, Euthymius; being more perfectly known to them.

CHAP. XVIII.

Verſ.1. HE went forth with his diſciples] Matth. 26. 36. To ſhew that he went out willingly to accompliſh our redemption.

over the brook Cedron] Mentioned 2 Samuel 15. 22. 1 Kings 15. 13. It is (ſay ſome) the name of the valley as well as of the brook running through the ſame, betwixt Jeruſalem and the Mount of Olives: It is a ſhallow brook: the Syriack tranſlateth it, ad tranſitum pedis; that is, a Foord which may be paſſed over on foot. See on Luke 22. 39. Over this Brook and Valley went David and his Souldiers weeping, up the Mount of Olives, 2 Sam. 15.23.30.

v. 2. Judas, &c. knew the place] This he ſaith, to ſhew that Chriſt hid not himſelf: for in the night where could he more eaſily and certainly be found, then in that place, to which he often reſorted in the night, Luke 21. 37. This place Judas well knew, and that he ſhould there finde Chriſt, and Jeſus knew that Judas would ſeek him there.

v. 3. having received a band of men] Matth. 26. 47. Mark 14.43. Luke 22.47. which he had obtained of the Governour of the Temple.

cometh thither] Into the Garden, into which Chriſt entred, being now to expiate and ſatisfie for that ſin alſo which Adam (ſinning in a Garden) brought upon the world.

with lanterns and torches] Jeſus is apprehended as a Malefactour, that we may be acquitted as innocent.

v. 4. went forth] That is from that part of the Garden where he was, towards them who came to apprehend him.

whom ſeek ye?] He asketh not as doubting, but to amate the Guard, and that he might rather appear preſenting himſelf, then be taken, as by force; ſeeing he wittingly and willingly offered up himſelf for our ſins, as was prefigured in the Law. See Exod. 35. 5. 21, 22, 29. Levit. 22. 21, 23. Numb.15.3. and 29.39. Deut.16.10.

v. 5. they anſwered him, Jeſus of Nazareth] They ſay not, we ſeek thee, but Jeſus, &c. As ſpeaking to ſome third perſon: It ſeemeth then that they knew not Jeſus preſent, ſpeaking to them, though manifeſted with lights, and marked out by Judas's treacherous kiſſe, and though often ſeen ſpecially of the High Prieſts ſervants, who ever noted him with a malitious eye. All which (as alſo the following words) ſhews, that he willingly offered himſelf.

Judas alſo, &c.] Judas perplexed, in that the ſigne of his treaſon took not, and that he had in vain diſcovered himſelf, who probably hoped, that having ſaluted Jeſus, the Guard would preſently have fallen in and layed hands on him, and ſo in the tumult, his ſelf ſhould not be diſcovered: He came not over to the Diſciples, from whoſe ſociety he was departed, but ſtood with the enemies of Jeſus.

v. 6. fell to the ground] No wonder; for as Auguſtine noteth, Deus latebat in carne, the Deity was vailed in his Humanity: Chriſt did this to make them know, that the arms, multitude and power they brought, could do nothing except God permitted: and to teach all obſtinate enemies of his Church, that they ſhall not be able to ſtand before his Majeſty judging in his glory, ſeeing they could not in his ſtate of humiliation.

v. 7. then asked he them again] After that the ſame power which caſt them down, permitted them to riſe again.

they ſaid, Jeſus of Nazareth] They perſiſt in their obſtinacy notwithſtanding their preſent experience of a Divine Power caſting them down at the word of Jeſus: the moſt evident miracles can neither convert nor work upon the obſtinate, until God turn their hearts.

v. 8. let theſe go their way] For he alone was to ſuffer for our redemption. He ſheweth his love to them, unto the laſt: if ye ſeek me only ἐμαυτὸν παραδίδωμι, Chryſoſt. I yeeld my my ſelf to you.

of them thou gaveſt me] c.17.12.

v. 10. Simon Peter having a ſword] Mat.26.51.

the ſervants name was Malchus] He nameth the party, and where he was hurt, for the evidence of the ſtory.

v. 11. put up thy ſword] Chriſt prohibited him to ſmite, though in defence of his own ſacred perſon; and he healed him that was hurt, though his enemy: to teach us firſt to do good to them who perſecute and hurt us. And ſecondly, that zeal muſt be limited by the bounds of every mans own calling: we may not uſe the ſword to private revenge. See Deut. 32.35. Rom. 12.19. Thirdly, that he willingly taſted that bitter cup of his paſſion. Fourthly, that he needed no external defence; he could have commanded legions of Angels. Laſtly, that no miſ-informed or miſplaced zeal is juſtifiable.

v. 12. and the captain] χιλίαρχος (See Acts 21.31.) the tribune; ſome think theſe were ſuch as we call High Marſhals, *Henr. Bebel. de Mag. & ſacr. For as Vegetius l. 2. c. 6. de re militar. ſaith, In una legione decem cohortes eſſe debere. So Ibid. c. 12. in one legion muſt be ten cohorts, the firſt whereof being the chief, conſiſting of 1105 Footmen, and 132 Horſemen, and being of the beſt quality, were commanded by the Tribune, and were called cohors miliaria. See alſo Pomponius Lætus, de Magiſtrat. Rom. and Ra. Volateran. de Magiſtrat. & ſacr. Rom. However ſtrong or full ſoever this armed company was, with thoſe Auxiliaries which the Prieſts ſent out with them, they could not take Chriſt untill he yeelded up himſelf, which this, οὖν, then, or therefore ſeemeth to point at: then they took him, when he yeelded; or therefore, becauſe he rendred himſelf; otherwiſe, they were caſt on the ground by his word onely.

expedient that one man ſhould dye, &c.] So excellent is truth, that it doth not onely give ſome light to the dim eyes, but alſo ſometimes break out of the enemies tongues: ſo Caiphas propheſied: it was indeed expedient that this One man ſhould dye, that all men might not dye eternally: indeed, ἡ σωτηρία τῇ οἰκουμένῃ ὁ θάνατος αὐτοῦ, Chryſ hom. 82. His death was ſalvation to the world: but this blinde Prophet underſtood not his own words.

of his diſciples and of his doctrine] Probably he queſtioned him, why he gathered ſo many Diſciples, and what he taught them? all to finde ſomething whereof to accuſe him of ſedition or innovation.

v. 20. In ſecret have I ſaid nothing] Nothing but that which I have, for ſubſtance, publickly preached, in the Temple and the Synagogues.

v. 21. why askeſt thou me] Whom thou wilt not believe.

ask them which heard me] Many ſtrangers, many enemies heard me: examine theſe witneſſes.

v. 22. with the palm of his hand] ἔδωκε ῥάπισμα. Syr. ſtrook Jeſus upon the cheek. See Mat. 26.67. Mark 14.65.

v. 23. but if well, why ſmiteſt thou me?] Thus he convinceth his adverſaries of injuſtice: complaining as infirm Man, yet being alſo God omnipotent, ſo that he could eaſily have avenged it: but as Ambroſe ſaith, Serm. 20. in Pſal. 118, Queri maluit, quam vindicare: to give us example, he had now rather complain, then revenge. The impious ſervant ſmiteth the moſt holy Lord: this was not judgement, but violence.

the hall of judgement] Or Pilates houſe, or Pretory.

themſelves went not, &c.] Acts 10.28. It was not lawful by their tradition to accompany the Gentiles: eſpecially being to eat the Paſſeover. This they make conſcience of, but none to kill the Lord of life. See Acts 10.28. and 11.5.

but that they might eat the Paſſeover] That is, thoſe Sacrifices which they uſually were to offer, at that feaſt of the Paſſeover (as ſome ſay) becauſe the Paſchal Lamb, they were (by the Law) to eat the even before, Deut. 16.6. and certainly Chriſt with his Diſciples, had eaten the Paſchal Lamb the even before he was apprehended, and led to Pilate, as it is cleer Matth. 26.17, &c. Mark 14.12, &c. Luke 22.7, &c. Others think otherwiſe, and that Jeſus eat not the Paſſeover the ſame day on which the Jews ate it, (againſt which the forecited places ſeem expreſſe:) they ſay, becauſe that they finde no expreſſe place of Scripture clear enough, whence it may be gathered, that thoſe Sacrifices to be offered on the ſeven dayes of unleavened bread, were ever called by that name: Deut. 16.2. Thou ſhalt ſacrifice the Paſſeover (פסח) &c. צאן ובקר of the flock of ſheep, and herd, or bullocks. See hereof Numb. 28.19.24. and Deut. 16.2. &c. And you ſhall find theſe Paſſeover-offerings expreſly called פסחים Peſachim, the plural of the word פסח, πάσχα. See V. Shindlar Pentegl. in פסח. 2 Chron. 35.8,9. 70. εἰς τὸ φασὲκ, &c. So Chryſoſtom underſtandeth τὸ πάσχα, τὴν ἑορτὴν πᾶσαν, the whole time of the ſolemnity of that feaſt of Paſſeover. But what place of Scripture ſheweth expreſly, or by neceſſary conſequence, that Chriſt ate the Paſſeover, not on the ſame day on which the Jews did eat it? The firſt day of the feaſt of unleavened bread, Chriſt ate it, Mat. 26.17, &c. Mark 14.12, &c. Luke 22.7. then it was by the Law to be eaten. See Numb. 28.16. &c. Deut. 16.1,2,3,4. At even, Deut. 16.6. And how can it appear that the Jews did not now obſerve the Law on this behalf? or that (as ſome think) their ſtrict caution againſt defilement, making them uncapable (by the Law, or their tradition) of eating at the feaſt, of their offerings, muſt needs relate only to that day on which the Paſſeover was to be offered and eaten, or the firſt and laſt dayes of the feaſt? ſeeing every uncleanneſs (whether determined by the law, or conceived to be ſo, by their tradition) did make them for the time uncapable of eating of things offered in ſacrifice to the Lord, as Levit. 5.1,2, &c. Levit. 7.19.20,21. Numb. 18.11,13. Numb. 19.20. or in their opinions ſo, if it were but conceived ſuch by their own tradition.

v. 29. what accuſation bring you, &c.] So Matth. 27.23. Mark 15.14. He ſaid, What evil hath he done? for he knew that they had delivered him out of envy, Mark 15.10. Therefore though they had accuſed him as a perverter of the people, yet he alſo publickly profeſſed, I finde no fault in this man, Luke 23.4.14. So alſo here v. 38.

v. 30. if he were not a malefactour, &c.] As if they ſaid, we are godly people, and would not accuſe any but a Malefactour: there is no cauſe why you ſhould ſuſpect our charity, or queſtion our integrity (yet which of the Prophets did they not perſecute? Acts 7.52.) ſo blinde and preſumptuous is hypocriſie: but if it be enough to accuſe, who ſhall be innocent?

v. 31. judge him according to your law] This he ſpake, either becauſe he conceived it to be a matter of their religion, and ſo fit for the cogniſance of their Sanhedrin: or ironically he derideth their fury againſt right and equity; for the Romans permitted them no power of judicature in capital matters, as they confeſs, nor did they condemn any man to death for favour, or unheard. See Acts 25.16.

v. 34. ſayeſt thou this thing of thy ſelf] Is this thine own prejudicate opinion of me? or is this the objection of my accuſers?

v. 35. am I a Jew] What care I for the King whom the Jews expect? or for their religion? I am no Jew: I ask not for any intereſt of mine own: it is the inſtigation of thy own countreymen; they queſtion whether thou art their expected King Meſſias, and convent thee as the author of ſedition, under pretence of thy affectation of that title.

v. 36. my kingdom is not of this world]Not that he governeth not in heaven and earth: for though his kingdom be not of this world, tamen rex eſt, etiam in hoc mundo, Bernard. in Epiphan. ſerm. 2. when Pilate had openly declared whoſe accuſation it was: Jeſus plainly telleth him that his kingdom was not ſecular, but ſpiritual; not of this world. So that he nothing intrenched on Caſars right; which he ſaith, not that he might avoid death, but to ſhew that he was unjuſtly accuſed.

v. 37. Thou ſayeſt that I am,&c.] It is an Hebrew manner of conceſſion; meaning, I am, as Mark 14. 62. or thou gathereſt by my words that I am a king.

v. 38. What is truth?] What truth do you ſpeak of?

v. 39. But ye have a cuſtom] Matth. 27. 15.

one at the Paſſeover] At the feaſt of Paſſeover: not on the day wherein the Paſſeover was to be offered, and eaten, that was now paſt (See on verſe 28.) but at the feaſt, which laſted divers dayes. See Iſ. Caſaub. Exercit. 16. N. 31.

v. 2. a crown of thorns] The crown is a ſoveraign ornament, and ſo was the purple robe (See Pompon. Lat. de Magiſtr. Rom. de Rege) in ſo much as that it was once accounted treaſon for any private man to wear it: the Romans admitted it to Kings, (ſo ſaith Jerom in Iſai. 61. it is inſigne regii decoris,&c.) great men in triumphs, and ſacrifices, and funerals: ſo that although they did this in deriſion of Chriſts kingdom, yet it did, as it were proclaim him a king, and a ſacrificer, by his death triumphant. See Iſac. Caſaubon Exerc. 16. N. 79.

I finde no fault in him] See Chap. 18. 38.

v. 5. wearing the crown of thorns] So bare he and took away that curſe of the earth, Gen. 3. 18. this may have an alluſion to that ſacrifice taken by the head in the thorns, which Abraham found upon the ſame mountain, whereon Chriſt began his paſſion. See Gene. 22. 2. 2 Chron. 3. 1. & Clem. Alexand. Pæd. l. 2. c. 8.

behold the man] Behold what a king you are afraid of: or this he ſaid to move them to compaſſion.

v. 6. they cryed out ſaying, crucifie him, &c.] ἐκραύγασαν: it importeth, an importunate confuſed, vociferation or yaling out; ſuch as troubled crows make when they cry altogether: ſo Euſtat. κράζειν and κρώζειν, is ſaid de cornicibus & corvis. So Clem. Alexandr. adm. ad Gent. uſeth the word, οὐ κρώζοντα, οὐ κλάζοντα, &c. They who could alledge nothing againſt Chriſt, cry him to death with noiſe of multitudes, by ſo much more violently reaſonleſſe, by how much more reaſon the Judge alleadged to appeaſe them. So cryed the multitude againſt Paul, Acts 22. 22. So cryed the Epheſians for their Diana, Acts 19. 28. So the Heathens were wont to cry in any publick calamity, Chriſtianos ad leonem, caſt the Chriſtians to the lyon. Tertul. adv. Gent. cap. 40.

take ye him and crucifie him] This expreſſeth Pilats indignation at their clamorous proceedings, as Chryſoſtome noteth: he permitted him not to their power to kill, which the Romans gave them not: but in effect denied to be a ſervant to their unjuſt paſſion; which the following words ſeem to intimate.

v. 7. We have a law] By their law a blaſphemer ought to be ſtoned to death, Levit. 24. 16. which might juſtly have taken hold on themſelves, it could not on Chriſt; for he is indeed the Son of God: but here appeareth the daring impiety of the wicked, wreſting laws to their own luſts, thereby to take away the righteouſneſſe of the moſt innocent, and to condemne even CHRIST himſelfe.

v. 8. he was more afraid] Hitherto the Innocency of Jeſus made him fear to condemn him, though ſo many confuſed outcries ſounded in his ears; ſometimes the Law, ſometimes neceſſity of ſtate, and Ceſars right was pretended: yet fluctuant between theſe, and his own fear, his conſcience told him that Jeſus was innocent: and now a ſharper ſcruple toucheth him, leſt he ſhould condemn one more then man, and that prove true which they objected againſt him for a crime, that he was indeed the Son of God.

v. 9. Whence art thou?] Of what parents? the Jews laſt article, and Jeſus own former ſpeech, Chap. 18. 36, 37. that his kingdom was not of this world, encreaſe his jealous fear: Jeſus knowing that Pilat would at laſt comply with the Jews fury, and being now to die, not for himſelf, but for us, anſwered not to this, as they who plead to be delivered.

v. 10. Knoweſt thou not that I have power,&c.] By this, Pilate condemned himſelf, when confeſſing that he had power to releaſe him, he would yet without any fault crucifie him to ingratiate with the Jews: mala poteſtas licere quod noceat, Ambroſ. in Pſal. 118. ſerm. 20. it is an evil power to be able to do miſchief.

v. 11. except it were given thee from above] Except God gave it thee (as Chap. 3. 27. 31.) or permitted it to thee.

hath the greater ſin] Greater ſin then thine, the Syriack hath it, as comparing Pilates ſin in condemning Chriſt for fear, with the high prieſts ſin, delivering him up to Pilate for malice: or he taxeth the Jews in that they ſinned againſt God, for whom Judges muſt judge, and whoſe office it is to defend the innocent: and againſt Pilate, whoſe authority their importunity abuſed and miſled; and againſt Holy JESUS the Lord of life whom for envie they delivered.

v. 12. Whoſoever maketh himſelf a king] That is pretendeth to be a king.

v. 13. the pavement] Λιθόστρωτος, a kinde of rich pavement of ſtones artificially wrought and joyned together. See Plin. lib. 36. 25. cap. Ezek. 40. 17. and 42. 3. it is called רצפה ritſpa, of רצף ſtratus lapidibus, Syr. רציפתא דכאפא rotyiphtho decipha, a pavement of ſtone: but in Hebrew it is here called * Gabbatha, [Chaldaa forma eſt vox, ſignificat autem altum & editum &c. Vetabl.*] of גבא gabah, which ſignifieth, to be raiſed up, or made high: the word here uſed by the Greek λιθόστρωτον, is compound of λίθος, a ſtone, and στρώννυμι, to ſtrew or pave, and importeth a place raiſed (as Tribunals uſed to be, that the Judges might with convenience ſee and hear, and be ſeen and heard) and curiouſly paved with ſtone. See C. Rodigin. Lect ant. lib. 17. cap. 9. the Evangeliſt here uſeth the word γαββαθᾶ, made of the Hebrew.

v. 14. It was the preparation] παρασκευὴ τοῦ πάσχα, a day wherein they prepared themſelves, and thoſe things which were neceſſary to that ſolemnity: or a paraſceve of the Paſſeover; one day of the feaſt, which Mark 15. 22. is plainly ſaid, to be the προσάββατον, the day before the Sabbath. See alſo verſe 31.

about the ſixth hour] That is, about noon.

behold your king] This he ſpeaketh in ſcorn.

v. 15. We have no king but Caſar] They acknowledge that the ſceptre was now departed from Judah, and therefore had not malice blinded them, they would have underſtood that mark of the Meſſias coming at that very time. See Geneſ. 49. 10.

v. 16. then delivered, &c.] Matth. 27. 31. Mark. 15. 1.

v. 17. and he bearing the croſſe] Which they had prepared to crucifie him on. Crucifying and bearing the croſſe, was a capital puniſhment, and putting to death after the Roman manner: they made him bear it till they found Simon of Cyrene, whom they compelled to carry it for him. Luke 23. 26. See note thereon.

Golgotha] The place where they executed malefactors, on the North ſide of the mount Sion, Hieronym. de locis Hebraicis. Euſeb.

v. 18. two other with him] According to the prophecie, Iſaiah 53. 12. he was counted with the tranſgreſſours.

v. 19. And Pilate wrote a title] Chriſt upon his croſſe is entituled king, by his hand whoſe mouth condemned him for aſpiring to a kingdom. See Matth. 27. 37. Mark 15. 26. Luke 23. 38.

v. 20. Hebrew, Greek, and Latine] Gods providence ſo diſpoſing it, that many might read it; for unto theſe feaſts at Jeruſalem came men of ſeveral nations. See Acts 2. 5. it was the faſhion of the Ancients to ſignifie to the publick, the cauſe of any delinquents ſufferings, either by the voice of a cryer, or by ſetting it up written in Capital letters. See Spartian. in Severo. Lamprid. Alexand. Sueton. Caio.

v. 21. Write not the king of the Jews] They were afraid, that this would be too much honour to Chriſt, and ignominy to themſelves among the nations, when they ſhould hear that they had crucified their king; therefore they deſire that the title might be ſo altered, that Chriſt might thereby ſeem condemned for his ambition, not their importunate malice.

v. 22. What I have written, &c.] That is, I will not change it; for ſo it ſeemeth their cuſtom was: the publick tables containing the decrees of their Proconſuls, once publiſhed, might not be reverſed. See Apulei Florid. lib. 1. ſub fine.

v. 25. Cleopas] Or Clopas.

v. 26. whom he loved] John, who wrote this Goſpel, Chap. 21. 24.

Woman behold thy ſon] Meaning, I commend thee to his care and charge, that he may keep thee in thine age: a ſingular pattern of piety, amidſt ſuch torments to be carefull of his dear mother.

v. 27. unto his own home] εἰς τὰ ἴδια, as Chap. 1. 11. Syr. interpret. apud ſe. Epiphanius hæreſ. 78. 10. giveth it, πρὸς ἑαυτὸν, unto himſelf, to his houſe care and cuſtody.

v. 28. that all things were now accompliſhed] That all things were thus far forth accompliſhed in the great work of our redemption.

that the Scripture might be fulfilled] Pſal. 69. 21.

v. 29. a veſſel full of, &c.] They were wont to give thoſe who were to be executed, vinegar, or ſharp wine mingled with myrrhe (Mark 15. 23.) ſome ſay to ſtupifie them; it may be to keep thoſe from fainting, whom they would longer torment: the ſouldiers gave it him inſtead of drink, out of barbarous inhumanity, and impiety mocking him.

put it upon hyſop] Not that hyſop grew in thoſe parts ſo high, as to be uſed in place of a reed, as ſome think; (See Iſ. Caſaubon. exercit. 16. N. 126.) See 1 Kings 4. 33. where it is reckned among the ſmall plants: probably they bound hyſſop to the reed or cane (mentioned Matth. 27. 48.) and and put the ſpunge filled with vineger on the top of the ſame, that they might reach it to his mouth; as that which (as ſome Phyſicians affirm) being uſed with vineger would keep from fainting: poſſibly for ſome ſuch end they made their Hyſſopites, Plin. lib. 14. cap. 16. hyſſop wine. See Plin. 21. cap. 1. ſub fine. Dioſcor. lib. 5. cap. 50. Numb. 19. 18. becauſe this ſprinkling with an hyſſop bunch, was the laſt act in their ceremony of cleanſing. David for a ſigne of his ſins remiſſion, prayeth, Pſal. 51. 9. cleanſe me with hyſſop, οὐ δύναμιν ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτημάτων εἰργάζετο; αἴνιγμα δέ τι σημαίνει, ſaith Suidas, hyſſop could not work any remiſſion of ſins, it ſignified a riddle or myſtery: certainly neither could the blood of bulls or goats herewith ſprinkled, take away ſin; but that onely which was hereby ſignified, the ſacred blood of Chriſt. The Apoſtle expreſſeth the ceremony, Heb. 9. 19. 20. Moſes took the blood of calves and goats, with water and ſkarlet wool, and hyſſop, and ſprinkled both the book, and all the people, ſaying, this is τὸ αἷμα τῆς διαθήκης, the blood of the teſtament which God hath enjoyned unto you: now the law had but a ſhadow of good things to come, Heb. 10. 1. Suidas therefore ſaith well, τύποι δὲ ἐκεῖνα τῶν σωτηρίων παθημάτων: theſe were types of (Chriſts) ſaving paſſions. Chriſt therefore ſaid, in the inſtitution of the ſeal of the new covenant, this cup is, ἡ καινὴ διαθήκη ἐν τῷ αἵματί μου, the new teſtament in my blood, now preſently to be ſhed, the old Teſtament ſignifying the ſame, was that before mentioned, Heb. 9. 19. 20. what ever the ſouldiers intended in this act of theirs, of binding the hyſſop, or ſhedding Chriſts blood, Gods providence diſpoſed it all ſo, that we may herein learne that comfortable doctrine concerning the cleanſing of our ſins, typified under the Law, but performed in the blood and paſſion of Chriſt.

v. 30. it is finiſhed] That is mans redemption; and all the ceremonies of the Law, are fulfilled and ended in the exhibition of that truth which they prefigured: he ſpeaketh here of that which preſently ſhould be; and in the yielding up his ghoſt was accompliſhed. See Chap. 17. 4.

v. 31. for that Sabbath was an high day] Μεγάλη ἡ ἡμέρα, a great day, that is, a very ſolemn day, in reſpect of the concurrence of a double celebrity: the Sabbath, and a day of this feaſt of Paſſeover: (See Numb. 28. 17, 18. So here Chap. 7. 37. the laſt day of the feaſt is ſaid to be, that great day of the feaſt) ſo that they might not take him down theron.

v. 32. break the legs of the firſt] The ſouldiers which crucified them, came and broke their legs to diſpatch them, after they had obtained it of Pilate, verſe 31. that they might not remain upon the croſſe on the Sabbath; therefore when they ſaw Jeſus dead already, they ſaved that needleſſe labour: this did Gods providence diſpoſe ſo, becauſe he was ſhortly to riſe again: for though he could as eaſily have made his bones whole, as cure his heart-wound, and riſe again from the dead; yet other concurrent difficulties hindring the faith of infirme men, he would not have this added thereto.

v. 34. there came out blood and water] They pierced his ſide, to prove if he were indeed dead, or otherwiſe to make him ſure; this water and blood forthwith iſſuing out ſhewed that he was truly dead, the pericardium which keepeth that water about the heart, being pierced: thus was fulfilled that which was foretold, Zach. 12. 10. and they ſhall look upon me whom they have pierced, as verſe 37. thus came Jeſus by water and blood, 1 John 5. 6. thus was there a fountain opened to the houſe of David, and the inhabitants of Jeruſalem (even to all the elect) for ſin and for uncleanneſſe, Zach. 13. 1. this was done that the enemies might not object, that he roſe again, becauſe he was but half dead on the croſſe, and ſo taken down revived: to teſtifie the contrary truth, John ſo ſeriouſly affirmeth (verſe 35.) the certainty of his death, his heart blood ſtreaming out, which he ſaw that ſtood by the croſſe.

v. 35. He knoweth that he ſaith true] He knoweth exactly, and certainly, who was ſo neer an eye witneſſe.

that ye might believe] That is, that Jeſus was truly dead, his heart being thus pierced.

v. 36. that the Scripture might be fulfilled] Exod. 12. 46. Numb. 9. 12. Pſal. 34. 20. that thoſe types might be accompliſhed in Chriſt the truth which they prefigured. So it appeareth that Chriſt our Paſſeover is offered, 1 Cor. 5. 7. and that he is that onely Lamb of God which taketh away the ſin of the world, Chap. 1. 29. and that which was here done fell not out by chance or the counſell of man, but by Gods all diſpoſing providence, working by the impious murderers of Chriſt, that which his own hand and counſel had preordained, as Acts 4. 28.

v. 37. they ſhall look on him, &c.] Zach. 12. 10.

v. 38. after this Joſeph, &c.] See on Matth. 27. 57. and on Luke 23. 50, 51.

but ſecretly] Before Chriſts death, ſecretly; but now he declared himſelf to be one of Chriſts diſciples.

for fear of the Jews] Who had determinated to excommunicate any that confeſſed Jeſus to be the Chriſt. Chap. 9. 22.

v. 39. Nicodemus which at firſt, &c.] Chap. 3. 1, 2.

v. 40. in linnen clothes, &c.] Becauſe they had not time then to embalm him, the Sabbath being ſo neer. This was done by Gods providence, that theſe men ſhould give Chriſt an honourable burial, that it might be more remarkable; which would not probably have been ſo, if ſome poor or obſcure perſons had performed this office: and had his own Apoſtles, or any of them been ſo daring as to have done it, the adverſaries would poſſibly have ſaid, that they had conveyed him away, and not indeed buried him: but this objection was taken away, and the Jews were herein convicted by the teſtimony of ſome of their own, and thoſe honourable perſons.

v. 41. was a garden] In a garden the firſt Adam fell, in a garden the ſecond Adam was buried, and roſe again; as we fell in Adam, we ſhall riſe in Chriſt. See Iſ. Caſaub. exercit. 16. N. 134. 98.

wherein was never man yet laid] Gods providence ſo ordaining it; leſt any caviller ſhould ſay, that it was ſome other body, not Chriſt which roſe again: or that he roſe again by ſome others vertue, not his own, as 2 Kings 13. 21. in alienâ ſepultura ponitur, qui pro aliorum moriebatur ſalute, Auguſtine de temp. ſerm. 133. he was layed in another mans ſepulchre, who died for others ſins, not his own.

v. 42. the Jews preparation day] Verſe 14. John ſpeaketh here, as of a thing already antiquated and aboliſhed: for the Lords day, our Sabbath, was obſerved by the Chriſtians when he wrote this goſpel. The Jews preparation, was our Fryday, and their Sabbath our Saturday, and the Lords day, which we obſerve from the reſurrection of Chriſt, their firſt day of the week, Chap. 20. 1. Luke 24. 1. Mark 16. 1, 2. Matth. 28. 1. 1 Cor. 16. 2. Rev. 1. 10.

and ſeeth the ſtone taken away] For the Angel deſcended, and rolled it back. Matth. 28. 2.

v. 2. other diſciple whom Jeſus loved] Chap. 13. 23. and 21. 20.

v. 4. the other diſciple did outrun Peter] Both made haſt to know what the matter was (ὐδὲ γὰρ δέχεται τὴν ἀναβολὴν ὁ ζῆλος Nazianzen orat. 18. zeal (and love) brook no delay) but with unequall ſtrength: John being young, and ſo of better agility, came firſt to the ſepulchre: See on Luke 24. 12.

v. 5. and he ſtooping down] παρακύψας, the word is of that which ſignifieth to hold down the head to ſee, or look into. James 1. 25. who ſo παρακύψας looketh into that perfect law, &c. the door of this ſepulchre was low, and the vault of ſuch depth digged into the rock (in manner of a cave) Matth. 27. 60. that without ſtooping down they could not ſee into it. it may have this morall; the myſtery of our ſalvation accompliſhed in the death, buriall and reſurrection of our Saviour, can be looked into by none but thoſe who ſtoop to ſee: they admit no eyes of the proud to view them.

v. 6. Then cometh Simon] See on Luk. 24. 12.

v. 7. the napkin that was &c.] See Luke 24. 12. It was now light enough to ſee the white clothes there lying.

v. 8. and believed] That Chriſts body was taken away according to Maries report: for as yet they knew not the ſcripture, that he muſt riſe again from the dead. verſ. 9.

v. 10. went away again] They made haſt away, while yet but few were ſtirring about, for fear of the implacable malice of the Jews.

to their own home] Where they before were, and from whence they ran to the ſepulchre: finding there nothing certainly appearing to their ſenſe, but onely their miſſing of the body of Jeſus, which poſſibly they might think was ſtolen away. See verſe 13. they returned to the reſt of the diſciples, wondring with themſelves how theſe things could ſo be, and what would be the iſſue. Luke 24. 12. relating to the reſt, that Jeſus body was not in the ſepulchre where it was laid. Luke 24. 24. and ſilently expecting the event.

v. 11. But Mary ſtood without &c.] Peter and John made haſt away, leſt notice ſhould have been taken of them, as Chriſts diſciples; and here the weaker ſex ſheweth more ſtrength of reſolution.

weeping] Not yet underſtanding the myſtery of Chriſts reſurrection, ſhe venteth her grief with tears.

ſhe ſtooped down] See on verſe 5.

v. 12. ſeeth two Angels] Whether ſhe knew them to be Angels, or ſuppoſed them to be men, it is not here expreſſed: in white clothes, or garments.

the one at the head &c.] That is, at that part of the ſepulchre where the head of Jeſus was laid when they buried him.

v. 13. Woman, why weepeſt thou?] That is, weep not: it is not now a time to weep, but to rejoyce: they ſaid more unto her, which the other Evangeliſts mention; but this, omitteth: this is a ſpeech mixed of reproof and comfort.

ſhe ſaith unto them] Surcharged with ſorrow ſhe conſidereth neither who theſe glorious creatures were, nor much what they ſaid to her, but mindeth onely the occaſion of her own preſent ſorrow.

they have taken away my Lord] Friends, or enemies, I know not whether, have conveyed away the body of my dear Lord Jeſus, here buried: ſo, too much paſſion maketh one for preſent uncapable of reproof or comfort.

v. 14. and ſaw Jeſus ſtanding] hearing ſome behinde her, or perceiving by the Angels geſture, or countenances, ſome other preſent, ſhe looked back.

knew not that it was Jeſus] She ſaw, but knew not him ſhe ſought. See Luke 24. 16. Mark 16. 12. Matth. 28. 17. probably, he would not ſodainly be known to her, leſt now riſing from the dead, he might have affrighted her: but this, her ſlowneſſe to beleeve (being before inſtructed concerning his death and reſurrection, and now again by the Angels) juſtly deſerved: yet ſee the mercy of Chriſt; ſhe firſt found him, who moſt affectionately ſought him.

v. 15. Jeſus ſaid unto her] He well knew why ſhe wept, for whom ſhe wept, but thus he takes occaſion to manifeſt himſelf to her.

Sir, if thou haſt born him hence &c.] Probably ſhe might ſuppoſe that he had overheard, what ſhe anſwered the Angels, therefore ſhe replyeth as preſuppoſing it: if thou haſt born him hence; yet ſhe did not aſpire to the thought of Chriſts divine power to raiſe him from the dead: ſo hard is it to ſhake off the deluding dreams of fleſh and blood.

v. 16. Mary] In this familiar and uſuall compellation, ſhe underſtood that it was Jeſus which ſpake to her.

Rabboni] Sodain joy intercepted what ſhe might more deſire to ſay: this hath the force of an interrogation; is it my Maſter! my Lord Chriſt? See on chap. 1. 38.

v. 17. touch me not] She being too much addicted to ſenſe, Chriſt would teach her to lift up her minde to the conſideration of his ſtate of glory in heaven, where we muſt finde him now with the eye of faith, not bodily ſenſes. 2 Cor. 5. 16. according as Auguſtine ſaith to Paulinus. ep. 59. he would intimate, tactum ſpiritualem, i. e. acceſſum fidei, ſe requirere: that he now requireth a ſpirituall touching; that is, that we come to him with faith, whereby we beleeve him to be on high with the Father: and he would now ſhew her, that ſhe muſt attend another office, which was to teſtifie his reſurrection from the dead: as if he had ſaid, thou needſt not make ſo much haſte to touch my feet; I am not yet aſcended, neither ſhall I ſo quickly, but that thou mayeſt be aſſured, by ſeeing, hearing, and touching me, that it is I who now am indeed riſen from the dead; the pledge and aſſurance of your life and reſurrection.

my brethren] The diſciples.

my Father, and your Father] Mine by nature, yours by adoption. Cyril. Hieroſ. Catec. 7. and 11.

v. 18. Magdalene came and told &c.] This Evangeliſt recordeth not how Jeſus appeared to her with the other women as they were going to tell theſe things to the diſciples, which Matth. 28. 9. is recited.

v. 19. Then the ſame day] Mark 16. 14. Luke 24. 36.

when the doors were ſhut] Shut (either becauſe it was night, or for fear of the Jews) but he could make them open to himſelf, as he afterward did for Peter. Acts 12. 10.

Peace be unto you] This was an Hebrew manner of ſalutation; who by peace, meant all proſperity. See on Matth. 28. 16.

v. 20. He ſhewed unto them his hands &c.] Which were pierced with nails faſtning him to the croſſe: thus confirms he them by all means, that they might be aſſured, that it was he who was indeed riſen from the dead; leſt otherwiſe they might have thought it had been but ſome apparition, or ſome other body, and not he. See on Luke 24. 40.

v. 21. As my Father hath ſent me] He gave them a miſſion, and charge before, but as preachers to warn the Jews to hear Chriſt: but now he ſendeth them as Apoſtles, and ambaſſadours into the other nations: committing that miniſtery to their execution, which himſelf had performed in teaching: he appointeth them and their ſucceſſours his ſurrogates in his abſence. See Epheſ. 4. 11. and that their authority to preach, might be underſtood to be Gods own ordinance, he telleth them, that as his Father ſent him, ſo he ſendeth them to preach to all nations in his Name. See Chap. 6. 38. Mark 16. 15. Matth. 28. 19. Chriſt ſpeaketh the ſame truth by the Apoſtles and miniſters of the goſpel, which his ſelf preached when he was converſant with men on earth.

v. 22. he breathed on them] By this ſigne prefiguring what they ſhould receive; to wit, the gifts and graces of the holy Spirit, proceeding from the Father and the Son.

v. 23. Whoſe ſoever ſins ye remit] Matth. 18. 18. this power is equally given to all the diſciples, and their ſucceſſours reſpectively; firſt in reſpect of the doctrine of faith, and repentance, as the key of heaven committed to their miniſtery, which (according as it is received and obeyed) bindeth or looſeth; if we believe and repent here on earth, God forgiveth in heaven; and it is the miniſters office to preach the ſame in general, and to apply it particularly, for the comfort and inſtruction of the truly penitent. Secondly, in reſpect of the power of excommunication and abſolution, which is in diſcipline, that the ſpirit may be ſaved in the day of the Lord, 1 Cor. 5. 5.

v. 24. called Didymus] See on Chap. 11. 16.

was not with them] Probably he was not yet returned (after they had been diſperſed for fear) to the company of the Apoſtles.

v. 25. I will not believe] So dangerous is it to be once abſent from holy aſſemblies where Chriſt will be preſent (Mat. 18. 20.) to indulge to our own ſence, to meaſure things divine and ſpiritual by our own carnal reaſon, and to give our ſelves laws of believing.

v. 26. his diſciples were within] Within the houſe where they remained, verſe 19.

Jeſus came, &c.] On the eighth day after his reſurrection; that is, the next Lords day. Where Jeſus was in the mean time, the Scriptures being ſilent, we may not curiouſly enquire: more ſafely note that Thomas being then with them, it appeareth that neither did he in unbelief ſeparate from the Church repreſentative, nor did they deſert him, or abſtain from communion with him, for ſo great an infirmity as was expreſſed in his profeſſed unbelief: therefore Jeſus came to them who hath promiſed the bleſſing to the unanimous. Pſal. 133.

v. 27. reach hither thy finger] Chriſt made ſuch uſe of Thomas preſent unbelief, that he thereby left the truth of his reſurrection, more certain and undoubted unto us: mark the admirable clemency of Chriſt, for one ſouls ſake, he would appear again, and ſhew his wounds to all the reſt.

v. 28. my Lord, and my God] Here Thomas confeſſeth his faith (which Chriſt approveth, verſe 29.) veram in illis cicatricibus patientis ac reſurgentis virtutem divinitatis agnoſcens. Fulgent. de incarn. & Gra. D. Jeſu &c. c. 11. acknowledging in thoſe wounds of him that ſuffered and roſe again, the true power of the deity; without which he could not have riſen again. Thus Thomas ſpake, as one comming to himſelf again: and this abrupt ſpeech importeth a vehement admiration, at Chriſts mercy, and his own ſtupidity and dulneſſe to beleeve: it containeth a ſhort, but abſolute confeſſion of faith; he collecting from his reſurrection, that Chriſt was the very Meſſias, Redeemer, and Lord of all (See Rom. 1. 4.) and with an explicit faith, profeſſing his own intereſt therein: So far did his faith now excell ſenſe, on which he before ſo much depended, that he who felt onely the manhood, beleeved and confeſſed the united deity of Chriſt: ſo ſoon can God change pertinatious unbelief into ſaving faith. See Acts 9. 2. Gal. 1. 23, 24. Thomas twice emphatically repeateth, my, to declare that he now ſpake out of deep and ſerious ſenſe of faith. So God permitteth his to infirmity, and ſome ſlips; as that in their recovery, themſelves and others, are more confirmed. See on verſe 27. plus enim nobis Thomæ infidelitas, ad fidem, quam fides credentium diſcipulorum profuit, &c. Greg. hom. 26. in Evang. for Thomas his doubting more advantageth our faith, then the faith of the beleeving diſciples: if Thomas had not doubted, we had not been ſo aſſured that it was indeed the ſame Chriſt, who was crucified, dead and buried, and riſen again; his doubting, put that out of doubt.

v. 29. they that have not ſeen] Which ſhall hereafter beleeve through the preaching of the Goſpel, though they ſee me not in the fleſh, or theſe wounds now ſhewed thee.

v. 30. many other ſignes] Chap. 21. 25. He did theſe in the preſence of his diſciples to confirm them; after his reſurrection, we read not, that he ever appeared to the wicked.

which are not written in this book] As being ſufficiently recorded by the other Evangeliſts: or foraſmuch as God knew that to be ſufficient which is written. See 2 Tim. 3. 15.

v. 31. But theſe things are written] Theſe things which Jeſus taught and did: as a father (ſaith Optatus l. 5.) having many children, while he liveth, and is preſent with them, governeth them his ſelf, and needeth no will and teſtament; but drawing towards his end, fearing leſt after his deceaſe, his children may fall out, he calleth witneſſes, voluntatem ſuam de pectore morituro transfert in tabulas diu duraturas; out of his dying breſt he tranſlateth his will, on long-laſting tables, if any controverſie happen, non itur ad tumulum, ſed quæritur teſtamentum: & qui in tumulo quieſcit, tacitis de tabulis loquitur vivus: they run not to the grave (of the dead) but ſeek the will and teſtament; and ſo he that reſteth in the grave, in thoſe ſilent tables ſpeaks his minde, as if he were alive: he who made his will is in heaven; yet thus, his children conſult with him: So Chriſt being bodily preſent with his Church, did teach and govern them; but at laſt ordered that his will and teſtament ſhould be written, for a conſtant rule of faith and manners, to all his children on earth, untill his coming again to judge.

that ye may beleeve] For, faith in Chriſt, and our ſalvation thereby, as it was the onely ſcope and end of Chriſts doing of miracles, ſo was it of the Evangeliſts recording the ſame.

CHAP. XXI.

Verſe 1. S*Ea of Tiberias*] The ſea of Galilee (John 6. 1.) from that adjacent province, or city of that name near to it: of old it was named כנרת Chinnereth. Numb. 34. 11. Deut. 3. 17. Jud. l.* 3. c. 18. calleth it Geneſar. Plini. l. 5. c. 15. this lake Geneſar is ſixteen miles long, and ſix miles broad; beſet with pleaſant towns: on the weſt thereof ſtood Tiberias; it abounded with divers ſorts of fiſhes: the river Jordan runneth through it. Adricom. q. ſ. the Apoſtles, according to the command of Chriſt, and the admonition of the Angels, after his reſurrection, the dayes of unleavened bread being ended, leaving Jeruſalem, went to Galilee. See Matth. 26. 7. Matth. 26. 32.

on this wiſe ſhewed he] He ſetteth down the time, place, perſons, occaſion and manner of Chriſts appearing to them, to ſhew the evidence and certainty of his reſurrection.

v. 2. Nathaniel of Cana] See chap. 1. 49. Some think this was he who is called alſo Βαρθολομαῖος Bartholmew, the ſon of Tholomeus, of בר bar, a ſon, and תלמי thalmai. Numb. 13. 23. Jud. 1. 10. 70. Θαλμαΐ.

v. 3. I go a fiſhing] For though they were made fiſhers of men, they were not yet ſent out, neither had they received thoſe viſible gifts of the holy Ghoſt, which were to furniſh them out to that great work of preaching the Goſpel to all nations: moreover, they wrought in their callings, to ſupply their preſent neceſſities, as Paul alſo ſometimes did. 2 Theſ. 3. 8. See Luke 24. 49.

that night they caught nothing] Thus the providence of God diſpoſed it, for the more clear evidence of the enſuing miracle: had they caught any thing, the power and preſence of Chriſt had not ſo clearly appeared, in this ſodain ſucceſſe: all labour and endeavour of man is vain, unleſſe God bleſſe it with ſucceſſe. Pſal. 127. 1. See Gen 11. 78. Hag. 1. 6. 9. &c. Deut. 28. 13. &c. God often exerciſeth the patience of his: ſhould all our labours ſucceed well, how few would beg Gods aſſiſtance? how ſeldome would men acknowledge his bleſſings?

v. 4. When the morning was now come] He expected untill theſe diſciples (weary with ſucceſſeleſſe labour, and out of hope to get any thing) would leave work.

but the diſciples knew not &c.] Either becauſe it was not yet clear day, or becauſe of the diſtance, they being ſo far from ſhore; but ſpecially becauſe Jeſus would firſt be known by the miracle; and then by his countenance.

v. 5. children have ye] Or, Sirs.

have ye any meat?] Have ye taken any thing? have ye any thing to eat? as the Syriac hath it: he aſketh as one who came to buy; but his purpoſe was in his eating, to teſtifie his reſurrection from the dead.

v. 6. caſt the net on the right ſide] Thus he counſelleth them, as ſome ordinary perſon: the right ſide of the ſhip is that which is on the right hand of him that ſitteth at the helme, which the ſea-men call the ſtarboard ſide: he aſſigneth one certain part of the ſhip, ne fortuita videretur captura, Euthymius: leſt it ſhould (rather) ſeem that they had taken ſuch a draught by chance, then divine providence.

v. 7. it is the Lord] It is Chriſt who hath thus admirably bleſſed our labours in this draught of fiſhes.

girt his fiſhers coat unto him] Some cloſe linen coat, which hindred not his ſwimming.

for he was naked] Before he put on this, he had none other clothes on: this he girded cloſe, to hide his nakedneſſe, and that it might not be an hindrance to him in the water: this ſheweth with what diligence they had laboured without ſucceſſe, untill Chriſt came to them.

caſt himſelf into the ſea] He leapt over-board to ſwim a ſhore, that he might come to Jeſus (which the Syriac addeth) impatient of the delay, which the ſhip muſt neceſſarily make, being to bring ſuch a draught to ſhore: ſerum æſtimans ſi cum cæteris navigio perveniret. Ambroſ. in Luc. ſub. fini. eſteeming it too late to come with the reſt in the ſhip: he valued no gains, but to come to Chriſt.

v. 8. dragging the net with fiſhes] σύρει, is properly to ſweep the ground, as they do who fiſh with trailes, or draught-nets, whoſe plummets ſink the lower part of the net to the ground, leſt the encloſed fiſh ſhould eſcape.

v. 9. they ſaw a fire of coals there &c.] It ſeemeth while they were labouring in an ordinary calling, that Jeſus (ever mindfull of his) prepareth food for them by an extraordinary way, againſt they came aſhore, weary and hungry, ſo that they finde there all neceſſaries ready: nor need we doubt who provided, or how; he being preſent, who prepared Iſrael a table in the wilderneſs, who fed ſo many thouſands with five loaves and two fiſhes: all creatures obey him; he gave them here an example of his divine providence, which never faileth thoſe that truſt in him. See Exod. 34. 28. 1 King. 19. 8. Hebr. 13. 5.

v. 10. bring of the fiſh &c.] That they might not neglect his bleſſing, and loſe that which he gave them, nor think that it was a viſion: he biddeth them bring of the fiſh which they had now caught; it was his bleſſing, and their labour: his beneficence, and their propriety: ſo we ſay our daily bread, yet pray God to give it: that is ours, in which

v. 11. Simon Peter went] Not he alone, but hee with the reſt: he chiefly is named, (who in zeal to enjoy the preſence of Chriſt, waved the uſuall means of coming to him) and is now inſtructed to uſe the ordinary means to receive, and ſave Gods bleſſings, beſtowed on him. Chriſt would not diſtract us from, but bleſſe us in our lawfull callings, that we may therein acknowledge his mercifull providence. See 1 Tim. 4. 4.

v. 12, Come and dine] Not that he now wanted food, but this was to aſſure them of the truth of his manhood then preſent, that they might not think it to be only a dream or phantaſme.

knowing that it was the Lord] He ſo evidently manifeſted himſelf to them, that they durſt not queſtion the certainty of his reſurrection and preſence with them.

v. 13. taketh bread] They knew him in the manner of his breaking of bread. See Luke 24. 35.

v. 14. this is now the third time] That is, the third time that he appeared to his Diſciples together, for otherwiſe he had more often appeared to ſome ſingly. chap. 20. 16. Luke 24. 15.

v. 15. loveſt thou me more then theſe] more then thou loveſt theſe; or more then theſe love me: one reaſon of this quære might be; for that Peter leaping into the Sea to come to him before the reſt, might ſeem to intimate ſo much: but the main is, becauſe Chriſt had remitted a great ſin of his. See Luke 7. 47.

feed my lambs] That is, the ſouls committed to thy charge; for this is a ſure argument of the Miniſters love to Chriſt, if he conſcionably labour to edifie thoſe whom Chriſt (the great ſhepheard of our ſouls) loveth, and for whom he dyed, they love the world, not Chriſt, who ſeek their own gains, but neglect their auditours ſalvations.

v. 16. feed my ſheep] The repetition of the ſame charge, ſheweth the importance thereof; and the neceſſity of our endeavour in this duty, which Chriſt ſo often, and ſo ſeriouſly enjoyned.

v. 17. he ſaid unto him the third time] This often repetition of the charge doth not only occaſion Peters threefold confeſſion, oppoſed to his thrice denying; but chiefly declareth to the other Apoſtles, that Peter was not to be rejected from their fellowſhip, office, and communion, for his threefold fall; being graciouſly received again by Chriſt, in his threefold confeſſion of his love and obedience to him: and thus is waſhed off his former ſin, confirming him to his Apoſtleſhip and preaching the Goſpel.

Peter was grieved, becauſe, &c.] Remembring how he had fallen, and fearing leſt he ſhould ſo fall again as he had done when he promiſed great conſtancy; or doubting that Chriſt (to whom he was better known then to himſelf) taxed him of diſſembling: we grieve to have our fidelity queſtioned. Peter had been more cautious at firſt, had he well obſerved Chriſts words, Matth. 26. 34. but he had not then ſo much experience of himſelf, as now: now he cautiouſly appealeth to Chriſts omniſcience; he preſumeth no more; moſt dangerouſly they fall, who moſt preſume.

Lord, thou knoweſt all things] τὰ παρόντα ϗ τὰ μέλλοντα Chryſoſt; all things preſent and future: what I now am, and what I ſhall be: thus modeſtly anſwereth he now, having had dear experience of his infirmity and failing.

v. 18. girdeſt thy ſelf] This he ſpake, alluding to the manner of thoſe Eaſtern countries, where wearing long looſe garments, they could at their pleaſure, gird them to their bodies, to prepare themſelves for labour or travell; and withall, in the next words, to the binding of Peter, as a priſoner for execution.

whither thou wouldſt not] τὸ φύσεως λέγει τὸ συμπαθὲς, ϗ τὸ σαρκὸς τὴν ἀνάγκην, &c. Chryſ. he ſpeaks the affection of nature, and neceſſity of fleſh and blood; intimating that the ſoul unwillingly parteth from the body, how ever willing, by the comfort of the grace of regeneration, we are in Spirit.

v. 19. he ſhould glorifie, God] This he ſaid that we may know, that to ſuffer for Chriſts ſake is δόξα τοῦ πάσχοντος ϗ τιμή, the glory and honour of the ſufferer; in that he honoureth God in ſuffering, which is the end for which we were created and redeemed. See 1 Cor. 6. 20. Reve. 4. 11. and thoſe who honour God, will he aſſuredly honour. 1 Sam. 2. 30.

v. 20. Whom Jeſus loved] Chap. 13. 23. and 20. 2.

v. 21. What ſhall this man do?] That is, ſhall he not alſo feed thy ſheep? ſhall he be divided from me? or how ſhall he die?

v. 22. What is that to thee] He ſlighteth this curious unprofitable queſtion of Peter: admoniſhing him not to trouble himſelf about others, but to look to himſelf: if I would have him live unto my ſecond coming; what concerneth it thee? follow thou me in that I command thee.

v. 23. then went this ſaying abroad] The Evangeliſt here correcteth this errour riſing from the miſunderſtanding Chriſts words concerning himſelf; leſt when he died the malicious adverſary ſhould hence take occaſion to aſperſe the truth of Chriſt, whom the very diſciples underſtood not, but miſtook in that matter: man is naturally prone to miſtake: the more to be admired, is their over daring ignorance of themſelves, who think they cannot erre: ſo high an opinion of a mans ſelf concludeth him, neither good, nor wiſe.

v. 24. This is the diſciple which teſtifieth] Hitherto he mentioned himſelf under a third perſon: now he declareth himſelf, an ear-witneſs, and an ey-witneſs, of that which he wrote for the greater certainty thereof. The Apoſtles doctrine is certain, his modeſty is obſervable; he calleth himſelf a diſciple, a learner, who excelled the moſt accompliſhed Doctors, of the ages ſince: John Baptiſt called himſelf the voice of a cryer in the wilderneſs. chap. 1. 23. Peter and Paul, thoſe great lights of the Church and Apoſtles of Chriſt called themſelves, ſervants of Chriſt. Rom. 1. 1. 2 Peter 1. 1. &c. what Spirit ruleth in thoſe vainglorious prelates, who think no titles high enough for them?

v. 25. there are alſo] Chap. 20. 30.

the world it ſelf could not contain] Herein he followeth the vulgar manner of ſpeaking, as chap. 12. 19. the meaning of the hyperbole is, there would be very many books: moreover, he here glanceth at the depth of ſome myſteries, in the words and actions of Chriſt, which the world could not have apprehended, had they been written.

Amen.] See Luke 24. 53. Mark 16. 20. Matth. 28. 20. and John 3. 11.

On the ACTS of the APOSTLES.

The ARGUMENT.

THe Penman of this Scripture was Luke the Evangeliſt (as appeareth in the firſt words hereof) for the moſt part an Eye-witneſſe of theſe Things he Recordeth, being conſtantly a fellow Labourer with Paul.

His purpoſe in writing this Story, was, (as he intimateth in his firſt Preface) That the Church might have the certain knowledge of Chriſt, his Goſpel and Kingdom, that our Faith might not be built on the uncertain reports of Pretenders to Truth; As alſo, That he might ſhew how God fulfilled his promiſe in calling the Gentiles, and the Apoſtles, their Charge and Office, by Preaching the Goſpel to all Nations: And that he might fore-arm all the Faithfull, by diſcovering the rage and malice of Satan, perſecuting the true Miniſters and Profeſſours of the Goſpel, even from the firſt publication thereof: And the gracious providence of God, preſerving and entreating his Church, in the midſt of all her preſſures; giving us an evident aſſurance of the Truth of the Goſpel, not only in that the powers of Hell, all the machinations of Satan, and malice of wicked men, could never prevail againſt it; but alſo, that Gods providence, by theſe oppoſitions, confirmed it to the hearts of Chriſtians, in the conſtancy of thoſe that ſuffered perſecution for it.

This Story ſetteth out.

1. The Truth of Chriſt after his Aſcenſion, performing his Promiſe to the Apoſtles, ſending the Holy Ghoſt the Comforter, unto them.

2. The malice of Satan, labouring to ſuppreſſe the Goſpel, by raiſing up tumults, conſpiracies, ſlanders, perſecutions, and (where he could not prevail by violence) Hereticks to corrupt the Truth thereof.

3. The vigilant providence and power of God over his Church, overthrowing the malicious enterpriſes of the enemies, and filling the world with the ſound of the Goſpel, by ſo few unlearned men.

4. The many divine Sermons of the Apoſtles and Diſciples, concerning the Death, Reſurrection, Aſcenſion and Kingdom of Chriſt, the Mercy of God in the free Remiſſion of our ſins by him, the Immortality to come: Care that Miniſters ought to have of Chriſts flock, Repentance and Fear of God, and other principle Grounds of Faith, that we bearing our trials patiently (knowing that the Croſſe uſually accompanieth the Goſpel) and reſting confident in his mercy, (who is unchangeably the ſame good God to his now, that he was to the firſt Chriſtians) we may at laſt attain the end of our hopes, the ſalvation of our Bodies and Souls. Which He grant us, who gave ſo great a price for our Redemption, as the unvaluable Blood of Chriſt Jeſus.

CHAP. I.

Verſe 1. T*He former treatiſe have I made*] That is, the Goſpel by Saint Luke.

all that Jeſus began] This is, not ſimply to be underſtood, of all that Jeſus did and ſaid; for John chap. 21. 25. declareth it impoſſible; but of ſomthings, which Jeſus began to do and teach, that is, as Chryſoſtome interpreteth, ἀπ᾽ ἀρχῆς μέχρι τέλους --- from the beginning to the end; from the ſtory of Chriſts birth, unto the relation of his reſurrection, Luke wrote in the goſpel: but yet he ſaith not πάντα, all things, but περὶ πάντων, concerning all, that is, ἁδρομερῶς ϗ παχυμερῶς, or παχυτέρως, craſſâ Minervâ, groſſely, or ſummarily, to wit, of all that which the Holy Ghoſt thought neceſſary to dictate. Chryſoſt.

v. 11. into heaven] To which he is gone to take poſſeſſion for us, by carrying thither the ſame fleſh and blood of which we conſiſt.

ſhall ſo come] At the laſt day, he ſhall locally come, in the ſame body, maniſeſtly appearing in the clouds. 1. Theſ. 4. 16, 17. Matth. 24. 30.

v. 12. a ſabbath-dayes journey] How far it was lawfull to walk on the ſabbath day, the law of God determined not; but their tradition limited it to two thouſand cubits; or about two miles. John 11. 18. it appeareth, that Bethanie was fifteen furlongs, that is almoſt two miles from Jeruſalem: and Luke 24. 50. So far did Chriſt lead them out, when he would aſcend, which is here called a ſabbath-dayes journey: ſo that either Chriſt having taken leave at Bethanie, came back thence with them, and aſcended from the mount of Olives, which lyeth between it and Jeruſalem; or elſe the ſabbath-dayes journey here mentioned, muſt be two miles wanting one furlong; though ſome learned authours ſay otherwiſe.

v. 13. they went up into an upper room] εἰς τὸ ὑπερῷον, a room in the top of the houſe, where they might be freeſt from diſtraction by company coming in and out, and alſo moſt private, and ſecure from the Jews, who having put their Maſter to death, would not ſpare any that ſhould confeſſe him to be the Chriſt.

Peter, and James, and John, &c.] Probably the Evangeliſt recounteth their names, to ſhew that Chriſt had not rejected them, for their forſaking him in their ſuffering; but that they were reſtored to their former office and dignity, that none might derogate from the authority of their preaching or writing.

and Judas brother of James] Ἰούδας Ἰακώβου: Judas of James, and uſuall ellipſis; the Syriac ſupplyeth it with בר bar: ſon of James; it may be both his fathers and brothers name was James; it was the ſame who is called Lebbeus, and Thaddeus. Matth. 10. 3. Mark 3. 18. Jud. 1. his relation to James is here mentioned to diſtinguiſh him from the other Judas the traytor.

v. 14. continued with one accord &c.] The word is of προσκαρτερεῖν, ſignifying a continuance in performing or ſuffering ſome thing, with an invincible and ſtrong conſtancy.

in prayer and ſupplication] Their hazard was then very great; their implacable enemies about them, many, and thoſe alſo in authority: Chriſt had often warned them to watch and pray, leſt they entred into tentation; therefore thus take they up the armour of Chriſtians, unanimous prayer; what they prayed, is not mentioned; probably amongſt other bleſſings, it was for deliverance from their enemies, as chap. 4. 24. and for the coming of the holy Ghoſt the comforter, which he had promiſed them, and for which he commanded them to ſtay at Ieruſalem.

v. 19. in ſo much as that field is called in their proper tongue &c.] The Syriac giveth it, in the tongue of that region, thus it was publikely named in their own tongue: he ſaith not in our tongue, but in their &c. to point out the conſciouſneſſe of the authours of this impiety. See Matth. 27. 7, 8.

Aceldama], Haceldama, or Aceldama is a name compounded of two Syriac words, חקל (which in the Chalde and Syriac ſignifieth a field, of the Hebrew root חלק chalak, diviſit in partes, hæreditatem &c. thence by a metatheſis and tranſpoſition of letters חקל chakel a part, portion, or field; or poſſeſſion of fields divided from others. Iſaiah 61. 7. Hoſ. 5.7.) and דם dam blood: Peter alſo might ſay it is called in their proper tongue, or dialect (See chap. 2. 8.) in regard he was a Galilean; their pronuntiation ſomewhat differing from that about Ieruſalem: therefore had they ſo urged that he was a Galilean, and one of Chriſts diſciples, for (ſaid they) thy ſpeech bewrayeth thee. Matth. 26. 73.

v. 20. let his habitation be deſolate] Pſal. 69. 25.

his Biſhoprick let another take] Or his office, or charge. Pſal. 109. 8. that which the Hebrew calleth פקודה pekudah, (Numb. 3. 32.) overſight, or cure.

v. 21. went in and out amongſt us] Or was converſant with us as man; and preached unto us. See Deut. 31. 2, 2 Chr. 1. 10. &c.

v. 22. From the baptiſm of Iohn] From the time that Chriſt was baptized of Iohn. Matth. 3. 16. Luke 4. thence began Chriſts publike Miniſtry.

of his reſurrection] In that he mentioneth the principal article of our faith (ſee 1 Cor. 15. 14.) he comprehendeth all the reſt.

v. 23. they appointed two] The before mentioned Apoſtles: put two in election, that is, Ioſeph called Barſabas & Matthias.

v. 24. and they prayed] Becauſe the Apoſtles were immediately choſen by God, therefore they here pray God to direct the lot, for the choice of one in Iudas room.

v. 25. that he may take part &c.] See verſe 17. that he may be a partner with us, in our Apoſtleſhip and Miniſtry: here κλῆρος, is put for μερίς, a part or partnerſhip.

his own place] To hell and eternall damnation, to which God who foreſeeth all things, had juſtly deſigned the traytor.

v. 26. they gave forth their lots] Lots were ſeverall wayes drawn or given out. either from the lap. Prov. 16. 33. or ſome veſſel, an urne, pot, or headpeece: how ever, as they were in uſe for diviſion of lands or goods, or for compoſing of any controverſie, God diſpoſed them, Prov 16. 33. therefore Auguſtin ſaid well, lots are nothing elſe, but in rebus dubiis indicatio divinæ voluntatis, the declaration of Gods will in things doubtfull: they are here called, their lots, after the common uſe of ſpeaking, in reſpect of the two, put into election for Judas place of Apoſtleſhip.

he was numbred with the eleven &c.] Or acknowledged to be one of the twelve Apoſtles; συγκατεψηφίσθη as they ſay, communibus calculis eſt electus: the word is of ψῆφος, a ſtone or countor, with which they were wont to give voices in commiſſions or judgements: ſometimes it is taken for the event determined by lot, as here it is intimated; they all reſted contented with the lot, as being confident, that God diſpoſed and approved the event thereof: he was numbred with the eleven Apoſtles, by a common declaration of their generall conſent.

CHAP. II.

Verſe 1. P*Entecoſt was fully come*] When the fiftieth day from the Paſſeover was come. See Deut. 16. 9. Levit. 23. 15. which time God choſe to ſend the holy Ghoſt; much people being then gathered to Jeruſalem, that it might be divulged to the world.

they were all &c.] The Apoſtles; for this was divinely and extraordinarily to conſecrate and fit them who were to preach the Goſpel to all nations.

v. 2. a ſound from heaven &c.] This preternaturall winde God ſent before, as it were a meſſenger to ſtirre them up to attention, and to give them notice of the coming and preſence of the holy Ghoſt: alſo to intimate in the type, the ſpeedy, unexpected, and unreſiſtible ſucceſſe of the Goſpel; and that the whole diſpenſation thereof ſhould be by the power and providence of God.

v. 3. tongues] The ſimilitude or appearance of tongues, to ſignifie their gift of tongues, or ſpeaking divers languages; miraculouſly infuſed into them who were to preach to divers nations; as a remedy for the confuſion of tongues. Gen. 11. 7. by which a great part of the world was ſeparated from communion with God and his Church.

of fire] To ſignifie the admirable force which ſhould be therein, by the ſpirit of God.

v. 4. filled with the holy Ghoſt] With his gifts and graces; with a greater and more admirable acceſſe and encreaſe thereof; more abundant knowledge of the myſteries of ſalvation by Chriſt, which before they did not ſo well apprehend; greatneſſe of minde and conſtancy, to do and endeavour all things for the teſtimony of the truth of Chriſt; the gift of tongues, largeneſſe of heart, and admirable utterance; power and evidence of the ſpirit in preaching and praying.

to ſpeak with other tongues] Beſides their mother tongue, they ſpake languages which they never ſtudied, or underſtood before that moment: ſo it was promiſed. Mark. 16. 17. and ſo it was neceſſary that they might be able to ſpeak the tongue of every nation to whom they were to preach the Goſpel.

v. 5. dwelling at Jeruſalem, Jews devout men out of every nation] They were of Jewiſh parents, though they were born, or had dwelt in other nations; theſe came up from divers nations, or were of divers nations hereafter mentioned, and were at Jeruſalem at the feaſt.

under heaven] That is every nation; this hyperbole is familiar with the Hebrews. See Deut. 2. 25. thus was fulfilled that which was ſaid by Iſaias. chap. 43. verſe 5, 6.

v. 6. When this was noiſed abroad] γενομένης δὲ τῆς φωνῆς ταύτης, when this voice was made; that is the report and rumour of theſe things, being ſpread abroad, or ſpoken of among the people, to wit, how the Apoſtles ſpake all languages upon the ſodain; when this was voiced abroad.

confounded] Or troubled in minde: or as verſe 7. amazed, and marvelled, foraſmuch as they knew not the cauſe thereof.

v. 7. are not all theſe which ſpeak, Galileans ?] Theſe which ſpeak ſeverall languages; are they not ſuch as have been conſtantly bred in Galilee, and never learned theſe tongues at home, nor travelled abroad to gain them?

v. 8 how hear we every man] Not that in the ſound of one voyce, every man heard his native language, as if one and the ſame word ſpoken by Peter, ſhould ſound Greek to the Grecian, Latine to the Roman, Egyptian to the Egyptian (for ſo had this been a miraculous gift of interpretation, not ſpeaking, in the hearers, the people; not in the Apoſtles, the ſpeakers) but becauſe every Apoſtle now ſpake all languages, as occaſion and the auditory ſerved him.

v. 9. Parthians, and Medes] For the greater evidence of the miracle, he inſtanceth in thoſe men of ſeverall nations, now preſent at Jeruſalem, and ear-witneſſes of theſe things.

v. 10. Proſelytes] Gentiles converted to the Iſraelites Religion. See Matth. 23. 15.

v. 11. the wonderfull works of God] τὰ μεγαλεῖα τοῦ Θεοῦ, as Luke 1. 49. the Syr. giveth it mirabilia Dei: he meaneth the Goſpel, the wonderfull counſell of God for mans ſalvation in Chriſt; which Paul calleth the power of God. Rom. 1. 16. the hidden myſtery. Epheſ. 3. 3. the unſearchable riches of Chriſt. Epheſ. 1. 18. So that here are noted two cauſes of their wondring, firſt that unlearned men, bred in ſuch a place as Galilee ſhould ſodainly ſpeak ſo many tongues: Secondly, that they were able to ſpeak ſo deeply, wiſely, learnedly, and divinely in thoſe heavenly matters.

v. 12. what meaneth this ?] what will this come to? what will this be ? ſome of theſe were to be converted, and therefore it may be they ſpake not as contemning, but enquiring what might be the end, uſe, and fruit of theſe new and admirable things.

v. 13. others mocking] Cavilling; and calumniating the Apoſtles, theſe, moſt likely, were of the Scribes and Phariſees, men of carnal wiſdom (which is ever enmity to God) juſtly delivered up to Spirituall blindneſs, and ſuch hardneſs of heart, that nothing (no not the moſt evident teſtimony of Gods power and preſence) could move them: thus are there ever ſome ſuch impudent adverſaries of trueth, that will not be afraid to jeere at the gifts of Gods own Spirit, and vilifie his Miniſters; See Joh. 6. 41. Joh. 8. 13. & 10. 20. & 11. 37. Matt. 11. 9. there is nothing ſo holy and ſacred which precipitate malice dareth not blaſpheme.

full of new wine] γλεύκους which the vulgar Latine, and Eraſmus giveth muſto, ſo the word ſomtimes ſignifies muſt, or new wine: alſo it ſignifieth ſweet, or pleaſing wine, as the Prophet Iſai. 49. 26. uſeth עסיס haſis. which (though the 70. give οἶνον νέον-new wine) we there interpret ſweet-wine.

v. 14. But Peter ſtanding up with the eleven] The holy Ghoſt had now confirmed and emboldened him, ſo that without fear of Prieſts and Phariſees, he ſtood up that he might be heard of the multitude, with the reſt of the Apoſtles, as witneſſes of the ſame things, and partakers of the ſame gifts of the holy Ghoſt, and ſpeaketh with a loud voyce.

v. 15. Theſe are not drunken] Firſt he cleereth himſelf and the reſt of the Apoſtles from that unworthy calumny of drunkenneſſe which they caſt on them; and that mildly, as 1 Sam. 13. 14. 15. Acts 26. 24. 25.

but the third hour of the day] Meaning but early dayes: the third hour according to their account (who reckned the hours from ſun-riſing, and ſo made them longer in ſummer, and ſhorter in winter) might be, as with us, about eight or nine of the clock in the morning: as if he had ſaid, they that are drunken, are drunken in the night. 1 Theſ. 5. 7. now it is but early in the morning.

v. 16. This is that which is ſpoken by the Prophet Joel] This which you conceive to be drunkenneſſe, is the gift of Gods holy Spirit, foretold by the Prophet Joel. 2. 28. it is herein fulfilled.

v. 17. it ſhall come to paſſe] See Iſai. 44. 3. he waſheth off the unjuſt aſperſion, by interpreting and applying the propheſie: and ſheweth their impudency, who durſt deride the very mercies of God powred out on his Church.

in the laſt dayes] When the Meſſias ſhall be exhibited in the fleſh.

I will powre out] I will give graces, in abundant meaſure.

upon all fleſh] Upon all ſorts of people, Jews, and Gentiles, bond and free, high and low, &c.

young men ſhall ſee viſions] Dreams, and viſions, were once ordinary means whereby God reveiled his will to the prophets. Numbers 12. 6. So we muſt underſtand the Prophets ſpeaking of things to come, attemperated to the the capacity of the preſent times wherein they preached and wrote: ſo when they ſpeak of Gods ſervice, they name, altars, ſacrifices, gold, ſilver, incenſe, &c. all which when they relate to times of the Goſpel, are to be underſtood, as alluſions to legall rites, not proprieties of the Goſpel: ſo that here, dreams, and viſions import excellent gifts of the Spirit, and underſtanding of things reveiled by the Holy Ghoſt: as if he ſaid, under the Goſpel, there ſhall not be a few Prophets or Miniſters, to whom (as of old) God will reveil his will; many ſhall know it, as Jere. 31. 34. there ſhall be a cleer revelation of Gods will in Chriſt: ſo that the Apoſtles purpoſe in citing this propheſie is, to invite his hearers to a participation of the ſame grace, as if he ſaid; the ſame Spirit which God hath now poured out on us, he is ready to poure out on others, far and neere; ſo that, except your ſelves hinder your ſelves by your obſtinacy and unbelief, you ſhall alſo receive of the ſame fountain with us; the ſame graces. God ſtill offereth, and reſpectively beſtoweth now on his Church, in the Spirit of ſanctification, though not in the faith of miracles.

v. 18. and on my ſervants] So he limiteth and reſtraineth the promiſes to Gods ſervants onely, to them that believe and obey, of what ſex or condition ſoever they are; Men, Women, Bond, Free, all are one in Chriſt.

v. 19. and I will ſhew wonders in heaven] As he had two ſorts of hearers, ſo uſeth he two kindes of arguments: to the holy he citeth Gods promiſes; to the wicked he urgeth his threatnings, to terrifie thoſe ſcorners, and to bring them to repentance: hee nameth certain prodigies, as preſages of Gods wrath, and the calamities of men in the laſt dayes; ſome in heaven, as theſe fearful Chaſma's, Comets, Blazing-ſtars, and ſtrange eclipſes of the Sun and Moon; which though they have natural cauſes, in the ordinary power of God, yet are they ſometimes extraordinary and certain tokens of Gods anger, and ſome imminent miſeries coming on men: it is indeed but the voice of experience, Nunquam futilibus excanduit ignibus æther. By ſignes on earth, he meaneth earthquakes, inundations, monſtrous births, and ſuch prodigious and monſtrous things. And the Prophet by thoſe expreſſions, blood, fire, vapour of ſmoke, darkneſſe of the Sun, and bloody or red colour of the Moon, intimated a turbulent and calamitous condition of the World in the laſt times; ſo that whither ſoever men ſhall look, they ſhall ſee the terrible ſignes and effects of Gods anger, as if the whole fabrick of the World were upon the point of confuſion and diſſolution. See Iſai. 13.10. 25.34. Ezek. 32.7. Joel 3.15. Amos 8.9. Matthew 24.29. Luke 21.11.

v. 20. the ſun ſhall be turned into darkneſſe] Joel 2.31. Meaning, that God will ſhew ſuch ſignes of his wrath through all the world, that men ſhall be no leſſe amazed, then if the whole order of Nature were changed, or the Sun darkned.

v. 21. whoſoever ſhall call upon, &c.] Joel 2.32. Romans 10.13. He ſheweth the onely way to eſcape thoſe evils threatned, faithful and fervent prayers: the Name of the Lord importeth all his Attributes, Wiſdom, Power, Mercy, &c. the only ſanctuary in diſtractions, fears, and dangers, is calling on the Name of the Lord in faithful and fervent prayer.

v. 22. Jeſus of Nazareth, &c.] Now he cometh to his purpoſe, which was to ſhew, that Chriſt whom they crucified, was the true Meſſias promiſed by all the Prophets, by whoſe merit and beneficence, thoſe gifts of tongues, &c. were now poured out on his Apoſtles; and that therefore this was the accepted time and day of ſalvation, of which the Prophet Joel foreſpake; alſo that if they meant to be ſaved, they muſt not neglect and overſlip it; he nameth Chriſt, Jeſus of Nazareth, to the end that they might plainly know that he ſpake of that very Jeſus, whom they in ſcorn and contempt called Jeſus of Nazareth, and upon whoſe croſſe they fixed that title.

a man approved of God among you] He doth not preſently affirm that Jeſus is the Meſſias, but cometh to it by degrees: firſt ſaying that he was a man approved of God; as appeared by his miracles of which the Jews themſelves were witneſſes.

v. 23. by the determinate counſel, &c.] c. 4.28. Not that the counſel of God herein excuſed the Jews, or Judas wickedneſſe, ſeeing God wrought not in them, but by them, making good uſe (for mans redemption) of that they did wickedly.

ye have taken] Thus he would ſmite their conſciences, not yet acquainting them with the end and fruit of Gods counſel herein; leſt the Jews ſhould think, either that Chriſt was not of God, or that Gods determinate counſel excuſed their fact; he ſaith, ye have taken, and by wicked hands, &c.

v. 24. whom God hath raiſed up] Now cometh he to prove him to be the true Meſſias, by his reſurrection from the dead.

the pains of death] Meaning the power of death, and bands of the grave.

v. 25. I foreſaw the Lord] Pſal. 16.8. Hebr. שויתי ſhivithi, I have ſet. 70. προωρώμην, I foreſaw.

on my right hand] Or at my right hand. Ever ready to help me. The meaning is, that in all the preſſures which he ſuffered for our ſins, he propoſed to himſelf, both the will of God concerning his paſſion, and his promiſe and power to preſerve him.

v. 26. my fleſh ſhall reſt in hope] In ſpe reſurrectionis, Auguſt. in Pſal. 16.9. in hope of victory through the power of God, by a glorious reſurrection from the dead.

v. 27. thou wilt not leave my ſoul in hell] See on Luke 16.33. or, my life, my perſon in the grave, ψυχὴ often importeth ſo, Rom. 13.1. And the word ᾅδυ here uſed, is in the Hebr. שאול ſheol, Pſal. 18.5,6. which ſometimes is put for the place of the damned, but is alſo ſometimes to ſignifie the grave, and can no otherwiſe be reaſonably underſtood, as Job 17.13. Geneſis 37.35. in both which places, as alſo Pſal. 16.5,6. whence this here is cited, the 70. uſe the word ᾅδης: and if it be not reaſonably conceived, that Job, Jacob, or David in his own perſon thought of going to Hell, or of ever being there; what neceſſity is here of underſtanding this place concerning Chriſt, otherwiſe then that God would not leave him long in grave? See v. 41.

ſuffer thy holy one] That is, ſanctificatum corpus, Auguſtine qu. ſ. the ſanctified and ſacred body of Chriſt.

to ſee corruption] That is, to be corrupted, Quomodo enim poterat vel in carne marceſcere, cujus nomen unguentum exinanitum eſt, de virg. lib. 3. inter opera Ambroſe; how can he corrupt whoſe name is an ointment poured forth? Cant. 1.3. Auguſtine to more purpoſe ſaith, ep. 120. to Honoratus, his fleſh corrupted not, qua tam celeriter reſurrexit, which roſe again ſo ſoon.

v. 28. the wayes of life] In reſtoring me from death to life, and that moſt happy and pleaſant, as in thy preſence, Pſal. 17.15. This preſent life is full of bitterneſs and troubles; but in the next, we ſhall be conformed to Chriſt, and filled with joy.

v. 29. let me freely ſpeak] Or, I may freely, &c. He now ſheweth, that the Pſalm ſpake principally of Chriſt: for David is dead (ſaith he) and we have his Sepulchre amongſt us to this day. But this Pſalm ſpeaketh of one that liveth whoſe body, though buried, ſaw no corruption, which could not be ſaid of Davids body, long before turned to duſt and corruption.

of the Patriach David] See 1 Kings 2.10.

v. 30. therefore being a prophet] And ſo knew by ſpecial revelation, that which was to come concerning the reſurrection of Chriſt.

and knowing that God] Pſal. 132.11.

v. 31. that his ſoul] Pſal. 16.10.

ſoul was not left] As v. 27.

in hell] Or in the grave, Gr. εἰς ᾅδυ, as v. 27. See on Luke 16.23. the word ſignifieth a lightleſs place, and ſo is here put for the grave: for the Apoſtle ſaith, that David being a Prophet ſpake concerning the reſurrection of Chriſt; who was not left in the grave, when he roſe from the dead. See Ioh. Druſ. præter. l. 5.

v. 32. this Ieſus hath God raiſed up, &c.] This Jeſus, the Chriſt and Meſſias whom David foreſaw in ſpirit: this Jeſus whom ye deſpiſed and crucified, hath God raiſed up: and of this truth, we (whom God hath thus filled with his Spirit) are all witneſſes.

v. 33. by the right hand of God] By the power of God.

v. 34 the Lord ſaid unto my Lord] Pſal. 110.1.

ſit thou on my right hand] Have thou glory and power over all. See Epheſ. 4.9,10. David ſpeaketh this concerning Chriſt, not of himſelf: for he concerning whom that was ſpoken, ſaw not corruption, which David did: therefore that was ſpoken concerning another, who ſaw not corruption. See chap. 13.36,37. Neither is David ſo aſcended into Heaven body and ſoul, as to ſit at Gods right hand, and to have power over all creatures: neither can this agree to any, but Chriſt onely.

v. 35. thy footſtool] Until I ſubdue, and ſubject them all to thee.

v. 36. both Lord and Chriſt] The anointed King: So that the Jews muſt know that he was called Chriſt, becauſe he was the Lords anointed. See Epheſ. 1.21. and 4.10. Phil. 2.9,10.

v. 37. they were pricked in their heart, &c.] This is the effect of Peters Sermon: firſt their conſciences tell them that Jeſus was indeed the Meſſias, of whoſe death they were guilty; and ſo lyable to Gods heavy judgement, who had cryed out, his blood bee on us, and on our children. Next they break out into a confeſſion of their crime, in that they ask counſel of Peter and the reſt what they ſhould now do, who could by no means undo what they had done.

what ſhall we do] Not what muſt we ſay: let the wiſe man ſhew his wiſdom; μὴ ἐν λόγοις, ἀλλ' ἔργοις ἀγαθοῖς, (ſaid Clemens Romanus, epiſt. ad Corinth. pag. 50.) not in words, but good works.

v. 38. Peter ſaid unto them repent] This he did like a good Phyſitian, whoſe part is not onely to diſcover the diſeaſe, but to preſcribe the remedy, Pœnitentia hujus temporis, dolor medicinalis: Auguſtine in Pſalm. 37. Preſent repentance is a medicinable grief. The firſt of innocency is not to ſinne: the ſecond to acknowledge our ſins. Illic currit innocentia integra & illibata qua ſervet; hic ſuccedit medela qua ſanet, Cyprian epiſt. 3. lib. 1. there runneth intire and untoucht innocency which might ſave: here followeth the medicine to heal. But this repentance is not onely in knowing, acknowledging our ſins, or ſaying, God be merciful, but in the change of our mindes, purpoſes, and evil courſes of our lives, as Auguſtine de Eccleſ. Dogmat. cap. 54. ſaith very well; Pœnitentia vera eſt, pœnitenda non admittere, & admiſſa deflere, true repentance is no more to commit things to be repented of, and to bewail ſins committed. See alſo Tertul. adv. Marcion, l.2. c. 24. fin. See on Matth. 3.2.

in the name of the Lord Jeſus] He ſpeaketh of and reſpecteth here not the form of baptiſm, but the uſe and end thereof, which is to implant us into Chriſt, Rom. 6. that we may be Chriſtians. See on c.10.48.

v. 39. the promiſe is unto you] Chriſt is promiſed both to Jews and Gentiles: but the Jews had the firſt place.

v. 40. untoward generation] This corrupt World: perverſe and wicked men: he meaneth principally Scribes and Phariſees; and all the enemies of Chriſt and the Goſpel.

v. 41. ſouls] Or perſons. See on v. 27. Here began to appear the fruit of Chriſts prayer, Luke 23.34.

v. 42. in breaking of bread] This is a term taken from that which Chriſt did, at his laſt Supper, Matth. 26.26. uſed to ſignifie the holy Supper of the Lord, which they uſed to celebrate when they made their Love-feaſts, or Feaſts of charity. See Acts 20.7.11. Jude 12.

v. 43. fear came upon every ſoul] They were all amazed, and the new and marvellous ſtate, encreaſe, gifts, miracles, and power of the Church: ſo that no man durſt oppoſe them.

v. 44. had all things common] That community was not of all goods, of all the faithfull: but of that part which every one would conſecrate to the publick neceſſity, or to the relief of any particular perſon, this was no abſolute community, as Anabaptiſts dream (for that overthroweth all propriety divine and civil) for yet they retained propriety in their houſes, c.12.12. and 16.15. had they not had propriety, they had had nothing to give, or exerciſe their love and charity withall. Paul profeſſed that he had coveted no mans gold or ſilver, c. 20. 33. which had been a vain profeſſion, if it had not been lawful for Chriſtians to poſſeſſe any thing: the community here mentioned ſpeaks them charitable who gave ſomething, not unlawful poſſeſſours, who gave not all: and this the words of the text intimate verſ.45. Firſt, in that ſome parted their poſſeſſions and goods, or gave them (which none but proprieters could juſtly do.) Secondly, in that theſe doners made a choice (as every man had need:) neither needed Paul to have given precepts concerning gathering for the poor, 1 Cor.16. 1, &c. if in the Church there had then been any ſuch communion as excluded propriety: for then one had had as much right to any goods or poſſeſſion, as an other.

from houſe to houſe] Or at home.

v. 45. and parted them] Diſtributing their goods, or the price of their poſſeſſions ſold.

as every man had need] As far as they were able to relieve their poor brethren.

v. 46. in the temple] Not that they might joyn with the Jews in antiquated ceremonies of the law; but becauſe they might there have daily occaſion of teſtifying the truth of Chriſt to the multitude there aſſembling.

and breaking bread] The Syriac hath it domi frangebant portionem; that is, they invited each other home, and eat together; praiſing God for his benefits, ſpiritual and temporal. See Iſai.58.7.

v. 47. having favour with all] That is, with many; generally, or with all good men; though they had ſome implacable enemies among the Phariſees.

the Lord added to the church, &c.] It is mans miniſtry, but Gods bleſſing, (ſee 1 Cor. 3.7,8.) who ſuffers not his ordinance to be fruitleſs (Iſai. 55.10.) though the reprobate be as the ſea to the ſweet ſhowres; what ever falleth is preſently turned into that invincible bitterneſs of the receiver; yet the elect ſhall benefit by it: neither is it here to be omitted, that if by the miniſtery of the Goſpel God daily addeth to his Church, number, ſociety, and external communion of the faithful, ſuch as ſhall be ſaved; then is it a dangerous ſymptom or prognoſtick of their reprobation who ſeparate from the Church: this is indeed that temple of God, into which if any enter not; out of which if any depart, a ſpe vitæ, ac ſalutis æternæ alienus eſt, Lactant. l. 4. c. ult. So Rahabs houſe typum portabat eccleſiæ, Cyprian l. 1. ep. 6. bare a type of the Church, out of which if any go, his blood ſhall be upon his own head.

CHAP. III.

Verſ 1. T*He ninth hour*] Which was their three of the clock in the afternoon: the time of their evening ſacrifice, at which the Apoſtles would be preſent, not to communicate therein, (ſee on c. 2. 46.) but to enform them that the ſhadows of the law were aboliſhed by Chriſt, whom they all prefigured.

v. 2. lame from his mothers womb] Born lame, lame, not by any external violence or accident; but native indiſpoſition of his joynts; ſo infirm, that they carried him up and down, and it was of no leſſe continuance then forty yeers, c. 4.22. and ſo incurable by man: This ſetteth out the truth and greatneſs of the miracle done in the Name of Jeſus.

called beautiful] Built inſtead of that of Solomon, and ſo called.

to ask alms] See c.9.8.

v. 4. look on us] They would have him diligently mark by what power he ſhould be healed; they being well aſſured of the certain event, by the Spirit of God, would have him mark by whoſe Name he ſhould be healed, and to whom he ſhould aſcribe the honour and praiſe for ſo great a mercy received: as if they ſaid, believe that thou ſhalt receive ſomething of us: look on us, but believe in Chriſt Jeſus.

v. 5. expecting to receive ſomething] He looked for money, but obtaineth that which no money could have purchaſed for him.

v. 6. ſilver and gold have I none] As if he ſaid, if I had wherewith to relieve thee in that thou deſireſt, I would give it thee, but having none, I give thee that which is better, that which Chriſt hath given me power freely to diſtribute.

in the name of Jeſus Chriſt] By the power and command of that JESUS CHRIST, whom in contempt and ſcorn you called Jeſus of Nazareth, be healed, riſe up and walk.

v. 7. took him by the right hand] Being confident on the promiſe of Chriſt, Matth.10.8. Mark 16.17.18.

and immediately his feet, &c.] This ſpeed ſheweth that the cure was by divine power, which can do all things how and when God pleaſeth.

v. 8. he leaping up] This ſheweth a perfect cure.

praiſing God] Attributing his health to God alone: to conceal the mercies of God is ingratitude; to aſcribe them to ſecond-cauſes, ſacriledge.

v. 9. all the people ſaw, &c.] So publickly was it done, that none could modeſtly deny it.

v. 10. they knew it was hee] That it was the ſame Creeple which they ſaw daily lying at the gate of the Temple begging, therefore they wondred to ſee him ſo ſuddenly walking.

v. 11. all the people ran together to them] With deaf eares, taking no notice of the Name of Jeſus by which the lame was reſtored; they come about the lame man, and thoſe that cured him, looking on them with admiration: here (all) is again ſet for many.

that is called Solomons] It is likely that this porch was built in the place where Solomons formerly ſtood (1 Kings 9.3. and thence was named ſo. For the Temple built by Solomon being demoliſhed by the Chaldees, Zerubbabel and Ezra in their re-edification thereof, imitated the old patern, as neer as they could. See c.10.23. He nameth this place, becauſe hither came that concourſe of people who were witneſſes of theſe things.

v. 12. as though by our own power] He correcteth the abuſe of men, who commonly attribute that to mans power or godlineſs, which appertaineth onely to God.

v. 13. the God of our fathers] Chap. 5. 30. The ſame onely true God, whom Abraham, and all our holy Fathers worſhipped.

v. 14. but ye denied the holy one] Matthew 27. 20. John 19. 15.

deſired a murderer] That is, Barabbas. Mark 15.11. John 18.40.

v. 15. and killed the prince of life] Or author of life, Chriſt Jeſus. So ſtill the impious and unjuſt world favoureth the wicked, and perſecuteth the juſt.

v. 16. through faith in his name] Becauſe by faith he apprehended him who was riſen from the dead, whoſe Name he heard of us; or Name may here import Chriſt himſelf, or his power.

v. 11. through ignorance ye did it] He excuſeth not their malice; but becauſe ignorance and blinde zeal led many of them into their ſin, he putteth the penitent among them in hope of pardon. See 1 Tim. 1. 13. It is like that which is ſaid 1 Cor. 2.8. and Luke 23.34.

your rulers] He meaneth ſome of them; not all. See Luke 23.50,51. John 3.1.

v. 18. by the mouth of all his prophets] See verſe 21. The Prophets were many, yet being all inſpired with one

Spirit of God, they ſpake all one truth: in reſpect whereof the holy Ghoſt here attributeth but one mouth to them all.

v. 19. times of refreſhing ſhall come] It is a figurative manner of ſpeaking, taken from workmen repoſing themſelves in the cool ſhades, to repreſent eternal reſt, after the labours and travels of this life. See Luke 16. 25. Revel. 7. 15, 16. and 14. 13. or he pointeth here at that which Paul writeth, Rom. 11. 23. 26. the final calling of the Jews by the Goſpel preached, to which thoſe words (which before was preached unto you) may alſo relate, verſe 20.

v. 20, He ſhall ſend Jeſus Chriſt] To judge the world: this he ſaith to ſhew them, that the contempt of the Goſpel cannot be unpuniſhed; and alſo to give them aſſurance of comfort, who believe in him.

v. 21. whom the heaven muſt receive] That is contain, having received his humanity which was thenceforth reſident in heaven, and ſhall be no more here on earth, until he come to judgement.

times of reſtitution of all things] Unto the perfection of the kingdom of Chriſt, wherein all ſhall be repaired which ſin hath diſordered and ruined; wherein the creature ſhall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the ſons of God. See Rom. 8. 21.

ſince the world began] Or from all ages.

v. 22. A prophet ſhall the Lord] Deut. 18. 15. Chap. 7. 37.

of your brethren] Of the Stock of Abraham.

v. 23. every ſoul] Every perſon, as Chap. 2. 27. Rom. 13. 1. Geneſ. 46. 26. here is deſtruction threatned to all contemners of Chriſt and his Miniſters. See Luke 10. 12. 16.

v. 24. all the prophets from Samuel] After Moſes he nameth Samuel, between whoſe times the word of God was precious, 1 Sam. 3. 1. from Samuel, all the prophets foretelling of Chriſt, as many as have ſpoken, have foretold of theſe times of grace.

v. 25. ye are the children of the prophets] Or Patriarchs, Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, &c. you are they to whom the promiſes were made, and the Prophets addreſſed, and with whom God made the covenant. See Rom. 9. 4.

and in thy ſeed] Geneſ. 12. 3. Gal 3. 8. Geneſ. 18. 18. and 22. 18 and 26. 4. that is, Chriſt Jeſus of the ſeed and linage of Abraham.

v. 26, unto you firſt] To you before the Gentiles, is the Goſpel and doctrine of Chriſts reſurrection to be preached, Matth. 10. 6. Acts 1. 8. and 13. 46. or ἀναστήσας, raiſed, here is of the ſame ſignification with ἀναστήσει, verſe 22. and Deut. 18. 15, 18. 1 Sam. 2. 35. 1 Kings 14. 14. the word קום uſed among other things to ſignifie, conſtituit, he appointed to an office; the 70 give ἀναστήσει (See 2 Sam. 23. 1.) So Zacharias ſaid, God hath raiſed up an horn of ſalvation. Luke 1. 69. and the people ſaid, Luke 7. 16. a great prophet is riſen up among us, that is, being appointed of God is ſent among us; for no man taketh this honour to himſelf, but he that is called of God, Hebr. 5. 4.

to bleſſe you] In giving you faith and repentance by the Spirit of regeneration: (Gal. 3. 9. 14.) the bleſſing hath a condition annexed to the promiſe; if ye convert and repent you of your iniquities; the Syriack expreſſeth it, אן תתפנון in tethpenun, if ye convert, &c. we muſt performe this condition if we will have the bleſſing: ſinne bringeth the curſe: therefore no man can be bleſſed in impenitency, and continuing in ſin.

CHAP. IV.

Verſe 1. Captain of the temple] Or ruler: ſome think that he was a ruler or commander over the Levites, who miniſtred by turns, and guarded the temple. See 2 Chron. 35. 4, 5. but more probably he calleth him ςρατηγὸν τοῦ ἱεροῦ, the ruler or tribune of thoſe Souldiers, whom the Romans allotted the Jews for the guard of the temple: for Pilate ſaid. Matth. 27. 65. ye have a watch. See Luk. 22. 4. John 18. 12. It was one who had committed to him the guard of the temple. Vatabl. See alſo Jo. Druſ. prateri. lib. 5.

the Sadduces came upon them] Who deny the reſurrection of the body from the dead, See Luke 20. 27. Matth. 22. 23.

v. 2. being grieved] They were angry, the Syr. giveth it: ſome colour had they; for if any man intruded into the office of a preacher, it belonged to the prieſts to ſuppreſs ſuch audacity; as alſo to retain the people in the doctrine of the law, and Prophets, and to prevent their ſeducements, by any new doctrines, therefore, ſeeing men, to them unknown, or not allowed by any publike authority, preaching in the temple, they reproved them, not underſtanding, or acknowledging their extraordinary calling, and the main being, that the Sadduces Athiſticall opinion contradicted, they exaſperated the Prieſts, and rulers againſt the Apoſtles. See c. 23. 8.

v. 3. They layd hands, &c.] Hands not yet clean from the blood of Chriſt: the argument of the wicked is violence: now the Apoſtles have experience of the truth of Chriſts words. See Luke 21. 2.

v. 4. many of them which heard the word believed] Many who heard what Peter had ſaid unto the people, Chap. 3. 12. &c. the word never deſcendeth in vain. See Iſaiah 55. 10.

about five thouſand] Of thoſe who adhered to the Apoſtles; ſo the blood and injury of the martyrs, is ſtill the ſeed of the Church: the Apoſtles were now ſhut up in priſon; but the Church flouriſhed the more ſhe was wounded, ὅσῳ θλίαν ἀνέϛελλαν φανερόν: Oecumen. you ſee the working of God manifeſt herein. It is no ſmall demonſtration of his power, defending believers againſt all the rages of Satan, and giving them more boldneſſe and conſtancy, by how much more they are oppoſed and injured: in this number we muſt underſtand the whole Church then being, not a new acceſſion of ſo many: at Peters firſt ſermon, Acts 2. 41. they were about three thouſand, now they are at his ſecond ſermon encreaſed to five thouſand: thus appeareth the effect of Chriſts promiſe to make them fiſhers of men. See Phil. 1. 13. 14.

v. 5. rulers and elders] Which the Hebrews called זקנים zekenim, old men: theſe were the Judges of their greater Sanhedrim; they call a councel, to oppoſe the truth by a ſeeming legal proceeding, deſiring that it might appear juſtly damned: but theres no counſel againſt God and his truth. See verſe 25 &c. Pſal. 2. 1. 4. Prov. 21. 30. Iſaiah 46. 10.

v. 6. as many as were of kinred, &c.] Thus ſtrengthened they their party, to countenance the matter: theſe had indeed by Gods appointment the charge of things eccleſiaſtical: theſe were Aarons ſucceſſours; for which they had alſo about 1500 yeers preſcription: theſe were the men who now flouriſhed among the Jews in honour and wealth: yet theſe now combine and aſſemble againſt the Goſpel.

v. 7. by what name] By what authority, and by whoſe command.

v. 8. Peter filled with the holy Ghoſt] Aſſiſted by the grace of Gods holy Spirit enabling, and emboldening him to ſpeak, who before was terrified by the voice of a maiden.

v. 9. if we this day] Or, Seeing that.

examined of the good deed done] Meaning, whereas you queſtion us for doing good, who ought to queſtion and puniſh evil doers only, and to defend and encourage the good.

v. 10. be it known unto you all] Such admirable confidence had the holy Ghoſt now given him, that he thus openly profeſſeth and declareth the truth of Chriſt, before the moſt implacable enemies thereof.

by the name of Jeſus, &c.] ἐν τῷ ὀνόματι, through the power of Jeſus. See on Chap. 2. 22. and 3. 6. 16.

is become the head of the corner] The corner ſtone, ἀμφοτέρους συνδέσων τοὺς τοίχους, &c. Oecumen. uniting both walls into one, that is, both Jews and Gentiles into one Church. See Epheſ. 2. 14, 20, 21.

v. 12. ſalvation in any other] ἐν ἄλλῳ, that is, by or through the mediation of any other.

none other Name, &c.] None other Mediatour of redemption; or interceſſion, 1 Tim. 2. 5.

among men] ἐν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, that is, as the vulgar hath it, datum hominibus: given to men; to wit, appointed by God for their ſalvation.

v. 13. unlearned and ignorant men] ἀγράμματοι, illiterate men, men without letters: not brought up in the Schools of the Scribes and Phariſees, but in a ſchool incomparably better; that is, in the School of Chriſt: therefore this is not ſimply ſpoken (for they had ſpent ſometime in the ſtudie of the holy Scriptures, and were all θεοδίδακτοι, taught of God, 1 Theſ. 4. 9. John 6. 45. and 14. 26.) but in relation to ordinary means of attaining learning by the magiſtery and teaching of men, humane learning, or the Phariſees eſteem of them: ἰδιῶται private men, Suidas interpreteth it by the foregoing word, ἰδιώτης, ὁ ἀγράμματος, an unlearned man: and ὁ ἀμαθὴς, an ignorant and unſkilful man; ſuch as private, unimployed men commonly are: the word is of ἴδιος, private. See more hereof, Joh. Druſ. prateri. lib. 5. and Theod. Bez. annot. major. on this place.

v. 14. nothing againſt it] It was ſo evident a miracle, and good work, that they could neither deny it, nor ſay ought againſt them, as the Syriack giveth it.

v. 15. conferred among themſelves] They would not let the Apoſtles hear that which an evident and undeniable truth extorted from their own mouths, verſe 16. becauſe they would maintain their own credit with men, and ſtill pretend that the Apoſtles were delinquents, worthy of ſuppreſſion and puniſhment, as innovators, and diſturbers of the peace.

v. 16. What ſhall we do, &c.?] Here is a true pattern of malitious injuſtice; they convent them as malefactors, and then ſeek for, and conſult about ſome accuſation againſt them; ſomething they would do, but knew not what; becauſe however unjuſt they were, they would by no means ſeem ſo to men.

v. 17. but that it ſpread no further &c.] They count it a principal piece of policie, to keep the people ignorant, that they may the more eaſily beguile them: it is a great, but miſchievous ſkill, in ſuch notions to leſſen the light, that their legerdemain may not be diſcovered by the ſpectatours.

ſtraitly threatned them] ἀπειλῇ ἀπειλησώμεθα, threatning let us threaten; an uſual Hebrew Pleonaſme; for, let us ſtrictly, or ſtraitly threaten them.

to no man in this name] That is, that they preach concerning Chriſt no more.

v. 18. not to ſpeak at all] That is, not to ſpeak any word concerning Jeſus, what he had taught, done, or ſuffered; and do no more miracles in his name, or pretend to his power for the doing of the ſame.

v. 19. judge ye] we appeal to your own conſciences herein: God commandeth us to preach in this name, you under pretence of your authority, command us not to preach; ſhall we now obey God or you? will God judge it right, will he excuſe us, if againſt his commands we obey yours?

v. 20. We cannot but ſpeak the things] We cannot chooſe but obey Chriſt, who hath commanded us ſo to do: for the diſpenſation is committed unto us, and woe ſhall be to us if we preach not the Goſpel. See 1 Cor. 9. 16. it is the power of God to ſalvation, Rom. 1. 16. how fearful a ſacriledge were it, to withhold it from the Iſrael of God. We have heard, ſeen, and believed theſe things, and therefore ſpeak. See Pſalm 116. 10. Acts 17. 16. I will not make mention of him, nor ſpeak any more in his name (ſaid the Prophet Jeremie in his great tentation Jer. 20. 9.) but his word was in my heart as a burning fire ſhut up in my bones, and I was weary with forbearing, and I could not ſtay; for the grace (and Spirit) of prophecie incited him, unwilling to ſpeak, ſaith Theodoret in Jer. where the Spirit of God is in the miniſter, no fear or threatnings of men can ſo ſilence him, but that at laſt the word of truth ſhall break out.

v. 21. all men glorified God] All that believed, or many men.

v. 22. above fourty yeers old] It may ſeem ſtrange, that being ſo old, and daily laid at the gate of the temple, into which Jeſus ſo often entred (conſidering that it appeareth not, that he ever denyed to heal or cure any that entreated it) he did not receive help from him all this time: but certain it is, he was reſerved unto this time, and means of healing by the all-diſpoſing providence of God, for the further confirmation of the Apoſtles, and trueth of the Goſpel.

this miracle of healing] Gr. τὸ σημεῖον τοῦτο, &c. this ſigne. See Chap. 3. 7. 8.

v. 23. they went to their own] To glorifie God, and to encourage them, by letting them know, how God had aſſiſted them.

v. 24. they lift up their voice] Either all ſpeaking this ſame thing, as they were guided by one Spirit; or which is moſt probable to avoid confuſion, (that the company might diſtinctly hear, and ſay, Amen.) ſome one, or few in the name of the reſt, thus prayed.

v. 25. Why did the Heathen rage] Pſal. 2. 1. לָמָּה lammah, why? what cauſe have they to rage againſt the Lord? or, to what end do they rage? what will their ſucceſſe be, who fight againſt God?

vain things] Such are all conſultations and combinations againſt the truth and ordinance of God: God is ſtronger then all, and his counſel muſt ſtand, John 10. 29. Iſaiah 8. 10. and 19. 11. 17. and 44. 26. and 46. 10. Jer. 32. 19. Ezek. 7. 26. Hoſ. 10. 6. 1 Sam. 8. 7.

v. 26. againſt the Lord] That is, againſt Chriſt Jeſus his truth, and his Miniſters; whoſoever oppoſeth deſpiſeth, or perſecuteth theſe, riſe up to oppoſe and perſecute Chriſt himſelf. See Numb. 16. 11. Luke 10. 16. Acts 9. 4. 1 Theſ. 4. 8. Thus did Saul, the Princes of the Philiſtims, and others ſtand up againſt David, who was a type of Chriſt: ſo here, Herod, Pontius Pilate with the Romans and Jews, conſpired againſt the ſacred perſon of CHRIST himſelſe.

v. 27. againſt thy holy Childe Jeſus] Thy holy Son Jeſus, παῖδα here, as verſe 25. is ſet, not ſo much to import yeers, as dearneſſe, or obſequiouſneſſe to God, as Chap. 3. 13. So Joſhua, though in yeers a man, is called נַעַר nahar, the childe or ſervant of Moſes, Exod. 33. 11. if ſuch plots and combinations were againſt Holy Jeſus; let us in all our ſufferings run with patience, looking unto the author and finiſher of our faith, let us conſider him that ſuffered ſuch things for us (See Hebr. 12. 1, 2, 3, 4.) it is no diſhonour to us to ſuffer of our brethren that which Chriſt ſuffered of his, nec illis gloria eſt facere, quod fecerit Judas, nor is it any glory to them, to do that which Judas did, Cyprian lib. 1. epiſt. 3.

v. 28. for to do whatſoever] Though they meant nothing leſſe then to obey God in crucifying Chriſt, but had ſeveral other ends, yet God ordered this to our redemption. See Acts 13. 27. Iſaiah 10. 7.

thy hand and thy counſel] Thy power and providence: for as Cyprian forecited ſaith well: nihil intereſt quis tradat aut ſæviat, cum Deus tradi permittat, quos diſponit coronari: it ſkilleth nothing who betrayeth or rageth, ſeeing God permitteth thoſe to be delivered up (or betrayed) whom he appointeth to be crowned.

v. 29. behold their threatnings] Conſider what they threaten: divert their rage and malice, who enterpriſe againſt thee and thy truth.

and grant, &c.] Becauſe God only can give patience, conſtancy and perſeverance in truth, and alſo boldneſs to preach the goſpel, they pray him to give it.

v. 30. by the name of thy holy childe Jeſus] See on verſ. 10. 27. by the power and in the name of thy holy Son Jeſus: for their aim and hearts deſire was to advance his honour, and truth.

v. 31. place was ſhaken] By this ſenſible ſigne God ſhewed his preſence, and readineſſe to hear and confirme them in their miniſtration.

all filled with the holy Ghoſt] They were ſtrengthened, and enabled with greater confidence and largeneſſe of heart to ſpeak. Mark here, firſt the reſult of impious counſel: the Jews conſulted againſt the goſpel, laboured to ſuppreſſe it by power, threatned and charged the Apoſtles to ſpeak no more in the name of Jeſus; God gave them greater courage to preach it, and more excellent gifts then before: all oppoſition more propagateth truth. Secondly here it appeareth, that the ſafeſt refuge in danger, and the happieſt iſſue of fear is, when it awakes us to a more fervent calling on the name of God; which to the perplexed ſoul is, as the ark to the tyred dove: as David ſaid Pſal. 116. 7. Return unto thy reſt, O my ſoul: in which ſence it is true which Gregor. Nazianzen ſaid, epiſt. 16. Κάμνουσα ψυχὴ, ἐγγὺς Θεοῦ; the weary ſoul is neer God.

v. 32. were of one heart] So unanimous, as if they had all but one and the ſame heart, and one ſoul; becauſe they were all united and guided by one ſpirit of God.

was his own] They gave, as if the needy brethren had as good intereſt in their goods, as their ſelves who were owners thereof. See on Chap. 2. 44.

v. 33. witneſſe of the reſurrection, &c.] This by a Synecdoche is put for the whole Goſpel: this the Sadduces lately quarrelled at, therefore they teſtified it the more powerfully.

great grace was upon them all] As God gave them that great grace of real clarity (with which the preſent world is little acquainted) ſo was this very effectual for the gaining a good opinion among the people, both concerning their perſons and doctrine, which they ſaw ſo admirably exemplified, and thereby they were the more eaſily invited to joyn themſelves to their ſociety whom they perceived ſo far from any ſecular and worldly ends, that they gave freely what they had.

v. 34. any among them that lacked] That is, who was deſtitute and not relieved.

for as many as were poſſeſſours, &c.] Not that they who believed did all of them, ſell all that they had, but as need required: as if it were ſaid, the owners did not onely relieve thoſe who wanted, with their rents divided among them, but as there was further neceſſity, they ſpared not the Fee-ſimple, but ſold of that alſo.

v. 35. down at the Apoſtles feet] That is, ſubmitted it to their diſpoſal: this intimated, as Oecumenius notes, τὴν πολλὴν τιμὴν, &c. that great honour and reverence of the hearers toward the Apoſtles.

according as he had need] They who moſt wanted, had moſt relief given them.

v. 36. Joſes, who by the Apoſtles was ſirnamed Barnabas] This Levite was of Cyprus: he is mentioned as an example of that which was ſaid; the Apoſtles named him Barnabas (the ſon of conſolation, or a comforter) not onely for that he gave ſo liberally to comfort the needy Chriſtians; but probably in reſpect of thoſe excellent gifts he had in comforting afflicted mindes of hearers. Hieronym. de ſcriptor. eccleſ. calleth him Ἰωσὴφ, ſo alſo many Greek copies: ſo alſo the Syriac. Others reade Ἰωσῆς. Some, but improbably think him called ſo from the Syriac word בר bar, and נבא nabba conſolation of the verb בויא buia, conſolatus eſt, (c. 20. 1. and 16. 40, &c. Epheſ. 6. 2. Coloſ. 4. 8. &c.) others more probably derive it from בר bar, a ſon, and the Hebrew word נבא naba to propheſie, intimating him a ſon of conſolation in his gift of propheſie: and indeed a principal part of the Prophets, or Miniſters function is to comfort the hearers, by applying the promiſes of the Goſpel unto their conſciences. This Barnabas c. 11. 24. is ſaid to be a good man, and full of the holy Ghoſt, that is, an excellent Prophet, or Teacher: a Man of excellent gifts.

v. 37. having land, ſold it] Here is rehearſed one inſtance of that is ſaid, v. 34.

at the Apoſtles feet] See on v. 35.

CHAP. V.

Verſ. 1. NAmed Ananias with Saphira, &c.] The ſcope of this Hiſtory is to ſhew, how odious to God that perfidiouſneſs is, which counterfeiting ſanctity would impoſe upon God, as if he ſaw not what men do: (for otherwiſe Ananias giving a part, had been commendable) ſo great a miſchief is Hypocriſie, ſo dangerous the perverſion of an holy purpoſe, and the withdrawing of things conſecrated to the Churches uſe (though by himſelf who gave) that the ſacrilegious periſhed by detaining a part of that whole which he would ſeem to give: by this was Ananias (as Chryſoſtome ſaith) κλέπτων τὰ ἑαυτοῦ φωραθεὶς, taken ſtealing his own goods. It is the heart, not the hand, which God looketh into: the poor Widow Luke 21. 3. caſt in but two Mites, and was better accepted then all thoſe who offered greater ſummes. Here Ananias ſelleth a poſſeſſion, and preſenteth the price, reſerving to himſelf, but a part thereof, and yet is condemned for it: if he that taketh from the Church but a little of that which was his own, be ſacrilegious, and ſtooken dead for the ſame; what puniſhment will the ſame Divine Juſtice lay on him who by fraud or violence taketh away the poſſeſſions wherewith other men endowed the Church? See more hereof Chryſoſt. in Act. hom. 12.

v. 2 kept back part of the price] Syriac, he hid a part. So he did; for pretending to be as charitable as the beſt, he ſold and ſeemed to bring the whole price, as others did, but he concealed a part, which he would reſerve to himſelf and his Wife. So Suidas and Chryſoſtome interpret νοσφιζόμενον, by ὑφαιρούμενον, ſurripientem, intervertentem, —and ἰδιοποιούμενον, which Æmilius Portus alſo rendreth, Illum qui res aliquas ſuas facit, ſuffurantem, impropriating or ſtealing. See what ambition will do: Ananias would not come behinde the beſt in ſeeming charitable: therefore though he was loath to part with his money, yet you ſee how dear he would purchaſe the good opinion of men. In the mean, not conſidering that God ſaw him, and would once ſeverely revenge it.

v. 3. but Peter ſaid] The matter being divinely revealed to Peter; or he might know the poſſeſſion, and conjecture the value of it.

to lye to the holy Ghoſt] ψεύσασθαί σε, that thou ſhouldeſt thus lye, or deceive: of ψεύδω, fallo, fruſtro. So Sophocles cited alſo by Suidas, μὴ ψεῦσον -- τῆς ἐπιούσης ἐλπίδος, deceive not our approaching hope. So ementita auſpicia, Cicer. Lying preſages, deceiving hope. He calleth this lying to the holy Ghoſt: For when they had dedicated the poſſeſſion to God, for the relief of his ſervants, the fraud and falſehood concerned his intereſt, and this their ſeeming charity was hypocriſie and lying to God: though they ſo behaved themſelves in this buſineſs as if they had to deal with Men onely, not with God: they preſumed that Man could not diſcover this ſacriledge, and detention of that which was conſecrated to the uſe of the Church, neither conſidered they that God would.

v. 4. while it remained] οὐχὶ μένον σοὶ ἔμενε; remaining, did it not remain to thee? that is, it was thine own right; thou mighteſt juſtly have kept the poſſeſſion to thy ſelf, or the price thereof, to thine own uſes, neither would that have made thee unworthy of the ſociety of Chriſtians: the fault is aggravated in that he was urged by no neceſſity: had the Apoſtles compelled him to ſell, there might have been ſome colour for his detention of ſome part of the price; but now, it being his own to diſpoſe of, his ſinne was, that dedicating the whole to the Churches uſe, hee kept back a part thereof. Here appeareth, that they had no Law or Decree made, or in uſe among Primitive Chriſtians, to alienate and ſell their poſſeſſions; for Peter clearly ſheweth, that Ananias might juſtly have kept his own, in land or money: For otherwiſe he would have ſaid, it remained not to thee, but to the Church, by right of community. They who now would have all things in common, have no ground from theſe practiſes of the Primitive Church, as they pretend: their community was not compulſory, but free, and voluntary: otherwiſe it had neither been thankſworthy, nor ſuch a leading example of piety in the particulars, as the holy Ghoſt here ſetteth out: It is conſiderable which Chryſoſtome ſaith, hom. 12. See (ſaith he) πῶς οὐ τοῖς ἀποστόλοις ἐπέτρεψαν πωλεῖν, ἀλλ᾽ αὐτοὶ ἐπώλουν, καὶ τὰς τιμὰς ἐκείνοις ἐδίδουν, how they (who were owners of poſſeſſions) permitted not the Apoſtles to ſell (them) but the (owners) their ſelves ſold, and gave the price to them, to diſtribute. Neither could they have given them, nor the Apoſtles juſtly received; had not the givers been bona fidei poſſeſſores, true and lawful proprieters. It is theft without the owners conſent, to give that which is not our own, and no leſſe to receive it. was it not in thine own power] No man compelled thee to ſell and give; but to make God a proffer of all, and to perform but a part; this was to tempt God (as verſ. 9.) to try whether he ſaw and would revenge.

thou haſt not lyed unto men, but, &c.] Thou haſt not lyed to us onely, or chiefly, but unto God, whoſe intereſt thou haſt invaded, by concealing that which thine own pretence made ſacred.

v. 5. hearing theſe words fell down] Thus God ſometimes preſently revengeth ſinnes, to terrifie others, and to reſtrain them from the like, as here: So God is known when he judgeth, Pſalm 9. 16. Neither may any think ſacriledge no ſinne now, becauſe God doth not preſently puniſh it with ſudden death, as here: the puniſhment following will once ſhew it an abominable ſin, and come too ſoon on him on whom it ever cometh. He is the ſame God ſtill of unchangeable juſtice: and if wee mark well, this age hath afforded many remarkable examples, of ſacriledge heavily puniſhed; eternity will ſhew innumerably more.

v. 6. and the young men aroſe] Which were of the Church, they aroſe, that is, ſet themſelves about it; an uſual Hebraiſme, Joſh. 8. 3. and 24. 9. Jud. 20. 8, &c.

v. 7. came in] To the Apoſtles and others with them, in the Temple, or private houſe where they uſed to aſſemble. See c. 2. 46. See alſo v. 12.

v. 8. yea for ſo much] She who had agreed with her huſband what to ſay, thus vailed her ſinne with a lye: a fault too common now a dayes, to endeavour to cover ſin with ſin.

v. 9. to tempt the ſpirit of the Lord, &c.] It is the ſame in effect which he ſaid v. 4. to lye unto God, or in the preſence of God: as often as men ſin againſt their own conſciences, they do preſumptuouſly tempt God, or try whether God will be juſt or no.

behold the feet of them] Meaning they that buried thy huſband are returned: and here alſo by a divine revelation, he foretelleth of her death preſently to enſue.

v. 10. then fell ſhe down ſtraitway] They that are in the ſame faults muſt expect the like puniſhments or worſe (except in caſe of timely repentance) which being prolonged are ever greatned.

v. 11. and great fear came upon all] All that ſaw or heard of this ſevere judgement of God, which was to warn all to be ſincere, and to beware of hypocriſie. Such reſtraints fleſh and blood have ſometimes need of, to make them know that it is a dreadful thing to fall into the hands of the living God, Hebr. 10. 31. See 1 Sam. 6. 19, 20. 2 Sam. 6. 7, 9.

v. 12. many ſignes and wonders] Miraculous things done by the Apoſtles, whereby not onely the power of Chriſt, and his juſtice in this example of Ananias and Saphira, but alſo his mercy appeared in healing all diſeaſes, that thereby they might be invited to the faith; and theſe were neceſſary to the Goſpel, as the other for reſtraining thoſe corruptions wherewith Satan would otherwiſe have infected the Churches minority.

they were all with one accord] This he ſaith, to ſhew that none among them was ſchiſmatical, to forſake their publick aſſemblies, or in neglect thereof to hold private Conventicles. Of Solomons Porch, ſee c. 3. 11. Here appeareth their conſtant reſolution, to teſtifie the truth of Jeſus, from which no fear or danger could now deter them.

v. 13. of the reſt, durſt no man joyn himſelf to them] They were ſo terrified with this example againſt Hypocrites, that they who were not ſincere, durſt not now make falſe ſhews of religion, contemn the Apoſtles, or encounter with them by argument.

v. 14. believers were the more added] The example of Ananias, &c. was ſo far from diſcouraging men from Chriſtianity, that it more encreaſed the Church: theſe evil branches cut off, the Lords vine, the Church, flouriſhed the better.

v. 15. into the ſtreets] Or in every ſtreet.

the ſhadow of Peter paſſing by] See alſo c. 19.12. Not that the body of the Apoſtle, much leſſe the ſhadow, or garments, had any ſuch inherent vertue, as to heal the ſick; but God exerciſed the power of healing ſo abundantly, as that the weakeſt and otherwiſe improbable means were made effectual thereto; that men might know that it was his power only, teſtifying the exhibition of the Meſſias.

16. bringing ſick folks] Hearing the rumor of the Apoſtles healing: and this was by the providence of God, that thereby the truth of Jeſus might appear, and the Goſpel be more propagated.

v. 17. filled with indignation] Or envy, or prepoſterous emulation: ζῆλος, in Scripture ſignifieth many things; ſometimes good, 2 Cor. 9.2. Gal. 4.18. Tit. 2.14. But here it importeth an evil affection, as c. 7.9. and 13.45. and 17.5. 1 Cor. 3.3. and 13.4, &c. Here was indeed a zeal, but without knowledge; which is but a kinde of blinde heat (ſo Chriſt taxed the ignorance of the Saduces, Matth. 22. 29.) violent zeal without knowledge, is but as ſtrength in a blind Sampſon, ſerving to deſtroy himſelf and others: Holy zeal, is to Religion as the natural heat to the body, wherein the life thereof is preſerved; but it muſt be fetcht (like that coal wherewith one of the Seraphims touched the Prophets lips, Iſai. 6.6.) from the altar, and word of God, not humane fancies.

v. 18. put them in the common priſon] Where common Malefactors were put: here is a fruit of blinde zeal: they were not able to deal with the Apoſtles by Scriptures or reaſon, therefore they betake themſelves to open violence. See John 16.2. Luke 21.12.

v. 19. but the angel of the Lord] God could otherwiſe have delivered them, but thus he would now confirm them when they ſhould ſee by experience, that he gave his Angels charge over them, and had made them miniſtring Spirits for their good. See Pſal. 34.8. Hebr. 1.14.

v. 20. ſtand and ſpeak in the temple] There was a time when Chriſt would not have them preach, Matth. 16.20. and 17.9. But now was that ſeaſon of which he ſaid, Matth. 10.27. preach on the houſe tops; that is, in publick: Gods diſpenſations have their times and ſeaſons: and he delivereth his, that they may more boldly preach the truth.

all the words of this life] See John 6.68. That is, the Goſpel which is the Word of life eternal; which directeth believers to eternal life in Chriſt.

v. 21. when they heard that, they entred] When they had received commiſſion ſo to do, they feared not the moſt apparent dangers, but commit themſelves and the iſſue to Gods providence: Faith adviſeth not with fleſh and blood, which would eaſily ſuggeſt; Behold Lord, they ſought our lives but now for preaching there, and ſhall we expoſe our ſelves to their malice by a further provocation? but preſently they obey Gods Word, to whom they lived, and for whom they now feared not to dye.

but the high prieſt] Malice is reſtleſs: they call a Council, (that is, other Prieſts and Scribes, their Colleagues, as the Syriac giveth it; not that Sanhedrin, or great Council of 71 Judges which ſat on higheſt cauſes within their juriſdiction. See Matth. 5.22.) they muſt ſeem juſt and legal who leaſt intend to be ſo: they ſend to the priſon, confident that they had the Apoſtles ſure enough.

v. 22. and found them not] So eaſily can God when he pleaſeth, fruſtrate the counſels and expectations of the enemies.

v. 23. the priſon truly found we ſhut, &c.] This miraculous deliverance might have converted the adverſaries, who might eaſily conclude that a Divine Power againſt which there is no ſtriving, had delivered theſe priſoners, the doors being all faſt, ſhut with all ſafety, ἐν πάσῃ ἀσφαλείᾳ, with all poſſible diligence which might ſecure them, the Guard watching without: but their hearts were hardned, and they could think of nothing but the impious and vain purſuance of their own counſels againſt the truth of Chriſt.

v. 24. they doubted, &c.] διηπόρουν; it cometh of ἀπορέω, ad anguſtias detruſus inexplicabiles hæſito: it is commonly ſaid of thoſe who know not which way to turn themſelves; ſuch ſhall be the condition of the wicked, when they ſhall ſee the evident preſages of Gods eminent judgement, Luke 21. 25. Thus Gods judgements often ſtartle the wicked, but convert them not.

v. 25. then came one and told them, &c.] This meſſage troubleth them more: while they are conſulting to deſtroy them for preaching, they hear that they are preaching again in the Temple. There is no counſel againſt God. Prov. 21.30.

v. 26. then went the captain with the officers] See on c. 4.1. No doubt they ſent now with greater indignation then before, as conceiving their authority contemned: yet durſt they not uſe violence as before, becauſe they feared the people might take part: they feared Men, but not God: yet he maketh that fear of a guilty conſcience a bridle to reſtrain the rage of the wicked.

v. 27. ſet them before the council] Here was ſome ſhew of equity; to hear them before they would condemn them.

v. 28. did not we ſtraitly command you] c. 4.18.

this mans blood upon us] That is, to make us ſeem guilty of Chriſts death: thus Hypocrites will be guilty, but not ſeem ſo.

v. 29. we ought to obey God rather then man] That is, when men command or forbid us any thing contrary to the Word of God; we ought to obey God, and not Man. See c. 4.19. Dan. 3.18.

v. 30. the God of our fathers] c. 3.13.

v. 31. his right hand] τῇ δεξιᾷ αὐτοῦ. God with his mighty power hath ſet up him to be a Prince and Saviour. See c. 2.36.

to give repentance] This ſheweth how Chriſt reigneth in and for his, giving them hearts to repent, that through him they may be reconciled to God, Rom. 5.1. This they ſay, to win (if it were poſſible) ſome of their enemies to Chriſt, ſhewing them the onely way to be ſaved in him: it is no more in mans power to repent, then to create himſelf; this Chriſt giveth by the Spirit of regeneration, and hereunto is remiſſion of ſins moſt certainly annexed. So that the Jews might hence have gathered an argument againſt deſpair, though they had crucified Chriſt, if they could but have repented. See Luke 24.47.

v. 32. whom God hath given to them that obey him] That obey Chriſt, who believe in him; the Syriac hath it: indeed there is no true obedience without faith, nor faith without obedience. Oecumenius gives this ſenſe; that he giveth remiſſion of ſins, we are witneſſes, and the holy Ghoſt alſo, who would not have come upon us, εἰ μὴ πρότερον αἱ ἁμαρτίαι ἐλέλυντο, except our ſins had firſt been forgiven; and that the Jews, notwithſtanding their ſin in crucifying Chriſt ſhould not be deprived of their ſhare in the ſame gift, if they would now repent and obey: but we muſt not underſtand that God gave the Spirit of regeneration to any becauſe he obeyed: the effect cannot precede the cauſe; the holy Ghoſt giveth an heart to believe and obey, without which we can neither believe nor obey. But if this (whom God hath given) relate to the extraordinary gifts of the holy Ghoſt, (as ſpeaking tongues, power of healing, &c.) then the ſenſe may be, as Oecumenius intimateth; God gave theſe extraordinary graces, to us whom he made obedient to the faith, and ſo will he to you, if ye will obey.

v. 33 they were cut to the heart] διεπρίοντο· πρίω, is properly to cut with a Saw: here it ſignifieth a bitter perturbation of anger; taken from them that ſaw or grinde their teeth for anger: the Syriac giveth it, they were cut aſunder with anger.

v. 34. Gamaliel] This was Pauls Tutor, chap. 22.3. whom Gods providence ſtirred up to moderate and allay the precipitate heat and fury of the reſt of the Council who were reſolved to deſtroy the Apoſtles: God ſometimes raiſeth up friends among our enemies to ſpeak for us and to ſave us. See Geneſis 37.20, 21. John 7. 50, 51.

v. 35. take heed to your ſelves] Do nothing raſhly, and out of paſſion: but adviſe well, before you enterprize that which may hurt your ſelves.

v. 36. roſe up Theudas]. A notorious Impoſtor; who under pretence of being a Prophet, moved ſedition among the Jews: now he ſpeaketh hereof as of a thing not very freſh, nor much before thoſe times: this Council was held about the yeer of our Lord 35. See Iſ. Caſaubon exert. 2. N. 57. and Theod. Bez. in loc.

v. 37. in the dayes of taxing] The inſurrection which this Judas the Galilean (not Judas the Gaulonite) made againſt the Romans, was when they ſent out another tax, after that which is mentioned, Luke 2. 2. See Iſaac Caſaubon, Exercit. 2. N. 59. Joh. Druſius præterit. lib. 5. and Theod. Bez. ibid.

v. 38. now I ſay refrain] He perſwadeth them to moderation by a Dilemma: either this work which theſe Apoſtles and followers of Chriſt act, is of Men, or of God: if of Men, it will come to nought without your troubling your ſelves with them: but if it be of God, you can never reaſonably hope to prevail againſt it: it is vain and impious to fight againſt God.

v. 39. leſt happily ye be found, &c.] μήποτε; leſt. that is beware, ware, take heed leſt, &c. it is a conciſe and ſhort manner of ſpeaking: as Gene. 3. 22. leſt he put his hand, &c. That is, proſpiciamuſne, &c. See Matth. 25. 9. Budæus noteth that this word, is not ſo much, percontantis, as addubitantis & addubitanter decernentis.

v. 40. When they had beaten them] This kinde of puniſhment it ſeemeth the Romans permitted the Jews to execute within their Synagogues, but not publikly. Matth. 10. 12. 2 Cor. 11. 24.

they commanded that, &c.] in ſome things they are adviſed by Gamaliel, but other things they act againſt his counſell, in that they beat them and prohibited their preaching, in which they but fought againſt God.

v. 41. rejoycing that they were counted worthy, &c.] They were not Stoicks, men not ſenſible of injuries and diſgraces, but they who had in their infirmity forſaken their Maſter, now in ſtrength of Spirit, rejoyce that they may ſuffer for his name: they remember now that Chriſt told them, that they are bleſſed who ſuffer ſo. Matth. 5.

v. 42. and dayly in the temple, &c.] Conſtancy accompanieth their joy: they are not deterred by their enemies threatnings, but preach the word freely, in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon, (2 Tim. 4. 2.) oppoſitions of truth, are as the conflicts of the winde with fire, which enflame it more: ſuch is the admirable work of Gods Spirit giving confidence in Chriſt and aſſurance of victory in him: gaudet Petrus in verberibus, qui ante in verbo timebat. Gregor. hom. 30. in Evang. Peter rejoyceth in ſtripes, who before, was afraid at (a damoſels) words.

CHAP. VI.

Verſe 1. THe Grecians againſt the Hebrews] There were Jews of Paleſtine, which are here called Hebrews, born and bred there; and Jews of Greece, here called Grecians: whoſe anceſtors were Jews, though they had dwelt in Greece, and uſed the Greek tongue as their native. See Jo. Druſ. prater. l. 5.

were neglected in their dayly miniſtration] They were not duly relieved by thoſe who had the care and overſight of the poor.

v. 2. and ſerve tables] To make proviſion for, or ſerve at tables, in their ordinary diet provided for the poor; and at their feaſts of charity; becauſe they had greater work in hand; that is, to preach the word of God, as, verſe 4.

v. 3. Look out among you ſeven men, &c.] Thus they ſhew them a means to take away the grievance, and to compoſe the difference, that they may hold unity, and eſtabliſh ſome diſcipline and order, without which no Church can ſubſiſt: they name ſeven not tying other Churches to that number, but conſidering what was ſufficient for them; and they ſhew how Church-Officers ought to bee qualified.

v. 4. but we will give our ſelves continually, &c.] They meant not to aſſign the charge to ſome ſurrogates, or deputies, that their ſelves might live at eaſe, but to follow a more principall part of their miniſtry, conſiſting in theſe two ſpecified duties, prayer, and miniſtry of the word.

v. 5. Philip] Chap. 21. 8.

A proſelyte of Antioch] See chap. 2. 10.

v. 6. and layd their hands on them] By this impoſition of hands the primitive Church ſignified a conſecration of a man to God, in ſome office or deſigne, as chap. 13. 3. this rite the Hebrews uſed in their ſolemn ſacrifices, and in their prayers and private bleſſings, as Gene. 48. 14. Matth. 19. 13. and this ſame rite the Chriſtian Church uſed in ordination of Miniſters, as here, ſo 1 Tim. 5. 22. and many other places it appeareth; to avoid intruſion into that ſacred office; and to ſignifie the approbation of the Church, thereby declaring them fit, and authorized to their miniſtry, by it, as by their publike ſeal. See 1 Tim. 4. 14. 2 Timothy 1. 6. Hebr. 6. 2.

v. 7. obedient to the faith] That is, the doctrine of the goſpel. Rom. 1. 5. and 16. 26. the ſenſe is, that now many of the Leviticall prieſts (before, the moſt implacable enemies to Chriſt, and the moſt active adverſaries of the goſpel) were converted to the faith, and truth of the goſpel; though it be moſt probable, that this (πολύς τε ὄχλος, a great multitude, or company) rather relates to the Jews in generall, then peculiarly to the Prieſts, the Syriac gives it, & populus multus ex Judæis obediebat fidei, much people of the Jews obeyed, and that is, of the Jews, multitudes, among whom were alſo ſome, or many Prieſts.

v. 8. Full of faith] That is, of an excellent meaſure of faith, and powerfull in miracles.

v. 9. certain of the Synagogue] It is likely that the Romanes permitted other nations, having trade at Ieruſalem, to have their Synagogue, or Church by themſelves.

the Libertines] Thus the Romans called the iſſue of their ſlaves when they were manumiſſed, or ſet at liberty, as Beda thinketh, Chryſoſt. hom. 15. taketh theſe Libertines for any whom the Romans manumiſſed. Philo. legat. ad Caium, cited by Theod. Beza, deſcribeth them thus; that Tiberius ſuffered a good part of the City beyond the Tiber, to be inhabited of the Jews, whereof the moſt part were Libertines, who being taken captives and brought home, were afterward ſet at liberty, and not compelled to change any thing of their countries rites; all which makes it more probable, that it was not a colledge for youth, but a Synagogue for thoſe who came from Rome, or other places to Ieruſalem, being men of this condition.

Cyrenians] A ſort of Phyloſophers, of whom Cicero ſpeaks. l. 1. de fin. Diog. Laert. l. 2. Ariſtip.

of Cilicia] A countrey in Aſia the leſſer, in which was Tarſus, the City where Paul was born. c. 22. 3.

v. 10. They were not able to reſiſt] Here alſo was the promiſe of Chriſt, Luke 21. 15. fulfilled.

v. 11. then they ſuborned men which ſayd] They inſtructed falſe-witneſs what they ſhould ſay againſt Stephen: ſo ſuch artifices, Satans inſtruments ſtill turn themſelves.

v. 12. They ſtirred up the people] Being foiled in their diſputes, they burn with revenge, compoſing their plot againſt him, firſt by ſuborned witneſſes, next by clamouring among the people, and complaining him to the Prieſts; and then by laying violent hands on him, to convent him before the council.

v. 13. To ſpeak blaſphemous words, &c.] Their accuſations run very high, firſt that he ſpake words againſt that holy city, and the temple, and ſecondly that he alſo blaſphemed the law: it is uſuall for the moſt impious to accuſe the ſervants of God, of greateſt impieties: ſo they accuſed the moſt Holy Ieſus: ſuch accuſations faſten not on the juſt, (for God will finally judge) but render the accuſers the more unjuſt and guilty.

v. 14. That this Jeſus, &c.] This they ſpake in ſcorn and contempt: ſo they miſconſtrued, and wreſted the words of this Holy Preacher; as the enemies of Religion ſtill doe.

the cuſtomes] Or rites.

v. 15. as it had been the face of an Angel] With an admirable ſplendor and Majeſty, ſuch as we read of Moſes, Exod. 34. 30. an argument of a good conſcience, and the Divine preſence of the Holy Ghoſt aſſiſting him.

CHAP. VII.

Verſe 1. ARe theſe things ſo] This ſaith he, having heard the accuſations of the falſe witneſſes; as if he would give Stephen a faire liberty to defend himſelf, whom he yet prejudged, reſolved before hand to condemn any thing which ſhould be alleaged in defence of the trueth of Chriſt. See alſo Iohn 9. 22. therefore he demanded not why Stephen preached, as he did, but whether he preached ſo, as intimating that if he preached Chriſt he was to be condemned.

v. 2. men, brethren, and fathers, &c.] Thus he ſtileth them, becauſe how ever they were profeſſed enemies of the Goſpel, yet were they governours of the Church of Iſrael, which God had not yet rejected, and thus he would gain attention to that which he ſpake, in hope it might take with ſome of them, for whom he alſo prayed, and ſo did it. See chap. 8. 1. 9. 19. 20.

the God of glory] See 1 Cor. 2. 8. he to whom all honour and glory is due. Reve. 4. 11. and 5. 12. Rom. 11. 36. this he ſaith to diſtinguiſh him from all falſe gods: and to ſhew that hee worſhipped and preached none but the true God.

when he was in Meſopotamia] in Ur of the Caldees. Gen. 11. 28. he ſpeaketh here of Meſopotamia, as comprehending Babylon, and Chaldea in it: and this he ſaith to intimate, that the true Religion was not (as ſome of them vainly conceived) tyed to Jeruſalem, or Paleſtine: for God appeared to Abraham being yet in Meſopotamia, and called him thence, and that he went not immediatly into Canaan, but dwelt a time in Carran, a City of Meſopotamia, unto the death of his Father Thare: the purpoſe is to ſhew them, that there was truth of Religion with Abraham, before he ever ſaw Canaan, or that he received circumciſion, and before any of the ceremonies appointed by the miniſtry of Moſes were in uſe; before there was either temple, or tabernacle. See Rom. 4. 10. &c. Carran was a city famous for the deſtruction of Craſ- ſus, and the Roman army there. Plutarc. Craſ. Dio. Roman. lib. 40. Plin. nat. hiſt. lib. 5. cap. 24.

v. 3. Get thee out of thy Countrey] Gene. 12. 1. Hebr. 11. 8.

v. 4. Then came he out] When he had received a command from God; which commendeth the readineſs of his faith, ſubjecting all his intereſt and affections, to Gods will and pleaſure.

he removed him] God removed him, or removing him cauſed him to dwel, by commanding him to go into Canaan, which he would give to his poſterity. Gen. 11. 26.

v. 5. gave him no inheritance, &c.] Theſe things are ſaid in reſpect of the generall and full poſſeſſion, which he gave him in his poſterity: for otherwiſe he purchaſed a field of Ephron. Gene. 23. 17. thus God tryed Abraham, and thus he tryeth many of thoſe whom he calleth heirs of the world (Rom. 8. 17. Tit. 3. 7. 1 Cor. 3. 22.) ſuffering them for the preſent to want poſſeſſions, that they may learn with Abraham to caſt themſelves wholly on Gods providence, and to follow his guidance.

when as yet he had no childe] This ſetteth off the excellency of Abrahams faith. See Gene. 15. 2. &c.

v. 6. that his ſeed ſhould ſojourn] This alſo ſheweth Abrahams faith depending on God, while yet to carnall reaſon there appeared no probability of enjoying thoſe promiſes, he and Sarah being old, and childleſs; God telling of a poſterity, but to be as he ſaid, Gen. 23. 4. גר־ותושב ger-vethoſhab. 70 πάροικος καὶ παρεπίδημος, a Stranger and ſojourner, that they ſhould live in bondage, and be evilly entreated ſo long.

after that] The 400 yeers ended, Iſrael the ſeed of Abraham ſhall come out of Egypt, the ſelf-ſame day. Exod. 12. 41.

and ſerve me in this place] That is on mount Horeb. See Exod. 3. 1. 12. Exod. 17. 1. 6. Deut. 1. 2. 6. 19. & 4. 10. 15. & 18. 16. & 29. 1. God delivereth his people out of preſſures, and miſeries, that they may ſerve him. See Luke 1. 74. 75.

v. 8. and he gave] Gene. 17. 9. which ſignified the cutting off carnall affections. Theophylact.

Abraham begat Iſaac] Gene. 21. 3. Matth. 1. 2.

Iſaac begat Jacob] Gene. 25. 26. Matth. 1. 2.

Jacob begat the twelve Patriarchs] Gene. 29. 31. &c.

v. 9. the Patriarchs moved with envy] Gene. 37. 28.

God was with him] He favoured, bleſſed, and delivered him, verſe 10.

v. 10. and delivered him] This was the effect of Gods preſence, never inactive for his ſervants good: he did at laſt deliver Joſeph from the ſervitude and calamity into which his brethren ſold him, from the malice and calumny of his lewd miſtris, and from priſon; if God be with thee, fear not. Rom. 8. the ſoul cannot be in the body without ſome ſhews, and effects of life, much leſs can the Spirit of God be with the elect in vain.

and gave him favour] Gene. 41. 37.

v. 11. then came a dearth, &c.] Gene. 41. 54.

v. 12. but when Jacob heard] Gene. 42. 1.

v. 13. at the ſecond time] Gene. 45. 4.

v. 14. all his kinred] πᾶσαν τὴν συγγένειαν, the word ſignifieth both conſanguinity and affinity, as doth the word cognatio among the Latines (which the interpreter of the Syriac here uſeth) import kinred, or alliance: and ſo συγγενὴς, is kin, or allie, either man or woman, as Suidas interpreteth: the number here mentioned, compared with that number coming out of Egypt. Exod. 12. 37. ſix hundred thouſand men beſides children, conſidering their abode in Egypt, and Pharaohs cruelty to deſtroy their children, may well be reckned among the admirable works of God. Deut. 10. 22.

threeſcore and fifteen ſouls] whereas theſe perſons are variably reckned. 66. 70. & 75. we may conceive that this variety proceedeth from the ſeverall accounts; in one account they onely are reckoned, who lineally deſcended from Jacob, to bee ſixty ſix perſons. Gene. 46. 26. in a ſecond account, the whole number of the promiſed ſeed going into, or being in Egypt, are reckoned ſeventy perſons; for ſo, if we account, Jacob; Joſeph, Ephraim, and Menaſſes with the ſixty ſix of the firſt account, the number is ſeventy ſpecified, Gene. 46. 27. in a third account are reckoned Jacobs Sons wives (excepted in the former reckonings, as appeareth. Gene. 46. 26.) to make up the ſeventy five perſons in this word συγγένειαν, ſignifying, as hath beeu ſaid, as well affinity (or kinred by marriage) as conſanguinity or kindred by blood, one thing in this and the like places, is ever neceſſarily to be remembred, that the Apoſtle did not in vain warn us of too much curioſity about fruitleſs queſtions. See 1 Tim. 1. 4. Tit. 3. 10.

v. 15. ſo Jacob went down into Egypt] Gene. 46. 5. Hereby he would ſhew them that their fathers had the truth of Religion, and Gods favour in Egypt, before they had either ceremony, temple, or Canaan to repair to, to the end that they might not vainly put ſanctity in place, or ceremony.

v. 16. and were carried over] Meaning Jacob, and Joſeph at leaſt, if not all the reſt of the Patriarchs dying in Egypt.

into Sychem] underſtand this diſtributively, as if he ſaid, ſome were buried in Sychem which Jacob bought, Gen. 33. 19. as Joſeph, which fell to his let in his ſon Ephraim, Joſh 24. 32. and ſome (as Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob Gene. 50. 13.) were buried in Hebron, in the field that Abraham bought for money of Ephron (Gene. 23. 17.) See Matth. 26. 8. John 12. 4.

of the ſons of Emmor] Or, beſides that of the Sons of Emmor of Sychem, beſides that place, or Sepulchre which Jacob bought of the Sons of Emmor of Sychem, where Joſephs bones were buried here is ſet παρὰ τῶν υἱῶν, for παρὰ τὸ μνημεῖον τῶν υἱῶν Ἐμμόρ, that is, præter illud Sepulchrum filiorum Emmor.

v. 17. when the time of promiſe drew near] That is, when the time of fulfilling Gods promiſe made to Abraham, drew neer; for multiplying his ſeed. Gene. 15. 5. then God encreaſed them, when men endeavoured malitiouſly to deſtroy them.

v. 18. untill another king aroſe] Another Pharoah: (ſo their Kings were called, as the Roman Emperours Ceſars, ſucceeded that Pharaoh, who had Joſeph and his kinred in ſo much honour.

v. 19. The ſame dealt ſubtilly with our kinred] The Syriac hath it, he compoſed or ſet himſelf againſt our kinred: the word κατασοφισάμενος, of κατασοφίζω (which is ſophiſtically to deceive, to beguile or circumvent with a fallacy) importeth, craftily deviſing, or plotting againſt one: he alludeth to that which Pharoah ſaid. Exod. 1. 10. come, ſayd hee נתחכמה לו nithchachema lo. 70. κατασοφισώμεθα αὐτούς; the word here uſed, חכם chacham ſignifieth aſtutus fuit, he was crafty, and, ſapuit; hee was wiſe: and ſo חכמה chochma, is craft, as well as wiſdom: ſo here it importeth a clandeſtine and ſecret deſtroying the Iſraelites: for ſo he firſt gave in charge to the midwives: but that not taking, he uſed open violence, commanding the male infants to be caſt into the river. See Pſal. 105. 24.

v. 20. in which time Moſes was born] Exod. 2. 2.

was exceeding fair] Hebr. 11. 23. Or fair to God ἀστεῖος τῷ Θεῷ the Hebrew hath it טוב, which with them ſignifieth, good, or beautifull. Exod. 2. 2. the 70. give it ἀστεῖον and Gene. 24. 16. Rebecca is ſayd to be טבת tobath, where the 70. give it καλή, very fair to look upon beautifull to God, which Stephen here addeth, is emphaticall; for every excellency is attributed to God, ſo Ninive is ſaid to be עיר־גדולה לאלהים gir-gedolah lelohim, a city great unto the Lord; that is a very great, or beautifull city. So Moſes was fair τῷ Θεῷ, that is, by the ſingular providence and counſel of God that hereby Pharoahs daughter might be moved to ſave him, and bring him up as her Son, thereby fitting him for the great work to which God had aſſigned him, of his beauty Juſtin. alſo ſpeaketh. hiſt. l. 36.

v. 21. for her own Son] Exod. 2. 9. 10. Hebr. and he was unto her לבן leben, the 70. as here, εἰς υἱόν (chald. לברא) Elias Hutter rendreth it, quem illa adoptavit in locum filii whom ſhe adopted her ſon, ſo ſhe kept him and brought him up, as if he had been her own Son.

v. 22. in all the wiſdom of the Egyptians] In Philoſophy, and all the liberall ſciences of the Egyptians.

v. 23. to viſit his brethren] ἐπισκέψασθαι; which as it ſometimes importeth viſiting to puniſh. Jer. 5. 9. μὴ ἐπὶ τούτοις ἐπισκέψομαι: ſhall I not viſit for theſe things? ſo alſo it ſignifieth, to viſit for help and comfort; as Phiſicians viſit their patients: ſo they ſaid, Luk. 7. 16. the Lord ἐπεσκέψατο hath viſited his people: ſo were the governours of the Church, called ἐπίσκοποι, quorum eſt inſpectio in profeſſis Chriſti, & ſermonem, ſaith Budæus; becauſe they were quaſi ſpeculatores, overſeers of the faith and manners of the people committed to their charge. See chap. 20. 28. So the Apoſtles viſited the Churches which they had planted, to reform their errours in faith and converſation, and to confirme and comfort them in the truth: now that Moſes having been brought up fourty yeers in king Pharaohs court, ſhould on a ſudden have it come into his heart, to look into the condition of his afflicted brethren the Iſraelites, it appeareth to be by the inſtinct and motion of Gods Spirit, to do that which neither they, nor Moſes before thought of.

v. 24. ſeeing one of them] Exod. 2. 11.

ſmote the Egyptian] See Exod. 2. 11. he did not herein give an imitable example for any private revenge, but to ſhew them that he was appointed a deliverer for Iſrael, which he hoped they would have underſtood. verſe. 25. the power of the ſword is in the lawfull Magiſtrate chiefly.

v. 26. The next day] Exod. 2. 13.

he ſhewed himſelf] He offered himſelf again unto them, in that poſture of a deliverer out of thoſe afflictions, and that appointed by God.

would have ſet them at one] Suadebat: Syr. interpret. Suadebat eis; he gravely exhorted them to peace: it is a principall part of a governours office, to compoſe contentions, and to preſerve peace.

Sirs ye are brethren, why do ye &c.] He remembreth them of their near conjunction, and the bonds of nature which ought to unite them in love and peace: all diſſention is evil, but that worſt, which breaketh the bands of nature, or holy profeſſion. It was Joſephs charge to his brethren. Gen. 45. 24. See that ye fall not out by the way; and their argument of reconciliation to Joſeph, forgive the treſpaſſe of the ſervants of the God of thy father. Gen. 50. 17. diviſions between brothers and profeſſors of one religion, are offences multiplyed by all the bonds which ſhould unite them together.

v. 27. But he that did his neighbour wrong, thruſt him away, &c.] Which ſheweth that the injurious are moſt averſe from peace, an evil conſcience hating any diſcovery, and ſin being impatient of any reproof. See Prov. 15. 12. yet they to whom God hath committed this charge, muſt perform it for their own indemnity. See Ezek. 3. 19.

v. 28. wilt thou kill me, as thou didſt &c.] Moſes dealt meekly with him, but he that was faulty (as Oecumen. ſaith) πατρίῳ χρησάμενος κατὰ τῶν εὐεργετῶν ἀναιδείᾳ, uſing his countrey (a Jewiſh) procacity againſt their benefactours rejected him; by this his intended recrimination aſſaying to cauſe Moſes to deſiſt from reproving: ſo the guilty would ever vail their crimes by others failings, or their own calumnies.

v. 29. Moſes fled at this ſaying] See Exod. 2. 15. &c. When Moſes perceived that it was carried to court by ſome of his own brethren, and that Pharaoh ſought to ſlay him, he ſaved himſelf by flight into another nation and dominion.

a ſtranger in the land of Madian] Or Midian: a people that came of Madian, Abrahams ſon by Keturah. Gen. 25. 1, 2. here Moſes married with Zipporah, daughter of Jethro, or Jether (he was alſo called Reuel. Exod. 2. 18. and Hobab. Numb. 10. 29. Jud. 4. 11.) Prieſt or Prince of Midian: where he had two ſons born.

v. 30. When fourty yeers were expired] Exod. 3. 2. Here was the long tryall of Moſes faith; and the miſchief that one or few mens ſins brought upon all Iſrael, driving away their deliverer; and as much as in them was, lengthening their heavy oppreſſion fourty yeers: this was their ingratitude to God and Moſes, whom they ſorely wanted all that time.

In the wilderneſſe of mount Sina] Where he kept the flock of Jethro his father in law, on the back-ſide of the deſart of Arabia. Exod. 3. 2. (with ſo much humility as if he had never been brought up at court, as a ſon of king Pharaohs daughter) with admirable patience expecting Gods time for Iſraels deliverance: this place was called the wilderneſſe or deſart of Sina, or Sin; which is all that countrey that lyeth between Elim (where Iſrael found twelve wells of water &c. Exod. 15. 27.) and Sinai. Exod 16. 1. there was much paſture for cattell: it took name from that very high mount Sinai, which was alſo Agar. Gal. 4. 25. and Horeb, the mountain of the Lord, which is a part thereof it having two heads or tops; that on the weſt is Horeb, that on the weſt part of the mount Sinai: it was called the mountain of the Lord, becauſe it was great, high and excellent (See on verſ. 20.) or becauſe it was ſanctified of God by his appearing to Moſes firſt, Exod. 3. 2. &c. and again when he came down upon it to give the law, Exod. 18. 5, and 19. 3. 17. 18. fifty dayes after their departure from Egypt. See Jerom To. 3. Fabiolæ. Of. Manſ. and de loc. Hebr. Horeb ſignifieth dryneſſe, of חרב charab, aruit. So Hag. 1. 11. I called חרב Choreb a drought, or dryneſſe for this wilderneſſe had not waters, Deut. 8. 15. this mount had the name of Sina, Ex. 19. 1. 18. either of the buſhes there growing, (for סנה ſeneh is a buſh or bramble, Jerom Fabiola q. 15.) or becauſe God there appeared to Moſes in the buſh burning, but not conſuming.

an angel of the Lord] The angel of the covenant Chriſt, as appears verſe 32.

v. 31. when Moſes ſaw it he wondred] To ſee the fire in the buſh, and it not conſumed, which bare a type of the Church in fiery tryals not deſtroyed. See Jerom q. 5. this was done, that Moſes might be toucht with the ſence of Gods preſence, and to be made more attentive to that which he would then give him in charge.

the voice of the Lord came unto him] ἐγένετο φωνὴ, &c. it is an uſual Hebraiſm, Jer. 7. 1. &c. 70. ἐγένετο λόγος κυρίου, &c. Jer. 1. 4. the Syriack hath it here, the Lord ſaid unto him בקלא bekolo, in a voice; that is, the Lord ſpake to him, not in a viſion or dream (as ſometimes he did to the Patriarchs and Prophets) but in an audible voice.

v. 32. I am the God of thy Fathers, &c.] That Moſes might not doubt of his calling, God who called him, revealeth himſelf to him, to which end alſo he mentioneth his mercies to the Fathers, unto whom he made the promiſes of delivering his people, their poſterity from the bondage they were now in; to aſſure him that he would performe the ſame, and that the time was now come wherein he would do it: hereon was Moſes confidence grounded, becauſe he had the ſure covenant of God with the Fathers, and his word to himſelf for warrant: from this place, Exod. 3. Chriſt proveth the reſurrection of the dead, Matth. 22. 31.

Moſes trembled and durſt not behold] So dreadful is the preſence of God to fleſh and blood, though appearing in mercy. See Exod. 19. 16. Dan. 8. 17. this was to ſtrike the greater reverence into Moſes. See alſo Exod. 20. 20. nulla quippe admiratio eſt ſine quadam formidine, Auguſtin. in Pſal. 105. there is no admiration without a certain fear.

v. 33. put off thy ſhoes from thy feet] In ſigne of reverence, and reſignation of thy ſelf unto my providence. See Ruth. 4. 7.

is holy ground] In reſpect of Gods preſent manifeſtation of his preſence and majeſty there.

v. 34. I have ſeen, I have ſeen] Exod. 3. 7. ראה ראיתי raoh raithi, 70. ἰδὼν εἶδον, I have ſurely ſeen, this doubling among the Hebrews is emphaticall: God is ſaid to ſee our evil or affliction, when he regardeth it ſo as to undertake our deliverance: as on the contrary he is ſaid to ſhut his eyes or ears, or to turn away; when he will not regard, or deliver: this is ſpoken to our capacity: and ſo he is ſaid to hear their groanings, and to come down; though indeed the evidence of every fact or paſſion be ever preſent with him, and though he who filleth heaven and earth, comprehending all, comprehenſible of none, changeth not place (Jer. 23. 24.) yet is he ſaid to deſcend when he evidently manifeſteth his preſence: this Stephen here mentioneth to bear down all opinion of merit in their fathers, God ſaw nothing in them but afflictions to pitty. See verſe 51.

v. 35. by the hands of the Angels] This Moſes whom they ingratefully calumniated as a delinquent, did God honour in making him a ruler and deliverer of Iſrael, by the hand of the Angel of the Covenant, Chriſt. Gr. ἐν χειρὶ in the hand, that is by the hand: Hebrews uſed to ſay ביד bejad in the hand, for by the hand. So Levit. 26. 46. &c. they called any thing which was an inſtrument to act by יד jad: but here it importeth the principall agent, Chriſt; (as 1 Cor. 10. 4.) by whoſe power Moſes was enabled to that great work.

v. 36. ſhewed wonders] Exod. 7. 9. &c.

in the red ſea] Exod. 14. Hebr. ים סוף jam ſuph, mari junci, or juncoſum; becauſe of the abundance of bulruſhes growing on the ſhore, ſome think it ſo called: but it is called the red ſea; from the colour of the ground or ſand appearing through the ſhallow waters, as V. Shindler. Pentegl. notes, So Ariſtophanes Avib. calleth it ἐρυθρὰν θάλατταν. See Strabo l. 16. Plin. l. 13. 25. Some give the Hebr. by mare finis, becauſe it is mare ultimum terræ ſanctæ; the bound of the holy land (Shindl. citeth Benjamin itinerar.) ſo indeed it is to the ſouthward. Exod. 23. 31.

and in the wilderneſſe] Exod. 16. &c.

v. 37. a Prophet ſhall the Lord &c.] Deut. 18. 15.

like unto me] Or as my ſelf.

v. 38. This is he that was] Exod. 19. 3.

Church in the wilderneſſe] Or congregation.

lively oracles] The powerfull words which God ſpake to Moſes. See Numb. 12. 6, 7, 8. John 6. 68.

v. 39. Our fathers would not obey] He ſheweth here, that their fathers of whom they ſo much gloried, were rebellious againſt God, who delivered them by the Miniſtry of Moſes, as they now were againſt Chriſt, who came to ſave them from ſin and deſtruction: ſo that neither they, nor their fathers had any merit to ſave them.

in their hearts turned back] That is, in their deſires and affections. See Numb. 14. 3, 4.

v. 40. Saying unto Aaron] Exod. 32. 1.

make us gods to go &c.] That is, images to be carried before us; or to prepare our way: this ſhewes their minde to return to Egyptian idolatry, and impious manners.

we wot not what is become of him] Thus ſtupidly and ingratefully do they contemn that admirable deliverance which God wrought for them, by Moſes, they knew he was gone up into the mount by Gods command, that he had left Aaron and Hur to govern them, untill he returned. Exod. 24. yet ſo quickly had they forgotten God, of whoſe power and gracious preſence, they had ſo much, ſo late experience. Pſal. 106. 13. 21.

v. 41. They made a calf in thoſe dayes] In Imitation of the idolatrous Egyptians, who worſhipped Apis under the ſhape of an Ox. See Ammianus Marcelin. l. 22. Alexandr. genial. dier. l. 6. c. 2. Pſal. 106. 19, 20. Rom. 1. 23. and Minuc. Fel. Octav. Athanaſ. contr. Gent. orat.

and offered ſacifice unto the idol] Sacrificing was then proper to God alone (as Auguſtin proves, de civ. Dei. l. 10. 4.) but here was their groſſe idolatry though they might poſſibly pretend that they would ſerve God by the idol, their worſhip being not (as ſome now would excuſe it) by any means terminative in the creature ſeen. See 1 Cor. 10. 20. but theſe making an idol, forſook God.

rejoyced in the works of their own hands] See Exod. 32. 6. So prone are idolaters to adore their own, though moſt irrationall and fooliſh inventions, as this was; and to pleaſe themſelves with (that which diſpleaſeth God) the moſt ſacrilegious profanations: this is the devils joy, cujus gaudium eſt ruina ſanctorum. Proſper. reſ. ad Gal. whoſe joy is mans ruine.

v. 42. Then God turned, and gave them up] So Rom. 1. 25, 26. God withdrew that talent of generall grace, or light of knowledge which they made ſo bad an uſe of, giving them up to wretched apoſtacie: yet as Fulgent. de prædeſt. ad Monim. l. 1. truely ſaith, nullus hominum juſtè peccat, quamvis eum, juſtè Deus, peccare permittat; juſtè enim deſeritur à Deo, qui deſerit Deum: & quia homo deſerens Deum, peccat, deſerens peccatorem Deus, juſtitiam ſervat: no man juſtly ſins, though God juſtly permits him to ſin: for juſtly is he forſaken of God, who forſaketh God: and becauſe man forſaking God, ſinneth; God forſaking the ſinner, doth juſtice.

as it is written &c.] Amos 5. 25. He denyeth that they offered unto him, becauſe they corrupted his worſhip, and ſo in effect he was not worſhipped at all. See Iſaiah 43. 22. God not accepting the ſacrifice of the wicked. Iſaiah 1. 11. they are abomination to him. Prov. 28. 9. Pſal. 50. 16. 17. 23.

v. 43. ye took up the tabernacle of Moloch] Moloch, or Melchom, which ſome call Saturne (Minuc. Fel. q. ſ.) others Mars: the abomination of the children of Ammon. 1 Kings 11. 5. 7. to whom they ſacrificed their ſons and daughters.

your God, Remphan] That which the Prophet Amos 5. 26. calleth כיון Chijun: See hereof Jo. Druſius com. 1. ad Voc. N. T. Remphan, and præferit l 5. Acts 7. 43. that for Chijun, the Greeks read Ρεμφὰν, Ραιφὰν, Ρεφὰν, (as the Syriac hath it רפן) Ραφὰν, as Juſtin. Martyr. dial. cum Try. Jud. or Ρεφφὰν, as Oecumenius, it ſheweth much variety of reading, rather then matter: other idols were variably called likewiſe; it may be, it was the ſtatue of a Gyant, as the Egyptians were wont to make Hercules, whom they called Chon, which varied into another tongue, might eaſily make Chijun, and it may be Ρεφὰ or Ρεφὰν, might in the change from Hebrew to Greek, come of רפא, rapha, (a Gyant) as Gen. 14. 5. and ſmote רפאים the Rephaims in Aſteroth, that is the Giants, or men of ſtrength, or monſtrous ſtature: it may be that Stephen ſpake the words of the Prophet in his own tongue, and that Luke writing in the Greek, followed their manner of ſpeaking: it is not materiall, the ſin here reproved was not in the name, but thing, which was an idol, and abomination how ever variably called. Moſt probably it was Moloch or Saturn: now Saturn among the Egyptians (where the 70. tranſlated) was called Ρεφὰν: ſee the notes of Ludovicus de Dieu upon this place; and Athanaſius Kirkerus c. 5. Prodrom. Copti. pag. 147.

and I will carry you &c.] Or therefore.

beyond Babylon] Into Perſia; a countrey in the eaſt part of Aſia; the Prophet Amos, 5. 27. hath, therefore will I cauſe you to go into captivity beyond Damaſcus: that is further then the people of Damaſcus, which Stephen here interpreteth, beyond Babylon: for as the learned Junius ſaith, the people of Damaſcus were carried away (by the king of Aſſyria Tiglath-Pileſer) into (Kir) Syromedia near Suſa (that royal city where Cyrus had his magnificent Palace. Eſter 3. 15. & 8. 15. & 1, 2, 3. and other Perſian Monarches) 2 King 16. 9. but the Iſraelites both much further into Perſia, and alſo into the region of the Caſpians; as appeareth, Ezra 8. 17.

v. 44. the tabernacle of witneſſe] ἡ σκηνὴ τοῦ μαρτυρίου, that which the Hebrews called אהל מועד ohel mohed; either the tabernacle of condition, becauſe Iſrael was commanded to come thither to aſk counſell of the Lord: (compare Exod. 33. 7. with Exod. 40. 2.) or the tabernacle of the congregation. Exod. 33. 7. becauſe there Iſrael congregated in ſolemn aſſemblies; and here Stephen calleth it the tabernacle of witneſſe, becauſe here God principally witneſſed, or ſhewed his glorious preſence, and where the ark of the covenant was, and the law and teſtimonies, concerning the appointment and making hereof. See Exod. 25. Exod. 26. & 27.

that he ſhould make it &c.] Exod. 25. 40.

v. 45. in with Jeſus] With Joſhua, who bare both name and type of Jeſus Chriſt, in that he brought Iſrael into the promiſed reſt.

v. 46. deſired to finde a tabernacle &c.] David found favour to know where the ark ſhould reſt, and the temple ſhould be built, as alſo by whom; when he had begged it in earneſt prayer. See Pſal. 132. 2 Sam. 24. 18. 2 Sam. 7. 10. 13. 1 Chron. 21. if then unto Davids time the tabernacle had no fixed ſeat, it muſt follow, that the worſhip of God is not tyed to place.

v. 47. But Solomon built him an houſe] 1 Chron. 17. 12. 1 Kings 6. 1, 2. &c. 2 Chron. 3. 1, 2.

v. 48. the moſt high dwelleth not in temples made &c.] Chap. 17. 24. that is, is not comprehended in any place, though he will be worſhipped in place: he taxeth the impiety of them, who truſted in an imaginary ſanctity derived to them from the temple, which they yet profaned, abuſed, and neglected the true worſhip of God, there to have been duely performed.

v. 49. Heaven is my throne] Iſaiah 66. 1, 2.

v. 50. hath not my hand made &c] Hands are attributed to God, according to our capacity: the ſcope is to intimate, that God hath no need of gold, curious ornaments of his temple, nor ſacrifices; as Pſal. 50. 10, 11, 12. &c. and that the ſubſtance of Gods worſhip conſiſteth not in outward ceremonies; neither did he require any offerings for his own ſake, but to exerciſe men in the duties of piety, and obedience to him: whereby it appeareth, how much diſtant humane inventions are, from true religion and worſhip of God.

v. 51. ye ſtiff necked] He alludeth to the words of Jeremie 7. 26. and other like. See Exod. 33. 3. Deut. 9. 6. meaning that they were ever obſtinate, and would not ſubmit to the guidance of Gods word.

uncircumciſed in heart and ears] Who carry the external ſigne of circumciſion in the fleſh, but have not the effect thereof, and inward regeneration of the heart. See Rom. 2. 28, 29. Jer. 9. 26.

v. 52. which of the prophets] He ſheweth that their diſobedience to God, and perſecution of the Prophets was not new with them, but even as it were hereditary; ſo that their pretence of ſucceſſion and holy anceſtours was but a vain oſtentation.

of the juſt one] That is, Chriſt, 1 John 2. 1. Acts 22. 14. Chriſt our righteouſneſſe, 1 Cor. 1. 30. in whom onely we are juſtified, Rom. 5. 1.

v. 53. by the diſpoſition of angels] By the miniſtery of Angels, by the mandate (as the Syriack hath it) or proclaiming of Angels, Deut. 33. 2. Gal. 3. 19. Hebr. 2. 2. the meaning is, if ye deſpiſe the law, given by ſo glorious and dreadful a miniſtery; no marvel if you deſpiſe the goſpel propoſed to you in ſo ſimple and mean a manner.

v. 54. were cut to the heart] See chap. 5. 33. It is very true, nunquam ſine querela, ægra tanguntur: Senec. de ira. c. 10. you can never touch the ſore without the grief of the patient: all would be praiſed, nulli grata reprehenſio eſt (ſaith Salvian de gub. Dei l. 8. init.) none love reproof (none but the wiſe. Prov. 9. 8. & 19. 25.) that which is worſe, the moſt wicked caſt away would rather hear his own falſe praiſes, then true reprehenſion; and be deceived with jeering applauſe, then ſaved with wholſome admonitions.

v. 55. the glory of God &c.] In this extraordinary viſion, he ſaw the admirable glory of Chriſt in heaven, as mortall man could apprehend, to ſtrengthen him in this tryall.

v. 56. I ſee the heaven opened &c.] This he teſtifieth, to aſſure them, that they did but vainly ſtrive againſt the truth of Chriſt, whom they ſuppoſed to be deſtroyed by their malice, for he was now in the higheſt glory, reigning with God in heaven.

on the right hand of God] See Pſal. 110. 1. Mark 16. 19. Hebr. 1. 3. this is a tranſlatitious ſpeech complying with our underſtandings, taken from things familiar and known to us, with whom the right hand is the place of honour. See 1 King. 2. 19. Pſal. 45. 9. here underſtand not with the fooliſh Anthropomorphites (of whom ſocrat. hiſt. eccleſ. l. 6. c. 7.) that God hath parts and lineaments like man, but as Peter Chryſologus well expreſſeth it Serm. 57. Deus loca neſcit, divinitas recipit nil ſiniſtrum: God is not in any place (circumſcribed) the deity hath no left hand: and as Gr. Nazianzen, orat. 37. ſaith of ſuch like attributes καὶ τοῦτο ἡμέτερον, this alſo belongeth to us: and is attemperated to our capacity: here he intimateth Chriſts ſtanding as an advocate with the father 1 Joh. 2. 1. who is elſwhere deſcribed ſitting as a Judge. Mark 16. 19. &c. So ſaith Ambroſ. l. 10. ep. 82. ſtabat Jeſus quaſi advocatus--ſedens enim iudicat, all importeth his power and kingdom over all, and his care of us.

v. 57. then they cryed out] This they do to interrupt his further audience: ſo wicked men contend with clamors and violence: ſo greivous was it to Chriſts enemies to hear of his glory: what will it be to ſee it, and feel his power? See chap. 22. 23.

v. 58. and ſtoned him] Thus that impiety which began with ſhew of juſtice endeth in tumultuous and raging violence: thus they were to proceed againſt falſe Prophets, Deut. 13. 10. and to caſt out blaſphemers. Levit. 24. 14. but here tyranny turned judgement into wormwood; and the wicked and damnable condemn and deſtroy the innocent and juſt: the Romans permitted them not this power, but this they acted in a popular rage. See John 18. 31.

the witneſſes layd down their clothes, &c.] For the true witneſſes againſt blaſphemers were to begin ſtoning. Deut. 17. 7. they were before, murderers in their tongues by their falſe witneſs, and now their ſeared conſciences fear not to embrue deſperate hands, in innocent blood.

at a young mans feet whoſe name was Saul] See chap. 22. 4. 20. afterward, called Paul, that excellent Apoſtle of Chriſt. c. 9. on whom God ſhewed ſo great mercy in his converſion. 1 Tim. 1. 13. &c. in how deſperate a condition was he, whoſe youth was ſo active in perſecuting Chriſt? yet God ſhewed mercy on him, that none might deſpair, who can but repent and convert.

v. 59. Lord Jeſus receive my Spirit] Probably he uſed more words, but theſe were the ſum of all. See Pſal. 31. 6. this is the true comfort of the elect, that they are aſſured that Chriſt Jeſus who dyed for them, in their diſſolutions receiveth their Souls into his ſafe and bleſſed cuſtody (See 1 Pet. 4. 19.) to live with him who is the life, and God of the living. Luke 23. 43.

v. 60. And he kneeled down] The moſt decent geſture of humble ſuppliants. See 2 Chron. 6. 13. Pſal. 95. 6. Dan. 6. 10. Acts 9. 40. & 20. 36. & 21. 5. Epheſ. 3. 14. Ezra. 9. 5. Luke 22. 41.

Lord lay not this ſin to their charge] This was the precept and practiſe of our Saviour. Matth. 5. 44. Luke 23. 34. this is invincible charity, which ſhall give us boldneſs before the Lord, and aſſurance that we are his: where God giveth this heart, all the injuries of the world ſhall make the ſufferers more happy: and certainly this prayer was not without ſingular effect, as appeareth in the example of Saul afterward converted. 1 Tim. 1. 16.

he fell aſleep] That is, quietly dyed, as if he had fallen into a ſweet ſleep: which term the Scripture often uſeth to give us ſecure and certain hope of reſurrection from the dead.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſe 1. AND Saul was conſenting, &c.] Chap. 7. 58. So that though he acted not, yet his conſent ſpake him guilty of the ſame crime: a minde to do evil, is ſin in the ſeed, which time bringeth forth. Jam. 1. 14. 15. there is an adultery of the heart. Matt. 5. 28. and a murder of the heart, Matth. 22. John 8. 44. God eſteemeth the evil we would do, as done, though we have not done it, & ſo, juſtly puniſheth it, merito autem malus punitur affectus, etiam cui non ſuccedit effectus. Auguſtin. de. C. D. lib. 16. cap. 4. deſervedly is an evil affection puniſhed, though the effect (or ſucceſs thereof) follow not, they that allow of the evil which others do, become guilty of the ſame ſin by their allowance: ſo were the Jews guilty of all the blood, ſhed by their fathers from Abel, ſo many ages before they had being in the world. Matth. 23. 35. becauſe in ſhedding innocent blood, they ſhewed their conſent with them, who firſt did ſo, conſider their ſtate who are now pleaſed with all the injuries done to Gods ſervants; the Syriac hath it, Saul was deſirous, and a partaker in his death.

at that time there was a great perſecution] When the people quietly ſuffered Stephens death, then they who before were awed with fear of the people, fell violently on the Chriſtians: hitherto their rage was onely againſt the Apoſtles, but now it is againſt all the Church.

all ſcattered abroad] Divided in perſons, not in doctrine; fear of their perſecutors compelling them to ſave their lives by flight: now began they to do that which Chriſt fore-commanded them. Matt. 10. 23. and ſo begań the partition wall between Jews, and Gentiles to be broken down. Epheſ. 2. 14.

except the Apoſtles] They yet ſtayed by it, having received command firſt to preach the Goſpel at Jeruſalem. Luke 24. 47.

v. 2. carried Stephen] The Body of Stephen, theſe faithfull ſervants of Chriſt, (notwithſtanding the fury of their enemies, thoſe raging butchers) buried ſolemnly, and with great mourning, conſidering the Churches loſs in him: a moderate, and pious mourning for the dead, is juſtifiable by the example of Chriſt, John 11. 35. the Patriarchs, Gen. 50. 1. &c. and the Saints here, which is obſervable againſt the unnatural apathie of Stoicks, rather then Chriſtians.

v. 3. Saul, he made havock] Which he afterward relateth of himſelf, chap. 26. 10. 11. See alſo chap. 9. 1. Gal. 1. 13. he ſpared no ſex, but brake into houſes, to drag out Chriſtians to priſon, and worſe then that, cauſed them to blaſpheme. chap. 26. 11. all this in his converſion, ſetteth off the mercy of God, who made ſo excellent a paſtour, of ſo bloody a wolf.

v. 4. went every where preaching, &c.] Thus doth God turn the malice of the enemy to the propagation of the goſpel, while they being driven from Jeruſalem, carry the light thereof, unto the Gentiles, augetur religio Dei, quanto magis premitur. Lactant. l. 5. c. 20. Gods religion flouriſheth the more, by how much more it is oppreſſed.

v. 5. then Philip went down] Probably, this was Philip the Deacon. chap. 6. 5. for the Apoſtles ſtayed at Jeruſalem. v. 1.

the city of Samaria] See on John 4. 4. and on Luk. 17. 11. the city of Samaria is here put for Samaria (as Urbs Roma, for Rome) Samaria was the name of a mountain, city, and region. See 1 Kings 16. 2 Kings 17. Samaria was the metropolis of that province: it being demoliſhed by Hircanus, was built again by Herod, and named Sebaſte. Euſeb. Joſeph. Antiq. lib. 13. c. 15. the Countrey of the Samaritans lyeth between Judea and Galilee. John 4 4.

and preached unto them Chriſt] That is, repentance, and remiſſion of ſins by Chriſt, as Luke 24. 47. preached unto them concerning Chriſt. Syr.

v. 6. with one accord gave heed, &c.] This ſheweth the admirable power of God uniting hearers hearts, and preparing them to attend, where he purpoſeth to ſave: the Syriac paraphraſeth here they attended unto him, and מתטפיסין methtephiſin, acquieſcebant omnibus, they conſented to all, or were perſwaded to all that he ſaid, טפס מתטפיסין tephas, acquieſcere obedire, &c. J. Buxtorf. Jun. lex. Chald. Syr. the ſame word is rendred ſomtimes to be perſwaded as chap. 21. 14. ſomtimes, to obey, as Gal. 5. 7. Hebr. 13. 17. &c. See chap. 5. 29. Somtimes to believe, as John 3. 36. the meaning of this place is, that the Samaritans diligently hearkned to Philip, preaching, and carefully marked what he ſaid, it is a main duty of an hearer: faith is by hearing, Rom. 10. 17 here was now the firſt degree thereto, reverend attention to the word of God; no wonder that faith is now ſo rare, how few attend to Gods word preached.

v. 7. unclean ſpirits] See Mark 1. 23. Luk. 4. 33. 36 & 6. 18. & 8. 29.

Crying with loud voice] By which it appeared that they went out by conſtraint, not willingly. See Matth. 8. 29. 31.

taken with palſies] This is that which was promiſed, Mark 16. 17. 18.

v. 8. great joy in that city] This was the effect of faith, and hope of reconciliation with God, and future ſalvation; and the effect of Gods kingdom, See Rom. 14. 17. ſuch variable effects doth one and the ſame word preached, produce; devils and wicked men are vexed, and cut to the heart with it (chap. 7. 54.) but the elect, who have intereſt in Chriſt, are glad and rejoyce at it, in this one example obſerve, what confidence concerning religion and ſanctity may be repoſed either in places, or counſells and ſocieties of men; the Goſpel was exploded, blaſphemed and perſecuted, at Jeruſalem, the once holy city, by the Scribes, Phariſees, high Prieſts, elders and their great councils; and the ſame is joyfully received in the deſpiſed Samaria.

v. 9. A certain man called Simon] This was a Magitian, witch, or conjurer, who of a long time had beſotted, and deluded the people of Samaria with his magicall inchantments, ſo that they had generally a great opinion that he was ſome one of the Gods, or that he had ſome extraordinary favour and power with them: ſo did he profeſs himſelf ſome great one, the Syriac hath it, he ſaid, I am the greateſt: of his blaſphemies ſee Euſeb. lib. 2. cap. 13. eccel. hiſt. Ireneus. adverſ. hæreſ. lib. 1. chap. 20. Epiphanius. adv. hæreſ. lib. 1. hæreſ. 21 init. it is reported that in Claudius Ceſars time there was a ſtatue ſet up in Rome in his honour with this blaſphemous inſcription, Simoni Deo Sancto. That is, to Sin on the holy God. Juſtin. Martyr. apol. 2.

v. 10. to whom they all gave heed] They marked & believed his words, as oracles, ſo eaſily are men perſwaded to believe lies: whereas Luke ſo diligently ſetteth down their great opinion of this impoſtor, he thereby ſheweth the divine power of the holy Ghoſt in Philips Miniſtry, who was to break through ſuch difficulties, that he might plant the Goſpel there.

v. 11. of long time he had, &c.] Old diſeaſes are more hardly cured; they having been ſo long time ſtupified with lying miracles, might ſeem the moſt unapt hearers of the Goſpel, but truth ſhall prevail, againſt all the power of Satan.

v. 12. but when they believed] Faith ought to precede baptiſme, in men and women of years, when they who were aliants and ſtrangers come to be baptized; for it is neceſſary, that they ſhould confeſs their faith, and teſtifie their converſion, before they be admitted by baptiſme, iſta eſt elocutio. Ambr. de pœnit. l. 2. c. 5. it is not alwayes of doubting.

v. 23. in the gall of bitterneſs] Meaning in a bitter and deſperate preſent condition.

v. 24. pray ye to the Lord for me] At leſt for fear of Gods judgements, he commendeth himſelf to the prayers of the Church; whether he truly converted or not, the Scripture being ſilent, we cannot determine.

v. 25. When they had teſtified] This importeth their office and duty enjoyned them by Chriſt, c. 1. 8. which they faithfully did, preaching the word, as they had received it from Chriſt; not only in Samaria, but in many villages adjoyning, ſuch was their unwearied and invincible induſtry.

v. 26. unto Gaza, &c.] It was deſtroyed by Alexander the great, and ſo remained waſte: ſome ſay, another of the ſame name was long after built in another place.

v. 27. an eunuch of great authority] Or, a great officer, or nobleman of the Queens court, ſee Gene. 37. ult. & 40. 2. Eſt. 4. 5.

Candace Queen, &c.] This name was not peculiar to one Queen, but was given to all that reigned there, Plin. nat. hiſt. l. 6. c. 29. as Pharaoh to the Kings of Egypt, or Cæſar to the Roman Emperours.

v. 28. read Iſaias the Prophet] This ſheweth that he had ſome knowledge of the true God, & that he came not to worſhip according to his own fancy, for he joyned reading Gods word, with his external worſhip which was to direct him therein.

v. 29. Then the ſpirit ſaid unto Philip] By revelation, or Divine inſpiration.

v. 30. Philip ran thither, &c.] He readily obeyed Gods command, and found him to whom he was ſent ſtudious of the way of God: therefore he aſked him, whether he underſtood that which he read, with purpoſe (according to the guidance of Gods Spirit) to interpret it unto him.

v. 31. how can I except, &c.] That is, except ſome who underſtandeth it, interpret it unto me, here appeared a very religious comity in ſo great a perſon, ſo wel taking Philips queſtion, and meekly acknowledging his ignorance: therefore he invited Philip to come into his charet and ſit with him.

v. 32. he was led as a ſheep to the ſlaughter] Iſa. 53. 7. as a ſheep in reſpect of his patience, and as a ſacrifice for our ſins: as a ſheep for our redemption, ἀλλὰ ποιμαίνει τὸν Ἰσραήλ. Gr. Nazian. ora. 35. yet is he the ſhepherd, to feed and keep his Iſrael.

v. 33. in his humiliation] Becauſe he took on him the form of a ſervant, ſubjected himſelf to death and ſtate of condemnation, due to us; God highly exalted him. Phil. 2. 8. 9.

his judgement was taken away] When he had ſuffered death, and fully ſatisfied the juſtice of God due to our ſins, even in the loweſt degree of his humiliation, then was he delivered ſafe from that judgement, which he ſubjected to for us.

who ſhal declare his generation] τὴν δὲ γενεὰν αὐτοῦ, his age, that is the continuation of his life, for, as Rom. 6. 9. Chriſt being raiſed from the dead, dieth no more: in the Heb. Iſa. 53. 8. דורו doro (70. γενεὰν, as here) דור dor, is duratio, ætas, ſeculum, &c. So Gen. 15. 16. ſomtimes in being doubled it ſignifieth, many ages, or eternity. Iſai. 13. 20. & 60. 15. Exod. 17. 16. Iſai. 49. 11. &c. his kingdom ſhall have no end, Luk. 1. 33. and who can declare, or recken that which is eternall.

for his life is taken from the earth] His death was the paſſage to his endleſs and eternall glory.

v. 34. Of whom ſpeaketh the Prophet this?] He enquireth of the perſon concerning whom the prophet ſpake, becauſe that was a neceſſary degree toward the opening of this propheſie; when we doubt concerning the meaning of the Scripture, we ſhould conſult them who have knowledge and the gift of interpretation.

v. 35. Philip opened his mouth] This was an uſuall manner among the Hebrews, to expreſs a beginning to ſpeak of ſome weighty matter.

v. 36. What doth hinder me to be baptized?] It appeareth hence, that among other parts of Chriſtian religion, Philip had preached to him concerning baptiſme, and that this great man had admirably profited in ſo ſhort a time of hearing, as to deſire to become a Chriſtian.

v. 37. If thou believeſt, &c.] With a ſincere and perfect heart, without which baptiſme cannot ſave, he had here to do with a man of years, and yet an aliant, and therefore might not admit him into the church of Chriſt untill he had made profeſſion of his faith.

I believe that Jeſus Chriſt is the Son of God] As baptiſme and the effect thereof is grounded in Chriſt, ſo the Eunuch deſiring to be baptized, ſpeaketh onely of Chriſt: he knew that there was one God, who from the beginning had promiſed a Meſſias to ſave the world, now hee acknowledgeth by that he heard from Philip, that Chriſt was he, prefigured under all the legall ſacrifices and ceremonies: under this title he comprehendeth all that the Scripture ſaith of Chriſt our Saviour: the like confeſſion of faith. See in Peter, Matth. 16. 16. and here we muſt know that naming Chriſt he underſtood the Sacrament of baptiſm to be adminiſtred in the name of the father Son and Holy Ghoſt: and ſo, as in faithfull prayer, when we name one of the perſons, in him we addreſs our petitions to the whole bleſſed Trinity; ſo where we read of men baptized into Chriſt, we muſt know that it was performed in expreſs terms naming all, as Chriſt appointed, Matth. 28. 19.

v. 38. They went both down into the water] They were wont to dip the whole body, or go down into the water as here, and Matth. 3. 16. and ſprinkling with water hath alſo been of uſe in the Church; the effect is all one: and indeed, baptiſm is ſomtimes expreſſed by waſhing. 2 Cor. 6. 11. Tit. 3. 5. and ſomtimes by ſprinkling. Hebr. 10. 22. 1 Peter 1. 2. which doth well anſwer to the ſprinkling of the blood of Jeſus, as was prefigured in the type, the ſprinkling of the blood of the Paſcall lambe. Exod. 12. 3. the vertue of the Sacraments conſiſteth not in the quantity of elements, but in the power of Gods ordinance: as in the Lords Supper, it ſkilleth not, how much or little thou eateſt or drinkeſt (with diſcreet moderation) but how worthily: to him that eateth more (as to the gatherers of Manna) there is not the more; nor the leſs grace to him that eateth or drinketh little; ſo in baptiſm. See on v. 39.

v. 39. That the Eunuch ſaw him no more] He was ſuddenly taken away, and tranſported by the Spirit of God, as 1 king. 18. 12. Ezek. 3. 12. 14. this was done that the Eunuch might know that Philip was ſent to him by God. Jerom de loc. Hebraic. ſaith, that this water was a brook at the foot of Bethſur, or Bethſoron, where the Eunuch was baptized.

v. 40. But Philip was found at Azotus] That is, he was preſently at Azotus, a town in Paleſtine: ſome think this city was alſo called Aſhdod, one of the five cities of the Philiſtims; Joſh. 15. 47. wherein was that idol Dagon. 1 Sam. 5. 3. Jerom. de loc. Hebr. Act.

CHAP. IX.

Verſe 1. AND Saul] chap. 22. 4. 5.

breathing out threatnings] This ſignifieth a vehement heat of an enraged heart, which his very breath diſcovered in his words: being blooded in the death of Stephen, hee purſueth other Chriſtians, with the like cruell rage: the Syriac readeth here, Saul was yet full of injuries, and cruell anger againſt the Diſciples of our Lord: but we muſt underſtand (againſt the Diſciples) to be all that there profeſſed Chriſtianity, as verſe 2. appeareth.

v. 2. and deſired of him letters] That his perſecution might have the countenance of juſtice and authority he requireth commiſſion from the High Prieſt: for the Romans having conquered all Judea, with all the adjacent countreys, permitted the Jews to live according to their own Religion (whence the High Prieſts, as Preſidents of their Great Councell, had power to examine and impriſon any of theirs, who diſſented therein, though they had not power to determine in matters capitall) therefore Saul deſired their commiſſion to convent the Chriſtians.

to Damaſcus] Damaſcus, the chief City of Syria, bearing North from Canaan; from Jeruſalem ſix dayes journey.

any of this way] That is, profeſſed Chriſtians, chap. 24. 14. all which aggravated his ſin, in that he not onely raged in Jeruſalem, but purſued them into other cities, and in that he ſpared neither man nor woman, though they are commonly priviledged, or pittied among armed enemies, by דרך derech, way, the Hebr. underſtood any courſe of life, or profeſſion. Pſal. 91. 11. 1 Kings 15. 26.

v. 3. ſuddenly there ſhined a light] He willingly perſecuted, who deſired licence ſo to do; but was converted againſt his intentions, and beſides his will: God ſuffered him to gain letters, to approach near to Damaſcus, to conceive hope, and to frame bloody thoughts for the execution of thoſe cruell deſignes, and then ſuddenly he ſtayed his courſe who ran ſo headlong to his own deſtruction: ſo true is that of Fulgentius ad Monim. l 1. prævenit impium, ut fiat juſtus, ſub ſequitur juſtum, ne fiat impius prævenit eliſum, ut ſurgat, ſubſequitur elevatum, ne cadat; he preventeth the impious, that he may become holy, he followeth the holy, that he may not become wicked; he preventeth the broken that he may riſe, he followeth him that is raiſed, that he may not fall, and that ſuddenly and without and beyond their expectation. See chap. 22. 6.

v. 4. and he fell to the earth &c] Caſt down by the power and appearing Majeſty of Chriſt (See Joh. 18. 6.) aſtoniſhing and terrifying him.

why perſecuteſt thou me?] See on chap. 4. 26. This ſheweth that thoſe who perſecute the ſervants and profeſſours of Chriſt, in them perſecute Chriſt himſelf, who liveth in them. Gal. 2. 20. See Matth 25. 40. Iſaiah 63. 9. Zach. 2. 8. for he is the head of the Church. Col. 1. 18. the Saints are his members. Epheſ. 5. 30. it ſhould teach perſecuters a cautious moderation (See chap. 5. 35.) and us who ſuffer, patience; rejoyce in as much as ye are partakers of Chriſts ſufferings. 1 Pet. 4. 13. See verſe 5.

v. 5. and he ſaid, who art thou Lord?] Theſe words proceed from an aſtoniſhed minde, in ſuſpence and doubt what to do: being dejected and humbled, he is now prepared to receive Gods commands, who before in his Phariſaical heigth of minde was upon a furious march againſt him.

Jeſus whom thou perſecuteſt] See on verſe 4. in that thou perſecuteſt them that profeſſe my name, who are one with me their head.

to kick againſt the pricks] This was a proverbiall ſpeech, noting their contumacy and folly, who would obſtinately hurt themſelves in purſuit of others: it ſignifieth here, a reſiſting God to a mans own hurt. Jer. 7. 19. 1 Cor. 10. 22.

v. 6. what wilt thou have me do?] He thought he had done right before (See John 16. 2. Phil. 3. 6.) but now finding the power of God reſiſting him, he ſubmitteth, and deſireth to know the will of God, thus extraordinarily calling him from his intentions. See Pſal. 25. 4.

ariſe and go into the city] That is, into Damaſcus (verſe 8.) now near, verſe 3.

it ſhall be told thee there what thou &c.] That is, there Ananias ſhall inſtruct thee concerning my will: thus Chriſt who could as eaſily have told him immediately what he would have him do, would yet ſend him to Ananias (Ananias as ignorant of Gods will herein, as Saul, at preſent, and ſtarting at, and declining the office enjoyned him) to confirm the authority of mans miniſtry; to teach all hearers to attend unto it as the very ordinance and power of God to ſalvation. Rom. 1. 16. and to free the preaching of Paul from all ſuſpition of compact: he could likewiſe, eâdem operâ have inſtructed that devout Centurion Cornelius (chap. 10.) by the Angel, but he cauſed him to ſend for Peter to Joppa, to come and enform him, for the ſame end.

v. 7. hearing a voice] That is, Sauls voice (as chap 22. 9. See Dan. 10. 7.) not the voice of Chriſt, except ſome confuſed ſound, the meaning whereof they knew not.

but ſeeing no man] No man ſpeaking to Saul.

v. 8. he ſaw no man] He was ſmitten blinde by the brightneſſe of that light which ſhined unto him: to teach him that he was ſpiritually blinde in his opinion of wiſedom, and rage againſt Chriſt.

v. 9. and neither did eat nor drink] So much was he amazed at that which happened to him; it may be then was his rapture which he ſpeaketh of 2 Cor. 12. 2.

v. 10. a diſciple at Damaſcus named Ananias] Thus God would beat down Sauls arrogancy; ſending him, not to any of the Apoſtles for direction, but to an inferiour Chriſtian.

to him ſaid the Lord in a viſion &c.] This was neceſſary to prepare Ananias, leſt otherwiſe he ſhould have been hindred by fear of Saul, from the duty enjoyned him for Sauls converſion: though he knew that God called and commanded, yet he excuſed; ſo did Moſes. Exod. 3. 11. &c. Exod. 4. 1. 10. &c. therefore God confirmed him.

v. 11. called Saul of Tarſus] This was a famous city of Cilicia near Antioch. chap. 21. 39. now called Hama.

for behold he prayeth] It appeareth that God revealed to Ananias, that Saul prayed, and how he would enlighten him body and ſoul, and therefore commanded him to repair to him for the accompliſhment thereof.

v. 12. and hath ſeen] Or, he ſaw; it is doubtfull whether theſe words be a continuation of Gods ſpeech to Ananias, or Lukes concerning Sauls viſion; ſome think the former moſt probable.

v. 13. Lord I have heard by many of this man, &c.] Here was Ananias infirmity: fleſh and blood objecteth many lets, and fears to divert men from, or to hinder them in the ſervice of God; but the Spirit of God prevaileth in them againſt all.

v. 14. and here he hath authority &c.] His name was ſpread far and near for a bloody perſecuter, the more famous was his converſion: and it appeareth that the Saints at Damaſcus had knowledge of his coming now, and commiſſion againſt them.

v. 15. a choſen veſſel unto me] σκεῦος ἐκλογῆς, a veſſel of election; it is an Hebraiſme, importing a choice, or elect veſſel; σκεῦος hath a more generall ſignification, and is put (as כלי cheli with the Hebr.) for a veſſel, receptacle, or any inſtrument or utencill: here it ſignifieth one whom God had choſen, to bear the divine treaſure of the Goſpel, to the Gentiles. 2 Cor. 4. 7.

v. 16. I will ſhew him how great things he muſt ſuffer] He muſt ſuffer many things for my names ſake, whereof I will before inform him, to frame him to invincible patience.

v. 17. putting his hands upon him &c.] Ananias ſheweth his obedience in going, and God his purpoſe to confirm the authority of the externall Miniſtry, in directing it ſo, that Saul ſhould receive his ſight by the impoſition of Ananias hands, who could have reſtored him to a double ſight by his own immediate power; concerning impoſition of hands, ſee ch. 6. 6.

brother Saul, the Lord &c.] He being aſſured by Chriſt of his converſion and adoption in Chriſt, ſaluteth him by the name of brother: alſo he ſheweth his authority and miſſion from Chriſt, which that Saul might be aſſured of, he nameth a private token, Chriſts appearing to him by the way as he came: and the end of his commiſſion, that he might receive his ſight, and be indued with ſuch admirable gifts of the holy Ghoſt, as might further enable him to his charge, and confirm him in the faith and truth of Jeſus.

v. 18. fell from his eyes] Theſe ſcales falling off, ſhew that his blindneſſe was not ordinary, but ſuch as might minde him of his former ſpirituall blindneſſe: for though being brought up at Gamaliels feet, he had much profited in that kinde of learning, yet his ſelf, after his illumination, accounted that knowledge no better then blindneſſe. Phil. 3. 7, 8.

and was baptized] It was neceſſary for him by this ſolemn ſigne and ſeal of Gods covenant of grace, to give his name to Chriſt, to teſtifie his converſion, and to confirm his faith in Chriſt, and him in the profeſſion of the Goſpel.

v. 19. when he had received meat &c.] A prudent and moderate care of health muſt be had, whereby we may be enabled to our calling. 1 Tim. 5. 23. ſuperſtitious abſtinence is will-worſhip. Coloſ. 2. 18. and doctrine of devils. 1 Tim. 4. 4. 1 Tim. 5. 23.

certain dayes with the diſciples] He joyned no more with Chriſts profeſſed enemies, but with the Saints: it ſkilleth much what company we keep. See 1 Cor. 5. 9. 11. Pro. 1. 15. & 2. 12. & 5. 8

v. 20. and ſtraitway he preached Chriſt &c.] Declaring him to be the Son of God, and Saviour of the Elect, which doubtleſſe he copiouſly delivered. (See verſe 22.) by that largeneſſe of heart which the holy Ghoſt gave him, beating down that double errour of the Jews, who thought, 1. that this Jeſus the Son of Mary, was not Chriſt. 2. That the Meſſias, was to be a meere man, a victorious and glorious ſecular Prince.

v. 21. were amazed] Becauſe in his ſuddain converſion they perceived the hand of God: this made his preaching more powerfull and effectuall in them.

is not this he that deſtroyed, &c.] Remembring his former actions, they admire that ſuch a perſecutor ſhould now preach the ſame Goſpel which he ſo lately, and violently oppoſed and they glorified God for him, ſee Gal. 1. 23. 24.

v. 22. proving that this is very Chriſt] By comparing or matching places of Scripture. See chap. 17. 11. and 18. 28. So the word συμβιβάζων ſignifieth, ſaith Budeus on this place, ex collatione ſacrorum vaticiniorum docens & probans, teaching and proving by comparing ſacred propheſies.

v. 23. after that many dayes were fulfilled] That is, three yeers. Gal. 1. 8.

v. 24. but their laying await was known of Saul] 2 Corinth. 11. 32.

v. 25. the Diſciples took him by night] That is the faithfull Chriſtians, thus provided for his ſafety.

v. 26. but they were all afraid of him] Between his converſion and coming again to Jeruſalem, were three years expired, Gal. 1. 17. 18. wherein he preached in ſome parts of Arabia, and thence came back again to Damaſcus: in this time was the conſpiracy of the unbelieving Jews againſt him: he eſcaping, and coming to Jeruſalem, and deſiring to unite in externall communion with the Diſciples, as now he did in the faith of Chriſt, they remembring his former rages againſt them, ſuſpected his pretences; which was a great try all to him.

v. 27. But Barnabas took him, &c.] Of him ſee chap. 4. he being thereto incited by the holy Ghoſt preſented Saul to Peter and James, acquitting him from the jealouſy they had of him: which he did by three arguments. 1. Becauſe he had ſeen the Lord Jeſus in the way, when he was going to Damaſcus to perſecute. 2. Becauſe Chriſt had ſpoken to him. 3. Becauſe he had boldly, and openly preached the Goſpel at Damaſcus.

v. 28. was with them coming in, and going out] Converſant with them, that is Peter and James, Gal. 1. 18, 19.

v. 29. he ſpake boldly] He openly profeſſed the Goſpel of Chriſt.

the Grecians] Acts 6. 1.

v. 30. forth to Tarſus] See on verſ. 11. that he might preach the goſpel to his own countrimen.

v. 31. then had the Churches reſt] When Saul (againſt whom the adverſaries were implacably enraged) was gone out of their ſight.

were edified] In that the Chuch ſtill encreaſed in the number of the faithful, and they in knowledge, faith, love, and holineſſe: this word οἰκοδομούμεναι, edified. is a metaphorical expreſſion taken from building; ſpiritually the church the houſe of God, 1 Tim. 3. 15. (as every faithful ſervant of Chriſt, is a temple of the holy Ghoſt, 1 Cor. 3. 16. 1 Cor. 6. 19.) and we are all living materials, 1 Pet. 2. 5. prepared and fitted here by the word preached, which is compared to an hammer that breaketh the rock, Jer. 23. 29. ſo as that there ſhall be in the finiſhing and ſetting all up in heaven, no noiſe thereof; as in the building of Solomons temple, 1 Kings 6. 7. there was neither hammer nor ax heard.

v. 32. all quarters] Where the Saints were, whom he was to viſit, to confirme them in the faith.

at Lydda] This town in Jeroms time was called Dioſpolis: it was a famous place, not far from the Mediterrane ſea: neer to this was Joppa, now named Japha. (Syr. לוד lud, and Hebr. לד lod,) 1 Chron. 8. 12. in the tribe of Benjamin. See Ezra 2. 33. Nehemiah 7. 37.

v. 33. a certain man named Æneas] Mentioning the diſeaſe, and the antiquity thereof before the cure, he ſetteth out the excellency of the miracle, and certainty of the hiſtory.

v. 34. Jeſus Chriſt maketh thee whole, ariſe, &c.] This he ſaid, being aſſured of the will of God herein, ſhewing that himſelf was but a ſervant unto the power of Chriſt, who wrought the cure.

make thy bed] As they who have ſlept, riſing caſt up their bed: this ſheweth that he was perfectly cured and enabled ſo to do.

he aroſe immediately] Which ſheweth that it was done by a divine power: art worketh in time and by degrees, but God when he pleaſeth in an inſtant.

v. 35. all that dwelt] As many as ſaw it; very many.

and Saron] Σάρωνα, Hebr. שרון Sharon, Iſaiah 33. 9. 1 Chron. 27. 29. 70. Σάρων, a champion countrey, or tract of fruitful land between Cæſarea of Paleſtine, mount Tabor, and the lake of Geneſareth, running along beyond Joppa: this place it ſeemeth was neer Lydda. See Jerom de loc. Act. and Joh. Druſ. ad Voc. N. T. com. 1. Saronas.

v. 36. was at Joppa] A city by the ſea ſide. See on v. 32. and Chap. 10. 5.

v. 37. whom when they had waſhed] They uſed to waſh their dead, and to anoint them before they put them into the linen in which they buried them.

v. 38. they ſent unto him two men, &c.] Here they ſhewed their faith and charity, deſiring that the pious woman might recover, and be longer profitable unto the Church.

v. 39. Peter aroſe and went] Both they who ſent for him, and Peter going, were directed ſo to do, by the holy Spirit and providence of God, for the advancement of his glory and the confirmation of the truth of the goſpel, elſe might it have ſeemed a ſtrange requeſt of the one, or undertaking of the other, to raiſe the dead.

ſhewing the coats] Which ſhe made to give to the poor.

v. 40. put them all forth] Probably he either meaneth all thoſe, who with importunate mourning might diſtract him praying; or, all, here, as verſe 35. and many other places, goeth for many. Syr he put out all the men.

opened her eyes] Her life being reſtored at that word, Tabitha ariſe. ſhe looked and ſate up.

v. 41. preſented her alive] Syr. he gave her to them alive: that is reſtored again to life.

v. 42. many believed] This was the end and fruit of the miracle, to bring them by faith to CHRIST and eternal life.

v. 43. he tarried many dayes] Until Cornelius by Gods appointment, ſent for him hence, Chap. 10. 6. 24, &c. it is likely that he ſtayed here to inſtruct them further in the truth of Chriſt, and to confirm them in the faith.

CHAP. X.

Verſe 1. Cornelius] An Italian Captain of the garriſon Souldiers of the Romans at Cæſarea.

v. 2. a devout man] It ſeemeth he was a Proſelyte in heart, though not of the circumciſion and open profeſſion.

with all his houſe] This was a good ſigne of his devotion, that his ſervants alſo feared God: and a good example for Maſters of families thus to order them: it was holy Abrahams praiſe, Gen. 18. 19.

to God alway] His prayers are commended, 1. from the object he prayed to God; not as the ſuperſtitious to creatures: 2. from their perſeverance, they were not by certain fits, in ſome fear or danger onely (then even Jonahs marriners will be devout, Jon. 1. 6.) but always without ceaſing, not without intermiſſion.

v. 3. He ſaw in a viſion] Not in a trance or rapt of ſpirit, but in a viſion, and that not obſcurely, but ſenſibly and evidently.

the ninth hour] Which was one of the Jews ſet hours of prayer, Chap. 3. 1. See Exod. 29. 41.

v. 4. thy prayers and thine alms, &c.] It is a manner of expreſſion borrowed from their burnt-offerings, which they called חולות holoth, aſcenſiones, holocauſts, burnt-offerings, Deut. 12. 6, &c. or aſcenſions: (it is of the verb הלה halah, aſcendit, &c.) or incenſe, whereof David ſaith, Pſalm 141. 2. let my prayer be ſet forth before thee, as incenſe: and Rev. 8. 4. the ſmoak of the incenſe which came with the prayers of the ſaints, aſcended up before the Lord, out of the angels hand. So came up Cornelius alms with his prayers for a memorial before God; with ſuch ſacrifices God is well pleaſed, Hebr. 13. 16. ſuch contributions to the ſaints the Apoſtle calleth, an odour of a ſweet ſmell, a ſacrifice acceptable, well pleaſing to God, Phil. 4. 18. without charity God accepteth no ſacrifice of prayers, Matth. 5. 23. 24. Prov. 21. 13.

v. 5. now ſend men] The angel ſeemeth to reſigne the office of teaching to Peter, whom God had aſſigned thereto: ſo did Chriſt to Ananias, Chap. 9. 10. God will be heard in thoſe men whom he appointeth to preach, Luke 10. 16. and it is very dangerous to contemn his ordinance.

to Joppa, and call] See on Chap. 9. 36. it was a port town, where Jonah took ſhipping when he would flie from God, Jon. 1. 3. here dwelt Simon the tanner where Peter lodged, verſe 6. Hebr יפו Japho, Gr. Ἰόππη: a very ancient town of Paleſtine, ſo named for it beauty, of יפה japha, pulcher, formoſus, as ſome think: others ſay of יפת japheth, in Jeroms time it was called Joppe, ib. in loc. Actor. now Jaffa, G. Mercat. Atl. min. in terra ſanct.

v. 6. he lodgeth with one Simon, &c.] Theſe particular inſtructions not only informed him where to finde Peter, but alſo confirmed him in his faith and obedience to Gods command.

v. 7. a devout ſouldier] See on v. 2. though it were in carnal reaſon full of danger to change religion, ſpecially in compliance with thoſe who were commonly accuſed of attempting new matters in the government of Paleſtine and Syria, yet Cornelius faith in God overcometh theſe difficulties, and preſently ſent according to Gods command: in matters of religion we muſt rely on Gods commandments, wherein delayes are dangerous, and not on carnal reaſon. The ſouldier he entruſteth, was formed according to the happy example of his maſter, verſe 2. and in his devotion not onely expreſſeth his maſters religious care to teach his family by precept and example (that moſt powerful Rhetorick) but alſo his obſequious readineſſe to learn good. In every calling men may ſerve the Lord: theſe ſhall riſe in judgement to condemn wicked ſouldiers.

v. 8. declared all theſe things unto them] Which he did, as to furniſh them for their treaty with Peter, ſo to encourage them in this ſervice, wherein the cauſe of God, and his and their ſalvations were intereſſed: his choice of ſuch men of truſt is imitable.

v. 9. about the ſixt hour] About noon which was another hour for prayer, Pſalm 55. 17. he went up to the top of the houſe, which was flat rooft.

v. 10. he fell into a trance] A Super natural elevation of the minde, by the Spirit of God, filling all the ſenſe and faculty of the ſoul with a Divine revelation.

v. 11. and ſaw heaven opened] This was the viſion which he ſaw, we may not think this viſion, reall or ſenſible according to the outward man: his ecſtaſie gave him other eyes, that is ſpirituall.

v. 12. were all manner of four footed beaſts] Wherein ſeemed to him to be all manner of beaſts, and creatures, as well thoſe which by their law were to be accounted unclean, as others.

v. 13. and eat] That is, indifferently without any reſpect to the diſtinction of clean and unclean: and therefore

God affected him with ſo ſharp and ſodain an hunger, verſe 10. becauſe he meant to preſent him a viſion ſuitable thereto.

v. 14. common or unclean] That is, which the preſcript of the law made ſuch. See Mark 7. 2. See Deut. 14. 4. &c.

v. 15. what God hath cleanſed] By taking away the difference, which he had put for the time of the ceremoniall law only: by this he was taught, not to abhor the Gentiles, ſeeing God had taken away the difference. Epheſ. 2. 14.

call thou not common] Or unclean μὴ κοίνε, (See on Matth. 15. 11.) Syr. ne contamines: do thou not ſay, or make as unclean, that is, in thy eſteem or vallew of them: ſo the Hebrews uſed to ſpeak: as Prov. 17. 15. מצדיק רשע matſdik raſhad, juſtifying the wicked: that is, accounting the wicked juſt; So the 70. ὃς δίκαιον κρίνει τ ἄδικον, &c.

v. 16. Received up again] That is, ſeemed in this viſion to be taken up again.

v. 17. while Peter doubted, &c.] διηπόρει. Syr. מתדמר methdamar, wondred: but διαπορεῖν ſignifieth (as hath been noted) ſuch a ſuſpenſion of the minde, as perplexeth and ſtraitneth it ſo, that one knoweth not what to do.

what this which he had ſeen, ſhould mean] τί ἂν εἴη. So the Syr. what it ſhould be: that is, what it ſhould ſignifie.

behold the men] The ſervants and the ſouldier which Cornelius ſent v. 7, 8.

v. 18. And called] As ſtrangers in civility uſe to do: the rather, becauſe they being Gentiles (with whom the Jews converſed not) would not by any importunity give offence: a good pattern for all godly ſouldiers.

v. 19. while Peter thought on the viſion] While his thoughts were troubled, and he ſeriouſly meditated on that which God had ſhewed him and ſaid unto him.

the Spirit ſaid unto him] By an inward revelation, the holy Ghoſt further, and more evidently inſtructed him what the meaning of the viſion was: God will never leave them without ſufficient inſtruction who faithfully meditate on that he reveileth to them.

v. 20. doubting nothing] μηδὲν διακρινόμενος. διακρίνεσθαι, is in matter of judgement to waver, as now inclining to one ſide, and then to another: Budæus interpreteth this place, without any diſpute, not doubting, citra hæſitantiam; qui enim hæſitant, ſecum ipſi diſputant ſententiis alternantibus: without heſitation or ſticking: for they that doubt, or ſtick at a thing, diſpute with themſelves with variable concluſions, this ſheweth how our mindes ought to be reſolved toward Gods word, we muſt not waver. See Rom. 4. 20. & 14. 23. there can be no peace or reſt of conſciences, but on Gods word, and reſolute adhering to the ſame.

I have ſent them] I moved them that ſent them: ſo that here is nothing fortuitous, but all directed by Gods Spirit, and holy providence.

v. 21. What is the cauſe, &c.] what buſineſs have ye with me? he knew not yet whither all this tended, and therefore enquired he more affectionately.

v. 22. a juſt man, &c.] He being a Gentile and a ſouldier, they give Peter his character, in three excellent attributes, 1. that he was a juſt man. 2. that he feared God. 3. that he lived in the good opinion and report of all the Jews that knew him: and this, not (as officious ſycophants uſe) to flatter him; but to do him right, and ſpecially to free Peter from ſuch jealouſie as might otherwiſe, make him fearfull to come to him: in all, here is a good example for ſervants, ingenuouſly to give their maſters their due honour, and faithfully to obey them.

was warned from God by an holy Angel] See Matt. 2. 12. this was their main argument to perſwade Peter to go, becauſe God called him, and had an hand in all this.

v. 23. and lodged them] Courteouſly entertained them as gueſts and ſtrangers, ξενίζειν ſignifieth alſo ξενίας χάριν τινὰ ὑποδέξασθαι. Suidas: to receive one for hoſpitality ſake, or to hoſpitality: a good example to all good men. See Heb. 13. 2. 1 Tim. 5. 10. Gene. 18. 2. 3. Gene. 19. 1. 2. 3. Exod. 2. 20. Judg. 19. 20. ſpecially for prelates. 1 Tim. 3. 1.

On the morrow, &c.] Here was Peters ready obedience to God.

and certain brethren] So the unanimous Chriſtians eſteemed each other. See chap. 9. 17. theſe out of thankfullneſſe and honour to Peter, would accompany him on the way, but Gods providence ſo diſpoſed of it, that they alſo might be witneſſes of his grace and mercy to the gentiles.

v. 24. his kinſmen, &c.] To the end that they alſo might be partakers of the grace and mercy of God with him.

v. 25. worſhipped, &c.] Not as God, with Divine worſhip; yet with too much humility, which Peter correcteth: ſee Rev. 12. 19. & 22. 8. προσεκύνησεν here tranſlated (worſhipped) ſignifieth alſo ſaluted reverendly. So the Hebrews uſe their verb שחה ſhacha, to fall down, or bow down to adoration Divine, or civil, Gen. 23. 7. Abraham aroſe ויקם וישתחו waijiſhtachu, and bowed himſelf to the people of the land, 70. προσεκύνησε τῷ λαῷ, the word here uſed: ſo that προσκυνεῖν, importing both to adore, or worſhip with Divine worſhip; and to ſalute with civil worſhip, ſuch as man oweth to man reſpectively: we cannot reaſonably think, that Abraham adored the people as God, or Cornelius Peter; yet it appeareth that Cornelius being ſtricken with reverence at the preſence of ſo great a ſervant of God, exceeded the bounds of mere civil reſpect, as appeareth by Peters words, v. 26.

v. 26. I my ſelf am alſo a man] This ſheweth that Cornelius falling down, too much enclined to the impropriation of Gods honour, and giving it to a creature, which Peter prohibiteth by this reaſon, I my ſelf am a man: he need ſay no more: man muſt adore his creator, but not be adored by his fellow creature: here is no kiſſing of Peters feet.

v. 27. as he talked with him] As Peter went on talking with Cornelius into his houſe, probably they declared either to other, the work and providence of God in their meeting, Peter excuſing himſelf thereby, for his coming to the Gentiles; and Cornelius, for his ſending for him.

v. 28. A man that is a Jew] John 4. 9. & 18. 28. The law of God forbade them to marry with heathens, to have familiar converſation with them, &c. but their tradition barred them from eating with them, or coming into their houſes, &c. chap. 11. 3. ſo that where Peter ſaith it is unlawfull, beyond that which the law of God prohibited, you muſt underſtand Peter to ſpeak ἀπὸ κοινοῦ, after the common tradition, or ſenſe of the Jews.

common or unclean] Meaning in reſpect of the diverſity of nations; for now he hereby underſtood, that God would call the Gentiles to faith and ſalvation by Chriſt.

v. 29. I ask therefore, for what intent, &c.] It is probable that he ſaith this for the companies ſake aſſembled there, that they alſo might be acquainted with the whole paſſage, and ſo be better ſatisfied, and more attentive unto that which they ſhould here: for the ſervants by the way, and Cornelius in that diſcourſe they might have going into the houſe, probably had given Peter ſome light concerning the buſineſs.

v. 30. Untill this hour] Untill this time of day. See v. 3. untill about three of the clock in the after-noon.

a man ſtood before me] The Angel in mans ſhape, verſe 3.

v. 31. thy prayer is heard] See v. 4.

v. 32. ſend therefore] See v. 5.

v. 33. immediately therefore I ſent to thee] This probably he ſaid to aſſure Peter, that he would be a carefull and attentive hearer of the myſteries of faith.

thou haſt well done] This is a kinde of thankfull acknowledgement of Peters care and pains taken in comming to him.

We are all here preſent before God] Thus he declareth for himſelf, and his friends and family, their attention, and future obedience to his doctrine: ô that this thought were in all that hear the word of God, we are all here preſent before God.

v. 34. Of a truth] Certainly. See Deut. 10. 17. Rom. 2. 11. 1 Pet. 1. 17.

no reſpecter of perſons] Or, hath no regard in his acceptance, to the externall condition of the perſon, as, of what nation, family, name, or quality he be of, he ſpeaketh here of thoſe following degrees of grace, faith and obedience, which where ever they are found, tis evident they are acceptable to him.

v. 35. he that feareth him] He that is truely religious toward God, and juſt toward man: by the fear of God the Hebrews underſtood, the whole worſhip of God: Peter, intimating that Cornelius feared God in that he believed in him, that came into the world to ſave ſinners, ſheweth that the Sacraments are ſeals of adoption, in children, and of faith, of thoſe who are of years, as Rom. 4. 11. So that they are deceived who ſo tie the holy Spirit, and the effects thereof, to the receiving the Sacrament of baptiſm, as if none could fear God, or be accepted of him, and ſaved by him, who is not baptized: for firſt, none before Chriſt received this ſeal, as ſince we do; & next, it is the contempt, not the privation, which he herein condemneth. (See v. 44. and John 3. 5.) here it appeareth, that Cornelius was accepted of God, before he had received the externall ſeal of his covenant.

v. 36. preaching peace] That is, reconciliation between God and man, through Chriſt. Iſa. 57. 19. Ephe. 2. 14. 16. 17. Col. 1. 20

Lord of all] Not only the God of the Jews, but of the Gentiles alſo; and he will gather his elect out of all the world, Rom. 2.30. & 10.12.

v. 37. After the baptiſme] That is, after John, the forerunner of Chriſt, had preached, and baptized in his name.

v. 38. God anointed Jeſus] That is, indued his humane nature, with the graces of the Holy Ghoſt, and conſecrated or dedicated his whole perſon to the office of a mediatour, both which were prefigured, by the ancient rite of anointing.

for God was with him] In the fulneſs of the deity, as he was the eternal Son. Col. 2. 9. and in power, grace and favour, as he was man and Mediatour. John 8. 29. & 16. 22.

v. 39. and we are witneſſes] We the Apoſtles who attended on him, choſen for this end, that we might teſtifie what doctrine he preached, and what miracles he did, as verſe 41. 42.

Whom they ſlew, &c.] Thus ſpeaking of the death of Chriſt, he mentioneth the ingratitude and inhumanity of his countrey-men the Jews toward Chriſt; and that we might conſider what he ſuffered to deliver us from the curſe of the law. See Gal. 3. 13. Deut. 21. 23. Here ſee how neceſſary, a good end propoſed, and a good intention is to every action? for albeit, as Lactantius ſaith well lib. 3. cap. 15. nihil intereſt quo animo facias, quod feciſſe vitioſum eſt: it ſkills it not with what intention thou doeſt, that which is wicked to be done: yet doing any thing with an evil intention though the thing done were ſo far decreed of God, as that he will draw good out of that evil (as it was in Chriſts death for our redemption) yet is that ſame action a ſin in the agent, or agents: Gods goodneſs (ſo much above all evil, ſo invincible, that he draweth a good end out of the wicked actions of men) doth no wayes juſtifie the ſins of men, becauſe he never decreeth ſin. See Gen. 50. 20. 1 Kin. 12. 8. 15. 19. 1 Sam. 10. 26. 27.

v. 40. him God raiſed] Leſt the Gentiles ſhould think, therefore Chriſt, whom theſe men preach is deſtroyed, he preſently inferreth, that (which declared him to be the Son of God. Rom. 1. 4. and conquerer of death and hell) he was raiſed up from the dead.

v. 41. Not to all the people] God ſhewed Chriſt alive from the dead, but not to all the Jews, but to all thoſe who were appointed witneſſes of the ſame; and thoſe not a few: he was ſeen alive after his reſurrection from the dead, to above five hundred brethren at once. 1 Cor. 15. 6. he appeared not to the enemies, becauſe his ſtate of humiliation and ſuffering by them, was finiſhed; and it concerned not them (whoſe impenitency and unbelief he knew and foreſaw) otherwiſe then that they ſhall ſee him coming again in the clouds to judge them. Rev. 1. 7.

v. 42. commanded us to preach] See chap. 1. 8. Luk. 24. 47. 48. Mark 16. 15. Matth. 28. 19.

of quick and dead] Of thoſe who being found alive at his coming, ſhall be changed; and of thoſe that ſhall be raiſed from the dead, to come to judgement. 1 Theſ. 4. 15. Rom. 14. 9. 2 Tim. 4. 1. 1 Pet. 4. 5.

v. 43. to him give all, &c.] Jer. 31. 34. Mich. 7. 18. Luke 24. 27.

through his name] By his merit.

v. 44. while he yet ſpake] The Holy Ghoſt accompanieth the ſincere preaching, and attentive hearing the word.

the Holy Ghoſt] That is, the graces of the Holy Spirit, in illumination, regeneration, and the gifts of tongues, &c. By this miracle God declared, that the merit of Chriſts paſſion belongeth aſwell to the Gentiles as to the Jews; and that (the Spirit, thus coming on theſe before baptiſme) the righteouſneſs of God is not attained by any thing externall, without the inward working of his Spirit, which here came on Cornelius, being neither circumciſed nor baptized. See on verſe 35.

v. 45. Becauſe that on the Gentiles] They did not before this, underſtand, that the grace of God appertained unto them, which had been ſo long (like the dew in Gideons fleece) diſtilled only on the Jews. Pſal. 147. 19. 20.

v. 46. for they heard them ſpeak] It was the vulgar errour of the Jews, that the covenant of grace, and the Meſſias, belonged only to themſelves, but now they perceive that the Gentiles alſo had intereſt therein, hearing them ſpeak unſtudied languages, they knew that they had received the holy Ghoſt.

then anſwered Peter] This is an uſuall manner of ſpeaking with the Hebrews, then anſwered, for then ſaid, &c. ſo the Syr. ואמר vemar, and he ſaid: Peter ſeeing what was done better underſtod what thoſe gifts of the holy Ghoſt meant, to wit, that the believing Gentiles ſhould alſo be partakers of Salvation by Chriſt.

v. 47. Can any forbid water] He reaſoneth from the thing ſignified, unto the ſigne, and this queſtion is in effect a vehement aſſertion, as if he had ſaid, we ought not to withhold the ſigne; it were a ſin to deny it: this reaſon may thus, more at large, be formed. Thoſe that are in Chriſt by the inward effect of the Holy Ghoſt, ought to be implanted into the Church by baptiſm; but theſe Gentiles are in Chriſt by the inward effect of the Holy Ghoſt, therefore they ought to be implanted into the Church by baptiſme; the ſame reaſon will conclude for baptizing infants, whom the Holy Ghoſt hath made, and pronounced holy, if born of believing parents. 1 Cor. 7. 14. the meaning of theſe words is; ſeeing God hath given them the inward grace and Spirituall part, ſhould we, who are but Miniſters, deny to communicate to them the external ſigne and ſeal of incorporation into Chriſts body the Church?

v. 48. To be baptized in the name of the Lord] For baptiſm is the ſign whereby believers are openly declared to be the people of God: that which he ſaith, in the Name of the Lord, we muſt underſtand as relating to the uſe, not the form of baptiſm: they were baptized in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, as Chriſt commanded, Matth. 28. 19. but here, baptizing in the name of the Lord importeth, conſecration to the Lord Chriſt, and implantation into the Church whereof he is the head. So chap. 2. 38. chap. 8. 16. and chap. 19. 5.

to tarry certain dayes] Cornelius and the Church in his houſe prayed him to tarry, both that they might be further inſtructed, confirmed, and comforted by his Miniſtry, and alſo to expreſs their thankfulneſs to him for ſo great a bleſſing as God had ſent them by his miniſtry: the beſt have ever need to learn, and to be confirmed: and by our deſire to know more, we may, not obſcurely gather, how we have profited: no man hath ever taſted of true grace offered in the Goſpel, but he deſireth more.

CHAP. XI.

Verſe 1. That the Gentiles alſo had received*] Which was yet a wonder to them: a myſtery hid from the beginning of the world. Ephel. 3. 10. 11. which cauſed the holy Angels to ſtand at gaze. See 1 Peter 1. 12. the Jews held the Gentiles as wicked incorrigible, deſperate ſinners, and mere aliants from God. See Epheſ. 2. 12.

v. 2. that were of the circumciſion] So were alſo all the beleeving Jews, who did not quarrel with him neither are here mentioned: but this pointeth at them only, who were too much addicted to legall ceremonies, in ſo much that they thought circumciſion ſimply neceſſary to ſalvation. See chap. 15. 1. 5. and would have the believing Gentiles alſo circumciſed.

v. 3. thou wenteſt in to men uncircumciſed] Chap. 10. 28. Thus they accuſe Peter, as if it had been ſome greivous ſin: whereas the law of God forbade not all commerce with Gentiles, but that only which might corrupt them.

v. 4. Peter rehearſed the matter in Order, &c.] Peter willingly ſubmitted to the judgement of the Church, to give them account of that he had done. (See 1 Cor. 14. 29.) by this means he both taught us what every one of us ought to do, and alſo better inſtructed them who erred. Peter pretended not to be above the Church.

v. 5. I was in the city Joppa praying] This whole narration, See chap. 10. 9. &c.

v. 15. as on us, &c.] Chap. 2. 4. In the like power, though not in the ſame ſignes of fiery tongues, nor with the ſame degrees of fulneſſe.

v. 16. John indeed baptized with water] John 1. 26.

v. 17. What was I that I ſhould withſtand] This was Peters concluſion when he had rehearſed the matter: the meaning is; ſeeing that God hath made the Gentiles equall in grace, with the Jews converted to Chriſt, it was not in me to deny them an equall ſhare and communion in the external ſeals and ſignes thereof: he that ſhall exclude thoſe who have received the graces of Gods ſanctifying Spirit, by barring them from the externall communion of the Church; in the rule (by Peters concluſion) are reſiſters of God.

v. 18. They held their peace] They reſted ſatisfied; which is indeed the property of good men, who contend not ſo much for victory, as for truth; whereas the perverſe will be ſatisfied with no reaſon.

much people was added &c.] They are here ſaid, added to the Lord, who were won to the faith in Chriſt, and the Church there preſent: mark here the fruit of Miniſters unity; many were added to the Lord; for Barnabas preaching was to confirm that truth which others had taught: it is not ſo where one caſteth down that which another buildeth; conſider well Matth. 18. 7.

v. 25. to ſeek Saul] His ambition was, that the Goſpel and glory of Chriſt, in the converſion and ſalvation of ſoules might be advanced; therefore he that might have been in great honour and eſteem at Antioch, goeth to ſeek Saul, that they might joyn in the work of Chriſt.

v. 26. with the Church] Or in the Church ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ.

were called Chriſtians firſt &c.] Whereas before they were called diſciples, and Nazarens (under which name they uſed to curſe the profeſſours of the Goſpel thrice a day: as Jerom in Iſaiah 49. ſpeaking of the unbeleeving Jews ſaith, ter per ſingulos dies ſub nomine Nazarenorum maledicunt in ſynagogis ſuis. See c. 24. 5. now at Antioch they were firſt called Chriſtians. So much honour had this city, that from thence Chriſt, as it were ſpread his banner; that it might appear to the world, that there was a people who would follow him, and glory to be called by his Sacred Name.

v. 27. came Prophets to Jeruſalem] See chap. 13. 1. God then furniſhed his Church with variety of gifts: he gave ſome to be Apoſtles, ſome Prophets &c. See Epheſ. 4. 11. and inſpired theſe with revelations for the good of his Church. See chap. 21. 9.

v. 28. named Agabus] Chap. 21. 10.

ſignified by the ſpirit] By divine revelation: whereby God gave them occaſion to relieve the brethren at Jeruſalem.

v. 29. every man according to his ability] See Luke 11. 41. Meaning every one of the Chriſtians at Antiochia, becauſe they of Jeruſalem might probably be in more neceſſity, by reaſon of the malice of the Jews there, and their perſecution. Verſe 1. King Herod] He was nephew of Herod the great, and ſon of Ariſtobulus; a Viceroy, or deputy king to the Emperour of Rome, for the government of the Jews: Syr. ſirnamed Agrippa See Joſeph. Antiq. l. 19. c. 4. 5. &c. See on Matth. 14. 1.

ſtretched forth his hands] Or laid hands on, or began to lay hands on ſome Chriſtians.

v. 2. killed James] This was one of the ſons of Zebedeus. Matth. 4. 21. and 10. 2. there was another ſo named, which was the ſon of Alpheus: of whom, verſe 17. See Matth. 20. 20.

v. 3. the dayes of unleavened bread] Theſe words intimate the cauſe why he deferred Peters execution, for reverence of the Paſſeover, which laſted eight dayes. See chap. 20. 6.

v. 4. four quaternions of ſouldiers] The number being ſixteen, was divided by fours, to keep divers wards, or watch by turns: therefore the Syriac hath it, he delivered him to ſixteen ſouldiers.

v. 5. prayer was made without ceaſing] Or inſtant and earneſt prayer was made: ἐκτενὴς, is ſedulus, diligens Suidas interpreteth ἐκτενῶς by ὁλοψύχως, with all the ſtrength of the ſoul; and ſo this prayer was made with all fervency of ſpirit, and perſeverance: it was their own cauſe; therefore they give all the aſſiſtance they can, according to the Apoſtles rule. v. 6. the ſame night] The Syriac interpreter paraphraſeth thus, in the ſame night on whoſe morning following he would bring him out. God many times ſuffereth his to come to the pits brink, and then delivereth them; that they may be the more ſenſible of his mercy, and have the more evident matter of rejoycing and prayſing him: alſo that he might by ſuch experience give them aſſurance, that in the greateſt dangers, he can, and will deliver them when he knoweth it beſt.

ſleeping between two ſouldiers] All theſe circumſtancs ſhew Herods bloody intent, and Gods power in delivering Peter, in ſpite of his chains and guards.

v. 7. the Angel of the Lord] Chap. 5. 19. For he hath made his Angels Miniſtring ſpirits for their ſakes, who are heirs of ſalvation. See Hebr. 1. 14. Pſal. 34.

the light ſhined] As to light Peter, ſo to aſſure him of aſſiſtance from heaven: whether it ſhined to Peter onely, or in the place where he was or went, it ſkilleth not; the guard probably were either aſleep, or ſo ſtupified, that they could either not perceive, or not reſiſt: neither is it behoofull to enquire what light this was? whence or how it ſhined? whether it were onely the refulgence of an Angelicall nature, or of ſome naturall cauſes permitted to the power of the Angel? if theſe, or the like things had been neceſſary to ſalvation, they had been written.

the priſon] Or houſe.

ſmote Peter on the ſide] To awake, and lead him out: which ſheweth the mercifull providence of God, watching over us when we ſleep; and providing for our ſafety, when we think not of our own dangers, and keeping us, when ſleep hath ſhut up all our ſenſes. See Gen. 19. 16.

his chains fell off] This was done by the power of God, whom all creatures obey. See chap. 16. 27. So eaſily can God (whoſe will is his word ; and his word, his work) deliver us : So admirable is the power of faithfull prayer to open priſon doors, make chains fall off, and to cauſe the ſun and moon to ſtand ſtill in the heaven. Joſh. 10. 12, 13. to open and ſhut heaven for rain. James 5. 17.

v. 8. thy ſandals] Which were a kinde of high ſhoes, tyed on with ſtrings, after the manner and convenience of thoſe hot countreys.

v. 9. and wiſt not that it was true &c.] He knew not yet whether it were a reall thing, or a viſion : he knew that God could deliver in life and in death, therefore he readily obeyed.

v. 10. the firſt and ſecond ward] The watch which kept court of guard in the firſt and ſecond place : God could at once have ſet him free by carrying him from ſo many difficulties ; but thus he ſeemed to give him many deliverances, becauſe from many, and through many difficulties ; that the divine power, and the Churches comfort might more evidently appear.

leadeth unto the city] That is, by which they went from the priſon into the inward parts of the city : it is not likely that the priſon was out of the city.

which opened to them of his own accord] αὐτομάτη ; the word ſignifieth, that which moveth , or doth ſomething of it ſelf , non alieno impulſu, not moved by another ; but this was done by the command and power of God, whoſe will all creatures muſt obey.

forthwith the Angel departed] Having performed his charge, and that for which God had ſent him ; he left Peter free, to go to his company.

v. 11. When Peter was come to himſelf] For before, he was as a man in a trance, or dream ; out of himſelf. See verſe 9.

from all the expectation of the people] For they looked that Herod would have put him to death, as he purpoſed, and had done to James before. verſe 2.

v. 12. where many were gathered together praying] Becauſe they could not publikely aſſemble , they divided company, and met to pray and preach, as they could in thoſe dangerous times , wherein the enemies of the Goſpel ſo violently raged : hither Peter haſteth , to declare Gods goodneſſe in his deliverance : and herein they taſted the comfortable fruit of their prayers.

v. 13. came to hearken] To aſk who was there : the Syriac gives it, that ſhe might anſwer : to wit, thoſe who knockt.

v. 14. ſhe opened not the gate for gladneſſe] Sudden joy (as any other extream affection) diſturbeth reaſon, and for a time, perverteth the offices thereof, as here, in Rhode) in ſo much that ſome have dyed with ſudden joy.

v 15. thou art mad] μαίνῃ , becauſe they thought ſhe ſpake improbable things : ſome read art thou mad ? for by ſaying thus, ſhe diſcompoſed them, and likely , interrupted their prayers : Syr. omninò turbata es : verily thou art troubled in minde.

it is his Angel] Meaning, according to the common opinion, an Angel guardian, which they might poſſibly ſuppoſe, came to ſignifie his death, whom they in reaſon might give for dead. See Matth. 18. 10. Pſal. 34. 7. & 91. 11.

v. 16. But Peter continued knocking] Among ſo many dangers of the Church, he might eaſily know they would be fearfull to open doors in the night, untill they could be well aſſured who was there : therefore he continued knocking, that he might ſhew himſelf, and declare what God had done for him, for their comfort and confirmation.

v. 17. beckning unto them with the hand] κατασείσας Budæus ſaith that κατασείω is non voce ſed manu ſilentium indico, to warn ſilence by the hand : this did Peter, leſt at any ſudden voice of joy of the brethren, ſome notice might be taken of thoſe who paſſed by, or dwelt at the next houſes, and ſo Peter might be further purſued, and they endangered.

unto James] The ſon of Alpheus, James the leſſe. Mark 15. 40. called the brother of (that is, the kinſman of) the Lord. Gal. 1. 19. yet ſurviving, verſe 2. Matth. 10. 3. Luke 6. 15. another place] Some more ſecret and ſecure place, for fear of purſuit, when they ſhould miſſe him in the priſon.

v, 18. there was no ſmall ſtir &c.] Syr. there was great contention ; probably, all being troubled with fear and admiration, they would lay the ſuppoſed fault of the priſoners eſcape, on the keepers ; they were not ignorant of Herods tyranny, nor the ordinary danger of letting priſoners eſcape.

v. 19. put to death] ἀπαχθῆναι, to be led away ; that is, to execution : ſo the Syriac, he commanded that they ſhould die.

he went] Meaning Peter.

v. 20. was highly diſpleaſed] Or bare an hoſtile minde, intending war.

See alſo Exodus 13. 14. 16.

v. 18. forty yeers ſuffered their manners] ἐτροποφόρησεν, &c. Τροποφορέω, ſignifieth to bear with, or to endure ones manners or qualities. So Suidas interpreter giveth it here; but the Syriac ותרסי אנון vetharſe innun, and he nouriſhed them, as if it were ἐτροφοφόρησεν αὐτοὺς, that is, ἔθρεψεν αὐτοὺς, he nouriſhed them, bearing them like a nurſe, as Moſes ſpeaketh, Numb. 11. 12. Deut. 32. 11. indeed he did both: he endured their many rebellions with great mercy, and did feed and carry them like a tender nurſe; though here the Apoſtle aimeth at the firſt, that he might ſhew, that Gods free election of their fathers was the cauſe why his goodneſſe would not ſtrive with their ingrateful wickedneſſe: they many times provoked him to anger, yet God (though he often corrected them) deſtroyed them not, but with admirable lenity, bare their perverſe qualities, that in the fulneſſe of time he might perform the promiſe made to their fathers.

See Luke 1. 76. John pointed him out preſent, John 1. 29. and preached and adminiſtred the Sacrament of baptiſme, and doctrine of repentance, a due preparative thereto, in Chriſts preſence.

the ſure mercies of David] Hebr. חסדי דוד הנאמנים chaſde David hanneemanim, the ſtable mercies of David: 70. τὰ ὅσια Δαυὶδ τὰ πιστά, which S. Luke followeth; the faithful or certain holy things of David: that is the promiſes which he made of his free mercy to David, concerning the eternal kingdom of Chriſt, 2 Sam. 7.

v. 35. thou ſhalt not ſuffer] Pſal. 16. 10. See chap. 2: 27.

v. 36. after he had ſerved,&c.] Or after he had in his own age ſerved the will of God: the meaning is, after David had lived uprightly toward God, in his appointed time he died, and therefore that which he foretold in theſe propheſies, appertained unto Chriſt, who ſaw no corruption, not unto David himſelf.

v. 37. ſaw no corruption] Did not corrupt, verſe 35. and Chap. 2. 27. for he roſe again the third day.

v. 38. through this man] It is preached and declared unto you, that through Jeſus you ſhall have remiſſion of ſins: this is the concluſion of the Apoſtles ſermon; he had ſhewed that Chriſt whom they preached was the very Meſſias promiſed to the fathers, and removed the Jews objection, the ſcandal of the croſſe; now he further declareth what great benefits are offered in Chriſt, and how ſeverely God will revenge the contempt of his beloved Son, if they refuſe mercy offered, verſe 40.

v. 39. are juſtified from all things] Whereas by the Law, and ceremonies thereof, no man could be juſtified or acquitted of the guilt of his ſins; they that believe in Chriſt are juſtified (Rom. 5. 1.) the Law had but the ſhadow of that which was to be performed in Chriſt, Gal. 3. 2, 22. Rom. 3. 20. Hebr. 10. 1. 4.

v. 40. ſpoken of in the prophets] Hab. 1. 5. Iſaiah. 28. 14. the ſubſtance of whoſe words he here citeth and applieth to them, who contemning the word of God, do in effect think they have made a league with death and hell, ſo that the judgement of God ſhall not come on them, who have made lies their hope; whereas Chriſt is that only precious cornerſtone and ſure foundation laid in Sion, in whom whoſoever believeth ſhall not periſh. See Iſaiah 28. 16.

v. 41. Behold ye deſpiſers] This ſeemeth to be taken from Iſaiah 28. 14. where the prophet ſaith, Hear the word of the Lord אנשי לצון anſhe latſon, ye men of deriſion: Ar. Mont. irriſion. V. Shindl. pent. viri illuſores. Vatablus & Vulg. (it is of לוץ luts, deriſit, cavillatus eſt.) mockers and deſpiſers of Gods word: the reſt, for ſubſtance, out of Habak. 1. 5. which by analogie and proportion he accommodateth to his preſent purpoſe: as God, when the people moſt ſecurely deſpiſed propheſies, brought heavy plagues and deſtructions on them by the Chaldes who demoliſhed their temple, and ruined their city (wherein they ſo much gloried and truſted) becauſe of their contempt of his word, and other crying ſins following the ſame, 2 Chron. 36. 15, 16.&c. So did it now come upon them again by the Romans, for their deſpiſing Chriſt and the goſpel.

v. 42. might be preached to them the next Sabbath] Or in the week between, on ſome day before the next Sabbath, as ſome interpret; but verſe 44. the convention was on the next Sabbath: ſo much were they affected with that they heard, that they deſired much to hear it again, that they might better underſtand and remember the ſame; we would often hear what we love.

v. 43. many of the Jews] Though ſome were averſe and more enraged againſt the Goſpel, yet God ſtill hath a part. Proſelytes; ſo called παρὰ τὸ προσεληλυθέναι, becauſe they came to the religion of the Jews from Paganiſm. See Chap. 2. 10. theſe and other converts the Apoſtles exhort to conſtancy in the faith of Jeſus, well knowing with what fierce encounters Satan uſeth to charge the infancy of true religion, and our firſt good beginnings.

v. 44. almoſt the whole city] A Metonymical expreſſion; city, for citizens: ſome comming of zeal to the goſpell; ſome of malice, to cavill: ſo are our aſſemblies mixed ſtill.

v. 45. filled with envy] ζῆλος here ſignifieth, an envious indignation at the great confluence of the Gentiles following the Apoſtles. See on Chap. 5. 17. they envied the growth and happy ſucceſſe of the Goſpel.

contradicting and blaſpheming] Contradicting, and cavilling at the doctrine of the goſpel, and likely reviling their perſons, diſcrediting and calumniating them: blaſphemie, and perſecution of the Miniſters of Chriſt ſeldom goe aſunder.

v. 46. It was neceſſary] Becauſe ſo commanded, Matth. 10. 6.

and judge your ſelves] This your unbelief and contempt of the goſpel, ſpeak you unworthy of eternal life, which is onely by Chriſt, your own fact judgeth you not worthy, &c.

v. 47. I have ſet thee to be a light &c.] Iſaiah 49. 6.

v. 48. When the Gentiles heard this they were glad] When they underſtood their own intereſt in Chriſt, and their calling to the hope of ſalvation, they received the Goſpel with greater reverence and joy of heart: they had hitherto no reſt in their conſciences, but Chriſt now thus propoſed to them, and apprehended by faith, giveth them that, Rom. 5. 1. therefore they cannot but rejoyce. See chap. 8. 39. Rom. 14. 17. 1 Pet. 1. 8.

to eternall life, beleeved] Here is the fountain of all ſaving grace, Gods free and eternall mercy ordaining the means, as he hath the end: they now obtaining the means (knowledge of Chriſt by the Goſpel preached to them, and feeling the power thereof in their faith and converſion) bleſſe, and give thanks to God for this favour, being aſſured of the end thereof to life eternal.

v. 49. publiſhed throughout all the region] In ſpight of all oppoſitions: ſo true is that which Chriſt intimated in the parable of the leaven, Matth. 13. 33. concerning the proceſſe of the Goſpel.

v. 50. devout and honourable women] Which had embraced the law of Moſes, and the Jewiſh religion, and were lead with blinde zeal againſt the goſpel which they knew not: ſo that calling them devout, the Evangeliſt ſpeaketh according to the worlds eſtimate of them: The corruption of the beſt is worſt; where Satan can but gain ſuch agents to his party, there are commonly the bloodieſt perſecutions of the Prophets and Miniſters of Chriſt: Jezabel, Herodias, and theſe Piſidians here, are examples enough, I would we had no more.

v. 51. Shook off the duſt] See Matth. 10. 14. Mark 6. 11. Luke 9. 5. and 10. 11. it was a ſigne of execration with the Jews.

came to Iconium] Some ſay this was a town in Lycaonia neer to the famous mountain Taurus, Plin. nat. hiſt. lib. 5. 27. mentioneth it: others ſay there are others of the ſame name in other provinces. See Chap. 14. 1.

v. 52. the diſciples were filled with joy] Becauſe of the ſucceſſe of the goſpel, and becauſe the Spirit of God reigned in them, to direct and make them glad: the ſcope is to ſhew that the diſciples were ſo far from being diſcouraged with the Jews blaſphemies, calumnies, oppoſitions and perſecutions, that they were more confirmed hereby, and glad for their ſufferings for the truth of Chriſt. See Chap. 5. 41.

and granted ſignes] Theſe words expreſſe how God gave teſtimony to the doctrine which Paul and Barnabas preached. See Mark 16. 20.

v. 4. was divided] ἐσχίσθη; they were cut ſtudia in contraria, into contrary factions, or opinions, ſo that ſome took part with the Jews, and others with the Apoſtles.

v. 5. an aſſault made] 2 Tim. 3. 11.

v. 6. fled to Lyſtra] Matth. 10. 23. See here verſe 20. when they were in hazard of being deſtroyed, they fled according to our Saviours command, Matth. 10. thereby to decline the fury of their adverſaries: this was wiſdom, not inconſtancie.

v. 7. there they preached] Thus, by their flight they reſerved themſelves to better opportunities of doing good, in theſe cities of Lyſtra and Derbe (where they found Timothie, Chap. 16. 1. Rom. 16. 21.) theſe were towns neer Lycaonia in Aſia the leſſer.

v. 8. creeple from his mothers womb] This ſetteth off the excellency of Gods power in the cure, as Chap. 3. 2. &c.

v. 9. perceiving that he had faith to be healed] Perceiving by his attention, countenance, or ſome words by him uttered, that he had faith for his cure which unbelief hindereth, Matth. 13. 58. Mark 6. 5.

v. 10. with a loud voice] That the people there preſent might hear: and that Paul might thereby profeſſe his confidence of the cure.

he leaped and walked] Shewing a ſound recovery, as Chap. 3.

v. 11. the gods are come down] Their idol-worſhip was not terminative in their images, but they vainly thought they worſhipped ſome deity by that image; ſo that though their idols were preſent with them, yet here they dreamed that thoſe Gods who were thereby worſhipped, were now come perſonally down among them. So blinde is fleſh and blood unto the cleareſt light of the Goſpel; though Paul had preached Chriſt unto them, and his doctrine was preſently confirmed with a ſingular miracle, which by their own principles of reaſon, none but a divine power could have done, yet they impute that work to their falſe and imaginary gods; ſo little can miracles prevail for the ſpectatours converſion and confirmation, except the holy Ghoſt open their hearts to underſtand and believe the truth.

v. 12. called Barnabas, Jupiter, &c.] They called them by the names of their falſe gods: Barnabas, Jupiter; their chief idol-god: and Paul, Mercury; whom they feigned to be the interpreter of their gods, becauſe Paul here appeared the chief ſpeaker.

v. 13. brought oxen and garlands] Trimmed with garlands of flowers, according to the cuſtome of the heathens.

unto the gates] Meaning the gates of the houſe where the Apoſtle lodged; for their temple was without the town: and therefore the prieſts brought the ſacrificers (as he thought) to the gods themſelves.

v. 14. rent their clothes] In token of their deteſting and abhorring it: knowing that in ſuch impious and fooliſh ſacriledge, their ſelves ſhould have been made idols, and robbers of God, had they but conſented to receive ſuch vain honour from them.

crying out] That all the people might be undeceived, and not held any longer in thoſe ſnares of the devil.

v. 15. we alſo are men] See Chap. 10. 26.

of like paſſions] ὁμοιοπαθεῖς; mortal, as you are, ſubject to death, as all others. See James 5. 17. not without the infirmities of fleſh and blood: Beudæus interpreteth this place, eadem conditione mortalitatis, &c. ſimili conditione vobiſcum humanitus efficimur.

v. 15. turn from theſe vanities] That is, from idolatry, ſuperſtition, &c. this is after the Hebrew manner, who called idols הבל hebel, vanity. So Deut. 32. 21. they provoked me to anger בהבליהם behablehem, with their vanities, which the 70 give there, ἐν τοῖς εἰδώλοις αὐτῶν, Jer. 10. 8. 15. the ſame word they give by τὰ μάταια, vanities, the word here uſed. See alſo 1 Kings 16. 13. 26. Jer. 8. 19. certainly adoration of ſenſleſſe idols, is the moſt irrational vanity that ever Satan put into the ſtupified heart of man: how much more truly do dumb creatures naturally judge of your gods, (ſaid Minucius Felix Octav.) Non ſentire eos ſciunt, rodunt, inſultant, inſident: they know they have no ſence, they gnaw them, leap on them, ſit on them; the birds would breed in the mouth of your god, and ſpiders hang their ſlender threds on their head, &c.

to walk in their own wayes] To live after their own fancies: not that God ever approved of their wickedneſs, but becauſe he juſtly gave them over (Rom.1.24.) to their ſin and ſuperſtition, not beſtowing on them his laws and ordinances, as he did on Iſrael, Pſal.147.19,20.

v. 17. he left not himſelf without witneſſe] Here he preoccupieth an objection: if any ſhould ſay, how ſhould they not erre, ſeeing that God neither revealed his will nor himſelf unto them? the anſwer is, that God might be ſeen in the works of his wiſdom, power, and providence, in all the known courſes of Nature, and things appointed for the common uſe of man, as ſhowers, fruit, corn, &c. See Rom. 1.19. As alſo in his admirable patience, and invincible goodneſs, in that he giveth to the juſt and unjuſt, indiſcretas pluvias, unſevered ſhowres (Cyprian de bon. patient.) and all other ſecular goods. See Matth.5.45.

with food and gladneſſe] With gladneſs for the abundance with which he crowneth the year. See Pſal.65.9. &c.

v. 18. with theſe ſayings ſcarce, &c.] All that they could ſay, could hardly perſwade theſe obſtinate idolaters to forbear ſacrificing to them. So hard is it to make carnal hearts underſtand the things of God: ſo hard, to remove an errour, to which time, cuſtome, and popular example hath given deep root.

v. 19. certain Jews from Antioch] See c.13.50. Here appeareth Satans reſtleſs malice in aſſaulting the Miniſters of Chriſt: now trying them with ſacriledge, and robbing God of his honour, in accepting ſacrifices and divine honour: when that attempt failed, he inciteth the Jews, and they the people, to perſecute and ſtone them. See alſo the inconſtancy of the vulgar; but even now ready to adore them as gods, and forthwith as little ſober in the other extream, perſecuting them, as if they had been the worſt of men, ſtoning Paul, and dragging him out of the city as dead.

v. 20. as the diſciples ſtood round about him] That is, the believers, who followed the Apoſtles: theſe forſook not Paul, but compaſſed him round to keep him, if poſſible, from further rage.

he roſe up] He revived, and came to himſelf again, and entred again into that injurious city, to reſt, and refreſh himſelf.

Junius de loc.* Alii ſaith, Derbe civitas Lycaoniæ provinciæ, which the firſt verſe ſeemeth to intimate: but that may be interpreted, they fled unto the cities of Lycaonia, to Lyſtra and Derbe, and unto the region that lyeth round about: and that not reckoning Lyſtra and Derbe, as cities of Lycaonia, but ſhewing that the Apoſtles did not onely flye to the cities of Lycaonia, but alſo to Lyſtra and Derbe, and other places in the adjacent region: the Syriac ſeemeth to favour this interpretation, which ſaith, they fled into the cities of Lycaonia, וּלְלוּסְטְרָא וּלְדֶרְבִי welyſtra vederbi, and Lyſtra, and Derbe, they fled into the cities of Lycaonia, and into Lyſtra, and into Derbe.

It ſeemeth that Paul and Barnabas did not all alone in ordinations and Church government; other Chriſtians ſhewed their conſent, or approbation of the perſons who were ordained elders, by lifting up their hands; as very well knowing of what behaviour they had been among them: ſo ἀποχειροτονεῖν ſignifieth, to diſallow of ſome act, election, or decree: Suidas interpreteth the word χειροτονία, by ἐκλογή: his interpreter giveth it, electio, delectus per ſuffragia confirmatus, populi totius conſenſus, an election, chooſing, by voices, a confirmation, or conſent of all the people. except ye be circumciſed] Gal.5.2.

v. 2. no ſmall diſſention] στάσεως, for [illegible]: the Syriac giveth it contention: it was an eager contention, Satan (as his manner is) ſtirring up factious men, to trouble the peace of the Church, and to corrupt the doctrine thereof, Paul and Barnabas like conſtant champions of Chriſt defending the truth.

they determined to ſend] To wit, the brethren of Antioch (for a remedy againſt this emergent miſchief) determined to ſend Paul and Barnabas with ſome others, to the Apoſtles and Elders then being at Ieruſalem, to deſire them to decide this controverſie; to this Paul willingly ſubmitted, though he were nothing inferiour to the very chief Apoſtles, 2 Cor.12.11. (for as Cyprian de ſimpl. prælat. ſaith well, Hoc erant utiq; & cæteri Apoſtoli, quod fuit Petrus, pari conſortio præditi & honoris & poteſtatis, the reſt of the Apoſtles were as Peter, endued with equal partnerſhip of honour and authority) that he might thereby ſatisfie the believers concerning thoſe falſe Apoſtles, who pretended the authority of the Church at Ieruſalem for the maintenance of their Hereſie: he knew his doctrine was of God, and not to be ſubjected to the judgement of men; yet for the ſatisfaction and confirmation of the weak, he willingly ſubmitted to their judgement who were at Ieruſalem.

v. 3. brought on their way by the church] That is, by the believers. Some of them being appointed to accompany Paul and Barnabas on their way, leſt they ſhould ſeem to have gone of their own accord, or to have diſſented from the Church of Antioch.

declaring the converſion] To all the Churches as they paſſed along they ſhewed the brethren for their comfort and confirmation, what God had done in the converſion of the Gentiles to the faith of Chriſt: it is a joy of heart to all good men to hear the Goſpels flouriſhing.

v. 4. they were received of the church] Of all the Church they were acknowledged for ſingular inſtruments of Gods glory and mens ſalvation by the propagation of the Goſpel.

they declared all things] That they might underſtand by the ſucceſs of their miniſtery, that the calling of the Gentiles (which the adverſaries laboured by their falſe doctrines, and mixture of antiquated ceremonies to annul and overthrow) pleaſed God.

v. 5. but there roſe up] Some underſtand this, as if theſe (according with the ſeducers who came to Antioch,) roſe up to trouble them at Ieruſalem alſo: but others more probably refer theſe words to the relation which Paul and Barnabas made to the brethren at Ieruſalem, concerning thoſe things which were agitated at Antioch; for the deciſion whereof they were come up to adviſe with them at Ieruſalem.

ſect of Phariſees] See on Luke 11.3. ἀπὸ τῆς αἱρέσεως, of the hereſie of the Phariſees: theſe had given their names to Chriſt, but yet retained ſome reliques of the antiquated ceremonies; Cerinthus and Ebion were condemned for the ſame, that they endeavoured to mingle the ceremonies of the Law, with the Goſpel of Chriſt: ſo while they would be Jews and Chriſtians they became neither; theſe being hypocrites, and therefore too intent to external rites, whereby they might appear more conſpicuous to men, would pervert the truth of Chriſt, for their own vain-glory ſake.

v. 6. Apoſtles and elders came together] To theſe appertained the deciſion of all controverſies of faith; theſe being enformed of the preſent buſineſs, came together to conſider what courſe to take therein; they being by the influence of the holy Ghoſt, both qualified and authorized to be the moſt competent judges in ſuch caſes; poſſibly they diſcuſſed this queſtion the Laity being preſent (as v. 12, 22.) but leſt any ſhould dream that the vulgar were admitted to judge of this controverſie, the Apoſtles and Elders which were miniſters are here named.

of this matter] περὶ τοῦ λόγου τούτου of this word: it is a common Hebraiſme; word put for the buſineſs ſpoken of.

v. 7. much diſputation] συζητήσεως here uſed, ſignifieth among other things, a conferring of reaſons pro and con: for the finding out a truth, by ſtating the queſtion and allegation of arguments thereto ſerving. See Chap. 9. 29. and Mark 1.27.

men and brethren] Chap. 10. 20. and 11. 13.

a good while ago] At our beginning to preach the Goſpel to the Gentiles.

ſhould hear the word of the goſpel] His purpoſe is here to ſhew that Chriſt is ſufficient to the believing Gentiles: and that there needed no legal ceremonies to perfect them: this God revealed to him, that they ſhould receive the Goſpel and believe to ſalvation, not that they ſhould be circumciſed or charged with any legal ceremonies.

v. 8. giving them the holy Ghoſt] As if he ſaid, when I had accordingly preached the Goſpel to them, preſently God gave them the holy Ghoſt, as he had done to us; when they were not circumciſed, neither obſerved the ceremonial law. Seeing then God looketh principally on the purity of the heart, and hath ſufficiently teſtified his reception of the Gentiles, by equalling the uncircumciſion with us of the circumciſion, in the ſame gifts and graces of the holy Ghoſt, why ſhould we force upon them who are begun in the Spirit, to be perfected in the fleſh? See Gal. 3. 3.

v. 9. put no difference] Touching adoption and eternal life.

purifying their hearts by faith] Chap. 10. 43. 1 Cor. 1. 2. He oppoſeth to legal purifications, the ſubſtance thereby figured, purification of the heart, and whole man, by the blood of Chriſt and the ſpirit of regeneration, Heb. 9. 14.

v. 10. why tempt ye God] He calleth it a tempting of God to lay more upon mens conſciences then either God hath laid on them, or they are able to perform: as here by impoſing circumciſion; they would binde them to that which God commanded not the Gentiles, and lay a neceſſity of their keeping the whole law upon them, which none can do. Therefore to wave the means of ſalvation by the free grace of God in Chriſt, and to put ſalvation on terms ſo impoſſible, as is our perfect obedience to the whole law, is to tempt God.

to put a yoke upon the neck] Mat. 23. 4. Gal. 5. 1.

were able to bear] For every one that is circumciſed, is bound to keep the whole law, Gal. 5. 3. under a ſevere curſe, Gal. 3. 10. If he fail in any thing, he is guilty of the breach of all, Iames 2. 10. this none of the Fathers could bear; it were mere tempting of God to profeſſe it, ſeeing Chriſt bare it for us, 1 Pet. 2. 24.

v. 11. we believe that through the grace, &c.] The elect Jews were not ſaved by their works of the law (Gal. 3. 11. Rom. 3. 20.) but by grace in Chriſt; therefore he equalleth them herein with the Gentiles, and profeſſeth his hope of ſalvation, by no other means: Seeing then we cannot obtain ſalvation by grace, except the yoke and curſe of the law be taken off; neither can ſalvation be by the works of the law. And laſtly, becauſe they cannot be ſubject to the curſe of the law who believe in Chriſt, therefore it is vain to go back from the fountain of ſalvation, unto thoſe beggerly rudiments, which were but a School-maſter to bring us to Chriſt, Gal. 3. 24.

v. 12. all the multitude kept ſilence] As entertaining his diſcourſe with a reverend ſilence: this ſheweth the part which the people have to act in counſels concerning controverſies in religion, which is a modeſt ſilence, that they may hear and learn of thoſe whom God hath aſſigned to the miniſtery of his Word.

and gave audience to Paul, &c.] They relating what ſignes and wonders God had done by them among the Gentiles, confirm the ſentence of Peter: for thoſe their works concluded, that God was pleaſed with their miniſtration to the Gentiles.

v. 13. after that they held their peace] James would not interrupt the diſcourſe of Paul and Barnabas, but when they had ſpoken, then he alſo ſpeaketh: 'Tis a Babel and confuſion of tongues where many ſpeaking at once, none are diſtinctly heard.

James] Son of Alpheus. See on Chap. 12. 17.

v. 14. Simeon] That is, Peter, 2 Pet. 1. 1. It ſeemeth the Gr. ſaid Συμεὼν, (as reading שימון instead of שמעון becauſe they could not pronounce the letter ע) for ſo he is commonly named Simon, not Simeon. So Irenæus, l. 3. c. 12.

for his name] To bear his Name, to acknowledge and worſhip him for their onely God.

v. 15. to this agree the words of the prophets] Concerning the calling of the Gentiles the Prophets in many places ſpake, though here be but one cited, v. 16. Note here the rule by which the Apoſtles themſelves proceeded, the written Word of God; they equal not any humane traditions with it, they take not on them to judge the Scriptures, much leſſe to determine any thing againſt them: for there is but one truth, and one Spirit of God, ſpeaking both in the Prophets and Apoſtles.

v. 16. after this will I return] Amos 9. 11.

tabernacle of David] Meaning the Church of God to be repaired, and reſtored by the Meſſias.

v. 17. that the reſidue of men might ſeek after the Lord] Reſpecting the general ſentence of the Prophets concerning the calling of the Gentiles, he ſpeaketh the ſame ſenſe with the Prophet Amos 9. 12. in words ſomewhat varying, inſtancing firſt in the reſidue of Edom: but James here more generally, in the reſidue of men, that is, as he expreſſeth, all the Gentiles, as the Prophet alſo ſaith כָּל־הַגּוֹיִם col haggoim, all the nations upon whom my Name is called.

who doth all theſe things] Do not think much that God calleth the Gentiles, whom ye count unclean, God hath done it, who doth all things well. See Pſal. 118. 23. Mat. 21. 42.

v. 18. known unto God are all his works] Thus he ſtrengthneth weak mindes againſt ſuſpition of novelty: indeed this calling of the Gentiles is ſudden to men; but God knew this from the beginning, determining in eternity whatſoever he would bring to paſſe in time: he it is, who both revealed theſe things to the Prophets, and fulfilled the ſame in the appointed time.

v. 19. my ſentence is, that we trouble not them] Out of Scripture he concludeth with Peter, that the yoke of the law was not to be put upon the Gentiles; it had been a wretched perplexity to their conſciences to put them vainly to ſeek any other means of juſtification, then faith in Chriſt.

v. 20. pollutions] 1 Cor. 8. 1. &c. Pollutions of Idols, are things polluted by Idols to whom they were offered.

of idols] Becauſe ſome thought it no offence to be preſent at the Idols temples, and there to feaſt with Idolaters, which the Apoſtle ſaith is to drink the cup of the Devils, 1 Cor. 10. 21. The Syriac giveth it, from the pollution of things offered, à vanitatibus idolorum, the interpreter of Irenæus, l. 3. c. 12. See in chap. 14. 15.

and from blood] He ſheweth that theſe ceremonies to which they were accuſtomed many yeers, could not without great diſtraction be ſuddenly aboliſhed, until they could better learn their liberty in Chriſt. Therefore though they were dead in Chriſts paſſion, no more to be revived (as Gal. 5.) yet they did not preſently drag them out of doors, but gave them time, as it were, for a decent burial of them.

v. 21. for Moſes of old time] He ſignifieth hereby that the Jews could not ſo ſuddenly bear the abolition of the legal ceremonies, to which they had been long accuſtomed by the continual hearing of the law read in every Synagogue; and that therefore they ought to purchaſe unity with a charitable compliance, until they could be more fully enformed concerning Chriſtian liberty.

v. 22. then pleaſed it the Apoſtles, &c.] Here was an holy, and no leſſe happy unity: here neither John, Andrew, or any of the Apoſtles, contradicted; but, as the matter was referred, and judged, ſo all reſted ſatisfied, and the people modeſtly conſented. So Clemens Romanus (who lived in this time, Phil. 4. 3.) ſpeaking of Ordinations by the Apoſtles, and their ſucceſſours, intimateth that it ws done συνευδοκησάσης τῆς ἐκκλησίας πάσης, the whole Church thereto willingly conſenting.

to ſend choſen men] That the adverſaries at Antioch might not caluminate Paul and Barnabas, as diſſenters from the reſt of the Apoſtles, they ſend with them Barſabas and Silas, chief among the brethren at Ieruſalem, to teſtifie that they were of the ſame judgement with Paul and Barnabas.

v. 23. and wrote letters, &c.] This they did, that by the teſtimony of the commiſſioners, and the letters of the counſel the falſe Apoſtles might be ſilenced, and the believers confirmed in the truth and unity of their profeſſion.

v. 24. which went from us] They went out from us, they were not of us:ſee 1 Joh.2.19. it is a miſchievous artifice of Satan, to divide Chriſtians: he knows where there is holy unity, there God is, and therefore he can never prevail: therefore he laboureth to have a party in us,againſt us: he can never ſo dangerouſly wound religion, as by the ſeeming religious, therefore raiſeth he up men among our ſelves to ſpeak perverſe things. See Chap. 20. 30.

ſubverting your ſouls] ἀνασκευάζοντες, it cometh from the word among other things ſignifying to demoliſh, and caſt down: fitly here uſed, ſeeing that the falſe Apoſtles by their ſuperſtructions, or laying other foundations for ſalvation beſides the free mercy of God in Chriſt, deſtroyed ſouls: he builds to ruine, who builds his ſalvation on any means, but the ſole merits of Chriſt; other foundation can no man lay, then that which is laid, which is Chriſt Jeſus. See 1 Cor. 3. 11, 12. Epheſ. 2. 20. Gal. 1. 8. he ſubverteth and caſteth down, who buildeth not on Chriſt alone.

to whom we gave no ſuch command] Thus pull they off the vizards of thoſe pretenders to the authoritie of the Apoſtles,and poſſibly commiſſion from them ſo to teach; whereas indeed they taught that which raſed the foundation of the truth of the goſpel: for the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, and the righteouſneſſe of the law, grace and merit, legal ceremonies intimating an expectation of Chriſt to come, and Chriſtian libertie, declaring and profeſſing a diſcharge from the duties of the ceremonial law, and the curſe of the moral, by Chriſt already come, are utterly incompatible. See Rom. 9. 30, 31. Rom. 10. 3, 5, 6. Rom. 4. 4,5. Gal. 2. 2. & 5. 2,3. therefore the Apoſtles in this firſt councel thus ſeriouſly diſavow that doctrine which teacheth to mingle the legal ceremonies, and the obſervation thereof with the goſpel.

v. 25. it ſeemed good unto us,&c.] All the true members of Chriſt agree in the fundamentals of religion (though there ſometimes fall out varieties of judgements and differences in things ſubordinate) becauſe the Spirit of God is ever with them, uniting them, if not with infallibility, as here, yet with a ſufficient meaſure of grace: compare verſ. 28. 39. and ſee Matth. 28. 20.

to ſend choſen men] Such as are fit to interpoſe, and be imployed in this ſo weighty a buſineſſe.

with our beloved Barnabas and Paul] This they oppoſe to the calumnies of thoſe falſe Apoſtles whereby they vilified Paul and Barnabas:and for their confirmation who were ſtumbled thereat; hereby they declare their conſent with Paul & Barnabas, commending them for their ſingular zeal in that they had ventured their lives for the truth and teſtimony of the Lord Jeſus; daring and ſuffering for the name of Chriſt is commendable. See 1 Pet. 4. 14. 16. it is the cauſe, not the puniſhment which makes the Martyr.

v. 27. We have therefore ſent Judas and Silas] They expreſs their names, to acquaint the Church of Antioch with them. See on verſ. 22. this Silas proved an excellent aſſiſtant to Paul in preaching the Goſpel, and perſecutions for the ſame endured. verſe 40.

v. 28. It ſeemed good to the holy Ghoſt, &c.] Herein they render a reaſon of their decree concerning the cauſes of juſtification; becauſe ſo it pleaſed the holy Ghoſt, whoſe truth and guidance they followed. This they ſay, leſt the Antiochians ſhould think this decree humane, they cite their authority, as if they had ſaid, we have determined as we were guided by the Spirit of God: in that they ſay (and to us) appeareth the authority of the faithful Miniſters in controverſies of faith. See Rom. 1. 5. Mal. 2. 7.

neceſſary things] Neceſſary is not here to be referred to the ceremonies themſelves here mentioned; but to the preſent occaſion and perſons,whoſe unity and ſalvation was neceſſarily to be advanced by all means: it was therefore an accidentall and temporary neceſſity: laws concerning things ſimply neceſſary, ought to be perpetuall; ſo was not this: for when this tumultuous diſſention was over, and the brethren better enformed, Paul ſheweth that nothing is unclean, which God hath made for mans uſe. See 1 Cor. 8. 8. & 10. 29. 1 Tim. 4. 4. Tit. 1. 15.

v. 29. that they abſtain from meats &c.] This did they, that they might hold the unity in the faith of Chriſt, between the beleeving Jews and new converted Gentiles: in things of their own nature indifferent (ſuch as were the three firſt things here prohibited for the time) we ought to hold charity and by no means to break the ſacred band of unity, in things which God neither commandeth nor forbiddeth,we ought to have a tender care, firſt of the Churches unity, and next of their conſciences who are infirme brethren. See Col. 3. 14. 1 Tim. 1. 5. Rom. 15. 2. Rom. 14. 1, &c.

and from fornication] This part of the moral Law (which is indiſpenſable, and continually, and univerſally binding) is here inſerted for the Gentiles ſake, who before their converſion were ſhameleſly given to fornication, and all uncleanneſſe of luſt.

v. 30. when they were diſmiſſed] From the council at Jeruſalem.

gathered the multitude] Though the determination in controverſies of faith, be properly in men of learning and integrity of life, yet all having equal intereſt in the common ſalvation, there was good reaſon why the whole multitude of believers ſhould be acquainted with (and their conſent had to) all the proceeding and the iſſue thereof.

v. 31. they rejoyced,&c.] As the truly religious cannot chuſe but be grieved at the diviſions of that body, whereof they are members; ſo muſt it be great joy to ſee all ſweetly compoſed to Gods honour: nor could there be any more comfortable news, then their aſſurance by the teſtimony of the holy Ghoſt, and the Apoſtles of Chriſt, that they are freely juſtified by faith in him, without the works of the law; for therein men have peace with God. See Rom. 5. 1.

v. 32. being prophets alſo] See 1 Cor. 14. 29. 32. and 12. 28. Epheſ. 4. 11. that is men of ſingular gifts in teaching, and interpreting Scriptures. See 1 Cor. 14. 3.

v. 33. let go in peace] With good love and bleſſing of the brethren.

v. 34. it pleaſed Silas to abide] They were diſmiſſed by the Church at Antioch, at their pleaſure to depart, and returne to the Apoſtles at Jeruſalem, but Silas to do that Church more ſervice abode there a longer time.

v. 35. with many others alſo] Without emulation they united in the work of Chriſt, as they who truly zealed Gods honour, not their own.

v. 36. let us go again and viſit,&c.] Here was Pauls diligence, not onely to plant, but alſo to water: it was not enough once to preach the goſpel to them, but in regard of mens frailties, it ought to be cheriſhed and fomented with new exhortations and conſolations: the rather, becauſe Satan (the envious man) is ever ready to caſt in his tares, wherever the ſervants of God have ſowed the good wheat, See Matth. 13.

v. 37. to take with them John] Whoſe ſirname was Mark, Chap. 12. 25. See Chap. 13. 13.

v. 38. and went not with them to the work] That is, to that miniſtration aſſigned them, Chap. 13. 2.

v. 39. the contention was ſo ſharp] Such as prevailed to embittering their mindes, ſo that Barnabas went away with John to his own countrey Cyprus, Chap. 4. So miſchievouſly vigilant is Satan to take all occaſions of dividing good men: he is contented and well pleaſed with the confederacies and combinations of the wicked, for that is the ſtrength of his kingdom; he envieth only the unity of the religious: the more cautious ought all good men be, leſt they be embarked in contentions.

v. 40. Paul choſe Silas] Though they differed about John, verſ. 38, 39. yet neither forſook his office and miniſtry: this ſtorm divided them in their perſons, not in their faith: and by the providence of God to the Churches good, for their confirmation and further edification in the faith of Chriſt.

v. 41. confirming the churches] Bringing to their mindes that which they had formerly taught, and further inſtructing them,as need required. Thus the invincible goodneſs of God bringeth good out of evil: their diviſion was evil, but the edifying of the Churches good.

v. 15. and her houſhold] Gods covenant is with us and our children, Gen. 17. 9, 10. and therefore the ſeal thereof ought ſo to be: whole families were baptized, whereof children were commonly a part: if any ſay there were no children in Lydias, and the Goalers houſhold, or other like families, we require their proof: if any deſire our proof (that children ought to be baptized who are born of believing parents) by ſome expreſſe place of Scripture; we that are in 1600 yeers poſſeſſion and preſcription, more reaſonably require them to prove by any expreſſe place of Scripture, that children were not baptized by the Apoſtles (when they baptized houſholds, and nations, as they were commanded Matth. 28. 19.) or ought not to be, by us. and the priſoners heard them] they did not pray as the Phariſes, ambitious of the praiſes of men, but to teſtifie the confidence they had in a good cauſe, and in a good conſcience.

v. 26. ſuddenly there was a great earth-quake, &c.] Thus God aſſured them that their prayers were heard. See Chap. 4. 31. he could without an earthquake have delivered them, as Chap. 12. 10. but thus the Lord of the creatures would manifeſt his power and preſence, leſt any ſhould think that they had by ſome endeavours attempted to break priſon, or that it had been only ſome fortuitous eſcape: and thus would he manifeſt to poſterities, that the ſighing of his priſoners cometh before him, who can at his pleaſure deliver thoſe who are appointed to die. See Pſal. 34. 16. 19. Pſal. 145. 18.

v. 27. would have killed himſelf] Fearing that he muſt needs ſuffer for the eſcape of his priſoners; for (had he been enformed of all that now happened) to men unacquainted with the power and providence of God, it might ſeem a ridiculous plea, to ſay that the priſon doors opened themſelves, and that all his priſoners bands fell off: here we may ſee the miſerable reſolutions and comforts of the unregenerate in afflictions.

v. 28. Do thy ſelf no harm, &c.] Hereby it may appear that theſe ſervants of God were not ſo ſolicitous for their own lives and liberties, as for the propagation of the goſpel, and mens ſalvation: otherwiſe being looſe, and the doors all open, they could have been ſilent; and they might eaſily have eſcaped: but they being enformed by the ſpirit that God therefore awaked the keeper that he might be converted and ſaved; Paul and Silas ſtart not, neither tempted they God, or loſt the uſe of the miracle by their ſtay; it being the main end of all this; that God might appear on the part of that religion, which the world then ſo much condemned, and that this keeper and his familie might be ſaved.

v. 29. called for a light] Poſſibly to be brought into the place where the priſoners were; for priſons uſually have light burning in ſome of their watches all night; and thereby he might ſee, or finde that the priſon doors were open, verſe 27.

he ſprang in] εἰσεπήδησε, he leaped in (or came ſpeedily in among them, as one that leaped) to ſee if the priſoners were all there. So εἰσπηδάω is interpreted, ſaltu irruo, &c. εἰσεπήδησαν εἰς τὴν οἰκίαν, Demoſt. he leaped or ruſhed into the houſe.

came trembling and fell down, &c.] He that a little before confidently put their feet into the ſtocks, now cometh trembling to their feet: mark how behooffull it is for ſome men to be humbled with fear and affliction: how ſecurely before this hour would he have deſpiſed all that ever Paul and Silas could have ſaid to him? this ſhort fear hath made him docible: you may perceive the reaſon why God ſo often exerciſeth his dear children with fears: but why (may ſome ſay) did not Paul and Silas reprove him, and take him up from their feet, as Peter did Cornelius, c. 10. 26. becauſe they knew this man did it not to adore them, but for preſent fear of Gods judgements to humble himſelf: And indeed it was a Roman faſhion of begging pardon to fall at his feet of whom they entreated it : had here been any thing prejudicial to Gods honour, Paul would not have forgotten his former zeal among the Lyſtrians, Chap. 14. 14.&c.

v. 30. and brought them out] Out of the inner priſon, v. 24. into ſome more convenient room; poſſibly into his own lodgings, as is after expreſſed, verſe 34.

What muſt I do to be ſaved?] Some being ſtartled with fear and ſenſe of afflictions return to their former purpoſes more obſtinately. See Exod. 7. 3. Matth. 28. 5. 11. 15. but he ſo profited by his fear; that he deſired to be enformed, what he muſt do to be ſaved, as Chap. 2. 37. this was Gods free mercy, (Rom. 9. 15.) for Paul had not yet preached Chriſt unto him ſince his impriſonment.

v. 31. believe in the Lord Jeſus Chriſt] This brief anſwer containeth the ſum of the goſpel offering us ſalvation, and all bleſſedneſſe in Chriſt apprehended by faith.

v. 32. and they ſpake unto him the word of God,&c.] More largly expounding that which they propoſed in brief.

to all that were in the houſe] So proved it an happy affliction to thoſe priſoners alſo, who by this means came to faith and ſalvation.

v. 33. took them in the ſame hour of the night] See what admirable changes God can ſuddenly work: but now this keeper would have deſtroyed himſelf, preſently he humbly beggeth information how he might be ſaved; which having received, he delayeth not to ſhew his thankfulneſſe. See alſo Gen. 40. 23. and 41. 9,&c. Eſther 6. 1, 2, 3. faith cannot be unfruitful of good works.

was baptized, he and all his] See on verſe 15. this care of his family is exemplary. See Chap. 10. 7. 24. 48.

v, 34. he had brought them into his houſe] Into his own lodgings, where his ſelf and family kept: ſee the admirable change of him and his in one night; now he obſerveth not the governours charge concerning the cloſe and ſafe impriſonment of Paul and Silas, but uſeth them with all humanity: now he waſheth their ſtripes, or wounds received by thoſe ſtripes. They that have true faith, and aſſurance of their intereſt in Chriſt, will obey God in being charitable, rather then men who command them to be cruel.

he ſet meat before them] τράπεζαν, a table: thus faith worketh by love and charity. See Gal. 5. 6.

and rejoyced believing,&c.] They rejoyced in the faith of God, the Syriack hath it: it is true which Ambroſe ſaith, l. 5. ep. 18. nullus major dolor quam is qui peccati mucrone vulnerat conſcientiam, there is no greater ſorrow, then that which with the ſword of ſin woundeth the conſcience; therefore the ſinner feeling a ſweet calm within him, in peace of conſcience by his juſtification by faith, (Rom. 5. 1.) muſt needs rejoyce in ſpirit: here was now no exaction of fees, imperious and cruel uſage of the priſoners, after the keeper once believed in Chriſt, but the true fruits of charity, and ſo true joy to him and his whole family: what joy or peace of conſcience others are like to have at laſt, may not obſcurely be gathered from Chriſts words, Matth. 25. 43. 45. who ſpeaking of the form of judgement to come, among other arguments of condemnation reciteth this, I was ſick, and in priſon, and ye viſited me not; in as much as ye did it not to one of the leaſt of theſe, ye did it not to me: where note, firſt that Chriſt taketh ſome things on his own account, as due to his own perſon, which are done to his elect. Secondly, that if neglecting to viſit, relieve and comfort the impriſoned, be a juſt cauſe of damnation; then moſt ſad and fearful muſt be the condition of thoſe keepers, who as much as they could, have taken away the relief and comfort of their priſoners by unreaſonable exactions, and hard uſage of them. But they have warrant and cuſtome for that they do: that indeed might poſſibly ſecure them from men here, but who can give them indempnity from the ſentence of Chriſt already foretold them? Doth any of them ſo much love his own ſoul, as to cry with this happy convert, verſe 30. what muſt I do to be ſaved? you ſee what followeth, verſe 31. but leſt thy fruitleſſe faith ſhould at laſt fail thee, go learn of Zache, Luke 19. 8. to reſtore the damage, that Jeſus may ſay to thy conſcience, This day is ſalvation come to this houſe.

v. 35. and when it was day] Remembring, and poſſibly being terrified with the earthquake.

ſent the Sergeants] Syr. duces geſtantes virgas, according to the Greek, ῥαβδοῦχοι: ſo called of the ſtaves or rods which they carried. Some ſay that theſe were meſſengers, known by their ſtaff of office which they were to carry, as apparitors to cite, and bear out proceſſe of judges and magiſtrates: and that the Lictores were diſtinguiſhed from theſe, by the axes and rods which they carried.

v. 36. Keeper of the priſon told this ſaying] Being glad for their enlargement, he cheerfully brought them news of this new clemency.

v. 37. but Paul ſaid unto them] That is, unto the Serjeants.

uncondemned] ἀκατακρίτους, as they ſay indictâ cauſâ, without cauſe alleadged; without any legal tryal, or hearing of us: Syr. inſontes, guiltleſſe men.

being Romans] Not becauſe he was born at Rome, or of Roman parents (he was an Hebrew born at Tarſus) but becauſe the citizens thereof were by their priviledge free men of Rome; and ſo by their Valerian Law might not be bound, and by their Sempronian Law, they might not be beaten or executed without the Romans conſent: thus Paul pleaded his priviledge for the defence of the goſpel, leſt the word of God ſhould be deſpiſed with their perſons.

v. 38. they feared when] Becauſe the puniſhment was great for any man that injured a citizen or free man of Rome.

v. 39. and they came and beſought them] This can God do for all his ſervants, who have been diſgracefully and deſpitefully uſed: in this entreating and leading them out of priſon, they ſufficiently confeſſe their precipitate fury in abuſing them who were innocent: this was for fear of the Romans, leſt they ſhould puniſh their city, or them for violating their priviledges; therefore they deſire them to depart from them.

v. 40. and entred into the houſe of Lydia] Verſe 14. doubtleſſe to confirm them in the faith which they had preached to them, and probably they would have ſtayed longer, but that the imperious and armed entreaty of the wicked Magiſtrates awed them: Lydia and hers hearing of their marvellous deliverance, could not but be comforted, and confirmed in the truth: and though Paul now left them, yet he after viſiteth the Philippians with an Epiſtle to contain and confirm them in the faith.

CHAP. XVII.

Verſe 1. A*Mphipolis*] A city of Macedonia, now called Chryſopolis: there was another of the ſame name in Syria, as ſaith Jerom de loc. Hebr. Act.

Apollonia] Another city in Macedonia: there is alſo another of the ſame name in Africa, which was called Pentapolis. Jerom q. ſupr.

Theſſalonica] A chief city of Macedonia: ſo called of Philips victory over the Theſſalonians: to the Church hereof the Apoſtle wrote two Epiſtles.

v. 2. as his manner was] He was conſtant in preaching the truth of Chriſt, and the adverſaries were conſtant in oppoſing it: by that which men uſe to do you may know to which party they belong.

went in unto them] Into their ſynagogue: he was none of them who crept into houſes, to lead captive ſilly women, 2 Tim. 3. 2,&c. truth ſeeks no corners, the good ſeed is ſowed in the day time, but the tares while men ſlept, Matth. 13. 25. truth knoweth it ſelf a ſtranger on earth, and that it eaſily findes enemies; the kinred, ſeat, hope, favour and dignity thereof are in heaven: onely it rejoyceth in this one thing, as Tertullian Apol. cap. 1. ſaith, ne ignota damnetur, leſt it be condemned unknown: therefore edito gaudet & aperto, it joyeth to be publikely ſeen: dum conventicula ſibi diverſa conſtituunt veritatis caput, atque originem reliquerunt, Cyprian. de ſimpl. prælat. while men appoint them divers conventicles, they left the author & fountain of truth.

out of the Scriptures] This ſheweth whence all ſound knowledge of God, and religion muſt be derived: in things humane, humane reaſons have place; but in matters of religion, onely the word of God (without traditions of men) muſt determine, ſo as that in that we muſt reſt. Faith can be grounded on nothing but infallible truth; and that can be found onely in the word of God, in which there can be no falſhood, becauſe God, the author thereof 2 Tim. 3. 16. cannot lie, Tit. 1. 2. Well ſaid Ambroſe in his anſwer to Valentinian the Emperour, l. 5. ep. 31. Cœli myſterium doceat me Deus ipſe qui condidit, non homo qui ſeipſum ignoravit: Cui magis de Deo, quam Deo credam? let God his ſelf teach me the myſtery of heaven, who made heaven, not man who knoweth not himſelf; concerning God, whom ſhall I rather believe then God himſelf?

v. 3. opening and alledging] That is, as the Syriack hath it, expounding and ſhewing: indeed παρατιθέμενος, imports a making things as manifeſt, as that which is ſet before our eyes. The ſum of his ſermon was, that Chriſt for our redemption ought ſo to die, and riſe again (Rom. 4. 25.) and that this Jeſus (whom Paul preached) is indeed the Chriſt and long expected Meſſias.

v. 4. conſorted with Paul] προσεκληρώθησαν, as it were choſen by lot, they joyned: it importeth a neer and firme conjunction. devout Greeks] Chap. 11. 20.

v. 5. which believed not] See Chap. 14. 2.

certain lewd fellows] τῶν ἀγοραίων τινὰς,&c. idle fellows, who having no employment at home, uſe to walk lazily up and down markets and publick places; the dregges of cities mercenary, worthleſs burdens of the earth; commonly watching opportunities of moving ſedition, in hope of finding ſome advantages in change.

the houſe of Jaſon] Who was Paul and *S*ilas hoſt.

ſought to bring them out] To bring out Paul and *S*ilas, that they might ſtone them.

v. 6. they drew Jaſon] In an illegall and tumultuous way violently pulled him out of his houſe, as a delinquent; as if hoſpitality, and harbouring the ſervants of Chriſt had been a ſin.

and certain brethren] Some other believers. See verſe 4.

theſe have turned the world upſide-down] Or, who have ſtirred up the world to inſurrection and ſedition: a grievous crime of Chriſtians, had it been true; but being falſe, the greater was the accuſers ſin, who charged them with ſuch untruth: So odeous is ſin, that the very wicked are aſhamed of it, which is the reaſon why they commonly call others by names proper to themſelves, that they may tranſmit unto, or charge their ſins upon others. (See chap. 24. 5. Gene. 3. 12. 13. 1 Sam. 15. 15. 21. 1 Kings 18. 17.) they would, the guilt alſo, if they could: ſo in the Primitive Church, what ever calamity came upon the people, or common weal (though never ſo impious) it was preſently imputed to the Chriſtians.

v. 7. whom Jaſon hath received] He hath harboured them: ſee on verſe 6.

contrary to the decrees of Ceſar] An odeous crime, but impudently caſt on Chriſtians: Paul and Silas endeavoured to advance the *S*piritual kingdom of Chriſt, without any injury to the Roman Empire; which the Jews well knew, but caſt this aſperſion upon them, only to render them odeous to the people: therefore they pretend Cæſars right, that they might abuſe the decrees of Cæſar, to the deſtruction of Gods ſervants: the ancient Chriſtians were no diſtubers of States: rogamus Auguſte, non pugnamus, ſaid Ambroſe lib. 5. epiſt. 33. ad Marcellin, we entreat, ô Cæſar, we fight not; therefore Theodoſius had rather to binde men to him, religione quam timore, with religion rather then fear. Ambr. de exit. Theodoſ. orat. the Chriſtian (ſaid Tertullian. ad ſcap. cap. 2.) is no mans enemy, much leſs the Emperours, whom knowing to be appointed of God, he muſt needs, love, reverence, honour and wiſh ſafe—therefore, ſaith the ſame, we honour the Emperour ſo far as it is lawfull for us, and expedient for him, ut hominem à Deo ſecundum—& ſolo Deo minorem—they prayed for the Emperours—long life, proſperous reign—valiant armies, faithfull Senate, or Councell, good people, and a quiet world: ib. Apol. cap. 30. yet theſe men could never be ſecure from calumney, as if they had been enemies to peace.

v. 8. They troubled the people, &c.] This people, not knowing the buſineſs, and hearing ſomething pretended againſt the Roman ſtate, (having formely ſmarted under their power) were troubled, for fear they might again deal ſeverely with them as diſturbers of peace; and probably the Roman commanders there being, might alſo be troubled at the appearance, or fear of ſome inſurrection.

v. 9. When they had taken ſecurity of Jaſon] λαϐόντες τὸ ἱκανὸν, Syr. and had taken ſureties: that is, bail, for their appearance. So Budæus interpreteth it, cum ſatis accepiſſent, ab Jaſone, & ab aliis judicio ſiſtendi ſponſionis, &c. here they being partly ſatisfied with their anſwer (as is moſt probable) and a legall ſecurity taken, they appeaſe the people.

v. 10. Berea] Another City of Macedonia: hither they ſent (Paul and *S*ilas, that they might keep them from the rage of the Jews, and reſerve them to the greater good of the Church.

went into the Synagogue] Here was his invincible love towards: after ſo many violent outrages of theirs againſt his life, he ceaſeth not to venture again for their ſalvation. See Rom. 9. 2. 3.

v. 11. Theſe were more noble] That is, then the Theſſalonian Jews, for this τῶν ἐν Θεσσαλονίκῃ, is ellipticall: then thoſe (Jews) in Theſſalonica: which their dayly ſearching of the *S*criptures confirms, the Jews had the writings of the Prophets, but rarely the Gentiles before their converſion: ſee verſe 13.

ſearched the Scriptures dayly, &c.] For they teſtifie of Chriſt. John 5. 39. there Chriſt is learned; there ſhineth an heavenly light, which like that Eaſtern ſtar. (Matth. 2. 2. &c.) leads the wiſe men to Chriſt: theſe Bereans diligence, is exemplary to us.

v. 12. Therefore many of them believed] By the teſtimony of Scriptures, and example of other believers.

v. 13. When the Jews of Theſſalonica, &c.] Theſe unbelievers being of reſtleſs and implacable malice envied thoſe who believed, therefore came they over to Berea, to hinder the preaching of the Goſpel there, by ſtirring up new troubles. See 2 Theſ. 1. 5. &c.

v. 14. to go as it were to Sea] To take ſhipping as if he meant to go quite away out of thoſe parts; which they did that the Jews might give over their purſuit.

but Silas and Timotheus abode, &c.] They being not ſo much known nor maliced as Paul, ſtayed a little while, further to edifie the believers there.

v. 15. to Athens] A City and famous Univerſity of Greece: ſo did the providence of God bring to paſs that Satans malicious endeavours to ſuppreſs the Goſpel, cauſed it more to ſpread abroad; as here it did, at Athens, the Greece of Greece, See Atlas. min. G. Mercat. in. Achaia.

v. 16. His ſpirit was ſtirred in him] παρωξύνετο—was embittered in him. So chap. 15. 39. ἐγένετο οὖν παροξυσμὸς—So the interpreter of Chryſoſtome giveth it exacerbabat ſpiritus illius—Occumenius interpreteth here, as we διηγείρετο, was ſtirred up. So bitterneſſe of Spirit moved him, that hee could not bear it, but brake out into reproof.

v. 17. with the devout perſons] With the Proſelytes. Syr. with them that feared God. See chap. 13. 43.

v. 18. Epicureans] A ſect of Philoſophers, as alſo were the Stoicks, of the errours of the Epicureans, See Epiphan. hæreſ. 6. Gent. hæreſ. ord. 8. of the Stoicks, ſee ib. Epiphan. hæreſ. 5. D. laert. lib. 10. ib. lib. 7. zenon.

v. 19. Areopagus] Or Mars-hill, it was the higheſt court in Athens, a court where the Judges called Areopagites ſate, concerning the higheſt titles and cauſes, ſpecially religion: hither they brought Paul as a violater of their religion, to be judged, as Socrates was, for that he denyed their idols to be Gods, and becauſe he would, as they ſaid bring in ἕτερα καινὰ δαιμόνια, other new Gods. D. Laert. lib. 2. Socrat.

what this new doctrine, &c.] Thus Godleſs men think of truth: whereas truth is more ancient then any errour: the goſpel was in the old teſtament, as the wheat in the blade, in time, and by degrees ripening, and ſhewing it ſelf. Heatheniſh ſuperſtitions, are but imitations of Gods truth and holy worſhip, inventions of Satan to beguile ignorant ſouls with ſhews of truth.

v. 20. Thou bringeſt certain ſtrange things, &c.] It was ſtrange to them who were aliens from the covenant of God: this they would know, to ſatisfie their own curioſity.

v. 21. either to tell or hear] This is the fruit of idleneſs, and levity of miſgoverned minds. See 1 Tim. 5. 13. theſe two things go together, inquiſitiveneſs, and talkativeneſs: the Grecian hiſtories ſhew the diſpoſition of this people: the meaneſt mechanick among them, would be medling and diſcourſing of States matter; inſomuch as in that dangerous liberty of tongues, that republike (though the Miſtreſs of knowledge to all Greece) could never be well, or long ſetled; nor free from tumults, and dangerous concuſſions of ſtate; ſo diſcompoſing and disjointing the members thereof, that they were long before they could grow together again, recover their ancient ſtrength, or be free from ſome miſchievous gangrens, untill they loſt themſelves and all Greece with them: ſuch popular liberty, being a dangerous ſymptom, of a diſaffected Commonwealth, it were to be wiſhed that thoſe who ſit at the helm would ſeriouſly, and timely conſider how this diſeaſe hath crept upon us, now ſome years together, leſt once—flouriſhing England come to the like miſery.

too ſuperſtitious] δεισιδαιμονεστέρους: the word is uſed ſomtimes in the good part; but here as commonly in the evil: ſo Clem. Alexandr. adm. ad Gent, &c. δεισιδαίμων, is metuens numen, or a ſuperſtitious man: one who by fear is driven to believe a deity, or worſhippeth for fear, as the ſupeſtitious uſually do. Lanctantius deſcribeth ſuch to be, qui ſuperſtitem memoriam defunctorum colunt, &c. who worſhip the images of their Anceſtors, as their penates, and houſhold Gods: they who deviſed to themſelves new rites of adoring the dead (in ſtead of God) whom they imagined to be received into heaven and Deified. l. 4 c. 28. and alſo they who worſhipped many, or any falſe God, he had excellently well ſaid before. l. 2. c. 18. that ſuch had not the reaſon of men left in them; and that there is no doubt, but that, Religio nulla eſt, ubicunq; ſimulachrum eſt, there is no Religion, where there is an image.

v. 24. God that made the world] Chap. 7. 48.

v. 25. with mens hands] His worſhip conſiſteth not in things externall, humane traditions, or the works of mens hands, idols, images, &c. but in ſpirit and truth (See John 4. 24.) according to the holy preſcript of his own word: he is independently and ſelf bleſſed, wanting nothing of ours (Pſal. 50. 8.) he gives all creatures what they have and are: when he bleſſeth us with ability to give (which is acceptable ſervice to him. Phil. 4. 18. Hebr. 13. 16.) and rewardeth that which we do herein, in faith and obedience to him, he onely crowneth his own graces in us: but here he intendeth not theſe things, but externall ceremonies, &c.

v. 26. hath made of one blood] Of one Adam: herein he admoniſheth the Athenians, to conſider the end for which God gave them life and being: it is a brutiſh ſtupor, not to minde why God made us reaſonable creatures.

determined the times before] Job 7. 1. & 14. 5, 6. For the birth and life of every man, as alſo the places of their habitations: this he ſaith to confute the Epicures, who denyed Gods providence, dreaming that all things were made by a fortuitous concourſe of their imaginary Atomi: (Clem. Alexandrinus ſtrom. l. 1. Greg. Nazianzen orat. 33. fine. Epiphanius hæreſ. 6. Athanaſ. de incarn. verb. Auguſtin de C. D. l. 6. cap. 5. &c.) God in his eternall counſell ordained all theſe things, and changes which we ſee in their appointed time: he divideth the earth to the ſons of men, and his providence governeth all things, which his wiſedom not onely foreſaw, but diſpoſeth of. See Pſal. 115. 3.

v. 27. that they ſhould ſeek the Lord] It is not as Anaxagoras ſaid, man was born to ſee the ſun and the heavens (Lactant. l. 3. cap. 9.) but to ſeek, know, and ſerve the Lord their Maker: he not onely gave us life, but alſo means by which we may come to know him, in the great volume of nature, and the book of grace, the holy Scripture.

if happily they might feel after him] ψηλαφήσειαν αὐτὸν might feel and finde, here intimate that God, though he be incorporeall, yet in his works which are corporeall and obvious to ſenſe, ſo complieth with their infirmity as that he ſetteth himſelf before them (as Oecumenius ſaith) ὥσπερ ἂν εἰς μέσον τι ψηλαφώμενον) as it were ſomething palpable: the Syriac hath it, that they might finde him by his creatures: in them indeed, that which may be known of him, as his wiſedom, power, and goodneſſe, may and do evidently appear. Rom. 1. 20.

not farre from every one of us] We are not to ſeek the knowledge of God in things farre remote from us; we need not go out of our ſelves to finde him; he filleth all things. Jer. 23. 24. indeed the carnal eye cannot ſee him, nor the ear hear him: lo he goeth by me, and I ſee him not. Job 9. 11. yet the effects of his preſent goodneſſe, are obvious to every ſenſe. See Auguſtin Paulinæ. ep. 112. cap. 11.

God did not manifeſt himſelf unto them, as unto the Jews. Pſal. 147. 19, 20. and this ſheweth Gods patience, in that he did not preſently deſtroy them, not their impunity for the life to come: herein he prepoſſeſſeth an objection which they might poſſibly have made: if the religion which we profeſſe, be falſe and erroneous; why did God ſuffer the world ſo long to erre: he ſaith God bare with that in his long-ſuffering; but now he requireth you to repent: be not you ſo curious to examine what became of others before you, as carefull for your own ſalvation; the onely means whereto is now preſented you: that was a ſevere judgement, when God gave you up to your own luſts, and blindeneſſe of minde (as Rom. 1. 24. Heb. 8, 9.) this is a gracious mercy which he offereth you in the Goſpel and covenant of grace.

but now he commandeth all men] Now he cauſeth the Goſpel to be preached to all nations, to draw them from their horrible ſins: and now if they refuſe to do the known will of their Maſter, they muſt expect more ſevere judgements.

v. 31. righteouſneſſe] ἐν δικαιοσύνῃ in juſtice and equity: as 2 Cor. 5. 10. he mentioneth the judgement to come, to terrifie the Epicures, that they might no longer beguile their own ſouls, in hope of future impunity. See Pſal. 96. 13. & 98. 9.

by that man whom he hath ordained] Rom. 2, 16. Chriſt Jeſus: poſſibly Paul nameth his humanity, in reſpect of the Gentiles ignorance of the myſtery of the bleſſed Trinity, and Chriſts incarnation: and leſt they ſhould ſo miſtake that ſacred myſtery, as thereby to confirm their opinion concerning plurality of gods.

given aſſurance] Or offered faith; the meaning is, that God confirmed and declared, as it were by a moſt evident teſtimony, that Chriſt ſhould judge the world, in raiſing him from the dead; wherein he was with power, declared to be the Son of God. Rom. 1. 4.

v. 32. ſome mocked] Some were like ſtony ground, ſome like thorny, and ſome like the good. Matth. 13. they who taſted the truth and mercy of God therein, deſired to hear more. See Chap. 13. 42.

v. 33. So Paul departed] He diſmiſſed his auditors, having performed his part in ſowing the ſeed of the Goſpel among them.

v: 34. certain men clave unto him] To wit, thoſe whoſe hearts God had opened, ſo that the word might be a ſavour of life unto them.

Dionyſius the Areopagite] A Senator or Judge in that court of Mars-hill in Athens, whom Luke names, becauſe he was no vulgar auditor, but an eminent man, and of great authority with the Athenians.

Damaris] It ſeemeth that ſhe was ſome honourable woman. See verſe 11.

CHAP. XVIII.

Verſe 1. Corinth] A chief city of Achaia, ſituate between the Egean and Jonian ſeas.

v. 2. Aquila.] A Jew converted to the faith of Chriſt. See Rom. 16. 3.

Pontus,] A province in Aſia.

Claudius] The Emperour of Rome.

v. 3. and wrought] This he did in reſpect of the preſent neceſſity, that he might not diſadvantage the Goſpel by being burdenſome to any. chap. 20. 34. 2 Theſ. 3. 8.

tent makers] Their trade was to make tents of ſkins, then much in uſe in thoſe hot countreys.

v. 4. a Greek] See chap. 11. 20.

v. 5. when Silas and Timotheus were come] See chap. 16. 1. &c. and 17. 15.

was preſſed in ſpirit] He had an extraordinary and vehement motion of the ſpirit, by a divine inſpiration, to teſtifie to the Jews, that Jeſus was that Chriſt, the Meſſias, whom they ſo long expected.

v. 6. he ſhook his raiment] Matth. 10. 14.

your blood be upon your own heads] This is an Hebrew manner of ſpeaking. So Joſh. 2. 19. דמו בראשו damo beroſho Gre. ἔνοχος ἑαυτῷ ἔσται; he ſhall be guilty to himſelf: that is, of his own deſtruction. So 2 Sam. 1. 16. thy blood ſhall be upon thine own head: So the Jews cryed, Matth. 27. 25. his blood be upon our heads &c. that is, the guilt and puniſhment thereof; this phraſe ſeemeth taken from the Jews cuſtome of laying their hands on the head of the guilty perſon; by which they intimated, that the witneſſes laid that crime, concerning which they teſtified on the head, or to the charge of the perſon accuſed, and ſo devoted him to puniſhment; as their ſacrifices were deſtinated to death, by the laying the ſacrificers hand on the head of the beaſt to be offered: See Levit. 1. 4. & 3. 2. Exod. 29. 10. So that blood is ſaid to be laid on the head, when one is guilty of the ſin which deſerveth death: the ſenſe of Pauls ſpeech is, be you, or you are guilty of your own deſtructions.

I am clean &c.] καθαρὸς ἐγὼ that is, ἀθῷος, innocent, guiltleſſe; or ἀναίτιος; unblameable, not in the fault: οὐκ ἐκοινώνησα τῷ κακῷ: I have no ſhare in this evil: it is none of my fault, if ye periſh.

henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles] This he ſaid, that emulation of the Gentiles might incite them to beleeve: but their obſtinacy made an evil uſe of every thing, and ſo rendred them incureable. chap. 13. 46.

v. 7. named Juſtus] This was a Proſelyte: the Syriac calleth him טיטוס Titus; whether Juſtus were here a ſirname; as, chap. 1. 23. and Col. 4. 11. it is uncertain, the vulgar readeth Titi Juſti.

one that feared God] So chap. 10. 2. Cornelius was ſaid to be a devout man, and one that feared God: a religious and good man.

v. 8. and Criſpus a chief ruler] See 1 Cor. 1. 14. ἀρχισυνάγωγος a chief, or one of the chief rulers of the ſynagogue, for verſe 17. Soſthenes is mentioned (as his colleague, or one in the ſame office) a chief ruler of the ſynagogue. See on Mark. 5. 22. Matth. 9. 18. and on Luk. 13, 14.

v. 9. be not afraid, but ſpeak &c.] Be not afraid to ſpeak boldly: becauſe the ingratitude and perverſneſſe of hearers, often diſcourageth Miniſters, thus God animateth them to their duety. See Iſaiah 58. 1. Jer. 1. 17, 18, 19. Ezek. 3, 4, 5. 8. 9. 11. we may not, for fear of the invincible malice of ſome neglect the ſalvation of others. See chap. 20. 27.

v. 10. for I am with thee] I will take thy part and aſſiſt thee. See Matth. 28. Rom. 8. 31. however God often permitteth his Miniſters to the violence of enemies, yet he is with them in life and death; yea, then moſt, when they are moſt deſtitute of mans aſſiſtance. See 2 Tim. 4. 16, 17, 18. but here God promiſed a more evident and peculiar protection to Paul by making void all the miſchievous endeavours of the adverſaries.

I have much people in this city] This is a ſecond argument, whereby he encourageth Paul to ſpeak confidently: there were many in Corinth whom God had ordained to ſalvation, ſo that his labour ſhould be bleſſed with happy ſucceſſe: here is an argument of induſtry and patience to Miniſters: God hath his Elect, whom in his appointed time he will effectually call to Chriſt by the word preached, though he ſuffer them for a ſeaſon to lie like the pure wheat among the periſhing chaff.

v. 11. continued there] ἐκάθισε he ſate there, that is, at Corinth.

a yeer and ſix moneths] So full of labour and difficulty was the planting of Churches, that Paul, ſo extraordinarily gifted, was ſo long in this one, yet had he aſſiſtants. See 1 Cor. 2. 3. 1 Cor. 3. 10.

v. 12. Gallio was Deputy] Affliction commonly followeth preaching of the Goſpel: malice is reſtleſſe as the devil, whoſe influence it is: the Jews, as it ſeems by their change of their Deputy, were animated to attempt againſt Paul; hoping that a new Judge would favour them againſt the Chriſtians.

of Achaia] Gallio is called proconſul, or Deputy Conſul of Achaia, that is of all Greece, of which Achaia was but a part: So Suidas interpreteth Ἀχαΐα, ἡ Ἑλλάς: Achaia, that is Greece: So the Romans (ſaith he) ſeem to call Achaia Greece, transferring the name of the then chief and ruling part thereof, to the whole conquered nation: ſome ſay it was becauſe they ſubdued the reſt of the Grecians through the aid of the Achaians Pauſanias; &c. Sure it is that Greece was made a Conſularie province: ſome write that Gallio obtained this Deputiſhip of Claudius the Roman Emperour, by the favour of Nero, Claudius adopted ſon.

with one accord] So unanimous, and induſtrious are the wicked to do miſchief: it is a wretched ſhame for Chriſtians to divide, when Satans kingdom can be of one conſent.

v. 13. contrary to the law] They mean the law of Moſes; according to which the Romans had permitted them to live: this they ſaid, not being able to look to the end of the Law Chriſt Jeſus. 2 Corinthians 3. 13.

v. 14. if it were a matter of wrong] Between party and party: it is as if he ſaid; I will meddle onely with civil government, and not with your religion.

v. 15. and names] The profane man thought the Jews worſhipped one name, and the Chriſtians another, as the heathens, who upon the matter, adored bare names, and fancies of men.

v. 16. drave them from the judgment ſeat] He ſuperſeded the cauſe, and therefore would not have them ſtay there longer to trouble the court, with controverſies (as he thought) unneceſſary.

v. 17. the Greeks] The Grecians which were not converted: the Syriac readeth it, the profane.

none of thoſe things] Neither for that which concerned religion, to defend Gods ſervants: nor for the ſtates intereſt, to maintain peace and defend the oppreſſed.

v. 18. having ſhorn] As Nazarites did at the end of their vow, Numb. 6. 18. the meaning is, that Paul ſhore his head. See chap. 21. 24.

in Cenchrea] A port of the Corinthians.

v. 19. came to Epheſus] A city of Ionia, and Metropolis or chief city of Aſia the leſſe.

reaſoned with the Jews] So zealous was he ſtill for their ſalvation, ſo often did he expoſe his life for them.

v. 20. he conſented not] Not that he was not willing to ſpend his time, and do his uttermoſt endeavour for their ſalvation who were willing to hear; for he ventured often to preach to the obſtinate, and he promiſeth to come again unto them; but it ſeemeth ſome ſecret inſtinct of Gods ſpirit now led him to Jeruſalem.

v. 21. keep this feaſt] Not that he now obſerved dayes, or the antiquated ceremonies of the law (See Gal. 4. 10.) but becauſe he might in that ſolemnity, and concourſe of people, more advance the Goſpel.

if God will] 1 Cor. 4. 19. Jam. 4. 15.

v. 22. Ceſarea] Called Ceſarea ſtratonis: a port by which they came to Jeruſalem; ſome ſay built by Herod.

v. 23. Galatia, and Phrygia] Chap. 16. 6. Galatia, or Gallogræcia; ſo named of the Galli qui Græcis mixti olim loca ea coluere. Atlas min. Amſter. 1634. pag. 600. c. 2.

v. 24. a certain Jew] 1 Cor. 1. 12.

named Apollos] See 1 Cor. 3. 6. and 1 Cor. 4. 6. he was born at Alexandria, a city in Egypt.

an eloquent man] Though the kingdom of God be not in word, but in power. 1 Cor. 4. 20. nor eloquence of ſpeech, or the enticing words of mans wiſedom, but in the evidence of the ſpirit. 1 Cor. 2. 1. 4. yet is eloquence uſed, onely to the ſetting forth of the truth of God, and edification of his Church, as an Egyptian jewel to adorne the tabernacle, and here commended in Apollos, by the holy Ghoſt, whoſe gift it is: Lactantius noted well that the Philoſphers, Oratours, and Poets, were therefore very pernicious, in that they eaſily enſnared incautious mindes: ſuavitate ſermonis, with ſweetneſſe of ſpeech; therefore his advice is, even in delivering the truth of Chriſt, to ſweeten the ſpeech for the winning of them to Chriſt, who will neither hear nor read any thing, niſi expolitum, ac diſertum, except it be poliſhed, and eloquent; and where nemo rem veritate ponderat, ſed ornatu, l. 5. cap. 1. no man valueth the matter by the truth, but politure and trimme thereof.

mighty in the Scriptures] Much verſed and learned in them, which enabled him to convince the adverſaries, Titus 1. 9. Syriack, argutus erat in Scripturis: this is added that none might think it to be the vaine and frothy eloquence of profane men: it was a divine and powerfull eloquence.

v. 25. inſtructed in the way of the Lord] κατηχημένος, inſtructed viva voce, the Syriack hath it, he was taught. Some interpret, he was initiated, &c. See Luke 1. 4. the word ſignifieth one that is entred into religion, or catechized, as thoſe who were taught the rudiments and principles thereof.

fervent in ſpirit] Zealous to teach and to winne men to Chriſt: See Rom. 12 11. 1 Kings 19. 14. Zeal is the life of religion, without which it is inactive (See Rev. 3. 15, 16.) but it muſt be zeal with the true knowledge of God. See Rom. 10. 2. Acts 21. 20. and 22. 3. Tit. 2. 14. Rev. 3. 19.

taught diligently] His zeal and diligence is here commendable, though he had not yet much knowledge of the doctrine of the Goſpel, as appeareth by the next clauſe: how ever, he well uſed his talent, being faithfull in a little.

the baptiſm of John] That is the doctrine of John.

v. 26. they took him unto them and expounded] If Priſcilla, the woman here mentioned, contributed ought to this work, it was where her husband, Apollos, and her ſelf were private: ſuch inſtruction Paul commendeth in Timothies grandmother Lois, and his mother Eunica, of whom (moſt likely) he had learned the holy Scriptures. (See 2 Tim. 1. 5. and 3. 15.) though otherwiſe in the Church, (or other place made publike by the company) he ſuffered not a woman to teach, but to be in ſilence. See 1 Tim. 2. 11, 12. poſſibly the man and wiſe hearing Apollos, both joyned in the invitation of him unto them, but that Aquila performed the part of interpretation, and inſtruction in the way of God, though it be attributed to both, becauſe both equally affected it; there is no patronage here for that late revived practice of the old exploded hereſie of the Pepuzians, or Quintilians, who as Auguſtin Tom. 6. de hæreſ. ſaith mulieres ſacerdotio honorant, we may more ſafely ſay that the moſt excellent of mere men know not all, and that thoſe who are inferiour in gifts may adde ſomthing to them.

the way of God] The doctrine of the Goſpel.

v. 27. to paſſe to Achaia] See verſe 12. why he would go thither is not here expreſſed, but certainly it was to advance the Goſpel there.

the brethren wrote] Letters of recommendation for him who was not much known to the Churches.

helped them much] Confirming them who believed, and refuting the adverſaries through the grace of God thereto enabling him.

v. 28. That Jeſus was Chriſt] The Jews had no controverſie with Chriſtians concerning a Chriſt to come; the whol diſpute was, whether Jeſus the Son of Mary were he; this now Apollos proved by Scriptures accommodated to him: and thus Apollos watered, 1 Cor. 3. 6. herein the Scripture is ſufficient to accompliſh and make the man of God abſolute 2 Tim. 3. 16. we cannot learn Chriſt in any humane traditions, or inventions of men: the ſun can be diſcerned by no light but his own, becauſe that excells all other worldly lights: neither can Chriſt the ſun of righteouſneſs be known by any, but his own light, which ſhineth in the Scriptures: theſe teſtifie of him, and diſcover him unto us. John 5. 39.

CHAP. XIX.

Verſe 1. THrough the upper coaſts] In the upper parts of Aſia, are Phrygia, Galatia, Lydia, Livonia, Jonia, in which was Epheſus.

v. 2. have ye received, &c.] They are demanded concerning the viſible gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, as ſpeaking tongues, healing, &c. Which then flouriſhed in the Church, though they were not then common to all that believed, and were baptized.

whether there be any Holy Ghoſt] Or whether the holy Ghoſt be (as Joh. 7. 39.) they meant whether there be any ſuch gifts of the holy Ghoſt, given to any: they anſwered according to Pauls queſtion; which being concerning the gifts and graces (not the infinite and eternall eſſence of the deity) they reply according to the ſame. (See chap. 8. 16.) for it were very abſur'd to ſay that they had not heard of the holy Ghoſt, being baptized of Johns Diſciples, John ſeeing him deſcending on Chriſt in his baptiſme, in a viſible form. Matt. 3. John 1. concerning this, neither did the Apoſtle aſk, nor they anſwer, but concerning thoſe gifts which then floriſhed in the Church, of which they ſaid, they had not heard.

v. 3. unto what then were ye baptized?] That is, what religion, what doctrine profeſſed you, in your baptiſme? or the queſtion was not here, of baptizing, but de primordiis concerning their beginning, and conſtitution of the Church of Epheſus, where appeared not yet any publike form of a Church in diſcipline and other Eccelſiaſtical rites, and conventions: ſo that he enquireth, how they were grounded, whether by impoſition of hands, or the gifts of the holy Ghoſt, whereby it might appear, that they were divinely called, as the gifts of tongues, propheſie, &c.

unto Johns Baptiſme] That is, we profeſſed the ſame doctrine, which John Baptiſt taught: and we received baptiſm, as a ſeal of our profeſſing the ſame, and of our dedication unto Chriſt.

v. 4. John verily baptized] Matth. 3. 11.

that is, on Chriſt Jeſus] Theophylact on Luk. 24. expreſſeth that well; as not excluding the other perſons of the holy Tirnity, but in contradiſtinction to the Jewiſh baptizings or waſhings; that was ſaith he πνευματικὸν οὐκ Ἰουδαϊκόν, ſpiritual, not Judaicall. See on chap. 2. 38. and on 10. 48.

v. 5 When they heard this] That is, when they heard the doctrine of John, they were baptized by ſome of Johns diſciples who had ſo preached unto them the doctrine of repentance, and ſalvation by Chriſt: not that Paul did rebaptize them: for otherwiſe it would follow, that Chriſt whom John baptized, and we, are not baptized with the ſame baptiſm: whereas he bare the ſame circumciſion with the Jews, and the ſame baptiſme with us Gentiles, that he might declare himſelf the Saviour of both. So that theſe words (when they heard this) relate not unto the words of Paul, but unto their hearing of Johns doctrine: and therefore Paul is not ſaid to have baptized them, but to have laid his hands on them: that is a poſture and action of confirmation, not initiation, and baptizing, verſe 6. againſt rebaptizing them who were baptized by hereticks (except of thoſe who raiſed the foundation of faith, and uſed not the Catholick form of baptiſme) See the Councell of Carthage, 1. Anno 258. and the other Councells concerning the ſame. *Severin. Baptiſme is the croſſe, in which our old man is Crucified with Chriſt, being made conformable to his death, &c. ὁ τοίνυν δεύτερον ἑαυτὸν βαπτίζων πάλιν αὐτὸν ϛαυροῖ, therefore he that rebaptizeth himſelf, crucifieth him (the Lord of life) again. Auxentius the heretick rebaptized. Ambroſe ſaid, he (therein) deſpiſed the Counſell of God. epiſt. 32. fin. Baptiſm is a new birth of the whole man: as we can be born but once in the fleſh, ſo can we be born but once in the Spirit: therefore as there was but one circumciſion (which ſignified the ſame) ſo ought there to be but one baptiſm.

v. 6. Layd his hands upon them] Chap. 6. 6. & 8. 17. he laid his hands upon them for confirmation, we read not that he rebaptized them.

they ſpake with tongues] Chap. 2. 4. & 10. 46. That is, they ſpake divers languages, which before they knew not.

and propheſied] By a divine and evident inſpiration, they preached and expounded the word of God as able Miniſters of Chriſt. See 1 Cor. 11. 4. & 14. 1.

v. 8. the kingdom of God] See on chap. 1. 3. and on 20. 25.

v. 9. and ſpake evil of that way] As chap. 18. 26. of that doctrine of the Goſpel.

and ſeperated the Diſciples] This warranteth not ſeperation from a true Church, or for any defects therein leſs then fundamentall: it is true that when the nations are drunken with the cups of Babyloniſh fornication, then the Lord calleth from heaven, come out of her, my people, &c. (Reve. 17. 2. and 18. 4. See Epheſ. 5. 7. 11. 2 Theſ. 3. 14. 2 Cor. 6. 14. 15. Tit. 3. 10.) and that in caſe of ſcandall, we muſt not company with the incorrigible wicked: but here we ſee, though Paul withdrew the weak Diſciples from the blaſphemers of Chriſtianity and the Goſpel, yet he made no ſchiſmes nor yet deſerted the cauſe, for which he dayly diſputed with the adverſaries.

one Tyrannus] This ſeemeth to have been ſome Philoſopher, or publike profeſſour of Rhetorick, converted by Paul: Syr. in the ſchool of a certain man whoſe name was Tyrannus.

v. 10. by the ſpace of two years] This commendeth Pauls great diligence for the planting of the goſpel.

ſo that all they which dwelt in Aſia, &c.] This was that admirable door, which Paul ſaid was opened unto him, 1 Cor. 16. 9. not that all the people, but that all the Chriſtians of Aſia heard him, the ſweet ſavour and report of the Goſpel ſpreading it ſelf abroad (like that odour of the precious ointment, which filled the houſe. Joh. 12. 3.) into all parts round about.

v. 11. ſpecial miracles] Great miracles, whereby he confirmed the authority of Pauls Apoſtleſhip, and miniſtry.

v. 12. handkerchiefs] This maketh nothing for the ſuperſtitious uſe of reliques: Gods providence did this that by ſuch cures, he might prepare the abſent, and thoſe who had never ſeen the face of Paul, to a reverend eſteem, and opinion of the Goſpel and truth of Chriſt, in whoſe name they were ſo cured, and alſo, that in theſe means, ſo ſlender and improbable of themſelves, the power of Jeſus healing them might the more cleerly appear.

and the diſeaſes departed from them] As Matth. 8. 15. Luk. 4. 39. John 4. 52. the diſeaſes left them, that is, they were freed from their diſeaſes, and the unclean Spirits departed from them, being forced ſo to do by the power of Chriſt.

v. 13. Exorciſts] Syr. Jews who wandred about, and adjured devils, or conjured devils: theſe poſſibly, out of a fooliſh and impious emulation of the Apoſtles caſting out devils, practiced ſuch things, intending if they could have effected any thing herein, to have made men believe, that the like miracles done by the Apoſtles, were but magicall exorciſmes, concerning exorciſts, and exorciſmes, yet in uſe in the Church of Rome, ſee *Durand. rational. v. 14. Seven Sons of one Sheva] He mentioneth theſe for the greater evidence of the hiſtory.

v. 15. But who are ye?] What are you that I ſhould obey you? God commandeth me, Jeſus (whom Paul preacheth commandeth me; but do not I know that you have no ſuch commiſſion? no power to caſt me out?

v. 16. leapt on them] The poſſeſſed man fell violently upon them, and by the force of the evil ſpirit in him, maſtered them, tearing their clothes, and wounding them: ſomtimes the devil willingly co-operateth with the conjurers, and witches, ſuffering himſelf to be commanded, and poſſibly, driven out alſo (probably the Hebrews might conſider this in their calling a witch, the miſtris of a devil. So 1 Sam. 28. 7. they call the witch of Endor בעלת-אוב bebalath ob. dominam Pythonis, a Pythoniſſe, one having a familiar ſpirit. Chalde, one who can draw out a devil) this he doth where he can entice men or women to confederate with him for miſchief, and hold them, and others by them in ſuperſtition: but here he had ſome other end, and God would thus defeat their miſchievous practices; making all ſerve to the further advancement of the Goſpel which Paul preached.

v. 17. fear fell on them all] Herein appeareth the fruit of this Divine revenge on them who impiouſly profaned the holy name of Jeſus: firſt that by their example, others feared to contemn that doctrine, the patronage whereof God ſo ſeverely undertook: ſecondly in that all turned to the magnifying the ſacred name of Jeſus, the rumour of this accident making all afraid, not onely to blaſpheme it as ſome of the Jews did, but even to take it in their profane mouthes, to abuſe, as theſe Sons of Sheva did.

v. 18. and confeſſed] Terrified with this judgement on others, the remorſe of their own conſciences, and deſiring ſome remedy, and comfort, they publikly confeſſed their errours, and deteſted thoſe their ſins. See Matth. 3. 6.

v. 19. Curious arts] That is Magick, as the Syriac expreſſeth it divinations by judicial aſtrologie, &c.

fifty thouſand pieces of ſilver] Or, fifty thouſand pence, which the word alſo ſignifieth: what this cometh to of our Sterling mony is not agreed on by the writers, but the leaſt eſtimate, bringeth it to about, eight hundred pound.

v. 20. So mightily grew, &c.] See chap. 12. 24. κατὰ κράτος, vehemently with great power, as the Syriac hath it, intimating a powerfull courſe of the word, caſting down the kingdom of ſin and Satan: ſo doth κράτος ſignifie victory alſo: the ſum is, that theſe ſuperſtitious and impious things being taken away, the word of God ſo much prevailed in the affections and lives of men to faith and obedience, that many were dayly added to the Church of Chriſt.

v. 21. purpoſed in the Spirit] That is, by the motion of the Holy Ghoſt: therefore he yeelded not to his friends importunity. chap. 20. 22.

in Aſia for a ſeaſon] That is, in Epheſus, which is in Aſia.

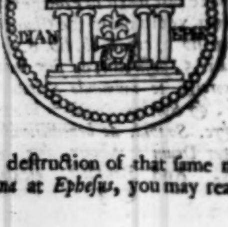
v. 23. the ſame time] When Paul was preparing to go from Epheſus, and thought al things wel compoſed, upon a ſuddain Satan raiſed an unexpected ſtorm.

about that way] About the way of God. Syr. That is, concerning the Goſpel, and truth of God which Paul preached.

v. 24. Silver ſhrines] ναοὺς ἀργυροῦς. Silver temples, as the Syriac interpreteth, which were made in ſome ſuch like form.



Concerning the deſtruction of that ſame magnificent Idol Temple of Diana at Epheſus, you may read in the ſtory of Eroſtratus. Plin. lib. 36. cap. 14. The ſilver ſhrins, or medals of ſilver with the form of their Idol Diana's Temple, impreſſed or wrought thereon, Demetrius ſold to them who came to Epheſus either of ſuperſtition to worſhip, or curioſity to ſee the magnificent ſtructure of that temple.

v. 25. Whom he called together] When he ſaw the eſteem of this temple leſſen by the light of the goſpel, and ſo his trade growing dead, he called together all the artificers, whoſe living depended on that ſuperſtition, and made a ſeditious ſpeech to them.

by this craft we have our wealth] This is all our trade: a dangerous argument to carnal men, whoſe wealth is the God they adore: ſuch men will eaſily be perſwaded for their private ends, to trouble the peace of a Church or Sate, and to defend their gains though never ſo impious with tumult and blood.

v. 26. this Paul hath perſwaded, &c.] He truly confeſſeth the ſtate of the cauſe: Paul had ſhewed them that they were no Gods which are made with hands, yet Demetrius wickedly endeavoureth to ſuppreſs that truth: this blindneſs putteth him and his fellows precipitately on to violent tumults.

v. 27. not only our craft] This our manufacture of making medals, is in danger to be reproved as impious and unprofitable.

but alſo the temple] It is a rare impiety of the vulgar which borroweth no pretence from religion to countenance it ſelf withall: and medling with Religion without ſome private intereſts, is as rare in carnall men, if Pauls preaching had nothing hindered Demetrius and his fellows profits, he would hardly have ſtirred out of doors about it.

whom all Aſia and the world worſhippeth] To the argument of profit, and pretended Religion, he added another reaſon, from the magnificence of the Temple, and greatneſs of their Idol Diana; now he inforces another leading motive, from univerſalty, and conſent of worſhippers.

v. 28. They were full of wrath] This argument of profit, worketh ſtrongly on worldly mens affections: therefore now guided by paſſion and hearing the cauſe of the impair and decay of their trade; they never examine the truth and effects of the goſpel, but put it to popularity, and tumultuous outcries.

great is Diana of the Epheſians] They feigned Diana to be Jupiters daughter, and their tutelary goddeſs, in this fantaſtick opinion, they cry up her imaginary greatneſs, and their ſuppoſed intereſt.

v. 29. the whole city was filled] Such unconſiderable ſparks fomented by the breath of an inconſtant vulgar oftimes break out into outragious flames; when yet the cauſe of the impious tumult, is rumour of people ignorant of what they do, and deſire of change. See Numb. 16. 1. 2 Samuel 15. 6. 11. 13.

Gaius and Ariſtarchus] See Rom. 16. 23. Coloſ. 4. 10.

the theatre] A publik place, to which the cuſtome was to reſort in any trouble, or buſineſs about the Commonwealth.

v. 30. ſuffered him not] This was their care of his ſafety, who better knew the diſpoſition of that people: it is an example to hearers, to love and preſerve their miniſters. See chap. 17. 10.

v. 31. Chief of Aſia] Ἀσιαρχῶν. Syr. primores Aſiæ: this was Gods providence over Paul, to ſtir up ſome chief men in this ſo great a danger to countenance and favour him, theſe ſend to him to deſire him, not to venture himſelf to an enraged multitude.

v. 32. the aſſembly was confuſed] This company is here called ἐκκλησία: the Syr. giveth it well turba quæ erant in theatro; the multitude of the Epheſians now aſſembled in the theatre: this convention was very confuſed, ſome crying one thing and ſome another.

the more part knew not wherefore] The people like great waters are eaſily enraged, but ſeldom well enformed, why: falſe rumours fill their ears, and ungoverned paſſion their hearts with ſodain and vehement deſire of ſome new unconſidered undertakings, the end whereof they neither prudently foreſee, nor cautiouſly examin.

v. 33. the Jews putting him forward] It ſeemeth that the heathens of Epheſus were equally enraged againſt the Jews and Chriſtians, and that the Jews put him on, to juſtifie their nation and religion, that they might caſt all the occaſion of this diſcontent and tumult, on the Chriſtians.

beckoned with, &c.] See on chap. 12. 17.

v. 34. That he was a Jew] They knew that the Jews worſhipped not their Idol, therefore would not hear him.

all with one voice] So many wicked men can Satan unite in miſchief: conſent and unanimity of multitudes is no univerſall and certain mark of truth.

Cryed out] The word here uſed is of Κράζω, to yall, or cry out, κράζειν or κρώζειν, is ſpoken of Crows who in great flocks cry altogether, hence is this expreſſion accommodated to the diſturbed multitude.

v. 35. what

v. 35. what man is there that knoweth not] This ſpeech of the Town-clerk ſavoureth only of carnal wiſdom, whatever was pretended here contributeth no patronage to true religion.

a worſhipper of, &c.] νεωκόρος, is that which the Latines called ædituus, the Temple-keeper, he that hath charge of the Church. It is interpreted by Suidas, ὁ τὸν ναὸν κοσμῶν καὶ εὐτρεπίζων, one that adorneth and prepareth the Temple. His meaning is, that Epheſus was ſo eſtabliſhed in their religion and worſhip of Diana their ſuppoſed tutelary goddeſs, that there was no ſuch cauſe of fear, as Demetrius ſuggeſted, that they ſhould be perſwaded to forſake their religion for any other.

which fell down from Jupiter] Which deſcended from heaven, the Syriac hath it. Concerning Canetlas the maker of this Idol, ſee Plin. l.16.c.40. But their covetous Prieſts perſwaded them, that it came down, or was ſent down from Heaven.

v. 36. theſe things cannot be ſpoken againſt] Suidas ſaith, ἀναντίῤῥητον (the word here uſed) is ἀντιλογίαν μὴ δεχόμενον, that which admitteth no contradiction; a certain and doubtleſs thing. So pronounceth he concerning their vain ſuperſtition, grounded on lying fables, impious preſcription, and raſh conſent of multitudes; whereas it is neither in time, multitude, or power of men, to make falſehood truth.

ye ought to be quiet] Or appeaſed.

v. 37. are neither robbers of churches, &c.] That ſaid he truly (would we could ſay as much of our impropriators) but though he thus ſaid to appeaſe the tumult, yet the doctrine which Paul preached, is unconſiſtent with Idols.

v. 38. the law is open] Or the court-dayes are kept. The law is the beſt appeaſer of tumults; and Juſtice the ſecureſt bond of peace, the nerves and ſinews of all common-wealths, without which the people muſt needs periſh, if by no other means, in ſelf-deſtruction: It is that ſame, ſalſedo combinans, without which, all bodies compounded, end in preſent diſſolution.

duties appointed] That is, Judges appointed to determine perſonal controverſies.

v. 39. in a lawful aſſembly] Or ordinary Courts, or courſe of juſtice (the ſacred patron of right and propriety) not in unlawful tumults.

v. 40. in danger to be called in queſtion for, &c.] Being under the Roman ſtate, the city was in danger to be fined or other wayes puniſhed, for that cauſleſs uproar: the Roman law was, that all factious and ſeditious perſons under their government ſhould loſe their liberties, and Roman freedoms, ſo that this ſober man blamed Demetrius and his fellows for troubling the people.

v. 41. he diſmiſſed the aſſembly] Perſwading them, every man peaceably to repair home to his own houſe. So God uſed the carnal wiſdom and eloquence of this heathen, to the preſervation of his. This example is not unworthy of prudent Chriſtians in authority; to eſtabliſh law, and juſtice (without which no ſociety of man can flouriſh, or indeed ſubſiſt) to preſerve publick peace, and to appeaſe all popular and unlawful out-rages.

CHAP. XX.

Verſ. 1. AND embraced them] The Greek word ſignifieth alſo to ſalute, (1 Cor.16.19, &c.) with wiſhes of happineſs. So Suidas ſaith, ἀσπασμὸς, ἡ εὐχὴ, &c. it is moſt likely that thus they took leave, praying for each others proſperity.

into Macedonia] See c.19. 21, 22.

v. 2. much exhortation] Confirming them in the faith and truth of the Goſpel.

v. 3. the Jews laid wait for him] When they could not prevail againſt him by open violence, they aſſail him by treachery, and ſecret plotting againſt him.

to return thorow Macedonia] And thence to go towards Syria: we may not tempt God, by running upon known dangers, but uſe the beſt means we can, to prevent and avoid them.

dayes of unleavened bread] That is (ſeven dayes of) the Paſſeover, wherein no leaven might be eaten, or found in their houſes, Exod.12.19. In theſe dayes he would not ſet forth to travel, probably that he might not give offence to the weak Jews.

v. 7. firſt day of the week] That is, the Lords day, 1 Cor.16. 2. Rev.1.10. vulgarly called Sunday: on this day Chriſtians uſed to have their ſolemn aſſemblies, for publick prayer, preaching, and adminiſtration of the Lords Supper.

v. 8. were many lights] Becauſe many perſons were there aſſembled: they would not be in darkneſs, leſt they ſhould bring any ſuſpition on their calling and profeſſion.

v. 9. and was taken up dead] A remarkable example for Church-ſleepers.

v. 10. fell on him] See 1 Kings 17.21.

trouble not your ſelves] This he ſaith to comfort them: be not too much perplexed at this accident, God hath reſtored his life again.

v. 11. until break of day] This was upon an extraordinary occaſion, he being ſtraitned in time upon his departure thence, and zealous of their edification and confirmation in the faith: a ſingular example of Paul his unwearied diligence, and his auditories vigilancy, patience, and willingneſs to hear the Word: it will once riſe in judgement to condemn negligent ſpeakers, and drouzy, ſecure, and impatient hearers of theſe times, who might deſervedly hear that which Chriſt once ſaid to his infirm Diſciples, Matth.26. 40. What could ye not watch with me one hour?

v. 12. were not a little comforted] As it much afflicted them, that the preaching, which brought life and ſalvation to all believers, ſhould be an occaſion of death to the yong man; ſo were they exceeding glad of his recovery as for the yong mans ſake, ſo ſpecially for their own confirmation by this miracle.

v. 13. we went before] Namely Luke who wrote this hiſtory, and the reſt mentioned, v.4.

v. 26. I take you to record] μαρτύρομαι ὑμῖν, I witneſs to you: So Syr. teſtor vobis, and they were witneſſes alſo.

I am pure from the blood, &c.] The fault is not in me, if any of you periſh. See Chap. 18.6. and Ezek.3.18.

v. 27. all the counſel of God] Which concerneth your ſalvation. See Luke 7.30. John 15.19.

v. 28. overſeers] ἐπισκόπους] Biſhops.

with his own blood] Which he that is Chriſt, hath purchaſed with his own blood, ſo the Syriac expreſſeth it: that which appertaineth to the humanity of Chriſt is here attributed to his divinity; becauſe of the union of the two natures in one perſon, and communion of proprieties.

v. 29. grievous wolves] Mat.7.15. John 10. 12. falſe teachers and bloody perſecutors, ſo Chriſt Called them, Mat.10.16.

v. 30. perverſe things] Broaching falſe and heretical doctrines, through their ambition to be ſingular and popular.

v. 31. by the ſpace of three yeers] Three yeers current, not compleat: for he taught in their Synagogues ſix moneths, and in the ſchool of Tyrannus two yeers, c.19.8,10. To which reckon the time of his going from them, to his preſent return through Macedonia and Achaia (where he ſtayed three moneths, c.20.3.) and you have about three yeers time.

v. 32. to the word of his grace] That is, the Goſpel which declareth his grace and free mercy.

to build you up] To encreaſe you in grace and knowledge, to edifie and finiſh his work in you being grounded on Chriſt. See Epheſ.2.20, &c. 1 Tim.4.16.

to give you an inheritance] The kingdom of Heaven, to which you have right, as ſons by adoption in Chriſt, 1 Pet.1. 4,5. Rom.8,17.

v. 33. I have coveted no mans ſilver] Becauſe covetouſneſs is the root of all evil, 1 Tim 6 10. ſpecially in Prelates, (as we may ſee John 12.6. Mat.26.15.) he ſtill urgeth his own example, not boaſtingly, as ambitious of their applaus, but teſtifying his ſincerity, for their imitation. See 1 Tim.3.3. Numb.16.15. 1 Sam.12.3. Luke 12.15.2 Pet.2.3. 1 Pet.5.2.

v. 34. your ſelves know that theſe hands] 1 Cor.4.12. 1 Theſ. 2.9. 2 Theſ.2.8. He doth not herein propoſe a law, or rule to Miniſters (for he had not power to take away that which God had given them, Levit. 27.32. Mat.10.10. (ſee on Luke 11. 42.) & which himſelf had ſo often aſſerted, 1 Cor. 9.14. Gal. 6.6.) but in caſe of neceſſity to advance the Goſpel.

v. 35. it is more bleſſed to give] It is likely this was ſpoken by Chriſt, and it may alſo be gathered out of the Scriptures though it be not expreſly written.

v. 36. he kneeled down] Though the heart and inward affection in prayer, be the chief thing which God looketh on, yet is he the God of the body which he redeemed as well as the ſoul (1 Cor.6.20.) therefore ſuch reverend geſture, as kneeling, lifting up the hands, &c. have theſe excellent uſes. 1. Hereby we exerciſe body & ſoul in Gods ſervice. 2. They ſtir up our own devotion and others, where they are preſent. Thirdly, thus we teſtifie the performance of our duty to God before men: as lifting up the hands is a ſigne of confidence to be heard, ſo is the bending our knees of humility, which two, are the wings of faithful prayer. See Epheſ.3.4. Acts 21.5.

v. 37. all wept ſore] as thoſe who dearly love, uſe to do at parting.

v. 38. ſorrowing moſt of all, &c.] In conſideration of the loſſe their ſelves and all Aſia ſhould have of him.

they accompanied him unto the ſhip] As long as they could they would enjoy him; and as far as they could look after him. Thus are we pulled one from another here: we part weeping, but ſhall at laſt come together again with joy, never more to part.

v. 3. at Tyre] Which was the Metropolis of Phenicia.

v. 4. that he ſhould not go up] That is, they propheſied of his danger, if he went up; that they did by the ſpirit of propheſie; but through humane affection they diſſwaded him from going, ſo this croſſeth not that which is ſaid, c.20.22.

v. 5. they all brought us on our way] This was their love to him that taught them, and a good teſtimony of their ſincerity, who thus honoured him whom the world generally contemned and perſecuted. See Gal.4.14. 2 Tim.1.15.

we kneeled down on the ſhore] See c.20.36. c.7.60. Probably, they prayed, as for the happy ſucceſs of the Goſpel to Gods glory, the encreaſe of the Church, and the kingdom of Chriſt, and thoſe things which concerned their bodies and ſouls in general; ſo for Paul and thoſe with him, and their good voyage in particular.

v. 6. they returned home again] Every one to his own affairs and calling.

v. 7. Ptolemais] A ſea-town of Phenicia. See Plin.l.5.c.5. & l.36.c.26 init. The Syriac calleth it עכו (ſee not. Tremel.) So Judg. 1.31. עכו. 70. v. 9. which did propheſie] That is, by the inſtinct of the Spirit, tell things to come, not ſpeak in the Church as teachers, that is prohibited, 1 Cor.14.34. 1 Tim.2.12.

v. 10. named Agabus] See c.11.28.

v. 11. binde the man that oweth this girdle] The effect ſee v.33. This ſaid he, not ſo much for Pauls ſake, as for others. Paul was not ignorant that bonds and afflictions abode him, c. 20.23. but hereby his conſtancy to teſtifie the truth of Chriſt appeared, to the great confirmation of the believers. In taking Pauls girdle he imitated the Prophets who uſed to repreſent that which they foretold, by certain ſignes. See Iſaiah 20. 2. Jer. 27. 2. Ezek.12.3. Jer.32.8. which manner the falſe Prophets alſo took up, 1 Kings 22.11. Jer.28.10,11. In that he alleageth the dictate of Gods Spirit, it ſheweth, that the ſufferings of Gods children, are neither fortuitous, nor in the power of perſecutors, but in Gods providence. See John 19.11.

v. 12. beſought him not to go] Out of their affection to him, and grief to loſe ſo excellent a light, they importune him with tears to forbear going to Ieruſalem.

v. 13 to break mine heart] Meaning, that it was bitterneſs of heart to him, to ſee them afflicted with grief for him, who was reſolved, come life, come death, to be obedient to the guidance of Gods holy Spirit.

v. 14. we ceaſed, ſaying, the will of the Lord, &c.] When they ſaw he would not be perſwaded, they committed him to God who was able to preſerve him: this reſolution is the only means to bridle extravagant affections, when we can patiently ſubmit our ſelves, our deſires, and counſels to the will of God, in aſſurance of his mercy who is able to make all things work together for good, to them that love him, Rom.8. See Mat.26.39.42.

v. 15. took up our carriages, and went, &c.] ἀποσκευασάμενοι, putting up our carriages and neceſſaries. That which the Latines give by convaſo, or colligo neceſſaria aditer, the Greeks expreſſed by σκευάζομαι, in the active ſignification; and ἀποσκευάζω...vaſa aufero. Suidas interpreteth ἀποσκευή — ἡ τῶν ἐπιτηδείων κομιδή...carriage of neceſſaries for a voyage. So the Syriac here giveth it prepared our ſelves, putting all neceſſaries to carry with them. It ſheweth Pauls admirable conſtancy, thus meeting with his foreſeen afflictions, for the teſtimony of the Goſpel; and that they who had diſſwaded him from going up, did not therein ſo much regard their own intereſt, as the Churches loſſe; for they will alſo ſhare with him, ſeeing he will needs go. True faith is not daunted by the croſſe, but reſolutely follows Gods calling.

v. 16. with whom we ſhould lodge] Meaning at Ieruſalem, where now at the great ſolemnity of the feaſt of Pentecoſt lodgings uſed to be very ſcarce.

v. 17. received us gladly] Cheerfully and lovingly entertained us.

v. 18. with us unto Iames] c.15.13. It ſeemeth he was aſſigned to ſtay at Ieruſalem, whereunto many believers reſorting, it was neceſſary that one of the Apoſtles ſhould recide there, to adviſe thoſe Chriſtians, who upon any emergent controverſies ſhould repair thither; in which caſe, it ſeemeth the Elders were called together.

v. 19. what things God had wrought] Which he did not in oſtentation of his own excellency, who elſewhere ſaith he was the leaſt of the Apoſtles, 1 Cor. 15.9. but to ſet out the goodneſs of God in his reception of the Gentiles, and mercy ſhewed divers wayes to them.

v. 20. Thouſands] μυριάδες, myriads, or ten thouſands, he meaneth a great number, he defineth it not.

all zealous of the law] He meaneth, the major part of them were zealous (though without knowledge Rom. 10. 2. Gal. 1. 14.) they were tenacious of legall ceremonies, in which they had been bred.

v. 21. to forſake Moſes] which was an odeous and falſe aſperſion: for the doctrine of the Goſpel which Paul preached, was according to Moſes teſtimony of Chriſt: onely he taught, how wee muſt paſſe from ſhadows and repre-

ſentations

ſtrations to the ſubſtance which was in Chriſt the end of the law, (ſee Gal.5.1.) and how we muſt uſe all thoſe things indifferently in wiſdom, and charity, as knowing our freedom in Chriſt. See chap. 16. 3. and 18. 18. Gal. 2. 3. Rom. 14. 13. 15. 19. 21. 1 Cor. 8. 13.

v. 22. the multitude muſt needs come together] That is, it will be known that thou art here, and the unbelievers will perſecute thee, as an enemy to their law.

v. 23. we have four men] Faithful brethren, who had a vow, as Chap. 18. 18. thus would they make preſent uſe of theſe mens legal obligations, in the knowledge of Chriſtian liberty, for the advancement of the goſpel and indeed, the end of this ceremony was thankſgiving, which is nothing contrary to Chriſtian religion, but well agreeing with it.

v. 24. them take] The meaning is, for as much as thou didſt ſhear thy head at Cenchrea, Chap. 18. 18. according to thy vow of a Nazarite, ſhew (now thou art at Jeruſalem) the accompliſhment thereof, by joyning in the charge with theſe four men, offering according to the law on that behalf, by which it may appear that thou art not a deſpiſer of the law of Moſes.

ſhave their heads] Numb. 6. 18. Chap. 18. 18.

v. 25. we have written] Chap. 15. 20. as if they had ſaid, as concerning the Gentiles, they are to obſerve only the moral law, not the ceremonial, concerning the Jews we are ſo far indulgent, as we may by any means bring them to Chriſt, in whom they ſhall better underſtand their liberty, and learn to leave off theſe beggerly and antiquated rudiments.

v. 26. then Paul took the men] Obtemperating to the advice of James and the reſt of the brethren, and to ſhew publickly that he was no enemie of the law.

to ſignifie the accompliſhment] The day on which the vow of a Nazarite did end, he was to offer certain ſacrifices, Numb. 6.13. and therefore it was neceſſary to acquaint the Prieſt herewith.

v. 27. ſeven dayes were ended] That is, a week after that Paul had performed this ceremonie: or the laſt of the ſeven weeks; for the Jews not contented with the celebration of Pentecoſt one day, according to the law, added a ſeventh or eight.

the Jews which were of Aſia] Who dwelling in Aſia, had former conteſts with him there: theſe blood-hounds never give over their chaſe.

v. 28. againſt the people and the law] Thus falſly do they calumniate him, who indeed taught them the true end and uſe of the law.

Greeks alſo into the temple] Meaning, that he had brought the uncircumciſed beyond the court of the Gentiles, which was death to do.

v. 29. Trophimus an Epheſian] See Chap. 20. 4.

and they ſuppoſed] The wicked are full of jealouſie, and therfore conclude, that muſt be ſo, which they once dream of.

v. 30. the city was moved] So eaſily are multitudes engaged in ſacred quarrels.

v. 31. chief captain] See on John 18. 12. The Roman Tribune, who was in the nature of a Colonel, and had Centurions, or captains of hundreds in his regiment, he had the command of the ſoldiers and therfore the addreſſe was made to him in this tumult: they purpoſed to kill Paul; and dragging him out of the temple, forthwith the doors were ſhut, leſt they ſhould defile the temple with blood; they thought it great impiety to ſtain the pavements of the temple, but none to defile their ſouls with the guilt of blood: but God provided a timely reſcue.

v. 32. left beating of Paul] For fear of the Roman power which came to keep peace: for the Jews had not power of life and death permitted them by the Romans: the fear of men awed theſe perſecutors, whom neither fear of God, reſpect of religion, reverence of the temple, nor regard of man could reſtrain; which ſufficiently demonſtrateth that malice, not zeal ſet them on to theſe outrages.

v. 33. to be bound with two chains] Poſſibly he took him for the author of this tumult. See Chap. 23. 27. here appeareth Gods providence reſcuing Paul by his hands who had no ſuch intention.

and what he had done] However he bound him, yet had he ſo much juſtice, as not to condemn him unheard.

v. 34. could not know the certainty] In ſeditious tumults nothing is certainly underſtood, where all is acted by affection, not by reaſon, violence, not equity.

into the caſtle] Which joyned to the temple, that he might ſhut out the multitude, and underſtand the truth of the matter.

v. 35. he was borne of the ſouldiers] Whether by the throng, the people preſſing on, or taken up by the ſouldiers to ſecure him from their fury, is not expreſſed; the Syriack ſeemeth to underſtand this latter: there was little favour intended him by them, who reſerved him (as probably they conceived) to puniſhment.

v. 36. away with him] See Luke 23. 18. John 19. 15. αἶρε αὐτὸν, that is, kill him: ſo Budæus among other ſignifications interpreteth αἴρειν, de medio tollo. So they cryed againſt Chriſt.

v. 37. may I ſpeak &c.] εἰ ἔξεστί μοι, if it be lawful; it is a Greek manner of ſpeaking, to crave leave to ſpeak or act: he deſireth liberty to anſwer for himſelf, that being cleared he might ſuffer no ſcandal to reſt upon Gods word and truth, which he preached; and alſo to ſhew his invincible zeal for the ſalvation of his kinſmen according to the fleſh: amidſt theſe hideous ſtorms, their raging malice againſt his life; in chains, clamours, and votes preſently to murder him, among armed troops apprehending him, he taketh care for their edification and ſalvation being deſirous to ſpeak that he might clear his innocency and ſatisfie them.

v. 38. art not thou that Egyptian] Specified Chap. 5. 36. of whom Joſephus antiq. lib. 20. cap. 11. & de bel. Jud. lib. 2. cap. 12. he enquireth of an Egyptian who in Tiberius Cæſars reign, made an inſurrection, and after many of his followers were ſlain, eſcaped away.

that were murderers] σικαρίων, this was a word borrowed from the Latines, ſignifying men ready to murder; it ſeems they were ſo named of a ſhort weapon which they did wear, called ſica, a puniard, ſkein, pocket dagger, or ſtelletto, of the Chalde word סכין ſachin, a knife, or the Hebr. שכין ſachan, Prov. 23. 2. Gr. μαχαίραν, thy knife; Gen. 22. 10. Abraham took המאכלת, τὴν μάχαιραν, Chald. סכינא, his knife. See of theſe Joſeph. Ant. Jud. lib. 20.

v. 39. of Tarſus] Chap. 9. 32. See Joſeph. Antiq. l. 1. c. 11. It was the Metropolis of Cilicia: it is now called Hama, G. Mercat. Atl. min. Aſia min.

v. 40. beckned with the hand] See chap. 12. 17. and 13. 16. and 19. 33.

in the Hebrew tongue] Whether in the pure Hebrew tongue (in uſe before their captivity, but in and before Chriſts time becoming a dead tongue) or in the Syriack, it is not certain: for that was called the Hebrew, both in reſpect of the derivation thereof from the Hebrew, and for as much as it was then the mother tongue of them who were Hebrews.

CHAP. XXII.

Verſe 1. B*Rethren and Fathers*] Thus he inſinuateth to gain attention, wherein he reſpecteth the honour which God had given them, not what they now deſerved.

v. 2. in the Hebrew, &c.] Chap. 21. 40.

they kept the more ſilence] Our mother tongue moſt affecteth us; therefore he that could ſpeak all tongues, uſed his own.

v. 3. at the feet of Gamaliel] Meaning that he was a continual and diligent hearer of that grave doctor of the Law, Gamaliel; he alludeth to the poſture of teachers ſtanding in high places, and auditers ſitting below them. See Deut. 33. 3. Luke 10. 39.

according to the perfect manner] Syr. perfectly taught in the law of the fathers: which relateth not to the ceremonial law, as if he had attributed perfection to that which made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did. See Heb. 7. 11, 19. it relateth to Pauls inſtruction, as if he had ſaid, I was perfectly taught.

zealous towards God] I did as ſeriouſly and heartily endeavour to ſerve God, as any of you now do in that way.

v. 4. I perſecuted] See Chap. 9. 1. &c. 1 Tim. 1. 13. &c. I was as violent againſt all Chriſtians, as you now are.

v. 5. as alſo the high Prieſt, &c.] The things which I ſpeak are well known to the high prieſt himſelf, and all the chief of the Sanhedrim.

unto the brethren] Of the Synagogue of the Jews at Damaſcus.

to be puniſhed] To be beaten or impriſoned. Se on c. 9. 2.

v. 6. come nigh unto Damaſcus] See this whole paſſage, chap. 9. 1, 2. &c.

v. 9 they heard not the voice] Chap. 9. 7. it is ſaid they herd, φωνῆς, a voice: that is the voice of Saul ſpeaking to one whom they ſaw not; they heard not the voice of Chriſt: ſome think they heard only a confuſed ſound (that they might perceive it was from heaven) as the people did, John 12. 29. when ſome ſaid it thundred, ſome ſaid an Angel ſpake, but underſtood not what was ſaid.

v. 10. what ſhall I do] Chap. 9. 6.

v. 11. for the glory of that light] Which ſtrook him blinde for a time.

v. 12. a devout man &c.] εὐσεβὴς, a pious or juſt man according to the Law, as all the Jews which knew him could teſtifie.

according to the Law] Which he inſerteth to ſhew them that the goſpel was not contrary to, nor deſtructive of the law, but only the accompliſhment thereof: for, a man zealous of, and learned in the law, by Gods appointment, perſwaded him to embrace the goſpel. Thus he ſpeaketh of Ananias, to diſtinguiſh him who was a believing Jew, from a proſelyte or pious Gentile.

v. 13. came unto me, &c.] See Chap. 9. 17.

v. 14. the God of our fathers, &c.] No words ſounded ſo well in the ears of a Jew, as theſe of which that nation often boaſted. See John 8. 41. but hereby Paul proveth his purpoſe; that he was no Apoſtate from the God of Abraham, or his holy worſhip; but he ſtill adored, and ſerved the ſame God, as he had learned in the Law, under whoſe ſhadows was veiled all that which more clearly ſhined in the Goſpel.

hath choſen thee] προεχειρίσατό σε, hath deſigned or appointed thee, as Chap. 26. 16. אקימך Syr. akimach, conſtituit te, ordained and made thee ready to his hand; προχείριος, that is ſaith Suidas, ὁ ἕτοιμος, one fitted, furniſhed, and prepared to ſome action.

and ſee that juſt one] That is Chriſt, whom all the Patriarchs, prophets, and believers before his coming deſired to ſee, Matth. 13.17. Luke 2.29. See 1 Cor. 9. 1. and 15. 8. he ſaw Chriſt, either in ſome ſupernatural gifts, a rapt into heaven, or ſome apprehenſible repreſentation, as Chap. 7. 55.

v. 15. thou ſhalt be a witneſſe] God doth not fit men with extraordinary knowledge for their own ſakes only, but as finally to his own glory, ſo in that which is ſubordinate thereto, for others good: as trees bear not fruit for themſelves; fountains run not for themſelves, the ſun ſhineth not for himſelf, but for others good: that good is beſt which is moſt communicable. You who have attained this honour of Chriſts diſciples (Luke 24. 48. Acts 1. 8. John 1. 7.) live not to your ſelves, but to the teſtimony of Gods truth, and others good, by communicating to them that which you have heard and ſeen of Chriſt.

what thou haſt ſeen] That is, not onely this precedent apparition, but principally in that viſion deſcribed 2 Cor. 12. 2.

v. 16. why tarrieſt thou?] Theſe were Ananias words to Saul, exhorting him to be baptized: we may ſuppoſe that he did further inſtruct him in the doctrine of the goſpel, by larger diſcourſes, which Luke for brevity ſake here omitteth.

waſh away thy ſins] Chap 2. 38. by the Spirit of God giving the inward effect of baptiſme by the application of the blood and merits of Chriſt, by purifying of thy ſoul by faith, regeneration, and newneſſe of life. This ſheweth the effect of baptiſme; not that the water hath this power, but the blood of Chriſt thereby repreſented, 1 John 1. 7. yet we muſt know, that God propoſeth not bare and fallacious ſignes in the Sacraments, but accompanieth his ordinance with the power of the holy Ghoſt, making them effectual for that which he promiſeth and propoſeth therein, which is remiſſion of ſins.

v. 17. I was in a trance] The circumſtances of the time, place, and extaſie, ſhew that God appeared to him, and aſſigned him to his office: whether this was that rapt, 2 Cor. 12. 4. it is uncertain.

v. 18. and ſaw him] Saw him in that trance, verſe 17. the appearance of the Lord ſo ſpeaking to me.

v. 19. Lord they know that I impriſoned] This intimateth Pauls unwillingneſſe to have preached to the Gentiles, and the condition of carnal reaſon, ever oppoſing the motions of Gods Spirit, by objecting vain excuſes againſt his commands. See Exod. 3. 11. and 4. 10. Acts 10. 14. Jonah 4. 1. Some interpret this, (they know) as relating to the Jews; and that Paul here intimated his hope rather of doing good at Jeruſalem, where they knew how zealous he had been of the law, then of going to the Gentiles: which being admitted there appeareth no reaſon, but that we may ſay, that others out of Jeruſalem, yea and the Gentiles alſo might hear theſe things of him; and that Paul reſpected that which God had before ſaid to Ananias concerning him, chap. 9. 15. he is a choſen veſſel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, &c. which doubtleſſe Ananias would not conceal from him: ſo that he may here intimate an improbability of his reception among the Gentiles, who would alſo be afraid of him, as he was Chap. 9. 13. all concludeth his declining his miſſion to the Gentiles, and Gods expreſſe command for the ſame.

v. 20. and when the blood of thy Martyr Stephen] Martyr is a Greek word ſignifying a witneſſe: and is in a peculiar manner uſed to import him, who in his conſtant profeſſion in grievous puniſhment, or violent death, giveth teſtimony to the truth of the goſpel.

v. 21. depart for I will ſend thee hence, &c.] God preſſed his own command, which againſt all vain pretences of man to the contrary, muſt be obeyed: he doth not here promiſe ſucceſſe among the Gentiles, but expreſſely ſendeth him to them; becauſe he will have us learn to lay by all our own counſels, and ſimply and readily obey him in his commands.

v. 22. and then lift up their voices, &c.] They could not endure to hear of his going to the Gentiles, therefore here they interrupt him with tumultuous clamours: ſo proud a confidence had they of themſelves, as that they were impatient that God ſhould beſtow his own favours upon any but themſelves, and yet themſelves refuſed them: we ſhall not be grieved to have ſinners partners with us in repentance and mercy, if we belong to Chriſt, who for the redemption of his, refuſed not to be crucified between theeves and malefactors.

v. 23. caſt off their clothes] To prepare themſelves to do violence.

threw duſt in the air] This is a deſcription of a ſeditious, and enraged multitude.

v. 24. by ſcourging] To compell him to confeſſe ſomething.

v. 25. A Roman] That is, which is a free man of Rome; not there borne, but by priviledge of that city where he was borne, that is, Tarſus (Chap. 16. 37.) where was a Roman colonie.

v. 26. When the centurion heard it] He being doubtful what to do herein, acquainteth his Colonel, that he might receive further order from him. (See on John 18. 12.) the reaſon why they would either ſo ſoon believe Paul, or did ſo much ſtartle at the naming of the Roman priviledge, was becauſe it was death for any man to plead it falſly, and very criminal for any in publick authority to violate it.

v. 27. Art thou a Roman?] S. Luke ſetteth down but the abridgement of the things: ſo that it is likely that Paul made it ſufficiently appear to him, that he was thus priviledged, before he looſed him.

v. 28. I was free borne] The Colonel ſaith, he purchaſed πολλοῦ κεφαλαίου, it is an Hebraiſme: they put ראש roſh, an head, inſtead of ſumme, as Exodus 30. 12. Numb. 4. 2. take ראש, 70 τὸ κεφάλαιον, the ſumme So Budæus ſheweth that among other things, κεφάλαιον ſignifieth a ſumme of money: the Syriack בכספא סגיאא bechesſpho ſaggiio, with much ſilver, much money; he ſaith he bought τὴν πολιτείαν, that is, jus civitatis, the freedom of the citie (of Rome) which Paul had freely, being a native of Tarſus; for it was the Roman cuſtome to priviledge ſome cities who had well deſerved of them in the wars or other weighty affairs aſſiſting them.

v. 29. examined him] Or tortured him.

chief captain alſo was afraid] In reſpect of the ſevere puniſhments appointed to any that did abuſe a free man of Rome, he feared being called in queſtion for this buſineſſe.

v. 30. would have known the certainty] Being ignorant of the Jewiſh religion, he referreth him to their council, but probably he would gladly have found ſome fault in Paul worthy of bonds, that he might have excuſed his own fault in binding and ſcourging him.

v. 3. thou whited wall] Falſe hypocrite. See Ezek. 13. 10. Matth. 23. 27.

contrary to the Law] Levit. 19. 35. Deut. 25. 1, 2.

v. 4. Revileſt thou Gods high prieſt] Theſe Paraſites to ingratiate with Ananias, ſeem zealous of his honour, taxing Pauls juſt reproof, but cannot, or will not underſtand the high prieſts injuſtice and hypocriſie; this they diſſemble, and cenſure Pauls juſt liberty of ſpeaking, as he was more then a private man, but ſee not the unjuſt liberty which the prieſt took to injure the Apoſtle.

v. 5. I wiſt not brethren] I knew him not to be a lawfull High Prieſt, who thus violateth the law; and indeed he was but an uſurper. See Joſephus ant. l. 20. c. 3. 5. Chr Helvic. Theat. Hiſt. Anno Chriſti 46.

v. 6. I am a Phariſee] Phil. 3. 5. Which he ſpake not to get favour of the Phariſees, or to approve all their traditions, but out of a prudent policy to ſet diviſion among them, for his better eſcape.

of the hope, &c.] Chap. 24. 21. Not but that there were more points in queſtion, but becauſe for this chiefly the Sadduces hated and perſecuted him.

v. 7. there aroſe a diſſention, &c.] God by dividing theſe enemies, provided for Pauls ſafety: they differing in their tenets, would not agree to condemn him, as otherwiſe they intended: the unity and conſpiracy of the wicked, cannot be laſting: for God infatuateth their counſels, and divideth them, that they may not be ſo miſchievous as they deſire, and otherwiſe would be.

v. 8. for the Sadduces] Mat. 22, 23. Mark 12. 18. Seeing the writings of Moſes which they received, ſo expreſly ſpeak of Angels, it is probable that they did not abſolutely deny them, but poſſibly might think them to be but a tranſitory apparition, created of God, onely to ſignifie his pleaſure to men; or to execute ſome commands, and ſo to diſſolve and ceaſe again: whereas the Phariſees acknowledge both, that is, the reſurrection from the dead, and the real ſubſiſtence of Angels and Spirits, in the ſtate of ſeparation.

v. 9. but if a ſpirit, or, &c.] If he have had any divine or extraordinary revelation.

v. 10. when there aroſe great diſſention] When they grew hot in their conteſt, and poſſibly were falling from words to blows; then the Captain reſcued Paul, to prevent violence and more tumult.

v. 11. the Lord ſtood by him] In a viſion to comfort and encourage him.

v. 12. banded together] ποιήσαντες συςροφὴν, making a combination. So c. 19.40. whereby we may give account τῆς συςροφῆς ταύτης of this concourſe, hujus conſpiratæ coitionis, Budæus. He ſheweth that it cometh from the word which ſignifieth, agmen cogere, & ſeditionem ciere, to gather a company together, and ſtir up a faction againſt ſome others. So Suidas interpreteth συςροφή, ἡ ὁμόνοια; καὶ ἡ ἐπὶ κακῷ συμφωνία, a conſent and agreement, to do ſome miſchief.

under a curſe] With an oath of execration; as wiſhing, that ſuch or ſuch a plague or miſchief might befal them, if they did not that which they had combined in, ἀνεθεμάτισαν ἑαυτοὺς, extremis diris & execrationibus devovere. So Budæus ſaith, the Apoſtle calleth ἀναθέματα, quaſi quotien caput devotum inferis eſt. See Matth.26.74. Rom 9.3.

v. 13. more then forty] This ſheweth how great a party Satan hath ever ready to oppoſe the Goſpel, and how prone men are to combine for any miſchief.

v. 14. to the chief prieſts] Being confident of their aſſiſtance, otherwiſe they might have expected ſharp reproof, and diſcovery of their intended murder, had their Prieſts been any better then impious murderers their ſelves.

we have bound our ſelves under a great curſe] ἀναθέματι ἀνεθεματίσαμεν--it is an uſual Hebraiſm--with a curſe we have curſed, that is, grievouſly curſed, or bound our ſelves with direful curſes; that they would eat nothing until they had killed Paul, was their agreement and condition; the curſe was the bond, whereby they obliged themſelves.

v. 15. ye with the council] That is, with the conſent, or in the name of the Council.

ſignifie to the chief captain, that he bring down, &c.] Signifie the cauſe or end of your requeſt, for they had no power to command the Captain.

are all ready to kill him] Here appeareth unto how deſperate a condition religion was now come among them, when bloody conſpirators durſt come to the chief Prieſts, not only to acquaint them with a deſigne ſo miſchievous, but alſo to implore their aſſiſtance therein.

v. 16. when Pauls ſiſters ſon heard, &c.] God ſuffereth the wicked to plot, and to be neer the execution, and then defeateth their counſels. There is no wiſdom againſt God. See Prov.21.30. Iſai.8.10.& 33.9,10,11. Eſter 9.1,&c. Acts 12.6. 1 Sam.20.35.

v. 17. called one of the Centurians] That is, as the Syriac interpreteth שַׁדַּר ſhaddar, ſending he called; he ſent to intreat that he might ſpeak with him; and that he would do ſo much as bring the yong man to Lyſias their chief Commander. So v.18. and prayed me to bring, &c.

v. 18. Paul the priſoner] ὁ δέσμιος,&c. Paul who is bound, for they uſed to put bonds on priſoners.

v. 19. went with him aſide] Suppoſing he had ſome ſecret to impart unto him, as indeed he had: in both theſe Commanders we have an example of curteſie: in the one readily bringing the yong man to be heard; in the other, as readily giving him audience and diſpatch: in both, of Gods good providence enclining their hearts to the preſervation of the Apoſtle.

v. 20. the Iews have agreed] That is, ſome of them, or the chief of them, have conſpired; Syriac, have conſulted.

v. 21. but do not thou yeeld unto them] I beſeech thee let them not by any pretences, or perſwaſions prevail with thee; μὴ πεισθῇς, be not thou perſwaded by them: ſo the word is uſed, c.21.14.

for there lye in wait] Herein he ſheweth the conſpiracy of the Jews, the ground and cauſe of his requeſt.

now are they ready, looking for a promiſe from thee] Expecting what anſwer thou wilt make them.

v. 22. ſee thou tell no man] Which charge he might give him, in reſpect of his own purpoſe, leſt the matter being reveiled, the enraged Jews ſhould attempt ſome other miſchief: or in reſpect of the ſafety of the young man, upon whom probably they would turn their malice, becauſe he defeated their plot on Paul.

v. 23. called unto him] Knowing the malice of that Nation, and their implacable fury ſhewed in former actions, he eaſily believed the yong mans relation, and provided accordingly.

and ſpear-men two hundred] δεξιολάβους, ſuch as held and carried javelins or darts in their right hands, and were of Life-guards to Princes or Commanders; δεξιολάβος is ſtipator, qui alicui latus munit, Jo. Drus. Suidas interpreteth it by πλαγιοφύλαξ, a keeper or garder of a ſide. The Syriac here Paraphraſeth, qui mittentes jaculantur dextra, or ſpiculatores a dextra, as reading δεξιοβόλους, dart-men.

v. 24. and bring him ſafe to Fœlix] Leſt the Jews ſhould way-lay and murder him: thus God accompliſheth his will in the preſervation of his ſervants; many times by their hands, who intend only their own ends.

v. 25. a letter after this manner] Either in this form, or the contents thereof were as followeth.

v. 26. ſendeth greeting] Wiſheth much health and happineſs; or as the Syriac, peace. So the Greeks uſed χαίρειν, to greet or ſalute, as Suidas noteth in the beginning of their Epiſtles. Some wrote εὖ πράττειν or εὖ διάγειν to the ſame purpoſe, well to do, or well to live. This worldly-wiſe-man, adoring the riſing-Sun, giveth this unworthy Fœlix, the title, of Moſt excellent Governour; whereas he was indeed, but an obſcure fellow thus advanced (by the abuſed favour of Claudius Cæſar) to great wealth and honour. Paul giveth the ſame to Feſtus, c.26.25. in order to Gods command for honouring ſuperiours, Prov.24.21.

v. 27. this man was taken of the Iews] This he writeth in favour of Paul, who being by priviledge a Roman, was illegally and evilly intreated of the Jews: God guideth the tongues and pens of unbelievers to the advantage of his.

with an army] That is, a party, or ſome companies of ſouldiers, c.21.32.

v. 28. and when I would have known the cauſe] He concealeth what he firſt did to Paul, and poſſibly touched in conſcience, laboured to make him amends, or at leaſt to free himſelf from blame and danger, for ſo uſing an uncondemned Roman. See c.22.29.

worthy of death, or bonds] Nothing, but that which was worthy of favour; but he writeth according to the ſenſe of the Romans; as if he had ſaid, nothing by our laws and Imperial conſtitutions, criminal.

v. 30. that the Iews laid wait, &c.] This probably he writeth, as to condemn the Jews tumultuous practiſes illegal and miſchievous conventions againſt Pauls life, and the Empires peace; ſo alſo to give account of his intention in ſending him with ſuch a guard to Fœlix.

v. 31. brought him by night] To avoid all further inſurrections, and attempts, which the Jews would probably have made in Ieruſalem.

to Antipatris] A city in the tribe of Manaſſeh, between Ieruſalem and Ceſarea, formerly called Capharſarama, or Capharſalama (Adricom. ter. ſanct. Manaſ. 8.) Herod building or repairing it, called it by his father Antipater's name, Ierome de loc. Hebr. Act. See 1 Mac. 7.

v. 32. they left the horſmen to go with him] Probably they were ſo commanded to do by their Colonel Lyſias. And Paul was at that diſtance from Ieruſalem, ſecure from the preſent purſuit of his enemies.

v. 33. to Ceſarea] See on Mat.16.13. and Ier. de loc. heb. Act.

v. 34. of what province he was] By this name the Romans called the countreys by them ſubdued, & this was a common cuſtom of examination of ſtrangers, to aſk, what countreyman, or whence they were. See 2 Sam.1.13. John 19.9. Probably Fœlix did it, that he might be ſatisfied whether Paul belonged to his juriſdiction. Of Cilicia] chap.6.9.

v. 35. when thy accuſers are alſo come] Leſt the Jews ſhould complain of an undue courſe of juſtice, that they had not audience: Theſe very Heathens knew it was not juſt to judge, before both parties Complainant and Defendant were lawfully heard: if it be enough to accuſe, who ſhall be innocent? and if it be enough to deny, who would be guilty?

v. 2. by thee we enjoy] To gain favour againſt Paul this flatterer thus begins with applauding Fœlix, whereas Hiſtories ſhew, how cruelly and impiouſly he behaved himſelf againſt their Nation.

v. 3. moſt noble Fœlix] Fœlix was of obſcure parentage, but Claudius Cæſar promoted him to honours; he had by his diligence ſuppreſſed the ſedition under Eleazarus: otherwiſe he was covetous and a cruel man. See *Joſephus Ant. Jud. l.*20. *c.*11. & de bel. Jud. l. 2. *c.*12. See alſo on c.23.26.

v. 4. that I be not further tedious] He intimateth that he would not long detain him from other his weighty affairs.

v. 5. a peſtilent fellow] λοιμὸν, a plague. As the Latines put ſcelus in the abſtract, pro ſcelerato, wickednes for a wicked fellow.

ſect of the Nazarens] αἱρέσεως, of the hereſie: this name they gave the Chriſtians in thoſe dayes, from Jeſus of Nazareth, according to which they called him in contempt Jeſus of Nazareth, from the city where he was brought up; afterward it was peculiarly attributed to the ſect of Hereticks, of which Epiph. hær. 29. See on *c.*26.5. See on v.14. of this chap.

a mover of ſedition] This aſperſion he caſt on Paul, probably becauſe he knew how odious ſedition was to the Romans.

v. 6. profane the temple] c.21.28.

according to our law] That is, to examine the quality of the offence, which the Romans permitted them to do; but not to execute ſentence of death.

v. 7. chief captain Lyſias] The Colonel Lyſias. This they object as a ſecret accuſation of Lyſias, in hope to balance his information hereby, intimating that he reſtrained them of that liberty contrary to the Roman grant.

v. 8. accuſe him] That is, Paul.

v. 9. ſaying, that theſe things were ſo] Theſe falſe witneſſes were ready to avow and confirm Tertullus lie.

v. 10. a judge] A Governour. Therefore thou art experienced in their cuſtomes, & canſt more equally & readily judge.

v. 11. yet but twelve] Meaning, he wanted not time, had he been ſo minded, to ſtir up ſedition: ſeven dayes were ſpent in the performance of that ceremony, which he undertook, that he might gain the weaker Jews to Chriſt, and five were ſpent ſince.

v. 12. diſputing with any man] Though he might lawfully have ſpoken in the Temple, as being an Apoſtle of Chriſt the Lord of the Temple; yet he denieth that he then and there uſed any ſuch liberty.

v. 13. neither can they prove the things] being falſe calumnies.

v. 14. which they call hereſie] Or a ſect, as v.5. the Scribes and Phariſees called the doctrine of Chriſt ſo in the worſt acceptation, as the enemies thereof ſtill do; this word αἵρεσις was then ſometimes taken in the good part, as c.26.5. Some mens miſunderſtanding prejudiceth not truth.

believing all things which are written in the law, &c.] Herein he ſheweth his conſent with the Church of God: and that Chriſtians have the ſame faith which the Patriarchs and Prophets had. See 1 Cor.10.1.2, &c.

v. 15. which they themſelves alſo allow] That is, the more prudent party, the Phariſees: the Sadduces denyed it.

juſt, and unjuſt] Dan.12.2. John 5.28.29.

v. 16. a conſcience void of offence] Becauſe I know, I muſt ſtand before Gods tribunal, I alwayes endeavour to keep a good conſcience, without which no man truly believeth. 1 *Tim.*1.19.

v. 17. after many yeers] It was a long time ſince he had been at Ieruſalem, which was when he brought them.

18. whereupon] Alms. chap. 11.30. certain Iews] c.21.27.

v. 19. who ought to have, &c.] For his preſent accuſers ſpake but by hereſay, or that which themſelves invented to hurt and diſadvantage him: as if he had ſaid; if there had been any ſuch thing whereof they accuſe me; or if any man could affirm ſuch things againſt me; why are they not here preſent? why appear they not againſt me.

v. 20. while I ſtood before the council] That is, at Ieruſalem let them ſay, if any can, what evil they found in me then, c.23.9.

v. 21. touching the reſurrection,] c. 23.6,

v. 22. having more perfect knowledge of that way] Syr. becauſe he plainly knew that way: becauſe he perceived that the Jews had of malice accuſed him: well knowing their qualities, and how falſely and frivolouſly they had calumniated him, loading him with foul words, not matters.

v. 23. let him have liberty] Let him not be kept cloſe priſoner, but under a Keeper with ſome chain on him. See c.26.29. & 28.20. though he acquitted him from all crimes, yet he detaineth him, to gratifie the Jews or expecting a bribe, Chryſ.

v. 24. Druſilla] This was Agrippa's ſiſter, a vitious woman. See *Joſeph. Ant. Jud. l.*20. *c.*5.

v. 25. Fœlix trembled] Out of horrour of conſcience, being a wicked man.

v. 26. that money ſhould have been given him] Either he ſuppoſed Paul to be no vulgar man whom the Jews ſo violently proſecuted, but of ſome great concealed eſtate, (knowing that theſe ſtorms of envy rarely trouble the low. ſhrubs) or that his friends and Diſciples would have redeemed him with ſome conſiderable bribe. Here is an example of a mercenary and corrupt Judge who will be hired to do juſtice.

v. 27. to ſhew the Jews a pleaſure] To do the Jews ſome pleaſure, and after the many injuries he had done them, to pacifie them, that they might not follow him with complaints. He was careful to pleaſe the Jews, though with diſpleaſing God, becauſe he lov'd himſelf, not God, nor good men.

CHAP. XXV.

V. 1. WHen Feſtus was come into the province] After Fœlix was removed from that government, and Portius Feſtus made Preſident of Iudea, reduced into the form of a Province by the Romans.

v. 2. informed him againſt Paul] Being thus precipitated by the ſpirit of Satan to perſecute the Goſpel, they could not reſt; and the leading actors were they who ſhould have protected and taught the truth: ſo dangerous is the corruption of thoſe who are in authority.

v. 3. and deſired favour againſt him] To wit, againſt Paul; that he would ſend for him to Ieruſalem, that they might kill him by the way.

v. 4. that Paul ſhould be kept] Probably, Fœlix had informed him of the Jews malice and deſigne againſt Paul; certainly this was Gods providence ſo to preſerve Paul.

v. 5. are able] That can conveniently come.

if there be any wickedneſſe in him] ἄτοπον here (as Luke 23.41.) importeth not ſome fooliſh or abſurd thing, but ſomething wickedly done. So 2 Theſ.3.2. So the Syriac expreſſeth it by סבלך ſachlu, ſin, wickedneſſe, Mat.18.35. Indeed, all wickedneſs is folly: the Hebrews well expreſſed it, as Joſh.7.15. becauſe he hath wrought נבלה nebala, folly. (that is, wickedneſſe) in Iſrael. 70. ἀνόμημα ἐν Ἰσραήλ. See Judg. 20.10. 2 Sam.13.12. Job 42.8.

v. 6. more then ten dayes] Syr. eight or ten dayes. Some Greek copies have ȣ̓ πλείȣς ἢ δέκα, not more then ten, &c.

v. 7. many and grievous complaints, &c.] αιτιώματα, criminations, or enditements: this is the condition of Gods ſervants, to be loaded with calumnies and ſlanders. See 2 Cor. 6.4.8. yet happy are they in their innocency, while their enemies make themſelves ſo much the more unhappy, by how much more they belye them, and are injurious to them.

v. 8. neither againſt the law of the Iews] Neither againſt the law of God profeſſed by the Jews, nor againſt the Temple (though they charged him with the profanation thereof; neither againſt Cæſar, had he practiſed any thing.

v. 9. to do the Iews a pleaſure] To gain the peoples good word, and opinion of him.

v. 10. where I ought to be judged] Doubting the ſincerity of the Judge, whoſe warping towards popularity he poſſibly perceived, and alſo the wait-laying of the Jews.

v. 11. I refuſe not to dye] As if he had ſaid, I beg no favour.

no man may deliver me] No man juſtly can.

I appeal unto Cæſar] Syr. protectiones Cæſaris appello, I appeal to Cæſars protections. I require to be judged by Cæſar himſelf. Thus claimeth he his Roman priviledge.

v. 12. with the council] Without whoſe conſent he could do nothing.

v. 13. king Agrippa] Son of Herod Agrippa, whoſe death is mentioned, c.12. See Ioſeph. Ant. l 18.11. & *l.*19. *c.*5.

and Bernice] Siſter to the ſame Agrippa, with whom he lived in publick infamy, and vehement ſuſpition of inceſt.

v. 14. Feſtus declared Pauls cauſe] Poſſibly, diſcourſing of many things, at laſt he fell on Pauls buſineſs: how ever, Gods providence ſo diſpoſed it for Pauls deliverance from the Jews: he will never be wanting to his; where it ſhall make for his honour and their good, he will raiſe up ſome Feſtus to declare the oppreſſed mans cauſe. See Geneſis 41.9, &c. 1 Sam.18.3. &c. 1 Sam. 19.2. &c.

v. 15. to have judgement againſt him] δίκην. Syr. that I would judge him. The word ſignifieth, an Action entred, or to be entred into a Court of juſtice: ſo they ſaid, δίκην ἐπάγειν, Budæus. Which the Latins expreſſed by, dicam impingere, ſcribere, or diem dicere, that is, deferre, criminis poſtulare, to impleade, or to indite one of ſome crime; or to enter an action againſt one, that they may have judgement againſt the impleaded. Sometimes it ſignified the penalty or puniſhment, the proceed and reſult of the judgement. Likely enough, here they deſired to have him condemned, indictâ cauſâ, without hearing the cauſe, as they had done againſt Chriſt, and that might be the cauſe of Feſtus's reply, v. 16. concerning the Roman cuſtome.

v. 16. To deliver any man to die] χαρίζεσθαι ſignifieth to give freely, without cauſe or merit: he means for any mans pleaſure, or favour to execute men without lawfull hearing of both parties, he is an unjuſt judge, who giveth (though the moſt juſt) ſentence, before a legall hearing, the heathens gave leave, even to the ſacrilegious, traiterous, witches, or any malefactors to defend themſelves in judgment, nec prædamnari quemquam incognitâ cauſâ licet. &c. Lactant. l. 5. c. 1. yet ſuch hath ever been the devils malice againſt the ſervants of Chriſt, to thruſt on impious Judges to condemn them without hearing them; becauſe he knows the power of truth, if that come to be ſcanned, his kingdom falleth: ſee John 7. 51.

v. 17. without any delay] He commendeth his own juſtice herein: long-delayed juſtice often proveth more heavy, then ſpeedy injuſtice.

on the judgement ſeat] Where they uſed to hear the weighty matters.

v. 18. no accuſation of ſuch things] They accuſed him of ſedition, but he took it for a meer calumny; becauſe as Chryſoſtom ſaith κατηγόρουν, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἤλεγχον: they alleaged, but convinced not: objected much, but proved nothing.

v. 19. of their own ſuperſtition] See on chap. 17. 22. Syr. concerning their religion, ſo profanely did heathens think and ſpeak of religion.

of one Jeſus] By this it appeareth how little Pauls preaching had wrought upon Feſtus; and that many things were controverted between Paul and the Jews, which Luke, for brevity ſake omitted. See 1 Cor. 1. 23.

v. 20. Becauſe I doubted, &c.] Or, I was doubtfull how to enquire hereof: this was his pretence; but the truth was, he would fain get favour with the Jews. verſe 9. here he bewraieth his own injuſtice: for why did not he acquit him againſt whom nothing was proved?

v. 21. to the hearing of Auguſtus] Or, to the judgement.

Auguſtus] Nero was at that time Emperour of Rome, but for the honour of their former Emperour Auguſtus, they ſtiled his ſucceſſours after his name.

v. 22. I would alſo hear the man] So Herod deſired to ſee Chriſt. Luke 23. 8. and to hear John Baptiſt, Mark 6. 20. not to be converted, but to ſatisfie his own curioſity: Agrippa being born and bred among the Jews, had, doubtleſs heard of Chriſtian religion, and perhaps of Paul alſo: therefore he might happily deſire to ſee and hear him. See here the providence of God: by all theſe injuries, accuſations, layings of wait, as Chryſoſtom noteth, Paul becometh λαμπρότερος, more eminent: but for ſuch his ſufferings, none of theſe Princes would have vouchſafed him audience with ſo much ſilence and patience.

v. 23. into the place of hearing] εἰς τὸ ἀκροατήριον, into the place of audience, or hearing cauſes. Syr. into the houſe of judgement, this being publike, hither came Agrippa and Bernice with great pompe, that is, in a princely manner, and great ſtate.

v. 24. See this man] Thus God pleaſeth to ſuffer his dear children to be made a ſpectacle unto the world, to men and Angels. See 1 Cor. 4. 9.

v. 25. That he had committed nothing] Thus the more malitious the Jews were in accuſing Paul, the more (by Gods providence) was he juſtified by his Judges. See chap. 23. 29. & 24. 24. truth and innocency ſhine more cleerly by their oppoſition.

v. 26. unto my Lord] Unto Cæſar, whoſe deputy I am in this place: this high title, Auguſtus, Tiberius & ſome others would not have given unto them; it being, what they thought too great, and ſomething newer then the Roman Empire: but, as אֲדֹנִי adoni, was a civil title among the Hebrews, Gen. 32. 18. &c. and κύριος among the Greeks, ſo became Dominus to be among the Latines.

v. 27. It ſeemeth to me unreaſonable, &c.] All this made for Pauls juſtification, and the Jews juſt blame, that the Judge openly profeſſed, that (notwithſtanding their turbulent clamours, and frequent calumnies) there appeared no crime of Pauls whereof the deputy could enform Cæſar, he thought it unreaſonable to ſend any priſoner under the general notion of a delinquent, whereas, no particular thereof could be proved againſt him.

C H A P. XXVI.

Verſe 1. P*Aul ſtretched forth the hand*] This was with them an uſuall geſture of thoſe who began to ſpeak in publike. See Prov. 1. 24. Iſai. 65. 2.

v. 2. I think my ſelfe happy] I take it for my advantage, that I may now ſpeak before thee, who knoweſt the law and the Scriptures; and art therefore a more competent Judge, then he that is a ſtranger to all.

v. 3. I beſeech thee to hear me patiently] As he commended his knowledge; ſo he entreateth his patience, they that know moſt ought to be moſt attentive, where matters of religion are controverted impatience in hearing matters of ſo high concernment, concludeth ignorance, or impiety.

v. 4. my manner of life] Becauſe the calumnies caſt on him by the Jewes, might otherwiſe have prejudiced the cauſe of Chriſt, he firſt waſheth them off, by appealing to his accuſers own conſciences, who knew his converſation from his youth up.

v. 5. Sect] Here αἵρεσις is taken in good part, or at leaſt according to the vulgar opinion, and ſuppoſition of his adverſaries, as if he had ſaid, the Jews their ſelves account the ſect of Phariſees to be the moſt holy and religious; and they well know that I was trained up in the ſame and zealouſly profeſſed the ſame; therefore ought they not to reprove my former courſe of life, if they will be conſtant to their own principles: he calleth it ἀκριβεστάτην αἵρεσιν the ſtraiteſt: or moſt exquiſite, or exact ſect: there were then three ſects among the Jews, Phariſees, Sadduces and Eſſenes: ſee *Joſ. See 1 Cor. 15. 37. 38.

v. 9. verily I thought with my ſelf] He prepoſſeſſeth an objection: ſome might ſay, were you brought up a Phariſee? you never learned of them to believe, that Jeſus was the Meſſias: true indeed (ſaith he) I was an adverſary to Chriſtians, as much as any of them; and thought my ſelf bound in conſcience to endeavour their ſuppreſſion; neither did any man perſwade me to the contrary, but God revealed to me from heaven, the truth of Chriſt, and diverted my courſe: therefore here he inſerteth the hiſtory of his admirable converſion.

much learning doth make thee mad] Thou overſtudieſt thy ſelf; or medleſt with matters too deep for thy apprehenſion, ſuch eſtimates do the ignorant ſet on knowledge: ſo do they blaſphemouſly conceive the Goſpel to be the fooliſhneſs of preaching. 1 Cor. 1. 18. It ſeemeth ſo to them that periſh: to them that ſhall be ſaved, it is the power and wiſdom of God, ſee Rom. 1. 16. 2. Cor. 4. 3. 4. it is a dangerous ſymptom to diſtaſt the Goſpel of Chriſt.

v. 25. I am not mad, moſt noble Feſtus] Paul is not tranſported with anger for Feſtus cenſure of him, but being more ſolicitous to free them, by whom he was bound, from the bonds of ſin and Satan, then himſelf from their chains, he replyeth meekly, and as it became him to ſpeak to a governour: though Feſtus were unworthy, yet for Gods ordinance ſake, and leſt the cauſe of religion might otherwiſe have ſuffered, he regardeth him: neither was Paul ſo much careful for the defence of his own reputation (See 1 Cor. 4. 3. 2 Cor. 5. 13) as for the truth of God, which indeed is of the higheſt and moſt ſerious concernment: it is truly the greateſt madneſſe of the world, wittingly and willingly to neglect that, in which is our eternal weal or woe: a ſoft anſwer turneth away wrath, Prov. 15. 1. meekneſſe and patience of teachers much advanceth the truth of Chriſt. See 2 Tim. 2. 24, 25, 26. ſo it is in any weighty undertaking, to be maſter of ones ſelf, ſubject onely to right reaſon, not to diſturbed affections.

v. 26. for the king knoweth] Being a Jew, and alwayes converſant in Judea, he might know the propheſies, & thoſe things wᶜʰ were there done and ſuffered by Chriſt, in his life, death & reſurrection.

See alſo c. 5. 41. The Romans uſed thus to produce their priſoners with a ſouldier guardian, and ſome chain on the priſoner, c. 28. 20. 2 Tim. 1. 16.

v. 30. the King roſe up] Having diſmiſſed the company who attended or came to hear; the King, Preſident and Bernice with many others, depart nothing better then they came hither. So goeth the black Moor into the Bath, coming out from waſhing, of the ſame complexion: they whoſe hearts are filled with love of the world, and ſecular buſineſſes, impatiently hear the goſpel; it is preſently tedious to them.

v. 31. nothing worthy of death] Thus the very heathen Judges ſtill acquitted him in their opinions to the condemnation of the malitious Jews.

v. 32. then Agrippa ſaid] Agrippa (of their governours moſt verſed in theſe things) alſo juſtifies Paul; what got the Jews by their travel and importunity, but their own juſt condemnation, in the manifeſtation of Pauls innocency: the enemies of the goſpel and of the Miniſters thereof, do but juſtifie, and to the ſervants of Chriſt undoubted advantage, honour them the more.

v. 7. ſlowly many dayes] The winde being againſt them, as v. 4. or very bare.

Gnidus] A little Iſland over againſt Caria.

Crete] Since named Candie: it is a Grecian iſland, once abounding in wealth, and glorious for the number of an hundred towns. Jerom. de loc. Hebr. Act. See G. Mercat. Atl. Creta, & Plin. l. 4. c. 12.

Salmone] This was an eaſtern promontory, or high cliffe of Crete. See Strab. l. 8.

v. 8. the fair havens] It ſeemeth ſo called of the ſafety and commodiouſneſſe of the haven, or road; as we call a road of ours, the Downs.

Laſea] A ſea-town and city of Crete, Jerome de loc. Hebr. Act.

v. 9. the faſt was] He reckoneth the time of the year, after the cuſtom of the Jews, which the Syriack expreſſeth, the faſt which the Jews were wont to obſerve: hereof ſee Levit. 16. 29. and 23. 27. Numb. 29. 7. this was about October: ſo that Paul adviſed them to winter there, rather then to put to ſea in the deep of winter then at hand; wherein (as Vegetius noteth de re militar. l. 4. c. 39.) there is little light, and tedious nights, thick clouds, dark weather, rages of winde, and ſtorms, hindring travel by ſea and land: the heathen ſaid well, — καιρὸς δ' ἐπὶ πᾶσιν ἄριστος, Heſiod. op. & di. opportunity is beſt in all things.

v. 10. hurt and &c.] μεθ' ὕβρεως, with injury: the interpreter of the Syriack giveth it, with trouble.

but alſo of our lives] With much danger of our lives: it had been with loſſe of their lives, had not God (as Oecumenius ſaith) for Pauls ſake preſerved all the reſt τῶν ψυχῶν ἡμῶν, of our ſouls, that is, our lives, a Metonymie of the efficient for the effect, uſual among the Hebrews.

v. 11. the centurion believed the maſter] Not knowing Paul to be inſpired by the holy Ghoſt, but conceiving him to be no ſea man, he believed the maſter of the ſhip in his own faculty; alſo the haven was not commodious: this man had at leaſt ſome apearance of reaſon for this his belief; what reaſon have they, who in danger of their ſouls ſhipwrack, will moſt believe them who have leaſt ſkil, & experience in preaching the word for ſaving of ſouls?

v. 12. Phenice] A port in Crete, not Phenicia a region in Syria.

v. 13. looſing thence] Weighing anchor, and ſetting ſail thence, ἄραντες, ἆσσον παρελέγοντο, the word ἆσσον is not here a name of a place; but is put for ἐγγὺς or πλησίον, near or neerer: as if we ſaid cloſe aboard the ſhore of Crete or Candie. See c. 20. 13, 14.

they ſailed] παρελέγοντο, which the Latines give legebant, or prætérlegebant, Virg. Æn. 3. Littoraque Epiri legimus, it hath many ſignifications, as Lyranus noteth in this Diſtich, > Fur aurum, virgo flores, mare navita, libros > Clericus, æquivoce ſingula quiſque legit.

In the Dialect of Engliſh marriners, they went cloſe aboard the ſhore.

v. 14. there aroſe] Or beat.

againſt it] Againſt Crete, ſo that it carried them off to ſea from Crete (which was now a windward ſhore) to Melita, which is between Africa and Sicilie.

Euroclydon] A North-eaſt winde, furious and ſtormy, uſual about thoſe places, in the beginning of winter: ſome call it, the ſea mans plague.

v. 15. when the ſhip was caught] With this ſudden ſtorme, ſo they (not having time to take in their ſails) were in danger of overſetting.

could not bear up into the winde] A ſhip is ſaid ἀντοφθαλμεῖν τῷ ἀνέμῳ, to wreſtle with the winde (ſay the interpreters) which muſt needs be, when ſhe hath the winde againſt her, ſo that her prow muſt encounter with adverſe billows, and head-ſeas, or meet the ſea right a head; ſome think the original of the phraſe was from that part of the prow which was called ὀφθαλμὸς, an eye: we have in uſe with us, to make up into the eye of the winde, (which here is ἀντοφθαλμεῖν) by divers tacks, and making ſundry boards, to turn to the windeward: that is, by ſtanding ſometimes one way, and ſometimes another for the gaining a place to windeward; which here this ſhip could not do, the violence of the ſtorm and great head-ſeas driving them ſtill to the lee-ward, and hindring her way.

we let her drive] A ſhip is ſaid to drive, when the anchor cannot hold her, but that ſhe falleth away with the winde or tyde. So alſo when a ſhip is at hull, or a trie, that is, hath taken in all her ſails, and tyed down the helm to the lee-ſide of the ſhip, going as winde and tide carry her: we ſay ſhe drives, &c. or is a drift to leeward.

v. 16. Clauda] A little iſland. Plinie lib. 4. cap. 12. calleth it Gaudos: Ptolome and others Claudos.

to come by the boat] To recover, take up, or ſave the boat.

v. 17. undergirding the ſhip] This undergirding is by truſſes, which are ropes made faſt to the yards; uſed either to binde faſt the yard to the maſt, when the ſhip rowls a hull, or at an anchor, or to hale down the yards in a guſt or ſtorm.

into the quick-ſands] Certain vaſt banks or mountains of ſands in the ſea, which ſwallow up ſhips that ſtick faſt and ſit upon them a little time; and ſo will the Goodwin ſands, &c.

v. 18. they lightened the ſhip] By caſting the goods overboard.

v. 19. the tackling of the ſhip] The Greek word σκευὴν, ſignifieth ſtore, munition and and neceſſary furniture, and proviſion for ſhips. So Jon. 1. 5. they caſt overboard את־הכלים eth hackchalim: their inſtruments or furniture, το: ἐκβολὴν ἐποιήσαντο τῶν σκευῶν: the very word here uſed: So Syr. interpret. vaſa ipſius navis &c. See 2 Kings 11. 8. 11.

v. 20. all hope that we ſhould be ſaved] Meaning, in reſpect of ſecond cauſes and mans reaſon; κατὰ τὴν φύσιν, as Oecumenius ſpeaks, it muſt have been ſo in the courſe of nature, that they had periſhed.

v. 21. have gained this harm] That is, prevented it; as the Syr. interpreteth it, avoided it; in the concluſion, it will ever appear a gain, to hearken to Chriſts Miniſters.

v. 22. of any mans life] ψυχῆς: ſoul, for life, as verſe 10. with this admirable confidence in the truth of God, who had revealed this unto him, verſe 24. he comforteth them, leſt in deſpair of life they ſhould neglect the means of their preſervation.

but of the ſhip] This he declareth to them, that when they ſaw all this truely come to paſſe, they might have the more reverend eſteem of the goſpel which he preached & for which he now ſuffered.

v. 23. the Angel of God] Whom he ſent to comfort and aſſure me; leſt they ſhould think he vainly promiſed them ſecurity, he confirmeth that which he ſaid by alleaging a divine authority.

whom I ſerve] He profeſſeth to profane men, that he ſerved God, who was able to deliver, and would deliver him and them: they knew that he was now in bonds for his religion ſake: now hearing that God had a care of him, ſent his Angel to him, and after ſeeing that he and themſelves were according to his word delivered from the (otherwiſe inevitable) danger, they might eaſily gather, that God juſtified his religion, and that he ſerved the true God.

v. 24. God hath given thee all them that ſail with thee] Or given thee as a favour; thou haſt prayed for them, I have heard thee, and will for thy ſake ſave their lives. So God heard Lot for Zoar. Gen. 19. 19, &c. God preſerveth the wicked from temporall deſtruction, for the righteous ſake who are among them, & interceede for them.

v. 25. for I believe God] I am confident out of good experience, that God will certainly perform his promiſe.

v. 26. we muſt be caſt] That they might not doubt of the truth of Gods promiſe, he foretelleth them, the manner and means by which they ſhall be preſerved: thus it will fall out that we ſhall be caſt upon an Iſland: this he telleth them that they might aſcribe their delivery to God, not chance.

v. 27. in the Adriatick] In the Adriatick ſea which divideth Italy from Dalmatia, and reacheth up to Venice.

v. 28. and ſounded] To finde the depth of the waters by caſting out a plummet of lead faſtned to a line many fathoms long.

v. 29. out of the ſtern] Or hinder part of the ſhip.

v. 30. out of the fore-ſhip] The prow, or foremoſt part of the ſhip.

v. 31. except theſe abide in the ſhip] Not becauſe the will of God, or his power to ſave, or the effect of his promiſe depended on ſecond cauſes; but becauſe he that had ordained the end, ordained the means alſo; and that he would not have them tempt him, by dividing that which he had united.

v. 32. Cut off the ropes] The Centurion and ſouldiers following Pauls counſel, cut off all hope of the ſea-mens going away from the ſhip, and deſerting them; they cut the boat-rope, and let her drive away.

v. 33. continued faſting] He meaneth, they eat no ſet meales; or ſo little in their perpetuall danger and fear of being caſt away, that it was in a manner a faſting.

v. 34. hair fall from the head] By this Hebrew phraſe is meant, that they ſhould all come ſafe and ſound aſhore (See 1 Sam. 14. 45. 1 King. 1. 52. Matth. 10. 30.), without the loſſe of a man.

v. 35. he took bread and gave thanks] Not onely praying God to give a bleſſing, & to ſanctifie thoſe creatures to their nouriſhment; to preſent their thanks to him for the ſame, and to acknowledge his good providence in beſtowing them upon them; but alſo for their preſervation from the great danger which they had run: and exhorting them to refreſh themſelves, in confidence of Gods future providence according to his word, he ſheweth them his own example; we muſt not in dangers and afflictions, meaſure our conditions by preſent ſenſe, but conſider Gods power, and promiſes to deliver us; it is an happy teaching, where Miniſters own actions, exemplifie their doctrine.

v. 36. all of good chear &c.] So great a comfort and bleſſing is one, or a few good men in a company: while they were ſafe, and out of fear, Paul lay aboard like a poor deſpiſed priſoner, but now in the danger God maketh him the onely counſeller, and comforter of all the company; common dangers and afflictions, make the Saints more evidently ſhine.

v. 37. two hundred threeſcore and ſixteen, &c.] This ſetteth off the good providence of God, that of ſo many men, none periſhed in their tumultuous ſwimming aſhore: it muſt teach men in midſt of dangers to caſt themſelves upon the providence of God.

v. 38. they lightned the ſhip] By caſting her lading overboard: they reſolved with the Philoſopher in the like caſe, better theſe periſh for us, then with us.

v. 39. they knew not the land] They could keep no good reckoning, by reaſon of the violent ſtorme, dark weather, variable ſets of tydes, and poſſibly many ſhifts of windes: ſo diſcovering the land, knew not where they were.

to thruſt in the ſhip] They would there run her aſhore, that they might ſave their lives.

v. 40. taken up the anchors] Or cut the cables (to which the anchors were faſtned) in the hawſe: for in a ſtorm, and ſuch wrought ſeas they could not weigh anchor: Syr. [illegible] vepeſaku, and they cut off the anchors; the ſame word is given verſe 20. all hope that we ſhould be ſaved [illegible] ethpeſek, was cut off; Greek ἀφῃρεῖτο, was taken away.

looſed the rudder-bands] The rudder, is that piece of timber, which hanging at the ſtern-poſt of the ſhip, is as a bridle to direct the courſe; this they had bound when they would drive (verſe 15.) or let the ſhip go whither winde and tyde would carry her; but now, becauſe they would have it to direct the ſhip, that they might with the beſt advantage for themſelves, run her aſhore, they looſe it again.

and hoiſed up the main-ſail] Which before they had ſtrucken, by reaſon of the violence of the ſtorm; now they hoiſe it, that the ſhip might feel the winde, and work for their running aſhore.

v. 41. broken with the violence &c.] So that nothing now remained, but that every one ſhould ſhift for his life, and ſwimme aſhore: thus God ſhewed his delivering power in extream hazards.

v. 42. the ſouldiers counſell was to kill &c.] They ſhew their cruell ingratitude to Paul, who had comforted them and for whoſe ſake their lives were ſaved: this hath been the common lot of the Prophets, Apoſtles, Miniſters, and generally the ſaints of God: let it trouble no good man to receive evil for the good he hath done, it is a vulgar diſeaſe; let them know that when men requite evil for good, that yet their labour is with the Lord. See Luk. 14. 13, 14.

v. 43. But the Centurion willing to ſave Paul] God put into his heart, to defeat this more then barbarous counſell of the ſouldiers: thus God ſaveth Paul by the Centurion, who was preſerved for Pauls ſake: piety never dyeth unrewarded: it is an happy thing to do all the good we can; here again mark the preſent benefit which the other priſoners had for Pauls ſake: it is a ſufficient motive to make men ambitious of the acquaintance and ſociety of Gods children.

caſt themſelves firſt into the ſea] That they might be the more helpfull to get the reſt aſhore; alſo to avoid the danger of one drowning another, if the multitude ſhould all have leaped overboard together.

v. 44. ſome on boards &c.] Who could not ſwimme without.

they eſcaped all ſafe] Thus God ever fulfilleth his promiſes: thus his goodneſſe overcometh mans malice, and impious counſels; reſerving the wicked to other times, whoſe unbelief and ingratefull cruelty, willing to ſhed blood, deſerved that they ſhould never have come to ſhore again: The long-ſuffering and goodneſſe of God ſhould lead men to repentance, and teach them Davids uſe of Gods favours. Pſal. 107. 15. Oh that men would praiſe the Lord for his goodneſſe, &c.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Verſe 1. Called Melita] Now called Malta, an Iſland between Africa and Sicilie: there is another of the ſame name in the Adriatick bay, between Italy and Epidaurus. See D. Heylin Μικρόκοσμ: mediterran. Iſles. 448. &c. & Plin. l. 3. c. 9. & 4. 26.

v. 2. barbarous people] They were ſo called who ſpake neither Greek nor Latine, and were more rudely brought up, of fierce and evil manners; uncivill, ungodly, inhumane and cruel. Cic. ad Q. fr. l. 1. quod ſi te ſors Afris, aut Hiſpanis, aut Gallis praefeciſſet, immanibus ac barbaris nationibus: ſo Virg. barbarus has ſegites? See 1 Cor. 14. 11.

ſhewed us no little kindneſſe] φιλανθρωπίαν humanity: So Suidas interpreter giveth φιλανθρωπηθεὶς humaniter exceptus: and Budaeus φιλανθρωπευόμενος, in conſuetudinem benignitatemque compoſitus: Some deſpiſe the needy and calamitous, adding affliction to affliction, but theſe men (eſteemed barbarous) were more humane to thoſe who had loſt ſhip and goods in the ſea: Chriſtians ſhould not be aſhamed to imitate their mercy, but to come ſhort of it. See Hebr. 13. 3. it is no more honour to thoſe who are barbarous to be called humane, then diſhonour to the humane to be called barbarous: it is leſſe evil to be ſtiled evil, then to be ſo: be better then thy name, ſhew thy ſelf good indeed, and thou mayeſt ſecurely deſpiſe fame. See James 2. 16.

v. 3. a viper out of the heat] Thus God pleaſed by a new miracle to confirm Pauls authority, thereby to prepare the barbarous to receive the Goſpel.

v. 4. a murderer] This was raſh judgement; according to the common cuſtom of the world; who uſually accompt the afflicted wicked.

yet vengeance ſuffereth not to live] Vengeance they took to be a goddeſſe, named Δίκη; the ſame with Nemeſis, which they called τῶν ἀλαζόνων τιμωρὸν, the revenger of the proud Suid. Νέμεσις.

v. 5. ſhook off the beaſt &c.] That is the viper; which hung on his hand: the Phyſitians called all ſuch creatures which leave their venome in a wound which they bite or ſting θηρία, ſpecially the viper.

felt no harm] The power of God, the Lord of nature and all creatures, reſtraining the venome; ſo that it could not hurt Paul: here Chriſts promiſe to beleevers in the Primitive Church. Mark 16. 18. was fulfilled in Paul.

v. 6. ſwollen and fallen down dead] So deadly is their poiſon, ſpecially in thoſe hot countries, that it preſently invades the heart and vitall parts, and thoſe that are bitten preſently die: the more evident was this miracle in Pauls preſervation.

v. 7. Publius] By this name he ſeemed to be a Roman, and that he entertaining the Centurion, Paul and his company were invited with him : thus God hath every where a care of his.

v. 8. prayed and layd his hands on him] Praying, he ſhewed that not his power, but Gods, reſtored this man: laying on his hands was a form of bleſſing ; hoſpitality is commended by many examples, Gen. 18. 2. Gen. 19. 1. 1 King. 17. 9. 2 King. 4. 8. Exod. 2. 20. Luk. 10. 38. and here by a ſpeciall reward thereof.

v. 9. others alſo came and were healed] For very probably the fame hereof quickly ſpread about the Iſland. But why did not he who ſhook off the viper, and cured diſeaſes, ſhake off his own bonds ? we muſt know that Paul was not the authour, but miniſter in the miracle, acting onely where, when, how, and on whom the Spirit of God would : and miracles were not wrought for the eaſe of their perſons, who did them ; ſo much as for the confirmation of their miniſtry ; for which he ſometimes miraculouſly delivered them. chap. 5. 19. chap. 12. 7. ſometimes he left them in bonds, where thoſe bonds might advance the Goſpel. Phil. 1. 12.

v. 10. laded us with ſuch things &c.] Furniſhed them with victuals, and other neceſſaries for the voyage.

v. 11. whoſe ſigne was] Such as ſhips uſually have whereby they may be the better known, and according to which ſometimes they are named, and their bils of lading, or other commiſſions to them appertaining are formed.

Caſtor and Pollux] The Painims feigned theſe to be gods of the ſea.

v. 12. at Syracuſe] A famous city of Sicilia.

v. 13. to Rhegium] A city in Italy over againſt Meſſana of Sicilia.

to Puteoli] A ſea-town in the kingdom of Naples.

v. 14 we found brethren] Some that were Chriſtians : Gods Church is fixed to no place.

v. 15. Appii-forum] A market-town upon a long high-way to the ſea-ward, which Appius cauſed his ſouldiers to make good ; by the which there ſtood 3. taverns, about a dayes journey from Rome.

v. 16. the Centurion] Or governor of the pretory or judgment-hall.

ſuffered to dwell] Paul was not put into the common priſon ; which favour God gave him for his comfort, and the advancement of the Goſpel.

v. 17. Paul called the chief of the Jews] Who dwelt then at Rome ; here again appeared the conſtant love of Paul to Iſrael ; who notwithſtanding their many grievous injuries done him, would yet again adventure to preach Chriſt unto them, that they might be ſaved.

v. 18. when they had examined &c.] That is, when the Romane Deputies and governours of Judea had examined Paul : thus he endeavoureth to preſent the truth unto them, and for their better reception of himſelf, and it, to prevent the prejudicate opinion concerning his own perſon, leſt that ſhould diſadvantage the Goſpel.

v. 19. not that I had ought to accuſe &c.] That is, I appealed to Caeſar, onely to defend my innocency : nor purpoſe I to make any uſe of this accuſation, to exaſperate Caeſars former evil opinion of the Jews.

v. 20. for the hope] That is, for Jeſus Chriſt his cauſe, whom they had long looked for, and who had now ſhewed himſelf their Redeemer.

v. 21. we neither received letters &c.] The high prieſts had little hope that they could reach him there at Rome, therefore probably they were ſilent.

v. 22. concerning this ſect] See on chap. 26. 5. meaning, this profeſſion of Chriſtianity.

every where it is ſpoken againſt] By the governours and people, Jews and Gentiles : here appeareth the truth and power of God, in the propagation of that Goſpel, which had the multitude, power, authority and wiſedom, yea, and the ſeeming ſanctity of the world, every where againſt it : what naturall man would not at leaſt have ſuſpected that which all condemned ? that muſt therefore be the truth of God, which ſo much, ſo univerſally, ſo conſtantly floriſheth in ſpite of men.

v. 23. kingdom of God] That the kingdom ſpoken of by the Prophets, now was offered unto them by Chriſt.

v. 24. ſome beleeved] The Goſpel, like the ſeed, Mat. 13. findeth divers ſoils, and bringeth forth according to the receiver ; the ſame ſun hardneth the clay, & ſoftneth the wax. See 2 Theſ. 3. 2. Heb 4. 2.

v. 25. when they agreed not &c.] Here is the fruit of diſſention, but accidentall to the Goſpel, which cauſeth not, but ſheweth the ſecret wickedneſſe of mens hearts, as the ſun, ſheweth, but cauſeth not the diverſities of colours which lay concealed and undiſtinct in the dark. See Luke. 2. 34. Matth. 10. 34. John 10. 19.

well ſpake the holy Ghoſt] When he could by no fair means win them, he denounceth the judgement which God had threatned them. Iſaiah 6. 9. which the authority of the holy Ghoſt declared to be moſt certain. 2 Pet. 1. 21.

v. 26. go unto this people] Iſaiah 6. 9. Matth. 13. 14. Mark 4. 12. Luke 8. 10. John 12. 14. Rom. 11. 8.

v. 27. they have cloſed] They are in wilfull ignorance, and willingly know not ; as, 2 Pet. 3. 5. therefore God giveth them over to ſtrong deluſions, to beleeve lies, to their own deſtruction. 2 Theſ. 2. 11, 12.

v. 28. the ſalvation of God] Τὸ σωτήριον τȣ̃ θεȣ̃. So Luke 2. 30. which is revealed in the Goſpel by God, ſhewing his counſel therein, & the powerful effect therof by his holy ſpirit, to every beleever.

v. 29. the Jews departed] So hypocrites and ſelf-flatterers beguile their own ſouls, being impatient of all wholſome reproof, and offended at the truth. Gal. 4. 16.

had great reaſonings] This ſheweth that ſome beleeved, in that they gainſayed the unbeleevers.

v. 30. received all &c.] He was not ignorant, how much ſilence would have ſecured him from the malice of the Jews ; but he valued not his life, ſo that he might finiſh his charge which was committed to him. See chap. 21. 13. 1 Cor. 9. 16.

v. 31 preaching the kingdom of God] That is, as the Syr. hath it, concerning the kingdom of God : and how we are intereſſed therein by the free grace and mercy of God in Chriſt Jeſus ; in whom we receive remiſſion of ſins, regeneration, reconciliation, adoption of ſons, faith, ſanctification, patience, perſeverance, obſignation and ſealing up to redemption ; and ſhall have the end of our hopes, the ſalvation of our bodies and ſouls in his kingdom of glory.

with all confidence, no man forbidding him] Not becauſe the Jews had loſt their malice, but becauſe God who ſhut the greedy lyons mouthes. Dan. 6. had now ſhut theirs : and he who brought out Iſrael from the incenſed Egypt, in ſuch a calm, that not a dog mooved his tongue againſt them, now at preſent gave Paul freedom from the ſtrife of tongues : well might he ſay, the word of God is not bound, 2 Tim. 2. 9. if thou ſhouldſt endeavour to binde up the ſun-beams, or ſilence the whiſpering windes, thou couldſt not prevail ; nor can any creature, againſt that ſpirit of God which breaths when, and where it liſt. John 3. 8.

Now unto the King Eternall, Immortall, Inviſible, the onely wiſe God, be honour and glory for ever and ever, to his Church peace, truth, and ſalvation, to all Eternity, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord and onely Saviour. Amen.

The ARGUMENT and ANALYSIS of the Epiſtle to the ROMANES.

THe main ſcope and end of the Apoſtle, in this Epiſtle to the Romanes, is, to convince both Jew and Gentile of their corrupt and deplorate eſtate by Nature, and how impoſſible it is to obtain Righteouſneſſe and S[illegible]ion by the works of the Law ; and conſequently to draw all men to embrace the doctrine of the Goſpel ; wherein Grace and Mercy, in the Remiſſion of ſins, peace of Conſcience, and Joy in the holy Ghoſt, Comfort in Affliction, and Conqueſt in all Temptations, together with the adoption of Sons, and eternall life are offered to all Beleevers :

It containeth in it,
- 1. Theologicall Doctrines and Concluſions.
  - 1 Concerning Juſtification, which he proveth to be by Faith, without the works of the Law, from the ſixteenth verſe of the firſt Chapter, to the ſixth Chapter.
  - 2 Concerning Sanctification, which he proveth to be imperfect, yet true and ſincere, from the ſixth Chapter to the ninth.
  - 3 Concerning Predeſtination, which he proveth to be of the meere love of God, and not upon any merit in us, Chapter 9, 10, 11.
- 2 Morall Exhortations to holineſſe of Converſation, ſubjection to Magiſtrates, and charity towards all, eſpecially our weak brethren, Chapter 12, 13, 14, 15.
- 3 Chriſtian Salutations and Prayers, with a promiſe ſhortly to ſee them, Chapter 16.

ANNOTATIONS ON THE EPISTLE OF PAUL THE APOSTLE TO THE ROMANES.

CHAP. I.

Verſ. 1. [illegible]aul] Paul, the holy Apoſtle, who wrote this Epiſtle and the reſt, either had two names given him formerly, (at his circumciſion) Saul and Paul, as the firſt Evangeliſt in order, had two names, Matthew and Levi, which the words of Saint Luke (Act. 13. 9.) ſeem to import; (Saul which alſo is called Paul) or, after his ſeparation to the work of the miniſtery, and his converting Paul the proconſul, his former name Saul was changed into Paul, either by the proconſul Sergius Paulus, who graced him with the name of his illuſtrious Family among the Romanes, as Titus did Joſephus the Jew with the name of Flavius; or by himſelf in memory of that great work God wrought by him, as well in the converſion of the proconſul as the confuſion of Elymas the Sorcerer: ſo Saint Auguſtine and St. Jerome, victoria erexit vexillum ut Paulus diceretur e Saulo.

ſervant] The word is not here taken as oppoſed to a free man, but ſignifieth a miniſter, or a man wholly addicted to Chriſts ſervice, whoſe ſervice is perfect freedome: in which ſenſe Moſes Deut. 34. 5.) and Joſhuah (Chap. 24. 29.) and David (Pſal. 18. 1.) and other holy men are called the ſervants of the Lord.

called] He expreſſeth here his calling, partly becauſe it was extraordinary; not of man, nor by man, but immediately by Jeſus Chriſt (Gal. 1. 1.): partly to ſhew the Romanes preſently in the beginning that what he wrote to them in this Epiſtle was done according to the duty of his calling, and that he had good warrant and commiſſion for it.

Apoſtle] The word Apoſtle is derived from ἀποστέλλω, and ſignifieth a Legat or Ambaſſadour of Chriſt ſent to declare the Goſpel to all nations, and ſuch a one was Saint Paul, who had a generall Commiſſion to preach both to Jew and Gentile, though ſpecially by the appointment of God with the conſent of both parties the Goſpel of the uncircumciſion was committed to Paul, as the Goſpel of circumciſion to Peter, Galat. 2. 7.

ſeparated] See Acts 13. 2. Or, ſet apart for. From his mothers wombe in Gods appointment (Gal. 1. 15.); but actually ſet apart by the command of the holy Ghoſt to preach the Goſpel among the Gentiles (Act. 13. 2.) In the word ſeparate he ſeemeth to allude to the name of Phariſee, which ſignifieth a man ſeparate; of which Sect he was before his converſion: and hereby he implyeth that he is ſtill a ſeparated man, but to a better purpoſe, namely, to the preaching of the Goſpel of Chriſt.

V. 2. promiſed] Or, foreſhewed. Shewed before in the types of the Law, and promiſed before in the words of the Prophets which were ſince the world began.

V. 3. made] See Gal. 4. 4. In regard of his humane nature, which is a true creature aſſumed by the Sonne of God in the unity of his perſon. He uſeth the word made here and Gal. 4. 4. rather then born, to intimate his miraculous incarnation whereby he took fleſh of a pure virgin.

ſeed] That is, of the ſubſtance of the Virgin Mary, who was of Davids poſteritie.

fleſh] That is, his humane nature (Joh. 1. 14. 1 Tim. 3. 16.) fleſh being a part, is by a Synecdoche taken for the whole man.

V. 4. declared] Gr. determined. Not made the Sonne of God as he was truly made the ſonne of man; but declared to be the Sonne of God. The word in the originall ſignifieth more then a bare declaration, namely, a declaration by a ſolemn ſentence, or definitive judgement, Pſal. 2. 7. I will declare the decree: the Lord hath ſaid unto me, Thou art my Sonne.

with power] Gr. in power.

ſpirit] That is, according to his Divine nature called Spirit. 1 Tim. 3. 16. Heb. 9. 14.

holineſſe] Or ſanctification; that is, holy in himſelf, and maketh us holy by his merit and vertue. Heb. 2. 11.

reſurrection from the dead] Gr. reſurrection of the dead. The godhead was formerly veiled under the infirmity of the fleſh, but in the reſurrection, and after it was manifeſted in Chriſt in the glory of divine power, and by effects moſt admirable. 2 Cor. 13. 4.

V. 5. grace and apoſtleſhip] Either he uſeth here a figure, ἓν διὰ δυοῖν, and meaneth the grace and eminent gift of being an Apoſtle: or by grace he meaneth the favour of God, and pardon for his former offence in perſecuting the Church; or ſupernaturall gifts to qualifie him for an Apoſtle, or grace for his own converſion and Apoſtleſhip for the converſion of others.

for obedience to the faith] Or, to the obedience of faith. To bring the Gentiles to the obedience of Chriſt and faith, Act. 26. 16. or to make the Gentiles to ſubmit by faith to receive the Goſpel, whereby Chriſt raigneth over men. Act. 6. 7.

name] That his name might be known and glorified by them; or for him in his name, by his authoritie and commiſſion.

V. 6. called] Outwardly by the Word, and inwardly by the Spirit: for in the next verſ. he calleth them the beloved of God; and afterwards Saints.

V. 7. Grace to you, and peace] Either by Grace he underſtands all ſpirituall and ſupernaturall; and by Peace, all temporall bleſſings, agreeable to the ſignification of the Hebrew Shalom; which implies happineſſe, or proſperous ſucceſſe in all things: or by Grace, Gods free will and favour; and by Peace, the fruit and enjoying of the ſame; which brings peace of conſcience, tearmed Chriſts peace, Joh. 16. 33. and peace with God, Rom. 5. 1.

V. 8. for you all] Gr. Tec. Or, concerning you all.

whole world] That is, ſpread and made known to the Churches of the world, A figurative expreſſion, yet thus farre it hath ground in the letter; that there was a reſort to Rome from all parts of the world, and every one might relate of it in his own countrey.

V. 9. With my ſpirit] Or, in my ſpirit. That is, from my heart and inward affection; or in my ſpirit, that is, in my ſoul, which is as the ſpirituall temple, wherein God is worſhipped, and ſerved by the faithfull.

that] Or, how.

V. 10. will of God] This he addeth, for that in the publiſhing of the Goſpel, he ſtill followed the order, which God preſcribed him by his Spirit.

V. 12. comforted] Or, admoniſhed. as Heb. 12. 5. For the Greek beareth both alike; and though Paul were never ſo excellent, yet he might be inſtructed; or at leaſt admoniſhed by the Church: for the Angels themſelves received more particular knowledge by the Church of the manifold wiſdome of God; Epheſ. 3. 10. 1 Pet. 1. 12.

with you] Or, in you.

V. 13. but was] Or, and was.

let hitherto] Sometimes by accidentall difficulties, ſometimes by the expreſſe commandement of God, Act. 16. 7.

fruit among you] Or, in you. Of my miniſtery and calling to be an Apoſtle of Chriſt among the Gentiles to convert them unto him; or at leaſt to confirme them more and more in their faith; or that I might make my miniſtery to fructifie among you Romanes to the advancement of the glory of Chriſt, and ſalvation of his Church.

among] Or, in.

V. 14. I am debter] That is, obliged by my Apoſtolicall charge to ſeek the ſalvation of All, and to communicate the talent unto them, which I received from God to that purpoſe, to the utmoſt of my power, without diſtinction of either nation, or condition of men, 1 Cor. 9. 16, 17.

V. 16. aſhamed] I am not faint-hearted; I do not ſeek to withdraw my ſelfe or ſhrink back from the publiſhing of the Goſpel, as men are wont to do in things whereof they are aſhamed.

power of God] That is, the onely and moſt effectuall means to ſave men by faith in Chriſt ſet forth in the ſame; whereas man of his own nature was voyd of ſtrength thereunto, Rom. 5. 6. and the law was weak through the fleſh, Rom. 8. 3. 1 Cor. 1. 14. 24.

Jew firſt] As unto that nation to which it was requiſite the Goſpel ſhould be firſt preached, Act. 13. 46.

to the Greek] This word Greek is ſometimes ſet in Saint Paul againſt the word Jew, ſo it ſignifies the Gentiles in generall, the greater part whereof and the neereſt and beſt known to the Jews were in thoſe dayes Grecians both by nation and language; ſometimes as it is ſet againſt the word Barbarian, Coloſſ. 3. 11. and ſo it ſignifieth the civiller and learneder ſort of Greeks; and in this ſenſe Athens was tearmed ἑλλάδος ἑλλάς; that is, the Greece of Greece.

V. 17. righteouſneſſe of God] Of Chriſt given to us by God, and received by faith; or it is called the righteouſneſſe of God, becauſe God ordained his Sonne true God, to fulfill and procure the ſame, imparting it of meer grace to his elect; and receiving it for their abſolution: for this is that everlaſting righteouſneſſe which is able to ſubſiſt before Gods judgement, Dan.9. 24. Or laſtly, becauſe it is the accompliſhment of all his promiſes; for ſo is the righteouſneſſe of God ſometimes taken for his faithfulneſſe and mercy, Rom.3.26.

faith to faith] That is, from one degree to another, ſo that according as faith doth more and more encreaſe and get ſtrength, the more likewiſe it is aſſured of that righteouſneſſe: or the revelation of the righteouſneſſe is received by a continuall act of faith which muſt never ceaſe till it arrive to its accompliſhment, to wit, in the life eternall, Pſal.84.7.

The juſt ſhall live by faith] Or, the juſt by faith ſhall live. See Hab.2.4. Gal.3.11. Heb.10.38. Either the juſt ſhall live by his faith; or he that is juſt by faith ſhall live; which well agrees with the Hebrew, Hab.2.4. and likewiſe with the principall drift of the Apoſtle. Here he proveth that man obtaineth life and ſalvation by the Goſpell; foraſmuch as the Goſpell offereth unto us the onely cauſe of life; namely, the true righteouſneſſe, which is that of Chriſt imputed to man by grace, and embraced of him by a lively faith, whereunto the allegation out of Habakkuk is pertinent: for the Prophet attributing unto faith the obtaining and poſſeſſing ſpirituall life, doth conſequently attribute unto the ſame the meanes of getting that righteouſneſſe which is the onely cauſe of life, Gal.3.26.

V.18. ungodlineſſe and unrighteouſneſſe] Under ungodlineſſe are comprehended all ſinnes repugnant to the firſt Table; under unrighteouſneſſe all ſinnes againſt the ſecond Table.

who hold] The Greek word ſignifieth a forcible holding; and we may render it an enſlaving the truth by their perverſeneſſe and malice; whereby ſhe is ſo let and hindered that ſhe cannot exerciſe her command over their actions.

the truth] By truth, he meaneth all the light which is left in man ſince the fall; eſpecially thoſe common notions of God, his nature, power and will, imprinted in man by nature; as alſo the knowledge of morall good and evill.

in unrighteouſneſſe] That is, unjuſtly ſmothering the truth; or that do contrary to all juſtice and equitie, which requireth that we give unto God that belongeth unto him. And they may be ſaid truely to withhold the truth in unrighteouſneſſe, who ſuppreſſe it, forcing their own minds as knowing better then they do; like Medea in the Poet, video meliora proboq́, deteriora ſequor.

V. 19. manifeſt in them] Or, to them. That is, in the inwards of their mind or conſcience; or elſe in them, that is, among them; namely, their wiſe and learned ones, who did leave a number of cleare and judicious Eſſayes and Sentences hereof in their writings, although they did contrary to the ſame.

hath ſhewed] Partly by the light of nature in their conſciences, partly by the conſideration of the creature of God, whereby his attributes are evidently notified, and after a ſort taſted and felt, Pſal.34.8. Pſal.19.2. Pſal.148.4,5,6. Act.14.17. Act.17.27.

V. 20. ſo that they are] Or, that they may be.

without excuſe] The Apoſtles meaning is not, that God gave them that knowledge to that end and purpoſe to make them unexcuſable: for they might catch even at that for an excuſe: neither doth he intimate that they being led by that divine light of nature might thereby come into favour with God, but that their own reaſon did condemn them of wickedneſſe both againſt God and men: Or, he ſo farre revealed the truth unto them that they cannot be excuſed, viz. before the righteous judgement of God, as if they had not knowne that which either they did, or might have knowne.

V. 21. as God] As it belonged to the divine Majeſtie, according to that very knowledge they had of him.

vain] By the curioſitie of their conceits, being fallen off to vaine apprehenſions of God, and of his worſhip, which they framed not according to the knowledge they had of God; but ſutable to the diſpoſitions of their perverted minds, in deviſing ſo many ſtrange and different worſhips; and in ſetting up ſo many fabulous and idle deities, whereby the knowledge of God became ſtill more and more obſcured.

imaginations] Or, diſputes, or reaſonings.

darkened] Epheſ.4.18.

V. 22. Profeſſing] He ſpeaketh of the Philoſophers and Wiſards among the heathen, who carried a ſemblance of wiſdome in their diſcourſes, and ſeemed to be much better minded then others; but yet did ſtill follow the perverſeneſſe and vanitie of others.

V. 23. And changed the glory of the uncorruptible God, &c. Pſal. 106.20. Ezek.8.10.

V. 24. Wherefore] The contempt of Religion is the fountain of all miſchief.

God] For their ſuperſtitions, and the diſhonour they offered to him, he abandoned them, and did not bridle their ſwarving deſires; but let them have their full ſwinge: and moreover by his juſt judgement more and more deprived them of thoſe gifts of nature which they abuſed and ſlighted.

gave them up] As a juſt Judge, leaving them over to Satan who tempted and led them to all iniquitie: as they diſhonoured God by their Idolatrie; ſo God made them ignominious; delivering them up to the unclean ſpirit and their own naturall corruption.

uncleanneſſe] Idolatrie being ſpirituall uncleanneſſe, is commonly followed with corporall; as you ſhall ſee theſe two ſinnes joyned together, Numb.25. 1,2. Revel. 17.1,2,10. As on the contrary, religious Kings, as namely Aſa, reformed both theſe abominations together, 1.King.15. taking away both the Idols, and male ſtews.

through the luſts] Or, in the luſts.

between themſelves] Or, in themſelves.

V. 25. more then the Creator] Or, beſides. For though they ſometimes worſhipped the true Creator, yet their idolatrous worſhip of the creature farre exceeded it. Or, more then, in this place is not taken comparatively, but excluſively; as when Chriſt ſaith in the parable, The publican went home rather juſtified, then the phariſee: the meaning is, he went home juſtified, and not the other: ſo the Apoſtles meaning in this place ſeemes to be, They worſhipped the creature, and not the Creator: at the leaſt the major part did ſo, if not all.

V. 26. vile affections] That is, diſhonourable: for as we are exhorted, 1.Theſſ.4.4,5. to poſſeſſe our veſſels in honour; that is, to keepe our bodies from all uncleanneſſe: ſo on the contrary, thoſe that give themſelves unto uncleannes diſhonour both themſelves and their bodies; eſpecially thoſe who are active and paſſive in ſuch filthineſſe as the Apoſtle afterwards inſtanceth in.

againſt] Or, beſide.

V. 27. And likewiſe alſo the men, &c.] Gen.19.5. Lev.18.22.

V. 28. to retain] Or, to acknowledge.

a reprobate minde] Or, a minde voide of judgement. Into a perverſe and froward minde, whereby it cometh to paſſe that the light of conſcience being once put out, and having almoſt no more remorſe of ſinne, men runne headlong into all kinde of miſchief. The word in the Originall ἀδόκιμος, may be taken either actively or paſſively; actively for a mind which diſapproveth all good courſes, or doth not prove or try good or bad; nor put difference between that which is vile, and that which is honourable; or paſſively for a minde diſallowed of God: and ſo in this ſenſe it is a metaphor taken from Goldſmiths trying metals, and making choyce of that which is good and precious, and rejecting and reprobating that which is vile.

V. 29. unrighteouſneſſe, &c.] The Apoſtle here reckoneth divers kinds of vices; not that every man is ſubject to all theſe, but ſome men to all of them, and all to ſome of them: and therefore that none may ſtand upon his innocencie before God, but that all need, and muſt flie to the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt.

envie, murder] In the Originall there is an elegant Paronomaſia, as in the verſ. following; which as it ſheweth the lawfull uſe of rhetoricall figures in Sermons & holy diſcourſes; ſo the very affinitie of the words may give us occaſion to conſider how eaſie it is to fall from one of theſe vices to the other; for he that is ἀσύνετος, that is, underſtandeth not the nature and conditions of covenants, will ſoone be ἀσύνθετος, that is, a covenant-breaker: and he that is tranſported with envie, hath for the moſt part his feet ſwift to ſhed blood: as Cain firſt was guiltie of φθόνος, that is, envie, and after of φόνος, murder: firſt he envied his brother Abel, and after ſlew him, Gal.5.21.

malignitie] Or, ill conditions. That is, an evill diſpoſition; ſuch a perverſitie of minde and nature as is apt to conſtrue all things to the worſt.

V. 30. haters of God] Or, hated of God. The word in the Original, θεοστυγεῖς, may indifferently be rendred haters of God, or hatefull to God, and hated of him; yet ſeeing the Apoſtle here rehearſeth the moſt hainous and raigning ſinnes among the Gentiles, the former ſignification ſeemeth beſt to fit the text. Pſal.81.15.

deſpightfull] Gr. injurious.

V. 31. without naturall affection] Or, unſociable. The Greek word implyeth properly the affection and love which is between parents and children; and the ſinne here taxed by the Apoſtle, did likewiſe reign among the Gentiles, who ſacrificed in ſome places their aged parents, and ſometimes their children unto their Idols; expoſed them to ruine, and deſtroyed them though not guiltie of any capitall crime. 2.Tim.3.3.

implacable] Or, truce-breakers.

V. 32. have pleaſure in them] Or, conſent with them. Approve and commend them, Pſal.10.3. Pſal.49. 18. This is even the higheſt pitch of wickedneſſe, not onely to do evill, but alſo to take delight in ſeeing it committed by others: ſuch come neare the malignitie of the devill, who takes pleaſure in evill, becauſe evill, and inſtigateth others to the like without any bait of a falſe ſeeming good, or ſenſuall pleaſure, which in other ſinnes blindeth men, and allureth them to the commiſſion thereof.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 1. THerefore then*] Or, Wherefore then. He convinceth them which would ſeeme to be exempt out of the number of other mens faults, and ſaith, that they are leaſt of all to be excuſed; for if they were well and narrowly ſearched, as God ſurely will ſearch them, they themſelves will be found guilty in thoſe things which they reprehend and puniſh in others: ſo that in condemning others, they pronounce ſentence againſt themſelves.

that judgeſt] That doſt check, correct and puniſh others. Here the Apoſtle taxeth ſuch among the Gentiles as either were lawgivers and Judges amongſt them, or led a more ſtrict and auſtere life then the reſt, as ſome of the Philoſophers did; whereby they ſeemed to judge and condemne the practice of others, when as yet they were inwardly full of hatred, envie, arrogancy, &c. and committed the ſame ſinnes in ſecret when they thought they could hide them from the eye of man: all theſe mens ſeeming wiſdome and juſtice ſerves but to condemne them; and therefore though they thought themſelves exempted from the ordinary ſort of men, yet they are in the ſame, or a worſe condition with them: and if they will be ſaved, muſt have recourſe to the onely righteouſneſſe of the Goſpel, ſeeing that their owne is nothing but a vizard or falſe ſhew.

for wherein thou judgeſt another, &c.] Math. 7. 2.

V. 2. we are ſure] Gr. we know.

truth] That is, uprightly and juſtly; not according to the outward appearance, but as things are indeed. God regardeth not the outward ſhew and profeſſion of leading a vertuous and commendable life, but ſtrictly examineth the heart and the thoughts, words and works, proceeding from thence, Joh. 7. 24. Luk. 16. 15.

V. 4. deſpiſeſt thou] Haſt no care at all to employ the ſame to the right and proper uſe, which is to give thee ſpace of repentance, and afford thee many inducements thereunto; but contrarily thou doſt profane them, and draweſt occaſions from them to ſtrengthen thy ſelf in evil as if thou ſhouldeſt never be puniſhed, becauſe God hath ſo long tolerated thee.

riches] That is, the multiplicity and variety of Gods outward bleſſings. A phraſe uſed by the heathen, alſo, as we may ſee in Simplicius his Diſputation de bono & malo. [illegible]. Here the Apoſtle eſpecially argueth againſt thoſe who were of opinion that their caſe ſtood not ill with God, foraſmuch as God bleſſed them many wayes in this world, and gave them abundance of wealth and honour, as he did to the Romanes above other people, who had the command over all nations.

repentance] Sith the Apoſtle ſpeaketh as yet of men under the law of nature, without the light of the word of God, and the efficacy of the ſpirit of regeneration, amongſt whom there could be no true or ſaving converſion unto God: it ſeemeth that repentance here ſignifieth onely an outward forbearing of groſſer ſinnes, and changing their vitious courſes into ſuch as were morally honeſt and commendable. Or it may be meant alſo of true repentance: For the favours of God allure men to their dutie to God, Hoſ. 11. 4.

V. 5. treaſureſt up] See Jam. 5. 3. Heapeſt up Gods judgements upon thee in manner of a treaſure, which encreaſeth ſtill by daily addition.

Wrath] That is, puniſhment, which ſhall be at the laſt day inflicted to the full.

day] and the day of. The laſt day, when God ſhall reveale and judge the ſinnes of all men, even thoſe which are moſt ſecret, 2 Theſſ. 1. 7, 8. Rev. 20. 12, 13.

revelation] Gr. Tec. the retribution.

V. 6. Who will render, &c.] Pſal. 62. 12. Math. 16. 27. Rev. 22. 12.

V. 7. by patient continuance] Gr. according to patient continuance That is, perſeverance with an equall and conſtant tenour of holineſſe and righteouſneſſe according to the commandement, Deut. 27. 26.

glory] Which followeth good works: which he layeth not out before us as though there were any that could attain to ſalvation by his own ſtrength; but by laying this condition of ſalvation before us, which no man can performe; to bring men to Chriſt, who alone juſtifieth beleevers, as he himſelfe concludeth, Chap. 2. 21, 22. following.

V. 8. contentious] Gr. them of contentiouſneſſe. Kicking and ſtriving againſt the righteouſneſſe of God, Hoſ. 4. 4. chiefly by alleadging and objecting their own righteouſneſſe, and outward obſerving of diſcipline, which is uſuall with hypocrites.

truth] The light and knowledge of morall good imprinted in their ſoules by nature, Rom. 1. 18, 19.

indignation, and wrath] Gr. Tec. wrath and indignation.

V. 9. Tribulation] Or, affliction.

doth evil] Gr. worketh out evil.

Jew firſt] Though God inflicteth puniſhment indifferently upon all tranſgreſſors, without diſtinction either of nation or perſon: yet for all that the judgement of God begins at his own houſe; and thoſe that have had more knowledge and do not accordingly, ſhall receive the heavier puniſhment: Amos 3. 2. Luk. 12. 47. Matth. 11. 22. 1 Pet. 4. 17.

Gentile] Or, Greek.

V. 10. peace] By peace he meaneth according to the Hebrew ſignification of the word, happineſſe, health, and ſalvation.

worketh good] Or, doth good.

Gentile] Gr. Greek.

V. 11. there is no reſpect, &c.] Deut. 10. 17. 2 Chron. 19. 7. Job 34. 19. Act. 10. 34. Gal. 2. 6. Epheſ. 6. 9. Coloſſ. 3. 25. 1 Pet. 1. 17.

reſpect of perſons] That is, he regardeth not the qualitie or outward condition; he meaſureth not men by their country, nation, power, riches, or honour; either to receive them, or to caſt them away. The Greek word ſignifieth as well countenance, as perſon, and the ſenſe comes all to one; for by countenance we are to underſtand the outward appearance of men in the world, or thoſe things by which men are outwardly valued and eſteemed: Acts 10. 34. 1 Sam. 16. 7.

V. 12. periſh without law] Be judged and condemned by the teſtimony of their own conſcience.

V. 13. not the hearers, &c.] Matth. 7. 21. Jam. 1. 22.

hearers] Not thoſe who onely know the law, and boaſt of it, and fulfill it not. For as much then as the law cannot bring ſalvation to man by the knowledge and profeſſion of it, as the Jews do beleeve; and none among them can be found who liveth anſwerable to his knowledge: it followeth that the Jews are comprehended in the ſame malediction with the Gentiles, and have as much need to ſeek to Chriſt for righteouſneſſe as they.

juſtified] Shall be pronounced juſt before Gods judgement ſeat, which is true indeed if any ſuch could be found that had fulfilled the law; but ſeeing Abraham himſelf was not juſtified by the law, but by faith; it followeth that no man can be juſtified by works.

V. 14. not the law] That is, the written law; for they have the law of nature imprinted in their ſouls.

things contained in the law] Gr. the things of the law. To wit, to reſtrain the outward man, and ſtirre up in him a deſire of vertue and morall honeſty, and preſcribe and follow ſome things which God commands in his law.

law unto themſelves] In commanding or forbidding that which the law of God commands and forbids.

V. 15. their conſcience alſo bearing witneſſe] Or, the conſcience witneſſing with them. Becauſe the conſcience is nothing elſe but the correſpondencie of the ſpirit of man unto the law, to bind or looſe him; to accuſe or excuſe him; to condemne or abſolve him; therefore ſince the Gentiles have a conſcience, they muſt have a law alſo.

their thoughts] Or, their reaſonings. Chap. 1. 21.

the mean while, &c.] Or, between themſelves.

excuſing one another] Gr. defending.

V. 16. when God] Gr. Tec. in which God.

my goſpel] As my doctrine witneſſeth which I am appointed to preach. From this text of Saint Paul it ſeemed that the ancients teamed the writings of Saint Paul by the name of his Goſpel: as namely, Clemens in his Epiſtle to the Corinthians: Take bleſſed Pauls Epiſtle into your hands; mark what he writeth in the beginning of his goſpel: [illegible].

V. 17. Behold, thou] Gr. Tec. But if thou. From hence forward the Apoſtle deales eſpecially againſt the Iews that boaſted ſtill of their off-ſpring, their knowledge of the law of God, their circumciſion, and other outward advantages whereon they relyed; and proveth that they are no more to be juſtified by theſe before God, then the Gentiles are by the law of nature.

makeſt thy boaſt of God] Or, glorieſt in God

V. 18. approveſt the things that are more excellent] Or, trieſt the things that differ. Or indifferent: that is, thou art able to judge what things are commanded, what things are forbidden, or what is truly good, which thou art to follow, in ſtead of that falſe good which carnall reaſon or ſenſe doth preſent unto thee, Phil. 1. 10.

inſtructed out of the law] Gr. catechiſed out of. Luk. 1. 4. Gal. 6. 6. Word for word according to the Greek; catechiſed from a child; carefully taught and tutored.

V. 19. guide of the blinde] Wiſe men onely in Scripture are teamed Seers, פקחים (Exod. 23. 8. The gift blindeth the wiſe, (Hebrew) the Seers) are all fooles, blinde.

V. 20. babes] Thoſe that have little or no knowledge, like children, Matt. 11. 25. 1 Cor. 13. 11. In this ſenſe the word is alſo taked by the heathen, as in that proverbiall ſpeech delivered by Heſiod. [illegible].

forme of knowledge] The way to teach and enforme others in the knowledge of the truth; for the word in the originall is not [illegible] but [illegible], which ſignifieth a pattern to work by; or a perfect frame; not onely of what belongeth unto the true ſervice of God in it ſelf, but likewiſe of all that which we comprehend and judge of it in our ſelves; it may be rendered a ſet manner or modell of knowledge.

V. 21. doſt thou ſteal] That is, by ſubtile and ſiniſter wayes and practiſes draw the goods of others unto thy ſelf; which the Jews were ever much taxed withall, and ſtill are at this day.

V. 22. commit ſacriledge] Some here make a queſtion, why the Apoſtle changeth the word, and ſaith not as before; Thou which ſaiſt a man ſhall not ſteal, doſt thou ſteal? Thou which ſaiſt a man ſhall not commit adultery, doeſt thou commit adultery? So here, thou which abhorreſt idols, doſt thou commit idolatry?

idolatry ? he ſaith not ſo, but, Doſt thou commit ſacriledge ? varying the crime: Hereunto a double anſwer may be given, firſt, that the Apoſtle uſeth an aggravation, as if he ſhould ſay, Thou which abhorreſt idols doſt thou commit a worſe ſin, to wit, ſacriledge? Secondly, it may be anſwered, That idolatry is ſpirituall ſacriledge, becauſe it robbeth God of his honour; for if by the Imperiall law in the Code, titulo de crimine ſacrilegii, it is defined ſacriledge, Imperatori eripere quod ejus eſt, to take away from the Emperour any thing that is his; it ought to be much more accounted ſacriledge to take away from God that which is his.

V. 23. breaking] Gr. tranſgreſſing.

among the Gentiles] Or, in the Gentiles.

through you] For your ſake, by your ſins and the ſins of your forefathers.

as it is written] Iſa.52.5. Ezek.36.20.23.

V. 25. keep the law] Gr. do the law.

breaker] Gr. tranſgreſſor.

V. 26. righteouſneſſe of the law] Gr. righteous ordinances of the law.

counted for circumciſion] Shall not the uncircumciſed be in as good ſtate as if he were circumciſed ? Not that the Apoſtle doth abſolutely reject circumciſion before it was aboliſhed, but he here dealeth with the Jews that followed the doctrine of the Phariſees, and placed their righteouſneſſe in keeping the outward and ceremoniall worſhip of God; otherwiſe circumciſion was a ſigne and ſeal of the juſtification by faith, Rom.4.11. and was fulfilled, and conſequently aboliſhed by Chriſt, together with other ceremonies and ſhadows.

V. 27. fulfill the law] He ſpeaketh not as if there were any that had fulfilled in all reſpects, for that is expreſly denyed, Rom. 3.9. but this he ſaith to convince the Jews, that they muſt as well as the Gentiles ſeeke for righteouſneſſe out of themſelves, in Chriſt, who alone hath fulfilled the law outward in the fleſh] Gr. openly in the fleſh.

V. 28. outwardly] Gr. openly.

V. 29. inwardly] Gr. in ſecret.

not the letter] In any outward ſigne or ceremony, which are like unto ſome writing or picture, without any power, life, or motion, Rom.7.6. 2 Cor.3.6 7.

not of men, but of God] That is, hath not its originall from the abilities or works of men, but from God, who wrought the ſame in them by his Spirit, Rom. 9.16. 1 Cor. 3.7. 2 Cor. 4.6. or which hath the approbation, not of man, but of God, 2 Cor. 10.18.

CHAP. III.

Verſ. 1. ADvantage] Since both Jew and Gentile lie both under the ſame malediction, and the Jew in regard of his greater knowledge and outward profeſſion of obſerving the law, if he fail in the practice thereof, (as he proved in the former Chapter the beſt of them do) is like to receive more and ſmarter ſtripes, what benefit or preferment hath the Jew above the Gentile ?

profit] If ſo be that there is no vertue in it, for want of the perfect obſervation of the law, whereof Circumciſion was but a holy ſigne.

V. 2. chiefly] Or, firſt.

Chiefly] Foraſmuch as the Jews have received of old the promiſes of God in Chriſt, whereof the Circumciſion was a Seal, according to the true order of God, Rom. 1.11. They had the firſt offer: and this is the chiefeſt and foundation of all other advantages, which the Apoſtle doth ſet forth more at large, Chap.9.4. Epheſ.1.11,12.

Oracles of God] The inſtruments, deeds, and evidences of the covenant, contained in the writings of Moſes and the Prophets, Pſal.147.19,20. Acts 7.38. The oracles of God were committed to the Jewes, that is, intruſted as a pawn or precious pledge which they have kept and preſerved for the whole Church; and in this regard S. Auſtine and other of the Fathers terme the Jews Scriniarios Chriſtianorum, the Regiſters or Record keepers of the Chriſtians; for they, diſperſed among all nations, bear as it were before them the Scriptures, thoſe glaſſes whereby we Chriſtians clearly ſee the right way to heaven, and their manifold errours and wanderings.

V. 3. faith of God,&c.] That is, if any do ſay that this advantage was loſt by the unbelief of a great part of the people, the anſwer is, That the faithfulneſſe of God and his promiſes and covenants were ſtill verified and performed in his elect, in whoſe behalf they were made, notwithſtanding their manifold defects, which God alwayes ſupplyeth by his grace and mercy, and thereby his glory was the more illuſtrated.

V. 4. God forbid] Gr. be it not, or, farre be it from us ſo to think or ſay.

yea, let] Or, but, let.

let God be true] That is, be confeſſed and acknowledged true in maintaining of his covenant, and fulfilling his promiſe, notwithſtanding the unbelief of ſome, and the unworthineſſe of all.

every man a lyar] Pſal. 116.11.

That thou mighteſt be juſtified in thy ſayings] Pſal.51.4.

juſtified] Acknowledged to be righteous and faithfull.

overcome] That is, found ſo clear, and without blemiſh in thy judgements, that all mouthes ſhall be ſtopped, Pſal. 107.42. David breakes out into this confeſſion upon the conſideration of his ſinne againſt God, and the promiſe of forgiveneſſe which Nathan had declared unto him.

judged] Or, judgeſt. The Greek bears it either way, but the Hebrew Text requires the active rather, which alſo doth better agree with the ſcope of Paul; which is to ſhew, that God remaineth pure and righteous ſtill in judging, that is, in puniſhing the ſinnes of men in the children of diſobedience, according to their deſerts, as alſo, in pardoning according to his promiſe; which is likewiſe an act of Gods juſtice, though it be done in mercy, Matth. 12.20. and the truth of God in keeping his promiſes, is alſo expreſly called juſtice and righteouſneſſe, in Scriptures. Pſal.143.10. 1 Joh.1.9.

V. 5. taketh vengeance] Gr. who inferreth or inflicteth anger.

ſpeak as a man] I ſpeak not theſe words in mine own perſon, as though I thought ſo; but this is the talk of mans wiſdom, which is not ſubject to the will of God.

V. 6. God forbid] See Verſ. 4.

How ſhall God] How is it poſſible that there ſhould be iniquity in God, the Soveraign Judge of all the world; whoſe will is the abſolute rule of Juſtice ?

V. 7. through my lie] Or, in my lie.

V. 8. not rather] The Apoſtle anſwereth to the former objection by way of diſdain: as if he ſhould ſay, Why, if this objection were of any force, might not as well the profane wretch break out into this extremity of impudence, why then let him lay up as much matter of glory as may be by the boundleſſe multitude of all manner of wickedneſſe. But there is not that deſperate ſoule in the world that dares go thus farre, for the conſcience of the moſt wicked, dictateth unto them, that they ſhall be judged according to the manifeſt and publique law of God, as the rule and ſquare of all their actions, and not according to his ſecret providence, which ordaineth the permiſſion of ſin it ſelf for certain ends, but much different from thoſe of men.

damnation is juſt] By theſe words the Apoſtle ſheweth, that he is ſo farre from approving of ſuch conſequences as were made by profane ſlanderers of the truth of God, mentioned verſ. 7, 8. that he threateneth them with the judgement of God that make them.

V. 9. No in no wiſe] Gr. not altogether.

proved] Gr. charged.

under ſinne] Guiltie of ſinne, under the power and penalty of ſinne.

V. 10. written] By all theſe places the Apoſtle proveth, that not onely the Gentiles, but the Jews alſo are unrighteous in themſelves before God; moſt of them ſpeak of the unregenerate among the people of the Jews, among whom there was alwayes a very great number; and therefore theſe reproofs of the prophets were ſtill in force, and the Apoſtle makes uſe of them; to ſhew, that without the grace of God, and the ſpeciall working of the Spirit, all are lyable to them.

There is none righteous, no not one] Pſal.14.1,2,3.

V. 11. there is none that ſeeketh after God] Pſal.53.2.

ſeeketh after God] Or, ſeeketh out God.

V. 12. become unprofitable] Unfit to do any good, like rotten and unſavory things that are caſt out of doors. The Prophet takes his ſimilitude from corrupted wines, or meats putrefied and unſavory, good for nothing.

V. 13. Their throat is an open ſepulchre,&c.] Pſal. 5.9.

the poiſon of aſps is under their lips] Pſal. 140.3.

V. 14. Whoſe mouth is full of curſing and bitterneſſe] Pſalme 10.7.

V. 15. Their feet are ſwift to ſhed blood] Prov. 1.16. Iſaiah 59.7,8.

V. 16. Deſtruction] Or contrition, according to the Greek; that is, breaking all to pieces; the word deſtruction is not here taken paſſively, but actively, for that deſtruction they bring upon others.

V. 17. way of peace] To live quietly themſelves, and to let others live quietly by them; they know not how to lead an innocent and peaceable life.

V. 18. There is no fear of God before their eyes] Pſal. 36.1.

fear of God] The fear of God is the ground and fountain of all other vertues, with the want whereof the Apoſtle concludeth, not as if the vices above mentioned did alwayes break out with like force in all naturall men, but becauſe the corrupt fountain of all theſe is within them, and that ſome of them are ever to be diſcerned in their life and converſation. See Gen.20.11. Mal.3.5.

V. 19. under the law] Under the ſpeciall juriſdiction of it, or under that outward covenant, whereof the law was as it were the contract or condition to be performed on their parts. Theſe words are uſed by the apoſtle, to ſhew, that he chargeth theſe points home upon the Jews; and them eſpecially, becauſe God ſpeaketh to them directly and immediately in his word by the prophets.

mouth may be ſtopped] That is, ſilenced. Theſe things I propound after this manner, that not onely the Gentiles, but the Jews alſo, a nation ſo much priviledged by God above others, might humble themſelves in the confeſſion of their ſinnes, and in the acknowledgement, that all the good that is in them dependeth on the ſole mercy of God.

guilty before God] Or, ſubject to the judgement of God.

V. 20. Therefore by the deeds] Becauſe man is utterly diſabled by ſinne to fulfill the law, either naturall or written, it can neither be a ground of hope, nor argument unto him, either of righteouſneſſe or of life: all the efficacie which it hath, is to diſcover unto him his iniquity, and without Gods mercy in Chriſt, to ſeal up his condemnation, Gal. 2. 16.

no fleſh] Fleſh is here taken for man, as in many other places, and furthermore hath her greater emphaſis, for it is put to ſhew the contrariety betwixt God and man; as if you would ſay, Man who is nothing but a piece of fleſh, defiled with ſin, and God who is a pure Spirit, and moſt perfect in himſelf.

juſtified] That is, abſolved before the judgement ſeat of God, and acquitted from ſinne and damnation, and ſo to be accounted righteous; ſo the word is taken, Job 9. 20. Rom. 8. 33, 34. Gal. 2. 16, 17. It cannot be here taken for making juſt, by infuſing righteouſneſſe or holineſſe; for there would be then no ſenſe nor truth in the words, if we thus interpret them, no fleſh can have righteouſneſſe infuſed into it before God.

in his ſight] Here is a ſecret ſetting of the righteouſneſſe which is before men, be they never ſo juſt, againſt the righteouſneſſe which can ſtand before God: now there is no righteouſneſſe can ſtand before God, but the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt onely.

V. 21. But now] After the coming of Chriſt, God hath clearly revealed the true righteouſneſſe, which he hath appointed and given unto man for his juſtification, according to the doctrine of all the prophets, viz. that of Chriſt, imputed to all that receive it by a lively faith, without any conſideration of the works of the law (in the point of juſtification) either naturall or written, and without any difference of nations, be they Jews or Gentiles.

V. 22. faith of Jeſus Chriſt] Gr. Tec. in Jeſus Chriſt. Which we yeeld to Jeſus Chriſt, or which faith reſteth upon him.

difference] Gr. diſtinction.

V. 23. all have ſinned] The remedy is common to all indifferently, becauſe on the other ſide the malady of ſinne is common unto all.

come ſhort] The Greek word ſignifieth properly to remain behind, or to come too ſhort of getting ſomething, as the prize in running of races; ſo likewiſe do all men come ſhort, that ſeek to obtain everlaſting life by their works.

glory of God] By the glory of God is meant that mark which we all ſhoot at, that is, everlaſting life; which ſtandeth in this, that we are made partakers of the glory of God. Or, by glory of God, is meant his image after which we were created, for ſo the word glory ſeemeth to be taken, 1 Cor. 11. 7.

V. 24. juſtified] From henceforward the Apoſtle deſcribeth all the cauſes, and the proprieties of juſtification revealed unto us in the Goſpel; the firſt and ſupreme cauſe is the undeſerved grace and favour of God; the moving and meritorious cauſe is redemption and reconciliation purchaſed by Chriſt, the inſtrumentall cauſe whereby the ſame is imputed, is faith in the blood of Chriſt; the finall is the glory of God in the declaration of his righteouſneſſe and faithfulneſſe; the property is, that all humane boaſting is excluded by it.

freely] Of his free gift and meer liberality.

through] Or, by.

redemption] The word is ſometime taken in a larger ſenſe for all manner of deliverance, but here it doth properly imply ſuch a deliverance, as is brought to paſſe by purchaſing or paying of a ranſome, according as Chriſt himſelf ſpeaketh, Matth. 20. 28. 1 Cor. 7. 23. 1 Pet. 1. 18.

V. 25. ſet forth] Or, fore-ordained. Firſt, in the eternall counſell, and after in the execution of the ſame in the fulneſſe of time; and laſtly, by preaching of the goſpel, 2 Tim. 1. 9, 10, 11. 1 Pet. 1. 20, 21, 22.

propitiation] Or, propitiatory, placatory or mercy ſeat: for the apoſtle ſeemeth to allude to the mercy ſeat or propitiatory made of pure gold, which covered the ark of the covenant, in which the tables of the law lay, which is called ἱλαστήριον, (the word here uſed) Heb. 9. 5. and it was a type of Chriſt, who by his puriſie and obedience covereth our tranſgreſſions of the law, from the ſight of God, and reconcileth us to him.

in his blood] The name of blood calleth us back to the figure of the old ſacrifices, the truth and ſubſtance whereof is in Chriſt.

for] Or, by.

remiſſion] Or, paſſing over.

that are paſt] Of thoſe ſinnes that were committed when we were his enemies.

through the forbearance] Gr. in the forbearance. Through his patient and ſuffering nature; or, word for word, according to the Greek, in the forbearance or the time of his patience; that is, when God did ſhew forth his goodneſſe in ſuſpending his judgements upon the world, not ſuffering them to periſh for their ſinnes, although he had not as yet fully opened the treaſure of his grace for an abſolute pardon, the clear manifeſtation whereof he reſerved for the time of the Goſpel, Rom. 16. 24. 26.

V. 26. at this time] Or, in this preſent ſeaſon.

that he might be juſt] That all might learn to acknowledge and approve this new way of proceeding of the juſtice of God in juſtifying him that is a ſinner in himſelf by faith in the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt. Or, the word juſt is here taken for true and faithfull, or, him who obſerveth ſtrict juſtice, who would not juſtifie man by any means, but by full payment and ſatisfaction.

which beleeveth in Jeſus] Gr. which is of the faith of Jeſus. In the Greek, word for word, juſtifying him who is of the faith of Jeſus; that is, who is of that number who renounce all confidence in their owne workes, and ſeek life and ſalvation by faith in Jeſus.

V. 27. boaſting] Who is he that can or dare boaſt of juſtification before God by his own righteouſneſſe? 1 Corinth. 1. 31. Epheſ. 2. 9.

law of faith] That is, the precept or doctrine of faith, which, according to the Hebrew manner of ſpeaking, is called a law, Eſa. 2. 5. Or by that new order or covenant of God which doth ſtrip man of all worth and righteouſneſſe of his own, and cloath him by grace with that of Chriſt.

V. 28. conclude] Gr. collect, or, gather by argument.

deeds of the law] Or, works of the law. Not onely ſuch as were done before his converſion, but after the ſame alſo, as is proved by the apoſtle in the next Chapter, by the example of Abraham and David.

V. 29. God of the Jews onely] God is ſaid to be their God in the Scripture phraſe, who are in covenant with him; whom he dearly loveth and tendereth.

V. 30. which] Or, who.

circumciſion] That is the circumciſed Jews: as likewiſe by uncircumciſion he meaneth the uncircumciſed Gentiles.

by faith] Or, of faith.

by faith] According to the originall. Of faith, or, out of faith. The apoſtle ſeems to diſtinguiſh of theſe two kindes of expreſſions, Of faith, and, Through faith; attributing the former to the Jews, the latter to the Gentiles; the former to the Jews, in whom, though they were adorned with many good qualities and graces above the Gentiles, yet God had onely regard to their faith, and out of that conſideration received them to mercy; the latter, to the Gentiles, who through faith paſſed as it were into a new ſpirituall eſtate.

V. 31. void] Do we utterly caſſate the law, and make it of no force or validity.

we ſtabliſh the law] Gr. Tec. we make it valid and ſufficient. In the edition of Tecla it is ἱστάνομεν, that is, we make the law ſufficient and effectuall to that end for which it was given: but if we read ἱστῶμεν, that is, we confirme and eſtabliſh the law; then the meaning is, we demonſtrate by the goſpel how firme and irrevocable it is, ſeeing God made Chriſt under the law, to make ſatisfaction to the law to redeem man; and by his fulfilling the law, to purchaſe to him a right to the life it promiſeth; Matth. 5. 17, 18. Gal. 4. 4. Moreover, God doth ſo renew thoſe that are juſtified by him, through the Spirit, that they endeavour to regulate their life according to all Gods commandments, Rom. 8. 1, 2, 3. Not that thereby they may be juſtified before God, but partly to performe their duty, and to teſtifie their thankfulneſſe unto him for this his ineſtimable benefit, and partly to be themſelves more and more aſſured of their juſtification in ſuch ſort, as the apoſtle after declareth, Chap. 6, 7, 8.

CHAP. IIII.

Verſ. 1. WHat ſhall we ſay then] That is, Seeing then that all men are under condemnation and cannot be juſtified, but by faith without works, Rom. 3. 28. it followeth that Abraham himſelf, the father and chief of all thoſe that enter into the covenant of grace, was not juſtified in any other manner. For although he did ſo much excell his progenie, yet he did not obtain life and glory by his own works, and that therefore his children cannot claime more advantage then he.

as pertaining to the fleſh] Theſe words may be either referred to father, or to found: if to father, the meaning is, what did Abraham the father of us Jews according to the fleſh finde? if they be referred to the latter word, found, the meaning is, what found he according to the fleſh, that is, according to his works that are ſeen outwardly, as the verſe following doth declare, and the word fleſh is alſo ſo taken, Phil. 3. 4.

found] Got, or obtained, as the word is taken, Hoſea 12. 8. and Matth. 11. 29.

V. 2. if Abraham] The reaſon ſtands thus, if Abraham had obtained any thing by way of juſtification by his own works, he ſhould have had ſomewhat whereof to glory before God: but he hath nothing, for the juſtification by faith which he obtained, ver. 7. doth ſtrip men of all ſelf-glory, Rom. 3. 27.

V. 3. Abraham beleeved God] See Gen. 15. 6. Gal. 3. 6. Jam. 2. 23.

2. 23. that is, the promiſe of God to be his ſhield, and great reward, and to give him an heir of his own body, Gen. 15.4, 5, and to multiply his ſeed, whereby not only his numerous poſteritie is to be underſtood according to the fleſh, but chiefly Chriſt his Sonne in whom all generations of the earth were to be bleſſed: ſee hereafter, Verſ. 11, 12, 13. Gal. 3.16.

V. 4. Now] Or, but.

to him that worketh] In opinion or hope to obtain or merit juſtification by his work: or to him that worketh, that is, goeth about this way of works, and grounds himſelf thereon, and expects thereby the reward of life promiſed in the Law.

not reckoned of grace] Or, according to favour. In caſe he ſhould have fulfilled the condition propounded of perfect obedience.

but of debt] Not indeed of an abſolute merit, and as a naturall equivalence, which can never be between God and man, nor betwixt the work and the reward: becauſe there is no proportion at all neither in the perſons, nor in the actions; but only by vertue of that voluntary covenant of God, Do this and thou ſhalt live.

V. 5. worketh not] That is, who not able to fulfill the condition of works, nor grounding himſelf thereon, taketh the other way to be ſaved, viz. that of faith in the mercy of God towards ſinners, whereby righteouſneſſe is beſtowed upon him, and he clothed therewith, and by vertue of the ſame abſolved from ſinne and condemnation.

juſtifieth the ungodly] That maketh him who is wicked in himſelf juſt in Chriſt.

his faith] Not conſidered in it ſelf as a work, but in its relation to Chriſt, and as an act of receiving him, and lively applying him to himſelf according as eating nouriſheth, that is, the meat eaten, Eſa. 55.1. Rom. 5.18, 19. 1 Cor. 1.3.

for] Or, to.

V. 7. Saying, Bleſſed] See Pſal 32.1. In the beginning of the 32. Pſalm: the argument which the Apoſtle draws from thence is undeniable. For, he that is juſtified by his works, the ſame hath no need at all of any pardon of ſinne to make him thereby bleſſed; and he who prayeth that God would not impute his ſinne unto him, the ſame prayeth withall that God would impute unto him the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, in regard theſe two cannot be ſeparated in the judgement of God. See Rom. 3.24. & 5.19. Eph. 1.7.

V. 9. Cometh this bleſſedneſſe] This pronouncing or making bleſſed. Wherby it appears that the word to pronounce bleſſed, and to make bleſſed, is taken by David for one and the ſame thing: and the reaſon is, that the ground and foundation of our bleſſedneſſe lyeth in the forgiveneſſe of our ſinnes, and the imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſſe.

ſign of circumciſion] Gr. Tec. he received circumciſion the ſeale. That is, circumciſion which is a ſign, as we ſay, the Sacrament of Baptiſme, for, Baptiſme which is a Sacrament.

a ſeal] Circumciſion was called before a ſign in reſpect of the outward ceremony, now S. Paul ſheweth the force and ſubſtance of that ſign, that is, to what end it is uſed; that is, not onely to ſignifie, but alſo to ſeal the righteouſneſſe of faith: whereby we come to poſſeſſe Chriſt himſelf: for the holy Ghoſt worketh that inwardly and indeed, which the Sacrament being joyned with the word doth outwardly repreſent.

might be the father] God was pleaſed ſo to diſpoſe both of the ſign and the time with Abraham, to ſhew that the Gentiles as well as the Jews are to be reputed true children of Abraham, and compriſed in the covenant made with him and his poſterity, ſo they followed his faith; whether they were circumciſed, as during the time of the ceremoniall law they were to be according to Gods order, or not circumciſed, to wit, after that God in ſtead of that had inſtituted another Sacrament, to wit, Baptiſme.

V. 13. heire of the world] That all the nations of the world ſhould be his children. Or, by the world, may be underſtood, the land of Canaan; a moſt renowned and fruitfull part of the world. Or, the words may carry this ſenſe, that he ſhould be reſtored as a ſon of God into the ſame condition and degree which Adam had before his fall, to be Lord over all the creatures, which was figured out to Abraham by the poſſeſſion of the land of Canaan, promiſed to him and his poſterity, and is performed in part by the juſt and comfortable enjoying of the creature, which God doth give unto his children as members of Chriſt, but it ſhall be perfectly accompliſhed in the kingdome of heaven. See the 1 Cor. 3.22, 23. 1 Tim. 4.3. Heb. 1.2.

through the law] For works that he had done. Or, upon the condition that he ſhould fulfill the law.

V. 14. of the law] If they be heirs, which fulfill the law.

V. 15. Becauſe the law] It is cleare that theſe two means of getting righteouſneſſe cannot conſiſt together; the law being altogether rigorous and requiring perfect obedience, or denouncing death and damnation to the tranſgreſſours: the promiſe on the other ſide is of grace and reconciliation, and acceptation of the will for the deed.

worketh wrath] Or, worketh out. That is, manifeſteth the wrath of God againſt the tranſgreſſion thereof, and bindeth over the ſinner thereunto, and aggravateth ſinnes through the perverſeneſſe of man's nature, Rom. 7.8.

for where no law is, there is no tranſgreſſion] Gr. Tec. but if there be no law. as Chap. 5.13. 1 Joh. 3.4.

V. 16. Therefore it is of faith] Since the firſt way of obtaining life by the law which God hath propoſed unto man, was by ſinne not only made unprofitable, but hurtfull and pernicious, there muſt of neceſſity recourſe be had unto the other which is by faith; faith being the only vertue that can in this caſe ſtand with the free grace of God, in as much as faith doth not work by procuring and meriting, but meerely by receiving what is given and beſtowed upon, Joh. 1.12.

be ſure] Or, firme. That is, grounded upon God and his immutable good pleaſure, and on the perfect and everlaſting righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, and not upon the variable and inconſtant obedience of man, Ezek. 16.61. Rom. 9.11. & 11.19.

all the ſeed] Or, the whole ſeed.

V. 17. I have made thee a father] See Gen. 17.5. Not of thoſe only that ſhould iſſue from him according to the fleſh, but alſo of thoſe among all nations that by faith ſhould be adopted and received into his ſpirituall family.

before him] Or, like unto him. That is, God, that is by a ſpirituall kindred, which hath place before God, and maketh us acceptable to him, or acording to a ſpirituall and divine fatherhood gained by faith, according to which God is able to make a child of Abraham when he pleaſeth, Matt. 3.9. even as of nothing he hath created all things and raiſeth the dead: and after this fatherhood, he judgeth which are the true children of Abraham, that he approveth, wheras according to mans judgement none but the Jews could be counted ſuch. If we read like unto him, then the meaning may be this, that as God is a Father, not onely in regard of thoſe which are already, but even of all ſuch whom he ſhall create anew by his omnipotent word; ſo Abraham in ſome conformity thereunto hath been the adopting father of the Gentiles, though as yet deſtitute of all ſpirituall life and faculties, requiſite for the being of ſuch his children, Epheſ. 2.12. Laſtly, if we reade the words (with ſome) before that he beleeved, which the Greeke will hardly brooke, then the meaning is, before the time that he beleeved, God made him, that is, deſigned him to be the father of many nations: and this the Apoſtle addeth, that Gods promiſe dependeth not upon Abrahams belief; as likewiſe, Rom. 9. he proveth that the election of God depended not upon foreſeen works, becauſe before the children were born or had done good or evil, it was ſaid, The elder ſhall ſerve the younger.

calleth thoſe things] Maketh them to be by his word, and as it were calleth them to come forth and appear for that end to which he hath ordained them, as he did in the creation of all things, ſaying, Let there be light, &c. and in the miraculous raiſing from the dead; Damſell I ſay unto thee, ariſe; and Lazarus come forth, &c.

V. 18. againſt hope] Or, beſides. Beſides or above all cauſes, arguments and appearances of naturall hope, ſuch as carnall reaſon and underſtanding could afford.

in hope] Grounded upon the truth and power of God.

So ſhall thy ſeed be] See Gen. 15.5.

V. 19. he conſidered not] Not as thereby to be weakened in his confidence, for otherwayes he had indeed objected his and Sarahs age, Gen. 17.17. but howſoever he reſted not upon the order of nature, according to which all hope of iſſue was taken from him, for true faith doth overcome all apprehenſions of mans own diſabilitie by a lively perſwaſion of the truth of Gods promiſes.

now dead] Voyd of ſtrength and unmeet to get children; howſoever God afterward renewed ſtrength and vigour in that kinde, Pſal. 103.5. See Gen. 25.2, 3.

V. 20. ſtaggered not] Or, doubted not of.

giving glory] Acknowledged and praiſed God as moſt gracious and true, and of infinite power to overcome all naturall difficulties, and performe what he had promiſed, though never ſo contrary to the courſe of nature.

V. 21. what he had promiſed] Or, what was promiſed.

V. 22. for] Or, to.

V. 24. if we beleeve] Or, beleeving.

V. 25. our offences] Gr. fallings, or faults. To pay the ranſome for our ſins.

our juſtification] God having declared by raiſing him from the dead, that he hath accepted of the death of his Sonne, as of a ſufficient ranſome for our ſinnes: for if Chriſt had remained ſtill under the power of death, his ſatisfaction could not have been perfect, neither could he have applyed the vertue thereof to us. We may alſo conceive Chriſts reſurrection to be our juſtification after this manner. Chriſt was our true pledge, he therefore after he had ſatisfied for us by his death, returning unto life gives us a cleare evidence, and affords us a ſure argument that God was fully reconciled and life purchaſed for us. Which aſſurance we could not have had, if Chriſt our pledge had ſtill remained under the power of death, for as much as his continuance in his payment would ever have argued the imperfection of it. See 1 Cor. 15.17.

CHAP. V.

Verſ. 1. THerefore being] Another argument taken from the effect. We are juſtified by that which truly appeaſeth fieth our conſcience before God, but faith in Chriſt doth appeaſe our conſcience and not the Law, as was before proved, therefore by faith we are juſtified and not by the law.

peace with God] That is, reconciliation to him, whereby our conſciences are quieted, out of a true ſenſe and apprehenſion of his favour.

V. 2. By whom alſo we have acceſſe] See Epheſ. 2. 18.

by faith] Gr. Tec. in faith. Whereas quietnes of conſcience is attributed to faith, it is to be referred to Chriſt originally, who is the giver of faith it ſelf, and in whom faith it ſelf is effectuall, grounding it ſelfe upon him.

grace] Gr. Tec. this joy.

wherein we ſtand]. By which grace, that is, by which gracious love and good will: or that ſtate whereunto we are graciouſly taken.

rejoyce] Gr. glory.

hope of the glory] Here he preventeth an objection which might be made againſt him, by thoſe who beholding the daily miſeries and calamities of the Church, might thinke that the Chriſtians dreame when they glory of their felicitie: to whom the Apoſtle anſwereth, that their felicitie is laid up under hope in another place, which hope is ſo certaine and ſure, that they do no leſſe rejoyce for that happineſſe, then if they did preſently enjoy it.

V. 3. tribulations] Or, afflictions.

knowing] See Jam. 1. 3.

tribulation] Or, affliction.

worketh patience] Gr. worketh out. Tribulation accuſtometh us to patience, & patience aſſureth us by experience of the goodnes of God, and this experience confirmeth and faſteneth our hope which never deceiveth us. When the Apoſtle ſaith, tribulation worketh patience, we are not ſo to underſtand him, that of it ſelf and its own nature it doth ſo, for it produceth a contrary effect in the wicked, but it doth ſo as it is ſanctified to us by the Spirit, out of the conſideration of Gods will, and our conformitie thereby to Chriſt, Rom. 8. 29.

V. 4. experience] Gr. proof or triall. In Greek δοκιμὴ, proof or triall, either of Gods favour to us, and the comforts of his ſpirit, or of our faith, which being much more precious then gold that is tried by the fire, is thereby found unto praiſe and honour, 1 Pet. 1. 7. experience] Gr. proofe or tryall.

V. 5. The love of God] Not whereby we love him, but wherewith he loveth us. And this affords great comfort in adverſitie, that our peace and quietneſſe of conſcience be not troubled; for he that ſo loved them that were of no worth, and while they were yet in their ſinnes, that he died for them, how can he neglect them being now ſanctified and living in him?

ſhed abroad] Or, hath been ſhed. The ſenſe and feeling thereof is ſhed abroad in our hearts, for we have a ſenſible feeling that we are beloved of God, and we taſte and ſee how good and gracious the Lord is, Pſal. 34. 8.

V. 6. in due time] Or, according to the time, or ſeaſon. To wit, when the fulneſſe of time came, Gal. 4. 4. which was the fitteſt and moſt convenient time, and therefore is tearmed here καιρὸν, and 2 Cor. 6. 2. the accepted time.

V. 7. yet peradventure for a good man] Some will have theſe words to be read with an interrogative point, and render them thus; ſcarce will one die for a righteous man, for even for a good man will any man eaſily undertake to die? but if the words be to be read without an interrogative point, then the Apoſtles meaning is, that though it may be ſome may be found ſo couragious and kinde as to undertake ſuch a taske, as to die for another, be he never ſo good a man, yet it is a thing very rare, and that ſeldome happeneth.

V. 8. yet ſinners] In the ſtate of ſinne, or, while ſinne reigned in us, and we were wholly under the power of ſinne. For otherwayes we are ſtill ſinners. For if we ſay, that we have no ſinne, we deceive our ſelves, and there is no truth in us, 1. Joh. 1. 8. Yet we are not in the Apoſtles ſenſe in this place ſinners, or ſo reputed, becauſe our ſinnes are forgiven us, and ſinne hath not now dominion over us; becauſe we are not under the law, but under grace, Rom. 6. 14. 1. Joh. 3. 8, 9.

V. 9. from wrath through him] Some tranſlate the words, from that wrath; and the originall will beare it, for it is ἀπὸ τῆς ὀργῆς, If we like of that tranſlation, the meaning is, a futura ira, from wrath to come, Math. 3. 7. But if there be not an emphaſis in the article τῆς, then wrath is to be taken more generally; for the puniſhments of ſinne as well in this life, as in the life to come, which are the effects of Gods wrath.

V. 11. joy in God] Gr. glorying in God.

through] Or, by.

atonement] Or, reconciliation.

V. 12. Wherefore as] Here is the generall concluſion of the precedent diſcourſe, concerning juſtification by faith; wherein the Apoſtle, briefly reſuming what he had ſaid, doth withall lay down the ground of it: which is, that God of his good pleaſure hath appointed Chriſt to be the head of grace, and the fountain of juſtice and life to all his elect; by the imputation of whoſe righteouſneſſe they are reſtored to the favour of God, and conſequently ſanctified and glorified; in like manner as Adam was made the head and root by nature of all mankinde, whence by his ſinne imputed to all his poſteritie, they became all under the curſe of God, were deprived of originall righteouſneſſe, corrupted through their whole nature, and ſubject to death eternall.

by one man]. Viz. Adam and Eve comprehended together in one; as they two were one fleſh, and the common ſtock of all mankinde, Epheſ. 5. 31. 1 Tim. 2. 14.

ſinne] By ſinne, is meant that diſeaſe which is ours by inheritance, and which commonly call originall ſinne; for ſo he uſeth to call that ſinne in the ſingular number; whereas when he ſpeaketh of the fruits thereof, he uſeth the plurall number, calling them ſinnes.

paſſed upon all men] Or, paſſed over to all.

for that] Or, in whom.

for that all have ſinned] Gr. had ſinned. Or, in whom, for the prepoſition ἐπὶ is taken for ἐν, in divers other places, as Mark 2. 4. Joh. 9. 17, &c. And ſo the word in, is uſed alſo by Saint Paul, treating of the ſame matter, 1 Cor. 15. 22. as in Adam all die; or elſe the words are to be tranſlated, foraſmuch, or for that, all have ſinned; and all comes to the ſame ſenſe: for all that die, have not committed actuall ſinnes in themſelves; as it is plain in ſome infants, that die before they come to the uſe of reaſon, and therefore can be ſaid no other wayes to have ſinned, then in this one man in whoſe loynes they were, as Levi is ſaid to have paid tithes, being in the loynes of Abraham, Heb. 7. 9.

is not imputed] Gr. Tec. was not counted. Where there is no law made, no man is puniſhed, as faulty and guilty. If we admit of the tranſlation according to Tecl. edition, ſinne was not imputed, till the law was given, then the Apoſtles meaning according to the interpretation of the Greek fathers, is, οὐχ δικαίως ἐλλογίζεται, that is, was not imputed in ſuch ſort; becauſe there was no puniſhment ſet upon particular ſinnes; neither could the number and heinouſneſſe of ſinnes be ſo exactly known.

there is no law] Gr. there being no law.

V. 14. Neverthele ſſe] Gr. but.

is the figure] The firſt Adam, anſwereth the latter, who is Chriſt, as it is afterwards declared; Adam, and Chriſt were like two roots or ſtocks, the one whereof, to wit, Adam, conveyed to his branches, ſinne and death; but Chriſt, to all that are engraffed in him, righteouſneſſe and life.

V. 15. But not as the offence] Adam and Chriſt are compared together, in this reſpect, that both of them do give and yield to theirs, that which is their own: but herein they differ; that Adam by nature, hath ſpread his fault to the deſtruction of many, but Chriſts obedience hath by grace overflowed to many.

many be dead] The word many is oftentimes in Scripture taken for all; as Dan. 12. 2. Many that ſleep in the duſt ſhall awake, that is, all; and Rom. 8. 29. Firſt begotten among many brethren; and here verſ. 16. Of many offences to juſtification: for Chriſts bloud cleanſeth us from all our ſinnes, 1 Joh. 1. 9. & verſ. 19. By one mans diſobedience many were made ſinners, that is, all; ſo in this verſe, through the offence of one man, many be dead; all are become liable unto death.

much more] Gr. Tec. much more therefore.

V. 16. And not as it was by one] Here the Apoſtle ſets down a ſecond difference between Adam and Chriſt, that by Adams one offence, men were made guilty; but the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt imputed unto us freely, doth not onely abſolve us from that one fault, but from all other.

by one] Or, of one.

V. 17. if by one mans offence] Or, by one offence. The third difference is, that the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt being imputed to us by grace, is of greater power to bring life, and that a glorious and eternall life, wherein we ſhall reign with Chriſt; then the offence of Adam was to make his poſterity liable unto death.

V. 18. by the offence of one] Or, by one offence.

judgement] that is, guilt.

by the righteouſneſſe of one] Or, by one righteouſneſſe. Gr. Δικαίωμα. So Saint Paul ſtyleth the obedience of Chriſt, as having vertue in it to juſtifie others alſo, as the Greek word doth imply and here it is ſet in oppoſition to the tranſgreſſion of Adam, wherein likewiſe there was a power to involve others, and make them culpable and liable to to condemnation.

upon all men] Either all ſorts of men indifferently, though not all univerſally; or to all that appertain to Chriſt and are engraffed unto him by faith.

juſtification of life] Not onely, becauſe our ſinnes are forgiven us, but alſo, becauſe the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt is imputed to us.

V. 19. by the obedience of one] The Apoſtle leaves out the word man in this member, either for brevities ſake; or, becauſe Chriſt was not a meer man, as Adam was, but Θεάνθρωπος God and man in one perſon.

V. 20. Moreover, Or, but.

that the offence might abound] Chriſoſtome and Oecumenius, and the Greek fathers generally obſerve, that the conjunction ἵνα, that, is not taken, αἰτιολογικῶς, cauſally, nor doth any way imply, that God gave his law to this end (See Rom. 1. 20.) that ſinne might abound, but rather to diminiſh it, and keep men from it; they therefore fore thus paraphraſe the words; By the coming in of the law, ſo it fell out, that ſinne abounded through the corruption of mans nature, and per accidens not according to Gods intention. Others who take the conjunction cauſally make this ſenſe: that the law came in through Gods appointment to improve the benefit of Chriſt, and make it much more glorious by the manifeſtation and declaration, how farre ſinne had abounded, that is, the law entred, that the offence might appear much more to abound, for the greater illuſtration of Chriſts glory in taking it away.

grace did much more abound] Grace was powred ſo plentifully from heaven, that it did not onely countervail ſinne, but above meaſure paſſed it.

V. 21. reigned] See on Chap. 6.21.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ. 1. WHat ſhall we ſay then] Here the Apoſtle paſſeth from juſtification to ſanctification, making his way by ſolving an objection framed after this manner, becauſe where ſinne aboundeth there grace more abounded, ſhall we from thence lewdly conclude, that we ought therefore ſtill to abide in the ſtate of ſin and corruption, and let the reines looſe to all manner of wickedneſſe, that grace may ſtill more and more abound? ſhall we like the Spider, ſuck poiſon from the ſweeteſt flower of paradiſe, the doctrine of free juſtification? God forbid.

Shall we continue] Gr. Tec. Let us continue.

in ſinne] That is, in that corruption, for though the guiltineſſe of ſinne be not imputed unto us, yet the corruption remaineth ſtill in us, the which ſanctification, that follows juſtification, killeth by little and little.

V. 2. God forbid] Gr. Be it not, or, by no meanes. See Chap. 3, 4.

How ſhall we] The benefits of juſtification and ſanctification are alwayes joyned together inſeparably, and both of them proceed from Chriſt by the grace of God: Now ſanctification is the aboliſhing of ſinne, that is, of our naturall corruption, into whoſe place ſucceedeth the cleerneſſe and pureneſſe of nature reformed.

that are dead] They are ſaid by Paul to be dead to ſinne, which are in ſuch ſort made partakers of the vertue of Chriſt, that naturall corruption is dead in them; that is, the force of it is taken away ſo, that it bringeth not forth its bitter fruits: and on the other ſide, they are ſaid to live to ſinne, which are in the fleſh; that is, whom the Spirit of God hath not delivered from the ſlavery of this corruption of nature.

V. 3. Know ye not] There are three parts of ſanctification; to wit, the death of the old man, or ſinne, his buriall, and the reſurrection of the new man; derived from the vertue of the death, buriall, and reſurrection of Chriſt; of which benefits our baptiſme is a Signe and Pledge.

that ſo many of us, &c.] Gal. 3.27.

into Jeſus Chriſt] That is, by Baptiſme are ingraffed into him, that growing up in one with him, we ſhould receive his ſtrength to conquer the power of ſin in us.

baptized into his death] That is, that we ſhould be partakers not onely of the merit of his death in our juſtification, but alſo of the efficacie of his death, in the mortifying our fleſhly members.

V. 4. are] Gr. were.

buried with him by baptiſme] See Coloſſ. 2.12. In this phraſe the Apoſtle ſeemeth to allude to the ancient manner of Baptiſme, which was, to dip the parties baptized, and as it were to bury them under the water for a while, and then to draw them out of it, and lift them up, to repreſent the burial of our old man, and our reſurrection to newneſſe of life.

by the glory of the father] That is, by the glorious power of the father, as Lazarus was raiſed, Joh. 11. 40. Or elſe the præpoſition διὰ, is put for εἰς; as likewiſe the 2 Pet. 1. 3. he that called us διὰ, by glory, that is, εἰς, to glory and vertue; and ſo ſome tranſlate it here, raiſed from the dead to the glory of the father; that Chriſt himſelf being diſcharged of his infirmitie and weakneſſe might live in glory with God for ever.

V. 5. planted together] By this elegant ſimilitude the Apoſtle repreſenteth unto us, That as Plants engraffed, receive moiſture, and juyce from the Stock, whereby they ſprout out and bear fruit; ſo we receive vigour from Chriſt, whereby we live ſpiritually, and bear the fruit of good works: and as a Plant that is ſet in the earth lyeth as dead and unmoveable for a time, but after ſprings up and flouriſheth; ſo Chriſts body lay dead for a while in the grave, but ſprung up and re-flouriſhed in his reſurrection: and we alſo when we are baptized, are buried as it were in the water for a time, but after are raiſed up to newneſſe of life.

likeneſſe of his death] In ſo much as by the meanes of the ſtrength which cometh from him to us, we ſo die to ſinne as he is dead.

likeneſſe of his reſurrection] That is, as he aroſe from the dead to a new and heavenly life, ſo we riſe from dead works to walke in newneſſe of life.

V. 6. old man] All our whole nature, as we are conceived and born into this world with ſinne, which is called old, partly by comparing that old Adam with Chriſt, and partly in reſpect of the deformitie of our corrupt nature, and the diſability to do any good. It is called our old man, becauſe it ſets on work all the faculties of our minde, and members of our body, as if it were our very ſelves, and becauſe, as the Greek fathers note, ὡς ἡμᾶς αὐτοὺς ἢ μᾶλλον στέργομεν καὶ περιέπομεν, becauſe we make much of it and love it as our ſelves, or more then our ſelves.

crucified with him] Our corrupt nature is attributed to Chriſt, not in deed, but by imputation. The Apoſtle ſaith, our old man is crucified, becauſe through the merits of Chriſt crucified, we obtain the holy Spirit, which crucifieth our old man; for Chriſt by his death hath merited to us, and for us, not onely remiſſion of ſinnes, but alſo the ſpirit of regeneration, whereby our corrupt affections are mortified, and we renewed in the ſpirit of our mindes.

body of ſinne] That naughtineſſe which ſticketh faſt to us, and is as near unto us as our fleſh; or he termeth it the body of ſinne, becauſe it hath a reall ſubſiſtence in us of it ſelf, as if it were a body; or thirdly, becauſe this corruption is not in one part or member, but diffuſed through the whole; neither is it ſeen and deſcried in the breach of one commandement, but of all, making a kinde of body of wickedneſſe conſiſting of many parts.

might be deſtroyed] Gr. Tec. ſhould be deſtroyed.

not ſerve ſinne] That is the end of our ſanctification, which we ſhoot at, and ſhall at length come unto, when God ſhall be all in all.

V. 7. freed] Gr. juſtified.

V. 8. now if] Or, but if.

V. 9. dieth no more] For he therefore died, that he might deſtroy death, both in himſelf and in his members.

V. 10. he died unto ſinne] He died unto ſinne, not in regard of himſelf, for he knew no ſinne, but as charged with the ſinnes of the elect, and in the name of his Church, that he might expiate and take away the ſinnes of all that believe in him.

liveth unto God] That is, With God, or, To the glory of God, or in the ſenſe our Saviour ſaith, Luke 20. 38. that Abraham, and Iſaac, and all the faithfull live To God; that is, though they appear not to live to men, yet they live to God; that is, in his account, and before him.

V. 11. reckon] Or, account.

V. 12. Let not ſinne] He taketh ſinne, either indefinitely for any ſinne, or for ſinne which is the genus to originall and actuall; or, he taketh it, according to S. Auſtines interpretation, lib. de nup. & concupiſ. for concupiſcence or the originall corruption that is in us, which (ſaith he) is called ſinne, quia a peccato facta eſt, ſicut vocatur lingua locutio quam facit lingua, manus vocatur ſcriptura quam facit manus; becauſe it is the iſſue or off-ſpring of ſinne, to wit, the ſinne of Adam; as our ſpeech is called our tongue, becauſe the tongue uttereth it; and our writing is called our hand, becauſe our hand maketh or draweth it: Howbeit, we muſt not ſo underſtand S. Auſtins words, as if it were onely in that reſpect called ſinne; for it is all three, both the daughter of ſinne, and mother of ſinne, and ſinne it ſelf; the daughter or effect of Adams ſinne in us, the mother of all actuall ſinnes, and formally ſinne it ſelf, becauſe repugnant to the law, which ſaith, Thou ſhalt not luſt.

reigne] By reigning S. Paul meaneth that ſoveraigne or high rule which no man ſtriveth againſt, or if any do, it is in vain: or, Let not ſinne reign, that is, not have the upper hand of the motions of Gods Spirit within you, Rom. 8. 13, 14. Galat. 5. 16, 17, 18.

in your mortall body] This is not ſaid, as if evill luſts were in the body alone, or as if they had the originall onely from it, and not from the ſoul; for Chriſt teacheth the contrary, Matth. 15. 19, 20. but becauſe theſe evill luſts do moſt of all ſhew and manifeſt themſelves in and through the body, Gal. 5. 19. Or, the words may bear this interpretation, Let not ſinne reign in your mortall body, that is, while you live this bodily life here, which being ſubject unto death, it appeareth thereby, that there are ſome remnants of ſinne yet behinde to be ſtriven againſt, that we may mortifie and deſtroy them more and more.

V. 13. yield] Or, offer up.

as inſtruments] Gr. as arms, or weapons. He fitly compareth our members, that is, parts of our body, and faculties of our minde, either to ſuch tools as artificers work withall, or weapons wherewith ſouldiers fight; for as thoſe, ſo theſe may be uſed well or ill. For example, with the ſame hand one man giveth an alms, and another ſtealeth; with the ſame tongue one bleſſeth, and another curſeth.

yield] Or, offer up.

inſtruments] Gr. arms, or weapons.

V. 14. For ſinne ſhall not have dominion, &c.] He granteth that ſin is not yet ſo dead in us, that it is utterly extinct, but he promiſeth victory unto them that contend manfully againſt it, becauſe we have grace given us, which worketh in us ſo effectually, that the law is not now to us the power and inſtrument of ſinne, but the rule of righteouſneſſe.

V. 15. under the law] To be under the law and under ſin, ſignifieth all one in reſpect of them which are not ſanctified; as on the contrary, to be under grace and righteouſneſſe, agreeth to them that are regenerate. Now theſe are contrary, ſo that one cannot agree with the other, therefore let righteouſneſſe expell ſinne.

V. 16. to whom you yeeld your ſelves,&c.] See John 8. 34. 2 Pet. 2. 19.

V. 17. form of doctrine] Gr. mould. The word in the Originall ſignifieth moſt properly a patterne or mould, and the Apoſtle would have us thereby to underſtand that the doctrine of the Goſpell is ſuch a patterne or mould which we are caſt into, that we may be formed and faſhioned like unto it.

which was delivered you] Gr. whereto ye were delivered.

V. 18. of righteouſneſſe] Gr. to righteouſneſſe.

V. 20. from righteouſneſſe] Gr. to righteouſneſſe.

V. 21. What fruit had ye then] The Apoſtle in this verſe deterreth from ſinne by a threefold argument, drawn from the three parts of time paſt, preſent, and to come. Sinne for the time paſt hath proved unfruitfull; (What fruit had ye then) for the time preſent ſhamefull; (whereof ye are now aſhamed) for the time to come pernicious and deadly: (for the end of theſe things is death)

end] Or, reward.

V. 22. unto holineſſe] Or, unto ſanctification.

end] Or, reward.

V. 23. For the wages of ſinne is death] That is, the reward due unto ſinne. The compariſon is taken from ſouldiers in war, who at the end of their ſervice, receive their pay or ſtipend. By death we are to underſtand, not onely temporall, but eternall, death; as appeareth by the oppoſition that it hath here to eternall life.

but the gift of God] Or, free gift. By the gift here many underſtand the gift of ſanctification or righteouſneſſe, which is ſet againſt ſin in the other member, and they ſay, the Apoſtle affirmeth this gift to be eternall life, becauſe it bringeth or hath for its end eternall life: but it may be referred to eternall life it ſelfe, which is here tearmed not the wages of righteouſneſſe, but the free gift of grace; as Saint Auguſtine acutely obſerveth; lib. de grat. & lib. arbit. cap. 9. The Apoſtle, ſaith he, might have ſaid, The wages of righteouſneſſe is eternall life: but he altered the phraſe of ſet purpoſe, and choſe rather to ſay, The gift of God is eternall life; ut hinc intelligeremus non pro meritis noſtris Deum nos, ſed pro ſua miſericordia vocare: unde dicitur in Pſalmo, Coronat te in miſeratione: that we might from this change of the phraſe learne that God calleth us not to eternall life for our merits, but for his mercies ſake, whence it is ſaid in the Pſalmes, He crowneth thee in mercy and compaſſion.

CHAP. VII.

Verſ. 1. KNow ye not] By propounding the ſimilitude of marriage, he compareth the ſtate of man both in ſin and after regeneration together: the law of matrimony, ſaith he, is this, that ſo long as the husband liveth, the marriage abideth in force; but if he be dead, the woman may marry again.

over a man] He ſaith not over the husband, or over the wife, but τȣ͂ ἀνθρώπȣ hominis, a word which ſignifieth either ſex, and may be applied to either; to teach us that both are ſubject to the law of wedlock while they live.

V. 2. the woman,&c.] 1 Cor. 7. 39.

V. 3. ſhe ſhall be] Gr. Tec. the wife or woman.

V. 4. Wherefore my brethren] Here he applieth the former ſimilitude; as it fareth with the wife whoſe husband is dead, and ſhe free to marry againe, ſo it is with us; for now we are joyned to the Spirit, as it were to the ſecond husband, by whom we muſt bring forth new children: we are dead in reſpect of the firſt husband; but in reſpect of the latter, we are as it were raiſed from the dead.

dead to the law] We are not onely dead to the law, but the law alſo is dead unto us, becauſe it cannot thruſt out its ſting at us, either to curſe us, or to provoke us unto ſinne; the law hath no more power over us then dead men in either of theſe reſpects.

body of Chriſt] In as much as his body was mortified and crucified for us; by which his mortification, he obtained to us remiſſion of ſinnes, and the holy Spirit; whereby our fleſh, or rather ſinne dwelling in our fleſh is mortified in us.

forth fruit] He calleth the children which the wife beareth to her husband, fruit, Pſal. 127. 3. As in the ſalutation of the Angel, Chriſt is called the fruit of the Virgins wombe: Bleſſed art thou, and bleſſed is the fruit of thy wombe.

unto God] Which are acceptable unto God: or if by fruit he underſtandeth not children, as before, but good works; then to God is here underſtood, to the glory of God; as Matth. 5. 16. Let your light ſo ſhine before men that they may ſee your good works, and glorifie your Father which is in heaven. See Phil. 1. 11.

V. 5. were in the fleſh] When we were in the ſtate of the firſt marriage; which in the next verſ. he calleth, The oldneſſe of the letter: or by fleſh he meaneth the carnall obſervations of the law, concerning meats and drinks, and leproſie, and the like: or when we were in the fleſh, that is, when the fleſh was not mortified in us by the Spirit, but was yet lively and ſtrong in us, Chap. 8. 8.

by the law] He ſaith not, of the law, but by the law; becauſe the ſpring of ſinne which dwelleth within us, takes occaſion to work thus in us by reaſon of the reſtraint that the law maketh; not that the fault is in the law, but in our ſelves.

V. 6. delivered] Or, looſed.

that being dead wherein we were held] Or, we being dead in whom we were held. The Greek Scholiaſt readeth ἀποθανόντες, we being dead to that which held us, to wit, the law, or ſinne; from which we were freed by Chriſt. Others read ἀποθανόντος, it being dead; that is, the reigning power of the law and of ſinne being aboliſhed in us; by the death and ſpirit of Chriſt the reigne of ſinne being deſtroyed in true beleevers, there ceaſeth withall that accidentall effect of the law, which is to provoke and ſtirre up the malignitie of ſinne in us. Or he being dead, that is, the old man, of whom he ſpeaketh in the former Chapter, verſ. 6. Our old man is crucified with him, that the body of ſinne might be deſtroyed, that henceforth we ſhould not ſerve ſinne: and this ſenſe is very agreeable to the main ſcope of the Apoſtle.

in newneſſe of ſpirit] As becommeth them which after the death of their old husband are joyned to the Spirit, as whom the Spirit hath made new men, Or in newneſſe of the ſpirit, that is, in true holineſſe, whereunto we were renewed in the ſpirit of our minds by the preaching of the Goſpel which is called the miniſtration of righteouſneſſe, and of the ſpirit, 2 Cor. 3. 8, 9. Epheſ. 4. 23. Whereas the law wrought nothing elſe but that it ſhewed man his duty, as a writing or picture, without imparting unto him any lively or efficacious abilitie to performe: wherefore alſo that old meanes of attaining righteouſneſſe and holineſſe is now aboliſhed as of it ſelf unprofitable and impotent.

oldneſſe of the letter] Either by the letter he meaneth the law in reſpect of that old condition. For before that our will be framed by the holy Ghoſt, the law ſpeaketh unto us but as to deaf men, and therefore it is dumb and dead to us as touching the fulfilling thereof. And in the word oldneſſe he inſinuateth alſo the aboliſhing thereof in regard of the unſufficiency thereof, Heb. 8. 13. Or by the oldneſſe of the letter he underſtandeth the old corruption which by the outward letter of the law is more and more ſtirred and provoked in us, in as much as the law though it condemned the ſinner, yet it affordeth no power at all to aboliſh or deſtroy ſinne; in which regard it is called a killing letter, and the adminiſtration of death, 2 Cor. 3. 7.

V. 7. Is the law ſinne] Becauſe he had ſaid before, verſ. 5. that the motions of ſinne which were by the law had force in our members; leſt any ſhould miſtake his meaning and from thence inferre that he condemned the law, as being a kind of factour for ſinne; he opportunely here moveth a doubt after this manner; What then, is the law the cauſe of ſinne? or are the law and ſinne all one? or do they agree together? No, ſaith he, ſinne is reproved and condemned by the law, but becauſe ſinne cannot abide to be reproved, and was not in a manner felt untill it was provoked, and ſtirred by the law, it taketh occaſion thereby to be more outragious, yet by no fault of the law.

not known luſt] Or, concupiſcence. By luſt in this place he meaneth not evill luſts in particular which flow from concupiſcence; but rather the corrupt fountain from which they ſpring: for the very heathen Philoſophers themſelves condemned wicked luſts and unclean deſires; but as for the fountain of them they could not ſo much as ſuſpect it, and yet it is the very ſeat of that naturall and unclean ſpot and filth.

Thou ſhalt not covet] Exod. 20. 17. Deut. 5. 21.

V. 8. ſinne wrought in me concupiſcence] Theſe words ſeem to be contrary to the words of S. James; (Jam. 1. 15.) for Saint James ſaith, luſt bringeth forth ſinne, but Saint Paul here, that ſinne brought forth, or wrought in him concupiſcence. But they may be eaſily reconciled: for they take not the words in the ſame ſenſe. For Saint Paul by ſinne, as before hath beene ſhewed, underſtandeth the corruption of our nature and proneneſſe to ſinne, which produceth in us actuall luſts, called by him all kind of concupiſcence: but Saint James by luſt underſtandeth the pravity of our appetite, and by ſinne outward actuall ſinnes; in which ſenſe if we conſtrue their words, the Apoſtles are ſo farre from contradicting on the other, that they both affirme the ſelf ſame thing though diverſly expreſſed,

was dead] Though ſinne be in us, yet it is not knowne for ſinne, neither doth it ſo terrifie the conſcience, nor ſtirre up our naturall concupiſcence, nor rage after ſuch ſort in our members, as after the law is knowne, and in theſe regards it is ſaid to be dead.

V. 9. For] Gr. But.

alive without the law] When I knew not the law, then me thought I lived indeed; for my conſcience never troubled me, becauſe it knew not my malady: or while the law ſtood aloofe of (χωρὶς often is ſo taken) and was not brought home to my conſcience, I thought my ſelfe in a good condition.

I died] That is, I felt my conſcience deadly wounded, whereas before I was ſecure and thought my ſelf in a ſafe way, though I purſued my former luſts

V. 12. holy, juſt, and good] Holy becauſe it teacheth holineſſe, and forbiddeth all wickedneſſe and uncleanneſſe: juſt, becauſe it puniſheth all ſinfull luſts: good, becauſe it was given to direct us into the paths of liſe. Or the Epithet holy, may have a reference to the ceremoniall law; juſt, to the judiciall; and good, to the morall.

made death to me] That is, the cauſe of death, to this the Apoſtle anſwereth, That the law is not the cauſe of death, but our corrupt nature being therewith not only diſcovered, but alſo ſtirred up, and taking occaſion thereby to rebell. For the more things are forbidden our corrupt nature, the more it deſireth them; nitimur in vetitum: and from hence cometh guiltineſſe and occaſion of death, Prov. 9. 17.

God forbid] So Chap. 3. verſ. 4.

might become exceeding ſinfull] That ſinne might ſhew it ſelf to be ſinne, and ſpit forth, as it were, all its venome; ἵνα δειχθῇ αὐτῆς ὁ πᾶς ἰὸς καὶ ἡ πᾶσα κακία.

V. 14. For we know] Hitherto the Apoſtle ſpeak of the power of the law and ſinne in corrupt and unregenerate man, as he alſo himſelf found it by his own experience in his former ſtate, verſ. 9. But now he proceedeth and ſpeaketh of himſelf as he was ſince his converſion, and declareth what power the remainder of ſinne had over him ſtill after that now he was delivered from the dominion thereof.

the law is ſpirituall] Given by the Spirit, and requiring a ſpirituall and heavenly life and diſpoſition; but men ſuch as they be born, are bondſlaves of corruption.

But I am carnall] In part, in regard of the remainders of the fleſh that are in me: for that the regenerate alſo in reſpect of ſome weakneſſe that is yet remaining in them may be called carnall, is evident, 1 Cor. 3. 4.

ſold under ſinne] Not as a willing ſlave to obey and follow the deſire of ſinne in all things, as it is ſaid of Ahab, 1 King. 21. 20. but as a Captive yet detained, though his ranſome be paid; as one that againſt his will and purpoſe is yet ſubject to the aſſaults and luſts of ſinne, not being able wholly and entirely to ridde himſelf of them, although he do vehemently reſiſt them, and often ſubdue them by the Spirit of God that is within him, Gal. 5. 17, 18.

V. 15. I allow not] Gr. know not. My actions anſwer not every way, nay, they are contrary to my will, therefore by the conſent of my will to the law and repugnancy of my actions thereunto it appeareth evidently, that the law and a right ruled will do perſwade one thing, but corruption, which hath her ſeat alſo in the regenerate, another thing.

what I would] It is to be noted that the ſelf ſame man is ſaid to will and not to will in divers reſpects; to wit, he is ſaid to will in that, that he is regenerated by grace, and not to will, ſo farre as he is not regenerated; but ſuch as he was born of his parents: howbeit, becauſe the part which is regenerated at length becommeth conquerour, therefore Saint Paul ſuſtaining the part of the regenerated, ſpeaketh in ſuch ſort as if the corruption which ſinneth willingly were ſomething without a man, although afterwards he granteth that this evill is in his fleſh, or in his members. See 1 Joh. 3. 6. 9.

V. 17. no more I, but ſinne] That naturall corruption which cleaveth faſt even to them that are regenerated, and is not quite conquered. He ſpeaketh this for the comfort of himſelf and others who groan under the ſervitude of their naturall corruption, and that he would inferre is this, that he ſtandeth not in feare to be rejected of God for theſe remaines of ſinne in him; becauſe God judgeth of his children that are thus divided between fleſh and ſpirit, according to the better and ſounder part, which is that of the ſpirit as moſt prevailing within them, and unto which they do moſt heartily and willingly adhere, which hath likewiſe a ſubſiſtence and root of permanent life; and not according to the fleſh, which they renounce and reſiſt, and which by little and little decaies in them, and in the end is reduced to nothing.

that dwelleth in me] That is, as yet remaineth in me, but diſarmed of that mortall ſting of condemnation, by Chriſt: as alſo of its power and dominion, by his ſpirit; being now no more but a trouble to the faithfull, Heb. 12. 1. Therefore theſe three things ought to be well diſtinguiſhed, the dominion of ſin, the habitation, and the combat: the firſt is aboliſhed in true believers, the other two remain yet for their exerciſe and humiliation.

V. 18. dwelleth no good thing] He denieth good to dwell in us, but affirmeth ſinne to dwell in our fleſh, becauſe we ſinne continually, and thereby contract an habit which hath a permanent abode in the ſoul.

V. 20. do it] Or, performe it.

V. 21. I find then a law] Here followeth the concluſion of the Apoſtles diſcourſe, which is this; that as the law of God exhorteth to goodneſſe, ſo doth the law of ſinne; that is, the corruption wherein we were born forcibly incline us to wickedneſſe: but the ſpirit, that is, our mind, in that, that it is regenerate, conſenteth to the law of God; but the fleſh, that is, the whole naturall man, is a bondſlave to the law of ſinne; therefore wickedneſſe and death are not of the law, but of that corruption which ſo reigneth in them which are not ſo regenerated, that they neither will nor do good, but will and do evill continually; but in the regeuerate though it reigneth not, yet it abideth and ſtriveth againſt the ſpirit or law of the mind, ſo that they can neither do ſo well as they would, nor be ſo void of ſinne as they deſire, Gal. 5. 17.

V. 22. I delight in] Gr. I am delighted with.

after the inward man] The inward man and the new man are all one, and are anſwerable and ſet up contrary to the old man; neither doth this inward man ſignifie mans mind and reaſon, and the old man the powers that are under them: but by the inward man is meant whatſoever is either without or within man, from top to toe, ſo long as that man is not born anew by the grace of God.

V. 23. the law of my mind] Minde is not here taken for the underſtanding part of the ſoul, as it is naturally in us from our birth: but for the whole ſoul of man, as it is renewed by the Spirit of God. Ratio recta eſt ratio lumine Spiritus ſancti directa.

V. 24. O wretched man] It is a miſerable thing to be yet in part ſubject to ſin, and to be wearied with continuall conflicts; but we muſt cry to the Lord, who will by death it ſelf at length make us abſolute conquerours, as we are already conquerours in Chriſt, Rom. 8. 37.

who ſhall deliver me] That is, O that I were out of this animale and earthly life, wherein I muſt ſuffer ſinne yet to remain with me, by which I am ſubject ſtill to the neceſſity of death! O that I were tranſlated once into the glorions liberty of the Saints of God, in the happy life to come! Rom. 8. 21. Phil. 1. 23.

from the body of this death] Or, from this body of death. That is, from theſe carnall luſts which are a death unto me, or threaten my ſpirituall death. Or, by this body we may underſtand the remaindets of ſin and of the old man, which are here called the body of death, as Rom. 6. 6. the body of ſinne (ſee there the note.) Or elſe by the body of death is here meant our mortall body ſubject to death by reaſon of ſinne, Rom. 8. 10. in as much as we ſhall never be perfectly delivered from theſe remainders of ſinne, and our captivity under it, till we ſhall have laid down this mortall body of ours.

V. 25. I thank God] That he hath delivered me from the curſe of the law, and the dominion of ſinne; and hath promiſed alſo perfectly to free me from all the power of ſinne by tranſlating me into the glorious liberty of the ſonnes of God.

I my ſelfe] The Apoſtle ranketh himſelfe among them that groane under the yoke of ſinfull corruption: for as Saint Jerome, and Saint Auguſtine doth teſtifie againſt the Pelagian Heretikes; this is the true perfection of them that are born anew, that they are ſenſible of their infirmities and corruptions, and confeſſe as well in truth as humility that they are imperfect.

ſerve the law of God; but with the fleſh, the law of ſinne] How may this be that the Apoſtle ſhould ſerve the law of God and the law of ſinne? ſith no man can ſerve two contrary maſters. I anſwer, that we muſt diſtinguiſh either of faculties, ſo farre forth as renewed, or not; or of times. The Apoſtle doth not ſay that in the ſame part, or with the ſame faculty as renewed he ſerveth the law of God, and the law of ſinne; as namely, that in or with the mind as renewed, he ſerveth the law of God and ſinne; but that in or with one as renewed, he ſerveth the law of God, but in or with the other as not renewed the law of ſinne. Neither doth he ſay that at the ſame time he ſerveth both the law of God and the Law of ſinne: but that though ordinarily, and for the moſt part he ſerveth the law of God; yet that ſometimes through the ſtrength of corruption he is as it were enforced againſt his will, to ſerve the law of ſinne.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſ. 1. THere is therefore] A concluſion of all the former diſputation from verſ. 16. Chap. 1. to this place; ſeeing that we being juſtified by faith in Chriſt, do obtain remiſſion of ſinnes, and imputation of righteouſneſſe, and are alſo ſanctified by the Spirit: it followeth from hence that they that are engraffed into Chriſt by faith are out of all danger of condemnation.

who walk not] The fruits of the Spirits or effects of ſanctification, which is begun in us, do not engraffe us into Chriſt, but declare that we are engraffed into him.

after the fleſh] By the fleſh he underſtandeth the carnall ſtate of ſinne and corruption, in which all men are born, and naturally follow before they are regenerated by grace; and thoſe are ſaid here not to walk after the fleſh who follow not the fleſh for their guide: for he is not ſaid to live after the fleſh that hath the holy Ghoſt for his guide, though ſometimes he ſtep a wry.

V. 2. For the law] That is, the power and authority of the ſpirit which is ſet in oppoſition to the tyrannie of ſinne. Here the Apoſtle preventeth an objection, ſeeing that the vertue of the ſpirit that is in us is ſo weake: how may we gather thereby that there is no condemnation to them who have received that vertue? becauſe, ſaith he, that vertue of the quickning ſpirit which is ſo weake in us, is moſt perfect and mighty in Chriſt, and being imputed to us which believe, cauſeth us to be ſo accounted of as though there were no reliques of corruption and death in us.

Spirit of life] That is, the Spirit which mortifieth the old man, and quickneth the new man, whereby thoſe who are regenerated lead a new and ſpirituall life.

in Chriſt Jeſus] That is, which is perfectly and abſolute in Chriſt, and reſides in him as the head, and from him hath influx to all the members. This ſpirit is as a law commanding us, and appointing what we ought to do, and how to carry our ſelves through our whole life.

from the law of ſinne and death] There is in the words a figure like that, pateris libavit & auro. id eſt pateris aureis: ſo here the law of ſinne and death, that is, as ſinne bringing death and killing the ſoul: and as before he tearmed the power of the ſpirit the law of the ſpirit: ſo here he calleth the power of ſinne the law of ſinne; becauſe like a law it commands evill actions, and ruleth in the children of diſobedience.

V. 3. For what the law could do] He uſeth no argument here but expoundeth the myſtery of ſanctification, which is wrought in us: for becauſe, ſaith he, that the vertue of the law was not ſuch by reaſon of the corruption of our nature that it could make man pure, perfect, and free; and for that it rather kindled the fiery malady of ſinne, then put it out, and extinguiſhed it: there, fore God clothed his Sonne with fleſh like to our ſinfull fleſh, wherein he utterly aboliſhed our corruption, that being accounted throughly pure and without fault in him, apprehended and laid hold on by faith, we might be found to have fully that ſingular perfection, which the law requireth; and therefore that there might be no condemnation in or to us.

in that it was weak] Not of it ſelf, but through our fault.

through the fleſh] Or, by. In men not born anew by the Spirit, whoſe diſeaſe the law pointed at; but neither did, nor could heal.

in the likeneſſe of ſinnefull fleſh] Gr. fleſh of ſinne. Chriſt tooke our nature upon him with all our naturall affections; yet without ſinne: and therefore the Apoſtle here ſaith, God ſent his Sonne in the likeneſſe of ſinfull fleſh, not in the likeneſſe of fleſh, as if he had not taken true fleſh upon him; but in the ſimilitude of ſinfull fleſh: thus acutely Saint Auguſtine alſo diſtinguiſheth: non in ſimilitudine carnis, quaſi caro non eſſet caro, ſed in ſimilitudine carnis peccati, quia caro erat, ſed peccati caro non erat.

for ſinne] Or, by a ſacrifice for ſinne. Either there is an Ellipſis, and the word θυσία is to be underſtood, as it is in the Tranſlation of the Seventie, Levit. 4. 5. and alſo in Saint Paul, Heb. 10. 6. καὶ περὶ ἁμαρτίας οὐκ εὐδόκησας, in for ſin thou hadſt no pleaſure: that is, in ſacrifices for ſinne, thou hadſt no pleaſure: and then the meaning is evidently this; God aboliſhed, and utterly deſtroyed ſinne in the fleſh by the expiatorie ſacrifice for ſinne, which Chriſt offered upon the Croſſe. Or we are thus to render the words, of ſinne he condemned ſinne in the fleſh; that is, he condemned our ſinne in the fleſh of his Sonne of ſin; viz. of that capitall crime: that it was the meritorious cauſe of the death of Chriſt who was moſt innocent. Or becauſe it had wrought death in man by that which was good, and by occaſion of the law became above meaſure ſinnefull, Rom. 7. 13.

in the fleſh] Or, of fleſh,

V. 4. righteouſneſſe of the law] The very ſubſtance of the law of God might be fulfilled, or that ſame righteouſneſſe which the law requireth, that we may be found juſt before God. For if with our juſtification from ſin there by joyned that active obedience of Chriſt which is imputed to us, we are juſt before God according to that perfect form which the law requireth.

V. 5. they that are after the fleſh] They that are in their carnall ſtate of ſin and corruption, which we drew from the loines of our firſt parents: or they that are led by the fleſh, and follow it in the luſts thereof.

V. 6. to be carnally minded is death] Gr. the minding of the fleſh, or the wiſedome of the fleſh]. The word in the Originall is φρόνημα, which ſometimes is rendred the deſire, or affection; ſometimes mind or meaning; ſometimes wiſedome: and in all theſe ſenſes that which the Apoſtle here calleth φρόνημα σαρκὸς, is death; that is, tendeth to death, or bringeth death: as on the contrary, the deſire, affections, and wiſdome of the ſpirit are life, and peace; that is, tend to life, and procure our peace.

to be ſpirituall minded] Gr. the minding of the ſpirit, or, wiſdome of the ſpirit.

V. 7. the carnall mind is enmitie againſt God] Gr. the minding of the fleſh, or, wiſedome of the fleſh.

V. 8. they that are in the fleſh] The Apoſtle here by this phraſe meaneth not thoſe that are married, as Siricius the Pope abſurdly interpreted this Scripture, and wreſted it to the diſparagement of holy wedlock in the Clergie: nor doth hee thereby underſtand all that are clothed with fleſh: for then no men upon earth ſhould pleaſe God; but to be in the fleſh, and to be after the fleſh, and to warre, and walke after the fleſh, ſignifie one and the ſame thing; to remaine ſtill in our carnall eſtate, and to be led by the motions and luſts of the fleſh. Thoſe that are ſo led, till God give them a better guide, and deliver them out of their corrupt eſtate by nature, cannot pleaſe God.

Now if] Gr. But if.

V. 10. if Chriſt be in you] He confirmeth the faithfull againſt the reliques of fleſh and ſinne, granting that they are yet (as appeareth by the corruption which is in them) touching one of their parts which he calleth the body, an impure lump, which is not yet purged from earthly filthineſſe and death: but therewithall willing them to doubt nothing of the happy ſucceſſe of this combate, becauſe that even this little ſparke of the Spirit, that is, of the grace of regeneration, which appeareth to be in them by the fruits of righteouſneſſe, is the ſeed of life, 1 Joh. 3. 9.

becauſe of ſinne] Gr. for ſinne.

becauſe of righteouſneſſe] Gr. for righteouſneſſe.

V. 11. ſhall quicken your mortall bodies] He ſpeaketh either of the reſurrection from death, or regeneration. For although the work of the Spirit quickning us be principally wrought and felt in our ſoul: yet the vertue of it is derived alſo into our body, as the inſtrument of our ſoul. Therefore the Apoſtle exhorteth, Chap. 12. verſ. 1. That we give up our bodies as a living ſacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God, Chap. 6. verſ. 12.

by his Spirit] Or, becauſe of his Spirit.

V. 12. We are debters] Here followeth an exhortation to ſubdue the fleſh daily more and more, by the vertue of the Spirit of regeneration; becauſe, ſaith he, you are debters unto God for ſo much as you have received ſo many benefits from him.

V. 15. ye have not received the ſpirit of bondage] He declareth and expoundeth by the way in theſe two verſes; by what right this ſtyle to be called children of God is given to believers: becauſe, ſaith he, they have received the grace of the Goſpel; wherein God ſheweth himſelf not as before in publiſhing of the law terrible and fearfull, but a moſt benigne and loving Father in Chriſt: ſo that with great boldneſſe we call him Father, the holy Ghoſt ſealing this adoption in our hearts by faith. By the ſpirit of bondage he meaneth the operation of the Spirit of God by the law, which doth caſt down and affright the hearts of men by the dreadfull threatnings againſt tranſgreſſors, as we ſee in the Iſraelites when God did proclaime the Law of the Tenne Commandements in their hearing upon the Mount, Ex. 20. 19. which the Apoſtle hath an eye unto here, as likewiſe Heb. 12. 18, 19.

The ſpirit of adoption] Gal. 4. 6. By the ſpirit of adoption, he underſtandeth the gratious operation of the holy Ghoſt by the preaching of the Goſpell, which quickens the hearts of true believers, and aſſureth them of their adoption.

whereby we cry] Gr. in whom, or, in that we cry. With an holy boldneſſe, ſweetly and tenderly calling on our heavenly Father, and importuning him as his children.

Abba, Father] Abba ſignifieth Father in the Syriack tongue, and the Apoſtle kept it of purpoſe, it being a word implying much tenderneſſe and affection; it being alſo uſed by children almoſt in all languages, when they begin to ſpeak: and he joyneth here the word, πατήρ, father, unto it, not only to explain the former word, but alſo the better to expreſſe the eager and earneſt and vehement deſire and affection of the faithfull in their calling upon God, as Chriſt himſelf redoubled the word Father to the ſame purpoſe, Mark. 14. 36. he ſaid Abba, Father, &c. and on the Croſſe likewiſe, he doubled the words, my God, my God. The Syriack interpreter tranſlateth Abba, our Father, and a learned interpreter truly noteth, that ſometimes the Article ὁ which is here prefixed to Father, hath the power and ſignification of an Affixe, and if it be ſo, then it ſhould ſeeme the Apoſtle here alludeth to our compellation of God in the Lords Prayer, Our Father, &c.

V. 16. beareth witneſſe with our ſpirit] The holy Ghoſt doth not only ſtirre us up to call upon God as our father, but doth alſo ſeal unto our hearts, that we are truly his children: thus the Spirit teſtifieth to our ſpirit; (as ſome render the words) but if we tranſlate them, beareth witneſſe with our ſpirit, the meaning is, that the Spirit witneſſeth together with our own ſpirit, which doth likewiſe help to bear witneſſ by obſerving the proper marks of Gods adoption, which our ſpirit findeth in our ſelves by the Spirit of God. This witneſſe though it be not alwaies alike evident and powerfull in true beleevers, yet it doth oftentimes manifeſt it ſelf, even when they are in their loweſt eſtate and greateſt extremity.

V. 17. then heires] Partakers of our fathers goods, and having a right to his kingdome, and that freely, becauſe we are his children by adoption and grace.

If ſo be that we ſuffer with him] Now Saint Paul teacheth, by what way the ſonnes of God come to that felicity, to wit, by the croſſe, as Chriſt himſelf did, and therewithall openeth unto them three fountains of comfort: the firſt, that we have Chriſt a companion and fellow of our afflictions: the ſecond, that we ſhall be his fellows alſo, and co-heirs with him in everlaſting glory: the third, that this glory we look for, doth a thouſand parts ſurmount the miſery of our preſent affliction.

V. 18. For I reckon, Gr. Tec. but I reckon or count.

that the ſufferings of this preſent time] Word for word, according to the Greek, of this now ſeaſon. Whereby the Apoſtle intimates two things: firſt, that our tribulations, and afflictions laſt but for a νῦν, that is, a moment in compariſon: ſecondly, that now, that is, this preſent life is the proper ſeaſon and opportune time, to lay out for a crown of celeſtiall glory.

are not worthy to be compared] Holdeth no proportion or correſpondency with the reward, neither in reſpect of the dignity and worth, nor in reſpect of the time: and if the ſufferings of Martyrs fall thus ſhort, how much more the beſt actions of Saints?

with the glory] Gr. are not worthy to the glory.

ſhall be revealed in us] It is now partly in us, but hid, and therefore he ſaith, ſhall be revealed. For now our life is hid with Chriſt in God, but when Chriſt who is our life ſhall appear, then ſhall we alſo appear with him in glory.

V. 19. earneſt expectation of the creature] Gr. the looking out, or, putting forth of the head. By the creature, he underſtandeth the world; and the ſingular number which he uſeth, implyeth the unitie thereof: and the doctrine which he delivereth from this verſe to the 23. concerning the world is, that as the world was not at the beginning in that ſtate which now it is, but by the ſin of man came to be ſubject to a flitting and vaniſhing eſtate; ſo it ſhall at length be reſtored with the elect, to a more ſtable and glorious eſtate.

manifeſtation of the ſonnes of God] The word manifeſtation, is not here taken actively, but paſſively, that is, the creature waiteth for the time when the ſons of God ſhall be manifeſted, and their glorious and happy eſtate, to which thoſe words of Saint John have a reference, 1 Joh. 3. 2. Behold, now we are the ſonnes of God, and it doth not yet appear, what [we ſhall be, but we know when he ſhall appear we ſhall be like him.

V. 20. not willingly, but by reaſon of him] Not by their naturall inclination, but in obedience to the Creators command, whom it pleaſed to ſhew by their fickle eſtate, how greatly he was diſpleaſed with man for his diſobedience.

ſubjected the ſame in hope] Or, upon hope. That which before he called the expectation, he here tearmeth the hope, for hope is an earneſt expectation of a thing, and it is ſo called in this place, for that God had promiſed an univerſall deliverance of the creature from the corruption and abuſe of man, which the angels and bleſſed ſouls do long for, Revel. 6. 10. and the reſt of the creatures ſeeme to have a naturall inſtinct or inclination thereunto, which in the next verſe ſave one is by a metaphor called a groaning and travelling in pain. The ground of this hope or expectation of the creature is, that having by reaſon of the fall of man ſuffered for part of his malediction, when it ſhall come to paſſe at the laſt day, that man ſhall be compleatly reſtored to grace again, then all the ſteps and traces of that malediction ſhall be utterly raſed out of the world, as is declared, Eſa. 51. 16. & 65. 17. & 66. 22.

V. 21. delivered from the bondage of corruption] Shall be ſubject no more to any ſuch alteration or corruption as now it is; much leſſe to ſerve for the object and inſtrument of ſinne: but according to every ones degree and nature, ſhall partake of the glorious eſtate of the children of God; and be fully delivered from all vanity and evils.

into the glorious libertie] Gr. into the libertie of the glory.

V. 22. For we know] Gr. Tec. but, or now we know.

the whole creation] or, every creature.

travelleth in pain] This elegant metaphor expreſſeth, not only the exceeding ſorrow of the creature, but the fruit alſo that followeth after it. For albeit the world doth ſeem for the preſent to be even at the height of its ſplendor and beauty, yet there lies that evill upon it which doth preſſe it down, and ſinke it into perdition, and that is ſinne, whereof it doth ſtrive and ſtruggle to the utmoſt to eaſe and diſburden it ſelfe, as it were, much like unto a woman in travell.

V. 23. And] Gr. but.

not onely they, but our ſelves alſo] If the reſt of the world looke for a reſtoring, and groan as it were for it, and that not in vain, let us not thinke much alſo to ſigh and groane, but groane out of hope, becauſe we are more certainly perſwaded of redemption to come, for as much as we have the firſt fruits of the Spirit.

firſt fruits of the Spirit] That is, the firſt degree of regeneration and of the gifts of the Spirit, which is conferred upon us in this life, for a pledge of the whole crop as it were, which we ſhall receive into the life to come, 2 Cor. 1. 22. Epheſ. 1. 14.

groane within our ſelves] Even from the bottome of our heart. That which the world doth by a ſecret inſtinct without ſenſe and diſcourſe; we the faithfull do by a certain knowledge, and well grounded judgment, ſighing and groaning for anguiſh under the heavy burden of ſinne that lies upon us, and for the vehement and ardent deſire of our full and finall deliverance.

V. 23. waiting for the adoption] That is, the full manifeſtation and effect of our adoption, the poſſeſſion and fruition of the inheritance which is promiſed to us in our adoption.

redemption of our body] See Luk. 21.28. That is, the freedome thereof, not onely from the miſeries which they are ſubject unto in this life, but alſo from the power of death and corruption: and in this ſenſe our Saviour taketh the word redemption in thoſe his gracious and comfortable ſpeeches to the faithfull, when he treateth of the diſſolution of the world. When theſe things come to paſſe, lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh, Luk. 24. 28.

V. 24. For we are ſaved by hope] Hope is neceſſarily joyned with faith. Seeing then that we beleeve thoſe things which we are not yet in poſſeſſion of, and hope expecteth not the thing that is preſent but future, we muſt therefore patiently wait for that which we believe ſhall come to paſſe.

But hope that is ſeene, is not hope] As the object of faith is often tearmed faith; ſo here by a metonomy, the object of hope is tearmed hope: hope, that is, the thing hoped for, the poſſeſſion of our heavenly inheritance, Coloſ. 1. 5.

V. 26. Likewiſe the Spirit] There is no cauſe why we ſhould faint under the burden of affliction, ſeeing that prayer miniſtreth unto us a preſent and moſt ſure helpe which cannot be fruſtrate, ſeeing it proceeds from the Spirit of God which dwelleth in us.

helpeth] The Greek word, συναντιλαμβάνεται, doth properly imply ſuch a help, as when another man of ſtrength and abilitie ſteppeth in to ſuſtain the burden that lyeth upon our ſhoulders, ſetting his ſhoulders under it, to lift up and bear part of it with us.

our infirmities] Gr. Tec. infirmitie. Which we are yet ſubject unto; eſpecially under the croſſe, and in afflictions, both in regard of our ſpirit which is apt to murmure, as we ſee in Job and David, and of our fleſh alſo which is moſt tender and fraile. If we reade according to Tecl. edition, infirmitie in the ſingular number, then the meaning ſeemeth to be this, the Spirit helpeth our weakneſſe and unability to pray as we ought, aſſiſting us by his holy inſpiration, both with powerfull and effectuall words, and ſighes and groans alſo that cannot be expreſſed.

maketh interceſſion] Provoketh us to prayers, and telleth us as it were within, what we ſhall ſay, and how we ſhall groane. The Sonne doth properly make interceſſion for us, who is our Advocate with the Father, 1 Joh. 2. 11. yet by a figure, the holy Ghoſt is ſaid to make interceſſion for us alſo; becauſe he rowſeth and ſtirreth us up to prayer, and prompteth, as it were, our leſſon unto us, how we ought to pray in all our neceſſities, Joh. 16. 13. Gal. 4. 6.

with groanings which cannot be uttered] That is, whoſe fervencie, force and efficacie proceeding from the ſupernaturall motion of the Spirit none is able to conceive or expreſſe. Others reade [without ſpeaking] that is, whoſe vertue and excellency doth not conſiſt in the number and flouriſh of words, as the prayers of hypocrites, Matth. 6. 7. but in moſt lively feelings, pangs and prickings of the ſpirit.

V. 27. And he] Gr. But he.

minde of the ſpirit] Or, meaning. That is, what ſobs and ſighes proceed from the inſtinct of the ſpirit, and what the ſpirit meaneth by thoſe ſighes and grones.

becauſe] Or, that.

for the ſaints] Though the remaines of ſinne cleave ſo faſt to the beſt of Gods children, that they cannot utterly ſhake them off; yet they are here termed ſaints, partly in regard of their ſincere and unfained deſire of ſanctity, and earneſtly ſtriving for it; partly in regard of Gods gracious acceptance, who taketh the will for the deed, and out of his infinite mercy in Chriſt, accounteth them for Saints, by not imputing their ſinnes unto them. Rev. 8. 3. Pſal. 32. 1. See Rom. 1. 7.

According to the will of God] That is, praying for ſuch things, and in ſuch a manner as God requireth and alloweth. 1. John 5. 14.

V. 28. And we] Gr. But we.

know] That we are not afflicted either by chance, or to our harm, but by Gods providence for our great profit, who as he choſe us from the beginning, ſo hath he predeſtinated us to be made like to the image of his Sonne, and therefore will bring us in his time, being called and juſtified, to glory by the croſſe. Heb. 12. 10.

that all things work together for good] Gr. Tec. that God worketh or maketh all things work together for good.

according to his purpoſe] Or, decree. He calleth that purpoſe which God hath appointed from everlaſting with himſelf, according to his good will and pleaſure. Matth. 11. 26. Epheſ. 1. 11, 2 Tim. 1. 9.

V. 29. for whom] Here he proveth by a Sorites or golden chaine, the glorification of Gods children, no link whereof can be unlincked, becauſe the faſtning thereof is the work of Gods omnipotence.

he did foreknow] For his own, as the word is taken, Joh. 10. 14. 27. thoſe whom he marked out as it were out of all other men in the world: and ſet his affection upon. Pſal. 1. 6. Jer. 1. 5. Matth. 7. 23.

he alſo did predeſtinate] Ordained to conformitie, both in grace and glory, with his Sonne their head, not onely in their ſufferings, but alſo in their ſanctification and glorification.

that he might be the firſt born] Intending that his own Sonne ſhould have many adopted brethren, of whom he might be the head, as the firſt-born was wont to be in all families. Coloſſ. 1. 15. 18.

V. 30. Moreover] Gr. But, or, And.

them he alſo called] To the obedience of faith, by the outward preaching of the Word, and the inward and effectuall operation of the Spirit.

them he alſo glorified] That is, will certainly and infallibly glorifie them; the cauſe, ground, and pledge whereof is, the glorification of Chriſt our head already obtained.

V. 31. What ſhall we then ſay] We have no cauſe to fear that God will not give us whatſoever is profitable for us, ſeeing that he hath not ſpared his own Sonne to ſave us.

V. 33. Who ſhall lay any thing to the charge] A moſt comfortable concluſion of the whole ſecond part of the Epiſtle, that is, of the Treatiſe of juſtification. There are no accuſers that we have need to be afraid of before God, ſeeing that God himſelf abſolveth us as juſt, and therefore much leſſe need we fear damnation, ſeeing that we reſt upon the death, and reſurrection, and the Almighty power of Jeſus Chriſt. Therefore what can there be of ſo great moment in this life, or of ſo great force and power, that might affright us, as though we might fall from the love of God wherewith he loveth us in Chriſt? Surely nothing, ſeeing that it is in it ſelf moſt conſtant and ſure, and alſo to us, being confirmed by ſtedfaſt faith.

V. 34. Chriſt that died] Gr. Tec. Chriſt Jeſus that died.

even at the right] Gr. in the right.

V. 35. tribulation] Or, affliction.

V. 36. For thy ſake, &c.] Pſal. 44. 22.

for the ſlaughter] Gr. of the ſlaughter.

V. 37. Nay in all] Gr. But, or, Neverthuleſſe in all.

V. 38. nor Angels, &c.] Under the name of Angels he alſo comprehendeth Archangels; and by principalities and powers, thoſe that are in the higheſt places of authoritie, and have greateſt power upon earth, as Kings in peace, and Commanders in warre.

from the love of God] The words may bear either of theſe conſtructions, Nothing can ſeparate us from the love which God beareth to us, or we bear to him in Chriſt Jeſus; but this latter ſeemeth better to agree with the Antecedents, For thy ſake are we killed, &c.

CHAP. IX.

Verſ. 1. I Say the truth] Becauſe the Apoſtle purpoſeth to ſpeak much of the caſting off of the Jews, he uſeth an inſinuation, declaring by a double, or rather triple oath, his great deſire of their ſalvation, and his ſingular love towards them; and withall he freely granteth them all their true prerogatives.

in Chriſt, &c.) Entering into a profound diſcourſe, hard to be believed by fleſh and blood, that he might gain the more credit to the enſuing doctrine, and the proteſtation of his ſincere affection to his countreymen, he produceth three witneſſes beyond exception, Chriſt, the holy Ghoſt, and his owne Conſcience.

V. 2. continuall ſorrow in my heart] For the incredulity of the Jews his kinſmen, and their rejection.

V. 3. my ſelf were accurſed] Or, ſeparated. Theſe words admit of a double interpretation; either that ſuch was his love to his brethren, that he deſired, if it had been poſſible, and it might have ſtood with the good will of God, to have redeemed the caſting away of the Iſraelites, with the loſſe of his own ſoul for ever. A deſire utterly impoſſible indeed, and never to be accompliſhed and uſed by the Apoſtle; onely to witneſſe his exceſſive love towards his brethren; and moſt fervent zeal for the glory of God, which he ſuppoſed would have been farre more illuſtrated by the ſaving of a whole Nation, then of one man. Or that here, by ἀνάθεμα, he means onely to be excommunicated, and held as accurſed and execrable, & as ſuch exterminated and deprived of all communion with the Church; not as if the Apoſtle did wiſh to be hardened in heart againſt Chriſt, and ſevered from his love, for that can never be wiſhed by any pious man; but out of the overflowing of his love he wiſhed, that he himſelf might bear the puniſhment which they might expect from the righteous judgement of God for their hardneſſe, ſo they might be freed from this hardneſſe and accurſedneſſe. The like we know Moſes did in the behalf of the Iſraelites, Exod. 32. 32.

my kinſmen according to the fleſh] Thoſe of mine own countrey and nation: withall inſinuating a double kindred, carnall and ſpirituall: by the carnall he was allied onely to the Jews; but by ſpirituall cognation, to all the houſhold of faith, conſiſting as well of Gentiles, as Jews.

V. 4. whom pertaineth the adoption] Gr. whoſe are the adoption. For God preferred the Iſraelites before all nations of the earth, and accounted them his peculiar people, and named them not onely his Children, but his firſt-born, Exod. 4. 22. Iſrael is my ſonne, my firſt-born, Jer. 31. 9.

and the glory] That is, the Ark of the Covenant, which was a viſible token of Gods preſence; ſo we read 1 Sam. 4. 21. The glory is departed from Iſrael, when the Ark was taken; and Pſalm. 63. 3. To ſee thy glory, as I have ſeen thee in the ſanctuary.

and the covenants] Or, teſtaments. The tables of the covenant. Epheſ. 2. 12.

and the giving of the law] The judiciall and morall.

and the ſervice of God] That is, the manner of his worſhip, preſcribed by the ceremoniall law.

and in the promiſes] Made to Abraham and his poſteritie.

V. 5. God bleſſed for ever] A moſt evident teſtimony, and pregnant proof of Chriſts divinitie. Bluſh for ſhame, ſaith Oecumenius, and be confounded, O thou wretched miſcreant Arrius, when thou heareſt Chriſt glorified by the Apoſtle with the title of God, in the ſingular number, with the article ὁ, the God, or, onely God, and God over all, and bleſſed for ever.

V. 6. Not as though the word of God hath taken none effect] Gr. But it cannot be that the word of God hath failed.

are not all Iſrael, which are of Iſrael] That is, all are not that people of God to whom the promiſes were made, who deſcend from the loines of Jacob; for there are three ſorts of Iſraels: according to the fleſh onely; ſuch are the unbelieving Jews: according to the ſpirit onely; ſuch are the faithfull among the Gentiles: according to the fleſh and ſpirit; ſuch was Jacob himſelf, and his believing poſterity.

V. 7. in Iſaac ſhall thy ſeed be called] See Gen. 21. 12. Iſaac ſhall be thy true and naturall ſonne, and therefore heir of the bleſſing, although Iſhmael was born alſo of Abraham, and circumciſed before Iſaac.

V. 8. the children of the fleſh, &c.] Not all they who are carnally born of Abraham by the courſe of nature, are the children of God, to whom the promiſe of grace was made; but the children of promiſe, that is, thoſe who were born by vertue of the promiſe, thoſe who by Gods ſpeciall grace were adopted (as Iſaac by a ſpeciall and ſingular promiſe was begot by Abraham) they onely are accounted for that ſeed mentioned in the covenant, I will be thy God, and the God of thy ſeed.

the children of the promiſe] See Gal. 4. 28.

V. 9. At this time, &c.] Or, ſeaſon. See Gen. 8. 10.

V. 11. For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evill] Namely, whereby they might be differenced one from the other; for otherwiſe they were already conceived in ſinne, and living in the mothers womb, when the ſentence of God paſſed upon them; ſo that God had not regard unto faith in the one, or infidelity in the other, but that it was upon his own abſolute pleaſure, not upon any deſire, that God preferred the younger before the elder.

any good] Gr. Tec. good, or, that good.

purpoſe of God according to election] Or, the purpoſe according to the election of God.

might ſtand] Gr. might remain.

not of works] That is, not all by obſerving any condition depending upon the will of man, which would have made the decree wavering and uncertain, ſeeing that man is ſo variable in all that he doth, or undertaketh.

but of him that calleth] Out of undeſerved grace and favour, and calleth not onely outwardly, but inwardly and effectually, to bring men to faith and goodneſſe. Rom. 8. 28, 30, 31. 2 Tim. 1. 9.

The elder ſhall ſerve the younger] See Gen. 25. 23. This prophecie is not to be underſtood of any outward ſervice or dominion; for Eſau did not ſerve Jacob after that manner, at leaſt in his own perſon; but either it is to be underſtood of the poſterity of Jacob and Eſau, that the poſterity of the elder ſhould ſerve the poſterity of the younger, as they did alſo for a time; and for this the words of the Lord by Moſes, Gen. 25. 23. are expreſſe; Two nations are in thy womb, and two ſorts of people ſhall be ſeparated from thy bowels; and the one people ſhall be ſtronger then the other, and the elder ſhall ſerve the younger. Or elſe the prophecie is to be underſtood of the eternall and ſpirituall dominion which the children of God are to enjoy hereafter, whereof the inheritance and dominion in Canaan was a type, Hebr. 11. 15, 16. We may alſo thus expound the words, The elder ſhall ſerve the younger, that is, he ſhall be deprived of his birth-right, in token that from him and his poſteritie ſhould be taken away alſo the part and claim of the bleſſed ſeed; and that he ſhould be no otherwiſe in the world, then as a ſervant in his fathers houſe, in compariſon, namely, of Jacob, who ſhall be his heir.

elder] Or, greater.

younger] Or, leſſer.

V. 13. As it is written] Foraſmuch as the word ſerving ſeemeth not to be clear enough to expreſſe the election of Jacob and rejection of Eſau in the purpoſe of God, the Apoſtle brings in this other paſſage out of Malachi 1. 2. for a declaration of the former; and proveth, that this ſame ſervitude or ſubjection of Eſau unto Jacob, was accompanied with Gods eternall and undeſerved love of Jacob, and with his juſt and righteous hatred of Eſau.

Jacob have I loved, &c.] Mal. 1. 2, 3.

V. 14. God forbid] See Chap. 3. 4.

V. 15. I will have mercy] See Exod. 33. 19. I will be favourable and gracious to whom I liſt to be favourable. God is moſt free, and cannot be taxed with unjuſtice, though he caſt brighter beams of his favour upon one then another; for although he chuſe and predeſtinate to ſalvation them that are not yet born, without any reſpect of worthineſſe; yet he bringeth not the choſen to their appointed end, but by the means of his mercy, which is a cauſe next under predeſtination: now mercy preſuppoſeth miſery, and miſery, ſinne, and a voluntary corruption of mankinde, and this corruption preſuppoſeth a pure and perfect creation. Moreover mercy is ſhewed by degrees, to wit, by calling by faith to juſtification and ſanctification, ſo that at the length wee come to glorification: Now all theſe things ordinarily following the purpoſe of God; do clearly prove that he can by no means ſeem unjuſt in loving and ſaving his.

I will have mercy] Or, I have mercy.

I will have compaſſion] Or, I have compaſſion.

V. 16. not of him that willeth] Theſe words contain the concluſion of the Apoſtles anſwere, therefore God is not unjuſt in chuſing and ſaving of his free goodneſſe ſuch as it pleaſeth him; as he alſo anſwered Moſes when he prayed for all the people. By will, he meaneth here, the thoughts and deſires of the heart; by running, our earneſt endeavours, and good works, and commendable courſe of life; to neither of which yet hee aſcribeth the praiſe, but onely to the mercy of God. Upon this verſe S. Auſtine acutely obſerves in his Enchyridion, againſt the Pelagians, that when the Apoſtle ſaith, It is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth; the meaning cannot be, that it is not wholly of him that willeth, or of him that runneth, but partly of him that willeth, and partly of him that runneth, and partly of God that hath mercy: for according to that expoſition, the Apoſtle might have ſaid, It is not of him that hath mercy, but of him that willeth or runneth; becauſe, according to their Pelagian tenet, it is not onely of God that hath mercy, but partly of him that willeth and of him that runneth. But if no man dare ſay that it is not of God that hath mercy, for that were in direct terms to contradict the Apoſtle; it remaineth therefore that this muſt be the ſenſe, That it is not at all of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but wholly of God, who hath mercy, qui voluntatem praeparat adjuvandam, & adjuvat praeparatam.

V. 17. Even for this ſame purpoſe, &c.] See Exod. 9. 16.

have I raiſed thee up] Or, ſtirred, or, ſet thee up. The words may bear either of theſe interpretations; I have made thee to ſtand, that is, I have reſerved thee and not ſtruck thee, or deſtroyed thee with the peſtilence as I did the reſt of the people, Exod. 9. 15. Or, for this cauſe I have ſet thee upon the throne of Egypt, or have placed thee as it were in a high theater, to make thee an example to all that ſhall dare to ſet themſelves againſt me, by the fearfull judgements that I ſhall inflict upon thee and thy people.

throughout all the earth] Gr. in all the earth.

V. 18. he hardeneth] By Gods with-holding his grace, and not mollifying their rebellious hearts it cometh to paſſe, that all the means which he employeth outwardly, though never ſo good and holy, are perverted by them, to the encreaſe of their hardneſſe. Moreover, it is to be noted, that as the Text ſaith, that God hardned Pharaohs heart; ſo it is ſaid, Exod. 8. 15. 32. that Pharaoh hardened his own heart, ſo that he could have none excuſe; ſith Gods induration was inflicted upon him moſt juſtly and deſervedly for his wilfull oppoſing God, and maliciouſly rebelling againſt him.

V. 19. Why doth he yet finde fault] This is another objection, which may ariſe in mens mindes, either from carnall reaſon, or by the ſuggeſtion of the devill: If God doth appoint to everlaſting deſtruction ſuch as he liſteth, and that cannot be hindred, or withſtood that he hath once decreed, how doth he juſtly condemn them which periſh by his will?

V. 20. but O man, who art thou] Although the will of God is alwayes grounded upon good reaſon for whatſoever he doth; (For his will is the rule of righteouſneſſe, and is never ſevered from his wiſedome, howſoever the reaſon be not manifeſt unto us, or tranſcend our underſtanding, Rom. 11. 33.) yet he is not to give an accompt to man or any other creature of his actions, and therefore the Apoſtle here ſtoppeth the mouth of all that dare to move ſuch curious queſtions; why God diſpoſeth thus or thus of men: God hath alwayes a reaſon of his will, but his will made known to us, ought to ſtand for an all-ſufficient reaſon, and it as little becomes man who is duſt and aſhes to expoſtulate with God, as it doth the clay to expoſtulate with the potter.

of the ſame lump] By this metaphor, is intimated the originall of all mankind out of one bloud, Act. 17. 26. out of this corrupt maſſe, it is in Gods power of his free will to appoint ſome to everlaſting glory, and others to everlaſting ſhame and ignominie: as it is in the potters power at his pleaſure, of the ſame ſtuffe to make up one veſſell to ſerve for honourable uſes, and occaſions, as veſſels for eating and drinking, and utenſils for ſtate and ornament, and another veſſell for baſe and abject employments.

one veſſel unto honour, and another unto diſhonour] Gr. this unto honour, and that unto diſhonour.

V. 22. What if God, willing.] Gr. but if. As if he ſhould ſay, Haſt thou any juſt cauſe to reply againſt God? ſeeing that in exerciſing that abſolute freedome of his ſoveraigntie, to ſave one and puniſh others, he uſeth ſuch longſuffering toward the wicked to allure and draw them to repentance, which yet notwithſtanding, doth but harden them ſo much the more in their evill, Rom. 2. 4, 5. In this ſpeech the Apoſtle ſeemeth to have a ſpeciall eye on the Jews, towards whom God had uſed the utmoſt of long-ſuffering before he would altogether reject them.

veſſels of wrath] That is, thoſe men on whom he will exerciſe his ſevere judgement, being formerly compared unto veſſels of diſhonour, and after ſaid to be fitted to deſtruction, that is, whoſe ſtate and condition is ſo ſinfull and corrupted, that neither being pardoned nor amended by the grace of God, it can ſerve for no other uſe, then to be a dreadfull example and ſubject of his juſt judgement.

V. 28. For he will finiſh the work] Or, the account. Some take this as a threatning againſt the wicked Jews whom God ſhould cut off, and reject, and thereby bring that unkinde and unthankfull people to an extream fewneſſe, alwayes preſerving ſuch as are his among that nation. Others underſtand here the conſtancie of the decree of God in keeping and preſerving his, notwithſtanding the rebellion of the greater multitude of others, which agreeth well with the verſe following.

V. 29. Except the Lord of Sabboth had left us a ſeed] Iſa. 1. 9.

V. 30. which followed not after righteouſneſſe] So then, the Gentiles had no works to move and procure Gods mercy before-hand, and in that the Gentiles attained to that which they ſought not for, the mercy of God is to be thanked for it; and in that the Jews attained not to that which they ſought after, they are to thank none for that but themſelves, becauſe they ſought it not aright.

V. 31. which followed] Gr. following.

CHAP. X.

Verſ. 1. BRethren] The Apoſtle intending to ſet forth in the Jews, an example of marvellous obſtinacie, beginneth with a ſweet inſinuation, as it were anointing the brim of the cup with honey, out of which they were to drink a bitter potion.

V. 3. For they being ignorant] The ignorance of the law which we ought to know, excuſeth none before God; eſpecially, it excuſeth not them who are of his houſhold.

of Gods righteouſneſſe] That is, the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt, both active and paſſive, imputed to every believer.

going about to eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſſe] Gr. Tec. being zealous to eſtabliſh. The firſt entrance into our vocation to ſalvation, is to renounce our own righteouſneſſe: the next to embrace the righteouſneſſe by Chriſt which God freely offereth us in the Goſpel.

V. 4. For Chriſt is the end of the law] Chriſt is ſaid to be the end of the law, partly becauſe all the ceremonies of the law prefigured him, and had reference unto him, as their ſcope, end, and accompliſhment: partly, becauſe by the law ceremoniall, morall, and judiciall, the conſciences of all that were under the law were convinced of ſinnes, the expiation whereof could no where be found, but in the ſacrifice of Chriſts death. Or Chriſt may be ſaid to be the end of the law; becauſe the end of the law is perfect righteouſneſſe, that a man may be juſtified thereby, which end we cannot attain of our ſelves through the frailtie of our fleſh, but by Chriſt we attain it, who hath fulfilled the law for us.

for righteouſneſſe] Gr. to righteouſneſſe.

to every one] Not only to the Jews, but alſo to the Gentiles.

V. 5. That the man which doth thoſe things] See Lev. 18. 5. Ezek. 20. 11.

ſhall live by them] Gr. in them. In the Greek it is in them, which is a kinde of Hebraiſme, ſignifying by them, for ſuch is the condition of the law, he that doth the works of the law ſhall live; but curſed is he that confirmeth not all the works of the law to do them, Deut. 27. 16. To which our Saviours anſwer to the young man in the Goſpel, who demanded of him what he ſhould do to obtain eternall life, agreeth, ſaying, Keep the commandements: Do this and thou ſhalt live.

V. 6. Say not in thine heart, Who ſhall aſcend into heaven] See Deut. 30. 12. That the law hath regard and tendeth to Chriſt, that is a manifeſt proof, for that it propoundeth ſuch a condition as can be, and is fulfilled of none but Chriſt onely, which being imputed unto us by faith, our conſcience is quieted, ſo that now no man can ask, Who can aſcend up into heaven, or bring us from hell, ſeeing the Goſpel teacheth that both of theſe are done by Chriſt, and that for their ſakes who with true faith embrace him, who calleth them. Or, God hath ſo plainly and fully ſhewed the way of ſalvation, that we need not ſeek further for it, above or below.

V. 8. The word is nigh thee] Deut. 30. 14. By the word Moſes underſtood the law which the Lord publiſhed with his own voice, and Paul applies it to the preaching of the goſpel, which was the perfection of the law.

V. 9. the Lord Jeſus] Gr. Tec. the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

V. 10. believeth unto righteouſneſſe] Gr. belief is to righteouſneſſe. Faith is ſaid to juſtifie; and furthermore ſeeing the confeſſion of the mouth is an effect of faith, and it is the way to come to ſalvation, it followeth, that faith is alſo ſaid to ſave.

V. 11. Whoſoever believeth on him] See Iſa. 28. 16. To believe in God, is to yield and conſent to Gods promiſe of ſalvation by Chriſt, and that not onely in generall, but in particular, that the promiſes pertain to us, whereupon ariſeth a ſure truſt.

V. 12. difference between &c.] Gr diſtinction of Jew and Greek.

V. 13. For whoſoever ſhall call upon the name of the Lord] See Joel 2. 32. Acts 2. 21. True calling upon the name of God is the teſtimony of true faith, and true faith of a true vocation, and a true and effectuall vocation or calling, of true election. By calling on Gods name he underſtandeth the true worſhip of the true God.

V. 15. How beautifull are the feet of them that preach the goſpel of peace] Gr. Tec. who bring glad tidings of good things. See Iſa. 57. 2. Nahum. 1. 15.

V. 16. Lord, who hath believed our report] See Iſa. 53. 1. John 12. 38.

our] Gr. the hearing of us.

report] Or, preaching.

V. 18. But I ſay, have they not heard] As for the Jews which have not believed, what can be ſaid thereof? Is it for that they have heard nothing of the goſpel? Surely, no; for the goſpel like unto the Sunne, Pſal. 19. 5. hath caſt his beams over the whole world: May we not therefore ſay, that the fault lies in themſelves, who rejected that light of ſaving knowledge which the Gentiles have embraced? The Apoſtle anſwereth, verſ. 19. that it is not to be gainſayed, ſeeing Moſes had proteſted the very ſame of old.

their ſound went] See Pſal. 19. 4. This place is taken out of Pſal. 19. 4. and is properly meant of that knowledge of God which all men may have by contemplation of the heavens, and the creatures therein; yet it is by the Apoſtle very fitly applied to the ſound of the word preached by the Apoſtles.

V. 19. Did not Iſrael know] Or, hath not Iſrael known.

I will not provoke you] See Deut. 32. 21.

them that are no people] He calleth the Heathen no people, becauſe they are not ſaid to live, but to die, who are appointed for everlaſting condemnation: Or elſe we are to underſtand the Pronoune my, and the ſenſe is this, I will provoke you to jealouſie by a people, that is not my people, that is, not compriſed within my covenant.

V. 20. I was found] Or, I have been found. See Iſa. 65. 1.

I was made] Or, I have been made.

All day long, &c.] See Iſa. 65. 2.

CHAP. XI.

Verſ. 1. HAth God caſt away his people] Gr. Tec. his people whom he foreknew. Now the Apoſtle ſheweth, how the doctrine formerly delivered is to be applied to others; teaching us, that all the Jews in particular are not caſt away: and therefore we ought not to pronounce raſhly of private perſons, whether they be of the number of the elect or not.

V. 2. which he foreknew] Which he loved and choſe from everlaſting, and decreed to ſave before the foundations of the world were laid.

Wot ye not what the Scripture ſaith of Elias] Gr. in Elias. In the dayes of Elias when there appeared no face of the Church to the world, yet God knew his Elect, and of them a great ſtore and number; whereupon this alſo is concluded, that we ought not raſhly to pronounce of any man or people, that they are reprobate, ſeeing the Church is oft times brought to that ſtate, that even the moſt watchfull and ſharp-ſighted Paſtours may think it to be clean extinct and put out.

maketh interceſſion to God againſt] Or, communeth with God againſt.

V. 3. Lord, they have killed thy Prophets, &c.] See 1 Kings 19. 14.

digged down the Altars] The prophet by theſe words doth not any way approve of thoſe Altars which were erected in Iſrael, contrary to the law which deſigned a certaine place, namely, at Jeruſalem, where they ought to have offered their ſacrifice to God; but he taxeth the impietie and idolatrie of that people, who erected Altars to Baal, and ſacrificed upon them; but pulled down the Altars which were erected in honour of God, and would by no meanes ſacrifice unto him, or ſerve him.

life] Gr. ſoul.

V. 4. anſwer of God] Gr. oracle of God.

I have reſerved to my ſelf] See 1 King. 19. 18. He ſpeaketh of remnants, and the reſerved people which were choſen from everlaſting, and not of remnants which ſhould be choſen afterwards; for they were not choſen becauſe they were not Idolaters, but rather, they were not therefore Idolaters, becauſe they were choſen, and by Gods grace kept from that and other foul ſinnes.

ſeven thouſand men] That is, a very great number, by a Synechdoche. So we reade, Gen. 33. 3. that Jacob bowed himſelf to the ground before his brother ſeven times; and Pſal. 12. 6. Silver is ſaid to be tried in the furnace ſeven times, that is, very often; and Chriſt telleth Peter, that he is to forgive his brother not ſeven times, but ſeventy times ſeven times, that is, how often ſoever he offendeth him, if he be ſorry for it, and ſeek to be reconciled unto him.

the knee to the image of Baal] The article in the Originall, is feminine, τῇ Βάαλ, not that the Heathen believed Baal to be a feminine Idol, for by Baal, as Sanchoniacho and others affirm, they meant Phœbus or the Sunne: but the article agrees with εἰκόνι underſtood, that is, the image of Baal. The word Baal ſignifieth as much as patron, or one in whoſe power another is, which name the Romiſh idolaters to this day give to their idols, naming them patrons or patroneſſes, or ladies guardians.

V. 5. at this preſent] Gr. in this preſent.

there is a remnant] That is, God hath left ſome Jews yet to remain, which do not reject but embrace the goſpel, and are effectually called alſo; though in compariſon of the great multitude that rejected and continued in their unbelief, they are but as a ſmall remnant or parcell torn from the reſt. Iſaiah 6. 13.

the election of grace] Not whereby men chuſe grace, but whereby God chuſeth us of his grace and goodneſſe.

V. 6. And if by grace] This ſeems to be added againſt thoſe amongſt the Jews, that having received the profeſſion of Chriſtianity, yet ſtill did put part of their righteouſneſſe and confidence in the works of the law; which the Apoſtle here proves to be a falſe and vaine perſwaſion, for as much as thoſe two ſorts of righteouſneſſe and ſalvation, to wit, by the covenant of grace, and the covenant of works, were altogether incompatible. See Rom. 4. 2, 4 and Gal. 5. 2, 4.

no more of works] This ſaying beateth down flat to the ground the doctrine of merit, and of all kinde and manner of works, whereby our juſtifiers of themſelves do teach, That works are either wholly or partly the cauſe of our juſtification.

otherwiſe grace is no more grace] Whatſoever is given for the merit of our works, is not freely given, and conſequently is not χάρις, or, gratia; for, as S. Auſtine ſpeaketh elegantly againſt the Pelagians, Gratia non eſt gratia ullo modo, niſi ſit gratuita omni modo; Grace is not ſaid to be grace any way, or in any ſenſe, if it be not free every way.

otherwiſe worke is no more work] That is it loſeth the nature of a work done to merit by; for if we are elected and choſen partly for our workes ſake: and partly by grace, then the merit of our works is no merit; for as Bernard rightly concludeth, If merit enter firſt, it excludeth grace; and if grace enter firſt, it excludeth merit: non bene conveniunt, nec in una ſede morantur.

V. 7. Iſrael hath not obtained] That is, thoſe among the Jews, who boaſted that they were Iſraelites, and gloried in the fleſh, and ſought to eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſſe.

the election hath obtained] That is, the elect (have obtained) by a metonymie, which the Apoſtle uſeth, more emphatically to expreſſe the cauſe of their adoption and ſalvation; to wit, Gods free election.

blinded] Or, hardened.

V. 8. God hath given them the ſpirit of ſlumber] So the Hebrew ſignifieth, Iſ. 29 10. out of which the Apoſtle took theſe words; yet in citing them he followeth the tranſlation of the Seventie here, and elſewhere, that the Gentiles to whom he wrote, who underſtood that tranſlation, and not the Hebrew, might not take any offence by reaſon of ſome ſeeming differences between it and the originall. The Greek word uſed by the Apoſtle, κατανύξεως cometh not from νύξ, night; as if he ſhould ſay, The ſpirit of men in a deepe ſleepe in the night; but from νύσσω νύξω, to prick or bore through: κατανενύχθαι, ſaith Oecumenius, is ἐμπαγῆναι καὶ προσηλωθῆναι, to be faſtned, and as it were nailed in evill, to be obſtinately wicked: howbeit the Hebrew originall, and the tranſlation of the Septuagint, which the Apoſtle followeth, may be eaſily reconciled, if by the ſpirit of ſlumber we underſtand ſuch a dead ſleep, as may be obſerved in thoſe that are prickt or ſtung with venemous ſerpents, out of which they hardly or never awake.

ſlumber] Or, remorſe; or, pricking through.

eyes that they ſhould not ſee &c.] See Iſa. 6. 9. That is, eyes unfit to ſee with, and ears unfit to hear with, or eyes and ears, wherewith (as the caſe ſtood with them) they could neither ſee nor hear.

V. 9. Let their table be made a ſnare] See Pſal. 69. 22. As unhappy birds are enticed to death by that which is their ſuſtenance: ſo did that turne to the Jews deſtruction, of which they ſought life; to wit, the law of God, for the prepoſterous zeale whereof they refuſed the Goſpel.

and bow down their back] Gr. bow together, or crook. If we follow this tranſlation of the Septuagint according to the letter, then as the Greek Scholiaſt obſerveth, we have here a prediction of the Jews captivity and ſubjection to the Romanes, who enforced them to bow, with the heavy burdens they laid upon them. But if we follow the Hebrew Originall, and render the words, Make their loines continually ſhake; then we may well underſtand the Prophecie of terrours of conſcience, and the ſpirit of bondage, to which the unbelieving Jews are ſubject even to this day.

V. 11. I ſay then, Have they ſtumbled] God appointed this caſting off of the Jews, that it might be an occaſion to call the Gentiles, and again that this calling of the Gentiles might be an occaſion to reſtore the Jews, to wit, that they being enflamed and provoked by the emulation of the Gentiles, might themſelves at length embrace the Goſpel. And hereby we may learn that the ſeverity of God ſerveth as well to the ſetting forth of his glory, as his mercy doth; and alſo that God prepareth himſelfe a way to mercy by his ſeverity: ſo that we ought not raſhly to deſpaire of any man, nor proudly to triumph over others; but rather provoke them to an holy emulation, that God may be glorified in them alſo.

God forbid] See Chap. 3. 4.

to provoke them to jealouſie] By this meanes their fall through Gods goodneſſe conduceth to their riſe: for through their fall ſalvation came to the Gentiles, and this ſalvation of the Gentiles bred emulation in the Jews, and this emulation was a meanes to bring them to beleeve the Goſpel, whereby they might be raiſed from their fall.

V. 12. the riches of the world] By riches he meaneth the knowledge of Chriſt in whom all the treaſures of riches and knowledge are hid; and by the world, all nations diſperſed throughout the whole world.

diminiſhing] Or, decay; or loſſe.

V. 13. I am the apoſtle] Gr. Tec. I remain the apoſtle.

V. 15. but life from the dead] The words may beare a double conſtruction, either they may have reference to the Jewes that their aſſumption into the Church will prove no leſſe then their raiſing from their death of ſinne to the life of grace: or that the comming in of the Jews will ſerve as a great meanes to bring in all the Gentiles, and by the Goſpel make them partakers of eternall life. For it ſhall come to paſſe that when the Jews generally embrace the Goſpel; the world ſhall as it were quicken again and riſe up from death to life; when that nation ſhall be converted, there ſhall be ſuch perfect and entire joy as in the end of the world at the reſurrection of the dead, ſaith the Greek Scholiaſt.

V. 16. For if the firſt-fruits be holy] He alludeth to the firſt-fruits of thoſe loaves, by the offering whereof all the whole crop of corn was ſanctified, Ezek. 44. 30. ſo that the owners might uſe the reſt the yeer following with a good conſcience, Levit. 23. 14.

if the root be holy] The nation of the Jews being conſidered in their ſtock and root, that is, in Abraham, is holy, although that many of the branches be cut off. Therefore in judging our brethren we muſt not ſtick in their unworthineſſe, to think that they are all at once caſt off: but we ought to conſider the root of the covenant, and rather goe back to their anceſtours which were faithfull, that we may know that the bleſſing of the covenant reſteth in ſome of their poſterity; as we alſo find proofe thereof in our ſelves, Eſa. 65. 8.

V. 17. And if] Gr. But if.

amongſt them] Or, for them.

V. 18. Boaſt not againſt the branches] There is no cauſe why the Gentiles which have obtained mercy ſhould triumph over the Jews, which now refuſe the grace of God, ſeeing they are graffed into the ſtock of the Jews anceſtors; but let them rather take heed that that be not found in them which is worthily condemned in the Jewes: and hence we are further to learn that we ought to be ſtudious of Gods glory, even in reſpect of our neighbours; ſo farre ought we to be from bragging and glorying for that we are preferred before others by ſpeciall grace.

V. 20. becauſe of unbelief] Gr. by unbelief.

but fear] See thou ſtand in awe of God modeſtly and carefully. By fear, he meaneth not a fear of diffidence or diſtruſt, but a fear of watchfulneſſe or circumſpection.

V. 21 naturall branches] He calleth them naturall, not becauſe they had any holineſſe by nature, but becauſe they were borne of them whom the Lord ſet apart for himſelfe from other nations by his league and covenant which he freely made with them.

take heed leſt he alſo ſpare not thee] Gr. Tec. neither will he ſpare thee.

V. 22. and ſeveritie of God] In the Originall ἀποτομίαν, which ſignifieth a reſection or cutting off, and the metaphor ſeems to be taken from a Gardiner, who with a pruning knife cuts off dead boughs, or luxuriant ſtems; Or it may allude to the ſpeeches of a man moved in choler, which are for the moſt part abrupt, and cut off as it were in the midſt; and thereby is ſignified the rigour of judgement, or Gods ſevere juſtice.

on them which fell] That is, over the Jews that ſtumbled at the rock of offence through their unbelief in Chriſt, and therefore were juſtly rejected of God. Which ſeverity God uſed towards them, that we ſhould take example and warning by them, to give good heed, leſt we fall into the ſame unbelief with them, and be rejected alike as they were.

if thou continue in his goodneſſe] In the ſtate of grace wherein thou art ſet, that is, if thou beare the fruits thereof, and render God thanks for the ſame.

otherwiſe thou ſhalt alſo be cut off] As an unfruitfull branch, Joh. 15. 2. But here it is to be noted that this paſſage ought to be underſtood of the outward incorporation into the Church by profeſſion, whereof many hypocrites do partake, and not of the inward and efficacious ingraffing into the myſticall body of Chriſt by a lively faith and the communion of the Spirit according to the election of God, which is ever accompanied with perſeverance. See Matth. 15. 13. 2 Tim. 2. 19.

V. 23. ſhall be graffed in] Many are now for a ſeaſon cut off, that is, without the root, who in their time ſhall be graffed in; and again there are a great ſort, which according to the outward ſhew ſeem to be graffed in, who notwithſtanding through their own fault afterwards are cut off and quite caſt away, which thing is eſpecially to be conſidered in nations and peoples, as the Jews and Gentiles.

V. 24. which is wild by nature] Underſtand nature not as it was firſt made, but as it was corrupted in Adam, and ſo derived from him to his poſteritie.

contrary to nature] Gr. beſide nature.

good olive-tree] Into the people of the Jews which God had ſanctified of his meer grace: and he ſpeaketh of the whole nation own] Or, proper.

V. 25. of this myſterie] That is, touching the laſt converſion of the Jews obſcurely intimated by the Prophets, Eſa. 11. 11. Zach. 12. 10. but clearly ſet forth in the Goſpel, Mat. 23. 39. Luk. 21. 24. 2 Cor. 3. 16.

in your own conceits] Gr. Tec. in your ſelves.

blindneſſe] Or, hardneſſe.

in part] He ſpeaketh in reſpect of the greater part of all the people, of whom there were excepted but a very ſmall number of the elect ones.

happened] Or, come.

the fulneſſe of the Gentiles] The full number or multitude, and as it were the body of them.

be come in] Into the Church of God by profeſſing the Chriſtian faith.

V. 26. all Iſrael] The body of this people in generall, ſhall be brought again into the way of ſalvation, and re-eſtabliſhed into the Church. Or, the whole Iſrael of God conſiſting of Jews and Gentiles, Gal. 6. 10.

There ſhall come, &c.] See Iſa. 59. 20.

out of Sion] Iſaiah ſpeaking of the firſt coming of Chriſt in the fleſh, ſaith, he ſhall come into Sion; but the Apoſtle applying that paſſage to his ſecond manifeſtation in grace toward the Jews, ſaith here, out of Zion; that is, out of the midſt of the Church where he hath his dwelling and abode by his Spirit, will he call and recollect the Jews again.

the deliverer, and ſhall turn] Gr. Tec. and the deliverer ſhall turn.

V. 28. touching the election] In that God reſpecteth not what they deſerve, but what he promiſed to Abraham.

V. 30. for as ye in times paſt] Although they which are hardened are worthily puniſhed, yet hath not God ſuffered this ſtubborneſſe of the Jews ſo to come to paſſe properly for any hatred to that nation, but that an entry might be as it were opened to bring in the Gentiles; and that afterwards the Jews being enflamed with emulation of that mercy which is ſhewed to the Gentiles, might themſelves alſo be partakers of the ſame benefit, and ſo it might appear that both Jews and Gentiles are ſaved only by the free mercy and grace of God, which could not have been ſo manifeſt, if at the beginning God had brought all together into one Church: or if he had ſaved the nation of the Jews without this interruption.

believed] Or, obeyed.

V. 31. believed] Or, obeyed.

V. 32. concluded] Or, ſhut them all up together.

V. 33. O the depth of the riches] The Apoſtle cryeth out as aſtoniſhed with this wonderfull wiſdome of God, which he teacheth us religiouſly to reverence, and not curiouſly and profanely to ſearch beyond the compaſſe of that, which God hath revealed unto us in his word.

V. 34. For who hath known, &c.] See Iſa. 40. 13. Wiſd. 9. 13. 1 Cor. 2. 16.

V. 36. For of him] As of the firſt cauſe, that diſpoſeth and ordereth all things according to his wiſe counſell.

through him] Gr. by. As working himſelf whatſoever is neceſſary for mans ſalvation, and powerfully performing whatſoever is once ordained, and decreed by his counſell.

and to him] As to the utmoſt end, to whoſe glory every thing muſt tend, and be reduced, Pro. 16. 4. The Lord hath made all things for himſelf.

all things] Not onely thoſe that concern the creation, preſervation, and government of all things in this world: but alſo, and principally whatſoever belongeth to the glorious worke of mans eternall ſalvation, whereof the Apoſtle doth here ſpecially treat.

to whom] Gr. to him.

CHAP. XII.

Verſ. 1. I Beſeech you] The fourth part of this Epiſtle, which after the finiſhing of the chief points of Chriſtian doctrine, conſiſteth in the delivering precepts of Chriſtianity: and firſt he layeth generall grounds, whereof the chiefeſt is this, that every man conſecrate himſelf wholly to the ſpirituall ſervice of God, and do as it were ſacrifice himſelf, truſting to the grace of God.

your bodies] That is, your ſelves, by a Synecdoche. In times paſt other bodies then our own, to wit, the bodies of beaſts were offered, but now our own muſt be offered.

a living ſacrifice] In times paſt dead ſacrifices were offered, but now we muſt offer ſuch as have the Spirit of life in them; by life he meaneth the new life in the regeneration of the Spirit, and this ſacrifice is to be offered not as in the old Law, by preſenting it alive before the Lord, and ſhedding the bloud upon the Altar, But by a ſpirituall ſlaying and mortifying our carnall luſts and affections, Rom. 6. 11. 2 Cor. 5. 15. Coloſ. 3. 9.

reaſonable ſervice] Or, worſhip. That is, a ſpirituall ſervice, ſo called in oppoſition to the carnall rites of the ceremoniall law; and he calleth it a reaſonable ſervice, becauſe it conſiſteth not in the outward offering up of unreaſonable beaſts, as in the Old teſtament: but in the offering up of our ſelves, who are men endued with reaſon. The like exhortation we have, Heb. 13. 15. 1 Pet. 2. 5. Or, agreeable to the rules of true reaſon.

V. 2. be not conformed to this world] That is, take not upon you the forme and faſhion of this world, which lyeth altogether in wickedneſſe, 1 Joh. 5. 19. apply your ſelves not to the cuſtomes, diſpoſitions, and practiſes of worldly and corrupt men, deſcribed by the Apoſtle, Rom. 13. 13. Epheſ. 4. 18, 19. 1 Pet. 4. 3. 1 Joh. 2. 16.

but be ye transformed] See Epheſ. 4. 23. Changed, or altered in forme and faſhion, not according to the body, but according to the ſoul and the faculties thereof; That is, be ye regenerated and changed from your naturall depravation in all parts of your ſoul, beginning from the very higheſt; namely, the underſtanding and reaſon, by which alſo the Spirit of God doth work upon all other inferiour faculties.

by] Or, in.

that ye may prove] See Epheſ. 5. 17. Give proof by your godly life, that ye underſtand indeed what is the good will of God; or that by the gift of a ſpirituall judgement you may diſcern and approve that the law of God is altogether good, and perfectly compleat, Pſal 19. 8. 11. Rom. 7. 12. and to ſubmit our ſelves unto the ſame; or that we may diſcern what according to the law is good and acceptable unto God, and exactly correſpondent to his will revealed in his word, which is the perfect rule according to which we are to frame our lives.

acceptable] Gr. well pleaſing.

V. 3. through] Or, by.

through the grace given unto me] By grace he meaneth his Apoſtolicall office freely beſtowed upon him, as the word is taken, Rom. 1. 15.

to think of himſelf more highly] Or, to be wiſe.

but to think ſoberly] Gr. to ſobrietie. We ſhall be ſober if we take not that upon us which we have not, nor brag of that which we have. In the Greek there is a moſt elegant Paranomaſie in three words of like ſound, ὑπερφρονεῖν, φρονεῖν and σωφρονεῖν, which cannot be expreſſed in any other language, and the Greek Scholiaſt thereupon obſerves, that the Apoſtle ſometimes uſeth choyce figures of Rhetorick to ſhew that he was not ignorant of that art: and yet not over frequently, that he might retain the ſimplicity and majeſty of his Apoſtolike ſtyle.

to every man, &c.] See Epheſ. 4. 7.

the meaſure of faith] By faith he meaneth the knowledge of God in Chriſt, and the gifts which the holy Ghoſt poureth upon the faithfull.

V. 4. For as we have many members] See 1 Cor. 12. 12. There is a double reaſon of the precept going before; the one is becauſe God hath not appointed every thing to be done by every man, but conſtituted diverſe vocations, the bounds whereof men ought not to paſſe: the other for that the diverſity and inequality of vocations and gifts redoundeth to our commoditie, ſeeing the ſame is therefore inſtituted, that we ſhould be bound one to another: whereupon it followeth, that no man ought to be grieved thereat, ſeeing that the uſe of every private gift is common.

Office] Gr. action, or, operation.

V. 6. Having then gifts] Or, but having gifts. See 1 Pet. 4. 10, 11.

whether prophecie] By prophecy he underſtandeth not the extraordinary gift of fore-telling things future, but the gift of expounding the holy Scriptures, as the Apoſtle himſelf declareth the meaning of the word, 1 Cor. 4. 3.

proportion of faith] Some by proportion of faith underſtand an analogie to the Articles of the Creed, and from hence they collect this doctrine, that in all interpretations of holy Scripture we have an eye to the Articles of the Chriſtian faith, and give expoſitions conformable thereunto; and that rule is good: but yet it ſeemes that the Apoſtles words have another meaning here; that he that hath the gift of prophecie ought to exerciſe it according to the proportion of faith, that is according to the meaſure of that knowledge of heavenly myſteries revealed in Scripture, and given unto him.

V. 7. he that teacheth] Gr. Tec. gifts of teaching. Here he divideth (as ſome conceive) Prophets into Doctors and Paſtours; the Doctours ſimply ſearched into the meaning of Scripture, but the Paſtours beſides the expoſition of the Text, or commenting upon it, applied the ſenſe of Scripture to the ſpeciall uſe of their hearers. The former reſemble our Readers in the Univerſitie; the latter our Preachers.

V. 8 giveth] Or, imparteth.

with ſimplicity] Or, liberally.

V. 9. Let love be without diſſimulation] Now he cometh to the duties of the ſecond Table, which he deriveth from charity, which is, as it were, the fountain of them all, and he deſcribeth it by ſincerity, hatred of evill, earneſt ſtudy of good things, and good affection to help our neighbour. If it be demanded, why the Apoſtle addeth here the Epithete, ſincere, or without diſſimulation, to love rather, then to other vertues? the anſwer is twofold, either becauſe they are all compriſed in love, or becauſe there is almoſt no man who maketh not ſome ſhew of love or friendſhip to his neighbour, though he bear ſecret rancor and malice in his heart.

Abhorre] Gr. abhorring, or, hating.

cleave] Gr. cleaving.

V. 10. Be kindly affectionated] See Heb. 13. 1. φιλοστοργία, ſignifieth naturall affection, and φιλαδελφία love of the brethren. His meaning therefore is, that we ſhould improve the naturall affection we bear towards any to a higher pitch, even to Chriſtian charitie.

with brotherly love] Or, in the love of the brethren.

in honour preferring one another] Gr. going before one another. The meaning is not that we ſhould ambitiouſly ſtrive to outſtrip one another in getting places of honour or preferment one before another; but ſtrive to prevent one another in offices of courteſie and humanitie, and in giving honour one to the other, and yeelding the place and the hand. For Chriſtian humility teacheth not only not to prefer our ſelves above our equals; nor to equall our ſelves to our betters, but alſo in ſome caſes to equall our ſelves to our inferiours, yea and to preferre them alſo above us. Primus gradus &c. 1. Inferiorem ſe exhibere æquali. 2. Æqualem ſe exhibere inferiori. 3. Inferiorem ſe exhibere etiam inferiori. Bernardus.

V. 11. Not ſlothfull in buſineſſe] Or, remiſſe in induſtrie. In the Originall it is word for word, not remiſſe in your ſtudy or diligence, that namely which every one ought to employ about his calling, in a ſpirituall carefulneſſe to the glory and ſervice of God, and to the good of the Church and the ſalvation of the godly.

fervent in ſpirit] Zealous, not cold, not luke-warme, but earneſt in a holy ſpirituall affection.

ſerving the Lord] In ſome Editions it is not κυρίῳ, but καιρῷ, that is, ſerving the time; which reading if we ſhould admit, we muſt not underſtand the Apoſtle as if he commanded us to be temporizers, or to apply our ſelves to the corrupt cuſtomes and manners of the times; but to keep time in all our actions, and do them in the fitteſt ſeaſon, and as the Apoſtle elſewhere exhorteth, to walk wiſely towards them that are without, redeeming the time, Coloſ. 4. 5. Epheſ. 5. 16. becauſe the dayes are evill: But in the moſt ancient Copie of Tecla, and generally in the moſt correct Editions, the word is not καιρῷ, but κυρίῳ, not the time, but the Lord; and the meaning is, that we ſhould have no other aime or ſcope in all our actions then his ſervice, and whatſoever our employment be, to conſider with all diligence as ſervants of the Lord, what his ſervice and honour requireth, Pſal. 2. 11. Epheſ. 6. 7.

V. 12. tribulation] Or, affliction.

V. 13. Diſtributing] Gr. communicating.

V. 14. Bleſſe them, &c.] See Matth. 5. 44.

V. 15. Rejoyce with them that do rejoyce] In theſe words he condemneth Stoicall ſtupidity or apathie, and commendeth Chriſtian ſympathie. Some conceive that he alludeth to the two gates in Solomons Temple, at the one whereof they entered who were to be married, who were joyfull and merry; at the other thoſe who were to do penance, and for a time were excluded from the company of the faithfull, and theſe were alwaies ſad and mournfull. Druſius ex Rabbi Juda.

V. 16. Mind not] Gr. not minding.

condiſcend, &c.] Or, be contented with mean things, or, being carried with the low, or lowly.

Be not wiſe, &c.] See Pro. 3. 7. Iſa. 5. 21.

V. 17. Recompence to, &c.] See Prov. 20. 22. 1 Theſ. 5. 15. 1 Pet. 3. 9.

of all men] G. Tec. of God and all men.

V. 18. live peaceably with all men] See Heb. 12. 14.

V. 19. avenge not] Gr. not avenging.

give place unto wrath] The words may admit of a double conſtruction; either give place to the wrath of thine enemy according to that precept, currenti cede furori, be not as forward to provoke and wrong him as he is to wrong thee: or elſe, give place to the wrath of God, that is his judgement, prevent or hinder it not by revenging thy ſelf.

Vengeance is mine] Gr. belongs to me. See Deut. 32. 35. Heb. 10. 30.

V. 20. Therefore if, &c.] Gr. Tec. But if. See Prov. 25. 21.

in ſo doing] Gr. doing this, coales of fire on his head] Either the meaning ſeemeth to be, thou ſhalt heap Gods judgements like coales of fire upon him: or, as Saint Auguſtine lib. 3. de doc. Chriſt. c. 16. Urentes pœnitentiæ gemitus, quibus ſuperbia ſanatur ejus qui dolet ſe inimicum fuiſſe hominis, a quo ejus miſeria ſubvenitur: by rendering good for evill thou ſhalt bring heart-burning and ſorrow to him; his own conſcience checking him, for intending miſchief to ſuch an one, who hath deſerved well of thee, and relieved thee in thy greateſt danger and want. Yet whether he mean by coales of fire Gods Judgments, or his enemies conſcience pricking and vexing him, we muſt not do good unto him and relieve him in his neceſſity to this end, that God may take vengeance on him, or he on himſelf for his evill mind towards us, for that were to be overcome of evill; but we muſt do it out of our pure love and Chriſtian charity; for that is to overcome evill with good.

V. 21. Be not] Gr. Be not thou.

overcome] Gr. overcome thou.

CHAP. XIII.

Verſ. 1. LEt every ſoul] That is, every man, though an Apoſtle, though an Evangeliſt, though a Prophet, ſaith Saint Chryſoſtom: therefore the tyranny of the Pope over all kingdoms muſt down to the ground. And as this Text overthrows the Popes temporall Monarchie, ſo alſo the exemption of Monks and Eccleſiaſticall perſons from the power of the civill Magiſtrate.

be ſubject] See Tit. 3. 1. 1 Pet. 2. 12. Not only obeying them, but alſo dutifully acknowledging and honouring them.

unto the higher powers] Not only to the ſupream Magiſtrates, but alſo all thoſe that are in authority under them, 1 Tim. 2. 2. 1 Pet. 2. 13, 14.

there is no power, &c.] See Wiſd. 6. 3.

ordained of God] Or, ordered. That is, inſtituted of God among mankind to rule and govern men in order as in Gods ſtead. For God is the Authour of this order in the world: and all thoſe which attain unto this dignitie or excellency, do attain unto it either by his manifeſt will and approbation when the means are juſt and lawfull; or elſe by his ſecret providence; with permiſſion and toleration, when the means are unlawfull, and it is juſt and equall that man ſhould approve and tolerate that which God himſelf approves and tolerates; and that he approves and tolerates which we cannot by any lawfull means appointed by him decline or avoid. All therefore who reſiſt authority make warre after a ſort with God himſelf.

V. 2. to themſelves damnation] Or, judgement. The word in the Originall ſignifieth as well judgement as damnation, and thereby we are to underſtand puniſhment which they ſhall receive as well from God as the Magiſtrates, who reſiſt the powers ordained of God, not only by open rebellion, as Abſalon, but alſo by not yeelding obedience to their commands in thoſe things that are not againſt the word of God.

V. 3. to good works] Gr. of good works.

to the evill] Gr. of the evill.

do that which is good] What the Apoſtle meaneth by doing that which is good here, is well expreſſed by the Emperour Juſtinian in the entrance to his lawes: honeſte vivere; alterum non lædere; ſuum cuique tribuere: to live honeſtly, to hurt no man by word or deed, and to give every man his due.

V. 4. for good] Gr. to good.

V. 5. but alſo for conſcience ſake] That is, out of the feare of God, that we may keep a good conſcience before him, who hath ſet the Magiſtrate over us: but this our ſubjection out of conſcience muſt be reſtrained to ſuch their commands as are agreeable to Gods law. For if they command unlawfull things, we muſt anſwer as Peter teacheth us, That it is better to obey God then man.

V. 6. pay you] Or, ye pay.

V. 7. Render therefore, &c.] See Matth. 22. 21.

V. 8. hath fulfilled the law] For the whole law commandeth nothing elſe but that we love God and our neighbour: but ſeeing Paul ſpeaketh here of the duty we owe one to another, we muſt reſtrain the word law to the ſecond table.

V. 9. Thou ſhalt not commit adulterie] See Exod. 20. Deut. 5. comprehended in this ſaying] Gr. reduced to this head.

Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf] See Levit. 19. 18. Matth 22. 39. Gal. 5. 14. James 2. 8.

V. 11. And that] An application taken from the circumſtance of time, which alſo it ſelf putteth us in mind of our duty, ſeeing the darkneſſe of ignorance and wicked affections by the knowledge of Gods truth is driven out of us; we ought now to order our life according to that ſure and certain rule of all righteouſneſſe and honeſty, being fully grounded upon the efficacie of the Spirit of Chriſt.

knowing the time] To wit, of the light of the Goſpel, which is like the dawning of that great eternall day which groweth ſtill more and more lightſome; and therefore it is now full high time to leave the ſleep of ſinne and ignorance wherein we were drowned as it were formerly.

our ſalvation] That is, the accompliſhment of it in the life to come, the end of our faith, 1 Pet. 1. 9. The prize of our heavenly calling in Chriſt Jeſus, 1 Cor. 9. 24, 25. Phil. 3. 14.

nearer then when we believed] That is, then when we firſt believed, or began to believe. An Hebraiſme like to that we often find in the book of Kings, as Hoſea reigned, Ahaz reigned, that is, he began his reigne. In theſe words the Apoſtle taketh a metaa metaphor from thoſe who run in a race, who the farther they have run from the ſtand, the nearer they draw to the mark. The beginning of our converſion, is like the entrance into that race, the continuation thereof and our growth in grace, is like our progreſſe in that race, and ſalvation is as the goale or prize. The meaning then is, we are now come nearer unto ſalvation by our Chriſtian courſe, and even ready to lay hold on it. Phil. 3.12. 1 Tim. 6.12. and therefore we muſt not faint but continue our ſpeed to the end, 2 Tim. 4.7. for it would be too great ſhame and damage alſo, being ſo near the mark, that by faintneſſe or turning out of the way we ſhould not obtain: for the nearer we come to the prize, the harder we ought to put forward to attain it.

V. 12. The night] Either the night of ignorance, 1 Theſſ. 5. 5. Act. 19.31. Or the time of this preſent worlds abiding, which is but as an obſcure night compared to the world to come, and the better part thereof is ſpent already, the eternall day drawing on amain, 1 Cor. 7.29.

the day is at hand] We are arrived unto the ſaving knowledge of Chriſt, but not perfectly as yet, ſo long as we continue in this life: but we enjoy ſuch a light here as there is, when the day begins to breake.

caſt off] As men when they ſee the glimmering of the day, caſt off their night clothes; ſo we ſeeing a glimmering of the Goſpel, ought to caſt off the works of darkneſſe like night attire, and have no more to do with them, Epheſ. 4.22.

the works of darkneſſe] That is, ſinnes, which flie and ſhun the light: which may be tearmed works of darkneſſe in three regards, 1. Becauſe, they proceed from darkneſſe, to wit, ignorance in the underſtanding. 2. Becauſe, for the moſt part, ſuch works are done in the dark, that the obſcurity of the night may ſhadow them. 3. Becauſe, they tend and bring men, if they caſt them not off in time, to utter darkneſſe, where ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.

put on] As thoſe that riſe out of their ſleep, put on their apparell to cover their nakedneſſe, and fit themſelues for the buſineſſe of the day: So now ſeeing the night of your ignorance is paſt, ſhake of your carnall ſecurity, and adorne your ſelves with divine vertues, which are both the habit and armour of a Chriſtian, the armour of light] Gr. Tec. the works of light. The word ſignifieth whatſoever the body is covered withall againſt any hurts or wounds, and by it we are to underſtand all thoſe graces of the Spirit, wherewith our ſouls are not only adorned, but armed and fenced againſt the hurts and wounds of the world and of the fleſh, and the Devils temptations, 2 Cor. 6.7. Eph. 6.11.

of light] That is, bright and gliſſening armour in perpetuall uſe, not ruſty through diſuſe; or ſuch armour as ſhines to the glory of God, and caſts a luſtre from the light of true knowledge for ſuch becomes thoſe that are called to the light, and deſire to walk honeſtly as in the light.

V. 13. honeſtly] Or, decently.

not in rioting and drunkenneſſe, &c.] Luk. 21.34.

V. 14. But put ye on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt] To put on Chriſt, is to be poſſeſſed and ruled by the ſpirit of Chriſt, to embrace his righteouſneſſe by faith, and follow all his vertues, adorning our ſoules with a true and lively reſemblance of him, in heart and life.

make not proviſion for the fleſh] See Gal. 5. 16. 1 Pet. 2. 11. The Apoſtle forbiddeth not to provide for the bodies decent raiment, meat, drinke, phyſicke, and the like neceſſaries for the ſuſtenance of this preſent life. For that is commanded, Epheſ. 5. 29. 1 Tim. 5. 8. 23. But to ſatisfie mens boundleſſe deſires, or provide ſuch things as tend to exceſſe & pride, gluttony drunkenneſſe and uncleanneſſe.

fulfill the luſts thereof] Gr. Tec. to concupiſcence thereof.

CHAP. XIIII.

Verſ. 1. H*Im that is weake*] Now the Apoſtle ſheweth, how we ought to behave our ſelves towards our brethren in things indifferent, offending in the uſe of them not of malice, but for lack of knowledge in the point of Chriſtian liberty. In this caſe they are to be inſtructed gently and patiently, ſo that we apply our ſelves to their ignorance in ſuch matters according to the rule of charity, bearing with them for a time, till they are more fully inſtructed.

in the faith] Either by weak in the faith, he meaneth a new convert, as Alipius ſometimes was, who by reading this very Text of Scripture, and S. Auguſtines Diſcourſe thereupon, was throughly and fully reſolved in the Chriſtian profeſſion, as S. Auguſtine was by reading the former verſ. Or by faith here the Apoſtle meanes not ſuch a one who doubteth of the fundamentall points of Chriſtian faith, but is not ſufficiently inſtructed concerning the uſe of things indifferent; ſuch a one the Apoſtle will not have us ſhun, but receive him into our company, yet not at the firſt, to trouble his conſcience with thoſe ſcrupulous points, leſt by our doubtfull and uncertain diſputations he go away in doubt more then he came, or ſtart back, with a wounded conſcience.

not to doubtfull diſputations] Or, not to judge his doubtfull thoughts. Or, the diſcernings of reaſonings.

V. 2. may eat all things] He that is perfectly inſtructed in the doctrine of Chriſtian liberty knoweth by faith, that the difference of meats appointed by the ceremoniall law is now taken away, and that he now may without ſcruple of conſcience, eat of any wholeſome and ſavoury meats with giving God thanks.

eateth herbs] Thus he ſpeaketh, ſaith Oecumenius, of ſome Jews who embraced the Chriſtian faith, yet out of tenderneſſe of conſcience, being not ſufficiently inſtructed in the Doctrin of Chriſtian liberty, abhorred from ſwines fleſh, and other meats prohibited by the law, and to the end they might give no offence, neither to the Jew zealous of the law of Moſes in eating ſuch meats, nor to the Chriſtian by refuſing them, and by their practiſe condemning them for eating ſuch meats, they contented themſelves with herbs.

V. 13. Let not him that eateth] In ſuch matters, ſaith the Apoſtle, let neither they which know their liberty, proudly deſpiſe their weak brother, neither let the unlearned frowardly and perverſly condemne that which he underſtandeth not.

for God hath received him] Into his family, that is, the Church, ſeeing he that eateth, and he that eateth not, are notwithſtanding the members of Chriſt, neither he that eateth not can juſtly be contemned, neither he that eateth be juſtly condemned.

V. 4. Who art thou that judgeſt another mans ſervant] See Jam. 4. 12. Becauſe, ſaith the Apoſtle, He that is ignorant to day, may be endued to morrow with farther knowledge, that ſo he may alſo ſtand ſure, therefore it belongeth to God, and not to man, to pronounce the ſentence of condemnation.

maſter] Gr. Lord.

Yea, he] Gr. But he.

holden up] Or, eſtabliſhed.

V. 5. one day above another] He ſpeaketh not of ſuch, who after a Heatheniſh manner accounted ſome dayes good and fortunate, but others evill and unluckie. For ſuch at all are not to be born withall among Chriſtians. But of ſuch converted Jews, who though they believed in Chriſt, yet thought ſuch dayes as were appointed by the law for faſting, or feaſting, to be more apt, and fit then others for the worſhip of God.

fully perſwaded in his own mind] Or, fully aſſured. That he may ſay in his conſcience, that he knoweth, and is perſwaded by Jeſus Chriſt, that no meat or day is unclean, or profane in it ſelf, and this perſwaſion muſt be grounded upon Gods word.

V. 6. that regardeth] Or, obſerveth.

regardeth it unto the Lord] Or, obſerveth. That is, he that keepeth the difference of dayes, he doth it in honour of God, who in his law appointed ſuch difference of dayes, and this weak Chriſtian knoweth not but that that law is yet in force.

regardeth] Or, obſerveth.

to the Lord he doth not regard it] That is, he obſerveth not the difference of dayes in honour of the Lord Chriſt, who hath freed all true believers from all legall obſervations, which he being now perfectly inſtructed in the faith, knoweth to be but ſhadows vaniſhing at the preſence of the body, which is Chriſt. Now becauſe he that obſerveth the day, obſerveth it to the Lord, as likewiſe he that obſerveth it not, obſerveth it not to the Lord, God ſhall judge whether theſe do well or not, and therefore you ſhould rather ſtrive about this, how every one of you may be allowed of God, then think upon other mens doings, and raſhly and uncharitably cenſure them.

eateth to the Lord] Giving God thanks: he that eateth indifferently of all meats, eateth in honour of God, giving him thanks both for the meat he hath given him, and for the liberty he hath granted him to eat of it.

to the Lord he eateth not, &c.] He that taſteth not of any meat prohibited by the law of Moſes doth it in honour of God, who appointed ſuch a difference to be obſerved, and he giveth him thanks both for the meat he affordeth him and for the direction of his choice delivered in the law, which he knoweth not as yet to be abrogated.

V. 7. For none of us liveth to himſelf] We muſt not ſtick in the meat it ſelf, but in the uſe of it, ſo that he may juſtly be reproved, who ſo liveth that he caſteth not his eye upon God. For both our life and death ought to be dedicated to him, and for this cauſe properly and principally Chriſt died, and not ſimply that we might eat this or that meat.

V. 8. For whether we live] Gr. If we live.

whether we die] Gr. If we die.

V. 9. died, and roſe, &c.] Gr. Tec. died, and lived.

V. 10. But why doſt thou judge thy brother] The concluſion is, we muſt leave to God his right, and therefore in matters which, according as the conſcience is affected, may be either good or evill, the ſtrong muſt not ſlight, much leſſe condemn the weak brethren.

we ſhall all ſtand before the judgement ſeat, &c.] See 2 Cor. 5. 10.

of Chriſt] Gr. Tec. of God.

V. 11. As I live, ſaith the Lord] See Iſa. 45. 23. Phil. 2. 10. This is the forme of an oath proper to God only. For He and none but He hath life and being of himſelf.

V. 13. that no man put a ſtumbling block] He rebuketh by the way, thoſe malicious judgers of others, who occupy their heads about nothing ſo much, as to find fault with their borthers actiõs, whereas they ſhould rather beſtow their wits upon this, that they do not by their diſdainfulneſſe, or raſh cenſuring, either caſt their brethren clean down, or give them any offence by the unſeaſonable uſe of their Chriſtian liberty. Here the difference between, ſcandalum, datum, and ſcandalum acceptum, muſt be retained; a ſcandall taken and not given is, when any taketh offence at us for diſcharging our duty, as the Phariſees took offence at Chriſts doctrine and miracles; a ſcandall given is, when by our undiſcreet carriage, or unſeaſonable uſe of our Chriſtian liberty, we miniſter a juſt occaſion of offence to our brother.

occaſion to fall in his brothers way] Gr. occaſion of offence to his brother.

V. 14. unclean] Gr, common.

of it ſelfe] Or. by it ſelfe.

unclean] Gr. common.

V. 15. with thy meat] Gr for, or, by occaſion of thy meat.

now walkeſt thou not charitably] Gr. according to charity. Becauſe thou beareſt not with thy brothers infirmitie, but being puft up with the knowledge of thy Chriſtian liberty, takeſt no care how thou woundedſt his weak conſcience.

Deſtroy not him with thy meat] See 1 Cor. 8. 11. That is, give him not ſuch offence by the uſe of thy Chriſtian liberty, that thou alienate his mind from the Chriſtian profeſſion, and thereby become the ruine of him for whom Chriſt died, whoſe example we ought to follow, who was ſo far from deſtroying the weak with meat, that he gave his life for them

V. 16. good be evill ſpoken of] By the abuſe of Chriſtian liberty, the Goſpel cometh to be evill ſpoken of, as though it opened a way to attempt any thing whatſoever, and emboldened us to all things.

V. 17. is not meat and drink] That is, dependeth not upon, or conſiſteth not in theſe outward things, but in the ſtudy of righteouſneſſe, and peace, and comfort of the holy Ghoſt.

V. 18. in theſe things ſerveth] Gr. Tec. in this ſerveth.

V. 19. follow after the things which make for peace] Gr. things of peace. Here is a generall concluſion; the uſe of our liberty, yea, and of our whole life, ought to be referred to the edifying of one another; inſomuch, that we eſteem that unlawfull by reaſon of the offence of our brother, which is of it ſelf pure and lawfull.

V. 20. All things indeed are pure] See Tit. 1. 15.

V. 21. It is good neither to eat fleſh, &c,] See 1 Cor. 8. 13.

V. 22. Haſt thou faith] Here he giveth a double warning in theſe matters; one which pertaineth to the ſtrong, that he which hath obtained a ſure knowledge of this liberty, keep that treaſure to himſelf, to the end that he may uſe it wiſely and profitably: the other which reſpecteth the weake, that they do nothing raſhly by other mens example with wavering conſciences; for that cannot be done without ſinne, whereof we are not perſwaded by the word of God, that he liketh it and approveth it.

alloweth.] Or, proveth.

V. 23. he that doubteth] Or, diſcerneth and putteth a difference between meats. He that is well aſſured of the Chriſtian liberty, he may well abſtain even from lawfull things, to condeſcend to the weakneſſe of his brethren: But he that is not ſo aſſured, neither may, nor ought thus to pleaſure another againſt the dictate of his own conſcience.

is damned] Or, condemned. He that is not fully aſſured as yet, that all kind of meat is clean and lawfull, if he notwithſtanding eat of meats forbidden by the law, he wounds his own conſcience; and makes himſelf guilty of condemnation.

for whatſoever is not of faith, is ſinne] Or, and whatſoever. Although S. Proſper and other Divines both ancient and later, alledge this Text, to prove that all the works of Infidels are ſins, becauſe they are done by men who have not faith, and by conſequence, this rule of the Apoſtle may ſome way ſerve to diſcover, and refute that errour of Papiſts and Pelagians, who deny all the works of infidels to be ſins: yet the proper and genuine meaning of this aſſertion of the Apoſtle, is not, whatſoever is done by an Infidell is ſinne: but whatſoever is done even by a believer with a wavering conſcience, without aſſurance that the work he doth is pleaſing unto God, and hath warrant from his word, to him is ſinne.

CHAP. XV.

Verſ. 1. WE then that] Gr. But we that.

V. 2. good to edification] In the Greek, there is an article ſet before the adjective good, which importeth the chiefe good, which tendeth to the eternall ſalvation, which is expreſſed in the next word edification, ſignifying their profit and encreaſe in godlineſſe, which hath the promiſe of this life and the life to come.

according to Chriſt Jeſus] Or, after the example of.

V. 6. and one mouth[Gr. in one mouth.

V. 7 as Chriſt alſo received us] He did not diſdain us, but received us of his owne accord, to make us partakers of Gods glory.

V. 8. Now I ſay] Gr. Tec. For I ſay. He applyeth the example of Chriſt to the Jews, whom he vouchſafed this honour for the promiſes which were made unto their fathers, although they were never ſo unworthy, that he executed the Office of a Miniſter amongſt them with marvellous patience, therefore much leſſe ought the Gentiles deſpiſe them for certain faults, whom the Sonne of God ſo much eſteemed.

miniſter of the circumciſion] Not becauſe he adminiſtred the ſacrament of circumciſion to any, for contrariwiſe, he inſtituted baptiſme in ſtead of circumciſion: but by circumciſion here the Jews are meant, as Abraham, Rom. 4. 12. is called the father of circumciſion, that is, of the circumciſed Jews: Now though Chriſt preached, to all, both Jews and Gentiles, the glad tidings of the Goſpel; yet having taken upon him the forme of a ſervant, to purchaſe and worke our ſalvation for his Church, he had ſtill a ſpeciall eye to them, amongſt whom he did perſonally execute his miniſtery.

for the truth of God] In the common reception both of the Jews and Gentiles, there is this only difference, that in that of the Jews, God did in a ſingular manner manifeſt his truth, that is, his faithfulneſſe in performing his promiſes made unto them: but in that of the Gentiles he did more eſpecially ſhew forth the greatneſſe of his mercy to his utter enemies, namely, to a people that ſtood in oppoſition againſt him; and therefore there is no reaſon, why the Jews being honoured by Chriſts own miniſtry, and by the old promiſes and covenant of God, ſhould be deſpiſed and vilified by the Gentiles; nor on the other ſide, that the Gentiles to whom God had ſhewed mercy ſhould be condemned by the Jews.

V. 12. There ſhall be a root of Jeſſe] See Iſa. 11. 10.

V. 13. Now the God of hope] That is, the God in whom we hope, or, the God who is the Author of hope, who by the graces of his Spirit worketh in us both faith and hope. This very Title of God may ſerve as a ſoveraign Antidote againſt deſpair; for why would any deſpair of his mercy, who is the God of hope?

fill you] Gr. ſhall fill you.

peace in believing] That is, peace of conſcience, free, not onely from all terrours of wrath to come, but ſcrupulous doubting concerning things indifferent, of which he ſpake before.

through the power] Gr. in the power.

V. 14. filled with all knowledge] That is, knowledge of all things that appertain to the doctrine of ſalvation; or perfect knowledge, ſo farre as it may be attained of us in this life, wherein the beſt and moſt learned know but in part, and ſee but as through a glaſſe darkly, 1 Cor. 13. 12.

V. 16. the miniſter] Or, a miniſter.

miniſtring the Goſpel of God] Gr. ſerving in the holy worke of the goſpel.

Offering up of the Gentiles] Or, ſacrificing, He ſpeaketh not of any holy oblations of the Gentiles, or any thing they offer unto God; but of the Gentiles themſelves, whom the Apoſtle offered to God a ſacrifice, Rom. 12. 1.

V. 17. I have therefore whereof I may glory] He extolleth Apoſtleſhip very highly by the marvellous effects thereof; but yet ſo, that he giveth all the glory to God, as the only Author; and doth not properly reſpect himſelf, but this rather, that men might leſſe doubt of the truth of the doctrine which he propoundeth to them.

glory through Jeſus] Or, rejoyce in Jeſus.

in thoſe things] Or, concerning thoſe things.

V. 18. which Chriſt hath not wrought by me] Chriſt was ſo with me in all things, and by all means, that if I would never ſo fain, yet I cannot ſay what he hath done by me to bring the Gentiles to obey the Goſpel. Or, I will ſpeak only of things done by my miniſtery.

to make the Gentiles obedient] Gr. to the obedience of the Gentiles.

V. 19. Through mighty ſignes] Gr. in the power of mighty ſignes.

by the power of the Spirit] Gr. Tec. by the power of the holy Spirit. The word power in the former part of this verſe ſignifieth the force and working of wonders; and in the latter it ſignifieth Gods mighty power, who is the worker of theſe wonders: ſo that in theſe words the Apoſtle implieth a double action of God; outward, in working wonders by the hands of S. Paul to the converſion of the Gentiles; and inward, whereby by the grace of his Spirit, he wrought faith and repentance in them.

V. 20. another mans foundation] That is, preach the Goſpel where the Church hath been planted by another man: for that were as it were to graff on his ſtock, and build upon his foundation; that is, the foundation of Chriſtian doctrine laid by him.

V. 21. To whom he was not ſpoken of] See Iſa. 52. 15.

V. 22. much] Or, many wayes, or, oftentimes.

V. 24. will] Or, ſhall.

with your company] Gr. with you, verſ. 32.

V. 25. to miniſter unto the ſaints] Gr. miniſtring to the ſaints. That is, to perform this office and ſervice for the ſaints, to carry them that money which was gathered for their uſe; for otherwiſe if the word Miniſter be taken for the exerciſing his miniſteriall function, S. Peter, to whom the miniſtery of the circumciſion was ſpecially commended, Gal. 2. 7. as the Apoſtleſhip of the uncircumciſion to Paul, was properly the Miniſter of the Jews, where God ſpecially bleſt his labours; though, as S. Ambroſe rightly obſerveth, S. Peters miniſtery was not ſo confined to the Jews, but that he might, and did ſometimes, preach to the Gentiles, as likewiſe did S. Paul to the Jews.

V. 27. if the Gentils, &c.] See 1 Cor. 9. 11.

V. 28. have ſealed] I have really performed, and ſealed as it were with my ring.

this fruit] By fruit he meaneth the money gathered for the uſe of the poor, which he fitly here, as alſo Phil. 4. 17. calleth the fruit, not becauſe (ſaith he) I deſire a gift, but that I deſire fruit that may abound to your account. Alms-deeds may be called a fruit, as well becauſe every good tree, that is, every faithfull man, beareth ſuch fruit; as alſo becauſe ſuch good works are fruitfull, that is, beneficiall and profitable, both to the poor who receive, and the rich that give.

V. 29. And I am ſure that when I come] He promiſeth them through the bleſſing of God, not to come emptie unto them; and requiring of them the duty of prayers, he ſheweth what thing we ought chiefly to reſt upon in all difficulties and adverſities.

bleſſing of the goſpel of Chriſt] Gr. Tec. benediction, or, bleſſing of Chriſt.

V. 30. for the love of the Spirit] For that mutuall conjunction wherewith the holy Ghoſt hath tyed our hearts and mindes together.

V. 31. do not beleeve] Or, are diſobedient.

V. 32. with joy] Gr. in joy.

CHAP. XVI.

Verſ. 1. I Commend unto you, &c.] Having made an end of the whole diſputation, he cometh now to familiar commendations and ſalutations and that to good purpoſe; to wit, that the Romans might know who were moſt to be honoured and made account of amongſt them, and alſo whom they ought to ſet before them to follow, and therefore he attributeth to every one of them peculiar and ſingular teſtimonies.

V. 2. In the Lord] That is, for Chriſts ſake, which is proper to the Chriſtians; for the Heathen Philoſophers have reſemblance of the ſame vertues, namely, humanity, and hoſpitality; yet becauſe what they do in this kinde, is not done out of faith in Chriſt, nor to the glory of God, but for their own fame and honour; the works they moſt brag of, are no better then ſhining ſinnes, or glittering abominations. Or, the meaning of the phraſe may be, receive her in the Lord, that is, into the communion of the faithfull, and eſteem her as a member of the Lords myſticall body.

ſuccourer] Or, aſſiſter.

V. 3. Priſcilla and Aquila] See Act. 18. 2, 18.

helpers] Gr. fellow-labourers.

V. 5. the Church] That is, the company of the faithfull. For in ſo great a Citie as Rome was, there were divers aſſemblies of believers which were held in ſome private mens houſes, where they might meet ſafeſt, the State then, and for ſome hundred years after, not permitting them any publike Temples or Auditories.

the firſt-fruits of Achaia] That is, the firſt of Achaia that believed in Chriſt, and conſecrated himſelf and his family to God, and after him there followed a great crop of true believers there.

V. 6. beſtowed much labour on us] Or, laboured in many things for us.

V. 7. among the Apoſtles] That is, are eminent Evangeliſts or Preachers of the Goſpel; for the word Apoſtle is not aſcribed alone to the twelve Apoſtles, but, ſometimes in a larger ſenſe to other Doctours and Miniſters of the Church, as, 2 Cor. 8. 23. Phil. 2. 25. Or ἐπίσημοι ἐν ἀποστόλοις, may ſignifie not that theſe men were Apoſtles, but men very well known to the Apoſtles, and highly eſteemed of them.

were in Chriſt before me] In the Church by the profeſſion of the faith of Chriſt, being converted before me, or engraffed by faith into Chriſt, who is the true Vine, Joh. 15. 1.

V. 10. houſhold] Or, friends.

V. 11. houſhold] Or, friends.

V. 14. Hermas] Origen, a very learned and ancient Writer, conceiveth that this Hermas was the Author of the Book entituled Paſtor, becauſe the Angel therein is ſaid to appear in the likenes of a ſhepherd, this book he conceiveth to be divinely enſpired; but Saint Jerome in his Prologus Galeatus reckoneth it among Apocryphall books: and Euſebius in his third book of Eccleſiaſticall Story, ſaith, That many in his time took exception againſt this Book, though by many it were aſcribed to this Hermas, whom S. Paul ſaluteth.

V. 16. Salute one another with an holy kiſſe] See 1 Cor. 16. 20. 2 Cor. 13. 12. 1 Pet. 5. 14. He calleth that a holy kiſſe, which proceedeth from an heart which is full of holy love, now this is to be referred to the manner uſed in thoſe dayes.

V. 17. mark them] Either ſet a brand upon them; 2 Theſſ. 3. 15. or warily and diligently obſerve them, as though you would ſcout out for your enemies in a Watchtower; or obſerve them to ſhun them.

contrary to the] Or, beſide the.

V. 18. fair ſpeeches] The word which he uſeth ſignifieth a promiſing which performeth nothing.

ſimple] Or, harmleſſe.

V. 19. ſimple] Or, harmleſſe.

V. 20. the God of peace] The Author and Conſerver of the true ſpirituall peace of the Church, which theſe ſchiſmaticall and factious men, ſet on by the Devill, do endeavour to their utmoſt to diſturb.

bruiſe Satan] Or, tread. Shall make that by Chriſt ye ſhall overcome him. The Apoſtle ſeemeth here to have an eye unto the firſt Evangelicall promiſe, Gen. 3. 15.

V. 21. Timotheus, &c.] Act. 16. 1.

V. 22. wrote this Epiſtle] This Tertius was not the author of this Epiſtle, or pen-man of the holy Ghoſt, but S. Pauls Scribe, who wrote from his mouth as Baruc did from Jeremies, Jer. 36. 18.

V. 23. chamberlain] Gr. ſteward.

V. 25. that is of power] He ſetteth forth the power and wiſdom of God, with thankeſgiving, which eſpecially appeareth in the Goſpel; and he maketh mention alſo of the calling of the Gentiles, to confirm the Romanes in the hope of this ſalvation.

which was kept ſecret] See Epheſ. 3. 9. Col. 1. 26.

ſince the world began] Gr. ſeculer, or, everlaſting times.

V. 26. for the] Gr. to the. See Rom. 1. 5.

ANNO-

ANNOTATIONS
On the firſt Epiſtle of Paul the Apoſtle, to the CORINTHIANS.

The ARGUMENT and ANALYSIS.

THe drift of the Apoſtle in this Epiſtle, is, to beat down carnall Wiſdom, and affected ſtrains of Eloquence, and to ſet among the Corinthians, the powerfull Preaching of Chriſt Crucified; and farther, to inſtruct them, and in them all Chriſtians, in the Doctrine of Chriſtian Liberty, of the Sacraments of the Old and New Law, of the nature and difference of ſpirituall Gifts, and of the Reſurrection of the dead.

The parts of this Epiſtle are principally four.

- 1\. A reproof of divers ſcandals and abuſes among the Corinthians; as namely;
  - 1\. Their diſſentions and factions, ſiding with their ambitious Teachers, Chap. 1,2,3,4.
  - 2\. Their toleration of Inceſt, Chap. 5.
  - 3\. Their vexing one another with Law-ſuits, before infidel Judges, Chap. 6.
  - 4\. Their abuſe of their Chriſtian liberty, Chap. 8. 10.
  - 5\. Their diſorders in their Holy Aſſemblies. Chap. 11.
- 2\. Reſolution of doubts propounded to him.
  - 1\. Concerning mariage and ſingle life, Chap. 7.
  - 2\. Concerning the nature and condition of glorified bodies, at, and after their Reſurrection, Chap. 15.
- 3\. Directions.
  - 1\. Concerning their carriage towards their weak Brethren, Chap. 9.
  - 2\. Their preparation to the Sacrament, Chap. 11. from the 23. Verſe to the end.
  - 3\. Concerning the uſe of ſpirituall Gifts in generall, and the exerciſe of the Gift of tongues,, and propheſie in particular, Chap. 12, 14.
- 4\. Exhortation to charity, and a liberall contribution to the Saints at Jeruſalem, Chap. 13. 16.

CHAP. I.

Verſ. 1. A*N apoſtle*] If he be an Apoſtle he muſt be heard, although ſometimes he reprehend them ſharply, ſeeing he hath not his own cauſe in hand, but is a meſſenger that bringeth the commands of Chriſt.

through] Or, by.

Soſthenes our brother] In Chriſt, or in the miniſtery of the Goſpel, whom he joyneth with himſelf in this inſcription, that the doctrine might be confirmed by two witneſſes, 2 Cor. 13. 1. This Soſthenes was the chief ruler of the Synagogue, whom the Greekes tooke and beat before the judgement ſeat, Acts 18. 17.

V. 2. are ſanctified in Chriſt Jeſus] See Acts 15. 9. The Father ſanctifieth us; that is to ſay, ſeparateth us from the wicked in giving us to his Sonne, that he may be in us, and we in him.

called to be ſaints] See Rom 1. 7. Whom God hath called to holineſſe, or called effectually according to his eternall purpoſe, Rom. 8. 28.

V. 4. I thank my God] Intending to condemn many vices in the Corinthians, that he might not ſeem to do it out of ſpleen, or malice, or envie, he beginneth with a true commendation of their vertues, yet ſo that he referreth all to God as the Author of them, and that in Chriſt, that the Corinthians might be more aſhamed to prophane and abuſe the holy gifts of God.

on your behalf] Or, concerning you.

V. 5. in all utterance] Or, all kinde of ſpeech. In the Originall it is, in all ſpeech: thereby the Apoſtle meaneth, either that they excell in the gift of tongues, which ſome of them abuſed and are therefore reproved by the Apoſtle, Chap. 14. Or, by utterance he meaneth not affected ſtraines of Rhetorick, but a gift of holy eloquence, ſuch as Apollo is commended for, who was an eloquent man mightie in the Scriptures.

and in all knowledge] Seeing that whilſt we live here we know but in part, and propheſie in part: the word All muſt be reſtrained to the preſent ſtate of the faithfull, and to ſuch knowledge as is needfull to ſalvation, Rom, 15. 14.

V. 6. teſtimonie of Chriſt] That is, the Goſpel which teſtifieth of Chriſt; or, as theſe gifts are a teſtimonie of Jeſus Chriſt in you.

confirmed in you] Proved by theſe gifts, or the teſtimonie of Jeſus Chriſt received by faith: for he that believeth ſealeth the truth of Gods word.

V. 7. coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt] Gr. revelation. His ſecond coming when he ſhall come with glory to judge both quick and dead. In the Greek it is the revelation of Jeſus Chriſt, becauſe he is now hid: but then his glory ſhall be manifeſted, for he ſhall come with the clouds and great glory, Col 3. 3.

V. 8. blameleſſe] Some obſerve that the word in the Originall, ſignifieth not without fault, but without crime. If we read blameleſſe, either he ſpeaketh of the elect among the Corinthians, who though they might ſometimes grievouſly fall, yet were raiſed up again by repentance; and though the beſt cannot be ſaid to be blameleſſe ſimply, that is, ſuch whom never man found fault with, yet they may be and are ſuch, with whom none may juſtly find fault: or the Apoſtle ſeemeth rather to pray for their juſtification at Chriſts tribunall, that they might be there blameleſſe, that is, not to have any ſinnes imputed unto them to their condemnation.

V. 9. God is faithfull] See 1 Theſſ. 5. 24. True and conſtant, who doth not onely call us, but alſo giveth us the gift of perſeverance, whereby we are confirmed unto the end.

V. 10. Now I beſeech you, &c.] Having made an end of his Preface, he cometh to the matter it ſelf, beginning with a grave obteſtation, as though they ſhould hear Chriſt himſelf ſpeaking and not Paul.

that ye all ſpeak the ſame thing] That is, that ye agree in the doctrine of ſalvation, and though ye may deliver different points of doctrine, yet no way repugnant one to the other, or to the truth.

diviſions] Gr. ſchiſmes.

joyned] Or, fitted.

V. 12. Apollos] See Act. 18. 24.

V. 13. Is Chriſt divided] The firſt reaſon why Schiſmes ought to be eſchewed, is becauſe Chriſt ſeemeth by that means to be divided and torn in pieces; who cannot be the head of two diverſe and diſagreeing bodies, himſelf being but one.

was Paul crucified for you?] Another reaſon, becauſe they cannot without great injury to God ſo depend on men as on Chriſt, which thing no doubt they do, who allow whatſoever ſome man ſpeaketh even for his perſon ſake; as theſe men allowed one ſelf ſame Goſpel, being uttered by one man, and diſliked it being uttered by another man: ſo that theſe Factions were called by the name of their Teachers. Now Saint Paul here ſetteth down his own name, not onely to grieve no man, but alſo to ſhew he pleaded not his own cauſe.

were ye baptized in the name of Paul] Gr. into. The third reaſon taken from the form and end of baptiſme, wherein we make a promiſe to Chriſt calling on alſo the name of the Father, and the holy Ghoſt; therefore although a man do not fall from the doctrine of Chriſt, yet if he wholly depend upon ſome certain Teachers, and deſpiſe others, he forſaketh Chriſt; for if he held Chriſt his onely Maſter, he would hear him teaching by whomſoever.

V. 14. Criſpus and Gaius] See Act. 18. 8.

V. 15. that I had baptized] Gr. Tec. that ye were baptized.

V. 17. For Chriſt ſent me not to baptize] In theſe words he taketh away an objection, that might have been made againſt him, for not baptizing many among the Corinthians; the reaſon whereof was not out of any contempt of baptiſme, or ſlighting the adminiſtration thereof; but becauſe he was chiefly occupied in delivering the doctrine, and he committed them that received his doctrine to others to be baptized, whereof he had ſtore; and ſo he declared ſufficiently how farre he was from all ambition; whereas on the other ſide, they whom he reprehendeth as though they gathered diſciples unto themſelves and not unto Chriſt, bragged moſt ambitiouſly of great numbers which they had baptized.

not with wiſedome, &c.] See 2 Pet. 1. 16.

words] Or, ſpeech.

leſt the croſſe of Chriſt, &c.] The reaſon why he uſed not pomp of words, and painted ſpeech, becauſe it was Gods will to bring the world to his obedience by that way whereby the moſt ſimple and ignorant amongſt men might underſtand that this work was done of God himſelf without the art of man: therefore as ſalvation is ſet forth to us in the Goſpel by the Croſſe of Chriſt, then which nothing is more contemptible, and more remote from being the cauſe of life: ſo God would have the manner of preaching the Croſſe moſt different from thoſe means with which men do uſe to draw and entice others either to hear or believe; therefore it pleaſed him by a certain kinde of moſt wiſe folly to triumph over the moſt fooliſh wiſdome of the world, as he hath ſaid b fore by Eſay that he would do. For the phraſe καταργηθῇ, the meaning is, that the Apoſtle ſhunned all affectation of eloquence, leſt the doctrine of the Croſſe might be made of none effect, that is, of no force, and unprofitable to the hearers; who whileſt they were taken with ſtrains of affected eloquence, would ſlighten and contemn the plain doctrine of Chriſt crucified: or leſt the hearers might conceive that they were brought to Chriſtianity by the power of humane eloquence, and not by the power of Chriſt crucified.

V. 18. power of God] See Rom. 1. 16.

V. 19. I will deſtroy, &c.] See Iſa. 29. 14.

bring to nothing] Or, reject and diſanull.

V. 20. Where is the wiſe] See Iſa. 33. 18.

where is the diſputer of this world] Where art thou that ſpendeſt all thy time in ſearching out the ſecrets of nature, and in propounding and reſolving difficult queſtions? and thus he triumpheth over the Wiſards of the world: for there was not one of them that could ſo much as dream of this ſecret and hidden myſterie.

V. 21. For after that] Or, ſeeing that. See Rom. 1. 20.

the world] By the world he meaneth all men which are not born anew, but remain as they were, when they were firſt born; ſo the world here, is all one with ψυχικὸς ἀνὴρ, the naturall man, who perceiveth not the things that are of God, 1 Cor. 2. 14.

by wiſedome] That is, the workmanſhip of the world, which hath the marvellous wiſedome of God engraven in it; ſo that every man may behold it.

knew not God] That is, knew him not to ſalvation, for otherwiſe the Apoſtle teacheth, Rom. the firſt, verſ. 20. that they knew ſo much of the eternall power and Godhead by the creation of the world, as made them unexcuſable.

fooliſhneſſe of preaching] So he calleth the preaching of the Goſpel, as the enemies conceived of it, or in their eſtimation; withall by a bitter Sarcaſme ſharply taunting them who had rather charge God with folly, then acknowledge their own, and crave pardon for it.

V. 22. For the Jewes] Gr. Seeing that alſo the Jewes. See Matt. 12. 38.

V. 24. the power of God, &c.] Though the preaching of the Goſpel ſeem fooliſh to them whom God hath not endued with new light, that is to ſay, to all men being conſidered in themſelves; for the Jews require miracles, and the Grecians arguments, which they may comprehend by their wit and wiſdome; and therefore they do not onely not believe the Goſpel, but alſo they mock at it: notwithſtanding in this fooliſh preaching as they count it, there is the great vertue and wiſedome of God, but ſuch as thoſe onely which are called do perceive, God ſhewing moſt plainly that even then, when mad men moſt fooliſhly think him to be fooliſh, he is farre wiſer then they are, and that he ſurmounteth all their might and power when he uſeth moſt vile and abject things to confound the greateſt and moſt noble. His ſpeech is figurative, for by tearming Chriſt crucified the power and wiſdome of God, he meaneth by a metonymie him by whom God ſheweth forth his power, in aboliſhing ſinne, and death, and reſtoring us to life, and by whom God manifeſteth and executeth his moſt wiſe counſell and decree for the ſalvation of the elect.

V. 25. the fooliſhneſſe] That is, that which men of this world count fooliſhneſſe, hath more wiſdome in it ſelf then they and all their worldly wiſdome together.

the weakneſſe] That is, that which in their eſteem is but weak, and of no power or efficacie to ſalvation, is more ſtrong and powerfull, then they with all their conceited eloquence and authoritie.

V. 27. confound] or, ſhame.

V. 28. which are not] That is, which are of ſo ſmall eſteem, as if they were not at all, 1 Cor. 3. 5. What is Paul? what is Apollo, &c. Thus the nothingneſſe of man is deciphered, as he ſtandeth before God without any worth, merit, ſtrength, or vertue.

to bring to naught] That is, to ſhew the vanitie and unprofitableneſſe of them for obtaining of eternall ſalvation.

Things that are] That is, that are of account and ſeem to be great.

V. 29. glory] Or, boaſt.

in his preſence] Gr. Tec. before God.

V. 30. But of him are ye] Whom he caſt down before, he now lifteth up higher then all men; yet ſo, that he ſheweth them that all their worthineſſe is without themſelves, that is, ſtandeth in Chriſt, and that of God. Of him you are, that is, you are born of him and regenerated by his Spirit.

In Chriſt Jeſus, who of God is made unto us wiſedome, and righteouſneſſe, and ſanctification, and redemption.] Having nothing at all of your ſelves, God hath given you all in Chriſt, according to the decree he made, that he ſhould be the ſource and the root of all the ſpirituall bleſſings conferred upon the Church; which are wiſedome, by the revelation of the myſterie of ſalvation; righteouſneſſe, by his ſatisfaction and perfect obedience for our juſtification; ſanctification, by the gift of the Spirit of regeneration; and redemption both of body and ſoul from all evill and miſerie, by the laſt and glorious reſurrection in vertue of our myſticall union with him.

V. 31. He that glorieth, &c.] Jer. 9. 23, 24. 2 Cor. 10. 17.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 1. C*Ame not with excellency of ſpeech*] teſtimonie of God] Gr. Tec. the myſtery. That is, the Goſpel which is the teſtimonie of God, that is, of Chriſt, to be God and the Authour of the New Teſtament and King of glory, Rev. 10. 10. Or if we admit of Tecla s Edition, When I ſhewed unto you the myſterie of God, that is, revealed unto you the ſecret of the Goſpel, or the hidden things of God, Apoc. 10. 7.

V. 2. determined not] Or, eſteemed, or, made reckoning. That is, I had no purpoſe, or judged it not fit, and convenient for me to know; that is, to make profeſſion of any other ſcience or doctrine; or to teach you any other thing then the moſt neceſſary and onely ſaving knowledge of Chriſt crucified.

V. 3. with] Or, among, or, towards.

in weakneſſe, and in fear] He ſetteth weakneſſe againſt power of eloquence, and excellencie of words; and therefore joyned with it fear and trembling, which are companions of true modeſtie; not ſuch fear and trembling as terrifieth the conſcience, or argueth guilt, but ſuch as are contrary to vanitie and pride.

V. 4. was not with, &c.] 2 Pet. 1. 16.

demonſtration of the Spirit and of power] He preached ſo, that his doctrine by the Spirit wrought powerfully in the hearts of his hearers. Or, by the demonſtration of the Spirit and of power, he meaneth the evident confirmation of his doctrine by the gifts of the holy Ghoſt, and the ſignes and wonders which he wrought amongſt them.

V. 4. faith ſhould not ſtand] He yieldeth here a reaſon why he concealed all art and eloquence, and uſed ſuch plainneſſe of ſpeech in his preaching, that it was for their great profit, not onely that they might better underſtand him, and more fully comprehend the myſteries he taught: but that they might thereby know manifeſtly that the Goſpel was from heaven. Therefore he privily rebuketh them, becauſe that in ſeeking vain oſtentation and ſhew of humane wiſdome and eloquence, they willingly deprived themſelves of the greateſt help of their faith, the plain evidence of the Spirit.

V. 6. ſpeak wiſedome] Another argument taken from the nature of the thing, that is, the Goſpel, which is true wiſdome, and able to make men wiſe unto ſalvation; but known to them onely which are deſirous of perfection, and unknown and unſavourie alſo to them which otherwiſe excell in the world, and are accounted the wiſeſt men. Or by wiſdome he meaneth the difficulteſt myſteries of the word, which he preached but to thoſe which were of riper yeers and knowledge: for otherwiſe he fed the weak and tender ones with milk, Chap. 3. 2. Heb. 5. 12. And thus Saint Auguſtine in his 96. & 97. Tract upon the words of the Apoſtle expoundeth this text. Apoſtoli eadem tradebant majoribus & parvulis, perfectis & imperfectis, ſed ea cura adhibita ut pro ſua cujuſque capacitate ea proponerent, parvulis quidem ut potum lactis quem libenter & facile ſugant, majoribus autem ut ſolidum cibum, explicando rationes, ordinem, modum aliaſque circumſtantias eorum quæ credenda ſunt, quod eſt ſapientiam loqui inter perfectos.

among them that are perfect] Thoſe are called perfect here, not which had gotten perfection already, but ſuch as tended to it, Phil. 3. 12, 15. So that perfect is ſet againſt weak. The Schools diſtinguiſh of perfectio viæ & perfectio patriæ: as alſo perfectio partium & perfectio graduum; a perfection of parts, and a perfection of degrees; the former may be attained to in this life, not the latter. The Apoſtle ſeemeth to borrow the word τελείοις from the Gentiles, who would admit none to their abſtruſer rites and ceremonies which they call τελετὰς, but τελείους, perſons well prepared and purified for many years together. Some referre it to age, and make this conſtruction of the words; We ſpeak wiſdome to thoſe that are of ripe and perfect age, who are able to judge of it, thoſe that are no more children in underſtanding, 1 Cor. 14. 20. nor unskilfull in the word of righteouſneſſe, Heb. 5. 13. but are become as a perfect man by the full knowledge of the myſteries of Chriſtian religion, Epheſ. 4. 13.

not the wiſedome of this world] Not a wiſedome found out by humane reaſon, nor delivering rules of State policie, nor tending to worldly ends, nor apprehended or eſteemed by the men of this world, but revealed by the Spirit of God which the world cannot receive, Joh. 14. 17.

nor the Princes of this world] By the Princes of the world ſome underſtand the evill ſpirits, who rule in the ayr, and are called elſewhere, κοσμοκράτορες, Epheſ. 6. 12. rulers of the darkneſſe of this world, who were the Authours of the Heathens Policie and Religion. Others by Princes of this world underſtand the Kings of the earth and Emperours, who dictated their lawes out of the principles of humane wiſdome. But the words ſeem rather to carry a larger ſenſe, and extend to all thoſe that have great power and authoritie over others, who eſteeme their State policie which they uſe in their Government the greateſt and onely wiſedome in the world.

that come to nought] Which are deſtroyed, and whoſe counſels are ſubverted by God, ſo that they are not able to uphold themſelves with all their Plots and Policies; which is an undoubted argument that all their wiſdome is but weak and vain, if it be compared with that of the Church of Chriſt which bringeth us to life and everlaſting glory. The word in the Originall implies that their wiſdome is caſſated, and their policies fruſtrated, whereof they can make no uſe nor advantage beyond this life; ſo that they with all their policie and power die and periſh Pſal. 146. 1.

V. 7. wiſdom of God in a myſterie] In a myſterie, that is, in a divine manner incomprehenſible to carnall ſenſe: Or it is called a myſterie, becauſe it was never found out by any humane wiſedome, or learning, but lay hid till it pleaſed God to reveal it by his Prophets and Apoſtles.

which God ordained] Here he taketh away an objection: If it be ſo hard and hidden, how is it known? God ſaith he, determined with himſelf from the beginning, that which his purpoſe was to bring forth at this time, out of the hidden treaſurie of his ſecrets for the ſalvation of men.

to our glory] That is, to our glorification; to this end, that by the knowledge of this wiſdome we might attain cœleſtial glory, and life eternall. For this is life eternall to know thee, &c. Joh. 17. 3.

V. 8. which none of the Princes of this world knew] That is, none in compariſon; for Nicodemus, and Sergius Paulus, and ſome other few knew it, but as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Cor. 1. 26. Not many mightie, &c. were called to the knowledge of this heavenly wiſdome. Here he taketh away another objection, How cometh it to paſſe that this wiſdome was ſo rejected of men of higheſt authoritie that they crucified Chriſt himſelf? Paul anſwereth; Becauſe they knew not Chriſt to be ſuch as he was: or none knew before it was revealed to them.

the Lord of glory] That is, the mighty God full of majeſtie and glory, Act. 7. 2. The God of glory appeared, &c. and King of glory, Pſal. 24. 10. Neither is Chriſt onely ſtyled the Lord or King of glory, becauſe he is moſt glorious in himſelf, and cloathed with majeſtie and honour; but becauſe by the power of his Divinitie, and vertue of his death and reſurrection, he advanceth all the elect to eternall glory, glorifying both their bodies and ſouls.

V. 9. But as it is written, &c.] Another objection. But how could it be that thoſe witty men could not perceive this wiſdome? Paul anſwereth: Becauſe we preach thoſe things which paſſe all mens underſtanding, unleſſe they be ſupernaturally enligtned. But where is this written? Zacharias Biſhop of Chryſopolis, affirmeth that he found the teſtimony here alleadged [Eye hath not ſeen, &c.] in an Apocryphal book entituled, the Secrets of Elias the Prophet: and Gregorius Syncellus, of whom Scaliger maketh mention in his Notes upon Euſebius, obſerveth that Saint Paul did ſometimes, but very ſeldome, make uſe of teſtimonies out of Apocryphall books, as when he alleadgeth out of the book of Elias this paſſage, Which eye hath not ſeen, &c. But although he might quote ſomething found in Apocryphal writings, as Saint Jude doth out of the propheſie of Enoch, Jude 14. yet there can be no pregnant proof brought for his quoting any thing out of any Apocryphal books: neither is it likely that he would draw water out of the muddy ſtream of an Apocryphal writing when he might draw it out of the pure fountain of the Prophet Iſaiah, Chap. 64. verſ. 4. Neither perceived by the eare, nor hath the eye ſeen, &c.

V. 13. Which things &c.] See 2 Pet. 1. 16.

comparing ſpirituall things with ſpirituall] The words admit of a double Tranſlation and interpretation: if we reade them comparing ſpirituall things with ſpirituall, then the meaning is, we apply ſpirituall tearms and manners of propounding and expreſſing to ſpirituall matters and ſubjects. If there be propounded, ſaith Oecumenius, any ſpirituall point, ἀπὸ παραδειγμάτων πνευματικῶν τὰς συγκρίσεις κ̀ ἐπιλύσεις ἐπάγομεν: for example, if the queſtion be whether Chriſt roſe the third day, we bring a confirmation and illuſtration out of the Prophet Jonah. The word uſed in the Text properly ſignifieth to judge together, that is, by conferring Texts of holy Scripture, and ſetting ſpirituall things one againſt another, that like oppoſite glaſſes they may caſt a mutuall light one upon the other; and we may make a more certain judgement of them. But if we reade them, judging ſpirituall things with ſpirituall perſons, then the meaning is apparantly thus; that we are to conferre with the faithfull about points of faith; and communicate ſpirituall myſteries to ſpirituall men, not to thoſe who are yet carnall and meer worldlings: for that were to caſt pearl before ſwine: and this interpretation well agreeth with the verſe following; wherein the Apoſtle diſtinguiſheth of the naturall man and ſpirituall man, and affirmeth that the naturall man perceiveth not the things of the Spirit of God.

V. 14. the naturall man] Gr. animale. ψυχικὸς. Some conceive that they who firſt tranſlated this paſſage, read not in their Copie or Edition as we do, ψυχικὸς, but φυσικὸς, for φυσικὸς ſignifieth naturall, and ψυχικὸς, animalis, or animale; howſoever the oppoſition to πνευματικὸς, or ſpirituall, ſheweth that hereby the Apoſtle meaneth a man that hath no farther light of underſtanding, then that which he brought with him even from his mothers womb; as Jude defineth men ſenſuall having not the Spirit, verſ. 19. And in this ſenſe Tertullian taketh the word in his Tractate cont. Pſychicos, branding the right believers who diſtaſted the Faſts of the Montaniſts (into whoſe hereſie he was now fallen) with the name of Pſuchici, that is, carnall, or ſenſuall men.

ſpiritually diſcerned] That is, to be taken and underſtood in a ſpirituall and heavenly ſenſe, to which his carnall reaſon cannot reach: Or, they are ſpiritually diſcerned, that is, by the vertue of the holy Ghoſt, with an eye anointed with the eye-ſalve of the Spirit, Apoc. 3. 18.

V. 15. But he that is, &c.] See Prov. 27. 19.

judgeth all things] Or, diſcerneth. Gr. Tec. all theſe things. Underſtandeth and diſcerneth all things, which belong unto the worſhip of God and eternall life.

judged of no man] Or, diſcerned. That is, can be convinced of errour in judging ſpirituall things by no naturall and carnall man. For when the Prophets are judged by the Prophets, it is the Spirit that judgeth, and not the man; or men by their naturall reaſon: the wiſedome of carnall men determineth nothing certainly, no not in their own affairs, much leſſe can it diſcern ſtrange, that is, ſpirituall things: but the Spirit of God wherewith ſpirituall men are endued, can be deceived by no means, whileſt they follow that guide, and therefore can be reproved of no man.

CHAP. III.

Verſ. 1. C*Ould not ſpeak unto you*] Having declared the worthineſſe of heavenly wiſdome and of the Goſpel, and having generally condemned the blindneſſe of mans minde, he now particularly applyeth himſelf to the Corinthians, calling them carnall, that is, ſuch in whom the fleſh prevaileth againſt gainſt the ſpirit, and he bringeth a double proof thereof. Firſt, from his dealing with them no other wayes then with ignorant men, and ſuch as were almoſt babes in the doctrine of godlineſſe: Secondly, from thoſe diſſentions which ſprung up among them, by reaſon of the ignorance of the vertue of the Spirit and heavenly wiſdome, in which they had profited very little or nothing.

as unto carnall] He calleth them carnall, who yet had received the firſt fruits of the Spirit, in three regards. Firſt, becauſe the fleſh in them luſted againſt the ſpirit. Secondly, becauſe in many things they followed the deſires of the fleſh. Thirdly, becauſe they favoured the things of the fleſh, not perceiving, or at leaſt, not reliſhing many things of the Spirit, as being but novices in the Schoole of Chriſt.

V. 2. fed you with milk] Heb. 5. 12. That is, ſaith Clem. Alex. Pædagog. l. 1. c. 6. κατήχησα ὑμᾶς ἐν Χριστῷ ἁπλῇ καὶ ἀληθεῖ καὶ αὐτοφυεῖ τροφῇ πνευματικῇ, I have catechized you in Chriſt with ſimple, true and nouriſhing food, wholeſome and eaſie of digeſture. For ſuch is milk to children. And to this charitie of the Apoſtle in condeſcending to the capacitie of his hearers, and feeding them which were ſucklings in Chriſt, with the ſincere milk of the Word. S. Ambroſe Serm. 68. & S. Chryſoſtome Serm. in principes Apoſtolos, allude in deſcanting upon the miracle wrought at his death and martyrdome, at which when hee was beheaded ſome of the ancients affirm, lac pro ſanguine manaſſe, that milk iſſued in ſtead of bloud.

V. 3. diviſions] Or, factions.

walk as men] Gr. according to man. By the ſquare and compaſſe of mans wit and judgement, as men uſe to walk, who are meer men and deſtitute of the Spirit of God.

V. 5. Who then is Paul] After he had ſufficiently reprehended ambitious teachers, and their fooliſh eſteemers, now hee ſheweth how the true Miniſters are to be eſteemed, that we attribute not to them more or leſſe then we ought to do, therefore he teacheth us that they are they, by whom we are called to faith and ſalvation, but yet as the Miniſters of God, and ſuch as do nothing of themſelves, but God ſo working by them as it pleaſeth him to furniſh them with his gifts; therefore we have not to mark or conſider ſo much what a Miniſter he is, that ſpeaketh, but what is ſpoken, and we muſt depend only upon God who ſpeaketh by his ſervants.

V. 6. I have planted, &c.] That is, ſaith Optatus Milevitanus, I have made you Chriſtians of Pagans, and Apollo hath baptized you: or, I have laid the firſt foundations of Chriſtianitie among you, but Apollo and others have confirmed you in that doctrine and built you up in your moſt holy faith.

but God gave the encreaſe] S. Auſtine againſt Petillian, truly obſerveth, that in naturall fruits God giveth the encreaſe not without the power of nature, which doth her part, ſed in ſpiritualibus & gratuitis ſolum Dei incrementum, God alone gives the encreaſe, cum excluſione cujuſcunq; cauſæ creatæ, nature contributing nothing of her ſelf thereunto: and therefore in reſpect of the ſupernaturall effect of the preaching of the Goſpel, to wit, faith and repentance, he that planteth, and he that watereth is as nothing, though God uſe their labour therein, or, is nothing in compariſon.

V. 7. So then] Or, wherefore.

V. 8. are one] That is, they are both nothing, but ſervants and Miniſters, and that of the ſame Maſter, propoſing unto themſelves one and the ſelf-ſame mark; to wit, your growth in the grace and knowledge of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt: and ſith they are thus one, you ought not for them or concerning them to be divided as you are into factions.

and every man ſhall receive his own reward] Pſal 62. 12. Gal. 6, 5.

own labour] Or, proper.

V. 9. labourers together with God] Serving together under him: now they that ſerve under another do nothing of their own ſtrength, but as it is given them of grace, which grace fitteth them for that ſervice, and all the encreaſe that cometh by their labour, doth ſo proceed from God, that no part of the praiſe of it may be given to the under ſervants.

husbandry] Or, Gods labourers together.

V. 10. But let every man take heed. &c.] Now he ſpeaketh to the Teachers themſelves which ſucceed him in the Church of Corinth, and in their perſons, to all that were after or ſhall be Paſtours of Congregations, ſeeing that they ſucceed into the labours of the Apoſtles, which were planters and chief builders, therefore he warneth them, that they perſwade not themſelves that they may build after their own fancie, that is, that they may propound and ſet forth any thing in the Church, either in matter or kind of teaching different from the Apoſtles which were chief builders.

V. 12. If any man build upon this foundation gold, &c.] They who build after the Apoſtles upon the foundation which they have laid, to wit, Chriſt Jeſus, muſt take heed that the upper part of their building be anſwerable to the foundation, that is, that admonitions, exhortations, and whatſoever pertaineth to the edifying of the flock, be anſwerable to the doctrine of Chriſt, as well in the matter as in forme. And here by gold, ſilver and precious ſtones, he meaneth pure and ſolide doctrine; of which matter Eſay alſo and John in the Revelation, build the heavenly citie: and to theſe are oppoſite, wood, hay, and ſtubble, that is, vain and curious ſubtilties of philoſophicall conceits, and all kind of teaching which ſerveth to oſtentation, and not to edification, 1 Tim. 1. 4. By this he taxeth them among the Corinthians, who mingled in the preaching of the Word, the tearmes of humane Arts, the vain flouriſhes of Oratours, and argute reaſons of Sophiſters, which though they ſubvert not the foundation, nor falſifie the ſubſtance of the Goſpel, yet they disfigure and diſgrace it.

V. 13. ſhall be revealed] Gr. is revealed.

by fire] Gr. in fire.

and the fire ſhall try every mans work] By the fire, is not meant, as the Romiſh Divines teach, fire of Purgatory. Firſt, becauſe it cannot be proved out of Scripture, that there is any ſuch purgatory fire as they imagine, to purge thoſe that die with veniall ſinnes. Secondly, becauſe every work is tryed by the fire here meant, but according to the Romiſh doctrine good works are not tryed in purgatory fire. Thirdly, the works here meant (as appeareth by the antecedent and conſequents) are doctrines, and ſeverall kinds of preaching, which it would be abſurd to ſay, that they ſhould be tryed with materiall fire, wherewith our Adverſaries believe, that thoſe who die with veniall ſinnes are tormented in their purgatory. But by fire, either wee are to underſtand (according to the Interpretation of S. Auſtin and others of the Ancients) the fire of perſecutions, tribulations, and temptations whereby the ſound doctrin is tried and proved, as it were affording then to us moſt ſtrong and ſolid comforts and conſolations which no other is able to do: Or the fire of the holy Ghoſt, who by the light of Gods Word doth manifeſt the veritie or vanitie of doctrines delivered by the Preachers, and, like unto fire, reduceth and bringeth to nothing like hay and ſtubble, whatſoever is foiſted in by humane invention. For though ſuch doctrine be not tainted with hereſie, yet becauſe blinded with vanitie, it is no better then hay and ſtubble. Or by fire is meant the appearing of Chriſt at the day of judgement, likened to fire for two qualities, brightneſſe and a conſuming force.

V. 14. If any mans work abide] As the good mettall in the furnace, without being conſumed after the manner of droſſe or any other combuſtible matter.

V. 15. If any mans work ſhall be burnt, he ſhall ſuffer loſſe] That is, If any mans doctrine or teaching will not endure the tryall, as hay, and ſtubble, and droſſe will not the fire, hee ſhall loſe the praiſe of his labour, which ſhall not be accepted nor rewarded by God. Notwithſtanding for his own perſon (if he have held firme the foundation, either myſticall, which is Chriſt in reſpect of the faithfull, who being many living ſtones make one houſe, built upon him; or doctrinall, in reſpect of the doctrin and faith, whereby they are joyned together and built upon him) he ſhall be ſaved.

yet ſo as by fire] Becauſe he ſhall paſſe by the fire, that is, the revealing brightneſſe of Chriſt, or the fire of the Spirit, which ſhall ſhew the vanity of his work: or he ſhal be ſaved as through fire, through the which when the gold paſſeth, whatſoever droſſe it hath, it muſt ſuffer loſſe of it. Or, he ſhall paſſe as through fire, (i. e.) it ſhall be requiſite that he be purified by the holy Ghoſt of that mixture and impuritie of worldlineſſe and mans wiſdome, of words wherewith he hath defiled both himſelf and his miniſtery. Or elſe he ſhall be ſaved in ſuch a manner as one that eſcapeth naked out of the fire without carrying away or ſaving any of his goods, his perſon may well be ſaved, but ſo as he ſhall loſe the reward of a well qualified Miniſter and faithfull diſpenſer of the myſteries of God.

V. 16. Know ye not that ye are the temple of God] See Chap. 6. 19. 2 Cor. 6. 16.

V. 17. defile] Or, deſtroy.

V. 18. let him become a fool, that he may be wiſe] Let him deny himſelf and his carnall wiſdome, and ſubmit himſelf to the Doctrine of the Goſpel, which the world accounts fooliſhneſſe.

V. 19. For the wiſdome of this world is fooliſhneſſe] God convinceth it by his Word to be fooliſh and vain, becauſe it performeth not that which it promiſeth, nor any way furthereth us to true happineſſe.

He taketh the wiſe in their own craftineſſe] See Job 5. 13. Or, catcheth.

V. 20 The Lord knoweth the thoughts, &c.] See Pſal. 94. 11. Or, diſcourſes.

V. 21. for all things are yours] No man glorieth in theſe things which are for himſelf, and appointed for his benefit, becauſe in this regard they are inferiour to himſelf; but all things are for you, and your benefit, who are the elect of God, therefore you ought not to glory in your teachers or in any men.

CHAP. IIII.

Verſe 1. LEt a man ſo account of us] He concludeth the duty of the hearers towards their Miniſters, that they eſteem them not as Lords, and yet notwithſtanding that they give eare unto them, as to them that are ſent to them from Chriſt, to this end, that they may receive as it were at their hands the precious pearle of ſalvation, which is drawn out of Gods treaſury. By the myſteries of God, he underſtandeth the chief heads of Chriſtian doctrine, which are hidden to the naturall man, as alſo the Sacraments of the new Teſtament, which the Ancients call, φρικτὰ μυστήρια, dreadfull myſteries.

and ſtewards] Or, diſpenſers.

V. 2. found faithfull] That they keep nothing back from the people of God, but reveale unto them his whole counſell, that they deale faithfully with them in all things, that they may render a good account of their Stewardſhip at the great Audit. Now although there are other vertues required in a ſteward, as skill, and induſtry, and providence; yet the Apoſtle only nameth faithfulneſſe, becauſe that is the chief, and beſt ſerved his purpoſe to beat down the pride of their Teachers, who boaſted of the goods committed to them, as if they were their own and not their Maſters.

V. 3. with me] Gr. to me.

a very ſmall thing] Gr. a matter of leaſt moment.

mans judgement] Gr. day Word for word, mans day, after the manner of the ſpeech of the Cilicians, as S. Jerome noteth, it is metonymia adjuncti, taken from ſet dayes appointed for judicature, and it ſeemeth to be ſpoken in oppoſition to Dies Domini, the Lords day, which is the great Day of Judgement, to which the Apoſtle appeales, from all dayes ſet by men in this world.

I judge not mine own ſelf] How can ye judge how much, or how little I am to be accounted of, ſeeing that I my ſelf, who know my ſelf better then you do, and dare profeſſe that I have walked in my vocation with a good conſcience, dare not yet challenge any thing to my ſelf?

V. 4. I know nothing by my ſelf] Not ſimply, no ſinne. For in many things we offend all; and he that ſaith he hath no ſinne deceiveth himſelf, and there is no truth in him, 1 Joh. 1.8. But his meaning is, my conſcience cleares me from negligence and unfaithfulneſſe in the function of my miniſtery: yet am I not thereby juſtified, that is, this doth not acquit me before God, in ſuch ſort, as that I may challenge to my ſelf the praiſe or reward of a faithfull and abſolute juſt Steward, who hath perfectly in every point diſcharged the truſt repoſed in him, but he that judgeth me is the Lord, that is, I permit my ſelf to his judgement.

hereby juſtified] Gr. in that.

V. 5. Therefore judge nothing before the time] See Matth. 7. 1. Rom. 2. 1.

praiſe of God] Gr. praiſe ſhall be to every man from God. According to his faithfulneſſe and diligence in his miniſteriall function. Some no doubt ſhall receive diſpraiſe; yet he mentioneth rather praiſe then diſpraiſe, for that the vice which he here reproveth in the Corinthians, was, that they gave more praiſe to ſome then to others, odiouſly extolling ſome to the diſparagement of himſelf and others, who deſerved as well, or perhaps better then they.

V. 6. I have in a figure transferred to my ſelf] In this reproof of your partialitie, I have repreſented the head and ſpring thereof unto you, under the name of us the Apoſtles, 1 Cor. 1. 12. 1 Cor. 3. 4. by a figurative ſpeech, not as if indeed we had any part therein, but to ſpare the guiltie Paſtours, and to teach them by our example, to pluck up the root of the evill, which is, that affectation of humane knowledge and eloquence (whereby they endeavoured to draw many followers after them) and to conforme themſelves to the perpetuall ſtyle of the holy Ghoſt, and the Scriptures, as we our ſelves do continually, whereby all matter and occaſion of ſchiſme and rent will be taken away.

for your ſakes] Leſt I ſhould offend you, if I ſhould taxe thoſe Teachers by name: Or, to inſtruct you aright how you ought to carry your ſelves, in regard of your Teachers, and in what eſteem you ought to have them.

to think] Or, to be wiſe.

above that which is written] Either written before by us concerning this, or written throughout the word of God, which in many places commendeth to the Paſtours of the Church, humilitie and unitie. Or the meaning is, let none be wiſe above that which is written, let none preſume to adde to the doctrine of the Scriptures, or adulterate the ſame by vain conceits, diſcourſes, or affected ſtraines of mans wiſedome or eloquence.

puffed up] Pride in the ſoule is like a tumour or ſwelling in the body; his meaning therefore is, that the Corinthians ſhould not be proud for the excellencie of their Paſtours, whom they ſided withall, to the prejudice of other Paſtours & their followers.

V. 7 who maketh thee to differ] Gr. diſtinguiſheth thee. That is, who hath preferred thee either in gifts or place; who hath given thee the preeminence which thou affecteſt, or by whom wert thou choſen from among the reſt of the Church to this high and excellent calling? doth it not proceed from God and his grace, and not from men? therefore be thou humble, and endeavour rather to ſerve God, then to pleaſe mens humours. And as it is ſeemeth chiefly to be directed to the teachers, ſo it may be applyed to every member of the Church, who is converted to the faith of Chriſt, and made partaker of any ſpirituall gifts. As if he ſhould ſay, It is God that by his grace doth make thee to differ from another man, and not the Teacher; for albeit Paul plant, and Apollo water, yet God alone gives the increaſe.

what haſt thou that thou didſt not receive] Though the words have a ſpeciall reference to the eminent gifts whereby one Paſtour differed from another among the Corinthians; yet they are generall, and parallel to thoſe words of St. James, Every good gift, and every perfect gift is from above, and deſcendeth from the Father of lights, Chap. 1. verſ. 17. and are rightly applyed by the Synod of Arauſica, and S. Auſtine de correp. & grat. c. 7. & ep. 46. & l. 2. de pec. merit. c. 18. & Cyp. l. 3 teſtim. & Gennadius, Proſper, and others, to prove againſt the Pelagians, that every good motion of our will is from God, and that the deſire of grace is from grace; and conſequently that election is not upon foreſeen works, or faith, but meerly depends upon the free love of God in Chriſt.

V. 8. Now ye are full] You perſwade your ſelves now that ye are in happy condition, and that ye want nothing more of ſpirituall gifts, and for that extoll your ſelves above all others, as a King in his Kingdome: Or, you carry your ſelves ſecurely, as in a peaceable Kingdome, whereas we are expoſed to all fear and danger; which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh by way of an Ironicall reproof, to make way for his following exhortation to humilitie, exemplified by himſelf, and his mean condition. See the like, Rev. 3. 19.

and I would to God ye did reign] To wit, in deed and truth. The Apoſtle continueth his Ironie, and his meaning is, You are indeed in a far happier caſe and more excellent condition then we poor Apoſtles, that are diſtreſſed, perſecuted, and deſpiſed of the world; we have good reaſon to wiſh to be partakers of your bleſſings and comforts, in regard that we live like miſerable priſoners, looking every houre to be called to execution, after they have been ignominiouſly led about through the Market places, and made publike ſpectacles of miſery and ſcorn.

V. 9. ſet forth us the apoſtles laſt] By the laſt, the Apoſtle meaneth thoſe who in the Roman theaters were called meridianarii, who had long fought with men or beaſts, and eſcaping with their lives, were in the end diſarmed, and having no Bucklers nor Helmets, were appointed to be ſlaughtered one after another, In quorum ſpectaculo ſatis erat (ſaith Seneca) quod homines ſacrarentur.

appointed to death] Or, deſigned for death.

ſpectacle] Gr. theatre.

V. 10. We are fools for Chriſts ſake] Either theſe words are ſpoken by an Ironie, as Oecumenius conceiveth, or they may be taken properly, and then they carry this ſenſe, We are fooles in the opinion of the world, and yours, becauſe for Chriſts ſake and the Goſpels we expoſe our ſelves to manifold troubles and dangers; but you are wiſe, who ſo preach Chriſt that yet ye hazard no limb for him, nor incurre any danger of your perſons or eſtates.

deſpiſed] Gr. without honour.

V. 12. And labour, &c.] See Acts 20. 34. 1 Theſſ. 2. 9. 2 Theſſ. 3. 8.

working with our own hands] For S. Paul (as we read, Act. 18. 3.) exerciſed a handy-craft, and wrought with Aquila, their occupation being tent-making, and this he did ſometimes for neceſſitie, ſometimes that he might not be burthenſome to any, to whom he preached the Goſpel, for his maintenance, 2 Theſſ. 3. 8. But here in mentioning it, he ſeemeth ſecretly to tax the Corinthians, who were rich and very bountifull to other teachers, yet ſuffered the Apoſtles to be in want, and to relieve themſelves by their hard labour.

V. 13. defamed] Gr. Tec. hard, or, evill ſpoken of. Mat. 5. 44.

intreat] Gr. call unto, or, exhort.

V. 14. I warn you] Gr. Tec. warning you.

V. 15. For though you have ten thouſand inſtructers in Chriſt] Word for word, Schoolmaſters, whereby he puts a difference between himſelf and their preſent teachers; they like Schoolemaſters, taught for their hire, hee freely; they imperiouſly, hee tenderly, like a father, who begot them to Chriſt through the Goſpel.

V. 16. followers] Gr. imitatours.

V. 17. ſhall bring] Or, will bring.

my wayes] What way and rule I follow every where in teaching the Churches, or my courſe of life, or manner of converſation, that they might follow it, as he exhorteth them, verſ. 16.

V. 18. I would not come to you] Or, I were not coming to you.

V. 19. But, &c.] Act. 19. 21. He deſcendeth to Apoſtolicall threatnings, yet chiding them as a father, leſt by their diſorder he be conſtrained to come to puniſh ſome among them.

if the Lord will] See James 4 .15.

not the ſpeech of them] Not their boaſting words, or their painted or coloured kind of eloquence, againſt which he ſetteth the virtue of the Spirit; but the power, that is the efficacy of their preaching, powerfully working in the hearts of the hearers.

V. 21. ſhall I come unto you with a rod] He might have ſaid, with a ſword, to wit, of Excommunication, which he brandiſheth in the next Chapter, therewith cutting off the inceſtuous Corinthian; but becauſe before he had ſtyled himſelf their father, and he bare the tender affection of a father towards them, he rather expreſſeth the ſeverity he was to uſe among them, by the metaphor of a rod, wherewith a father chaſteneth his ſonne, to break him of ſome ill qualitie or miſdemeanour, then of the ſword, or any other.

CHAP. V.

Verſ. 1. R*Eported*] Gr. heard.

fornication among you] The ſinne was inceſt, forbidden, Levit. 18. 8. The nakedneſſe of thy fathers wife ſhalt thou not uncover; a horrible crime, and ſuch as the very Gentiles deteſted, and ſeverely puniſhed in their laws, if any among them (which ſeldome fell out) defiled themſelves with any ſuch unnaturall contract, or abominable act. Neither doth the Apoſtle diminiſh the foulneſſe of it, by terming of it πορνεία. For πορνεία, in the Greek, is ſtuprum in Latine; though ſometimes they are reſtrained to one kind of uncleanneſſe, which is committed between unmarried perſons; yet they are generall in their own nature, and may be applied to any acts of impure luſt; and as the Apoſtle here calleth the inceſt of him who lay with his mother in law, fornication: ſo likewiſe the Roman Oratour calleth Clodius his inceſt with his own ſiſter, ſtuprum.

V. 2. done] Gr. Tec. acted.

from among you] The Apoſtle findeth fault with the Corinthians, for that they had not excommunicated this inceſtuous perſon, before he had wrote unto them, and charged them ſo to do, becauſe the fact was notorious, and the Church very much ſcandalized by harbouring ſo foul a delinquent in the boſome thereof.

V. 3. I verily as abſent] Gr. Tec. I verily abſent. See Col. 2. 5.

but preſent in ſpirit] In mind, affection, and care; or the meaning may be, that the Apoſtle by the ſpirit knew all things that paſt at Corinth, as if he were there bodily preſent.

judged] Or, determined.

V. 4. In the Name] Calling upon the name of Chriſt, or by the command of Chriſt, as the word is taken, Acts 3. 6. and Matth. 7.22. and Luke 24,47.

with the power] There is no doubt, but that judgement is ratified in heaven, wherein Chriſt ſitteth as Judge, the power both of excommunicating and abſolving is Chriſts, and the miniſtery thereof only committed to the Governours of the Church.

V. 5. To deliver ſuch an one unto Satan] See 1 Tim. 1. 20. What it is to be delivered to Satan, the Lord himſelf declareth, when he ſaith, Let him be unto thee as a heathen and a publicane, Matth. 18. 17. that is to ſay, to be defranchiſed and put out of the right and liberty of the Citie of Chriſt, which is the Church. This manner of expreſſion was uſed of old in the greater excommunication, and it ſeems to be taken from 1 Sam. 16. 14. where Saul being rejected of God was caught and troubled by an evill ſpirit; and in the primitive times of the Church, after this greater Excommunication, (as one of the ancients affirme) there followed great terrours in the party excommunicated, agonies of ſpirit, yea, and torments alſo of body, which through Gods permiſſion were inflicted, not for the utter and irrevocable deſtruction of the Delinquent, but for his correction and amendment, that his ſoul might be ſaved, though his body ſuffered.

for the deſtruction of the fleſh] The mortifying and deſtroying the old man; that is, corrupt nature called the fleſh, Rom. 8. 13. Gal. 5. 24. Or, to the great macerating and pulling down of the body by ſadneſſe; for a broken ſpirit dryeth the bones, Prov. 17. 22. to the pulling down and tormenting of the body, even unto death, if Gods will be ſo, as alſo death might ſometimes enſue upon the foreſaid delivery to Satan, and even at the laſt gaſpe the ſinner ſhewing a lively repentance, was releaſed from thoſe bonds of excommunication, and reſtored to the peace of the Church and favour of God, ſo that he departed this life with comfort.

that the ſpirit may be ſaved] The ſcope and end of the Churches ſeverity, is not eternall condemnation, but ſaving of the ſoul by true repentance.

in the day of the Lord Jeſus] In the laſt day, or day of judgement; not as if ſalvation were deferred to the laſt day, or that the repenting ſoul ſhould not enjoy it before that time; but becauſe ſalvation then ſhall be conſummated, and fully revealed, 1 Pet. 1. 5.

V. 6. Know ye not that a little leaven] See Gal. 5. 9. A kind of proverbiall ſpeech, intimating, that one ſcandalous offendor may infect the whole Church, as one ſcabbed ſheep a whole flock; and hereby the Apoſtle declareth another end of Excommunication to be, to keep the Church ſound from infection, to cut off a rotten Member, that it gangren not the whole body.

V. 7. Purge out therefore the old leaven] By alluding to the Ceremony of the Paſſeover, he exhorteth them to caſt out this unclean perſon from among them. In times paſt (ſaith he) it was not lawfull for them which did celebrate the Paſſeover, to eat leavened bread, in ſo much that he was held as unclean and unworthy to eat the Paſſeover, whoſoever had taſted of leaven; now all our whole life muſt be as it were the feaſt of unleavened bread, wherein all they that are partakers of that immaculate Lamb which was ſlain, muſt caſt out, both of themſelves, and alſo out of their houſes and congregations, all impuritie.

that ye may be a new lump] That your Church may be a clean and pure body, according as you were renewed by the gift of regeneration, which can no way conſiſt with any ſuch mixture of reigning ſinne. A figure taken from the Jewiſh paſſeover, which was alwaies to be kept with unleavened bread, Exod. 12. 15.

Chriſt our paſſeover] Chriſt is termed our Paſſeover, either by a Metonymie ſignati pro ſigno, or by a metaphor in regard of many reſemblances between Chriſt and the Paſchall Lambe: Firſt, as the Lambe was without blemiſh, ſo Chriſt was without all ſpot of ſinne. Secondly, as no bone of the Lambe was to be broken, ſo neither any bone of Chriſt at his paſſion. Thirdly, as the Lambe was offered to God for a typicall reconciliation and ſatiſfaction, ſo was Chriſt for the true reconciliation of all his elect, & ſatiſfaction for their ſins. Fourthly, as the Paſchall Lamb was to be eaten, ſo we feed upon Chriſt by faith. Fiftly, as the Paſchal Lamb was to be eaten with ſowre hearbs, ſo Chriſts fleſh is to be eaten in the Sacrament with a ſowre and bitter remembrance of our ſinnes, and Chriſts dolorous ſuffering for them. Sixtly, as the Paſchal Lambe was to be eaten with unleavened bread, ſo all that eat Chriſt muſt purge out of their conſcience all leaven of maliciousneſſe. Seventhly, as that Lamb was called Phaſe, Exod. 12. which ſignifieth a paſſing over; ſo Chriſts death, in which he was ſacrificed far us, might be called Phaſe, or tranſitus, a paſſage; becauſe by it he paſſed from the world to his Father. Laſtly, as where the door cheeks and poſts were ſprinkled with the bloud of the Lamb, they in the family eſcaped the ſtroke of the deſtroying Angell; ſo all thoſe whoſe conſciences are ſprinkled by faith with the blood of Chriſt, the Lambe of God which taketh away the ſinnes of the world, ſhall eſcape eternall deſtruction.

V. 8. let us keep the feaſt] Or, let us keep holy day. Let us lead or paſſe our life, which ought to be a perpetuall celebration and remembrance of our redemption by Chriſt, even as the Paſſeover feaſt, during eight dayes, was the commemoration of the deliverance out of Egypt. That which the Iſraelites were to do typically, and in the ſigne, upon the killing of the lamb for the preparation of the feaſt of the Paſſeover, and in caſting out all the old leaven, and abſtaining ſeven whole dayes from unleavened bread, according to the expreſſe command of God, Exodus 12. 15. let us performe in the truth or thing ſignified all the dayes of our lives; that is, purge out the old leaven of inbred naturall corruption, and take away all ſcandals from among us, after that now we are reconciled to God, through the offering and ſprinkling of the blood of Chriſt.

V. 9. in an Epiſtle] That Epiſtle is not now extant, for this is the firſt to the Corinthians that is found in the new Teſtament, and although that Epiſtle was written by divine inſpiration, as we may piouſly conceive, that the Books of Nathan, Gad, Ahiah, Iddo, Semaiah, and others, mentioned in the old Teſtament, were, which now are thought to be loſt; yet will it not hence follow, that the Canon of the Scriptures is not perfect, as the Romaniſts would inferre; becauſe as the prinsipall Contents of thoſe former books are ſuppoſed to be found in the Bookes of the Chronicles and Kings, ſo it cannot be proved, but that all points neceſſary to ſalvation, which were ſet down in that former Epiſtle to the Corinthians, are either contained in theſe two Epiſtles which we have, or ſome other Booke of holy Scripture.

not to company with fornicators] Gr. mingled with. Now he ſpeaketh more generally, and that which he ſpake before of the inceſtuous perſon, he ſheweth, that it pertaineth to others which are known to be wicked, and ſuch as through their naughty life are a ſlander to the Church, which ought alſo by lawfull order to be caſt out of the communion of the Church.

V. 10. Yet not altogether with the fornicatours of this world] Such as belong unto the world, or addicted to this world, that are yet out of the Church ; ſo the world is taken, John 15.19. and 17.9.

extortioners] Gr. raveners.

for then muſt ye] Gr. ſeeing that then ye muſt.

for then muſt ye needs go out of this world] If you would utterly abſtain from ſuch mens company, you muſt quit this world ; therefore I ſpeak of them which are in the boſome of the Church, which muſt be called home by diſcipline, and not of them which are without, with whom we muſt labour by all means poſſible to bring them unto Chriſt.

V. 11. not to keep company] Gr. not to be joyned or mingled with company.

extortioner] Gr. ravener.

no not to eate] He meaneth, that we ought not to have any intimate familiaritie, or common uſage, or manner of life and converſation with them ; for otherwiſe in ſome caſe we are not forbidden ſimply to eat with ſuch, ſith neither the bond of Matrimonie is broken by excommunication, nor ſuch duties hindered, much leſſe cut off thereby, as we owe one to another, children to their parents, ſubjects to their Prince, ſervants to their Maſters, and neighbour to neighbour, to winne one another to God.

V. 13. put away from] Gr. put, or, take out from.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ. 1. D*Are any of you*] As if he had ſaid, are any of you become ſo impudent, that ye are not aſhamed to make the Goſpel a laughing ſtock to profane men ? yet is it not ſimply unlawfull in it ſelf to try civill cauſes at the tribunall of Infidels, if right cannot be had elſe-where, and the matter be of very great conſequence, and not only concerning our ſelves, but our friends, familie, and poſteritie, but where they might have differences compoſed by the arbitrement of holy brethren, out of ſpleen, or any other ſiniſter affection to implead one another before heathen Judges, could not be done without great ſcandall to the godly, and wrong to the Chriſtian Religion. For hereby the Gentiles were acquainted with the coveteouſneſſe, ambition, deſire of revenge, and manifold jarres among Chriſtians, whereof they made uſe, and took occaſion thereby to traduce our moſt holy faith : hoc Ithacus velit & magno mercentur Achivi.

to law] Gr. to be judged.

before the unjuſt] Gr. of. By the unjuſt he meaneth Pagans and Infidels, for he oppoſeth them to Saints and brethren : now he termeth the Infidels unjuſt, not onely becauſe they are deſtitute of the righteouſneſſe of God in Chriſt, but becauſe in their tribunall matters were carried very corruptly, and ſentences given againſt all juſtice and conſcience, as Saint Cyprian and other the Ancients juſtly complain againſt them ; inter leges peccatur, inter jura delinquitur juſtitia, nec ubi defenditur ſervatur, &c.

V. 2. the ſaints ſhall judge the world] The Apoſtle uſeth an argument a majore ad minus, if the Saints together with Chriſt ſhall be Judges of the world, and of the devils: how much more are they fit to be Judges in light and ſmall cauſes, which may be by equitie and good conſcience without much difficulty determined ?

judge the ſmalleſt matters] Gr. of the ſmalleſt judicatures.

V. 4. are leaſt eſteemed in the Church] Or, are of no account in. The Apoſtle herein preſcribeth a remedie for the miſchief before mentioned, namely, by compoſing their private differences between themſelves by choſen arbitrators out of the Church, for which matter and purpoſe, ſaith he, the leaſt of you are ſufficient.

V. 5. between his brethren] Gr. between his brother.

V. 6. goeth to law with brother] Gr. is judged with a brother.

before the] Or, of the.

V. 7. a fault] The Greek word ἥττημα, coming from ἡττᾶσθαι Vinci, ſignifieth properly to have the worſt in a conflict or combate : whereby the Apoſtly implies, that the fleſh is too ſtrong for the ſpirit in them who out of coveteouſneſſe, malice, or deſire of revenge among the Corinthians drew their brethren before the tribunals of the heathens ; and that howſoever they might be ſuperiours in their trials of law in thoſe Courts, yet that truly they ſate down by the loſſe, receiving thereby more dammage in their ſouls, then gain in their eſtates. And as the Apoſtle here, ſo Moſes Gerundenſis, and Rabbi Salomon diſcourſing of the Diſcipline of the Hebrews, condemne the practiſe of thoſe among the Jewes, who went to law with their brethren before Infidels. For, ſay they, qui adducit Iſraelem ad tribunal Gentium polluit nomen Dei & honorat nomen Idoli : he which bringeth an Iſraelite before the tribunal of the Gentiles there to have his cauſe tryed, defileth the name of God, and doth honour to an Idol.

among you] In theſe words the Apoſtle intimates that both were in fault, as well the plaintiffe as the defendant, the one in giving cauſe by his unjuſtneſſe, the other by being ſo eaſily provoked by his impatience upon every offence, and damage received, although it were not of that weight which in Chriſtian diſcretion, charitie and equitie deſerved ſuch fierce and ſcandalous purſuing.

go to law one with] Gr. have judgements one with.

why do ye not, &c.] See Matth. 6. 39. Luk. 6. 29. Rom. 12. 19.

rather take wrong] We ſhould rather ſuffer ſome loſſe, then give offence, rather depart from our right, then to try the utmoſt of the law haſtily ; and that out of deſire of revenge.

V. 9. Be not deceived] Being about to ſpeak againſt fornication, he beginneth with a generall reprehenſion of thoſe vices wherewith that rich and riotous Citie moſt abounded, warning and teaching them earneſtly that repentance is unſeparably joyned with forgiveneſſe of ſinnes, and ſanctification with juſtification.

V. 10. extortioners] Or, ravenous.

V. 11. ſome of you] See Tit. 3. 3.

juſtified in the name of the Lord Jeſus] That is, by the Lord Jeſus apprehended by faith, as we read Acts the fourth, v. 12. There is no other name under heaven given amongſt men whereby we muſt be ſaved.

V. 12. All things, &c.] See Chap. 10. 23. Here he beginneth to tax the Corinthians who ſimply offended in matters indifferent, becauſe they uſed them without any diſcretion : For ſeeing the uſe of them ought to be brought to the rule of charity, he doth not uſe them aright who is ſo immoderate in the uſe of them, that he becometh a ſlave unto them. Though the words be generall, yet they make nothing for the Libertines or carnall Goſpellers ; for that rule of the Logicians here holdeth, verba ſunt reſtringenda ad ſubjectam materiam, words how generall ſoever they ſeem are to be reſtrained to the matter treated of. Now the matter was concerning the uſe of things indifferent, as of meats and drinks, and the like. If it be objected that he ſpeaketh in verſes immediatly following of fornication which is not a thing indifferent. It is anſwered, that he ſets down the rule of things indifferent before he treat of fornication, by reaſon that many according to the errour of the Pagans and Gentiles did reckon fornication to be of that number, ſee Acts 15. 20. In particular, many in Corinth were ſo farre from holding fornication a ſinne, that they conſecrated a Temple to Venus, at which many thouſand maids proſtituted themſelves ; and for this reaſon amongſt others, it is conceived that Saint Paul in the verſes following ſo particularly, and ſo vehemently reproveth this vice.

but all things are not expedient] Or, profitable. It is not expedient at all times to do thoſe things which are otherwiſe lawfull, but rather we ought to forbear the uſe of ſuch things, which otherwiſe our Chriſtian liberty permitteth, for the maintenance of charity, and ſupporting of the weak, and preſerving and propagating the peace of the Church.

power of any] He bringeth himſelf under the power of things indifferent, who thinketh that he may not be without them, which is a flattering kind of ſlaverie, under colour of libertie, which ſeizeth upon ſuch men. He equally erreth who in things indifferent either thinketh that he muſt alwaies uſe them, or that he may not at all ; and there may be a kind of ſuperſtition as well in the defect, as in the exceſſe about the uſe of things indifferent, Col. 2.21.

V. 13. Meats for the belly, &c.] Gr. to the belly. That is, meats and drinks are indifferent things, but fornication is not of the number of ſuch things. For although both the one and the other, namely eating of meats and fornication be bodily acts ; yet the quality of the meats hath no morall relation to the ſoul, neither to its preſent ſanctification, nor future glorification : it leaveth no impreſſion behind it, Matth. 5. 11. 17. but it is only for the ſuſtenance of this life, and after our paſſage to another life ; all the uſe of meats and of the ſtomach and belly which receiveth and digeſteth them is aboliſhed ; whereas on the other ſide all carnall copulations ſave the matrimoniall, are expreſſely prohibited by God, are deſtructive of, and repugnant to the right end and uſe of our bodies, which are to be conſecrated to Chriſt (belonging to him as his own members) and to be governed and acted by him to ſerve him in holineſſe and pureneſſe, and by that means to be made partakers of his glory in the laſt reſurrection.

deſtroy both it] Gr. make void, or, of no uſe both it.

for fornication] Gr. to fornication.

V. 14. And God] Gr. But God.

V. 15. bodies are the members of Chriſt] Not onely your ſouls, but your bodies alſo ; for true believers being entirely united to Chriſt as their head, 1 Cor. 12. 12. 27. their bodies alſo are a part of his myſticall bodie.

ſhall I then take the members] Gr. taking then the members. Shall I diſ-member or diſ-joynt my ſelf from Chriſt by any baſe carnall conjunction, ſuch as cannot ſtand with that ſpirituall union I have with him, in trenching thus upon the right he hath over my body; and depriving my ſelf of the happineſſe to be governed and quickned by him and his Spirit.

and make] Gr. ſhall I make.

V. 16. two (ſaith he) ſhall be one fleſh] Gr. into one fleſh. See Gen. 2. 24. Matth. 19. 5. Epheſ. 5. 31.

V. 17. joyned unto the Lord] By faith and love. For Chriſt is the husband of the Church, and every faithfull ſoul, who betrotheth her to himſelf in faithfulneſſe and loving kindneſſe and righteouſneſſe, Hoſ. 2. 19, 20. is his bride.

is one Spirit] Is made wholly ſpirituall by his union with Chriſt, he is not divided between God and Mammon, between the Spirit and Fleſh: Or, he is led and governed by one and the ſelf-ſame Spirit.

V. 18. Flee fornication] Here the Apoſtle uſeth divers arguments to dehort the Corinthians from fornication. Firſt, becauſe it ſtaineth the body with a peculiar kind of filth. Secondly, becauſe a fornicatour is guilty of ſacriledge; for that our bodies are conſecrated to God as his temples, verſ. 19. Thirdly, becauſe we are not our own, to give our bodies to any other, much leſſe to Satan and the Fleſh, ſeeing that God himſelf hath bought us, and that with a great price, to the end that both in body and ſoule we ſhould ſerve him. For the phraſe he uſeth here of fleeing, it implyeth that whereas other vices are conquered by ſtruggling and ſtriving with them: the beſt way to ſubdue this vice, is to fight with it after the manner of the Parthians, who did fight flying.

without the body] That is, is committed by the abuſe of ſome externall object; as namely a drunkard abuſeth wine, gluttonie abuſeth meat in the quantitie or qualitie: but a fornicatour abuſeth his own body. But we muſt note that this generall rule, every ſinne that a man doth is without the body, is to be underſtood of ſuch ſinnes as break out into externall actions, or are acted by our bodies: for envie, malice, and the inward acts of all vices are done in the ſoul, and cannot be properly ſaid to exerciſe their act upon any thing without the body, though they work upon the body it ſelf by making it pine and waſt away, or otherwiſe diſtempering it.

ſinneth againſt his own body] Some by his own body underſtand the body of his wife, which according to Gods ordinance is his own body; for ſaith he, two ſhall be one fleſh: and this is Severianus an ancient Fathers interpretation; but it is too narrow an interpretation: For in that ſenſe onely the adulterer ſinneth againſt his own body. Others underſtand the words comparatively, that a fornicatour more ſinneth againſt his owne body then other vicious perſons; for either they defile their ſouls only and not their bodies, as thoſe who commit ſpirituall wickedneſſe, or if they ſinne againſt their own body, as the drunkard and glutton doth, and the body receive alſo much ſhame and damage thereby, yet they ſinne not in ſo grievous a manner, nor ſo much wrong and hurt the body as the fornicatour doth. But the moſt proper and genuine interpretation ſeemeth to bee this: other ſinnes though they may be acted by the body, and make an ill impreſſion upon the body it ſelfe, yet have not the property and force over mans body to enſlave the ſame unto another, as fornication hath, whereby the fornicatour is made a member of the harlot by vertue of that firſt order of God, Duo erunt in unam carnem, which is not diſannulled by the abuſe of men.

V. 19. know ye not, &c.] See Chap. 3. 16.

V. 20. ye are bought with a price] See Chap. 7, 23. By Chriſt who hath redeemed you. The word price is added, not by a Pleonaſmus, but κατ' ἐξοχὴν, to intimate the excellencie and dignitie of the price wherewith we were bought, which was not ſilver or gold, but the precious bloud of Chriſt, as of a Lamb without blemiſh and without ſpot, 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19.

CHAP. VII.

Verſ. 1. NOw concerning the] Gr. But of the.

It is good] By the word good the Apoſtle underſtandeth not that which is honourable, vertuous, or holy, for the Apoſtle teſtifieth himſelf, Heb. 13. 4. that marriage is honourable among all, and the Scriptures generally avouch the ſame: but by good he underſtandeth leſſe troubleſome, or more agreeable to the preſent neceſſitie, verſ. 26. more convenient in regard of the calamities of the Church, which will be ſo much the eaſier born and overcome by the enjoying of our libertie, and more profitable alſo, by being not ſo diſtracted with theſe cares, nor troubled with theſe diſtractions, that by reaſon of ſinne accompanie the married eſtate, verſ. 28. 32.

touch a woman] That is, to abſtain from matrimonie, and al carnall knowledge; as the word is taken, Gen. 20. 6. therefore I ſuffered thee not to touch her.

V. 2. Nevertheleſſe, to avoid fornication] Gr. But by reaſon of fornications. In the Greek there is a kind of Ellipſis, which is well ſupplied by the Tranſlators with the words to avoid: for that is the true meaning of the Apoſtle; though word for word he ſaith by reaſon of fornications, that is, by reaſon of the proneneſſe of mans nature to fornication, or by reaſon of the frequent committing thereof, eſpecially among the Corinthians as before was noted. And here alſo he taketh fornication largely for all manner of impuritie forbidden by the law of God, and he preſcribeth as an antidote againſt the poyſon of all kind of impure luſt, the lawfull and holie uſe of matrimonie.

V. 3. due benevolence] By this manner of ſpeech he implieth not onely in a modeſt phraſe, conjugale debitum, to which the verſe following hath reference: but as the Greek Scholiaſt well expoundeth it, mutuall love and loyaltie; and that ſincere and ardent affection which ought to be between husband and wife.

V. 5. Defraud] Or, Deprive.

give your ſelves to faſting] Or, be free for faſting.

come together] Gr. Tec. be together.

V. 6. of] Gr. by.

V. 7. I would that all men were even as I my ſelf] The Apoſtle doth not ſimply wiſh that all men and women led a ſingle life; for ſo the Church of God could not be propagated, nor the divine benediction upon the married fulfilled: but that all had the gift of continencie, and were as free from worldly cares, and fleſhly intanglings as he. And this gift of continencie may ſtand with holy matrimonie; as we read of Malcus and many other in the Eccleſiaſticall ſtorie, who though they were married, yet having the gift of continencie fulfilled the Apoſtles precepts, verſ. 29. 32. having wives as if they had them not, and caring for the things of the Lord.

V. 8. unmarried and widows] He giveth the ſelf-ſame admonition touching the ſecond marriage, to wit, that a ſingle life is to be allowed, but for ſuch only that have the gift of continencie, otherwiſe they ought to marry again, that their conſcience might be at peace.

V. 9. better to marry then to burn] Some interpret this burning, to be burning in hell fire for their incontinencie; and no queſtion but the words of the Apoſtle are true in that ſenſe; but becauſe he addeth not either hell-fire or eternall, nor doth any circumſtance of the Text look that way; the naturall conſtruction ſeemeth to be this: It is better to marry, then by forcing our ſelves to live ſingle, having not the gift of continencie, ſo to burn with luſt, that either the will yeeldeth to the temptation, or elſe we cannot call upon God with a good conſcience. He is not ſaid to burne who onelie feeleth the heat of fire, for ſo the moſt continent man might be ſaid to burn: but only he that is ſinged and ſcorched thereby, he that is ſo aſſaulted with the temptation of luſt, that he is ſome way wounded, and hurt in conſcience thereby.

V. 10. not I, but the Lord] In theſe words, the Apoſtle meaneth not, that the Lords precepts, and his were contrary, for verſ. the laſt, he ſaith, I think alſo that I have the Spirit of God, & whatſoever Saint Paul wrote in this or any other of his Epiſtles was by divine inſpiration; but his meaning is, that he ſpake not this by peculiar Revelation, as ſome other things afterwards, but that he had an expreſſe command of our Lord for it in Scripture, namely, Matth. 5. 32. & Matth. 19. 9.

Let not the wife depart from her husband] Gr. that the wife be not ſevered from. See Mat. 5. 32. & 19. 9. Mark 10. 11. Luk. 16. 18.

V. 11. depart] Gr. be ſevered.

V. 14. ſanctified by the wife] Some expound it ſanctified, that is, ſome way prepared and diſpoſed to embrace our holy faith by his converſation with his Chriſtian wife: So Oecumenius; [illegible], or ſome way initiated in the faith and feare of God. So Tertul. l. 2. ad uxorem, ſanctificatur conjux infidelis acquieſcens habitare cum conjuge fideli, quia candidatus eſt timoris ſancti ſcilicet & caſti. And, S. Jerome l. 1. cont. Jovin. c. 5. candidatus eſt fidei. Or elſe the meaning is, that in regard the faithfull are heires of the Covenant of God (Gen. 17. 7. & Acts 2. 39.) together with their children, this Covenant the unbelieving partly cannot undo by his unbelief: Foraſmuch, as the grace of God in ſanctifying ſuch a marriage, is more powerfull then the unbelief of the other party to profane it: So that the Apoſtles words import, not that an unbelieving husband is ſimply ſanctified, or made a holy man by his wife being a Chriſtian, or an unbelieving wife made a holy woman by her husband being a good Chriſtian, but that he is ſanctified to her, if ſhe be a Chriſtian, and ſhe is ſanctified to him, if he be a Chriſtian. For although the unbelieving partie be unclean before God: yet is the matrimoniall conjunction holy by the meanes of faith and prayer, Titus 1. 15. and hath the approbation and bleſſing of God no other wayes, then if both parties were holy. Thus he anſwereth them that thought themſelves polluted by being married to unbelievers before their converſion, and intended therefore to be divorced for that ſcruple ſake.

but now are they holy] If the marriage were not in ſome degree ſanctified, the children which were born in ſuch wedlock would not be from their birth compriſed within the Covenant of God, made with the fathers and their children, Gen. 17. 7. or endued with the Spirit of ſanctification; neither would the Church hold them capable of Baptiſme, untill grown up to age, that they might be received into the Church for their own faiths ſake: but now they are holy, that is, compriſed in the outward covenant of God, and have acceſſe and right to the ſignes and ſeales of his grace, as well as any of thoſe that were born of both believing parents. Holy then, that is, ſanctified to God in Baptiſme, made members of the Church, and partakers of the grace of regeneration according to their meaſure and condition.

V. 15. depart] Or, be ſevered.

depart] Or, be ſevered.

to peace] Gr. in peace. Leſt any man upon pretence of this libertie, ſhould give an occaſion to the unfaithfull to depart, he giveth to underſtand that marriage contracted with an Infidel, ought peaceably to be kept, that if it be poſſible the Infidel may be wonne to the faith.

V. 16. ſave thy husband] That is, be a means to convert him to the Chriſtian faith, by which we are juſtified and ſaved.

V. 17. diſtributed to every man] Taking occaſion by that which he ſaid of the bondage and libertie of matrimony, he digreſſeth to a generall doctrine concerning the outward ſtate and condition of mans life, as circumciſion and uncircumciſion, ſervitude and liberty, warning every man generally, to live with a contented minde in the Lord, what ſtate or condition ſoever he be in, becauſe the kingdome of God conſiſteth not in theſe outward things.

V. 18. let him not become uncircumciſed] Some who had been circumciſed, found a meanes by the help of Chirurgians to recover again their foreskin: Of theſe Joſephus writeth, l. 12. Antiq. c. 6. adjunxerunt ſibi præputia ut nudi quoq; non eſſent Græcis diſſimiles; The manner Epiphanius declareth. Ἀπὸ περιτμῆς ἀκρόβυστοι, γίνονται τέχνῃ τινὶ ἰατρικῇ διὰ τοῦ καλουμένου σπαθιστῆρος τῆς μελῶν ὑπὸ δερματίδα ἀποσπασθέντες ῥαφέντες τε καὶ κολλητικοῖς περιοδευθέντες, ἀκροβυστίαν αὖθις αὐτὴν ἀποτελοῦντι. See alſo Celſus l. 7. c. 25. Such practiſes Saint Paul here forbiddeth.

V. 21. care not for it] As though this calling were too unworthy a calling for a Chriſtian. For no calling, how mean ſoever, debarreth a man from being Chriſts freeman, and the ſonne of God by adoption and grace; whoſoever is redeemed from the thraldome of Satan, and ſervitude of Sinne, whether he be in reſpect of his outward condition in bondage, or at his liberty, is Chriſts freeman.

V. 22. free-man] Gr. made free.

V. 23. Ye are bought with a price] See Chap. 6. 2. That is, dearly bought by a price of ineſtimable value, 1 Pet. 1. 18, 19.

be not ye the ſervants of men] If ye be at liberty, do not of your own accord make your ſelves ſervants, but conſecrate your ſelves entirely body and ſoul to the ſervice of Chriſt: or if ye be ſervants to men, that is, in a ſtate of ſervitude, remember ſtill that above and before all, ye are the ſervants of Chriſt, and therefore ſee ye do nothing to the obedience of man, which is contrary to that which ye owe to Chriſt; and as touching your ſoul and conſcience, ſubject and enſlave your ſelves to no man living, depend abſolutely upon none but Chriſt and his Word, See Gal. 2. 4. and Col. 2. 16, 18.

V. 24. abide with God] Whatſoever his outward calling be, let him be ſure to hold his inward calling, and abide with God in the Church: or let him ſo ſincerely and uprightly walk in his calling, as one who is alwayes in the ſight of God, and doth all things before him, and endeavoureth to approve himſelf to him in all things.

V. 25. I give my judgement] All circumſtances conſidered, I counſell you. He enjoyneth ſingle life to none, but perſwadeth it to all, that have the gift of continencie, both from the condition of the preſent time, in which the faithfull could ſcarce have any ſetled place of aboade, wherein they might provide for their wives, children, and families; and from the freedome of a ſingle life in compariſon of the married eſtate, which draweth with it of neceſſitie more cares of this life, and diſtraction of minde from the immediate ſervice of God.

V. 26. for the preſent diſtreſſe] Or, for the preſent neceſſitie. Which the Saints are ſubject unto, who were then continually toſſed up and down ſo, that their eſtate may ſeem moſt unfit for marriage, were it not that the weakneſſe of the fleſh enforced them.

V. 28. Trouble in the fleſh] Gr. tribulation; or, affliction. By the fleſh he underſtandeth whatſoever belongeth to this preſent life, for marriage bringeth with it many diſcommodities; ſo that he bendeth more to a ſingle life, not becauſe it is a ſtate more agreeable to God then marriage is, but for thoſe cumberances and diſcommodities, which if it were poſſible, he would wiſh all men to be freed of, that they might give themſelves to God wholly.

V. 29. is ſhort] Gr, is contracted, or, ſhortened.

V. 31. And they that uſe this world] It is a horrible wickedneſſe, ſaith Saint Auſtine, uti fruendis, or frui utendis, to uſe thoſe things which we ought to enjoy, or to enjoy thoſe things which we ought onely to uſe; to uſe God and heavenly things which we ought to enjoy, and to enjoy the world and earthly things which we ought onely to uſe, and ſo uſe them, as if we uſed them not. Or, as others expound, not abuſing them by an inordinate uſe of the ſame, or by too much doting on them, and cleaving unto them.

for the faſhion of this world paſſeth away] He ſheweth how ill-beſeeming and unworthy a thing it is for a Chriſtian to ſet his heart on the things of this world, conſidering that they are vain and tranſitory; rather ſhewes and ſhadowes of things, then true things themſelves, Prov. 23. 5. As in a Pageant, Mask or Comedie, many perſons are brought up one after another on the Stage or Scene, but at laſt both they and the Scene alſo is taken away; ſo it is with this preſent world, one perſon ſucceedeth another, and one generation another, till not onely all they do die and fall away, but even the Stage of the world at laſt, wherein they all acted their parts, doth vaniſh away like a ſhadow, with all the glory thereof.

V. 33. careth for the things, &c.] They that are married have their minds diſtracted, and their wits withdrawn hither and thither about worldly affairs and buſineſſes; and therefore if any man have the gift of continency, it were more commodious for him to live ſingle. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh not ſimply, but comparatively; for they that are married may and do care for the things of the Lord, but ordinarily do it with more diſtraction, then they that have leſſe to do with the world, in regard of their ſingle life.

V. 35. I ſpeak for your own profit] His meaning is, that he will enforce none either to marry, or not to marry; but ſhew them onely what kind of life is moſt commodious, or at leaſt ordinarily leſſe cumberſome.

V. 36. behaveth himſelf uncomely] Or, carrieth himſelf undecently.

V. 37. having no neceſſity] He ſpeaketh not here of a mans reſolving to marry himſelf, or to live unmarried; but of parents or governours under whoſe guide and tuition virgins are; if ſuch an one findeth no neceſſity, either in reſpect of the maids deſire, or fear of worſe, if ſhe have not the gift of continency, or in reſpect of the condition of his family, but that he may keep her a virgin ſtill.

V. 39. The wife is bound, &c.] See Rom. 7. 2.

be dead] Gr. be fallen a ſleep, or, laid in the grave.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſ. 1. N*Ow as touching things*] Gr. But of things.

We know that we have all knowledge] Here he beginneth to treate of another kind of things indifferent; to wit, of things offered to idols, or the uſe of fleſh ſo offered and ſacrificed; and firſt of all he removeth thoſe things which the Corinthians pretended for their uſing things offered unto idols, without any reſpect, ſcruple, or doubt. Firſt, they affirmed that this difference of meats was onely for unskilfull men and ignorant in the doctrine of Chriſtian libertie; but as for them they knew well enough the benefit of Chriſt, who maketh all things to be clean to them that are clean. Be it ſo (ſaith Saint Paul) be it, that all (or at leaſt the greater part of us, for there were ſome, Verſ. 7. that wanted this knowledge) are ſufficiently inſtructed in the knowledge of Chriſt; I ſay, notwithſtanding that, we muſt not ſimply reſt in this knowledge; the reaſon is, that unleſſe our knowledge be tempered with charitie, it doth not onely not avail, but alſo it doth much hurt, becauſe it is the miſtreſſe of pride; nay, it doth not ſo much as deſerve the name of godly knowledge, if it be ſevered from the love of God, and conſequently from the love of our neighbour, 1 Cor. 13. 1.

Knowledge puffeth up] In thoſe who are deſtitute of charity, it miniſtreth occaſion of vanity and maketh them ſwell with pride; for this venome the Serpent inſtilled into it at the firſt temptation; and this qualitie of inflating the ſoul remaineth ſtill in it, if it be not corrected with charitie.

but charitie edifyeth] That is, applyeth our knowledge to the inſtruction of our neighbour, and to build him up in his and our moſt holy faith.

V. 2. He knoweth nothing] An opinion of knowledge without charitie, doth not only puffe up, and in that regard is to be diſeſteemed, but it is imperfect and knowledge falſly ſo called, 1 Tim. 6. 20. For he that wanteth charitie knoweth not all his dutie, nor to what end he ought to referre his knowledge, nor how to uſe it, and ſo upon the matter knoweth nothing, in ſuch ſort as a Chriſtian ought to know.

V. 3. the ſame is known of him] He that referreth his knowledge and other gifts to the glory of God, and the profit of his brethren, he is known of God, that is, approved of him, as the word is taken, Pſal. 1. 6. but he that hath knowledge without charitie, though in ſome ſort he know God, yet he ſhall never yet be known, that is, acknowledged of by him, but ſhall heare at the laſt day with the hypocrites and falſe Prophets, Matth. 7. 23. I never knew you, depart from me ye that work iniquity.

V. 4. concerning therefore the eating, &c.] Here is the application of his anſwer, to things offered unto Idols; I grant, ſaith he, that an Idol is indeed a vain imagination, and that there is but one God and Lord, and therefore that meat cannot be made holy or profane by the Idol: but it followeth not therefore that a man may without any reſpect to his weak brethren. uſe thoſe meats or any other.

an idol is nothing, &c.] Chap. 10. 19. Divers Popiſh Writers, to ſever their Image-worſhip from Idolatry, expound theſe words thus; an idol is nothing in the world, that is, nothing formally, or repreſentatively, becauſe though it be ſomething materially, that is, wood, gold, or ſilver, or the like: yet it is nothing formally, becauſe there is no ſuch deitie as it repreſenteth. Whereas on the other ſide, an image is the repreſentation of ſome thing which is truly exiſtent in nature, as of the three Perſons, Angels, and Saints departed. This diſtinction of theirs together with their gloſſe upon this Text are evidently falſe; for many of the Idols of the Heathen, as Baal, Diana, Dagon, as alſo the braſen Serpent, of which the Jews made an Idol, were images of things truly exiſtent in nature. For Baal was the image of the Sunne, Diana or Lucina of the Moon, Dagon of a Fiſh, the braſen Serpent of the fiery Serpents which really ſtung the Iſraelites, and God in the ſecond Commandement expreſſely forbiddeth the bowing down to, or worſhipping the likeneſſe of any thing that is in the heaven above, or in the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth. But the true meaning of the Apoſtle in this place is, οὐδὲν ἐςιν ἄξιον, the Idol is nothing, that is, of no worth, hath no vertue or power at all in it, to profane or hallow the meats offered unto it.

and that there is none other God but one] Gr. Tec. and that there is no God.

V. 5. whether in heaven or in earth] There are in heaven thoſe that are called gods, as the Angels, Sunne, Moon, and all the hoſt of heaven, and on earth alſo. as Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Apollo, and other men, and beaſts alſo, as Calves, Goats, Crocodiles, Cats, and others, which the Egyptians and other of the Heathens worſhipped for gods.

there be gods many, and lords many] Either the Apoſtle alludeth to the diverſe Idols of Baal, which were called by his name Baalim, that is Lords, as namely Baal Zebub, Baal Peor, &c. or to other Syrian deities, anſwerable to the number of their countries, or cities, for the Moabites worſhipped Chamos, the Amonites Molock, the Sydonians Aſteroth or Aſtarte, the Gezeans Marnan, the Tyrians Hercules, the Hemathites Aſimas, &c. See Druſius Preterit. l. 6.

V. 6. one God] The word one doth not here reſpect the perſons, but the nature, for the Father of whom all things are ſaid to be, and our Lord Jeſus Chriſt by whom, are not one perſon, but one God in nature.

and we in him] Or, for him, or, by him. Rom. 11. 36. Either in him, or by him, and then the meaning is, that, we ſubſiſt by his vertue, and power, according to that of the Apoſtle, Acts 17. 28. In him we live, move and have our being.

one Lord] As Lord is peculiarly attributed to Chriſt, it ſignifieth the Lord Redeemer: in which ſenſe the Apoſtle ſpeaketh elſewhere, Chriſt died and roſe again that he might be LORD of quick and dead: for in that we are his purchaſe, he is in ſpeciall our Lord.

by whom are all things] The prepoſition, By, doth not ſignifie the Inſtrumentall cauſe, but the principall. For the Father and Son work together, which are not ſo to be taken, that we make two cauſes, ſeeing they have both but one nature, though they be diſtinct perſons; but by the prepoſitions of and by, the Father of whom are all things, and the Lord Chriſt by whom are all things, the Apoſtle differenceth their order and manner of working.

V. 7. conſcience of the idol] By conſcience of the Idol, he meaneth the ſecret judgement, which they had within themſelves, whereby they thought all things unclean which were offered to the Idol, and therefore they could not uſe them with good conſcience; for this force hath conſcience, that if it be good, that is, rightly enformed, it maketh things indifferent good to us, but if evill, it maketh them evill.

V. 8. But meat commendeth not us to God] He preventeth an objection, why then ſhall we be deprived of our libertie? nay, ſaith the Apoſtle, you ſhall loſe no part of Chriſtianitie, though you abſtain for your brethrens ſake, as alſo if you receive thoſe meats it maketh you no whit the more holy or more acceptable to God, Rom. 14. 17. For our commendation before God, conſiſteth not in our meats, but to uſe our libertie with the offence of our brethren, is an abuſe of our libertie, and a ſinne againſt Chriſt, whom we wound through the ſides of our weak brethren.

are we the better] Or, have we the more.

are we the worſe] Or, have we the leſſe.

V. 9. libertie] Or, power.

V. 10. emboldened] Gr. edified.

V. 11. through thy knowledge ſhall the weak brother periſh] Thou wretched man who pleaſeſt thy ſelf with thy knowledge, which indeed is none; for if thou hadſt true knowledge, thou wouldſt not ſit down to meat in the Idols temple, whereby as much as in thee lyeth, thou deſtroyeſt thy brother burdening his weak conſcience, and by thy example enticing him to do evill, for whoſe ſalvation Chriſt himſelf dyed: and wilt not thou ſo much as abſtain from ſuch meat for thy weak brothers ſake, for whom thy Saviour vouchſafed to ſhed his bloud?

V. 12. ye ſinne againſt Chriſt] Becauſe your weak brethren whom ye offend are his members, & he accounteth the wrongs done unto them as done unto himſelf: or as Oecumenius expoundeth, you ſinne againſt Chriſt, becauſe as much as lyeth in you, you hinder his work for their ſalvation, deſtroying them whom he came to ſave.

Wound] Gr. ſmiting.

V. 13. if meat make my brother to offend] Gr. ſcandalize. Rom. 14. 21.

I will eat no fleſh] Here followeth the concluſion which Saint Paul inferreth and frameth in his own perſon, that he might not ſeem to exact that of others which he will not be firſt ſubject to himſelf; I had rather, ſaith he, abſtain for ever from all kind of fleſh, then put a ſtumbling block before, or give occaſion of ſinne to anie of my brethren; much leſſe would I refuſe at a certain time and place for my brothers ſake to abſtain from fleſh offered to Idols.

offend] Or, ſtumble.

CHAP. IX.

Verſ. 1. AM I not an Apoſtle] Before he proceed anie farther in his propoſed matter of things offered unto Idols, he ſheweth the cauſe of all this miſchief, to wit, that the Corinthians thought themſelves not bound to depart from anie jot of their libertie for any mans pleaſure: therefore he propoundeth himſelf for an example, and that in a matter in ſome degree neceſſarie. If, ſaith he, you alleadge for your ſelves that you are free, and therefore will uſe your libertie: am not I alſo free, ſeeing I am an Apoſtle? yet I for the benefit of others forbear the uſe of my Chriſtian libertie in things that more neerlie concern me, and may ſeem in ſome degree neceſſarie; and will not you foregoe yours in matters of leſſe moment and meerlie indifferent, rather then offend your weak bretheren?

have I not ſeen Jeſus Chriſt our Lord] Though S. Paul converſed not with Chriſt whileſt he lived upon earth, yet was he as well en eye-witneſſe of Chriſt as the reſt of the Apoſtles, for he ſaw him after the reſurrection, as we read, Act. 22. 18. and 1 Cor. 15. 8. yet will it not hence follow that Chriſt was at the ſame time at the right hand of his Father in heaven, and upon earth or near the earth where Paul ſaw him, as our adverſaries would inferre. For either Saint Paul ſaw Chriſt in a viſion, or if without a viſion with his corporall eyes as did S. Steven. Act. 7. 56. his eyes were ſtrengthened and elevated above nature to diſcern Chriſt ſo farre diſtant.

V. 2. be not] Gr. am not.

for the ſeale of mine apoſtleſhip] Your converſion by my miniſterie is as it were a ſeal to confirm the truth of my Apoſtolicall miſſion; whatſoever belongeth to an Apoſtle I have exhibited amongſt you both by my powerfull miniſterie and the ſigns and wonders which God hath wrought by me.

V. 3. anſwer] Gr. apologie.

V. 5. to lead about a ſiſter a wife] Or, woman. May not I carry about with me in my peregrinations a Chriſtian ſiſter being my wife, and put the Churches to the Charge of me and my family, ſith I am employed by them and for them? Or thus, might not I have a Deaconiſſe, a Chriſtian ſiſter allowed by the Church to attend on me, as other of the Apoſtles have had? Clemens Alexandrinus Strom. lib. 3. is for this laſt interpretation; non ut uxores, inquit, ſed ut ſorores circumducebant mulieres, and Zacharias Chryſopolitanus out of Beda addeth that it was the cuſtome of the Jews, that the richer ſort of the Chriſtian women converted, contributed to the maintenance of their Teachers, and followed them, as ſome followed Chriſt, and miniſtered to him of their ſubſtance, Luk. 8. 3. hic tamen quia ſcandalum facere poterat, in nationibus Paulus abjeciſſe ſe memorat. yet becauſe the Apoſtle conceived this might give ſome kind of ſcandall to the Gentiles, or at leaſt ſeem burdenſome unto them, he accepted not of this their benevolence, though otherwiſe he might.

V. 6. have not we power to forbear working] That is, may the other Apoſtles eat and drink upon the expence of the Church, and keep their wives alſo and family by ſome ſtipend or gift offered unto them by their children whom they beget in the Goſpell, and muſt I onely and Barnabas live but by the works of our hands?

V. 7. Who

V. 7. Who goeth a warfare] That he may not ſeem to reprove the Apoſtles who were maintained by the Church, hee ſheweth that it was juſt and lawfull for them to live as they did of the Churches allowance, by an argument of compariſon, ſeeing ſouldiers live by their wages, and husbandmen by the fruit of their labours, and ſhepheards of that which cometh of the flock.

V. 8. Say I theſe things as a man] Gr. according to man. Have I no better ground then the common cuſtome of men? Doth not God in Scripture warrant what I ſay?

V. 9. thou ſhalt not muzzle, &c.] See Deut. 25. 4.

Doth God take care for oxen] It is certain that the care and providence of God extendeth to the beaſts of the field, Pſal. 147. 9. Pſal. 36.6. Jon. 4.11. and to the fowl of heaven, for he feedeth the young Ravens that call upon him, and a Sparrow is not ſold in the market, nor falleth to the ground without him, Mat. 10.29. The Apoſtles meaning therefore is not ſimply God hath no regard of Oxen, or any brute beaſt: for as the Pſalmiſt teacheth, He preſerveth both man and beaſt; but the ſenſe is, Gods end and drift in making that law was not to provide for Oxen, but he had a farther intention therein: thus Manahim Riminenſis, a learned Jew, upon thoſe words of the law, Thou ſhalt not take their damme with their young, ſaith, it was not the intention of the Law-giver to ſpare ſheep; but to teach men mercy and compaſſion; quod de ovibus præcepit, id propter homines fecit: ſo may we ſay here, and the Apoſtle ſaith as much in effect, quod de bobus præcepit, id propter homines fecit.

V. 11. if we have ſown, &c.] See Rom. 15.27.

V. 13. Do ye not know, &c.] See Num. 18. 20. Deut. 10. 9. and 18.1.

live] Or, feed.

are partakers with the altar] In dividing the ſacrifice, and taking part of it themſelves for their neceſſarie ſuſtenance.

V. 14. that they which preach, &c.] See Gal. 6.6. 1 Tim. 5. 17.

V: 15. Neither have I written theſe things] He taketh away occaſion of ſuſpition that it might not be thought he wrote this as though he challenged his wages that was not paid him; Nay, ſaith he, I had rather die then abuſe my right and libertie, that the falſe Apoſtles might take any advantage thereby: Or rather then not continue my purpoſe to preach the Goſpel freelie: for I am bound to preach the Goſpel, ſeeing that the Lord hath enjoyned me this office; & if I had rather that the Goſpel ſhould be evill ſpoken of, then I ſhould not require my ſtipend, then would it appear that I took theſe pains not ſo much for the Goſpels ſake as mine own gain and advantage.

better for me to dye] Gr. good for me rather to die.

V. 16. though I preach] Gr. If I preach.

V. 22. I am made all things to all men] Gr. have been made. In matters that are indifferent, which may be done, or not done with a good conſcience, I have changed my ſelf into all faſhions, to comport with all, that I might win ſome at leaſt of all ſorts. Saint Auguſtine in his book de Mendac. cont. Conſent. 12. & cp. 19. very well illuſtrateth this Text: the Apoſtle ſaith, I am become all unto all men, non mentientis aſtu, ſed compatientis affectu, not by the deceit of diſſimulation, but by the affection of compaſſion; for a man becomes as he to whoſe infirmitie he condeſcends when he ſupports and relieves him with ſuch mercy as himſelf would deſire if he were in the ſame caſe: he doth therefore as he, non quia fallit illum, ſed qui ſe cogitat illum.

V. 25. And] Gr. But.

every man that ſtriveth for the maſterie.] He bringeth in another cauſe of the miſchief above mentioned, to wit, that they were given to gluttonie; for there were ſolemn banquets of ſacrifices, and the riot of the Prieſt was exceeding great in them: therefore it was hard for them which were accuſtomed to riotouſneſſe, eſpeciallie when they pretended the libertie of the Goſpel, to be reſtrained from thoſe banquets. For this cauſe the Apoſtle calleth them by an apt ſimilitude, and alſo by his own example to ſobrietie and mortification of the fleſh, ſhewing that they could not be fit to run, or wreſtle, as the games of Iſthmos were, which pampered up their bodies.

temperate in all things] He uſeth a moſt exquiſite diet. The Greek word alſo will bear this conſtruction; he patiently endureth all things, to wit, pains and blows; and ſhall not we endure much more, and uſe all kind of abſtinence, that we may obtain the high prize of our calling, which is an incorruptible crown of glorie?

V. 26. not as uncertainly] Not as at an uncertain goale or mark; or the Greek ἀδήλως, may be thus rendred, I ſo runne, not as a man who ſenſiblie gets no ground, or cannot be perceived to out-ſtrip him with whom he runneth in the race.

ſo fight I, not as one that beateth the aire] I make not a flouriſh only, like a Fencer, but I fight in earneſt: or, I fight not as one who hath no enemy to fight withall; for I have an enemy which I labour to ſubdue, to wit, the old man which ſtriveth againſt the Spirit.

V. 27. But I keep under my body] By mortifying of my carnall luſts and effections, and by all other exerciſes of pietie, I ſubdue my fleſh to the obedience and diſcipline of the Spirit of God, as alſo to patience and conſtancie in all afflictions, and to ſuch nimbleneſſe and readineſſe as is requiſite to this ſpirituall combate.

I my ſelf ſhould be a caſt-away] Gr. reproveable. or, unapproved. The word ſignifieth not a reprobate, and if he were uncertain of his election, or of obtaining the prize; for the contrarie appeares, Rom. 8. 38. and 2 Tim. 4. 7, 8. but reproveable or faultie. ἀδόκιμος, is a metaphor either taken from thoſe who trie metals, and caſt away that which is droſſie: or he goeth on in his former metaphor of thoſe who proved maſteries, and hath regard to thoſe times, where there were certain Colledges or Academies like our Artillerie Gardens for exerciſe of Armes, where the novices that ſubmitted not themſelves to the rigour of their diſcipline, or were found tardie in their trials, or of purſie or unweildie bodies, were caſheered again by their Maſters: therefore here the word ἀδόκιμος, ſignifieth not to be caſt for ever out of Gods favour, but to be rejected either as baſe and refuſe ore or droſſe: or to be caſt out of their ſociety, and company who wreſtled or ran for the prize.

CHAP. X.

Verſ. 1. Moreover] Gr. Tec. For.

Moreover brethren, &c. He ſetteth out that which before he had ſaid, laying before them an example of the horrible judgement of God againſt them which had in effect the ſelf-ſame pledges of the ſame adoption and ſalvation that we have, and yet notwithſtanding when they gave themſelves to Idol feaſts periſhed in the wilderneſſe, being manifoldly and fearfully puniſhed. Now beſides that theſe things are fitly ſpoken againſt them who frequented Idol feaſts, the ſame alſo ſeem to be urged to this end and purpoſe, becauſe many men are thus minded that thoſe things are not of ſo great weight that God will be angry with them if they uſe them ſo, that they frequent Chriſtian Aſſemblies, and be baptized, and receive the Communion, and confeſſe Chriſt.

under the cloud] See Exod. 13. 21. Numb. 9.18.

paſſed through the Sea] Exod. 14. 22.

V. 2. And were all baptized unto Moſes] Or, into. The meaning is, as the deliverance out of Egypt was a figure of the redemption by Chriſt; and the wandring in the wilderneſſe repreſented the life of the faithfull in this world, and the Land of Canaan was a ſhadow of the Kingdome of heaven: ſo the paſſage through the Red Sea was a holy figure anſwering Baptiſme, and the Manna togeher with the water ſpringing out of the Rock, the bleſſed Supper; (whence it appeareth that the Fathers did enjoy the ſame ſpirituall benefit which the Chriſtian Church doth) and yet notwithſtanding this many of them were puniſhed, rooted out, and rejected of God for their ſinnes; ſo likewiſe Chriſtians ought to ſtand in fear of the like judgements in caſe they profane their profeſſion with the like tranſgreſſions. See Heb. 4. 2. 1 Pet. 3. 21. For the phraſe baptized unto Moſes, though the Jews were not dipt in the Red Sea, nor for ought we read waſhed with the rain water of that cloud: yet becauſe the water in the cloud and the Sea reſembled the element in our baptiſme; and it is not unlike that they were ſprinkled with the one and the other; but eſpecially becauſe they were that unto them in type, which baptiſme is unto us in truth, the Apoſtle ſaith by an Analogie they were baptized unto Moſes. The prepoſition in the Originall may carry a double ſenſe; either all were baptized even unto Moſes, Moſes himſelf being not accepted. Or, all were baptized in Moſes, becauſe Moſes was a typicall mediatour, and they were typically baptized in him: or they were baptized in Moſes, (that is) in confirmation of the promiſes of grace preached and adminiſtered by Moſes, and under that forme ordained of God by him, as we read, Act. 19. 3. They were baptized in, or unto Johns Baptiſme, that is, in the doctrine of John which was confirmed by his baptiſme.

V. 3. did eat the ſame ſpirituall meat] See Exod. 16. 15. Though the Pronoune αὐτὸ, be not in the addition by Tecla, yet it appeareth by all other ancient Copies and the Commentaries of Auguſtine and Chryſoſtome upon this Text, that it ought to be added, and that our reading is the true, all did eat the ſame ſpirituall meat, the ſame not only with themſelves, but with us Chriſtians alſo, (for the Apoſtles argument here enforceth that ſenſe) though not in the outward ſigns or ſymbols, yet in the things ſignified by them. The Manna indeed and the Water which iſſued out of the Rock, were in reſpect of their ſubſtance corporall meats and drinks, yet in regard of their ſacramentall and ſpirituall ſignification the Apoſtle calleth them ſpirituall meat and drink. For ſo they were to the believers, who by faith in the eating and drinking of them laid hold upon Chriſts body and bloud the true ſpirituall food of our ſoules.

V. 4. ſpirituall drink] See Exod. 17. 6. Num. 20. 11.

For they drank of that ſpirituall Rock] That is, the water which iſſued out of the Rock, Exod. 7. 6. a moſt lively image of Chriſt, who being ſmitten of his Father (as the Rock was by Moſes) at his death and ſuffering, ſtreamed forth the true water of life and ſpirituall drink to all his Church, Joh. 4. 14. Iſa. 55. 1.

that followed them] Or, went with them. By the Rock he meaneth by a figure the waters which followed from thence in ſeverall ſtreams and ſeverall rivolets, running in the wilderneſſe along the way of the peoples paſſage.

and that Rock was Chriſt] Not indeed by any ſubſtantiall and materiall being, but onely figurative and ſacramentall, which by vertue of the inſtitution and covenant of God hath joyned with it the reall, but ſpirituall enjoying of Chriſt. Some will have the meaning to be not the Rock was Chriſt, that is, a type of Chriſt, as the Bread and Wine in the Lords Supper are called the Body and Blood of Chriſt, becauſe they are a ſign and ſeal thereof, but Chriſt was the Rock that followed them: but this interpretation is not onely againſt the Grammaticall conſtruction of the words, but repugnant alſo to the truth of the ſtory, ſeeing that all the Iſraelites drank not out of Chriſt, becauſe many of them believed not, and God had no pleaſure at all in them, verſ. 5. and Heb. 4. 2.

V. 5. But with many of] Gr. in many of.

were overthrown, &c] See Num. 26. 65.

V. 6. our examples] Gr. our figures, or, our types. Some reade figures, which ſignified our Sacrament, for circumciſion was to the Jews a ſeal of righteouſneſſe, and a type of Baptiſme to us, and ſo the Lamb of the other Sacrament; but the words following require rather that we tranſlate it, examples; for the meaning of the Apoſtle is, That God ſet the puniſhment of thoſe Iſraelites, as a glaſſe or image before us, that we in them might ſee what we were to look for, if we ſinne as they did.

as they alſo luſted] See Num. 11. 4. Pſal. 106. 14.

V. 7. The people ſat down to eat and drink, &c.] See Exod. 32. 6.

V. 8. fell in one day three and twenty thouſand] See Num. 25. 9 That is, about three and twenty thouſand, for there were three and twenty thouſand ſlain, and many others executed: See notes on Numb. 25. 4. Now although there being 24 thouſand ſlain, the Apoſtle might truly ſay, three and twenty thouſand, becauſe the leſſer number is included in the greater; yet it may be that in the firſt Copy τέσσαρες, was written τ̃ς, by an abbreviation, which the tranſcriber miſtook for τρεῖς, ſignifying three.

V. 9. Neither let us tempt Chriſt] Gr. Tec. tempt God. To tempt Chriſt, is to provoke him to a combat, as it were, which thoſe men do who abuſe the knowledge that he hath given them, and make it to ſerve for a cloak for their luſts and wickedneſſe. In the Edition of Tecla it is, tempted God, which is more eaſily to be underſtood, becauſe Chriſt was not then come in the fleſh; yet our reading may ſtand, becauſe they tempted in the fleſh; yet our reading may ſtand, becauſe they tempted the Sonne of God, who in the fulneſſe of time took our nature upon him, and was called Chriſt; as the Rock is ſaid to be Chriſt; and ſo Chriſt himſelf ſpeaketh, Joh. 8. 58. Before Abraham was I am.

ends of the world are come] This our age is called the end, becauſe it is the ſhutting up of all ages, it is as it were the bottom and lees, the remnant and refuge of time.

V. 13. temptation] By temptation he meaneth affliction, as the word is taken, Jam. 1. 2. 1 Pet. 1. 6. Ye rejoyce greatly, though now for a ſeaſon, if need be, you be in heavineſſe through manifold temptations, that the triall of your faith being much more precious then of gold tried with fire, might be found unto praiſe and honour.

common to man] Or, incident to man. That is, ſuch as uſually befalleth men, even Gods deareſt children, or ſuch as may be born by man in this life eſpecially, aſſiſted by Gods grace, which is alwayes ſufficient for Gods children. It may ſignifie alſo moderate afflictions, as 2 Sam. 7. 17. I will chaſten him with the rod of men, that is, moderately and with compaſſion; for it followeth, verſ. 15. but my mercy ſhall not depart away from him.

alſo make a way to eſcape] Or, give an iſſue.

V. 16. The cup of bleſſing which we bleſſe] The word εὐλογοῦμεν, ſignifieth both to bleſſe & give thanks, yet in this place it muſt rather be rendred bleſſe then give thanks, ſeeing it cannot be ſaid, that we give thanks to the cup, but we may be ſaid to bleſſe the cup when we conſecrate it in the Church, to ſerve for the ſacramentall uſe of the Lords Supper, by ſolemn prayer and thankſgiving; this kinde of ſeparating it from the common uſe, and dedicating it to a holy, may be termed the bleſſing it, as the word bleſſing is uſed, Gen. 2. 3 Exod 20. 11. where it is ſaid, that God bleſſed and hallowed the ſeventh day, by ſeparating it from other common dayes, and appointing it for a peculiar uſe.

communion of the blood of Chriſt] The Sacrament thereof accompanied with the effect and ſpirituall reality, by the operation of the holy Ghoſt: or a ſigne and pledge of the ſpirituall communion which we have together, who by faith participate the body and blood of Chriſt, as it is ſaid, that the Iſraelites communicated with the Altar, and thoſe that did eat things ſacrificed to devils, are ſaid to communicate with devils.

V. 18. after the fleſh] Or, according to the fleſh.

V. 19. that the idol is any thing] The Apoſtle may ſeem to allude to 1 Sam. 12. 21. where the idol is called Thohu, that is, nothing; whereupon the words of Jonathas are, worſhip not idols, quia nihil ſunt, they are nothing, they can do you no good, or, are worth nothing. The meaning of the Apoſtle is, as I ſhewed before, that the idol hath no force in it to ſanctifie or profane the meate, neither is that which is ſacrificed to idols any thing, that is, the offering the meat to the idol, doth nothing to the meat it ſelf, or maketh it unclean or unholy.

V. 20. the things which the Gentiles ſacrifice, &c.] See Deut. 32. 17. Pſal. 106. 37.

fellowſhip with devils] Have any thing to do with them, or enter into that ſociety which is begun in their name.

V. 21. cup of devils] The heathen and profane people were wont to ſhut up and make an end of their feaſts which they kept to the honour of their gods, in offering meat-offerings in diſhes, and drink-offerings in cups: theſe cups the Apoſtle cals the cups of devils.

ye cannot be partakers] That is, ye may not be partakers, for poſſumus quod jure poſſumus; or, ye cannot be partakers of both, but that you will provokee the wrath of God againſt you; as it followeth in the next verſe.

V. 23. for me] Gr. to me.

are not expedient] Gr. profit me.

for me] Gr. to me.

V. 25. Whatſoever is ſold in the ſhambles] Here the Apoſtle permitteth, that all things that are brought to the Market, may ſerve us for food, notwithſtanding that it happened oftentimes that ſome of the ſame meat which had been offered unto idols, was brought to Market afterwards, when namely it had not been eaten up in their Idoll feaſts, but carried away whole; now being brought to Market or Shambles again, the Idol was no more honoured by it, but it was taken for common meat.

V. 26. For the earth is the Lords, and the fulneſſe thereof] See Deut. 10. 14. Pſal. 24. 1.

V. 29. for why is my liberty judged] If I may through Gods benefit eat this or that meat, why ſhould I through my fault cauſe that benefit of God to turn to my blame? Or knowing by the Word of God that it is left free to me to eat or not eat, why ſhould I ſubject the judgement of my own conſcience to that of another and weaker one, ſo far as to ſuffer my ſelf to be traduced? it ſufficeth for me, that for their ſakes I do refrain feeding on ſuch and ſuch viands at this time, and yet conſerve the liberty in my minde at other times, and elſewhere to eat of all with thankſgiving.

V. 30. grace] Or, thankeſgiving.

V. 31. Whether therefore ye eat or drink, &c.] See Col. 3. 17.

V. 32. Give none offence, neither to the Jews, nor Gentiles] Gr. Be ye un-offenſive to Jews and Gentiles.

Give none offence, &c.] See 2 Corinth. 6. 3. Under theſe three ſorts he comprehends all men which were then either Jews, or Paynims, or Chriſtians, of whom we muſt beware, not to ſcandalize any by the uſe of our liberty, eſpecially if they be ſuch of whom we may conceive hope, that they may be won by us.

Gentiles] Gr. Greeks.

CHAP. XI.

Verſ. 1. FOllowers] Or, Imitatours.

V. 2. Now I praiſe you] Going about to reprehend certain diſorders in the Church of Corinth, he beginneth notwithſtanding with a general praiſe of them; which is the method of the Spirit in the Epiſtles ſent to the ſeven Churches of Aſia, Apoc. 2. 1, 9, 13, 19. & 3. 1, 8, 15. and Lactantius preſcribes it as a rule to all diſcreet Paſtours, that they ſhould after the manner of Phyſitians anoint the brim of the cup with honey, in which they miniſter to the Patient a bitter potion: circumlinatur poculum, cœleſti ſapientia melle, &c.

and keep the ordinances] By the word παραδόσεις in the Originall, which ſignifieth traditions, he meaneth not any unwritten verities concerning matters of faith, ſuch as our Romiſh adverſaries would force upon the Text; but particular Ordinances of comelineſſe, and good order, which belong to Eccleſiaſticall policie, which afterwards were called Canons.

V. 3. the head of every man is Chriſt] See Epheſ. 5. 23. He ſetteth down God in Chriſt our Mediatour, for the end and mark, not onely of doctrine, but alſo of Eccleſiaſticall comelineſſe: thus applying it to the queſtion propoſed touching the comely apparell both of men and women in publike aſſemblies, he declareth, that the woman is a degree beneath the man by the Ordinance of God, and that the man is ſo ſubject to Chriſt, that the glory of God ought to appeare in him, for the preheminence of the ſexe. The man is the womans head, that is, hath a preheminence above her, as the head hath above the members, Chriſt is the head of the man, in as much as he is the firſt begotten among many brethren; God is Chriſts head, in that Chriſt is our Mediatour.

V. 5. Every woman that prayeth or propheſieth] Either the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of ſuch women as had an extraordinary gift of prayer and propheſie, ſuch as were Anna, Luk. 2. 38. and Mary the Mother of the Lord, Luk. 1. 46. and the four daughters of Philip, Acts 21. 9. or elſe he meaneth ſuch women who joyned with the Aſſemblies in their praying and propheſying, non oris clarâ voce, ſed mentis tacitâ cogitatione, not with open and lowd ſpeech, for that the Apoſtle forbids, that any woman ſhould ſpeak in the Church, but with the intention of the minde and thoughts.

V. 7. he is the image and glory of God] See Gen. 1. 26. Here man is ſaid to be the image and glory of God in regard of the rule which God gave him over the creatures. This image ſhineth moſt brightly in the man, who is immediatly the image of God; but more obſcurely in the woman, who is the image of the man. If it be objected, that the woman as well as the man was created according to Gods image, Gen. 1. 27. and conſequently that ſhe as well as he is the image and glory of God; it may be anſwered, that a woman may be conſidered, either according to her ſpecificall nature in which ſhe agreeth with man, and in that regard ſhe was created according to the image of God in holineſſe and righteouſnes; or according unto her ſex as ſhe was Adams wife, and ſubject to him, and in that regard ſhe beareth not the Image of God; for ſubjection is not the Image of God, but rule.

V. 8. For the man is not of the woman] The Apoſtle hath refegence to the originall and creation of man at the firſt, which was of the earth, not of the woman; whereas the woman was made of man, to wit of his rib. Here then the man hath ſome preheminence above the woman, that though now as women are of men, ſo men alſo of women in the common courſe of generation; yet originally and at the firſt, man was not of the woman, but the woman of the man.

V. 9. Neither was the man created for the woman] See Gen. 2. 23. The man was not created to this end that he ſhould ſerve the woman as his ſuperiour, but on the contrary, the woman to ſerve, obey, and to be a helper to the man, Gen. 2. 18. Howbeit in ſome ſenſe, the man may be ſaid to be created for the woman, to protect her from wrong, and inſtruct her, and direct her in the way to eternall ſalvation, 1 Cor. 14. 35.

V. 10 power on her head] That is, a veil or covering, in token of her husbands power and authority over her; or a kinde of Warrant or Paſſe to go abroad with credit and honeſty: for there was no neceſſity of veiling or covering their head within doors, but if they went abroad without their veil, they were counted light and wanderers, like unto run-away ſervants, or ſouldiers that have no Paſſe to ſhew from their Maſters or Captains. In which regard Rebecca, Gen. 24. 65. when ſhe lighted off her Camell, and her ſervant told her that it was his Maſter Iſaac that was walking in the field to meet her, ſhe took a Veil and covered her ſelf; for luſt, as Clemens Alexandrinus teacheth, Pædag. l. 3. δι᾽ ὀφθαλμῶν ὑποβολίζεται, caſteth darts as it were from the eys, and as Tertullian elegantly expreſſeth it, virgins flie to their Veil, as the Buckler of their chaſtitie; which though it ſeem but a weak fence, yet it is ſtrong enough to bear off the fiery darts of unchaſte glances from youth; Virginitas ſemper timida oculos fugit, confugit ad velamen capitis, quaſi ad galeam contra ictus tentationum, contra jacula ſcandalorum, contra ſuſpiciones & ſuſurros: Tertul. de veland. virgin.

Becauſe of the Angels] Some by the Angels underſtand the Paſtours of the Congregations, who are termed Angels, Malachi 2, 7. and Revel. 1. 20. and that the Apoſtle draws his reaſon to enforce womens modeſt carriage from the reverend reſpect the woman ought to ſhew, eſpecially in the Church, to theſe Angels of the Churches. Others take Angels here in the proper ſenſe for the cœleſtiall ſpirits, which alwayes attend upon Chriſt her head, and are preſent in the Congregation of the faithfull, and are offended at all diſorders and uncomelineſſe which may be uſed there. The women therefore ſhould behave themſelves more modeſtly in the Church, out of a regard of theſe ſpirits, that they grieve them not. What though the men were well enough contented that women ſhould go uncovered in the Church, and the husbands out of indulgence allowed their wives this ſlight uſurping of the mark of preheminence belonging unto them; yet the Apoſtle anſwereth, that the Angels who are perpetuall Guardians of the Churches, and aſſiſt in the Congregations, are offended at it. Some will have this to be ſpoken by way of aggravation, that if women ſhould caſt off their Veil in the Church, and uſurp dominion there, turpitudinem ſuam Angelis conſpicuam facerent, they ſhould diſcover their ſhame and immodeſty, not only before men, but before Angels: with whom S. Chryſoſtom & Theophylact accord, εἰ τοὺς ἄνδρας καταφρονεῖς τοὺς ἀγγέλους αἰδέσθητι. Others conceive it to be ſpoken not by way of aggravation, but by way of exhortation drawn from the example of the Angels, who have a ſpeciall care to obſerve and reverence Chriſt their Head, and therefore as they in token of their ſubjection to their Head, with two of their wings covered their face, Eſa. 6. 2. ſo women in token of their ſubjection to their Heads, their Husbands, ſhould cover their heads and faces with a Veil. In this both Jews and Chriſtians agree, that the Angels are preſent at divine exerciſes in the Church, and are eye-witneſſes of our carriage there; for ſo we reade in Seder Tephilleth, Domine Deus noſter coronã dant tibi hoc eſt celebrant te Angeli, turba illa ſuperna, cum populo tuo Iſrael hîc infernè congregato, omneſq; ſimul ter tibi à prophetâ tuo dictũ ingeminant & inclamant, Sanctus, ſanctus, ſanctus.

V. 11. Nevertheleſſe, neither is the man without the woman] A digreſſion which the Apoſtle uſeth, leſt that which he ſpake of the ſuperiority of men, or lower degree of women, in conſideration of the politie of the Church, ſhould be ſo taken, as though there were no meaſure of this inequality, therefore he teacheth, that men have in ſuch ſort the preheminence that yet God made them not alone, but women alſo; and that woman was ſo made of man, that men alſo are born by the means of women, and they both have an equall ſhare in Chriſt, Tit. 3. 28. And this ought to put them in minde to obſerve the degree of each ſex in ſuch ſort, that mutual conjunction may be cheriſh'd.

V. 15. covering] Or, veil.

V. 16. if any man ſeem to be contentious, we have no ſuch cuſtome] Either the meaning is, We have no ſuch cuſtome for women to pray uncovered; or, we have no ſuch cuſtome for the Churches of God to contend about matters of this nature, but willingly and cheerfully to obey thoſe that have the overſight of us in the Lord.

V. 17. Now in this that I declare unto you, I praiſe you not] Gr. Tec. now this I declare unto you, not praiſing.

V. 18. that there be diviſions among] Or, ſchiſms. To celebrate the Lords Supper aright, it is requiſite that there be not only conſent of doctrine, but alſo of diſcipline and affections, that it be not profaned.

V. 19. there muſt be alſo hereſies] It is unavoidable by reaſon of Satans malice and mans corruption, as alſo by the juſt judgement and wiſeſt counſell of God, who draweth light out of darkneſſe; and according to the frequent predictions of the Spirit, Matth. 18. 7. Hereſie is a contention ariſing about doctrine, when ſome do obſtinately urge or receive any errour, fighting againſt the fundamentals of the ſaving doctrine, in ſo much that hereſie is farre worſe and more hurtfull then ſchiſm or diviſions; and herewithall the Apoſtle ſheweth the reaſon that made him believe there were diviſions among them, for that a worſe evill is found amongſt them, viz. hereſie, which the Apoſtle deſcribeth, and confuteth afterwards, 1 Cor. 15.

which are approved] That is, thoſe that in the trials of diviſions and hereſies remain conſtant to the unity of the Church, and to the ſyncere doctrine thereof, and thereby ſhew themſelves like pure and precious gold, which abideth in the triall of the fire.

may be made manifeſt] When the Church is at peace, without ſchiſmes or hereſies, then all that make publike profeſſion of religion, are held for ſound and upright; but when diviſions and hereſies ariſe, then it appeareth fully who cleave to the truth, and ſtand faſt to the unity of the Church. Thus St. Cyprian ſpeaketh, The Chaffe may be diſtinguiſhed from the Wheat, leves paleæ vento jactantur, they are but as Chaffe, who are blown away with the winde, the Wheat remains ſtill in the floor of the Church.

V. 20. into one place] Or, to the ſame end.

this is not to eat the Lords ſupper] Or, ye cannot eat. When you meet after ſuch a diſordered manner, as is expreſſed afterwards; excluding the poor from your company, and eating every one by himſelf, and not tarrying at all till others come; this is not to eat the Lords ſupper; that is, to celebrate it aright, as you ought. By the Lords Supper he meaneth not the Agapæ or Love-feaſts anciently uſed in the Church, but for abuſe afterwards taken away; but the celebration of the holy Euchariſt, the Banquet wherein we are fed with the body and blood of Chriſt, as S. Auſtine in his 118 Epiſtle, and S. Cyprian in his Tract de Cœnâ Domini rightly expound the Text. He calleth it a ſupper in relation to the time in which it was firſt inſtituted; to wit, at evening; or as the Apoſtle hath it, Verſ. 23. The ſame night that the Lord was betrayed; and he calleth it Dominica, or the Lords Supper, partly becauſe it is kept in memory of him, partly becauſe it was inſtituted by him.

V. 22. or deſpiſe ye the Church of God, and ſhame, &c.] Deſpiſe ye the poor, who are part of the Church of God, and ſhame you them, by excluding them out of your company for their poverties ſake? ſith God admits them into his family, and bids them to his heavenly Banquet, you ought not to exclude them from your feaſts.

them that have not] Or, them that are poor.

V. 23. For I have received of the Lord] Becauſe thoſe abuſes are contrary to the Lords inſtitution, who ordained his holy Supper for a Sacrament of his body and blood, and for a bond of union, not for a bodily repaſt, much leſſe for an occaſion of ſtrife and debate, whereunto you apply it and turn it: therefore I cannot commend you, but muſt blame you for ſuch your carriage at your meetings. The only way to reform any abuſes in the Church, is to have recourſe to the word of God, and firſt Inſtitution. That which I received of the Lord, ſaith the Apoſtle. It may be demanded, when, and how the Apoſtle received it from the Lord, ſith he converſed not with Chriſt whileſt he lived upon earth, as the Apoſtles and Evangeliſts did, who received the Doctrin of the Sacrament from the Lords own mouth. We anſwer out of Saint Paul himſelf, Gal. 1. 2. That after Chriſts aſcenſion he received by ſpeciall Revelation, which the Lord Jeſus Chriſt vouchſafed to impart unto him, either when he was wrapt up into the third heaven, or when Chriſt appeared unto him at his firſt converſion; but whether then or at any other time Chriſt revealed this myſtery unto him, this is certain, that he received it immediately from Chriſt. For he expreſly affirms, that he preached not the Goſpel after men, nor received it of man, nor was taught by man, but by Jeſus Chriſt.

that which alſo I delivered unto you] As the words which the Father ſpake of the Sonne, This is my beloved Sonne in whom I am well pleaſed, are related not onely by the three Evangeliſts, Matthew, Mark, and Luke, but alſo by Saint Peter in his Epiſtle, 2 Pet. 1. 17. for the neceſſity of the doctrin and excellency of the myſtery contained in them: ſo for the like reaſon, it pleaſed God that the inſtitution of the Lords Supper ſhould not only be recorded by the three Evangeliſts above named, but alſo here moſt accurately and exactly delivered by the Apoſtle. For all Churches muſt take the true keeping of the Lords Supper out of the inſtitution of it. The parts whereof are theſe, touching the Paſtours, to ſhew forth the Lords death by preaching his word, to bleſſe the bread, and wine by calling upon the name of God, and together with prayers to declare the inſtitution thereof, and finally to deliver the bread broken to be eaten, and the cup received to be drunk with thankſgiving: and touching the communicants, that every one examine himſelf, that is to ſay, prove both his knowledge, and faith, and repentance; and laſtly, to take the bread at the Miniſters hand, and eat it, and to drink the wine, and to give God thanks.

V. 24. And when he had given thanks] See Matth. 26. 26. Mark 14. 22. Luk. 22. 19.

Broken for you] The word broken, noteth out unto us Chriſt his manner of death: for though his legs were not broken, as the theeves were, becauſe he was the Paſchal Lamb, of which no bone was to be broken; yet was his body very ſorely tormented, torn, and bruiſed, Iſa. 53. 5. 10.

in remembrance of me] Or, for a remembrance.

V. 25. This cup is the New Teſtament] As the bread is not the very body of Chriſt, but a Sacrament thereof: ſo neither is the cup the new Teſtament or covenant, but a ſigne and ſeal thereof: as the covenant of God is renewed with his elect, and ratified by his death, and paſſion, ſo it is alſo ſealed to every faithfull Chriſtian, by the cup of the Lord.

in my blood] By the cup is underſtood (as all grant) that which is contained in the cup, by an uſuall Synecdoche continentis pro contento, which muſt needs be wine and not blood. For the Apoſtle here ſaith, that the cup is the new Teſtament in Chriſts blood, that is, the wine contained in it, is a ſigne and ſeal of the new Teſtament confirmed by Chriſts blood which he ſhed upon the Croſſe, as the old Teſtament or Covenant was confirmed by the effuſion of the blood of beaſts ſacrificed ſprinkled upon the people, Exod. 24. 8.

V. 26. ye do ſhew the Lords death till he come] Or, ſhew ye, or declare. The death of the Lord muſt bee ſhewed or made known in the Lords Supper, both by the Miniſters of the word, who in the miniſtration thereof muſt inſtruct the people, that the bread broken, and the wine powred out, are the ſignes of the bitter death of Chriſt on the croſſe, and ſeals of the benefits thereby purchaſed to our ſelves; as alſo by the communicants, who ought to conſider in their hearts, to declare and to profeſſe with thankfulneſſe, that the Lord Jeſus died for them, to redeeme them from eternall death, and to make them bleſſed and happy for ever. Till he come to judge the quick and the dead. For even as the Sacraments of the Old Teſtament continued untill the firſt coming of Chriſt in the fleſh; ſo ſhall the Sacraments of the New Teſtament continue till his ſecond coming in glory.

V. 27. and drink this cup of the Lord, &c.] Gr. or drink. That is, otherwiſe then it is meet ſuch myſteries ſhould be handled. He receiveth unworthily, who receiveth without ſuch a diſpoſition of minde, and ſpeciall preparation which is requiſite for the partaking of ſo worthy a Sacrament: or they who receive it not with that reverence and devotion as they ought.

ſhall be guilty of the body and blood] For having violated Chriſts inſtitution, and by his irreverent behaviour having prophaned the remembrance of Chriſts death, & for vilifying the ſignes and pledges of the body and blood of Chriſt. For the indignity that is offered unto the ſeal of the King, is accounted as done unto the Kings own perſon. The phraſe of the Apoſtle implyes, that they who unworthily handle theſe holy myſteries are guilty before God as well as Judas, who betrayed the body of our Saviour; or the Jews, who bound his hands, and ſpit upon his face; or the ſouldiers, who ſpilt his blood.

of the Lord] Gr. Tec. of Chriſt.

V. 28. examine himſelf] Both concerning his ſpirituall ſtate in generall; whether he be a true member of Chriſts myſticall body. For none but ſuch may eate his body, and drink his blood. And in ſpeciall, whether he be a fit gueſt for ſo holy and heavenly a table, whether he truly repent him of his ſinnes, have a lively faith in Chriſt, be in charity with his neighbours, and is endued with a competent meaſure of knowledge to diſcern this heavenly food from other meat. This examination of a mans ſelf, is of neceſſity required in all that intend to receive the communion, and therefore they ought not to be admitted to it, which cannot examine themſelves as children, idiots and mad-men, and all ſuch as either have no knowledge of Chriſt, or no competent meaſure thereof, though they profeſſe the Chriſtian Religion.

eat of that bread, and drink of that cup] The Sacrament muſt be received in both kindes, both becauſe Chriſt ſo inſtituted it, and to receive it otherwiſe is a violation of Chriſts order, and as Gelaſius confeſſeth, de conſecrat. diſt. 2. grand ſacriledge (diviſio unius ejuſdemq; myſterii ſine grandi ſacrilegio non poteſt provenire:) as alſo becauſe if we receive but in one kinde in bread only, after the Romiſh manner, we ſhew not forth the death of Chriſt, nor celebrate a Supper, nor make an entire refection, to which drink as well as bread is requiſite.

V. 29. damnation to himſelf] Or, judgement. This may be underſtood either of eternall puniſhment, in reſpect of hypocrites; or of temporall corrections, in regard of the faithfull, who oft neglect their duty herein; and receive not ſo worthily as they ought, as is declared in the next verſe.

not diſcerning the Lords body] Shewing no more reverence at the communion of the body of Chriſt, then he would do at his ordinary ſupper: putting no difference between the bread of the Lords Supper, which is a holy ſigne and Sacrament of the Lords body, and between ordinary food, participating thereof without any precedent preparation or preſent devotion.

V. 30. For this cauſe, &c.] The prophaning the body and blood of the Lord, by unworthily receiving the holy myſteries, is ſharply puniſhed by him, by viſiting ſuch with ſickneſſe, and ſometimes inflicting corporall death: therefore ſuch a miſchief ought diligently to be prevented by judging and correcting of a mans ſelf.

V. 31. For if we would judge our ſelves] If we would examine our own conſcience and condemn our ſelves for our ſins. And here the Apoſtle changeth the third perſon into the firſt, and in modeſty joyneth himſelf with the reſt of his brethren, intimating that neither himſelf, nor any other is free from Gods fatherly correction, and implying that he delivereth a generall doctrine belonging to all the faithfull, to prevent Gods judgements by fore-judging themſelves.

V. 32. we are chaſtened of the Lord] Sickneſſe and other ſcourges of God, which are puniſhments to the wicked, inflicted upon them for their ſins, are fatherly chaſtiſements of Gods children for their inſtruction and amendment. παθήματα μαθήματα, nocumenta documenta.

CHAP. XII.

Verſ. 1. N*Ow concerning ſpirituall* gifts] Here he entereth into a reproof of the Corinthians for their abuſe of ſpirituall gifts. For they that excelled in them, brag'd ambitiouſly of them, and ſo rob'd God of the praiſe of his gifts, and having no conſideration of their brethrens benefit, uſed them to vain oſtentation, and ſo rob'd the Church of the uſe of thoſe gifts. On the other ſide, the inferiour ſort envied the better, and were about to make a departure from them, and rent in the Church: ſo that all that body was as it were ſcattered and torn in pieces. So then he going about to remedy this abuſe, willeth them firſt to conſider diligently that they have not theſe gifts of themſelves, but from the free grace and liberality of God, to whoſe glory they ought to referre them. Of this he would not have them ignorant to what purpoſe thoſe gifts were given unto them.

V. 2. ye were Gentiles] Gr. Tec. when ye.

carried away] Gr. ye were carried.

dumb idols] Though the devill ſometimes ſpake in and by the idol, yet the idols themſelves, as the Prophet David truly affirmeth of them, Pſal. 115. 5. had mouthes and ſpake not; the work-men who made the mouthes, could not give them ſpeech. This therefore is ſpoken by way of aggravation, to ſhew what an abſurd thing idolatry is, which as Lactantius obſerveth, ſo beſotteth men, ut adorent inſenſibilia qui ſentiunt, irrationalia qui ſapiunt, &c. That reaſonable men worſhip unreaſonable creatures, ſenſible men adore ſenſeleſſe ſtocks, they who can ſpeak, call upon dumb images and pictures.

V. 3. calleth Jeſus accurſed] Gr. ſaith Jeſus is. Or, anathema. Or, make anathema, or, count him as an execrable thing, Eſa. 30. 22. To curſe him in whom all the kindreds of the earth are bleſſed, can proceed from no other then from the accurſed and damned ſpirit the devill himſelf. In this ſpeech the Apoſtle either brandeth the prieſts and falſe prophets of the Gentiles, or the Jews who pretended to the gifts of the Spirit, and by ſorcery, and witchcraft uttered ſtrange propheſies, and did ſeeming wonders, yet both joyned in curſing Chriſt, as the blaſphemous Jews do at this day.

Jeſus is the Lord, but &c,] By the Lord, either the Apoſtle meaneth Jehovah the eſſentiall name of God, which the Seventy in the tranſlation of the Old Teſtament expreſſe by κύριος, the word here uſed: or the Lord who hath bought and redeemed us. And moſt true it is, that no man out of ſincere affection and true faith can profeſſe that Chriſt is the Lord in either of theſe ſenſes, but by the inſtinct of the holy Ghoſt.

V. 4. There are diverſities of gifts] See Rom. 12. 4, &c. The gifts are diverſe, as the offices and functions in the Church are diverſe: yet one and the ſelf-ſame Spirit of God, is the giver of all thoſe gifts, and that to one end, to wit, for the profit of all.

V. 5. adminiſtrations] Or, miniſteries.

V. 6. diverſities of operations] By operations here, he meaneth miraculous works, in which the Spirit of God manifeſted his divine power.

V. 8. the word of wiſedome] Wiſedome is a moſt excellent gift, very requiſite not only for them which teach, but alſo for them that exhort and comfort.

by the ſame Spirit] Gr. according to the ſame.

V. 9. To another faith by the ſame ſpirit] By faith he meaneth not here the common faith of all Chriſtians, but a ſpeciall faith given to ſome, whereby they wrought miracles, of which the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, Chapter 13. If I had all faith; ſo that I could remove mountains.

V. 10. the working of miracles] The gift of healing ſpoken of in the former verſe was miraculous, but here by ἐνεργήματα δυνάμεων, the Apoſtle meaneth, the greater workings of Gods mighty power, which paſſed and excelled among his miracles, as the delivery of the people of Iſrael by the hand of Moſes, and that which he did by Elias againſt the prieſts of Baal, in ſending down fire from heaven to conſume the ſacrifice, and licking up all the water, and that which he did by Peter in the matter of Ananias and Saphira, and ſuch like.

V. 11. But] Or, And.

V. 12. ſo alſo is Chriſt] One body having many members, which though they are very diverſe and have different offices and operations, yet they all make but one body, not naturall, but ſpirituall, not politique, but myſticall.

V. 13. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body] Or, in one. By the two Sacraments of the Chriſtian Church, he proveth the union of the faithfull in one and the ſame myſtical body, by the vertue of the holy Spirit, who alone doth ratifie both the one and the other Sacrament, by Baptiſme to unite them to Chriſt, and all of them together in Chriſt: by the holy Communion, to animate and move that whole body, and to operate in all the members thereof, by diverſe gifts and operations, to one and the ſame end, and for the common good and benefit of all. All the faithfull, as members of the ſelf-ſame body, have the ſame means of common generation by Baptiſme, and nutrition by the holy Spirit. They are baptized into one body, that is, by Baptiſme and the ſpirituall efficacy thereof, we are incorporated into one body, the body of Chriſt, and we are made to drink into one Spirit, that is, by one quickning drink of the Lords blood, we are made partakers of his Spirit. And here though he mention but one ſigne in the Lords Supper, to wit, wine in the cup, yet we are to underſtand the other ſigne of the bread alſo: but it ſeemeth, that he uſeth this of the wine eſpecially, in regard of the Spirit; becauſe in the nouriſhment of our bodies, the wine or drink, is that part of our aliment which doth moſt breed and revive the ſpirits.

and have been all] Gr. Tec. and are all one body.

V. 15. If the foot ſhall ſay] Now he buildeth his doctrine upon the foundation, which he hath laid, & firſt of all he ſpeaketh unto them which ſhould have ſeparated themſelves from thoſe whom they envied, becauſe they had not ſuch excellent gifts as they: this is all one, ſaith he, as if the foot ſhould ſay, that it were not of the body, becauſe it is not the hand; or the ear that it is not of the body, becauſe it is not the eye, therefore all parts ought rather to defend the unity of the body, being coupled together to ſerve one the other.

V. 17. If the whole body were an eye] Again, ſpeaking to the ſame men, who were diſcontented at the meanneſſe of their gifts in compariſon of others, he ſheweth them, that if that ſhould come to paſſe which they deſired, to wit, that all ſhould be equall one to another, there would follow a deſtruction of the whole body, and conſequently of themſelves. For it could not be a body, unleſſe it were made of many members knit together, and diverſe one from the other. And that no man might finde fault with this diviſion as unequall, he addeth, that God himſelf hath coupled all theſe together, therefore all muſt remain coupled together, that the body may remain in ſafety.

V. 21. And the eye cannot ſay unto the hand, &c.] Now on the other ſide, he ſpeaketh unto them who were endued with more excellent gifts, willing them not to deſpiſe the inferiours as unprofitable, nor as though they ſerved for no uſe. For God, ſaith he, hath in ſuch ſort tempered this inequality, that the more excellent and beautifull members can in no wiſe lack the more abject and ſuch as we are aſhamed of, & that they ſhould have more care to ſee unto them and cover them, that by this means the neceſſity which is on both parts, might keep the whole body in peace and concord; that although if each member be conſidered apart, they are of diverſe degrees and conditions, yet becauſe they are joyned together, they have a community both in commodities and diſcommodities.

V. 22. ſeem to be more feeble] Of the ſmalleſt and vileſt Offices, who had leaſt power, and therefore leaſt accounted of among the reſt.

V. 23. beſtow] Or, put on.

V. 25. ſchiſme] Or, diviſion.

that the members ſhould have the ſame care one for another] Should beſtow their operations and offices to the preſervation of the whole body.

V. 27. and members in particular] Or, particularly. Or, in part. In the Originall word for word, it is members of a part, that is, members of this Church of Corinth, which is but a part of the Catholike Chriſtian Church: for all the faithfull whereſoever they are make the whole body: you Corinthians are not the whole body, but members onely, neither all the members, but a part onely of them. Or, each one for his part, and in his place.

V. 28. God hath ſet ſome, &c.] See Ephel. 4. 11.

firſt apoſtles] The firſt and uppermoſt place is given to the Apoſtles, for that they were called unto that office immediately by Chriſt without any intermediate humane authority; Gal. 1. 1. they had manifold preheminences above other Doctours and Paſtours, they could not erre in matter of doctrine, their Commiſſion was generall to preach to all nations; they were endued with ſpeciall power to work miracles, and puniſh the diſobedient in an extraordinary manner.

ſecondarily prophets] Thoſe who by a ſpeciall and extraordinary gift interpreted propheticall Scriptures to edification, exhortation, and conſolation, 1 Cor. 14. 3. Or thoſe who fore-told infallibly things to come, as Agabus, Act. 21. 10. and the daughters of Philip the Evangeliſt, Act. 21. 9. If it be objected, that the Law and the Prophets were but untill John; the anſwer is eaſie, that Chriſt there ſpeaketh of ſuch Prophets who fore-told his coming in the fleſh.

thirdly teachers] That is, thoſe which were ordinarily and orderly called to expound the Scriptures for the edification of the Church, and to maintain the truth againſt falſe teachers, Epheſ. 4. 11.

after that miracles] As we call thoſe Juſtices which are to execute juſtice, ſo the Apoſtle calleth here miracles, thoſe who had power to work miracles, both in curing diſeaſes that were ſimply incurable by naturall means, and in inflicting miraculouſly fearfull puniſhments upon thoſe who oppoſed the truth, and lyed to the holy Spirit, as Paul inflicted upon Elymas the Sorcerer, and Peter upon Ananias and Saphyra.

then the gifts of healings] The gift of healing may be diſtinguiſhed from the gift of miracles mentioned before in this, that thoſe who had the gift of healing only could do no other miracles, but the other of whom the Apoſtle ſpake before, wrought many other miracles, and they not only cured incurable diſeaſes, but raiſed alſo the dead, whereas theſe only cured diſeaſes, and for the moſt part ſuch as were ordinary, yet they cured them not by ordinary means or medicines, but only with a word, or a touch, or the like.

helps] Aſſiſtants to the principall Officers of the Church, as Deacons, who took care of the poor ſick ſtrangers and orphans, and widowes, &c.

diverſities of tongues] Or kindes. Becauſe the Corinthians were proud of this gift, to take down their creſt, and abate their high conceit of themſelves, in regard of this gift of the Spirit, it ſeemeth that he nameth it in the laſt place, it being as they uſed the matter of leaſt uſe in the Church.

V. 29. Workers] Or, powers.

V. 31. But covet earneſtly the, &c.] He teacheth them that are ambitious a holy ambition to ſtrive for the beſt gifts, and ſuch as are moſt profitable in the Church, eſpecially to contend to excell one another in love, which farre ſurpaſſeth all other gifts, as he proveth in the enſuing Chapter, and in that regard calleth it a more excellent way.

CHAP. XIII.

Verſ. 1. Tongues of men and of Angels] The Angels being ſpirits, Heb. 1. 14. have no tongues properly as we have: this therefore muſt be underſtood either of the faculty of expreſſing their conceptions, one to another, which ſerveth them to that uſe as our tongue doth us: Or the Apoſtle hath reference to the variety of tongues which the Angels may or have uſed, when they have been ſent to deliver meſſages to men of divers Nations and Languages; and then the meaning is, if I could ſpeak with as many tongues or languages as ever man or Angels ſpake with: or elſe the Apoſtle hath reference not ſo much to the variety of tongues as to the gift of eloquence, and exquiſite kind of ſpeech; and then the meaning is, if I could ſpeak like an Angell, that is, moſt exquiſitely, moſt divinely, as Stephen is ſaid to have had the look of an Angel, Act. 6. 15. They ſaw his face as it had been the face of an Angel, that is, with ſuch ſhining beauty and luſtre as Angels have appeared with, and Manna is ſaid in the Pſalm (78. 25.) to be the food of Angels; that is, a moſt dainty food, fitter for Angels then for men; or, ſuch as Angels, if they would taſte any corporall food, would make choice of.

as ſounding braſſe] That is, inſtruments of metall, which make a great hideous noiſe, but without any pleaſantneſſe: or like a tinckling Cymball which yeeldeth a pleaſant ſound to the eare, but is of little uſe at all; or that giveth an uncertain ſound without any diſtinction of notes, as thoſe did who uſed the gift of Tongues in the Church without an interpreter.

V. 2. underſtand] Or, know.

myſteries] Or, ſecrets.

all faith] By faith he meaneth the gift of doing miracles, of which faith our Saviour ſpeaketh, Matth. 17. 20. If ye have faith as a grain of muſtard-ſeed, you ſhall ſay to this mountain, Remove hence to another place: and it ſhall remove. For that faith may be ſevered from charity, but juſtifying faith cannot, which alwaies worketh by love: So then all faith, that is, all degrees of miraculous faith.

no charity] Gr. not charity.

V. 3. to feed the poor, &c. Though theſe ſeem to be moſt eminent acts, the former of our love to our brethren, the latter of our love to Chriſt and his Goſpell; yet if they be done in vain-glory, or we propound to our ſelves in them any other end but Gods glory and the good of our brother, they ſhall profit nothing to our ſalvation.

to be burned] Gr. that I be burned.

It profiteth me nothing] Gr. I am nothing benefited thereby.

V. 4. Charity ſuffereth long] Here the Apoſtle ſetteth forth the force and nature of Charity, partly by a compariſon of contraries, and partly by the effects of it, whereby the Corinthians may underſtand both how profitable it is in the Church, and how neceſſary; and alſo how farre they were from it, and conſequently how vainly, and without cauſe they were puffed up with other gifts, wanting this the chief of all.

vaunteth not it ſelf] Or, is not raſh, or, doth nothing prepoſterouſly. The Greek word περπερεύεται, ſome derive from the Latine perperam, and then it is of a large ſignification, as if he had ſaid, it doth nothing inconſiderately. or amiſſe: others, as Cornelius a Lapide, a Perperis fratribus procaciſſimis, and then it ſignifieth, it doth nothing ſcornfully, or vain-glorioully, Heſychius a great Maſter of the Greek tongue interpreteth περπερεύεται, μετὰ βλακείας ἐπαίρεται, that is, It doth not inſolently carry it ſelf, or fooliſhly prefer it ſelf above others; the Interpreter of Sophocles expoundeth περπερούς, by κούφους, and πεταλαλοῦς, vain-glorious talkers, and braggers of themſelves. In the 15. Canon of the ſecond Councell of Nice we read καλλωπιστὶς ἔχει περπερείας ἐμφάσειαν, over-ſpruceneſſe in apparell, and in decking and trimming our ſelves is called by the name of the vice here mentioned; whereby it appears that the meaning of the Apoſtle is, that thoſe who have charity do not vainly put forth themſelves, nor carry themſelves inſolently nor ſcornfully towards others.

V. 5. not behave it ſelf unſeemly] Or, nothing unſeemely.

not eaſily provoked] Gr. not exaſperated.

thinketh no evill] Or, caſteth, projecteth, reſolveth, or reckoneth upon no evill. The word in the Greek, λογίζεται, may be diverſly tranſlated; either imputeth no evill, or thinketh of no revenge, or plotteth no evill in his minde againſt another.

V. 6. Rejoyceth not in iniquity] Taketh no pleaſure in ſpeaking or doing evill or wrong; or rejoyceth not, but rather grieveth when any evill befalleth his brother of what kind ſoever.

but rejoyceth in the truth] Or, with the truth. Rejoyceth at the righteouſneſſe of the righteous. For the Hebrew ſometime by truth meaneth righteouſneſſe; the meaning then of the Apoſtle is, that a charitable man is ſo far from taking any delight in the calamity, hurt, or diſgrace of another, if they be found guilty, or taken tardy in any thing, that on the contrarie when any that is brought in queſtion as a Delinquent, and afterwards by evidence of truth is cleared, he congratulateth the party that is acquit, and as much rejoyceth, as at the clearing of his own innocency.

V. 7. Beareth all things] Or, ſupporteth. The word in the Originall στέγει, ſignifieth to bear up, as a pillar beares the roofe laid upon it, and it differeth from the other word uſed in this verſe ὑπομένει, that this implyeth a ſupporting of our weak brother, and helping his infirmities; but the other a patient enduring of wrongs offered to us; or ſuſtaining whatſoever burden is laid upon us.

believeth all things] Theſe three acts of love, namely, believeth, hopeth, endureth all things, may be either referred to God, or our neighbour: if they be referred to God, then the meaning is this, love believeth every word of God, hopeth for all the good things he promiſeth, and patiently expecteth the accompliſhment of all his gracious promiſes, and meekly endureth all his chaſtiſements. If they be referred to our neighbour, then the meaning is, love believeth and hopeth all good of our neighbour, and patiently beareth all wrongs, even death it ſelf, if it ſo ſtand with the will of God, that it be inflicted on him. Now we are not from hence to inferre that a charitable man is improvident to prevent evill, or careleſſe to right himſelf. (Prov. 14. 15.) For all that the Apoſtle here affirmeth of love comes but to this, that a charitable man is apt to conſtrue all things to the beſt, and hope for the beſt where there is not apparent reaſon to the contrary: and that he is more willing to ſuffer the greateſt wrong then to deſire revenge, or offer the leaſt injury, he endureth all things which he may with a good conſcience, and he perſwadeth himſelf may make for the glory of God, or advantage of the truth: but the latter is more proper.

endureth] Or, ſuſtaineth.

V. 8. Charity never faileth] Gr. falleth away. He commendeth the excellency of Charity in that, that it ſhall never be aboliſhed in the Saints; whereas the other gifts which are neceſſary for the building up of the Church, ſo long as we live here ſhall have no place in the world to come.

ſhall faile] Gr. be aboliſhed. or, caſſated.

knowledge, it ſhall vaniſh away] Or, be made fruſtrate. Either by knowledge the Apoſtle here meaneth the way to get knowledge by prophecying; or ſuch imperfect knowledge as we have in this life; or that knowledge which is acquired by ſenſe and experience, or that gift whereby God enableth us to inſtruct others, and to teach in the Church, that ſhall be aboliſhed after this life: becauſe then there ſhall be no need of it.

V. 9. For we know in part] We are now in that ſtate that we ought to learn daily, and therefore we have need of thoſe helps; to wit, the gift of Tongues and knowledge of them that teach them: but to what purpoſe ſerve they then when we have obtained and got the full knowledge of God? which ſerveth now but for them which are imperfect and go by degrees to perfection.

V. 10. done away] Or, evacuated.

V. 11. When I was a child, I ſpake as a child] He illuſtrateth what he ſaid before by an elegant ſimilitude, comparing this life to our infancy or child-hood, wherein we ſtammer rather then ſpeak, and think and underſtand but childiſh things, and therefore need of ſuch helps as may frame our tongues, and informe our minds: but when we become perfect men in Chriſt Jeſus, to what end ſhould we deſire that ſtammering ſpeech & thoſe childiſh helps, and ſuch like things whereby our childhood is framed by little and little.

thought] Or, reaſoned.

V. 12. For now we ſee through a glaſſe] There is ſuch a difference between our preſent knowledge, and that which we ſhall enjoy hereafter in the life to come, as there is between the ſeeing of a mans image in a glaſſe, and looking him full in the face. Now we ſee God in the Word and Sacraments, and in his Works; in which there is revealed unto us by a kind of reflection, the Image of thoſe things whereof we cannot directly ſee the originall truth, and proper eſſence in this world, 2 Cor. 5. 7.

darkly] Gr. in a riddle. In the Originall it is in a riddle, proverbiall or ænigmaticall ſpeech, and the Apoſtle hath reference unto Numbers the 12. 8. where God ſpeaking of Moſes, ſaith, I will ſpeak unto him mouth to mouth, and by viſion, and not in dark words and the Apoſtle hereby implyeth, that there is ſuch a difference betweene the imperfect knowledge which we have in this life, and the perfect knowledge which we have in the life to come, as is between the propounding the ſame thing in the obſcurity of a Riddle, and declaring of it in plain, proper and ſignificant tearms: or the ſeeing of a thing immediately, and in its proper ſhape; and the ſeeing it through a mirrour, or the image of it in a glaſſe. We here in this life ſee but the image of things, neither can we contemplate in the foreſaid glaſſe the pure and naked image, but cloathed and wrapped about with an intricacie of words, and corporall ſignifications accommodated to our groſſe manner of apprehending and reaſoning.

as alſo I am known] The Greek words may bear a double ſenſe, αὐτὸς καὶ ἐπεγνώσθην. Either I ſhall know him according to the meaſure of that knowledge wherewith I ſhall then be endued by him, or I ſhall come to the perfect knowledge of my election how I am known, that is, choſen and marked out for his by my clear viſion of God, and full conjunction and communion with him. At that time I ſhall know him as I am known of him; that is, moſt certainly, clearly, and face to face, as I am known of him, though not ſo perfectly, for the creature can never know the Creator ſo fully and perfectly as the Creator knoweth it. There is yet another opinion which thus gloſſeth the words; I ſhall know God then immediately, and as it were, face to face, as I was known of him, and ſaw him in my cœleſtiall viſion and rapture when I was taken up into the third heaven.

V. 13. And now abideth faith] Either the meaning is, whileſt we are in this life, it is very needfull that all theſe three graces be, and abide within us, Faith, Hope, and Charity; for without faith we cannot be juſtified nor made acceptable to God, without hope faith cannot ſubſiſt, and by love faith muſt be working; but after this life faith ſhall be turned into viſion, hope into fruition, but then love ſhall be in greateſt perfection. Or, the Apoſtles meaning is, that faith, hope and charity are vertues that are to abide and continue in the Church militant, and have their working in true believers at all times, and ſhall have in all ages, whereas the gift of tongues and miracles were neceſſary in the firſt planting of the Church, but afterwards were to ceaſe, as now they have done for many ages.

the greateſt of theſe is charity] Gr. greater. If the Apoſtle ſpeak here not of juſtifying faith, but of the faith of miracles, or whereby men work wonders, of which he ſpeaketh verſ. 2. then there can be no queſtion, but that charity farre exceedeth that faith; but becauſe here he joyneth with it hope, which is a grace common to all true Chriſtians, and moſt of the ancient and latter Divines underſtand this verſe of the three prime Theologicall vertues, moſt neceſſary to ſalvation; it is more probable that S. Paul here taketh faith in the largeſt notion, as it compriſeth, not only the faith of miracles, and that which is called Hiſtoricall, but even juſtifying faith; and howſoever faith in that notion, in the matter of Juſtification, hath the preheminence above all other graces; yet in many other reſpects, charity exceedeth faith: as firſt in regard of the object, for the object of faith is God only, in whom alone we are to believe; but the object of Charity is of a larger extent, for it reſpecteth not God only, but our neighbour alſo. Secondly, in regard of the manner of working. For faith worketh by receiving Chriſt, and all his benefits, but charity, by giving and beſtowing both our affections and goods; now our Saviour ſaith, It is a more bleſſed thing to give then to receive. Thirdly, in reſpect of duration or continuance. For faith and hope ſhall ceaſe in the life to come, we being then actually to enjoy and poſſeſſe thoſe good things which we now believe and hope for; but charity ſhall not only remain, but have its full perfection in the life to come. Laſtly, in reſpect of the end, becauſe love is the end, and ſcope of the two other graces, for we apprehend by faith, and expect by hope that we may enjoy by perfect love, whereby alſo we render unto God the ſame we have received of him, and in this correſpondence lyeth and conſiſteth the accompliſhment of our conjunction with God, and of mans eternall happineſſe.

CHAP. XIIII.

that ye may propheſie] The Apoſtle ſpeaketh not here of that gift of the Holy Ghoſt, whereby men that were inſpired fore-told things future, as the word is taken in the old Teſtament; but of a gift of the Spirit, whereby men were inabled to expound the Scriptures, given by divine inſpiration, and apply them to the benefit of their hearers, for their edification, inſtruction, and comfort.

V. 2. underſtandeth] Gr. heareth.

in the ſpirit] By that inſpiration which he hath received of the Spirit, which notwithſtanding he abuſeth when he ſpeaketh myſteries, which none of the company can underſtand.

V. 3. He that propheſieth ſpeaketh unto men] He that expoundeth the Scriptures in a known tongue, he ſpeaketh unto men, that is, ſpeaketh in ſuch a manner that men may underſtand him, and receive fruit and benefit by him. This fruit is ſorted in the words following, edification, exhortation, and comfort. By edification he underſtandeth confirmation of faith and inſtruction of the ignorant; by exhortation, incitation to vertue, and reproof of the unruly; by comfort, the applying of the promiſes of God to the conſolation of the afflicted. And theſe are the three uſes to which all Expoſitours of the Word ought to apply the doctrine they deliver.

V. 6. if I come unto you with tongues] I wonder whether that which you ſo much admire in others, would content you in me your Apoſtle; if I ſhould come among you with the gift of tongues, which the Lord hath ſo largely beſtowed upon me, ver. 18. Or, whether you would not rather expect at my hands that I ſhould preach to your underſtanding, as is agreeable to my Office of Apoſtleſhip, and profitable for you.

either by revelation, &c.] Or, in revelation. Unleſſe I propound unto you ſome particular matter, appertaining to your faith or ſalvation, which I had either learned of God by immediate inſpiration, or diſcovered and deduced by the diſcourſe of enlightned reaſon from the generall grounds of the Word of God. By propheſying, that is, in the generall expoſition of the truth of God, whether after an extraordinary manner, which is by propheſying, or by way of treaty and diſcourſe, by the ordinary gift of reaſon, which is doctrine.

by knowledge] Or, in knowledge.

by propheſying] Or, in propheſying.

by doctrine, Or, in doctrine.

V. 7. And even things without life] He ſetteth forth that which he had ſaid, by a ſimilitude, borrowed from inſtruments of muſick, which though they ſound not out perfectly the ditty, yet by a diſtinction of ſounds they expreſſe in ſuch ſort thereby the tune, that we know after a ſort what leſſon is plaid upon them.

ſounds] Or, tunes.

V. 8. who ſhall prepare] Gr. Tec. who prepareth.

V. 9. words eaſie to be underſtood] Gr. a ſignificant ſpeech.

V. 10. ſignification] Or, dumb, or, mute.

V. 11. meaning] Gr. power.

a Barbarian] This word Barbarian is derived from the Arabick word Barbar, which ſignifieth a murmur or confuſed noiſe or from Bar, which in the Arabian language ſignifieth a wilderneſſe; for thoſe who were firſt ſtyled Barbari, lived in deſarts after the manner of wilde beaſts: afterwards the word Barbarian was taken in a larger ſenſe for all thoſe who ſpake not the pure language of the Grecians; here it ſignifieth, as alſo in the Poet, I ſhall be as a ſtranger, whoſe language he underſtandeth not, Barbarus hic ego ſum, quia non intelligor illi; ſo the Grecians in old time called the Egyptians Barbarians, and the Egyptians them, becauſe neither underſtood the other; ſo Apamenſis the Platonick Philoſopher called John the Evangeliſt, a Barbarian, not in any diſgrace, as Cyrill in his eight book againſt Julian, ſheweth; but only διὰ τὸ ἀλλόγλωσσον, becauſe he was a Jew, and of another language, not underſtood of this Philoſopher, to wit, the Hebrew or Syriack, which he naturally ſpake as his mother tongue, though he wrote his Goſpell in the Greek.

V. 12. of ſpirituall gifts] Gr. of ſpirits.

V. 14. my ſpirit prayeth] The gift and inſpiration which the Spirit giveth me doth his part, but only to my ſelf; but my underſtanding is without fruit, becauſe no fruit cometh to the Church by my prayer, in regard they hear the ſound of my words, but the underſtanding or meaning of them is not known to them. The Spirit of God doth indeed by a ſupernaturall inſpiration forme, and frame the conception and words of a prayer within me, and moveth me to pronounce it, and I my ſelfe am therewith affected, but in the mean while the naturall faculty of the mind or underſtanding, whereby the ordinary and naturall word or ſpeech is produced to communicate it ſelfe to others doth ceaſe in me, and is unfruitfull in regard of others edification.

V. 15. with the] Or, in the.

I will pray with the underſtanding alſo] That is, I will pray in ſuch a language, whereby I may be underſtood of them, and they edified by my prayer.

with the ſpirit] Or, in.

V. 16. Elſe when thou ſhalt bleſſe with the ſpirit] Seeing the whole congregation muſt agree to him that ſpeaketh, and witneſſe this their agreement; how ſhall they give their aſſent, or agreement, who know not what is ſpoken? The prayers and thankſgivings to God which are made publikely in the Church, ought to be made and offered there with one heart and minde, and ſpirit of the whole congregation, which is impoſſible to be done, if they do not all of them underſtand the meaning.

how ſhall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned] That is, the common vulgar people, who it is like ſate in the holy aſſemblies in a diſtinct place from the Paſtours, and other Eccleſiaſticall perſons, ſuch as were thoſe alſo among the reſt that had this gift of tongues.

ſay Amen] How ſhall he joyn the bent of his deſires aſſenting, and intentions to that which he hears and underſtands not? Amen is an adverbe of aſſenting and wiſhing: it cometh from a root in Hebrew ſignifying truth, and aſſurance, and is uſed in the concluſion of prayers, Rom. 15. 33. and elſe-where, thereby to declare the conſenting to that which is prayed, and a deſire that it may be fulfilled.

V. 20. be ye children] See Matth. 18. 3.

men] Gr. perfect, or, of a ripe age.

V. 21. In the law it is written] See Iſa. 28. 11. That is, in the Scriptures of the Old Teſtament; as Joh. 15. 25 the book of Pſalmes: ſo here the propheſie of Eſay is compriſed under the word Law. The paſſage it ſelf containing a reproof of the peoples wilfull dulneſſe is here applyed for ſome reſemblance it hath to the preſent purpoſe, viz. that like as God never left to propound and declare his word unto his people, (See Iſa 28. 11.) although they made themſelves uncapable of underſtanding it to their ſalvation, thereby to convince them, and as it were to ſeale up their condemnation: ſo alſo when the ſame is brought to any without being underſtood, it is a ſign God is not pleaſed to make the ſame a means of converſion, and illumination, but of conviction as towards obdurate unbelievers.

other tongues, and other lips, will I ſpeak] Gr. Tec. lips of other. By men of ſtrange and unknown language will I ſpeake. Foraſmuch then as God doth make uſe of unknown tongues and languages for a puniſhment, it is not fit the ſame ſhould be uſed in congregations without interpreting them, in regard that otherwiſe it would ſerve more for a puniſhment then the edification of the hearers.

V. 25. the ſecrets of his heart] That is, his falſe perſwaſions of God, and wicked luſts and deſires, ſhall be diſcovered and convinced by the word.

V. 26. How is it then] Gr. what is.

V. 27. by two, or at the moſt by three] He ſetteth down the manner how to uſe the gift of tongues, it may be lawfull for one or two, or at the moſt for three, to uſe the gift of tongues one after another in an aſſembly, ſo that there be ſome to expound the ſame, but if there be none to expound, let him that hath that gift ſpeak to himſelf alone, and to God in his private prayers.

V. 31. comforted] Or, admoniſhed.

V. 32. the ſpirits of the Prophets are ſubject to the Prophets] Theſe words according to a diverſe reference may have a diverſe ſenſe, if they have reference to verſ. 29. let the Prophets ſpeak by two, or at the moſt by three, and let the others judge; then the meaning is, that the doctrine of every Prophet ought to be ſubject unto the examination and cenſure of the other Prophets, and therefore every Prophet may ſpeak in publique, to the end that he may be diſcerned and approved by the reſt. For although theſe propheſies were infuſed by the Holy Spirit, that cannot erre, yet all things are not alwaies revealed to one, and that which is not revealed to one, is oftentimes revealed to more, and ſometimes in a clearer manner. There might be alſo ſomething mingled with that which the Prophets received, and it might ſo fall out, that that which they added of their own, by way of confirmation, illuſtration or application, might be juſtly ſubject to cenſure. Withall it muſt be tryed and judged by others, whether the propheſies proceed from the inſpiration of the Holy Spirit, and according to the rule of faith, Eſay 8. 20. But if theſe words look not backward to the antecedents, but forwards to the conſequents, then the meaning is, that the ſpirit of the Prophets are ſo farre ſubject to the Prophets, that when they are moved by the Holy Ghoſt to propheſie, they may deliver their propheſies preſently, or forbear the delivery of them for a time, as ſhall be moſt expedient for the Church, and ſo though more be inſpired at the ſame time, yet they may ſpeak orderly one after another.

V. 33. confuſion] Gr. tumult, or, unquietneſſe.

V. 34. Let your women keep ſilence in the Churches] Gr. Tec. the women. See 1 Tim. 2. 12.

it is not permitted] Gr. it hath not been permitted.

law] See Gen. 3. 16.

V. 38. Let him be ignorant] The Church ought not to care for ſuch as be ſtubbornly ignorant, and will not abide to be taught, but to go forward notwithſtanding in thoſe things that are right.

V. 39. covet to propheſie] Gr. zealouſly deſire, or, ſeek to propheſie.

V. 40. Let all things be done decently, &c.] Gr. Tec. But let. Although ſome conceive that the precept of decency hath reference to the habits of men and women ſpoken of before, and that of order to the uſe of ſpirituall gifts, that both they which ſpeak with tongues and propheſie, do it in that order the Apoſtle preſcribeth, ver. 27, 29. Yet it is more probable, that the Apoſtle here delivereth a generall Rule, by which all things which belong to the politie of the Church are to be regulated. Let all things that are done in the aſſemblies, whether praying and preaching, or adminiſtration of the Sacraments, or exerciſing Eccleſiaſticall diſcipline, be done decently; that is, in a ſeemly and fit manner, and alſo orderly without confuſion, every thing in its proper ſeaſon, time, and place.

CHAP. XV.

Verſ. 1. K*Eep in memory*] Or, hold faſt.

what I preached unto you] The Greek τινι λόγῳ, ſignifieth as well, qua ratione vel quomodo, after what manner, as well with what words, and the meaning is, either how in expreſſe and direct words I preached unto you the doctrine of the reſurrection, or, after what manner I preached, that is, how powerfully; not only proving it by forcible arguments, but alſo confirming it by ſigns and wonders.

V. 3. which I alſo received] Either immediately from Chriſt when he was rapt up into the third heaven, or from thoſe who were themſelves eye-witneſſes of theſe things.

according to the Scriptures] See Iſa. 53. 5, 6, &c.

V. 4. according to the Scriptures] See Pſal. 16. 10.

V. 5. And that he was ſeen of Cephas] See John 20. 19.

then of the twelve] In ſome Copies it is the eleven, and when this viſion was, there were but eleven, for Judas before this had hung himſelf, and Matthias was not choſen, till after Chriſts aſcention. The anſwer is, that by a Synecdoche eleven might be here meant by twelve, becauſe thoſe pickt & choſen men known by the name of Apoſtles, were at the firſt twelve, and commonly called the twelve. In like manner, Gen. 42. 13. it is ſaid, Thy ſervants are twelve brethren, the ſons of one man; yet in the ſame verſe it is added, One is not: ſo here they are called twelve Apoſtles, though at this viſion one was wanting.

V. 8. And laſt of all he was ſeen of me alſo] See Acts 9. 4. Chap. 9. 1.

one born out of due time] The Greek word ἐκτρώματι, ſignifieth an abortive, whereby the Apoſtle implyeth, that he was new-born to Chriſt after the deſcending of the Holy Ghoſt, whereas the other Apoſtles were born again unto Chriſt, and called before the ſending down of the Holy Ghoſt. Or, he alludeth to the manner of his converſion, and new-birth, which was not without violence, Acts 9. as for the moſt part abortive Children are not only born out of their due time, but ſome violence is uſed to bring them forth.

V. 14. And your faith is alſo vain] Either void of truth, or of fruit, and profit. For if Chriſt be not riſen as we have preached unto you, then you do vainly to believe us, and this your faith will do you no good at all.

V. 17 Ye are yet in your ſinnes] Gr. Tec. and yet. Seeing death is the puniſhment of ſinne, in vain ſhould we believe that our ſinnes are forgiven us, if they remain and we are ſtill guilty of them: but they remain and we are guilty of them, if Chriſt roſe not from the dead. For we are juſtified by his reſurrection, Rom. 4. 25. If Chriſt then had continued ſtill in death, his death would have proved uneffectuall, for the expiation of ſinne, and for the conquering of death in his members, which he had not conquered in himſelf.

V. 19. we are of all men moſt miſerable] In regard that Chriſtians do not only forſake the pleaſures of this world, and are ſubject alſo for the profeſſion of the truth to a great many croſſes, tribulations and perſecutions: therefore, ſhould there be no reſurrection, Chriſtians muſt needs be moſt miſerable. For then they ſhould injoy no good nor comfort at all, neither here, nor hereafter, neither temporall, nor eternall. The ground of this argument is this, that the perfect felicity of the ſoul, and the immortality thereof, are by Gods order inſeparable from the reſurrection of the bodies, wherefore he that denies the one, overthrowes alſo the other. See Matth. 25. 32.

V. 20. the firſt fruits of them that ſlept] See Coloſſ. 1. 18. Rev. 1. 5. Chriſt in his reſurrection is fitly compared to the firſt fruits, not only becauſe he firſt roſe from the earth (as the firſt fruits do that ſpring out of the ground) and preſented himſelf to his Father, the very day that the firſt fruits were to be offered according to the Law; but becauſe that as by the offering of the firſt fruits unto God, the reſt were ſanctified, Deut. 26. 1. Rom. 11. 16. ſo by Chriſts reſurrection, all the faithfull that die in the Lord, are ſanctified unto him, and aſſured of their reſurrection. If it be objected, that others were raiſed from death before Chriſt, and therefore he cannot be called the firſt fruits of the dead. I anſwer, firſt, that if he were not the firſt in time, yet he was the firſt in dignity that ever roſe. Secondly, that none ever roſe but by his power, and the vertue and merit of his reſurrection. Thirdly, that he was the firſt that ever roſe to a bleſſed and immortall life. Other dead were raiſed before him; mortui ſuſcitati ſunt, ſed iterum mortui: raiſed for a time to life, but afterwards dying again; none before Chriſt ſo roſe from the dead, that he dyed no more, nor had death any more power over him. Here it is not to be omitted, that thoſe who in the former verſes are called dead, after the mentioning of Chriſts reſurrection are tearmed them that ſlept, becauſe ſuch is the vertue of Chriſts reſurrection, that it changeth the nature of death in all his members, and turns it into a ſweet ſleep: and therefore the Church-yards, in which the faithfull are buried, were by the Ancients tearmed κοιμητήρια, dormitories, or dortories, reſting or ſleeping places.

V. 21. For ſince by man came death] Chriſt is to be conſidered as oppoſite to Adam, in reſpect of the contrary effects which the ſin of the one, and the merits of the other produced; that as from one man Adam, ſin came over all, becauſe by nature all were born of him; ſo from one man Chriſt, life cometh unto all, that is to ſay, all that are faithfull, becauſe in Chriſt they are made the children of God by grace, and are quickned and reſtored to life by him.

V. 23. every man in his own order] See 1 Theſſ. 4. 15.

V. 24. delivered up the Kingdome to God] Chriſt hath a double Kingdome; 1. Eſſentiall, as God, and this Chriſt poſſeſſeth with his Father and the Spirit for ever. 2. Oeconomicall, as Mediatour betwixt God and Man; and this Kingdome which he received from his Father, he ſhall ſurrender up again to his Father after he hath ſubdued ſinne and death, and put all his enemies under his feet.

put down all rule] Or, made fruſtrate. or, taken away. That is, all his enemies, which ſhall be ſpoyled of all the power they have.

V. 25. till he hath put, &c.] See Pſal. 110. 1.

V. 27. hath put all things, &c.] See Pſal. 8. 6.

V. 28. then ſhall the Son alſo himſelf be ſubject unto him] As man in reſpect of his myſticall body, the Son ſhall be ſubject to his Father, not as if he were not ſubject to his Father before, but becauſe then in the ſight of men and Angels by making a ſurrender of his Kingdom, he ſhall moſt manifeſtly declare his ſubjection to his Father. See Epiphan. hæreſ. 69. et Origen. hom. 7. in c. 10. Levit. et Auguſt. lib. 1. de Trin. c. 8. And becauſe his myſticall body, that is to ſay, the Church; which is here in diſtreſſe, and as yet not wholly partaker of his glory, is not fully perfect; and alſo becauſe the bodies of the Saints which lye in the grave, ſhall not be glorified till the reſurrection; but Chriſt as he is God hath us ſubject to him, as his Father hath; but as he is a Prieſt he is ſubject to his Father together with us.

that God may be all in all] By this kind of ſpeech is ſet forth the incomprehenſible glory, which floweth from God and ſhall fill all of us as we are joyned together to our head; but yet ſo, that our head ſhall alwaies reſerve his preheminencie.

V. 29. Elſe what ſhall they do, which are baptized for the dead] Or, over the dead. This being one of the moſt difficult paſſages in all the Epiſtles of Saint Paul, it will not be unprofitable to the Reader, to have a Synopſis or joynt view of all the Interpretations that have been yet given which carry any probability with them. Firſt, ſome tranſlate the words, waſh over the dead. For ſo the word baptiſme is taken, Mar. 7. 4. Luk. 11. 38. Heb. 9. 10. And we read, Acts 9. 37. that it was the manner of the faithfull to waſh the dead, before they buried them. And this waſhing of the dead corps was done out of this conſideration; that the dead and vile body which they there waſhed ſhould one day be changed, and made like unto Chriſts glorious body. But neither will this Tranſlation ſtand with the phraſe in the Originall, βαπτίζονται, not βαπτίζουσιν, which ſignifieth, are waſhed or baptized for, or over the dead, not who waſh the dead body. Neither could the Apoſtle draw any firme argument from this cuſtome of waſhing the dead bodies. For admit that it were not ſuperſtitious, but very commendable, yet it yeelds no ground of an argument for the reſurrection. For divers of the heathen both waſhed and inbalmed the bodies of the dead; yet had no faith at all of the reſurrection. So the faithfull might out of honour or reſpect to their friends deceaſed uſe the like ceremony, without any relation at all to the future reſurrection. Secondly, others tranſlate the words Baptizantur ſuper mortuos, which are baptized over the dead, or upon the dead, and they frame the Apoſtles reaſon after this manner: If there be no reſurrection of the dead, why do ſome of you chooſe to be baptized upon the graves of the dead, rather, then in other places, but for a more ſpeciall teſtimony of their faith in the reſurrection, & of their charitable opinion that thoſe who were there buried ſhould receive a glorious reſurrection? But neither do they bring any good proof that in the dayes of the Apoſtles the Chriſtians adminiſtred baptiſme at the Sepulchres of the dead, but rather they baptized in places where was much water, Joh. 3. 23. Act. 8. 38. Neither would ſuch a cuſtome of adminiſtring Baptiſme inferre the reſurrection of the dead. For they might chooſe thoſe places for their holy meetings, to preſerve the memory of the dead, and honour the Martyrs, and to warme, as it were, their zeale, and devotion at their embers. Thirdly, others tranſlating the words as we do, What ſhall they do which are baptized for the dead? conceive that the Apoſtle hath regard not to a common rite in the Church, but to a particular cuſtome of ſome, whereof there is mention made in antiquity, both by S. Ambroſe, and Tertullian, which was, that if any one dyed in the confeſſion of the faith of Chriſt, before he came to be baptized, ſome of his friends or kindred coming to be baptized, received baptiſme both in his own name and alſo in the name of ſuch an one whom he did teſtifie to have dyed in the faith of Chriſt, to the end that the Church might alſo regiſter the ſame among the faithfull, that had departed this life, from whence they were wont to pray in publique, that God would grant them a happy reſurrection. From this cuſtome the Apoſtle (ſay they) draweth his argument on this manner: It were in vain for any among you to be baptized for your dead friends if they ſhall never riſe again. But againſt this interpretation many things may be objected. Firſt, though it be certain that ſome ancient Heretiques had ſuch a cuſtome, yet there is no proof at all that among the Corinthians in Saint Pauls time there was any ſuch cuſtome. Secondly, ſuppoſing there had been ſuch a cuſtome, and Saint Paul might well uſe an argument ad hominem, and wound them who uſed it with their own weapon; yet it is not probable that the Apoſtle would draw an argument from ſuch a ſuperſtitious and unwarrantable cuſtome, for ſo main an Article of our Chriſtian faith as is the reſurrection of the dead: or if he thought good to convince ſome of the Corinthians who denyed the reſurrection out of a practice of their own, though erroneous; yet he would have laid ſome kind of aſperſion and tax upon it, and not have alleadged it as a thing lawfull and warrantable without any diſlike at all of it. Thirdly, if it were granted that this cuſtome were as ancient as S. Pauls dayes, and warrantable alſo; yet it doth nothing at all conduce to Saint Pauls end, who had undertaken the proof of the reſurrection of the body. For they who uſe ſuch a cuſtome might eaſily have anſwered, We do not baptize living men in the name and in the behalf of the dead for any other reſpect, then for the ſalvation of their ſouls, and what is that to the reſurrection of their body? Fourthly, others render the words, What ſhall they do which are baptized for dead; or, as dead; and thus they gather the Apoſtles argument: his intent was to prove the reſurrection, hereto he imployeth baptiſme, which as it is ſaid, in thoſe dayes was celebrated by dipping and plunging the whole body in water, in token that we are in death; and the coming forth of the water repreſenteth the reſurrection: the argument then is drawn ab abſurdo: this ſign were in vain and abſurd if there were no reſurrection. For to what end are men baptized for dead, or as dead, to repreſent unto us what we be in death, to wit, the death of ſinne, and ſhall be raiſed from thence to newneſſe of life, if there be no hope of the reſurrection of the body? for this firſt reſurrection ſhould be to little purpoſe, if the ſecond ſhould not one day follow. But neither is this interpretation free from juſt exception; for though baptiſme have relation to the reſurrection, as S. Paul teacheth, Rom. 6. 4. and S. Jerome ſaith truly, non ſolum propter remiſſionem peccatorum baptizamur, ſed etiam propter reſurrectionem carnis noſtræ. And S. Ambroſe. per regenerationem corpora noſtra reſurrectionis gloria inaugurantur; yet this cannot be S. Pauls meaning. For then he would not have ſaid, What ſhall they do which are baptized for dead? but, what ſhall we do who are all baptized as for dead; or being in death, to be raiſed up from thence by the power of baptiſme? Beſides, although in Engliſh and Latine pro mortuis, and for dead; may carry ſuch a meaning; yet the Greek ὑπὲρ τῶν νεκρῶν, cannot carry that ſenſe; ὑπὲρ is never taken for tanquam: but it muſt of neceſſity be rendred either for the dead, or over the dead; not thoſe that are baptized for dead, that is, as dead men. There remaineth yet one interpretation which ſeemeth to be moſt agreeable to the ſcope of the Apoſtle, and the antecedents and conſequents. The interpretation is this, If there be no reſurrection of the dead, what ſhall they do, that is, what ſhall become of them, in what miſerable condition are they who are baptized, viz. with their own bloud, and not only ſuffer grievous torments, but even death it ſelf for the dead; that is, for the cauſe or quarrell of the dead; or inſtead of the dead, for whoſe ſake they choſe rather to ſuffer death, then they would detect them to the heathen; or betray them into the hands of their bloudy perſecutors; or who willingly undergo the baptiſme of bloud for the faith of them that are now dead, & in ſpeciall for maintaining this very Article of the reſurrection of the dead: for which, as Saint Paul, Act. 23. 6. ſo many hundreds of Chriſtians more were called in queſtion, put to tortures, and perſecuted even to death. The force of this argument of the Apoſtle is very evident, and it well agreeth with the argument that enſueth, Why ſtand we in jeopardy every houre? and I proteſt by your rejoycing which I have in Chriſt, I die daily; and If I have fought with beaſts at Epheſus after the manner of men, what advantageth it me if the dead riſe not at all? As for the word baptizing, it is not only ſo taken moſt frequently by the Fathers and School-men, who uſually diſtinguiſh baptiſme into baptiſmus flaminis, fluminis & ſanguinis, of the Spirit, Water, and Bloud; but alſo in ſundry places of Scripture, as Matth. 20. 22.

Mar. 10. 38, 39. Luk. 12. 50. I have a baptiſme to be baptized with, and how am I ſtraitned till it be accompliſhed ?

V. 31. by your rejoyſing] Some read our. It is a kinde of moſt vehement aſſeveration, after the manner of an oath, as if he ſhould have ſaid, As true as my principall joy and glory in this world is in the bleſſing of God upon my miniſtery towards you.

I dye daily] That is, death hangeth over me continually, and I do daily prepare my ſelf for it: or I am not onely in danger of my life every day, but am continually aſſaulted with ſo many croſſes and tribulations that my life is rather a continuall death, then a life unto me, 2 Cor. 11. 23. & deinceps.

V. 32. If after the manner of men] Or, to ſpeak after the manner of men. Either the meaning is, if to ſpeak after the manner of men, that is, if I may now take the priviledge to ſay ſomething of my ſelf, as men do in the like caſe, or if I have fought according to man, that is, as men led by nothing but that which is humane, to wit, vain-glory and ſome other worldly reſpect, not looking by faith at the reſurrection, and at God the rewarder of thoſe, that ſuffer for him at that day: If I ſhould thus have expoſed my ſelf unto ſo apparent danger of death, what benefit would it have been unto me? Or, laſtly, the meaning may be, If I have fought with beaſts after the manner of men; that is, in ſuch ſort as if they had been men, and my Antagoniſts.

fought with beaſts at Epheſus] Either the words are ſpoken figuratively, and by beaſts he meaneth beaſtly minded men, ſuch as the Crecians were whom he calleth evill beaſts and ſlow bellies; Tit. 1. 12. and ſuch as Ignatius ſaith he fought withall from Syria to Rome, θηριομαχῶ ὐκ ὑπὸ τῶν ἀλόγων βιβρωσκόμενος ἀλλ' ὑπὸ ἀνθρωπομόρφων, not being bitten, ſaith he, by brute beaſts, but by ſavage creatures in the ſhape of men. Or the words may be taken properly, as Chryſoſtome, Ambroſe, and others underſtand the words: and Nicephorus in his ſecond book of Eccleſiaſticall hiſtory, cap. 25. reporteth it literally; for certain it is, that the Chriſtians were often damnati ad beſtias, and it was an uſuall ſpeech in Tertullians dayes, Chriſtianos ad Leones: and this literall interpretation affords a ſtronger argument for the reſurrection, which is the ſcope of the text, and better ſorteth with his former arguments, then if we underſtand the words of a metaphoricall fight.

let us eat and drink] See Iſa. 22. 13. That is, let us take our fill of our pleaſures, for after death we can take none: theſe are the ſpeeches of Epicures: the like we find in Anacreon, τὸ δ' αὔριον τίς οἶδε; and mors aurem vellens, Vivite, ait, venio. This Atheiſticall ſpeech of theirs the Apoſtle reproveth in the words following, ſaying, Be not deceived, refuting the verſe of one Poet, by the verſe of another Poet, to wit, Menander, according to whoſe example Arnobius and Lactantius, and many other of the ancient Fathers refell the heathen by the teſtimonies of the better ſort of the heathen, both Philoſophers, Oratours, and Poets.

V. 34. to righteouſneſſe] Gr. righteouſly.

V. 36. Thou fool, that which thou ſoweſt] Thou mighteſt have learned either of theſe, ſaith Paul, (if thou hadſt not befooled thy ſelf) by daily experience: for ſeeds are ſown and rot, and yet notwithſtanding they are ſo farre from periſhing thereby, that contrariwiſe they grow up farre more beautifull; and whereas they are ſown naked, they ſpring up green and freſh: and doth it ſeem incredible to thee that our bodies ſhould riſe from corruption, and that with far more excellent qualities then they had before?

V. 38. But God giveth it a body] We ſee diverſitie both in one and the ſelf-ſame thing, which hath now one form, then another, and yet keepeth his own kinde; as it is evident in a ſeed or grain, which is ſown bare, but ſpringeth up after another ſort; and alſo in divers kinds of one ſelf-ſame ſort, as among beaſts; as alſo among things of divers ſorts, as the heavenly bodies and the earthly, which alſo differ very much one from another; therefore there is no cauſe why we ſhould reject either the reſurrection of the bodies, or the changing of them into a better eſtate as a thing impoſſible or ſtrange.

V. 42. So alſo is the reſurrection of the dead] He maketh three manners of qualities of the body being raiſed, firſt incorruption, becauſe they ſhall be ſound and altogether of a nature that cannot be corrupt; ſecondly glory, becauſe they ſhall be adorned with beauty and honour: thirdly power, becauſe they ſhall continue everlaſting without meat, drink, and all other helps, without which this frail life cannot keep it ſelf from corruption.

V. 44. It is ſown a naturall body] Gr. an animale The Greek word is not φυσικὸν, but ψυχικὸν, not a naturall body, but word for word an animale, or a ſoul body, that is, ſuch a body as is quickned and maintained by ſuch a living ſoul onely as Adams was, of whom we all are born naturally; of a ſoul which ſtandeth in need of the bodies help and refection, by eating, drinking, breathing, and the like; being thus animated thereby, as other living creatures are; a ſoul which produceth no other effect in the body, but only an earthly mutable and mortall life, not able to ſave it from ſickneſſe, age, conſumption and death; much leſſe able to reſtore it to life again after it hath loſt it.

it is raiſed a ſpirituall body] Not in reſpect of ſubſtance, or being: but by reaſon of thoſe qualities which the glorified body ſhall partake of; that is, that beſides the life which they have by their ſouls, they ſhall be ſuſtained without any bodily means, and kept in an eternall, incorruptible, bleſſed and glorious life, by the ſupernaturall vertue of the holy Spirit, infuſed into them by Jeſus Chriſt. Or, by a ſpirituall body, as ſome of the Ancients affirm, he meaneth a body free from carnall deſires, being wholly ſubject to, and ruled by the Spirit.

a naturall body] Gr. an animale.

V. 45. was made a living ſoul] Gr. into a living ſoul. See Gen. 2. 7. To be ſuch a creature as ſhould live a bodily and animale life here by vertue of the ſoul, wherein lieth the fountain of this life, while it is joyned with the body: but yet can by no means of it ſelf confer the divine and ſpirituall life, nor make that its union with the body ſhould remain indiſſoluble, nor joyn the ſame again being once diſſolved.

a quickning ſpirit] Gr. into a quickning ſpirit. The laſt Adam, that is, Jeſus Chriſt the head of all the elect, is ordained by God to be the fountain and author of a ſpirituall and eternall life, by the communication of his Spirit, which reſtoreth life unto the dead, and conſerveth it in them perpetually. As he now after his reſurrection hath a ſpirituall body himſelf, immortall and incorruptible; (Phil. 3. 21.) ſo alſo ſhall he give the like bodies to all ſuch as deſcend from him, not by way of any naturall propagation, but by a ſpirituall regeneration: for each Adam doth communicate to his off-ſpring, the one by nature, the other by grace, that which he hath of his own.

V. 47. the Lord from heaven] The meaning is not, that Chriſt brought his body from heaven, as Adam received his body from the earth, but as Johns baptiſme is ſaid to be from heaven, though neither he nor the water wherewith he baptized deſcended from heaven; but becauſe he received it from God who is in heaven: ſo alſo Chriſt our Lord according to his humane nature is ſaid to be from heaven, becauſe his humane nature was formed by the holy Ghoſt, and united to the Divine, and in this regard his generation was divine and heavenly.

V. 50. Now] Or, But.

that fleſh and bloud cannot inherit the kingdom of God] Some underſtand by fleſh and bloud carnall men and ſuch as walk after the fleſh; and though it be true that ſuch men without repentance and a change of their life ſhall never enter into heaven: yet if we well conſider the antecedents and conſequents, that cannot be the meaning of the Apoſtle in this place; but rather this, ſuch fleſh and bloud as ours is now, maintained by corporall meats and drinks of a mortall and corruptible nature, cannot inherit the kingdom of God, for it followeth neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.

V. 51. We ſhall not all ſleep, &c.] Thoſe that ſhall be alive at Chriſts coming ſhall not ſleep, that is, die after the manner of other men, and reſt in their graves for a time, and then be raiſed up afterward, yet they ſhall be changed, that is, their corruptibility and mortality ſhall be changed into incorruptibility and immortality.

V. 52. at the laſt trump] Or, in the. See Matth. 24. 31. 1 Theſſ. 4. 16. Some by the laſt trump underſtand the voice of the Archangel, or Chriſts proclamation for the raiſing of the dead: but it ſeems more probable, that as the people of God were aſſembled in their ſolemn feaſts and faſts by the ſound of a Trumpet; and as on Mount Sinai the Law was delivered with a moſt loud and dreadfull ſound, ſo alſo the ſummons of all the dead ſhall be with ſome ſuch ſound, which is here called the laſt trump; not as ſome popiſh Divines conceive, becauſe it was the ſeventh Trumpet of thoſe that are mentioned in the Revelation; for the Revelation was written divers yeers after Saint Pauls death. and therefore it is not likely he alludeth to any of thoſe Trumpets there mentioned; but becauſe after it no Trumpet ſhould ever be ſounded.

V. 54. Death is ſwallowed up, &c.] See Iſa. 25. 8. Hoſ. 13. 14.

in victory] Or, into victory.

V. 55. O death, where is thy ſting] This a ſong of triumph ſung by the Apoſtle, raviſhed as it were, at the contemplation of the conqueſt of death; and it ſeemeth to be taken out of the Prophet Hoſea 13. 4.

O grave] Or, hell. The word in the Originall ſignifieth grave, or hell; but it ſhould ſeem that here principally the grave is meant; foraſmuch as the Apoſtle treateth here of the abolition of temporall death.

V. 56. The ſting of death is ſinne] That is, ſinne armeth death againſt us, and is as it were the weapon, whereby we receive our deaths wound.

and the ſtrength of ſinne is the Law] That is, by vertue of the law ſinne bringeth men to death and condemnation; for ſinne is neither known nor imputed to us but by the law: and when the law forbiddeth ought, our corrupt and carnall nature is provoked thereby the more to deſire and luſt after it, Rom. 5.13.

57. through] Or, by.

CHAP. XVI.

Verſ.2. U*Pon the firſt day of the week*] Gr. one of the Sabbaths. Gr. Tec. one of the week. In the Originall one day, an Hebraiſme; ſee the like expreſſion, Gen. 1.5. Dan. 9. 1. Matth.28.1. Luk.24.1. one day of the Sabbaths: Whereby oftentimes the whole week is ſignified, as Mar. 16. 9. Joh. 20. 1. Therefore the Greek Scholiaſt well rendreth μίαν τῶν σαββάτων, τὴν κυριακήν, the Lords Day, on which the Apoſtles were wont to keep their Aſſemblies, Joh. 20. 19. Acts 20. 7. which S. John, Rev.1.10. calleth κυριακὴν, the Lords Day, becauſe it was the day on which he roſe from the dead; and it was by the Church peculiarly dedicated to his honour. Or it is ſo called, as the Sacrament is called cœna Dominica, and the Lords Prayer oratio Dominica, becauſe the Lord inſtituted the one, and commanded the other; When we pray, ſay, our Father, &c. Luk. 11. 2. For ſo Athanaſius ſaith expreſly, ὁ κύριος μετέθηκε τὴν σαββάτον εἰς κυριακὴν, our Lord tranſlated the Sabbath to the Lords Day; whether he did this immediately by himſelf, or by his Apoſtles inſpired by him, all comes to one. See Hilar. Prolog. in Pſal. Nos octavi die quæ E. ipſa prima eſt, perfecti Sabbati feſtivitate lætamur.

by him in ſtore] In the Originall, gathering a treaſure. That is, by little and little, every Lords day adding ſomething to make up a gift worthy the ſending: or it may be the Apoſtle in the uſe of that phraſe would imply that by this collection for the poor, they ſhall gather treaſure in heaven, Matth. 6. 20.

as God hath proſpered him] The originall is, εὐοδῶται, which ſignifieth properly a happy journey or voyage, and by a figure is taken for any kinde of proſperity or welfare; and the Apoſtles meaning is, that every one ought to lay by and contribute according as the Lord hath bleſſed him, 2 Cor. 8. 12.

be no gatherings when I come] Which will not be ſo convenient on the ſudden, nor ſo beneficiall for the poor.

V. 3. your liberality unto Jeruſalem] Gr. gift. In the Originall it is τὴν χάριν ὑμῶν, that is, your grace, or free gift, which word he uſeth rather then ἐλεημοσύνην, your almes, becauſe this was a kinde of holy offering to the Saints, and not a work of ordinary charity towards the poor: and hereby alſo he ſignifieth that this their pious and bountifull inclination to contribute to the Saints, was an effect of Gods grace in the Corinthians, as is expreſly affirmed, 2 Cor. 8. 1, 2. We do you to wit of the grace of God beſtowed upon the Churches of Macedonia, becauſe in great triall of affliction their joy abounded, and their extream povertie abounded to their rich liberalitie.

V. 7. by my way] Gr. in my paſſage.

but I truſt to tarry] Gr. Tec. for I hope to tarry.

V. 9. For a great door and effectuall is opened unto me] A great occaſion or oportunitie of doing much good in my miniſtery. For Epheſus was a City very much frequented as well in regard of the famous Temple of Diana there, as alſo diverſe Schooles and Nurceries of Learning: or the Apoſtle may intimate that ſome great advantage was given to the Goſpel by the converſion of ſome men or women of prime note in that Citie.

and there are many adverſaries] Where there is the greateſt oportunity offered of doing good, there the devill and his inſtruments are buſieſt to ſtop and hinder it. For, as Saint Chryſoſtome well obſerveth, he beſtirreth himſelf moſt where he is like to loſe moſt; and no marvell that the Goſpel findeth many enemies, ſince Truth is a ſtranger upon earth; and Chriſt is ſet for the fall and riſe of many, and for a ſigne which ſhall be ſpoken againſt, Luk. 2. 34.

V. 15. I beſeech you brethren] Gr. but. or, now I beſeech you brethren.

addicted themſelves to] Or, appointed themſelves for.

V. 16. That ye ſubmit your ſelves unto ſuch] Or, be ſubject unto. That you honour and reverence them and be obedient unto them, and be content to be led by them as being my fellow-labourers, and ſuch as have beſtowed themſelves and their goods to help you withall. Heb. 13. 17.

V. 18. acknowledge ye them that are ſuch] That is, take them for ſuch men as they are indeed; or ſhew your ſelves thankfull unto them both in my ſelf and your own.

V. 20. Greet ye one another] See Rom. 16.16.

with an holy kiſſe] Not with an hypocriticall kiſſe as Judas, nor out of a carnall affection, as Prov.7.13. but expreſſe your unfeigned love unto them as they are called to be Saints and fellow-members of one holy myſticall body, whereof Chriſt is the head. See Rom. 16. 16.

V. 22. love not] That is, out of meer malice and deſperate hatred oppoſeth Chriſt and his Goſpel. It is delivered by a Meioſis, or figurative ſpeech, whereby leſſe is ſpoken, and more implied, being a crime of that horrid nature, as the Apoſtle was loth to expreſſe it. 1 King. 21. 10.

anathema, Maran-atha] The former word is Greek, ſignifying accurſed, Rom. 9. 3. Gal. 1. 8. the latter is a Syriack word, ſignifying our Lord cometh. For Maran is our Lord, and atha cometh. It is a word uſed in the greateſt excommunication among the Chriſtians, implying that they ſummoned the excommunicated before the dreadfull Tribunall at the laſt coming of the Sonne of God. See Jude 14, 15. Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thouſands of his Saints, to execute judgement upon all, &c. Others expound it thus. Let him be accurſed even till the coming of the Lord to his deaths day, even for ever. This dreadfull kinde of excommunication which the Apoſtle here calleth Maran-atha, the Jews called Sammatha, Sem ſignifying the name of God Tetragrammaton, or Jehovah, and atha venit, he cometh. Others, from Sam ſignifying there, and mitha mors, their death. Now the Apoſtle thundereth out this dreadfull ſentence of excommunication here againſt the wilfull oppoſers of the Goſpel and impenitent haters of Chriſt, not out of any evill paſſion of minde, but out of an Apoſtolicall ſpirit and holy zeal.

ANNO-

ANNOTATIONS
On the ſecond Epiſtle of Paul the Apoſtle, to the CORINTHIANS.

The ARGUMENT and ANALYSIS.

THe occaſion of writing this ſecond Epiſtle was, to vindicate his Miniſtery from contempt, and his perſon from divers imputations laid upon him, by the falſe Apoſtles: And to this end, he profeſſeth his ſincere affection to the Corinthians, and faithfull carriage in the whole courſe of his Miniſtery; and being inforced thereunto, he relates at large both his ſufferings for Chriſt, and the Viſions and Revelations he received from him.

The Epiſtle conſiſteth of
1. An excuſe of himſelf for not coming to them according to promiſe, Chap. 1.
2. A deprecation for the inceſtuous perſon, (who had been excommunicated) that he might be reſtored again to the Church. Chap. 2.
3. A juſtification of his Miniſtery againſt the calumnies of falſe Teachers, Chap. 3, 4, 5.
4. An Exhortation to Chriſtian duties in generall, Chap. 7. And in particular, to a liberall contribution to the poor Saints at Jeruſalem, Chap. 8, 9.
5. A conteſtation with his emulous adverſaries, and a commemoration of his manifold trials, and the happy iſſue of them, Chap. 10, 11, 12.
6. A denunciation of ſeverity, and the power of his Apoſtleſhip againſt obſtinate ſinners, Chap. 13.

CHAP. I.

Verſ. 1. ANd Timothy our brother] Not according to the fleſh, for we read not that Timothy was of kinne to Saint Paul; but brother in Chriſt in the profeſſion of the Goſpel, and brother alſo in the Miniſtery of the Word, being Saint Pauls companion, and fellow labourer in the office of an Apoſtle and Evangeliſt.

at Corinth] Gr. in Corinth.

with all the Saints] All who embrace the holy profeſſion of Chriſtians, who were admitted into the Church which is the communion of Saints, who attend upon the holy ordinances of God, and follow after peace and holineſſe, without which no man ſhall ſee God. The Greek Scholiaſt noteth, that he uſeth not the word, ὅσιος, but ἅγιος, ἐμφαίνων εἴ τις γεώδης ἐκτὸς δεῖ ταύτης τῆς προσηγορίας, not holy, but unearthly, whereby all thoſe among the Corinthians that were earthly minded, and ſought not the things that are above, but the things that are below, are excluded out of the Apoſtles ſalutation.

V. 3. bleſſed be God] See Epheſ. 1. 3. 1 Pet. 1. 3. God is eſſentially bleſſed, and cannot be made bleſſed or happy by us: this phraſe therefore ſignified no more then praiſed be God: in the Originall, εὐλογητός, that is word for word, let God be well ſpoken of. God bleſſeth us really, but we bleſſe God but verbally, by lauding and magnifying him: or at the moſt, mentally. For as the kingly Prophet profeſſeth, Pſal. 16. 2. our goodneſſe extendeth not to him. The Apoſtle here beginneth with thankſgiving, which notwithſtanding otherwiſe then he was wont, he applieth to himſelf; beginning his Epiſtle with the ſetting forth of the dignity of his Apoſtleſhip, conſtrained as it ſhould ſeem therunto by their importunity, who took occaſion to deſpiſe him, by reaſon of his great croſſes and afflictions: but he anſwereth, that he is not ſo afflicted, but that his comforts do exceed his afflictions, ſhewing the ground of them, even the mercy of God, the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

the Father of mercies] Though judgements proceed from God, as well as mercies, yet he is not in Scripture any where called the Father of judgements, as he is here, the Father of mercies: becauſe mercy and compaſſion ariſeth meerly from himſelf, and he delighteth in it, Mich. 7. 18. but our ſinnes are the cauſe why he inflicteth any judgements upon us. And it is further here to be noted, for the comfort of all thoſe that grone under any heavie croſſe, or ſuffer conflicts with deſperation it ſelf, that the Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is the Father alſo of mercy, and not of mercy only in the ſingular number, but of mercies in the plurall, and which is yet more, the God of all conſolation.

V. 4. Who comforteth us in all our tribulation] He ſaith not, who ſuffereth us not to be afflicted: for he knoweth that it is good for us to be afflicted, as the holy Prophet David profeſſeth; and Chriſt himſelf ſaith; As many as I love, I rebuke and chaſten: Revel. 3. 19. but who comforteth us in our afflictions.

that we may be able to comfort them] Oecumenius out of this paſſage rightly obſerveth the ſingular modeſty of the Apoſtle, who ſaith not, that he received comfort from God in thoſe tribulations which he ſuffered for the Goſpel, for his own ſake, becauſe his patience or diligence in his Miniſtery deſerved any ſuch conſolation; but that God afforded him thoſe comforts for the good of others, that he might be the better enabled to comfort them by thoſe cordials, which he received by the hand of his heavenly Phyſitian.

V. 5. For as the ſufferings of Chriſt abound in us] Gr. unto us. The afflictions and calamities which we ſuffer for Chriſt, or Chriſt ſuffereth in us his members.

V. 6. which is effectuall in the enduring of the ſame ſufferings] Or, is wrought. Although ſalvation be given us freely: yet becauſe there is a way appointed to us, whereby we muſt come to it, which is the race of an innocent and upright life, which we muſt run, therefore we are ſaid to work our ſalvation: Phil. 2. 12. and becauſe it is God only that of his free good will worketh all things in us, therefore is he ſaid to work this ſalvation in us by the ſelf ſame things, by which we muſt paſſe to everlaſting life, after that we have once overcome all incumbrances.

V. 8. For we would not, brethren, have you ignorant] He witneſſeth, that he is not only not aſhamed of his afflictions, but that he deſireth alſo to have all men know the greatneſſe of them, as alſo his delivery from them, although it be not yet perfect.

which came to us in Aſia] Whether he mean by this affliction, the great oppoſition he found by thoſe many adverſaries mentioned by him, 1 Cor. 16. 9. or the great tumult at Epheſus by Demetrius and his fellow craftſmen, Act. 19. or ſome very dangerous ſickneſſe wherewith he was viſited, it is not certain: but here he thought good to acquaint them with it, partly to ſhew his great love to them, in that he concealed nothing from them, which befell him: partly to ſtir them up to give God thanks for his great deliverance.

V. 9. the ſentence of death in our ſelves] Or, anſwer. We reſolved in our ſelves to die, or we gave our ſelves for dead, we were not onely paſt hope in other mens judgements, but even in our own.

V. 10. ſo great a death] He ſaith not, out of ſo great a danger, but ſo great a death, becauſe the danger was ſo great, that it was paſt mans help, or hope of delivery. He taketh the word death, as elſe-where, in death often. (2 Cor. 11. 23.) either for ſuch ſickneſſe, or perſecutions in which there appeared no hope of eſcaping with life, or ſuch torments as were equivalent to the pangs of death.

V. 11. You alſo helping together by prayer for us] Gr. Tee.

we alſo helping together by prayer for you. See Rom. 15.30. That he may not ſeem to boaſt himſelf, he attributeth all to God, and withall acknowledgeth himſelf to be much indebted unto them for their prayers for him.

thanks may be given] The end of the afflictions of the Saints is the glory of God, and therefore they ought to be precious unto us.

V. 12. that in ſimplicity] Gr. Tec. puritie. Here he putteth away another ſlander, to wit, that he was a light man, and inconſtant, ſeeing that he promiſed to come unto them, but brake his word and came not: and firſt he ſpeaketh of the ſimplicity of his minde, and plain and open dealing, which they knew by his ſpeech when he was preſent, and they ought alſo to acknowledge it in his letters being abſent; and moreover he proteſteth that he will never be otherwayes.

and godly ſincerity] Gr. and ſincerity of God. In the Originall, it is the ſinceritie of God, that is, ſuch ſinceritie as is in the God of truth, who is alwayes conſtant and immutable; or, ſincerity before God, or in the ſight of God, not feigned or hypocriticall.

with fleſhly] Gr. in fleſhly.

by the grace] Gr. in the grace.

V. 13. or] Gr. Tec. and.

V. 14. that we are your rejoycing] Pauls rejoycing in the Lord was, that he had gained the Corinthians to the Lord, and they themſelves rejoyced, that they had ſuch an Apoſtle to be their inſtructor, who taught them ſo purely and ſincerely.

V. 15. a ſecond benefit] Or, grace. Some render a double joy, but the word is not, χάραν, but χάριν: and the Apoſtles meaning is, that they might reap a double fruit, both of his letters and of his preſence.

V. 17. purpoſe] Or, conſult, be yea, yea, and nay, nay] Chriſt commandeth, Matth. 5 37. that our communication be yea, yea, and nay, nay; neither doth the Apoſtle here contradict it, but his meaning is, that with him there was not yea, and nay, concerning the ſame thing, that he was not light and inconſtant in his words, as thoſe who affirm and deny with a breath, promiſing and not performing, and changing their purpoſe at every turning of the hand, but according to the ſaying of the Hebrews; etiam juſtorum eſt etiam, & eorum non eſt non, ſo his yea, was alwayes yea, and his nay, nay, not his yea now, his nay at another time, nor his nay yea.

V. 18. true] Gr. faithfull.

word] Or, preaching.

was not] Gr. Tec. is not.

V. 20. For all the promiſes of God in him are yea] God purpoſing to be glorified and perfectly acknowledged for his truth, in the accompliſhment of his promiſes in Chriſt, preached by us, hath withall given unto us the Apoſtles, ſuch an infallible guidance of his Spirit, that the truth of our preaching might anſwer to the truth of Chriſt his practiſe, even as himſelf did anſwer exactly by his performance unto the promiſes of God.

and in him amen] Gr. Tec. therefore alſo they are by him amen. As Chriſt is the ſame in Gods promiſes which are unchangeable, ſo are all ſuch promiſes touching our ſalvation, yea, that is, truth; and amen, that is, aſſurance. For ſo much as God in the new covenant maketh no promiſes of ſalvation, nor fulfilleth any but in Chriſt, and by Chriſt.

unto the glory of God by us] Gr. to God for glory by us.

V. 21. hath anointed us] With the grace of his holy Spirit. So Saint John alſo ſpeaketh, 1 Joh. 2. 27. But the anointing which you have received of him abideth in you, and the ſame anointing teacheth you of all things.

V. 22. Who hath alſo ſealed us] He wrought the ſame in us, in regard of our Apoſtleſhip, by the vertue of the ſame Spirit, that ratifieth both in us and in all his faithfull children, his vocation and election, by the grace of regeneration, ſigning us for his as with a ſeal, 2 Tim. 2. 19. and as by a pledge aſſuring us of our future inheritance.

earneſt of the Spirit] That is, the holy Spirit, which is unto us as an earneſt, whereby God aſſureth us, that he will pay as it were the whole ſumme of his promiſes. For an earneſt is as a pledge, whereby we confirm a bargain, or a piece of money, whereby we aſſure the payment of the whole. The firſt gift therefore of the Spirit, and of life, is a pledge of our whole inheritance; Inſomuch, that this anointing, ſealing, and pledging, all ſerve to one and the ſame end.

V. 23. I call God for a record upon my ſoul] That is, againſt my ſelf, and to the danger of my own life. So the Hebrews ſay, to carry our ſoul in our hands, and Xenarchus in Athenæus uſeth the ſame phraſe, ἐν τῇ χειρὶ τὴν ψυχὴν ἔχειν, whereby they ſignifie that the life is in great danger. This is then a deep adjuration, whereby the Apoſtle aſſureth them even by oath, that he did not onely not change his purpoſe of coming to them out of levitie, but rather that he came not to them for this cauſe, that he might not be conſtrained to deal more ſharply with them being preſent, then he would.

V. 24. Not for that we have dominion] He removeth all ſuſpicion of arrogancy, declaring that he ſpeaketh not what he ſaid before as a Lord over them, but as a ſervant appointed of God to comfort them.

but are helpers of your joy] He ſetteth the joy and peace of conſcience, which God is the Author of, againſt tyrannous fear, and withall ſheweth the end of the Goſpel, which is peace and joy in the holy Ghoſt.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 1. IN heavineſſe] Cauſing grief amongſt you, which he ſhould have done, if he had come unto them before they had repented them.

V. 4. not that you ſhould be grieved] The Apoſtle in ſharply reproving them, though he could not but make them ſorry, yet that was not his intent, but to ſhew his affectionate love towards them, and care of their ſalvation; that by ſorrowing after a godly manner they might receive ſpirituall conſolation. For as worldly joy ends in ſorrow, ſo godly ſorrow ends in joy; whence is that exhortation of S. Jerome to the penitent, Doleat & de dolore gaudeat; Let him grieve, and rejoyce for ſuch grief.

V. 5. But in part: that I may not overcharge you all] Gr. overburthen. The words may carry different interpretations, either he hath not grieved me in my own particular, but as a part and member of the Church, whom that inceſtuous perſon hath offended: or he hath not wholly grieved me, as if you were all delinquents. For although before I knew of your deteſtation of his crime, I wrote unto you in generall tearmes, 1 Cor. 5. 2. Ye are puffed up, and have not rather ſorrowed, that he which hath done this thing might be put from among you. Yet now ſince I have proof of your love and obedience, and you have cleared your ſelves by excommunicating him, I have cauſe to ſorrow but in part, only for his ſake who was guilty, not for you all, who have cleared your ſelves that you are no upholders or maintainers of him.

V. 6. puniſhment] Or, cenſure.

of many] Gr. by.

V. 7. to forgive him, and comfort him] Or, gratifie. Releaſe him of the ſentence of excommunication, and receive him again into the Church, and upon his unfeigned tokens of repentance, miniſter a word of comfort to him, that he be not ſwallowed up in the gulph of deſpair.

V. 8. confirm your love towards him] That at my entreaty you would declare by the conſent of the whole Church, that you take him again for a brother.

V. 10. forgive any thing] Or, grant any thing of favour; or, freely give.

to whom I forgave it] Gr. Tec. what I forgave.

in the perſon of Chriſt] Or, in the ſight. Although Ferrandus the Deacon, in his Epiſtle to Egippius, taketh the perſon of Chriſt for the hypoſtaſis, which is one in Chriſt, though he conſiſt of two natures, ſaying, ſi quid donavi, donavi propter vos in perſonâ Chriſti, vult probare unitatem perſonæ; nam melius perſonas diceret ſi vellet in Chriſto ſignificare duas ſubſtantias: yet Oecumenius his interpretation is more agreeable to the ſcope of the Apoſtle in this place, ὡς τοῦ χριστοῦ κελεύοντος, in the perſon of Chriſt, that is, in ſtead of Chriſt, or by Chriſts authority and command, who ſaid, As my Father ſent me, I ſend you: whoſe ſins ye remit; they are remitted, Joh. 20. 23.

V. 11. Leſt Satan ſhould get advantage of us] Leſt Satan over-reach us. The Greek word, πλεονεκτιω, ſignifieth to have more then belongs to one, and it is commonly uſed of the covetous: the compariſon is taken from the greedy Merchant, that ſeeketh and taketh all oportunities to beguile and deceive others. The meaning then is, that we give not Satan an occaſion by our immoderate rigour to ſnatch away from us, or ruine any member of the Church, to make the Goſpel and the miniſtery thereof more hatefull and to pervert the holy uſe of diſcipline, which conſiſteth in the temper of charity, and hath no other end then the ſalvation of the ſinner.

ignorant of his devices] Or, plots, or, machinations. Machinations or ſtratagems, of which Acontius hath written a ſingular book: The particular wiles to which the Apoſtle here pointeth ſeem to be theſe, whereby he endeavoureth to gain upon the Church both wayes, both by remiſſeneſſe of Church diſcipline, and too much ſeveritie: by remiſſeneſſe to rock the ſinner aſleep in ſecurity, and by too much ſeverity to plunge him in deſpair.

V. 12. was opened] Gr. being.

V. 14. Now] Or, But.

cauſeth us to triumph] It is word for word, θριαμβεύει ἡμᾶς, triumpheth us, that is, ſubdueth us to the Goſpel, and maketh us obedient thereunto. So ſaith Livie, triumphavit Mummius Achaos, Mummius triumphed the Acheans, that is, triumphed over thoſe of Achaia. Or, triumphare facit, cauſeth us to triumph over the world, the fleſh, and the devill; or giveth us conqueſt in every place where we preach his word, to bring all countries to the obedience of faith.

the ſavour of his knowledge [He alludeth to the oyntment of the Prieſts and the ſweet incenſe they offered: and withall intimateth the farre ſpreading of the Goſpel, which like a ſweet odour was blown by the breath of the Apoſtles, preaching unto all parts of the world.

V. 15. unto God a ſweet ſavour of Chriſt] That is, pleaſing and acceptable to God, in regard that by us is made manifeſt the mercy of God.

in them that are ſaved, &c.] The Goſpell is preached indifferently to all manner of perſons, but it worketh in a very different manner: foraſmuch as being received by the faithfull, it produceth in them life and ſalvation, as containing all the cauſes thereof in it ſelf, but being rejected by unbelievers, it becometh in them the occaſion of a greater condemnation, and maketh their perdition inevitable. As the ſame light of the Sun, ſaith Chryſoſtome, offendeth weak eyes, but recreateth and comforteth the ſtrong ſighted; and as the ſame Star is to ſome φωσφόρος, to others ἕσπερος, to ſome a morning Star bringing light and day, and to others an evening Star bringing darkneſſe and night: So the Goſpell is a comfort to ſome, and a terrour to others, bringing eternall life and ſalvation to ſome, but by accident, everlaſting darkneſſe and damnation to others, according to the Prophecie of Simeon, Luke 2. 34. Behold, this child is ſet for the fall and riſing again of many in Iſrael.

V. 16, ſavour of death unto death] Gr. Tec. out of. A deadly ſavour: not as if the Goſpell of its own nature breathed out death to any; for it is the Miniſtery of life, 2 Cor. 5. 6, 7. and the power of God to ſalvation unto all believers, Rom. 1. 16. but by reaſon that unbelievers and impenitent ſinners, wilfully ſet themſelves againſt it, and thereby draw upon themſelves the heavier judgement of God, Joh. 3. 36. 1 Pet. 2. 7, 8.

ſufficient] Or, fit.

V. 17. which corrupt the Word of God] Or, deale deceitfully with See Chap. 4. 2. Word for word, καπηλεύοντες, play the huckſters with the word of God; So Ennius ſaith elegantly, cauponari bellum, & Herodian, cauponari pacem, & Plato, καπηλεύειν τὰ μαθήματα, and Nazianzen calleth deceitfull Teachers, χριστοκαπήλους, and Ignatius χριστεμπόρους. By this phraſe he taxeth the falſe Apoſtles with two grievous crimes: firſt, that they adulterated and ſophiſticated the word of God by mingling Philoſophicall errours or humane traditions with it, as crafty Merchants ſophiſticate their wines by mingling them with water or other liquors: ſecondly, that they ſet the word of God as it were to ſale, and handled it craftily and coveteouſly, not ſincerely as they ought to have done in the ſight of God.

CHAP. III.

Verſ. 2. YE are our epiſtle] As elſewhere he calleth them the Seal of his Apoſtleſhip, ſo here his commendatory Epiſtle, δεῖγμα γὰρ ἀρετῆς τοῦ διδασκάλου ἡ τῶν μαθητῶν εὐδοκίμησις, the profiting of the Scholar is a commendation of his teacher. What need then the Apoſtle commendatory letters to the Corinthians, who themſelves are his commendatory Letters to all Churches, by their great growth in grace, and knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt?

V. 3. are manifeſtly] Gr. being manifeſtly.

to be the epiſtle] Gr. that ye are the epiſtle.

written not with ink, but with the Spirit] The tables were not written with ink, but with the finger of God. In this part therefore of the verſe, he oppoſeth not the Epiſtle of Chriſt to the writing in the Tables of ſtone, but to ordinary letters which are written with ink.

not in tables of ſtone] He alludeth by the way to the compariſon of the outward miniſtery of the Prieſthood of Levi with the miniſtery of the Goſpel, which he handleth afterwards more at large.

V. 4. And ſuch truſt] This boldneſſe we ſhew, and thus deſervedly may we boaſt of the fruit and worthineſſe of our miniſtery.

V. 5. to think any thing] Or, to reaſon. or, conclude. Rom. 3. 28. Any thing which belongeth to the way of Piety and true worſhip of God, as S. Auſtine expoundeth, Libro de dono Perſev. c. 13. or as the Greek Scholiaſt expoundeth, We are not ſufficient of our ſelves, ſo much as to apprehend and conceive the worth of the miniſtery of the Goſpell; much leſſe to ſound the bottom of the deep myſteries of ſalvation: Without me, ſaith Chriſt, John. 15. 5. ye can do nothing: So far are we from doing any good work of our ſelves, that we cannot think a good thought.

but our ſufficiency is of God] In that we are fit and meet to make other men partakers of ſo great a grace.

V. 6. made us able Miniſters] Or, fit. or, meet. He amplifieth his miniſtery, that is, the miniſtery of the Goſpel, comparing it with the miniſtery of the law; which he conſidereth in the perſon of Moſes, by whom the law was given, againſt whom he ſetteth Chriſt the Authour of the Goſpel, Now the compariſon is taken from the very ſubſtance of the miniſtery. The Law is, as it were, a writing of it ſelf dead and without efficacy, but the Goſpel a new covenant, as it were the very vertue of God, in renewing, juſtifying and ſaving of men. The Law propoundeth death, accuſing all men of unrighteouſneſſe; the Goſpell offereth and giveth righteouſneſſe and life. The governance of the Law ſerved for a time, the Goſpell remaineth to the end of the world; and therefore what is the glory of that in compariſon of the Majeſtie of this?

not of the letter] That is, which doth not only conſiſt in words and writing, without imparting any inward and ſpirituall vertue to effect and work the ſame in men, which it doth repreſent to them; but hath really joyned with it the vertue of the Holy Spirit, working in the heart, and there ratifying and lively imprinting what the ſame propounds and promiſeth.

the letter killeth] Though the Law ſhewed the way to life, yet the letter thereof is ſaid here to kill, becauſe it doth not communicate ability to corrupt man to keep the ſame, nor makes any promiſe to forgive the ſinne to him that treſpaſſeth, but curſeth every one that abideth not in all things which are written in the Law; convincing us of our tranſgreſſion, and conſequently of our guilt of death, which is threatned to the tranſgreſſours; for which cauſe it is alſo called, The miniſtery of condemnation.

but the ſpirit giveth life] Or, quickeneth. The Goſpel doth not only ſhew the way to life and ſalvation by faith in Jeſus Chriſt, but is likewiſe accompanied with the power of the Holy Spirit, whereby faith is wrought and kept in the Elect, and they themſelves are raiſed up from the death of ſin, and quickned to the life of holineſſe.

V. 7. miniſtration] Or, miniſterie.

written] Gr. in letters.

glorious] Gr. in glory.

for the glory of his countenance] The word glory, betokeneth a brightneſſe, which was bodily in Moſes, but is ſpiritually in Chriſt.

V. 8. the miniſtration of the Spirit] Or, miniſterie. That is, of the Goſpell, whereby God offereth, yea, and giveth his Spirit, not as a dead thing, but as a quickening Spirit, working life.

glorious] Gr. in glory.

V. 9. miniſtration] Or, miniſterie.

miniſtration of righteouſneſſe] Or, miniſterie. Viz. of Chriſt, which being imputed to us as our own, we are not only not condemned, but alſo we are crowned as righteous.

V. 10 had no glory in this reſpect] That is, had not glory comparatively; as ſilver is not precious in compariſon of gold, nor precious ſtones bright in compariſon of the Stars, nor the light of the Moon in compariſon of the Sun. As, ſaith Oecumenius, the light of a Candle ſeemeth moſt bright in the night, but in the mid-day is ſo obſcured, that it deſerveth not the name of a light; ſo is the light of the Law obſcured in ſuch ſort by the light of the Goſpell, that it ſeems to have no light or glory at all.

reſpect] Gr. part.

V. 11. was glorious] Gr. by glory.

is glorious] Gr. is in glory.

V. 12. plainneſſe] Or, boldneſſe. or, freedome.

V. 13. And not as Moſes, &c.] See Exod. 34. 33. He expoundeth by the way the allegory of Moſes his covering, which was a token of the darkneſſe and weakneſſe that is in men, whoſe eyes were rather dazled by the bright ſhining of the Law then lightened: which covering was taken away by the coming of Chriſt, who lighteneth the hearts, and turneth them to the Lord, that we may be brought from the ſlavery of this blindneſſe, and ſet in the liberty of the light, by the vertue of Chriſts ſpirit.

to the end of that which is aboliſhed] Gr. Tec. the face. or ſight. Could not ſee the mark and main ſcope of Moſes, or dive into the bottom of his miniſtery.

V. 14. But their minds were blinded] This is an anſwer to a ſecret Objection, whence it comes that the people of Iſrael do not now believe the manifeſtation of the end of the Law, made By the Goſpel: Why do they ſee nothing in the Goſpel, which is ſo clear? The Apoſtle anſwereth, that there is a Vail hanging over, not the Goſpel, but their hearts, by a malicious and wilfull obduration, John 9. 39. Rom. 11. 7, 25. As if he ſhould ſay, the light ſhines indeed, but thoſe that ſhould behold it ſhut their eye-lids againſt it.

which vaile is done away in Chriſt] The Vaile is taken away by the knowledge and Spirit of Chriſt, and when they ſhall be converted into Chriſt, they ſhall like us be brought to the right underſtanding of the Law; and be fully convinced in their hearts, that the Law was given to no ſuch end, but that they muſt ſeek the righteouſneſſe by faith in Chriſt, without themſelves, Rom. 10. 4. Gal. 3. 24.

V. 15. is upon] Gr. lyeth upon.

V. 17. Now the Lord is that ſpirit] Or, But. Chriſt is that Spirit which taketh away that covering, by his working in our hearts, whereunto alſo the Law it ſelf called us, though in vain, becauſe it ſpeaketh to dead men till the Spirit quicken us.

where] Gr. Tec. to whom.

there is liberty] From the yoke and burden of the Ceremoniall, and curſe alſo of the morall.

V. 18. But we all with open face,&c.] Gr. uncovered. Going forwards in the allegory of the covering,he compareth the Goſpell to a Glaſſe, which though it be moſt bright and radiant, yet it doth not only not dazle their eyes that look on it, as the law did,but alſo transformeth them with its beams,ſo that they be alſo partakers of the glory and ſhining of it to lighten others; as Chriſt ſaid to his Diſciples, Ye are the light of the world, Matth. 5. 14.

are changed into the ſame image] As, ſaith Oecumenius, Silver ſet againſt the Sunne, by the beams thereof caſt upon it, becomes it ſelf radiant; ſo we being enlightned by the Spirit, caſt light upon others. Now that inſtead of the Veil of thoſe Moſaicall figures, God hath given to his Church the clear glaſſe of his Goſpell, all the faithfull do freely behold there by faith the glorious light of his mercy, truth, and the reſt of his divine attributes; and by meanes thereof they are made like unto him in the glory of holineſſe,and in newneſſe of life. Moſes put away the Veil that hung over his face,when he appeared before the Lord, and by this beholding of God had his face lightened, and ſhining with beams; ſo have we now a free acceſſe unto God by the Goſpell, which is not as a dark Veil, but a pure reſplendent glaſſe wherein the glorious countenance of God is ſeen by us, and we are thereby renewed, and as it were glorified in our minds according to the ſame image of God.

from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord] Or, of the Lord the Spirit. By the Spirit of the Lord,or by the Lord the Spirit, by the Spirit who is the Lord; that is, one of the ſame being and ſubſtance with the Father and the Son. This Spirit worketh in us by degrees, and this work of his is ſtill in progreſſe here in this life, untill we attain to the perfection of the life to come; and as we grow from grace to grace, by this ſpirit of ſanctification in us, ſo alſo from glory to glory, till we be perfectly renewed, according to the image of God, in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe.

CHAP. IIII,

Verſ. 1. S*Eeing we have this miniſterie*] Gr. having this miniſtery.

we faint not] Gr. we ſhrinck not back, or, grow weary and ſlothfull. Though we are broken in pieces with heart-griefs and calamities, yet we yeeld not, notwithſtanding all the diſcouragements we find in the world, we ſlack not our pace, nor remit any thing of our zeal for Gods glory, which like fire, is kindled more, and not at all quenched by the blaſts of oppoſition.

V. 2. hidden things of diſhoneſty] Gr. ſhame. All ſecret underhand dealing, all lurking holes to hide ſhameleſſe practices. As we preach the clear and evident truth of the Goſpell, ſo our carriage is open and faire, not hating the light, as they who do evill.

not handling the word of God deceitfully] They handle the Word deceitfully, who either corrupt it by mingling falſe doctrines or humane traditions with it; or thoſe who preach the pure and ſincere truth, but not ſincerely ſeeking by the preaching thereof their own glory or gain, as did the falſe Apoſtles, Phil. 1. 15,16.

V. 3. But if our Goſpel be hid] Becauſe he had ſaid before in the laſt Verſe of the former Chapter, We with open face behold the glory of the Lord,here he prevents an objection which might be made againſt him, If you preach the Goſpell with ſuch plainneſſe and ſincerity, delivering the naked truth nakedly, how cometh it to paſſe that ſo few are enlightned by your preaching, and that the Goſpel is hid to ſo many? He anſwereth, that the fault is not in the preachers, but in themſelves, whoſe eyes Satan hath pluckt out, or blinded ſo, that they can ſee nothing, though it be never ſo clear and evident in it ſelf.

that are loſt] Or, that periſh.

V. 4. the god of this world] S. Auſtine in his book de Spiritu & lit. ad Marcel. underſtandeth by the god of this world, the true God, who juſtly blindeth the minds of infidels, non infundendo malitiam, ſed ſubtrahendo gratiam, not by infuſing any malice into them, but by taking away from them, or not giving unto them enlightning grace. And true it is, that as obduration of the heart, ſo excecation of the underſtanding is in Scripture attributed to the true God, who juſtly inflicteth them as puniſhments upon them, who wilfully oppoſe the light of his truth, and not only reſiſt, but deſpight the Spirit of grace; yet by comparing this Text of the Apoſtle with John 12. 31. The Prince of this world is caſt out, and Epheſ. 6. 12. it ſhould ſeem rather,that the Apoſtle by the god of this world, underſtandeth Satan, who by the juſt judgement of God hath gotten ſuch a dominion over unbelievers, as if he were their God, and he uſurpeth the honour and ſoveraignty of God, and they readily obey and ſerve him as their Lord and God. And it is worth our obſervation, that the Apoſtle ſtyleth him not the god of the world ſimply, but the god of this world, verſ. 12. which wholly lyeth in wickedneſſe, 1 John 5.19.

the light of the glorious Goſpell of Chriſt] Gr. the light of the Goſpell of the glory of Chriſt. Wherein is manifeſted the Majeſtie of the perſon and reign of Chriſt,the ſoveraign excellency of his benefits,and the divine efficacie of his Word and Spirit in us.

the image of God] In whom the Father ſetteth forth himſelf to be ſeen and beholden, who is the ingraven form of his perſon, Heb. 1. 3. And this is ſpoken of him, not only in regard of his divine nature, being the eternall Word and Wiſdome of the Father; but alſo in regard that he is God, revealed in the fleſh, by whom the glory and righteouſneſſe, grace, wiſdome, and power of God is revealed unto us in the Goſpel, as in a glaſſe, Col. 1. 15.

V. 5. we preach not our ſelves] We make no oſtentation of our gifts, nor in the exerciſing of our Miniſtery ſeek our own glory, but Chriſts; neither carry we our ſelves as Lords over your faith, but as your ſervants in and for him, Chap. 1.24.

V. 6. commanded] Gr. ſaid to.

the light of the knowledge] That being lightened of God we ſhould in like ſort give that light to others, as a candle tinded giveth light to the whole room.

in the face of Jeſus Chriſt] Or, in the perſon of Jeſus Chriſt. The glory of God ſhined in the face of Jeſus Chriſt; for as S. John affirmeth, chap. 1. ver. 14. The Word became fleſh, and dwelt among us, and we ſaw his glory, as the glory of the only begotten Sonne of the Father, full of grace and truth, Or, ἐν προσώπῳ, in the perſon, that is, in the room, ſtead,name, and authority of Chriſt, whoſe Ambaſſadours we are.

V. 7. in earthen veſſels] Or, in veſſels of ſhell. He here taketh away a ſtumbling block, to wit, that the Apoſtles were vile, weak, frail and miſerable men; Paul anſwereth, that he and his fellow Apoſtles were as it were earthen Veſſels of ſmall price, and ſubject to many knocks and falls, yet that there was moſt excellent treaſure of wiſdome and knowledge in them. Some conceive that the Apoſtle alludeth to glaſſe Lanthorns;in which lights are carried, and that he hereby intimateth, that they hid not their light, but that it ſhined through them as a Candle doth through a Lanthorn. If we render ὀστράκινον, Veſſell of ſhell,then the Apoſtle manifeſtly alludeth to precious Pearl which is found in ſhels; the pearl is that rich pearl mentioned in Matth 13. 46. which the Merchant ſold all he had to buy; the ſhell or mother of pearl, are the Apoſtles and Paſtours.

V. 8. yet not diſtreſſed] In the Originall στενοχωρούμενος, ſignifieth not every preſſure, but to be ſo preſt by a throng in a narrow place, ſo that we cannot poſſibly get out; the meaning of the Apoſtle is then, that though they were laid in wait for, and beſet on all ſides, and were enforced to ſtrive and ſtruggle with all their might, yet that they eſcaped, and that God gave them an iſſue with the temptation how great ſoever it were, 1 Cor. 10. 13.

not in deſpaire] Or, not altogether without help, or means.

V. 10. dying of the Lord Jeſus] Or, mortifying. That is, in our ſufferings, we repreſent the death and paſſion of Jeſus Chriſt.

V. 11. For we which live] Which live that life, to wit, by the Spirit of Chriſt among ſo many and ſo great miſeries.

V. 12. death worketh in us] A paſſionate concluſion: as if he ſhould ſay, We dye that you may live by our death; we venture into all dangers for the building of the Church ſake, and ceaſe not to confirm all the faithfull by the examples of our patience; and you by all our afflictions and dangers of death are ſtrengthened more and more in the life of the Spirit: ſo that even all theſe ſtraights we are put unto, turn to your advantage, and are means to maintain the life of grace in you here, and further your eternall life and happineſſe hereafter. Or for the preſent I do principally prove the effects of my conformity to the death of Chriſt by the afflictions that I ſuffer in his behalf, whereof it ſeems you have no ſhare, nor ſenſe, ye only partake of his life and glory, being exempted from the like calamities, and abounding in all manner of bleſſings; and ſo the latter words carry in them a cloſe, but ſharp reproof.

V. 13. We] Gr. But, or, And.

We having the ſame ſpirit] He ſheweth that he and his fellow Apoſtles dye in a ſort to purchaſe life to others, but yet notwithſtanding they are partakers of the ſame life with them, becauſe they have the ſame faith by the inſpiration of the ſame Spirit, and believe that which they propound to others to believe, to wit, that they alſo ſhall be ſaved together with them in Chriſt.

I believed] See Pſal. 116. 10.

V. 15. that the abundant grace] When it ſhall pleaſe God to deliver me, and reſtore me to you, that exceeding benefit which ſhall be powred upon me, ſhall in like ſort redound to the glory of God, redound] Gr. abound.

V. 16. faint not] Or, ſlack not. See ver. 1.

yet the inward man is renewed day by day] That is, gathereth new ſtrength (Eſa. 40.31.) that the outward man be noto vercome with the miſeries, which come freſhly one on the neck of another, being maintained and upholden with the ſtrength of our inward man. By the outward man he underſtandeth our bodies; or rather our perſons in the natutall eſtate and condition of this life, which do decay and conſume away by continuall ſufferances: by the inward man he underſtandeth our ſoules, or perſons, conſidered according to our ſpirituall eſtate, which cannot be diſcerned by any bodily eye, but onely by the light of the ſpirit: this inward man renewed by the Spirit of God is ſtrengthned and confirmed more by daily preſſures and tribulations; as the Palme-tree groweth the higher, and flouriſheth the more, the more burthens are laid upon it; and as Anteus in his wreſtling with Hercules, is ſaid by the Poets to gain new ſtrength by every fall on the earth.

V. 17. light affliction] Afflictions of the godly are not light in themſelves, but comparatively, to the infinite and eternall weight of heavenly glory, which our affliction worketh for us not by any merit of ours, but out of Gods meer grace for Chriſt his ſake. Rom. 8. 17, 18. Or they are called light, becauſe they lightly and ſpeedily paſſe away; or becauſe God maketh them ſeem light unto us by the ſtrong ſupport and comfort of his Spirit, Rom. 8. 37.

for us] Or, to us.

eternall weight of glory] The Apoſtle ſeemeth to allude to the Hebrew word, which ſignifieth both weight and glory: to gold and precious things the weight addeth to the value, as the more maſſie and weighty a crown is, the more it is worth; and he implieth that we ſhall be at the laſt crowned with ſuch a crown of infinite glory, which even in this world we lively apprehend by faith, and the contemplation thereof taketh off all the conſideration, love and eſteem of all the things in this world, which are ſeen, our heart being fixed on the eternall things in heaven, which are not ſeen.

CHAP. V.

Verſ. 1. H*ouſe of this tabernacle*] S. Paul who was a Tentmaker elegantly compareth our body to a Tent, and that in many regards. 1. A tent or Tabernacle is eaſily raiſed up, and as eaſily taken down and ſpoiled; ſo is our body by ſickneſſe and outward violence, Job 4. 19. 2. A Tent is an habitation proper for pilgrims or ſouldiers which continue not in the ſame place; and ſuch are all Chriſtians whileſt they live upon earth, ſtrangers and pilgrims, (Pſal. 39. 12.) and ſouldiers fighting under Chriſts banner, Job 7. 1. 3. A Tent is a moveable houſe or habitation; ſo are our bodies, which are now like Tents pitched upon the earth, but ſhall be hereafter tranſported into heaven. 4. Tents are foule without, and ſoil'd with wind and weather, but have precious things within: ſo the body and outſide of a Chriſtian is but vile and contemptible, but his inſide is moſt beautifull and glorious (Pſal. 45. 13.) with ſpeciall treaſures of ſpirituall graces; like the Tents of Solomon, (Cant. 1. 5. which were moſt richly furniſhed within. 5. A Tent is deſtroyed not by the conſuming of the parts, but by taking them aſunder: ſo the death of the body is nothing but the diſſolution of the parts whereof man is compoſed, and taking aſunder the ſoul from the body.

eternall in the heavens] The grave is ſometime called οἰκία αἰώνιος, domus ſeculi, or domus aeterna, a long home, Eccl. 12. 5. or houſe of eternity, becauſe the bodies or ſomething of them remains long there, even to the end of the world: but our habitation in heaven is moſt truly and properly called an eternall houſe, which though ſome take here for the cœleſtiall glory, wherewith our immortall bodies ſhall be glorified at the laſt day: yet ſeeing the Apoſtle doth here expreſſely ſpeak of a building or houſe, which we ſhall have of God, after this tabernacle is diſſolved, as ſoon as we ſhall go to dwell without our bodies, as appears by the 6. and 8. verſes, it may as fitly be underſtood of the cœleſtiall glory in generall, wherewith the ſoul is adorned and clothed as it were, as ſoon as ſhe leaveth off this tabernacle, and wherewith the body alſo ſhall be clothed hereafter being raiſed from the dead.

V. 2. which is from heaven] He calleth this houſe heavenly, not that the ſubſtance of it is heavenly, but for the glory of it, and becauſe it ſhall be incorruptible as the cœleſtiall bodies are.

V. 3. If ſo be that being clothed] Or, ſince that. We do not without cauſe deſire to be clad with this heavenly houſe, that is, with that everlaſting and immortall glory as with a garment. For when we depart hence, we ſhall not remain naked, having once caſt off the covering of this body: but we ſhall take our bodies again, which ſhall put on as it were another garment beſides, and therefore we ſigh not for the wearineſſe of this life, but for the deſire of a better.

V. 4. do grone] There is a double grone, one of nature, from the apprehenſion and fear of death, another of grace, out of an earneſt deſire of eternall life, which the Spirit kindleth in us.

being burdened] Both with the burden of ſinne, and of manifold heavy croſſes laid upon us.

not for that we would be unclothed, but clothed upon] Gr. for that we would not be. The Saints deſire ſo to be clothed with a cœleſtiall body, that they put not off their mortall body, but have the immortall glory put upon it, as an upper robe; which ſhall be their happineſſe, who ſhall live in the body till Chriſt come, for they ſhall not die, but be changed, as the Apoſtle teacheth us, 1 Cor. 15. 51.

that mortalitie] Or, that which is mortall.

V. 5, wrought us for the ſelfſame thing] The Apoſtle taketh a metaphor from Goldſmiths, who burniſh gold, or Carvers and Engravers, who work upon wood or ſtone, and make it fit for that for which it is naturally unapt: ſo doth God by his Spirit work upon us, and make us fit for that by his Spirit of which naturally we are moſt uncapable, to wit, an immortall and ſpirituall body.

V. 6. we are alwaies confident] Alwaies reſolved with a quiet and ſober mind, to ſuffer what danger ſoever, nothing doubting but our end ſhall be happy.

V. 7. For we walk by faith] The faith of thoſe things we hope for, as not having them preſently in our view.

V. 8. We are confident] Gr. but, or, and, We are in ſuch ſort bold, and do ſo paſſe in our pilgrimage with a valiant reſolution and quiet mind, that yet notwithſtanding we had rather depart home to the Lord; and ſeeing it is ſo with us; we ſtrive to live ſo, that both in this our pilgrimage here we may pleaſe him, and that at length we may be received home to him.

V. 9. labour], Or, endeavour.

V. 10, For we muſt all appeare] See Rom. 14. 10. That no man might think it indifferently to pertain unto all what he ſpake of that heavenly glory, he addeth that every one ſhall firſt render an account of his pilgrimage after he is departed from hence. The word in the Originall φανερωθῆναι, ſignifieth more then to appear in perſon, as thoſe do who are cited into a Court; it implies to be laid open and to have our whole life ript up, and all our thoughts, words, and works diſcloſed and diſcovered before men and Angels, Rom. 2. 16. Revel. 2. 23. and 20. 12.

done in his body] Gr. by his body. That is, in this bodily life of ours, or by the body; for whileſt we live here our ſoul worketh by the body, and ſeeing the body is, as Methodius ſpeaketh elegantly, σύζυγον τῆς ψυχῆς, the colleague of the ſoule, it is juſt with God that the body ſhould be partaker with the ſoule, either in immortall bliſſe, or endleſſe torment, according as they have both joyned in this life either in the ſervice of God, or in the ſervice of Satan and this wicked world.

whether it be good or bad] Whether good, the reward of the ſame by grace; or bad, the recompence thereof by deſert. Eccleſ. 12. 14.

V. 11. Knowing therefore the terrour of the Lord] The dreadfull Tribunall of Chriſt, the Judge of quick and dead, before whom we muſt give a ſtrict account of all our actions, ſpeeches, yea and our inward thoughts, intentions and affections.

V. 12. glory on our behalf] Or, rejoyce for us.

which glory] Or, rejoyce.

which glory in appearance] Gr. in the face. In outward diſguiſing and that coloured ſhew of mans wiſdome and eloquence, and not in true godlineſſe which is ſeated in the heart; or who glory in the multitude of their followers, and applauſe of their hearers, but want the teſtimony of a good conſcience.

V. 13. whether we be beſides our ſelves] Either the meaning is, if we are in our extaſies and raptures it is to God, that is, in our private devotions when we ſpeak to him: but to you we ſpeak alwaies words of ſobriety and in a moderate temper: or he hath reference to the commendation of his Apoſtleſhip. For ſo much as it ſeemeth to be the part of mad and fooliſh men to commend themſelves, and then the meaning is, that if we exceed at any time, and are ſo tranſported in the contemplation of the dignity of our Apoſtleſhip, that we ſeem to be beſides our ſelves, we do it not to arrogate glory to our ſelves, but to maintain the glory and honour of God: and if on the other ſide we ſpeak modeſtly of our ſelves, and our miniſtery, it is for your good, to teach you modeſty, and to condeſcend to your capacity, and to uſe all means to bring you to Chriſt.

ſober] Or, in our right mind.

for your cauſe] Gr. to you.

V. 14. conſtraineth us] Or, keepeth us in.

V. 16. know we no man after the fleſh] Neither my ſelf nor any of the Apoſtles have any worldly or carnall affection, nor take notice of mens outward appearance, kindred, quality, honour, wiſdome, or eloquence: but meerly know them after the Spirit; that is, according to the ſpirituall power, vertue, or grace that is in them.

known Chriſt after the fleſh,&c.] If we have had earthly and carnall thoughts and hopes of Chriſt, like unto the reſt of the Jews, that he as the King of Iſrael ſhould begin an earthly temporall Kindome, and we enjoy all manner of earthly and carnall benefits in the ſame; as honour, riches, and power, &c. yet now we know him no more, we have put off all ſuch carnall imaginations of his Kingdome. To know Chriſt no more after the fleſh, ſaith Luther, is to ſeek or expect no fleſhly thing with him, as the Diſciples did before his ſuffering; but to content our ſelves with the word. Or the words may carry this meaning; we ſerve not men, nor deſire to pleaſe them; but all our deſire is to pleaſe Chriſt and him only; to whom alſo we ſtand no longer affected after any meerly humane, civill, or naturall manner of affections, ſuch as thoſe bare unto him who converſed with him here in this world, but altogether in a Divine and ſpirituall manner agreeable to the ſtate of glory whereunto he is exalted: ſee John 20. 17. And this the Apoſtle mentioneth here, to take off the edge of that argument whereby the falſe Apoſtles ſought to viliſie and abaſe his miniſtery below that of the Apoſtles, namely, that he had not been converſant with Chriſt in the fleſh.

V. 17. If any man be in Chriſt] Every true Chriſtian inſerted into the body of Chriſt by his Spirit, is and ought to be changed in all his ſenſes, motions, deſires, and affections: and therefore he is freed of vanity and ſelf-love according as every faithfull one (the generall ſtate and condition of the Church being renewed by Chriſt) ought to participate of this newneſſe of life.

he is a new creature] Or, let him be. As a thing made new of God. For though a man be not newly created when God giveth him the ſpirit of regeneration; but only his qualities are changed: yet notwithſtanding it pleaſeth the Holy Ghoſt to ſpeak ſo, to teach us that we muſt attribute all things to the glory of God: not that we are ſtocks and blocks, but becauſe God createth in us both the will to will well, and the power to do well old things are paſt away] See Iſa. 43. 19. Revel. 21. 5.

all things are become new] Namely, in the Kingdom of Chriſt: and here the Apoſtle hath reference to the promiſe of God, Eſa. 65. 17. and 66. 22. where this renovation of all things is promiſed, whereof part is now already fulfilled in all true believers; who are renewed by the Spirit of God, and the reſt ſhall be accompliſhed in the life to come. See 2 Pet. 3. 13. Revel. 21. 5.

V. 20. Now then we are Ambaſſadours] Gr. we are therefore Ambaſſadours.

beſeech] Or, exhort. or, perſwade.

in Chriſts ſtead] Gr. for Chriſt.

V. 21. he hath made him to be ſinne for us] That is, a ſacrifice for ſin, or he hath imputed the ſins of the world to Chriſt (who was moſt righteous and innocent himſelf) and hath put upon him all the puniſhment and malediction due to us, that all the faithfull may be reputed before God as holy and perfect as righteouſneſſe it ſelf by vertue of Chriſts righteouſneſſe, which is given to them by God, and only is able to ſtand in his judgement.

who knew no ſinne] That is, who knew no ſin by himſelf, who was conſcious to himſelf of no ſinne. For other wayes he beſt knew the nature and power of ſinne, who bare our ſins on his body on the tree.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ. 1. WOrkers together with him] That is, with God, mentioned in the laſt verſe of the former Chapter. Now this co-operation of the Miniſters with God is not only neceſſary before they to whom they preach have received grace, that they might be partakers of it; but alſo after they have received grace, that they may continue in it.

beſeech] Or, exhort.

the grace of God in vain] By the grace of God he meaneth the outward means of ſalvation in the miniſterie of the Goſpell, or enlightning grace, in the underſtanding, which they receive in vain, who are not thereby bettered in their life and converſation, as the earth receiveth ſeed, and the former and latter rain in vain, which is barren and beareth no fruit, Heb. 6. 8.

V. 2. I have heard thee] See Iſa. 49. 8.

a time accepted] That is, in a time of acceptation, wherein God will accept us if we by faith and repentance come unto him, or in a time liked of and made choice of by God, wherein he will open the treaſures of his mercy and bounty unto us.

time] Or, ſeaſon.

V. 3. Giving no offence] See 1 Cor. 10. 32. That is, give no juſt occaſion of offence, or ſcandall: for ſcandall or offence, is rightly diſtinguiſhed into ſcandalum datum, & ſcandalum acceptum, a ſcandall given, and a ſcandall taken. A ſcandall taken is when any out of prejudicate opinion, or ill affection wilfully miſconſtrue any ſpeech or action of ours, and make the worſt of it; here the ſcandall is taken, but no way given. The giving of fence which the Apoſtle here forbiddeth, is when either we ſpeak ſo ambiguouſly, or do any thing ſo indiſcreetly and unſeaſonably that a good Chriſtian, though otherwiſe well-affected to us and our miniſtery, cannot but be ſcandalized.

V. 4. approving our ſelves] Or, commending. In the Originall it is, we commend our ſelves, which though it be done in words, unleſſe we be forced thereunto for the clearing of our innocency, or juſtifying our calling, may ſeem vain, quia laus propria ſordet in ore: yet to do it in the Apoſtles ſenſe, to commend our miniſtery by the effects of it, by our indefatigable labours in the Goſpel and ſufferings for it, is moſt praiſe-worthy and profitable.

V. 5. in tumults] Or, in toſſings to and fro. The word in the Originall, ἀκαταστασίαις, is ambiguous: for it may be referred either to our ſelves, and then it ſignifieth in the uncertainty of our ſtate, and abode, who have no place of reſt or quietneſſe, or to others, and then it ſignifieth in tumults or commotions, ſuch as were raiſed againſt S. Paul at Epheſus, and Jeruſalem, and at other places.

in labours] Either which he took in his continuall travels, and perpetuall preaching; or the pains he took to maintain himſelf in his trade of Tent-making, that he might not be any wayes chargeable to the Church.

V. 6. By pureneſſe] Gr. in. The Originall ἁγνότης, ſignifieth as well chaſtity and purity of body, as cleanneſſe of hands, free from bloud, bribery, and corruption by receiving gifts; it is taken alſo ſometimes for ſincerity: and in all theſe ſenſes S. Paul walked and converſed, ἐν ἁγνότητι, for he led both a moſt chaſt life, and preached the Goſpel ſincerely, and made no merchandiſe of the word, as he elſe-where ſpeaketh, he was alſo pure and clear from the bloud of all men, Acts 20. 26.

V. 7. By the word of truth] Gr. in.

by the power of God] Gr. in. Either by this power which manifeſted it ſelf in my effectuall and powerfull miniſtery, or the power of God, whereby I wrought many miracles among you.

by the armour of righteouſneſſe] Gr. by the weapons of.

on the right hand and on the left] Some take the Apoſtles meaning to be, that himſelf was, and every good Chriſtian ought to be, ἀμφιδέξιος or περιδέξιος, (ſuch as was Aſteropæus in Homer, Il. φ. ἥρως Ἀστεροπαῖος ἐπεὶ περιδέξιος ἦεν) that is, men who could uſe both hands alike, and lay about them, as if both were right hands; but there is no neceſſity of this expoſition. For all Souldiers though they fight not with both hands alike, yet they make uſe of both, and they have weapons and armour on both. But the greater doubt is, what the Apoſtle meaneth by right hand and left? whereunto the Greek Scholiaſt anſwereth, that by the right hand he underſtandeth honour and eſtimation among men, and by the left hand, injuries, perſecutions, and diſgraces; and his meaning then is, that they are armed with righteouſneſſe or uprightneſſe in both, in ſuch ſort that Satan cannot wound them on either ſide, ſith they are neither puffed up with honour, abundance and proſperity, nor caſt down by penury, and adverſity. It may be the Apoſtle in the metaphor of right and left hand alludes to the words of the Wiſe man, who ſpeaks of bleſſings on the right hand, and on the left, Prov. 3. 16. As God giveth us bleſſings with both hands: ſo Chriſt gives us armour for both hands, to defend us from Satan, the fleſh, and the world, who lay at us on all ſides.

V. 8. By honour] Gr. glory.

as deceivers] Not ſo indeed, but reputed as deceivers, or traduced for ſuch, as Chriſt himſelf was, Matth. 27. 63. for this, as S. Cyprian noteth, hath been the practiſe of the Devill in all ages, by his inſtruments to caſt falſe and foule aſperſions upon the moſt ſincere and faithfull ſervants of Chriſt, ut qui conſcien- tia ſua luce clareſcunt, alienis rumoribus ſordidentur.

V. 9. well known] Gr. acknowledged.

V. 10. having nothing , and yet poſſeſſing all things] As having nothing,re, yet poſſeſſing all things ſpe: or having nothing, quoad κτῆσιν, yet poſſeſſing all things,quoad χρῆσιν: having not the wealth of the world in our hands,according to the ſubſtance of the things themſelves ; yet having the fruit and benefit of them in the ſupply of our neceſſary wants and inward contentment ; or having nothing actually in our own hands,yet poſſeſſing all things in the charity of good Chriſtians , who think nothing too good or too much for us at our need.

V. 11. our mouth is open unto you] The opening of the mouth and heart , betokeneth a moſt earneſt affection in him that ſpeaketh, as it fareth commonly with them , that are in ſome joy : for joy dilateth the heart , as on the contrary ſorrow contracteth it.

V. 12. Ye are not ſtreitned in us] You are in my heart as in a houſe, and that no narrow or ſtrait houſe ; for I have opened my whole heart to you: but you are inwardly ſtrait-laced to me ward.

in your own bowels]. According to the phraſe of the Hebrew, he calleth thoſe tender affections which reſt in the heart bowels : as in the Epiſtle to Philemon, verſ. 12. he requireth Philemon to receive Oneſimus as his own bowels , that is, as one whom he moſt tenderly affected.

V. 13. Now for a recompence in the ſame] Gr. for the ſame recompenſe. The Apoſtle by this phraſe underſtandeth no reward from the Corinthians , or recompence by way of ſatisfaction,though the Greek word ἀντιμισθία , derived from μισθὸς, ſeem to import as much ; but onely that as good children, they ſhould anſwer their father in tender love and affection : and Bernard juſtly taxeth thoſe who are banckrupts in love , with ingratitude and hardneſſe of heart,duri eſt animi amorem ſi nolis impendere, nolle rependere.

V. 14. unequally yoked together with unbelievers] Gr. diverſly yoked : or, drawing the other part of the yoke with. Now he rebuketh them boldly for taking part with infidels , and being fellows with them in outward idolatry, as if it were a thing indifferent ; but ſuch, ſaith he, as the Lord vouchſafeth the name of his children , muſt keep themſelves pure, not only in minde, but alſo in body, and abſtain even from all appearance of Idolatry and ſuperſtition. The word in the Originall,ἑτεροζυγοῦντες , may be diverſly interpreted , either draw not down the beam,or any way encline to the part of the infidels.So the Greek Scholiaſt. And indeed ζυγὸς is ſometimes taken pro æquilibrio lancis or trutina; Or it may be rendred;be not unequally yoked, as when beaſts of divers kindes , or of the ſame kinde , but of diverſe ſtature and bigneſſe, draw together ; for then the yoke cannot lye equally upon both:and in this ſenſe the Apoſtle may ſeem to touch upon their matching with infidels. Or it may be rendred, alteram jugi partem ne trahite, draw not the other part of the yoke with infidels , that is , be not any wayes coupled with them.

fellowſhip] Gr. participation.

V. 15. what concord hath Chriſt with Belial] Belial ſignifieth wicked, but here it is taken for Satan,as the Syriack interpreter rendreth it,who is wicked,κατ' ἐξοχὴν. in a tranſcendent manner, ὁ πονηρὸς, that wicked one, as Chriſt tearmeth him.

V. 16. ye are the temple of the living God] See 1 Cor. 3. 16.

I will dwell in them] Gr. among. See Levit. 26. 12. God dwelleth among us, either becauſe Chriſt is become God with us, or becauſe the Spirit dwelleth in our hearts by faith.

V. 17. Wherefore come out from among them] See Iſa. 52. 11. That is, eſtrange and ſeparate your ſelves from them , have no intimate converſation or communion with them, leſt thereby you be induced to the imitation of their ſinnes and participation of their puniſhment.

V. 18. And will be a Father unto you] Gr. for I will be unto them for, or inſtead of a father. See Jer. 31. 1.

my ſonnes] Gr. to me for, or inſtead of ſonnes.

CHAP. VII.

Verſ. 1. A*Ll filthineſſe of the fleſh and ſpirit*] Or , pollution. Becauſe , as he ſhewed before , the faithfull are Temples of the Holy Ghoſt , and God hath promiſed , that he will take them for his ſonnes and daughters, he exhorteth them to cleanſe themſelves from all pollution of ſinne, that they may be fit Temples for ſo pure a Spirit , and meet Children of ſo holy a Father. By filthineſſe of the fleſh,he meaneth, fornication, gluttony, and drunkenneſſe, &c. By filthineſſe of the ſpirit, Idolatry, ſuperſtition; ſects, ſchiſms and factions, which vices he taxed before. Or, by filthineſſe of the fleſh , the outward acts of all manner of ſinne committed in, and by the body. Galat. 5. 19, &c. by filthineſſe of the ſpirit, the inward acts of ſinne committed in the ſoul, as impure thoughts, wicked deſires , unſanctified conceptions and opinions of God , crafty and malicious projects, deſignes and purpoſes, or the like.

perfecting holineſſe] Or, conſummating. Finiſhing the work of ſanctification, begun in our regeneration ; for though regeneration , as alſo generation be done at once , yet ſanctification is wrought in us by degrees,and every good Chriſtian muſt profit in Chriſts ſchool , and grow continually , as in knowledge, ſo in grace , till we arrive to ſuch perfection , as we are capable of in this life ; (2 Pet. 3. 18.) which , as Saint Auſtine termeth it, is but an imperfect perfection at the moſt ; a perfection of parts, but no way of degrees.

V. 2. Receive us] Let us have ſome place amongſt you,that we may teach you ; or, give way to my juſt defence ; or, alluding to what he ſpake before, Chap. 6. 13. Be ye inlarged: he now deſireth, that having made a room for him in their hearts and affections, they would admit and receive him thereinto.

we have wronged no man, &c.] In clearing himſelf and his fellow-Miniſters from the particular imputations following, he layeth an aſperſion upon the falſe Apoſtles, who offended in all thoſe kindes , wronging the Corinthians in their reputation, corrupting them in their judgements , and defrauding them in their eſtates; the firſt proceeding from detraction , the ſecond, from flattery or hereticall perſwaſions , the third , from covetouſneſſe.

V. 4. my glorying of you] Gr. my rejoycing for you.

V. 5. troubled] Gr. preſſed, or afflicted.

without were fightings, within were fears]. Perſecutions from without, from Infidels, who made havock of the Church ; and fears from within , leſt any of the members of the Church ſhould be drawn from the body by the violence of torments and perſecutions. Or,outward fightings with open and profeſſed enemies, and fears within,from falſe brethren. Or fightings without, by the continuall aſſaults of outward temptations;and terrours within , by ſpirituall derelictions and conflicts with deſpair ; for even to theſe the deareſt children of God are ſubject in this life.

V. 6. thoſe that are caſt down] Gr. humble. The word in the Originall is ταπεινοὺς, quaſi ἐδαφινοὺς , caſt upon the ground ; either overthrown by violence , or dejected in our mindes,our very hearts being caſt down. The word ſignifieth alſo humble or lowly , but becauſe it is againſt humility to profeſſe it in our ſelves ; the word here rather ſignifieth lowlineſſe in condition, then in affection, and the meaning of the Apoſtle is, that God comforteth us when we are very far ſpent with grief , and raiſeth us when we are upon our knees, and relieveth us when we are deſtitute of all other help or comfort.

by] Gr. in.

V. 7. by the coming] Gr. in the coming.

by the conſolation] Gr. in.

in you] Or, of you.

fervent minde toward me] Gr. zeal for me.

V. 8. with] Gr. in.

V. 9. not that ye were made ſorry] As a good Phyſitian rejoyceth not in that he hath miniſtred to his patient a bitter potion, but that thereby he hath procured him much eaſe ; neither is the Chirurgion glad that by launcing the ſoar he hath put the parts ill-affected to pain , but that by this pain hath healed them ; in like manner, the Apoſtle doth not rejoyce ſimply,that he had made the Corinthians ſorrowfull, but that by this their ſorrow they gained health of their ſouls , and many ſpirituall graces, mentioned in the eleventh verſe.

after a godly manner] Or, according to God.

V. 10. For godly ſorrow] In the Originall κατὰ Θεὸν , a ſorrow according unto God, a ſorrow coming from God,pleaſing to God, and bring the ſinner unto God, when his heart is truly rent for having offended God by his ſinnes; and withall confident of the forgiveneſſe of the ſame by Jeſus Chriſt, and fully and ſtedfaſtly reſolved , as far as God ſhall enable him,to ſhun and avoid all ſin,for the future : for as S Ambroſe hath it, Ille vere plangit commiſſa , qui non committit plangenda ; he truly bewaileth that which he hath done, who never doth that afterward which he hath bewailed.

but the ſorrow of the world worketh death] By ſorrow of the world he underſtandeth that which is proper to men of the world, ſuch as are not regenerated by the Spirit of God, whoſe grief and ſorrow is nothing but the bitter ſmart of their miſery without any ſerious and ſincere repentance, or elſe a remorſe & pricking of their conſciences for their ſins indeed ; but without faith,and without purpoſe of amendment, and without converſion unto God : wherefore alſo all this grieving and ſorrowing of theirs is nothing elſe but a preparation to eternall death , and a kind of beginning of the ſame ; ſuch as Nero felt after he had put both the Apoſtles Peter and Paul to death; it is ſaid of him, that he felt the torments of hell in his conſcience , and ranne about crying , Have I no friend or enemy that will kill me , and rid me of my pain ? Or, by ſorrow of the world, is meant a ſorrow onely for the loſſe of worldly things, or which is onely cauſed from the fear of Gods judgements in unbelievers, whereupon there followeth commonly hardneſſe of heart, and a reprobate ſenſe, and after, deſpair and damnation it ſelf, (as we ſee in Cain, Saul, Achitophel, Judas, and the like) which waſteth the body, and haſteneth death.

V.11. after a godly ſort] Gr. according to God.

what carefulneſſe] Or, diligence. Study and diligence, readily and carefully to put in practiſe what I commanded you, to correct your errour and neglect, in not inflicting the cenſure of the Church upon the inceſtuous perſon.

clearing of our ſelves] That is, declaration of your innocence that you wilfully offend not, which you made good upon the ſight of your errour, by your ſevere proceeding againſt the guilty offendour.

what indignation] Diſtaſte and offence which you took, both at the ſin and ſinner.

what fear] That is, holy dread of the provoked judgement of God upon the whole Church, by ſuch an abominable ſinne committed, and not puniſhed.

vehement deſire] Great affection to the glory of God, and my own perſon and miniſtery, and unfained willingneſſe to amend what was amiſſe.

what zeale] In executing that with great fervour and ſeverity that the Apoſtle gave them in charge, for removing and avoiding the ſcandall.

what revenge] Either taken upon the inceſtuous perſon, by the cenſure of excommunication pronounced againſt him, or againſt your ſelves, by the great grief you expreſt for having been ſo negligent before, puniſhing your ſelves for not puniſhing him.

clear in this matter] Not indeed of all fault, for neglect of exerciſing eccleſiaſticall diſcipline in them was a fault, but cleare from any taking part with that foul perſon, or giving any liking or approbation of that inceſtuous contract.

V. 12. I did it not for his cauſe that had done the wrong, &c.] That which moved me to write unto you ſo ſharply, was not the injury either offered by the ſon, or ſuffered by the father, but the publike ſcandall of the Church; αἰτίᾳ τοῦτο ἐπείγετο ϗ τ̃ ἐκκλησίας διαβαλλομένης, as Saint Chryſoſtome well obſerveth; though the ſin were in the inceſtuous perſon only, and the particular wrong done to his father, yet in regard that this inceſtuous contract was tolerated among the Corinthians, and no cenſure inflicted upon the delinquent, the whole Church received a wound in it, and the enemies of the truth took occaſion to blaſpheme the holy name and profeſſion of Chriſtians, as if ſuch foul facts as this was, were fruits of Chriſtian libertie, or practiſes allowed by the doctrine of the Goſpel.

V. 14. before Titus] Or, concerning Titus.

V. 15. inward affection] Gr. bowels.

CHAP. VIII.

Verſ. 1. WE do you to wit of the] Or, we declare, or, make known unto you the.

the grace of God beſtowed] The bounty of the Macedonians he calleth χάριν, either from χαίρω, or from χαρίζομαι, either as the word is derived from a verb ſignifying to rejoyce, becauſe what they beſtowed upon the Saints at Jeruſalem, they did it moſt willingly and cheerfully; or as the word is derived from a verbe ſignifying freely to give, thereby intimating, that that charity whereby we freely give to others, is a free gift of God to us; donatur nobis, non tantum quod donamus, ſed etiam ut donemus.

V. 2. in a great triall of affliction] For thoſe manifold afflictions wherewith the Lord tryed them, did not only not ſlack their joyfull readineſſe, but alſo made it much more excellent and famous. Affliction is as a File, whereby God brightens the graces of the Spirit in his Children.

and their deep poverty] As a dark foyl ſets off an orient diamond, ſo the great afflictions of the Churches of Macedonia ſet off their ſpirituall joy, and their extream poverty their rich liberality.

their liberalitie] The originall ἁπλότης, which, though it be ſometimes taken for liberalitie, as Rom. 12. 8. yet properly it ſignifieth ſimplicitie, that which Clemens Alexandrinus termeth ἀποίκιλτον ϗ ἀνενδοίαστον, ſingleneſſe of heart; a vertue whereby a man is inclined to do works of mercy and bounty freely and abſolutely, without any ſecret ends to gain any thing thereby to himſelf; as he whom the Poet taxed did, munera magna quidem miſit, ſed miſit in hamo, Et piſcatorem piſcis amare poteſt? He who contributeth to the neceſſity of the poor, ſimply to relieve them, and in obedience of Gods command, without any other motive or inducement, deſerveth that commendation which the Apoſtle here giveth to the Macedonians of πλοῦτος τ̃ ἁπλότητος.

V. 5. not as we hoped] He amplifieth the forwardneſſe of the Macedonians in this, that they alſo deſired Paul to ſtirre up the Corinthians to accompliſh the giving of alms by ſending again of Titus unto them; they were not only free of their own bounty towards the Saints at Jeruſalem, but alſo excited others to the like bounty; and as Bernard ſaith, Major eſt in amore Dei, qui plures traxerit ad amorem Dei; He more loves God, or is greater in his love, who draws more to his love: ſo ſaith the Oratour, That charity is greater, which not only relieveth it ſelf the poor, but moveth others alſo to the like reliefe, and openeth not only our own treaſures, but the treaſures of others to charitable collections.

V. 8. I ſpeak not by commandement] Though the Apoſtle might have laid his command upon them in this kind, ſith charity is a duty required of every Chriſtian, who is bound to contribute to the neceſſity of the Saints, according to his ability; yet he rather commendeth this duty unto them, then commandeth it, Philem. 8. 9. becauſe the more willing and free our charitable contributions are, the more acceptable to God and man: As the Myrrhe which ſweateth out of the tree of its own accord, is farre more precious then that which runneth out after the tree is prickt or cut; ſudant ſponte priuſquam incidantur ſtacten dictam cui nulla præfertur. Plin. nat. hiſt.

and to prove] Gr. and proving.

V. 9. for your ſakes he became poor] He who as God was Lord of all, yet for our ſakes ſuſtained poverty upon earth, that by his temporall poverty we might be enriched ſpiritually; by whoſe example the Corinthians ought to part with ſome of their temporall goods to ſupply the poverty of their brethren, that by their prayers they might be enriched ſpiritually. What ſhould we not willingly beſtow upon our poor brethren for Chriſts ſake, who not only beſtoweth all graces upon us, but was alſo himſelf beſtowed for us?

rich] Gr. enriched.

V. 10. not only to do] But alſo to do willingly: for he noteth out a ready willingneſſe, without any inforcement by any other men, much leſſe came it of ambition or vain-glory.

forward] Gr. willing.

V. 12. it is accepted according to that which a man hath] Bounty is not to be eſteemed according to mens wealth and the outward gifts they beſtowed, but according to their free heart. The two Mites which the poor widow caſt into the treaſurie, Luke 21. 3. were more in Gods account, and more to her alſo, then two talents from ſome other, who might better ſpare two talents then ſhe one Mite.

V. 14. that there may be equalitie] That is, that they and you may be charged alike; they when they are full, to ſupply your wants: and you when you are full, to ſupply their wants.

V. 15. He that had gathered much, &c.) See Exod. 16. 18. Though the Children of Iſrael in the wilderneſſe, according to Gods command, gathered Manna, ſome more, ſome leſſe; yet when they did meete it with an Omer, he that gathered much had nothing over, and he that gathered leſſe, had no lack: this hiſtory the Apoſtle elegantly applyeth to the diſpenſation of Chriſtian bountie and charitie, which ought to be ſo ordered by the diſcretion of the Governours of the Church, that they who receive more, may have no overplus, and they that receive leſſe, may ſuſtain no want; that as all the Iſraelites had according to their eating, and the number of their family, that which was ſufficient; ſo here by a carefull diſtribution, with an eye to the ſeverall wants of them that are to be relieved, all may be ſufficiently provided for.

V. 18. whoſe praiſe is in the Goſpel] That is, either in the Goſpel written by him, and (if the words be taken in that ſenſe, as Saint Jerome obſerveth) he meaneth Saint Luke the Evangeliſt: or in the Goſpel preached by him, and then he may mean ſome other, as Barnabas and Apollo, who were praiſed in all Churches for their excellent gifts in preaching the Goſpel.

V. 19. grace] Or, gifts.

V. 21. Providing for honeſt things] It is not ſufficient that we do thoſe things which are in themſelves honeſt and juſt in the ſight of God, but we muſt ſo do them, that men may take no juſt offence at them, or ſuſpect that we have any ſiniſter end in doing them: As we muſt approve our conſcience to God, ſo we muſt have an honeſt care of our reputation among men. See Rom. 12. 17.

V. 22. I have in you] Or, he hath.

V. 23. Whether any do inquire of Titus] He commends thoſe in ſpeciall whom he ſends to receive the collection for the Saints, that the Corinthians might not doubt to put into their hands thoſe ſummes of money which were given for the reliefe of the Saints at Jeruſalem: and the meaning of the whole verſe is this, For Titus, if any inquire of him, that which I can ſay of him, is, that I ſo farre truſt him that he is my fellow and helper to you-ward; and for the other brethren, if any inquire of them, the teſtimony I can truly afford them is this, that they are truſted by divers Churches, whoſe meſſengers they are; and their life and converſation is ſuch, that they have gained much glory to Chriſt, and are an honour to the Goſpel.

V. 24. the proof of your love and of our boaſting] That is, give this experiment of your love, and make good my boaſting of you, that all Churches may be witneſſes of your godly dealing, in whoſe preſence you are, for ſo much as there are with you meſſengers, whom they have choſen by all their conſent, and ſent them unto you.

CHAP. IX.

Verſ. 1. T*Ouching the miniſtring*] He wiſely meeteth with the ſuſpition which the Corinthians might conceive, as if in urging them ſo earneſtly to contribute liberally to the poor, he ſhould doubt of their good will and inclination of themſelves to ſo charitable a work, therefore he profeſſeth, that he doth it not to teach them that they ought to relieve the Saints by their bounty, ſeeing that he had become ſurety for them to the Macedonians, but onely to ſtirre them up, who were running of themſelves, to the end that all things might both be in a better readineſſe at his coming, and the collection more liberall.

V. 2. Achaia was ready a year ago] Achaia is the Countrey wherein the Citie of Corinth was ſituated, and ſometimes the word is taken generally for all Greece, ſometimes particularly for a part of Peloponeſſus, known by that name. So Heſychius, Ἀχαιοὶ δὲ ἕλληνες κυρίως δὲ Ἀχαιοὶ, οἱ κατοικοῦντες μέρος τῆς Πελοποννήσου τὴν καλουμένην Ἀχαΐαν.

your zeal hath provoked very many] Or, ſtirred up. The Apoſtle in this Chapter tearmeth the bountifull contributions of the Corinthians to the Saints by the name of divers vertues, ζῆλος, ἁπλότης, χάρις, εὐλογία, and δικαιοσύνη, zeal, ſimplicitie, grace, benediction, and righteouſneſſe. Zeal, becauſe it proceeded out of fervent love, and ſo much tended to Gods glory; ſimplicitie, becauſe they did it out of a free minde and ſingleneſſe of heart, without any ſiniſter intention, or expecting any retribution: grace, becauſe it was the gift of God proceeding from his grace: benediction or bleſſing, becauſe Gods bleſſing enables them to it, and the poor Saints bleſſe God for this ſupply of their wants: laſtly, righteouſneſſe, either becauſe pious bounty is a part of that righteouſneſſe or juſtice in generall, which compriſeth all vertues; ἐν δὲ δικαιοσύνῃ συλλήβδην πᾶσ' ἀρετ' ἐστι, juſtitia in ſeſe virtutes continet omnes: or becauſe we are not Lords of the goods of this life, but ſtewards onely, and he is an unjuſt ſteward who holds that wholly in his own hands, for his own advantage, which by order from his Maſter he ought to diſpence to others for their relief and ſuſtenance.

V. 4. in this ſame confident boaſting] Gr. in the ſubſtance, or foundation of this boaſting. The word in the Originall, ὑπόστασις, may either ſignifie ſuch a ſtayedneſſe and ſetledneſſe of minde, as cannot be moved with any terrour or fear, and ſo it ſheweth the aſſured confidence Saint Paul had in them, that they would make good what he had promiſed in their behalf: or it may ſignifie a ground or a foundation; and ſo the meaning is, that he ſhould not be aſhamed of his boaſting to others of their readineſſe, becauſe there was a good ground and foundation for it; either the publike faith of the Corinthians who engaged themſelves to contribute liberally to the Saints; or ſome preſent pledge which he ſaw thereof; namely ſome remarkable ſummes collected a yeer before.

V. 5. make up] Or, make fit, or, ready.

bounty] Gr. bleſſing.

whereof ye had notice before] Or, which hath been ſo much ſpoken of before.

of bounty, and not as of covetouſneſſe] Gr. bleſſing. Or, as an advantage. The words may carry a double ſenſe, either that the Apoſtle would have them ſpeedily to ſend this collection as being a free benevolence, and not to ſlack the ſending of it out of covetouſneſſe to make any benefit of the money of the poor ſo long in their hands. Or that it might be ready as a matter of bounty, that is freely coming from them and cheerfully; not as money comes out of the hands of covetous men; that is, hardly, and with much grudging and repining.

V. 6. He which ſoweth ſparingly] Alms muſt be given neither niggardly nor unwillingly, but frankly and freely, ſeeing it is the ſowing of that ſeed that will bring us a plentifull harveſt both here and hereafter: other ſeed where we ſowe it there we reap the encreaſe of it, but of this ſeed we reap not onely a plentifull crop where it is ſowed on earth, but a much more plentifull in heaven.

he which ſoweth bountifully] Gr. with bleſſings. Word for word it is, he which ſoweth in benedictions or bleſſings ſhall reap in benedictions; and the Apoſtle alludeth either to Pſal. 68. 9. or Ezek. 34. 26. in which a plentifull ſhowr of rain is called a ſhowr of bleſſing or bleſſings: the Apoſtles meaning is, that he who contributeth liberally to the poor, and ſoweth very much ſeed, ſhall reap in bleſſings, that is, thereby ſhall receive from Gods hand not one kinde of bleſſing onely, but divers, bleſſings of the right hand and bleſſings of the left, temporall bleſſings and ſpirituall bleſſings, in this life, and in the life to come.

bountifully] Gr. with bleſſings.

V. 7. God loveth a cheerfull giver] See Prov. 11. 25. Rom. 12. 8. Ecclus. 35. 9. That which is extorted from a man he properly giveth not; for liberality implyeth liberty, and neceſſity in this kind and liberty cannot well ſtand together: God loveth a cheerfull giver, becauſe he gives his heart firſt to God, before he gives his almes to the poor; and giving that which he giveth with a cheerfull countenance he more comforteth the receiver, giving hope of future bounty. For what a man doth cheerfully he will do again upon a like good occaſion. Pliny writeth that it was obſerved among the Romanes, that never any good came to a man by offering a beaſt in ſacrifice, renitentem ac trahentem ſe ab aris; by a beaſt that violently drew back from the Altar, and could not be brought to it but with much force: and moſt certain it is, that God eſteemeth of no offering of ours which is not as free as liberall, according to our ability.

V. 8. make all grace abound towards you] The Greek Scholiaſt accurately obſerveth that the Apoſtle here prayeth for the Corinthians, ἐν τοῖς σωματικοῖς αὐτάρκειαν, ἐν τοῖς πνευματικοῖς περισσείαν, a ſufficiency in temporall bleſſings, but an exuberancy or abundance in ſpirituall. For in temporals we have too much as well as too little; and therefore Solomon prayeth for a mediocritie: but of ſpirituall bleſſings, eſpecially ſuch as appertain to our ſanctification and ſalvation, we cannot have too great a proportion; the more we abound in them, the more happy are we.

V. 9. He hath diſperſed abroad] See Pſal. 112. 9.

his righteouſneſſe] Righteouſneſſe in this place is taken for bounty, as elſe-where, Hoſ. 10. 12. Sow to your ſelves in righteouſneſſe; and Malac. 4. 2. Chriſt is called the Sunne of righteouſneſſe, becauſe he freely and bountifully communicates both enlightening, and ſanctifying graces, as the Sun doth his light and his heat.

for ever] Though the gift he beſtoweth paſſeth away, yet his bounty remaineth for ever, both in the fame of his vertue, and much more in the eternall reward thereof in heaven. Quas dederis ſolas ſemper habebis opes.

V. 10. miniſtreth ſeed to the ſower] See Iſa. 55. 10.

V. 12. adminiſtration of this ſervice] Gr. oblation and ſervice, or office. Rom. 15. 16. An excellent and double fruit of liberalitie towards the Saints is, that it giveth occaſion to praiſe God, and that our faith alſo is thereby made manifeſt. The word in the Originall is λειτουργία, which ſignifies not every ſervice or miniſtery, but properly the publike ſervice and holy office of prayers and oblations to God; and thereby implieth that theſe their almes-deeds were rather acts of pietie then liberalitie, becauſe they contributed to them of Jeruſalem not onely as poor, but as Saints of the ſame profeſſion with them, and that they ſent them as a holy offering unto God for the reliefe of his deareſt ſervants.

V. 13. they glorifie] Gr. glorifying.

V. 15. Thanks be unto God for his unſpeakable gift] Leſt the Corinthians ſhould be puffed up with his great commendation and praiſe of their pious bountie, he ſhutteth up his exhortation with this paſſionate exclamation, wherein he aſcribeth the glory and thankſgiving not to the Corinthians, who were but the conduits of Gods bounty, but to God himſelf, who is the fountain of all goodneſſe, who both enclined their hearts, and furniſhed them with means thus liberally to ſupply the neceſſitie of his Saints. Some by this unſpeakable gift underſtand Chriſt himſelfe, who is called the gift of God, Joh. 4. 10. Others the Goſpel, which is likewiſe an unſpeakable gift: but the coherence with the former words ſeemeth rather to referre us to the exceeding grace of God in the Corinthians mentioned in the verſe immediately going before; ſo the plain meaning is, thanks be unto God for his unſpeakable gift, which he hath beſtowed upon you in filling you with his grace, and ſtirring up your hearts in ſo liberall a manner to relieve the Saints at Jeruſalem, whereby ſo much glory redoundeth to God, and honour to our holy profeſſion.

CHAP. X.

Verſ. 1. G*Entleneſſe of Chriſt*] Here he beginneth to vindicate his miniſtery from the contempt & ſcorn which the falſe Apoſtles put upon it; and firſt of all he profeſſeth that he was gentle and moderate after the example of Chriſt: but if they continued ſtill to deſpiſe his gentleneſſe, he proteſteth unto them that he will ſhew indeed how farre they are deceived, who make no other account of the office of an Apoſtle then they do of worldly offices, that is, according to outward appearance. The word in the Originall ἐπιείκεια, is derived from εἴκω, to give place, or to yeeld, and it ſignifieth a condeſcending to the infirmity of others, and a moderating the rigour and ſeverity of the law by equity; for ſummum jus eſt ſumma injuria.

in preſence] Or, in outward appearance.

in preſence am baſe among you] Gr. lowly. This he ſpeaketh ironically: not that he was vile and baſe when he was preſent with them; or as if he carried not himſelf according to the dignity of his place; but as it were, by way of conceſſion for the preſent, as if he had ſaid, If my bodily preſence be weak, and my ſpeech contemptible, as the falſe Apoſtles would have you believe, how meane and baſe ſoever they eſteem of me in preſence, yet I deſire you not to provoke me to ſhew what I am, and exerciſe boldly that power which Chriſt hath given me.

V. 2. think] Or, reckon.

walked according to the fleſh] As though I had no other aid and help then that which outwardly I ſeem to have. Fleſh here, that is, his weak condition and ſtate in reſpect of outward means, he ſetteth againſt his ſpirituall and Apoſtolicall dignity.

V. 3. For though we walk in the fleſh] Gr. For walking in. Though we be like unto other frail men, yet we come furniſhed with that ſtrength which no force of man can match: whether they reſiſt by craft and deceit, or by force and might; becauſe we fight with divine weapons, although we be men and live in reſpect of this life and the actions thereof according to the manner of other men with a great deal of weakneſſe and meanneſſe: yet notwithſtanding in our publike office, and chiefly againſt our adverſaries who oppoſe the Goſpel, we are armed with a divine and invincible power to confront all daring boldneſſe; and to beat down all rebellion, and to diſcover and confound all plots and machinations againſt the truth. Hereof we have an evident proof in the hiſtory of the Acts, in which the miraculous judgements of God are executed by the hands of the Apoſtles upon the enemies of the truth; as namely, Act. 5. 5. 10. and 13. 11. 1 Tim. 1. 20. Others do underſtand it of the efficacy of the Apoſtolicall preaching, by denouncing and ſealing unto the wicked their condemnation, and making ſenſible impreſſions upon their conſciences, whereupon there followed many remarkable judgements, Act. 8. 20, 21. and 24. 26. 2 Cor. 13. 3.

V. 4. the weapons of our warfare] The means we employ to defend the cauſe of God, and to fight againſt Satan and his inſtruments.

are not carnall] That is, ſuch as naturall men have recourſe unto, and gain authoritie withall, and do great things. As namely, riches, friends, honour, eloquence, favour of Princes, and the like: we conquer not our enemies by any of theſe, but rather by the contrary: poverty, weakneſſe, infamy, rudeneſſe, and plainneſſe of ſpeech; and fooliſhneſſe in the worlds account. Theſe weapons are made mighty through Gods power who in nothing more ſheweth his glory, then by confounding glory by infamy; nor his power, then by confounding power by weakneſſe; nor his wiſdome, then by confounding wiſdome by that which in the worlds account is folly. 1 Cor. 1. 26, 27.

but mighty through God] Or, to God. Oecumenius will have us obſerve how farre the Apoſtle is from all kinde of arrogancy, ὐκ εἶπεν ἡμεῖς ἐσμὲν δυνατοὶ ἀλλὰ τὰ ὅπλα, he ſaith not, We are mighty through God, but our weapons are mighty through God, that is, by the vertue and power which God doth adde thereunto, both in working of miracles, Mark. 16. 20. and in moving the heart and convincing the conſcience by his Spirit, Act. 16. 14. and in puniſhing thoſe that withſtand the Goſpel, Act. 13. 11. In the originall it is, δυνατὰ τῷ Θεῷ, mighty to God; that is, to accompliſh his will, who is the great Warrier the Lord of Hoſts, that manageth this warre for the Church.

V, 5. imaginations] Or, reaſonings.

every high thing that] Gr. every height that.

bringing into captivitie] An amplification of the ſpirituall vertue of the weapons above mentioned, which in ſuch ſort conquer the enemies of the truth, be they never ſo crafty and mighty, that it bringeth ſome of them by repentance unto Chriſt, and juſtly puniſheth others that are ſtubbornly obſtinate, ſeparating them from others who yeeld obedience to the Goſpel.

V. 8. for edification, and not for your deſtruction] Though the power of the Church proveth deſtructive unto ſome, namely, to ſuch as by the cenſures thereof are not brought to repentance and an humble confeſſion of their ſinnes, and ſubmiſſion to the Governours of the Church; but ſtand out in their obſtinacy: For they are cut off from Chriſts myſticall body, and from the means of grace and the communion of Saints: yet this power was given for edification, and even this tendeth much to the edification of the Church, that all ſcandals be removed, and thoſe perſons ſevered from the Congregation, who would otherwiſe infect it with hereſie, ſchiſme, or ſcandalous converſation.

V. 10. his bodily preſence is weak] Gr. the preſence of his body is weak.

V. 11. think this] Or, make account.

V. 12. For we dare not make our ſelves of the number] Being conſtrained to refell the fooliſh brags of the falſe Apoſtles, he profeſſeth that they are able to do nothing anſwerable to their great brags; but that they arrogated falſely to themſelves thoſe things which they neither did, nor could do: and, as for himſelf, though he might boaſt of excellent things, yet he will not paſſe the bounds which God hath meaſured him out; according whereunto he came even unto them in preaching the Goſpel of Chriſt; and truſteth that he ſhall go farther when they have ſo profited that he ſhall not need to tarry any longer amongſt them to inſtruct them.

meaſuring themſelves by themſelves] Gr. in. They contemn others, and meaſure all their actions by the line which they have drawn to themſelves.

amongſt] Gr. with, or, to.

are not wiſe] Or, underſtand not.

V. 13. without our meaſure] Though the whole world were the Apoſtles Dioceſſes, and they had commiſſion to preach to all nations; yet they took their journeys into ſeverall parts, where God chalked them out the way, and they were carefull as not to interrupt or hinder one another; ſo neither to enter upon one anothers labours: on the contrary, the falſe Apoſtles ranging whereſoever they liſt wrought upon advantage, and arrogated to themſelves the converſion of thoſe countries, where the true Apoſtles had before planted the faith.

rule] Or, line.

V. 15. of other mens labours] Gr. in.

enlarged by you] Or, magnified in you.

V. 16. not to boaſt in another mans line] Or, rule. A metaphor taken from builders who ſtretch their line out where they mean to build; and the Apoſtles meaning is, that he would not intrude into any other mans work; nor deſire to ſow the ſeed of the word in thoſe Regions and Countries which other men had prepared and husbanded with the preaching of the Goſpel.

V. 17. But he that glorieth, &c.] See Jer. 9. 24. 1 Cor. 1. 31.

glory in the Lord] He ſomewhat mitigateth that which he ſpake of himſelf, and therewith alſo prepareth the Corinthians to hear other things of the like kinde, profeſſing that he ſeeketh nothing elſe but to approve himſelf to God whoſe glory he onely ſeeketh.

CHAP. XI.

Verſ. 1. IN my folly] Gr. of folly. He granteth that after a ſort he may ſeem to incurre the cenſure of folly, but he addeth withall; that he doth it againſt his will for their profit, becauſe he ſeeth them deceived by certain cunning men through the craft and ſubtilty of Satan. To commend a mans ſelf, though truly, ſeems to ſavour of folly and vain-glory, yet in Saint Pauls caſe to ſpeak the truth concerning the infallible teſtimonies of his Apoſtleſhip, and to ſtop the mouths of the falſe Apoſtles, who traduced his perſon, and vilified his miniſtery, with a ſweet rhetoricall inſinuation and craving pardon, as he doth, was a part of godly wiſdome.

bear with me] Or, you do bear with me.

V. 2. with godly jealouſie] Gr. the eal of God. He ſpeaketh as a wooer, yet as one who ſeeketh them not for himſelf, but for God.

eſpouſed you to one husband] The Greek word, ἡρμοσάμην, ſignifieth, either I have fitted and prepared you, or, I have eſpouſed you: and the Apoſtle ſeemeth to allude to Hoſea 2. 19. the husband is Chriſt, Matth. 25. 6. the Virgin Bride the Church of Corinth in regard of her faith, yet unſpotted: the contract is made in this life, but the marriage celebrated in the life to come, Apoc. 19. 7.

V. 3. through his ſubtilty] Gr. in.

corrupted from the ſimplicity that is in Chriſt] As precious liquor is corrupted by mingling it with other water; ſo is the doctrine of the Goſpel, by mingling therewith either Philoſophicall ſpeculations, or Jewiſh traditions, wherewith the falſe Apoſtles blended it. Chap. 2. 17. Col. 2. 8. 16.

V. 4. preacheth another Jeſus] A more perfect doctrine of Jeſus Chriſt. In which words he ſheweth that they deceive themſelves, if they look to receive of any other man, either a more excellent Goſpel, or more excellent gifts of the Holy Ghoſt, then they had received by his miniſtery: withall in the words, he that cometh, he taxeth the falſe Apoſtles, Gal. 1. 8, 9. who came of themſelves and were not ſent by God.

V. 5. ſuppoſe I] Gr. conceive, or reckon that I. Chap. 10. 11.

V. 6. But though I be rude in ſpeech] Saint Paul lacked not that kinde of Eloquence which was meet for an Apoſtle of Chriſt, and fit for the Goſpel, but he willingly wanted that painted kinde of ſpeech, and affected ſtraines which the falſe Apoſtles ſo much brag'd of. Though S. Jerome upon the third Epiſtle to the Epheſians, noteth certain ſolœciſmes, hyperbata, & deficiences, in Saint Pauls manner of expreſſing of himſelf: yet S. Auſtin in his 4. book, De Doct. Chriſ cap. 7. and S. Chryſoſtome in his Comments, and the ſame Jerome, Epiſt. 61. highly extoll Saint Pauls eloquence, to which few or none ever attained, but this eloquence proceeded not from the ſtudy of rhetorick, rick, nor was taught him in the Schooles, but given him by the Spirit.

V. 7. Have I committed an offence] Among other aſperſions which the falſe Apoſtles caſt upon Saint Paul, this was one, that he was a poor ſilly man, getting his living by his handy-craft, and preaching gratis, not entertained by the Church, nor allowed any honourable ſtipend; whereunto the Apoſtle anſwereth, that the Corinthians in this behalf were more beholding to him, that he was content to take any pains for their ſakes, and when he lacked, to travell for his living with his own hands in part, and partly alſo when poverty conſtrained him, he choſe rather to make uſe of the benevolence of other Churches, that he might not be any wayes burdenſome to the Corinthians.

V. 8. I robbed other Churches] It was lawfull for Saint Paul to receive a ſtipend for his labours in the miniſtery, yet becauſe when he preached at Corinth, he received wages to defray his neceſſary charge from other poorer Churches, he by a metaphor calleth that a kind of robbing them, becauſe he received from them that which they could not well ſpare, and that he ought to have received it rather from the Corinthians, with whom he then reſided, and exerciſed his miniſtery, and ſhould have had his wants ſupplyed by them.

V. 9. I was chargeable to no man] Or, I chill'd, or benummed none, or fainted not in any thing. See Chap, 12. 13. The word in the Originall, κατενάρκησα, as the Greek Scholiaſt obſerveth, ſignifieth a fainting or ſlackneſſe, chilneſſe, or benummedneſſe: and the Apoſtles meaning is, that though he were in great want, when he preached to them, and was not ſupplyed by them; yet his zeale was no whit thereby cooled, nor his induſtry abated, he flagg'd not any way in his miniſtery, no nor ſolicited any of the Corinthians to afford him neceſſary maintenance, nor lay heavy upon them, though their bounty ſlackned to him.

V. 10. no man ſhall ſtop me] Gr. this boaſting ſhall not be ſtopped in me.

V. 13. deceitfull workers] Or, workmen. Who ſeem to labour in the Lords vineyard, but indeed trifle out the time, and rather do hurt then good. Or, he calleth them deceitfull, becauſe whatſoever mask of zeale they put upon them, as if they ſought nothing but Gods glory, yet indeed they ſought their own gain and wrought upon advantage.

transforming themſelves into] Gr. transfigured into.

V. 14. transformed] Or, transfigured.

an Angell of light] A good and holy one, partaking of the brightneſſe of the celeſtiall glory, living and dwelling in the ſame, whereas the evill Angels are confined to everlaſting darkneſſe, Col. 1. 13. 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6. Now Satan may be ſaid to transform himſelf to an Angell of light, either when he aſſumes unto himſelf a lightſome body, as if he were an Angel of heaven; or when he ſuggeſteth things that ſeem to ſavour of piety, zeal, and holineſſe, as if the motion proceeded from a holy and bleſſed Angel: whereas thoſe things which he ſuggeſteth, as he ſuggeſteth them, tend indeed and truly to the diſhonour of God, and the ruine of their ſoules.

V. 15. transformed] Gr. transfigured.

V. 16. receive me] Or, ſuffer.

V. 17. I ſpeak it not after the Lord] Whatſoever Saint Paul wrote in his Epiſtles, he wrote by divine inſpiration, yet when he delivereth that for which he hath no expreſſe commandement from God, he ſaith he ſpeaketh by permiſſion, and not by command, 1 Cor. 7. 6. and v. 12. to the reſt ſpeak I, not the Lord, and ſo in this place, becauſe the Spirit of God in Scripture no where adviſeth to commend our ſelves, or glory of our gifts, but the contrary rather; he ſaith, he ſpeaketh not this according to the Lord, but as it were by way of folly; not by way of folly indeed, but as it were fooliſhly: take the words as they ſound by themſelves, they ſeem to ſavour of folly and vain-glory, but conſider upon what occaſion they are ſpoken, and to what end, and what profitable truth is contained in them, and ſo they ſavour of nothing leſſe then folly, confident of boaſting] Or, ground of my boaſting. See Chap. 9. 4.

V. 10. bring you into bondage] Here he deſcribeth the inſolent carriage of the falſe Apoſtles, and toucheth alſo upon the Corinthians themſelves, who perſwading themſelves that they were very wiſe men, did not mark in the mean ſeaſon, how their new Teachers abuſed their ſimplicity for advantage.

V. 21. I ſpeak fooliſhly] Gr. in fooliſhneſſe.

V. 22. ſo am I] See Phil. 3. 5.

V. 23. I am more] Paul being honourable indeed, not only defendeth his miniſtery openly, but magnifieth it alſo: not for his own ſake, but becauſe they wounded the Goſpell through his ſides, and by the vilifying of his perſon and office, he ſaw his doctrine come into hazard.

in deaths oft] In the pangs and ſorrowes of death, or in danger of preſent death.

V. 4: fourty ſtripes ſave one] The Apoſtle alludeth to the 25. of Deuteronomie, v. 3. But then it may be demanded, why in ſcourging S. Paul they abated one laſh, and gave him but 39. ſtripes. Menahemus Recinatenſis ſaith, that the Jews inflicted 39. ſtripes, with a reference to the curſes mentioned in the Law, which were preciſely 39. Others conceive that out of ſome piety, and that they might be ſure to keep within compaſſe, and the number of ſtripes permitted by the Law, they abated one. Abenezra bringeth their cabala or tradition for it; and moſt likely it is, that ſuch a cuſtome was among them, or elſe out of their hatred to the Apoſtle, they would not in five beatings have omitted five ſtripes.

V. 25. beaten with rods] See Acts 16. 22.

once was I ſtoned] See Acts 14. 19.

ſuffered ſhipwrack] See Acts 27.

I have been in the deep] Some by the deep, here underſtand a deep dungeon whoſe name was Bythos, where S. Paul lay hid for a time at Lyſtra. Others more probably that by deep is meant the Sea in which he floted, or ſwam after divers his ſhipwracks: thus the Greek Scholiaſt underſtandeth it ἐν πελάγει ἐνηχόμενος μετὰ τὸ ναυάγιον, and Sulpitius epiſt. 1. Non minor mihi videtur Gentium prædicator quem fluctus abſorbuit & poſt triduum totidémq; noctes emergentem ex fundo unda reſtituit.

V. 26. waters] Gr. rivers.

V. 28. that are without] The Greek word παρεκτὸς, ſignifieth not properly the things that are without, but the things that are beſides, and over and above: and the meaning is, beſides thoſe things which I have now reckoned with the reſt, the care of all the Churches lyeth upon me.

that which cometh upon me daily] Gr. my cumberance is daily.

V. 29. Who is weak] That is, wavering in his faith, conſtancy, or patience, who is ready to ſtumble or fall, and I my ſelf am not weak? that is, do not tremble for his ſake, and for the danger of his falling? By weakneſſe in the ſecond place he meaneth not the imbecillity of his own faith, or want of Ghoſtly ſtrength or courage, he being to comfort and ſtrengthen them all, but a tender taking to heart, and a compaſſionate care of thoſe that are weak in the Church.

who is offended, and I burn not] Gr. ſcandalized 1 Cor. 8. 13. That is, who is diſtempered, or ſcandalized by any offence, imprudency, temerity of others being in danger of falling, and I burn not with ſorrow and holy indignation, and with ardent zeale, for the glory of God and the ſalvation of thoſe that are ſcandalized?

V. 30. If I muſt needs glory] He turneth that againſt the Adverſaries which they objected againſt him, as if he ſhould ſay, they alledge my calamities to take away my Authority from me, but if I would boaſt my ſelf, I would take no better argument then my ſufferings for the Goſpel, and God himſelf is my witneſſe, that I deviſe and forge nothing.

V. 32. In Damaſcus the governour under Aretas the King] See Acts 9. 24.

CHAP. XII.

Verſ. 1. I Will come] Gr. For I will come.

viſions and revelations] Some diſtinguiſh viſions from revelations, after this manner: a viſion, ſay they, is when ſomething is ſupernaturally repreſented to the ſight, whereof yet the party knoweth not the meaning and ſignification: ſuch was the viſion of Pharoah, and Nebuchadonoſor: A revelation is, when ſomething is ſupernaturally repreſented to the ſight, and the meaning and ſignification thereof is made known to the party, who hath ſuch a viſion, and ſuch were the viſions of the Prophets. But becauſe it is not probable that S. Paul had any viſion, but withall Chriſt revealed unto him what that viſion meant, and imported, others with more probability diſtinguiſh viſions from revelations, that viſions may be without an extaſie, as when the women ſaw the Angels at the Sepulcher they were affrighted, yet not in an extaſie; but revelations, ſuch as S. Paul here ſpeaketh of, were apparitions in an extaſie, ſuch as was that of Peter in the Acts 10. 17. and S. Johns, Apoc. 1. 10.

V. 2. I knew a man in Chriſt] Or, know. Either the meaning is, I ſpeak this in Chriſt, that is, be it ſpoken without vainglory; for I ſeek nothing but Chriſt Jeſus only: or I knew a man in Chriſt, that is, a Chriſtian and believer, a man even my ſelf, who for all that will not be accounted otherwiſe of, then a man, no God, no Angell: thus he ſpeaketh of himſelf in a third perſon, in token of his humility, as if it were a matter that befell him without himſelf. The words in Chriſt may alſo carry the forme of an oath, as Rom. 9. 1. and ſo in Chriſt, is all one, as if he had ſaid by Chriſt.

whether in the body, &c.] Whether this was brought to paſſe by God, framing in my ſoule ſome repreſentation of thoſe heavenly things without any actuall ſeparation of the ſoul from the body; or whether my ſoul was ſeparated a while really from the body, and tranſported into heaven to contemplate there theſe marvellous things, I know not; but ſure I am, ſuch things were really repreſented unto me. Or, the words may carry alſo this ſenſe, whether I was caught up into heaven with body and ſoul together, or with the ſoul only, is unknown to me. Aquin and other Schoolmen argue, that Saint Paul was only in an extaſie, and for a time beſides himſelf, and that his ſoule was not actually ſevered from his body, for then he ſhould have been dead, and when afterwards he came to himſelf, raiſed from the dead. But neither will this follow (for according to the opinion of Philoſophers, and ſome divines alſo, who diſtinguiſh the ſpirit, or reaſonable ſoul, from the vegetative and ſenſitive, the reaſonable ſoul of Saint Paul might have been actually ſevered from his body for a time, and yet be not dead: his ſenſitive ſoul remaining ſtill in his body) nor can any man without preſumption take upon him to determine that which the Apoſtle himſelf could not reſolve, ſuch a determination how probable ſoever it may ſeem, S. Auſtine in his 12 book De Gen. ad lit. cap. 3. & lib. de pec. Orig. cap. 23. deſervedly cenſures for impudent and raſh.

caught up to the third heaven] That is, into the Empyreall heaven, the heaven of heavens, or ſeat of the bleſſed; It is called the third heaven, becauſe the Scriptures ſpeak of a three-fold heaven; the Aeriall heaven, in which the fowls flying are called fowles of heaven, Matth. 6.26. The ſecond, the Sidereall, in which the lights are called Stars of heaven, Gen. 15. 5. The third the uppermoſt of all, the Empyreall, in which the Angels reſiding are called the Angels of heaven, Matth. 24.36.

V. 3. knew] Or, know.

V. 4. caught up into Paradiſe] The Rabbins diſtinguiſh Paradiſe from heaven, affirming Paradiſe to be the receptacle or place of abode for ſouls, after the ſeparation from the body, but heaven the place where after the day of judgement the bodies and ſouls of the righteous ſhall everlaſtingly dwell. But neither can any ſuch diſtinction be proved out of Scripture, nor if it could, can Paradiſe be taken ſo in this place; for it is evident by comparing this verſe with the ſecond, that the ſame place is meant by Paradiſe and heaven. If there lye any myſtery in the varying of the word, and putting Paradiſe for heaven, it ſeems to be this, that the Apoſtle in this fourth verſe intimates, that in this rapture, beſides the contemplation of Cœleſtiall myſteries, he felt unſpeakable delight and pleaſure, like to, or exceeding that which Adam took in the terreſtriall Paradiſe.

unſpeakable words] The Greek ἄῤῥητα, ſignifieth words not uttered, or, not to be uttered; either becauſe they tranſcend mans capacity in this life, or that S. Paul was forbidden to utter them, they being revealed to him in particular, to ſtrengthen him againſt all the difficulties he was to encounter withall in his miniſtery, and not for the publike uſe of the Church; for otherwaies Paul hath faithfully revealed the whole counſell of God to the Church concerning mans ſalvation. See Acts 20.27.

thorn in the fleſh, &c.] Or, ſharp ſtake. or, ſplinter. See Ezek. 28. 24. Some by this thorn in the fleſh underſtand concupiſcence, but neither will the words following, added by the Apoſtle by way of explication: viz. the meſſenger of Satan to buffet me, well agree to concupiſcence; neither is it likely that S. Paul who ſpent all his time in travell or toilſome labour, watching and faſting, ſhould be troubled with fleſhly luſts, and if he had been, no doubt he would have uſed that remedy which he preſcribed to others, affected with the like malady, 1 Cor. 7.9. Others therefore underſtand by it, Alexander the Copperſmith, or ſome other inſtrument of Satan, who uſed the Apoſtle reproachfully, and was as a thorn in his ſide; or Satan himſelf, who, through Gods permiſſion, had power to puniſh the Apoſtle in his body, as he did Job, and S. Jerome and other Saints, if we may believe Eccleſiaſticall ſtories. But the remedy being ſpirituall, mentioned ver. 9. it is not probable that the maladie was corporall. It ſhould ſeem therefore, that becauſe the Apoſtle was exalted by viſions and Angelicall apparitions, it pleaſed God to humble him in the like kind, by ſuffering Satan, transforming himſelf into an Angell of light, to ſet upon the Apoſtle in ſuch a furious manner, laying ſo hard both at his faith and his ſincerity, that the Apoſtle was much diſheartned thereby. This fearfull aſſaulting and reproaching him to his face, was a kind of brow-beating or buffetting him: and becauſe it ſomewhat hindered him for a while in the chearfull proſecuting of his buſineſſe, it is not unfitly compared to a thorn in the foot, with which a man cannot go but lamely and with very great pain. In which regard the Apoſtle earneſtly beſought God that this Angelus Satan, or Satanæ, this evill and malignant Angell might depart from him; which his requeſt though God granted not, yet at the third asking he vouchſafed him this gracious anſwer, that though he would not remove this wicked Angell ſuddenly from him, yet he would ſo fortifie the Apoſtle with his grace againſt this wicked Fiend, that he ſhould get the victory over him.

V. 9. My grace is ſufficient for thee] That is, my grace ſhall ſo ſtrengthen thee in all aſſaults of temptation, that thou ſhalt be more then a Conquerour through me: or, content thy ſelf with my favour and love, which neither by this nor any other affliction is taken away or impaired; therefore faithfully indure this exerciſe of thy faith; for the more thou or any of the faithfull are aſſaulted, the more grace do I confer upon you, to conquer all temptations.

my ſtrength is made perfect in weakneſſe] The ſtrength or vertue of God can be neither increaſed nor diminiſhed, yet then is it ſaid to be perfected, when it manifeſteth it ſelf to the full, and demonſtrateth that nothing can overcome or conquer it. The greater infirmities men have, the grace of God ſheweth it ſelf the ſtronger and perfecter in ſupporting them in all aſſaults of temptation.

glory in mine infirmities] He concludeth, that he will only ſet his croſſes and afflictions againſt the vain brags of the falſe Apoſtles, and therewith alſo excuſeth himſelf, for that by their importunity he was conſtrained to ſpeak ſo much of thoſe things as he did; to wit, becauſe that of his Apoſtleſhip were contemned, his doctrine muſt needs fall to the ground.

may reſt upon me] Or, dwell. The Greek word σκηνώσῃ, ſignifieth to cover or compaſſe me as a tent, whereby men do ſhelter themſelves from the ſcorching of the Sunne, and other injuries of the ayr, ſo the meaning is, that the power of Chriſt may be my only ſafety and protection.

V. 10. I take pleaſure in infirmities] Gr. I think, or, like well of infirmities. I do not only bear them patiently, but alſo take great comfort in them.

when I am weak, then am I ſtrong] When I am weak in my ſelf, I am ſtrong in Chriſt; or, when I am weak in the fleſh, I am ſtrong in the Spirit. When he was caſt in priſon; and his feet made faſt in the ſtocks, he by his prayer cauſed the foundation of the priſon to be ſhaken; when after he had ſuffered ſhipwrack, and was caſt into a barbarous Iſland, and there a Viper light upon his finger, and the Iſlanders gave him for a gone man, he not only ſhook of the Viper without hurt, but alſo got great favour of the chief man in the Iſland, by curing his father of a fever and bloudy flux; and when he was brought before Nero, and all forſook him, yet even there (being a forlorn priſoner) he got the better of his potent adverſaries, and was delivered out of the mouth of the Lion. Thus God in his greateſt infirmities and diſtreſſes ſtrengthened and delivered him, that the Hiſtory of his life made good that which he here affirmeth of himſelf.

V. 11 for I ought to have been commended of you] You ought to have maintained the authority of my miniſtery, and given a teſtimony to the truth, how innocently I and my fellowes carried our ſelves among you. And here again he appealeth to the conſciences of the Corinthians, and maketh them witneſſes of thoſe things, whereby God had ſealed his Apoſtleſhip among them, and again he declareth by certain arguments, how farre he is from all coveteouſneſſe, and how tenderly and affectionately he loveth them in Chriſt.

for in nothing am I behind the very chiefeſt Apoſtles] Gr. was I inferiour to thee. See Chap. 11. 6.

V. 12. the ſignes of an Apoſtle] He taketh not the word ſigns here, as afterwards in this verſe, for wonders and mighty deeds, but by ſigns he means demonſtrations à ſigno, evident arguments, whereby it may well appear, that he was indeed an Apoſtle of Jeſus Chriſt.

V. 13. I my ſelf was not burdenſome to you] Or, was not ſlack. or, failed in any thing towards you. See Chap. 11.9.

V. 14. I will not be burdenſome to you] Or, ſlack in any thing towards you.

V. 15. gladly ſpend and be ſpent] That is, not onely beſtow my pains and my eſtate, but alſo my body, and lay down my life for you. Here the Greek Scholiaſt noteth ſeven ſteps or degrees in the Apoſtles love; the firſt, he might have received maintenance from them, (Chriſt ſo commanding it, that the Miniſters of the Goſpel ſhould live of the Goſpel) yet he would not. The ſecond, he was in want, yet would not be chargeable to them any way to relieve him. The third, he preached conſtantly to them, though they allowed him nothing for his pains. The fourth, he was at great expence with them. The fifth, he not only gladly beſtowed what he had, among them, but was willing to be beſtowed, and ſacrifice his life for them. The ſixt, this all he doth for thoſe who did but coldly affect him. The ſeventh, though they in no way anſwered him in his love, but as his love ſtill grew hotter to them, theirs grew colder to him, yet he diminiſhed nothing of his love to them, or care for them.

you] Gr. your ſouls.

V. 19. think you that we excuſe our ſelves] He concludeth, that he writeth not theſe things unto them, as though he needed to defend himſelf, for he is guilty of nothing that is laid againſt him, but becauſe it is behoveable for them to doubt nothing of his fidelity, who was their Inſtructer and Apoſtle.

V. 20. I ſhall be found unto you ſuch as you would not] Having confirmed, his Authority unto them, he rebuketh them ſharply, ly, and threatneth them alſo like an Apoſtle of Chriſt, that he will not ſpare them hereafter, unleſſe they repent, ſeeing that this is the third time he had warned them.

V. 21. God will humble me] He calleth the inflicting cenſures upon the Corinthians the abaſing of himſelf, becauſe as their proficiencie in Chriſts Schoole and growth in grace was a great cauſe of exaltation and glorying to him · ſo their falling into enormous crimes and continuing in them without repentance, enforcing him to uſe his Apoſtolicall power in cenſuring them, was a great hearts grief unto him, and occaſion of much dejection of mind.

CHAP. XIII.

Verſ. 1. C*oming to you*] Gr. Tec. ready to come to you.

In the mouth, &c.] See Deut. 9. 15.

V. 2. if I come again I will not ſpare] He threatneth here that he will make uſe of his Apoſtolicall power, which was very great and extraordinary, for they not only inflicted ſpirituall Cenſures, but alſo corporall; Paul ſtrook Bar-jeſus with blindneſſe, Act. 13. 11. Peter, Ananias and Saphira with death; and as was noted before, thoſe who were delivered by them to Satan, ſuffered not only in ſoul thereby being terrified in their conſcience, but alſo were often tormented into body.

V. 3. Since ye ſeek a proof of Chriſt] A ſharp reprehenſion; for that while they deſpiſe the Apoſtles admonition, they tempt Chriſts own patience, & while they contemn Paul as a miſerable man, they lay nothing herein againſt him which is not common to him with Chriſt. If ye ſeek a proof of Chriſts ſpeaking in me, look to your ſelves who had all your ſoundneſſe from my miniſtery, if ye have any.

V. 4. through weakneſſe] Saint Hilarie in his ninth book de Trinitate, expoundeth this place; Through the weakneſſe of his fleſh which was ſubject to all humane infirmities, ſin only excepted: or touching the vile forme of a ſervant, which he took upon him when he abaſed himſelf. To clear which paſſage, Oecumenius farther obſerveth that the word ἀσθένεια in Saint Paul, is taken in a three-fold ſenſe; ſometimes for bodily ſickneſſe, as 1 Cor. 11. 30. ſometimes for imbecility and wavering in faith, Rom. 14. 1. ſometimes for outward perſecutions, temptations, and afflictions, as it is taken in the former Chapter, verſe 9, 10. and ſo he takes the word in this place, ἐπιβουλὴν ὑπομείνας καὶ κίνδυνον καὶ ὕβριν. To infirmities painfull Chriſt in his ſtate of humiliation here upon earth was ſubject, but no waies to any infirmities that are ſinfull.

in him] Or, with him.

V. 5. Examine] Or, try.

Whether ye be in the faith] He confirmeth that which he ſpake of God appearing in his miniſtery, and he gathereth by the mutuall relation between the peoples faith and the Miniſters preaching, that they muſt either reverence his Apoſtleſhip upon whoſe doctrine their faith is grounded, or they muſt condemn themſelves of infidelity, and muſt confeſſe themſelves not to be of Chriſts body. Whether ye are in the faith, that is, in the ſtate of faithfull Chriſtians; and whether Chriſt live in you by his Spirit which you received by my Goſpell.

reprobates] Or, unapproved. or, rejected.

V. 6. reprobates] Or, unapproved. or, rejected.

V. 7. as reprobates] Or, unapproved. or, rejected. Not reprobates, but as reprobates, nor ſo ſimply, but in the opinion of ſome. In this verſe he mitigateth his former ſharpneſſe, truſting that they will ſhew themſelves towards their faithfull Apoſtles, apt and willing to be taught: adding this moreover, that he paſſed not for his own fame and eſtimation, ſo he may any way further their ſalvation, which is the only mark that he ſhooteth at.

V. 8. we can do nothing againſt the truth] Though it be a true axiome, Magna eſt veritas & praevalet; &, Veritas laborare poteſt, opprimi non poteſt; the truth is moſt ſtrong and cannot be ſubverted; yet it ſeems the Apoſtle here underſtandeth not ſo much truth of doctrine, as truth of life, ſincerity and true piety. For he threatneth to uſe his Apoſtolicall power in puniſhing, which that they might eſcape, he prayeth to God in the ſeventh ver. that they might do no evill; which exhortation he bindeth with this reaſon: For we cannot do any thing againſt the truth; that is, if you be innocent and walk in the truth, you need not fear any Anathema, or Church cenſure. For the power which the Lord hath given us, is for the ſupporting of the Church, and not deſtroying it, to uphold and maintain innocency and righteouſneſſe, true religion and vertue, and ſuppreſſe the contrarie.

V. 9. even your perfection] That all things might be in good order amongſt you, and the members of the Church reſtored which have been ſhaken and put out of their places.

V. 11. Be perfect] To three principall maladies, of which the Corinthians were ſick, ignorance, puſillanimitie, and faction, he applyeth three remedies: to the firſt, growth in grace, and the knowledge of Chriſt, and a ſtriving to perfection; ſaying, be ye perfect: to the ſecond, ſpirituall courage; ſaying, be of good comfort: to the third, unity; be of one mind, live in peace.

ANNOTATIONS
On the Epiſtle of Paul the Apoſtle, to the GALATIANS.

The ARGUMENT and ANALYSIS.

AFter Saint Paul had preached the Goſpel to the Galathians, ſome falſe Teachers addicted to Judaiſme, ſought to inveigle them to their Sect, perſwading them to be circumciſed, and to obſerve all the Moſaicall Rites, without which, they affirmed, That they could not be juſtified or ſaved: And becauſe this their Doctrine could not conſiſt with that which the Apoſtle had delivered, they derogated what they could from his Authority and Miniſterie, giving it out, That he was a Diſciple of the Apoſtles, and not of Chriſt; and that Peter, James, and John, who were the Pillars of the Church, forbad not the obſervation of the legall Rites; yea moreover, that Paul himſelfe, who now ſo much ſtickleth againſt circumciſion, had formerly circumciſed Timothy. Againſt theſe corrupters of his Doctrine, and vilifiers of his Perſon and Authority, hee was chiefly moved to write this Epiſtle to the Galatians; wherein he proveth, That his calling was immediately from Chriſt, that he was no way inferiour to the chief Apoſtles, and that the doctrine which he had delivered, concerning Juſtification by Faith without the Works of the Law, was the Truth of God, and firmly grounded upon Scripture.

The parts of this Epiſtle, are three:

1. Hiſtoricall, concerning himſelf, and the courſe of his Miniſtery. Chap. 1, 2. unto the 16. Verſe.
2. Doctrinall, concerning Juſtification by Faith, and the Abolition of legall Rites and Ceremonies. From Verſe 16. of the 2. Chapter, unto Verſe 14. of the 5. Chapter.
3. Morall, wherein he exhorteth the Galatians to Chriſtian duties; namely, To walke and live in the Spirit, to mildneſſe in cenſuring their Brethren, to charity in bearing one anothers Burdens, to bounty to their Teachers, to perſeverance in good Works, and rejoyeing in the Croſſe of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. From Verſe 14. of the 5. Chapter, to the end.

CHAP. I.

Verſ. 1. N*Ot of men, neither by man*] Or, from men. Nor of men: not by the Apoſtles, as Matthias was made an apoſtle; nor by the ſuffrages of any particular Church, as Barnabas and Silas; nor by any man, that is, any mortall man, or any meere man; but by Chriſt God and man, after his reſurrection. This deſcription the Apoſtle addeth of purpoſe to maintain his Apoſtolicall calling, and authoritie, againſt the ſlanders of the falſe Apoſtles, who gave out that he was not lawfully called to the Apoſtleſhip. For there are two ſorts of lawfull callings to the Miniſtery of the word: ordinary and extraordinarie: the ordinarie being indeed of God; but yet by men following therein the order of God, and ſuch is the calling of the ordinarie Miniſters of the word: an other calling there is without humane meanes, of and by God; or the Lord Chriſt himſelf; and ſuch was the calling of the Prophets in the old Teſtament, and the Apoſtles in the New. This calling is extraordinary, and ever accompanied with the infallibility, or never erring in doctrine, 2. Pet. 1. 21. Joh. 16. 13. Now that the Apoſtle Paul had ſuch an extraordinary calling is clearly proved, and the manner thereof deſcribed, Act. 9.

but by Jeſus Chriſt] Chriſt no doubt is man, but he is God alſo, and head of the Church, and in this reſpect exempted out of the ordinary number of men: the Apoſtles meaning is, that no meer man whoſoever was the Authour, means, or inſtrument of his calling to be an Apoſtle; and therefore it is not only lawfull, but altogether divine and equall to that of the reſt of the Apoſtles; which the Apoſtle urgeth, to ſtop the mouthes of the falſe Apoſtles that vilified his miniſtery in compariſon of others, to the end that they might introduce the neceſſity of the Moſaicall ceremonies, which the Apoſtles made uſe of among the Jewiſh novices, but Paul had quite caſhiered amongſt the Gentiles.

V. 4. Who gave himſelf for our ſinnes] Gave himſelf to death to expiate our ſins by his moſt precious bloud.

deliver us from] Gr. take us out.

preſent evill world] Out of that moſt corrupt ſtate which is without Chriſt. Joh. 17. 15.

V. 5. for ever and ever] Gr. for, or to worlds of worlds.

V. 6. removed] He uſeth the paſſive voyce to caſt the fault upon the falſe Apoſtles, and the Preſent Tence, μετατίθεσθε, to give them to underſtand, that it was not already done, but in doing.

from him that called you] Either from God who of his great mercy called you inwardly to the knowledge of his free grace in Chriſt, or from me who called you outwardly by the preaching of the Goſpel to the grace of Chriſt.

V. 7. pervert the Goſpel of Chriſt] For there is nothing more contrary to free juſtification by faith, which is the ſumme and main ſcope of the Goſpel, then to maintain juſtification by the Moſaicall rites or the works of the Law.

V. 8. though we, or an Angel from heaven] Or, if we. This is an impoſſible caſe, but the Apoſtle by propounding it, moſt confidently averreth the certainty of the curſe that ſhall come upon thoſe that preach any other Goſpel. See the like forme, John 8. 55. If I ſhould ſay I know him not, I ſhall be a lyar; and, 1 Cor. 13. 1, 2, 3.

other Goſpel unto you, &c.] Adding of his own invention any thing unto the ſubſtance of the doctrine, any Article of faith or ſacrament; which was the practiſe of the falſe Apoſtles; teaching, that we muſt be juſtified, not by faith alone, but by Moſaicall rites alſo, and the works of the law. And it is worthy the obſerving, that the Apoſtle ſaith not, If we or an Angel from heaven preach unto you any Goſpel contrary to that which we have preached; but, παρ' ὃ, τὸ ὅσον δήποτε μικρὸν, beſide that, or other then that we have preached: whereby he inſinuates, ſaith Cryſoſtome and Oecumenius, that it is an accurſed thing to make any the leaſt addition to the doctrine of the Goſpel, Revel. 22. 19.

then that] Gr. beſide that.

V. 9. then that] Gr. beſide that.

V. 10. perſwade men, or God] Or, make faith to men; or, ſeek to endear our ſelves to men; or, plead my cauſe before men. That is, do I perſwade you to obey men, or God? or, do I ſtudy to pleaſe, or ſeek to approve my ſelf and my miniſtery to men, or to God? for ſo the word πείθω ſometimes ſignifieth, as in that proverbiall verſe, δῶρα θεοὺς πείθει, δῶρ' αἰδοίους βασιλῆας.

for if I yet pleaſed men] If I ſhould yet ſeek to pleaſe men, as I did when I was zealous of the tradtions of my fathers, and perſecuted the Church of God extremely, to gain the more favour of mine owne Nation, I ſhould not be a true ſervant of Chriſt, but diſſemble with God and the world.

V. 12. revelation of Jeſus Chriſt] Whether this revelation was when he journied to Damaſcus and was ſmitten to the ground, and there ſhone round about him a light from heaven, and Chriſt ſpake unto him, Acts 9. 5. as S. Jerome conceiveth; or when he was rapt up into Paradiſe, 2 Corinth. 12. 4. as Aquinas imagineth; it cannot be certainly defined, only this is certain, that Saint Paul had the knowledge of the Goſpel by immediate revelation from Chriſt.

beyond meaſure, &c.] See Act. 9. 1.

traditions of my fathers] Either he meaneth the Phariſaicall traditions, for he was a Phariſee, and the ſonne of a Phariſee: Or, he may underſtand by traditions ſuch ordinances as his fathers received from God himſelf; but with this erroneous opinion of the Phariſees, that he might be juſtified before God for thoſe legall obſervations. This text ſeemeth to be parallel to Phil. 3. 6. Concerning zeal, perſecuting the Church, touching the righteouſneſſe which is in the law, blameleſſe.

V. 15. ſeparated me from my mothers womb] He ſpeaketh of Gods everlaſting predeſtination, whereby he appointed him to be an Apoſtle; whereof he maketh three degrees, The everlaſting counſell of God, his appointing from his Mothers wombe, and his actuall calling. See Rom. 1. 1.

V. 16. I might preach him, &c.] See Epheſ. 3. 8.

I conferred not with fleſh and blood] Or, conſulted. This may ſeem contrary to that which himſelf ſaith, Chap. 2. 2. I communicated the Goſpel with them at Jeruſalem. But the reconciliation is eaſie; here he denyeth that he conſulted with fleſh and bloud, that is, with any man living, namely, whether he were rightly inſtructed in the Goſpel, or whether he ought to preach it; for of this he neither did nor could make queſtion after he received the Goſpel by the immediate revelation of Chriſt: but there he affirmeth, that he communicated with the Apoſtles at Jeruſalem, not to learne any thing from them, for that he expreſly denies Verſe 6. but to receive a teſtimony from them of his conſent with them in the doctrine he had preached in Arabia and Syria; for he had preached the Goſpel before he conferred with them.

V. 18. I went up] Or, I returned.

to ſee Peter] Gr. Tec. to enquire of Cephas. The Greek word ἱςορῆσαι, ſignifieth more then to ſee or viſite, namely, as Heſychius explains the word, πυνθάνειν ἐρωτᾷν, to enquire into, to take ſpeciall notice of, and acquaint himſelf with Peter and his proceedings.

V. 19. other of the Apoſtles ſaw I none] Becauſe it might be objected, that indeed he was called of Chriſt in the way, but afterwards was inſtructed by the Apoſtles and others, and ſo was not of the number of them that were to be credited without exception: Saint Paul anſwereth, that he began ſtraightway after his calling, to preach the Goſpel at Damaſcus, and in Arabia, and was not from that time at Jeruſalem, but onely fifteen days, where he ſaw only Peter and James; and after he began to teach in Syria and Cilicia, with the conſent and approbation of the Churches of the Jews, who knew him onely by name, ſo far off was it that he was there inſtructed by them.

V. 22. And was] Or, But was.

V. 24. And they glorified God in me] They glorified Chriſt who ſpake in me; or they glorified God for me, they bleſſed his Name for my converſion; or as the Greek Scholiaſt, they praiſed God in me: not this or that Teacher, but God himſelf, who alone was my Teacher.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 2. I Went up by revelation] Gr. according to revelation. He was not ſent for by the Apoſtles to Jeruſalem, there to give an account of his preaching; but the Spirit by ſpeciall revelation moved him, that by conferring with the Apoſtles themſelves, and knowing their reſolution in the main point then in difference concerning the obſervation of legall Rites, he might ſtop the mouthes of the falſe Apoſtles, who gave out that he taught divers doctrines from them, and conſequently that the faithfull were rather to follow them then him, they being more, and he but one; they converſing with Chriſt himſelf, and called to the Apoſtleſhip before his Aſcenſion, Saint Paul after.

communicated unto] Gr. conſulted with. Ch. 1. 16.

had run in vain] By the metaphor of running, he ſetteth forth his alacritie, earneſtneſſe and diligence, like to theirs who prove maſteries, and run in a race for a rich prize. (1 Cor. 9. 26. 2 Tim. 4. 7.) Now in thoſe that run in a race, two things are conſiderable, their labour and ſwiftneſſe in running, and the end for which they run; to wit, the gaining the prize; which if they miſſe, they run in vain. This prize he accounted the fruit of his preaching, which had been little or none among the Jewes, who were zealous of the Moſaicall Rites, if by his communicating with the chief Apoſtles he had not taken away that rub which was caſt in his way, that his preaching and practiſe was diſſonant from theirs; although the Apoſtls nothing doubted of the certainty of his doctrine, yet becauſe there were certain reports caſt abroad of him, that he was of another opinion then the reſt of the Apoſtles were, which thing might have hindered the courſe of his Miniſtery, and in ſome places quite ſtop'd it, he took this journey to Jeruſalem, to remove that obſtacle.

V. 4. which we have in Chriſt Jeſus] Freedome from the curſe of the morall Law, and the burden of the ceremoniall, which we have in Chriſt, that is, in Chriſtianity, or purchaſed by Chriſt, who in the fulneſſe of time was made of a woman, and made under the Law; to redeem them that are under the Law, Gal. 4. 4. Chap. 5. 1.

V. 5. gave place, &c.] We gave no way to thoſe crafty companions, who by deceipt and counterfeit holineſſe crept in among the faithfull, who came to eſpie our liberty, that thereby they might enſnare and enthrall us: to theſe we gave no reſpit not for an hour, to lay their traps for us, nor in any thing yeelded unto them, to betray our Chriſtian liberty.

with you] Gr. to.

God accepteth no mans perſon] See Rom. 2. 11.

ſeemed to be ſomewhat] Gr. are of reputation.

V. 7. The Goſpel of the uncircumciſion was committed unto me] That is I had commiſſion to preach to the Gentiles who were uncircumciſed, as Peter to the Jews: which commiſſions were not yet ſo reſtrictive, but that Saint Peter preached to the Gentiles, and Saint Paul to the Jews, as it may be clearly proved out of the Acts of the Apoſtles; but the Goſpel of circumciſion is ſaid here to be committed to Saint Peter, and of uncircumciſion unto Paul, becauſe Peter was firſt and chiefly ſent to preach to the Jews, and Saint Paul to the Gentiles, and God moſt bleſſed Saint Peters labour among the Jews, and Saint Pauls among the Gentiles.

V. 8. was mighty in me towards the Gentiles] Gr. wrought in me. Word for word, wrought effectually: and this efficacy ſhewed it ſelf in three things eſpecially; the great number of converts, the power of miracles, and the extraordinary gift of the holy Ghoſt beſtowed upon the faithfull by the means of his miniſtery.

V. 9. who ſeemed to be pillars] Or, were counted. Whom alone, and onely theſe men counted for pillars of the Church, to ſupport it, and the doctrine of faith, by whoſe authority if my preaching were not upheld, it muſt fall to ground. Occumenius out of Euſebius his firſt book of Eccleſiaſticall Story, and Clemens Alexandrinus writeth, that this Cephas mentioned with James and John, was not Peter the Apoſtle, but one of the 70 diſciples of that name: but S. Jerome in his Comment. in epiſt. and Greg. Hom. 18. upon Ezekiel, refute this opinion, and it may eaſily be diſproved out of this Text, for it is not likely that the Apoſtle would have ranked any of the 70 diſciples with James and John, two of the chief Apoſtles and pillars of the Church; neither would the falſe Apoſtles have oppoſed the authority of one of the 70 diſciples againſt Saint Paul, whom they could not deny to be an Apoſtle. Beſides, to take away all ambiguity, the Apoſtle verſe 11. calleth him Peter.

V. 10. ſhould remember the poore] That is, to make collections in the Churches of the Gentiles for the Saints of Jeruſalem, which Saint Paul did moſt willingly and effectually, as appears out of the 1 Cor. 16. and 2 Cor. 8. 9.

forward to do] Gr. diligent, or carefull.

V. 11. Peter] Gr. Tec. Cephas.

I withſtood him to the face, becauſe he was to be blamed] Gr. condemned. Some interpret κατὰ πρόσωπον, in outward appearance and in ſhew: for they conceive that Peter and Paul were not in earneſt, but the one reproved the other before the multitude, and the other replied not at all though he could juſtly, that by the reproof of the one, and ſilence of the other, both Jews and Gentiles there preſent, might learn that the Judaicall rites were not to be eagerly retained, but by degrees to be relinquiſhed, and as it were honourably to be interred; This was the opinion of S. Jerome (who is as hot with S. Auſtine about this quarrell of the Apoſtles, or rather hotter then the Apoſtles themſelves) And of the Greek Fathers, whom he alledgeth for himſelf. Their chief reaſon was this, that if Saint Paul had reproved Peter in earneſt for his complying at this time with the Jews, he had reproved him for that of which himſelf was guilty. For he as he profeſſeth, that to the Jews he became a Jew, that he might winne the Jews, ſo by the advice of James and the Elders, Acts 21. 24. he ſhaved his head, and purified himſelf with four other men that had a vow on them. But S. Auſtine affirmeth moſt truly, that Saint Paul reproved Saint Peter in earneſt. For the Text ſaith, which is part of the Canonicall Scripture, and therefore infallible, that Saint Peter was faulty and to be blamed. His fault was, as is afterwards expreſſed diſſimulation, and halting between two opinions; before the Jews came from James, he freely conversed with the Gentiles, and did eat of meats prohibited by the Law of Moſes: but after theſe came, for fear of diſpleaſing them, in the lawfull uſe of his Chriſtian liberty, he withdraweth himſelf from them, and giveth a great ſcandall to the Gentiles, and a blow to Saint Pauls preaching, who had taught that thoſe legall ceremonies were now aboliſhed, and all Chriſtians freed from that yoke. What Saint Paul did was of another nature by the advice of James, to refute a falſe ſlander caſt upon him, when there was no Gentiles by, to be ſcandalized thereat.

V. 13. diſſembled likewiſe with him] Gr. joyned in hypocriſie with.

V. 14. walked not uprightly] Gr. with a right foot. Word for word; the Originall ſignifieth, to walk with a right foot, which he oppoſeth to halting and diſſembling.

truth of the goſpel] He calleth the truth of the Goſpel, both the ſincere doctrine it ſelf, and alſo the uſe of the ſame, which we call practiſe.

If thou, being a Jew, liveſt after the manner of Gentiles] He meaneth not that Saint Peter lived diſſolutely after the manner of the Gentiles, as thoſe whom the zealous Father reprehending faith, Gentes agimus ſub nomine Chriſti: But that like the converts among the Gentiles, he uſed his Chriſtian liberty, in eating all ſorts of meats, without putting a difference between clean and unclean.

why compelleſt thou the Gentiles] Gr. Tec. how is it that thou compelleſt.

V. 15. not ſinners of the Gentiles] Sinners eſtranged from the covenant of grace, deſtitute of the Rule of the Law, men in a deplorate and deſperate eſtate, ſuch as the Jews accounted all the Gentiles and Paynims to be in, Eph. 2. 12. and yet themſelves could not be juſtified by the Law, which they of all other might have made the leaſt claim unto.

V. 16. by the works of the law ſhall no fleſh be juſtified] See Rom. 3. 20.

V. 17. But if while we ſeek to be juſtified] Before he goeth any further, he meeteth with their objection who abhorred the doctrine of free juſtification by faith; becauſe ſay they men are by this means withdrawn from the ſtudy of good works, and in this ſort they framed their objection. If ſinners ſhould be juſtified through Chriſt by faith without the law, Chriſt ſhould ſeem to approve ſinners, and as it were exhort them thereunto by his miniſtery: Paul anſwereth, that this conſequence is falſe, becauſe Chriſt deſtroyeth ſinne in all true believers. For therefore, ſaith he, do men flee unto Chriſt through the terrour and fear of the law, that being quit from the curſe of the law, they may be ſaved by him, and that he together with his juſtifying them, beginneth in them by little and little that ſtrength and power of his, which deſtroyeth ſin, to the end, that the old man being aboliſhed by the vertue of Chriſts death, he may live in them, and they may conſecrate themſelves to God: therefore if any man give himſelf to ſinne after he hath received the Goſpel, let him not accuſe Chriſt, nor the Goſpel, but himſelf, for that he deſtroyeth the work of God in himſelf.

by Chriſt] Gr. in. See Rom. 2. 4.

V. 18. deſtroyed] Gr. have diſſolved.

V. 19. through the law am dead] Or, by. Gr. was. The law which terrifieth the conſcience, bringeth us to Chriſt, and he onely cauſeth us to die to the law. Indeed, becauſe that by making us righteous, he taketh away from us the terrour of conſcience, and by ſanctifying us, cauſeth a through mortifying of luſt in us; that it cannot take ſuch occaſion to ſinne by the reſtraint which the law maketh. See Rom. 7. 10, 11.

V. 20. I now live in the fleſh] By living in the fleſh, he underſtandeth not walking according to the fleſh, or living in a carnall and fleſhly manner, but living in this frail and mortall body.

gave himſelf for me] What he ſpeaketh of himſelf belongeth to all true believers; but he applieth the benefit of Chriſts paſſion to himſelf in particular, as well to teach us ſpeciall faith and affiance in Chriſt, as to enflame our love to him, to whom we are as much indebted, as if he had ſhed his bloud for us alone and in particular.

V. 21 dead in vain] Although there be many uſes and benefits of Chriſts death, beſides our juſtification, yet the Apoſtles argument is very ſtrong, that there would have been no neceſſity for our ſalvation that Chriſt ſhould have died, and by his bloud expiated our ſinnes, if men might have been juſtified by the works of the law, either ceremoniall or morall.

CHAP. III.

Verſ. 1. WHo hath bewitched you] The word in the Originall, [illegible], is derived, [illegible], burning with the eye, ſignifying a kind of witchcraft practiſed upon the eyes of young children and cattell, according to that of the Poet; Neſcio quis teneros oculus mihi faſcinat agnos: and the meaning of the Apoſtle is, that as thoſe witches, who caſt venemous beams out of their eyes miſchief children, and ſucklings; ſo thoſe falſe teachers poyſoned the tender faith of the Galatians: or as the devill by thoſe witches put out the eyes of the body, ſo the evill ſpirit by thoſe falſe teachers his inſtruments, put out the eyes of their minde; At quemadmodum tenera ætas noceri dicitur faſcino, ſic etiam Galatæ in Chriſti fide super novi & nutriti lacte veluti quodam faſcinati eſſe notis, & ſtomacho fidei nauſeantes Spiritus ſancti fidem evomuerint.

crucified among you] Chriſt was laid before you ſo lovely and ſo plainly, that you had his lively image as it were repreſented before your eyes, as if he had been crucified in your ſight: or Chriſt was crucified among you, that is, ſuffered much in his members perſecuted among you. In which ſenſe Chriſt ſpeaking to Saint Paul ſaid, Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou me? Acts 9. 5, 6. and to Saint Peter, a little before his death, I go again to Rome to be crucified, as we read in the Eccleſiaſticall Stories.

V. 2. received ye the Spirit] Thoſe ſpirituall graces and gifts, which were a ſeal as it were to the Galatians, that the Goſpel that was preached unto them was true. But here it may be objected, that the Galatians received not the Spirit by faith, but faith by the Spirit. For faith is the gift of God, and a ſpeciall work of the Spirit in the heart. Hereunto it may be anſwered, that either the Apoſtle meaneth by the Spirit, the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit, as the gift of tongues, and healing, which the Galatians received by Pauls preaching the Chriſtian faith among them, or elſe he meaneth by the Spirit, the Spirit of comfort, and ſanctification, which goeth not before, but followeth true faith; for being juſtified by faith we have peace with God, and feel the Spirit of comfort within us.

of faith] That is, the word and doctrin of faith, Rom. 10. 8.

V. 3. perfect by the fleſh] By the fleſh, he meaneth the ceremonies of the law, againſt which he ſetteth the Spirit, that is, the ſpirituall working of the Goſpel. Heb. 7. 16. & 9. 10.

V. 4. ſo many] Or, ſo great.

in vain] εἰκῆ, That is without any profit; So S. Baſil uſeth the phraſe, Hom. adu. Heb. [illegible], O how many nights have you watched, how many dayes have you ſpent unprofitably?

V. 6. Even as Abraham believed God] See Gen. 15. 6. accounted to him]. Or, imputed.

for righteouſneſſe] Gr. to.

V. 8. In thee ſhall all nations be bleſſed] See Gen. 12. 3.

V. 9. with faithfull Abraham] Not by faithfull Abraham; to give us to underſtand, that the bleſſing cometh not from Abraham, but from him by whom Abraham and all his poſterity is bleſſed.

V. 10. are of the works of the law] They who are of the works of the law, that is, they which ſtand upon the works of the law for their juſtification, or which value their righteouſneſſe by the performance of the law are accurſed, therefore they are bleſſed which are of faith, that is, they who have righteouſneſſe by faith.

Curſed is every one that continueth not in all things] See Deut. 27. 26.

V. 11. The juſt ſhall live by faith] See Hab. 2. 4. Rom. 1. 17. Heb. 10. 38.

The man that, &c.] See Levit. 18. 5.

V. 12. the law is not of faith] The Law promiſeth life to all that keep it, and therefore if it be kept it juſtifieth and giveth life; but the Scripture attributing righteouſneſſe and life to faith, taketh it from the Law; ſeeing faith juſtifieth by imputation of anothers righteouſneſſe, and the law by the performing of the work in our own perſon.

V. 13. hath redeemed us from the curſe of the law] In theſe words he preventeth an objection, How can they be bleſſed whom the Law pronounceth to be accurſed; becauſe Chriſt ſuſtaineth the curſe which the Law laid upon us, that we might be quit from it.

Curſed is every one, &c.] See Deut. 21. 23.

V. 15. covenant] Or, teſtament.

V. 16. And to ſeeds, as of many; but as of one] The word ſeed is ſometimes taken for the whole poſterity, as Gen. 13. 15. Sometimes for a particular perſon deſcended from ſuch a one, as Gen. 4. 25. and 21. 13. and here the Apoſtle ſheweth that it muſt be taken in the ſecond ſenſe, teaching that Chriſt is that ſeed, as it is afterwards expounded.

which is Chriſt] That is, all his myſticall body, viz. the whole Church, having all their life and being from him, and alſo participating of the glory of his name: all which are as one ſeed conſiſting of Jews and Gentiles, 1 Cor. 12. 12. For it is the ſcope of the Apoſtle to prove the aſſurance of eternall life to all believers for Chriſts ſake, according unto the promiſe made unto Abraham.

V. 17. which was four hundred and thirty years after] Theſe

yeers are to be reckoned from the promiſe firſt made to Abraham, which fell upon the 75. year of his age.

V. 19. Wherefore then ſerveth the Law] If the inheritance be not by the law, then why was the law given after the promiſe was made? the Apoſtle anſwereth, to reprove and convince men of ſinne, and ſo to teach them to look unto Chriſt in whom at length that promiſe of ſaving all people together ſhould be fulfilled, and not that the law was given to juſtifie men.

becauſe of tranſgreſſions] To make them known, Rom. 5. 20. & 7. 7. and to convince men thereof; to diſcover the hainouſneſſe of ſinne, and to ſeal the condemnation thereof; thus to drive men to ſeek for the remedy of grace in the promiſed Meſſiah.

till the ſeed ſhould come] This uſe of the ſervile manuduction was to laſt during the Churches infancy, and proneneſſe to fall into ſinne by infirmity, or ignorance; but it was to be laid by and ſurceaſe at the coming of Chriſt into the fleſh, who collecting into one and the ſame body the whole Church of Jews and Gentiles together, ſupplying the ſame with the abundant graces of the Spirit in knowledge and vertue, hath made the ſame to be effectually acknowledged the bleſſed ſeed, or progeny of the children of God, verſ. 26. wholly ſet and bent to love and obey him by the Spirit of adoption and grace, and not by the ſpirit of terrour as of old, Rom. 8. 15.

ordained by angels]. God would ſhew in the very outward manner which he obſerved in giving the law, that thereby there was no acceſſe for man to his grace for obtaining life and the inheritance; and therefore he appeared there in ſuch an extremity of terrour, that upon the peoples requeſt which was not able to endure thoſe terrours it was needfull that Moſes came between, who was as the mediatour of that communication, Exod. 20. 19. Heb. 12. 19. being therein the type of Chriſt the onely Mediatour of propitiation, by whom we have acceſſe to God with confidence. Now although there is no mention made of the miniſtery of Angels by Moſes in giving the Law, yet may it well be gathered from divers other Texts of Scriptures, as Act. 7. 53. Heb. 2. 2.

in the hand of a Mediatour] Some by this Mediatour underſtand Moſes, whom God did uſe as an interpreter between himſelf and the people in giving the Law: others underſtand Chriſt himſelf by whom God led the people of Iſrael out of Egypt through the wilderneſſe, and ſpake to Moſes on Mount Sinai, Act. 7. 38. 1 Tim. 2. 5.

V. 20. Now a mediatour is not a mediatour of one] Either the meaning is, a Mediatour is not a Mediatour of one partie, but betwixt two, and theſe diſagreeing; this ſheweth that at the giving of the Law there was a difference and a diſtance between God and us, which difference grew from this, that we were tranſgreſſours of the Law: or the meaning is, a Mediatour is not a Mediatour of one Covenant onely, but as well of the Covenant of grace as of the Covenant of works.

but God is one] In theſe words he taketh away an objection, leſt any man might ſay, that ſometimes by conſent of the parties which have made a Covenant ſomething is added to the Covenant; or the former Covenants are broken; this, ſaith the Apoſtle, cometh not to paſſe in God, who is alwayes one and the ſelf ſame, and like to himſelf, and hath the ſame ſcope and end in both his Covenants; for Chriſt is the end of the Law: or, that God is ſtill the ſame in holding a diſtance between himſelf and tranſgreſſours, if they ſeek to be juſtified by the Law.

V. 22. all under ſinne] See Rom. 3. 9.

V. 24. Wherefore the Law was our ſchool maſter] A means and inſtrument to rule and regulate our minds and actions agreeable to the infancy of the Church with a great deal of auſterity. The Jews under the law here are compared to children, and the faithfull under the Goſpel to men of riper years that need no ſchool-maſter; the ſchool-maſter is the Law, both Morall and Ceremoniall. For the Morall Law leadeth unto Chriſt by convincing us of ſinne, and denouncing the curſe againſt it, ſhewing us thereby that if we deſire to eſcape that curſe we muſt flie to Chriſt for refuge, who hath redeemed us both from ſinne and curſe; and the Ceremoniall Law alſo brings us unto Chriſt; becauſe the ſame not onely convinceth men of ſinne, but alſo exhibiteth types and figures of Chriſt and his benefits; and teacheth that whatſoever was ſhadowed out by them, was truly to be found in Chriſt, Heb. 9. 10, 11.

V. 27. as many of you] See Rom. 6. 3.

as have been baptized into Chriſt] To all that are baptized in Chriſts Name with the inward baptiſme as well as the outward Chriſt is effectually applyed, even like a garment to the body, to communicate unto them his juſtice, life, right, and dignities: that as himſelf is the Sonne of God by nature, they ſhall be made his children by grace and adoption, and that without all diſtinctions of either nation, ſtate, or condition.

have put on Chriſt] As a ſpirituall garment wherewith our ſpirituall ſhame and nakedneſſe is covered, and we are adorned as with rich and comely apparell.

V. 28. for ye are all one in Chriſt Jeſus] That is, countrey, ſex, or nation makes no difference; but if we are true believers, we are in equall eſteem with God, or we are all one in Chriſt, that is, we make all one myſticall body communicating with Chriſt as our head, and one with another as members.

CHAP. IV.

Verſ. 1. NOw I ſay] He declareth that by another ſimilitude which he ſaid before, concerning the School-maſter: for he ſaith that the Law, that is, the whole government of Gods houſe according to the law, was as it were a kind of Tutorſhip, or office of an Over-ſeer appointed for a time, and that we ſhould at length come to be at our own liberty, and live as children, not as ſervants. Moreover he ſheweth by the way, that that governance of the Law was as it were an A. B. C. or Accedence in compariſon of the doctrine of the Goſpel.

V. 3. elements of the world] Or, rudiments. By the elements of the world he underſtandeth the corporall types and carnall Ceremonies of the Law, which are called elements or rudiments; becauſe that God by them inſtructed the Church as it were by rudiments, and afterwards powred out his holy Spirit moſt plentifully in the time of the Goſpel.

V. 4. when the fulneſſe of the time] The full grown age of the Church to be freed from under this wardſhip; or when the time was fulfilled which God had appointed for to ſend his Sonne into the world.

God ſent forth his Sonne] ἐξαπέστειλε, He ſent out of himſelf, or his eſſence; or from heaven: for God would have that the eternall Sonne in his boſome by taking humane fleſh ſhould come out of him as it were, and manifeſt himſelf unto the world, or iſſue forth out of the eternall palace of his glory, and in his own perſon upon earth fulfill the work of the redemption of mankinde.

made of] Not born as other men, but made by the holy Ghoſt out of the fleſh and bloud of the Virgin Mary, without the concurrence of man, Gen. 3. 15. Iſa. 7. 14. Mic. 5. 3. Luk. 1. 31. and 2. 1.

a woman] The word γυνὴ, is here taken, as often elſe-where in Scripture, for the name of the ſex, and generally a maid that is manageable is termed by the Greeks γυνὴ. So ſaith Procopius, γυνὴ λέγεται καὶ ἡ παρθένος, ἡλικιαζουσα κλήσεως, and ſo the civill Lawyer, titulo de verb. ſignif. Mulieris appellatione etiam virgo viripotens continetur. This text therefore maketh nothing for Helvidius, nor againſt the perpetuall virginity of Mary.

made under the law] Having taken upon him the form of a ſervant, Phil. 2. 7. he made himſelf ſubject to the entire obſervation and ſatisfaction of the whole law: thereby to purchaſe to all believers the right and claim to eternall glory, and to deliver them not onely from the malediction of the Law, but alſo from the burden of all the legall rites and ceremonies.

V. 5. under the law] That is, that were under the yoke of the ceremoniall law, and alſo under the curſe of the morall; whereof he ſpeaketh in the former Chapter.

the adoption of ſonnes] Therefore was the Sonne of God ſent to redeem us, that he might purchaſe and graciouſly communicate the right of Sonne-ſhip (which he hath by nature) to all the faithfull, 2 Cor. 6. 18. This adoption of the Sonne of God was from everlaſting, but is revealed and ſhewed in the time appointed for it.

V. 6. And becauſe ye are ſonnes] He ſheweth that we are in ſuch ſort free and ſet at liberty, that in the mean ſeaſon we muſt be governed by the Spirit of Chriſt, which reigneth in our hearts, and teacheth us the true ſervice of the Father; but this is not to ſerve, but rather to enjoy true liberty as becometh ſonnes and heirs.

the Spirit of his Sonne] See Rom. 8. 15. The holy Ghoſt is both of the Father and the Sonne, but there is a peculiar reaſon here why he is called the Spirit of his Sonne; to wit, becauſe the holy Ghoſt ſealeth up our adoption in Chriſt, and giveth us a full aſſurance of it.

V. 7. a ſervant] The word ſervant is not taken here for one that liveth in ſinne, which is proper to infidels, but for one that is yet under the Ceremonies of the Law, which is proper to the Jew.

an heir of God] Some read here by God, that is, by his grace and mercy; others, heir of God, becauſe coheirs of Chriſt, who is the Son and Heir of God.

V. 9. turn ye again] Or, turn ye back.

to the weak and beggarly elements] Or, rudiments. The carnall Rites of the Moſaicall Law are called here weak and beggarly elements, being conſidered apart by themſelves, without Chriſt; and for the Galatians to fall back from Chriſt to theſe Ceremonies, was nothing elſe but to caſt away riches, and follow beggery.

V. 10. Ye obſerve dayes] Ye, following the doctrine of the falſe apoſtles, place holineſſe and righteouſneſſe in the Moſaicall call obſervations of dayes, the Jewiſh Sabbath returning every week; and moneths, that is, the Feaſts of the new Moons; and times, that is, the ſolemn yearly feaſts of the Paſſeover, the Pentecoſt, and Tabernacles; and years, that is, every fiftieth year, being the year of Jubile.

V. 12. be as I am] He mitigates and qualifies thoſe things wherein he might have ſeemed to have ſpoken too ſharply, declaring his good will towards them in ſuch ſort, that the Galatians could not but either be utterly deſperate, when they read theſe things, or acknowledge their own lightneſſe with tears, and deſire pardon. Be you as I am, that is, take me for an example, who was once as zealous for thoſe Legall Rites, as you are now; but now I count them, and all things elſe, but as dung, in compariſon of the excellent knowledge of Chriſt. Phil. 3. 9.

V. 13. through the infirmity of the fleſh] Either through the infirmity of your fleſh I preached unto you; that is, I condeſcended to your capacitie, and preached ſuch doctrine as you were able to bear away: or, through the infirmity of my fleſh, either being infirm in body, or much broken through manifold griefs and afflictions which I ſuffered among you. 1 Cor. 2. 3.

V. 14. And my temptation] That is, thoſe daily troubles wherewith the Lord tried me amongſt you. Acts 20. 19.

V. 15. Where is then the bleſſedneſſe] Or, what was then. What is become of the great applauſe which you gave me at my firſt preaching, counting your ſelves moſt *happy in me your A*poſtle? or, what talk was there abroad in the world, how happy you thought your ſelves, and bleſſed the time God ſent me amongſt you?

V. 16. Am I therefore become your enemy, &c.] Sith all men naturally deſire the truth, and love it, how comes it to paſſe that any man ſhould be hated for ſpeaking the truth? Saint Auſtine in his confeſſions yieldeth a reaſon by diſtinguiſhing of truth, Omnes amant veritatem lucentem, ſed non redarguentem; all men love the truth, when that truth concerneth not themſelves, they love truth ſhining, but not convincing; they love the truth when ſhe diſcovereth her ſelf, not when ſhe diſcovereth themſelves. Hence is that true proverb, Obſequium amicos, veritas odium parit. The beams of the Sun, which refreſh and clear a ſound eye, offend a ſore eye, urit enim fulgore ſuo.

V. 17. They zealouſly affect you] Or, they are jealous over you. He compareth the falſe teachers to jealous wooers, who can by no means endure any corrivall; therefore, ſaith the Apoſtle, they exclude you from me, and the true doctrine of faith, which I have delivered unto you, that you may be wholly theirs, and I have no part in you: they zealouſly affect you, but not well, becauſe not to a good end, but to impropriate you to themſelves, and make advantage of you.

exclude you] Or, exclude us.

V. 18. But it is good to be zealouſly affected alwayes] The faithfull are to be commended for their zealous affection, and entire love to their Paſtours, eſpecially if it be conſtant, and for the truths ſake; but the Galatians have quite forgotten me, ſince my departure from you: Out of ſight, out of minde.

V. 19. of whom I travail] Ye are my children, whom with much pain and travail I brought forth before to Chriſt, but now ye have corrupted and defaced his image, and are fallen away from your former profeſſion; and therefore I am now in labour with you, and travail with exceeding great pain the ſecond time, till Chriſt be again perfectly formed in you, and you receive the right ſhape of Chriſtians.

V. 20. change my voice] That is, either uſe other words among you, and turn my complaints into praiſes; or change my ſpeech into groans, and my words into tears, to bewail your apoſtaſie; and by thoſe true ambaſſadours of my affection to perſwade you to return to your former profeſſion.

I ſtand in doubt of you] Or, I am perplexed for you. Gr. in you.

V. 23. born after the fleſh] That is, born, as all men are, by the common courſe of nature; for Agar was young, and it ceaſed nut to be with her after the manner of women, whereas the womb of Sara was dead, and ſo the birth of Iſaac from her was, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, a ſimilitude of the reſurrection, above the power and force of nature.

by promiſe] By vertue of the promiſe which Abraham laid hold on for himſelf and his true ſeed: for otherwiſe Abraham and Sara were paſt begetting and bearing of children.

V. 24. Which things are an allegory] Which are indeed a true ſtory of things paſt; but yet do ſignifie ſomewhat elſe beſides, as being types and repreſentations of ſpirituall things, as likewiſe was the Braſen Serpent, John 3. 14. the marriage of Adam and Eve, Epheſ. 5. 32. the paſſing of the Iſraelites over the Red-ſea, 1 Cor. 10. 1, 2. and the deluge. 1 Pet. 3. 21.

for theſe are the two covenants] Or, Teſtaments. That is, ſhew forth, point, and ſignifie, a ſacramentall kinde of ſpeech, like to that, Gen. 41. 26. and Matth. 26. 26. The two Covenants are the old and the new; the old, of the Law, wherein promiſe is made, that thoſe who perfectly keep the Law ſhall thereby obtain ſalvation: and the new, of the Goſpel, wherein eternall life is promiſed to ſinners that repent and believe in Chriſt. Jerem. 31. 31. Heb. 8. 8, 9.

which gendreth to bondage] Which bringeth forth children that are in bondage: for the law requireth a perfect obedience of men, or in caſe of failing, pronounceth a curſe upon them; and of it ſelf it is unable to free them from their naturall ſervitude, and much more unable to procure them the grace of God, and the inheritance of everlaſting life.

V. 25. For this Agar is mount Sinai in Arabia] Either the meaning is, Agar is alſo called Sinai, a mount in Arabia, whither Agar fled with her ſonne Iſmael, being thruſt out of Abrahams houſe, from whom the mount it ſelf (as ſome affirm) was afterwards called Agar by the Arabians, and from thence they themſelves are called Agarens, Pſal. 83. 6. Or the meaning is, Agar is a figure or image of Sinai, and of the Covenant of the Law, which was proclaimed on it; as Agar was a ſtranger without the bleſſed Seed, ſo was Sinai in Arabia the land of the Iſmaelites, who iſſued forth from Agar, without the limits of the land of promiſe.

and anſwereth to Jeruſalem] Or, is in the ſame rank with Jeruſalem. Some read bordereth upon Jeruſalem; and Genebrard in his Comment upon the Pſalmes affirmeth, that there is a continuall tract from it to Jeruſalem; perpetuo jugo in dorſo ſeſe verſus, Bizitis montes exporrigit. But the Geographicall Tables ſhew no ſuch thing: and as Bencius a Sorbonick Doctour, acknowledgeth, Sinai is full twenty dayes journey from Jeruſalem. The better Tranſlation therefore is, it anſwereth to Jeruſalem, that is, in the allegory and myſticall ſignification.

V. 26. But Jeruſalem which is above] The true Chriſtian Church, which ſeeketh her ſalvation, not by the firſt Covenant of the Law, but by the ſecond, of the Goſpel, which is ſaid to be above, partly becauſe it hath its originall from heaven, partly in reſpect of the part triumphant in heaven, partly in reſpect of the militant, which ſteers its courſe to heaven, Phil. 3. 10. and ſhall in the end be brought thither.

which is the mother of us all] As Sara was the mother of Iſaac, the proper heir of his father Abraham, ſo is the Chriſtian Church the mother of all the faithfull, who are heirs of the Kingdome of heaven, whether they be Jews or Gentiles.

V. 28. as Iſaac was] Gr. according, or, after the manner of Iſaac. Who was as the firſt begotten of the ſupernall Jeruſalem, as Iſmael was of the ſlaviſh Synagogue.

are the children of promiſe] See Rom. 9. 8.

V. 29. born after the Spirit] That is, by vertue of Gods promiſe, and after a ſupernaturall and ſpirituall manner, Sara conceiving in her old age rather by faith then by luſt.

V. 30. Nevertheleſſe] Gr. But.

Caſt out the bond-woman and her ſon] Gr. Tec. her ſelf and her ſon. See Gen. 21. 10.

CHAP. V.

Verſ. 1. STand faſt, &c.] Gr. Tec. Chriſt hath made us free, ſtand therefore in that libertie, and.

and be not intangled] Gr. held, or kept in with. Tied or faſtened thereunto as it were with cords & ropes. A compariſon taken from Oxen, who have the yoke bound faſt to their hornes or neck, thereby to force them, ſubdue, and keep them in.

again with the yoke of bondage] It doth not appear that theſe Galatians had ſubmitted themſelves to the yoke of Moſes before their converſion to Chriſt, and now after their falling away from Chriſt, had enſlaved themſelves the ſecond time to thoſe legall obſervations; but the meaning is, Before ye were ſubject and enſlaved to your Idols, being redeemed from that ſlavery, do not enthrall your ſelves again to a new bondage of Ceremonies, take not upon you a new yoke, and ſo heavie a one, as neither we nor our fathers were able to bear, Acts 15. 10.

V. 3. I Paul ſay unto you, that if ye be circumciſed] See Acts 15. 1. If ye be circumciſed, out of this perſwaſion, to be juſtified thereby, Chriſt ſhall profit you nothing; for juſtification by faith, and juſtification by the works of the Law cannot ſtand together; he inſtanceth particularly in circumciſion, becauſe it was the ground of all the ſervice of the Law, and chiefly urged by the falſe Apoſtles. It is true, Circumciſion in another place is called the Seal of the righteouſneſſe of faith, but here we muſt have conſideration of the circumſtances of time, for now had Baptiſme come in the place of Circumciſion: and moreover Paul reaſoneth according to the opinion that his oppoſites (the falſe teachers) had of it, who made it a matter of ſalvation, and neceſſary means of juſtification.

V. 3. For] But, or, And.

is a debter to do the whole law] Becauſe he that obſerveth the Ceremoniall Law in one thing, is bound to obſerve it in all; and what a ſervitude were that? The reaſon is evidently drawn from the connexion which is between all the parts of the Ceremoniall Law, and the curſe pronounced againſt all who fulfill not that whole law to a tittle.

V. 4. Chriſt is become of no effect unto you] Gr. Ye are made void, fruſtrate, or aboliſhed from Chriſt.

are juſtified by the Law] That is, ye fruſtrate and make void your juſtification by Chriſt, who ſeek to be juſtified by the Law, for indeed no man is, or can be juſtified by the Law. See Rom. 3. 20.

ye are fallen from grace] That is, from the true doctrine of Chriſts free grace, for that cannot conſiſt with juſtification by the works of the Law.

V. 6. For in Jeſus Chriſt] Seeing in Chriſt we have ſpirituall circumciſion, there is no need of carnall; they therefore who were circumciſed before they believed, namely, ſuch of the Jews as were called to the knowledge of the truth, gain nothing thereby, neither do the unbelieving Gentiles loſe by their uncircumciſion. Chap. 6. 15.

but faith which worketh by love] The word in the Originall ἐνεργουμένη, being in the Mean voice, may be taken either actively or paſſively; if paſſively, the meaning is, that faith is actuated, quickened and moved by love to do good works; if actively, then the meaning is, that it is not a dead and unworking faith that juſtifieth us, but a living and operative faith, according as S. James teacheth us, Jam. 2. 26. and it muſt be a living faith by which the juſt ſhall live.

V. 7. Ye did run well] You were in the right way, and ye made ſo good progreſſe, that ye out-ſtript many; and had ye not been ſtopt and hindered, would have obtained the prize, which is eternall life.

who did hinder you] Or, who did drive you back.

V. 9. A little leaven leaveneth the whole lump] See 1 Cor. 5. 6. He addeth this, that he may not ſeem to contend upon a trifle, warning them diligently by a ſimilitude borrowed from leaven, (Mat. 13. 33.) not to ſuffer the purity of the Apoſtolicall doctrine to be infected with the leaſt corruption that may be. By a little leaven, as S. Jerome obſerveth, he underſtandeth either, an errour but in one point or two, which corrupteth the whole Doctrine of Chriſtianity; as a ſmall quantity of Ratsbane poiſoneth the whole milk: or a few falſe teachers, or erroneous believers are able to infect a whole Church or Congregation.

V. 10. through] Gr. in.

but he that troubleth you, ſhall bear his judgement] He ſingleth out ſome one, who was the ring-leader of all the reſt, & either threatneth to excommunicate him, by his Apoſtolicall authority, or denounceth againſt him Gods fearfull judgement at the laſt day.

V. 11. why do I yet ſuffer perſecution] He willeth them to conſider, how that he ſeeketh not his own profit in this matter, ſeeing that he could eſchew the hatred of men, if he would joyn Judaiſme with Chriſtianity; for at this time the Chriſtians were moſt perſecuted by the Jewes, whoſe hatred was not ſo exaſperated againſt the Apoſtles for preaching Chriſt crucified, as for teaching, that the Law of Moſes was aboliſhed, for which they were moſt zealous.

Croſſe] Gr. Tex. Croſſe of Chriſt.

V. 12. cut off] He compareth thoſe who corrupt the doctrine of Chriſt, who maliciouſly ſet themſelves againſt his preaching, to rotten members, which are to be cut off, leſt the Gangren ſpread over the whole body: and he alludeth, as the Greek Scholiaſt noteth, to the practiſe of Circumciſion, which is a cutting off of the foreskin of the fleſh, and caſting it away; wiſhing, that they themſelves might ſuffer what they do, that is, be cut off as ſuperfluous fleſh.

V. 13. only uſe not liberty for an occaſion to the fleſh] Becauſe men are very apt to abuſe their liberty, and turn the grace of Chriſt into wantonneſſe, he addeth here, as elſe-where, a wholeſome caution, that Chriſtian liberty is not a licenſe to do what men liſt, but a freedome from the heavy yoke of the law, to the end, that they may take upon them Chriſts eaſie yoke, and light burden, and more cheerfully ſerve him. Where the carnall Goſpellers ſuck poyſon, there the Holy Ghoſt ſets an antidote, as Luk. 1. 74. He hath redeemed his people, that being delivered out of the hands of our enemies we might ſerve him without fear in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe before him all the dayes of our life: and Rom. 8. 1. There is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Jeſus, who walk not after the fleſh, but after the Spirit: and Rom. 6. 1. Where ſinne abounded grace did much more abound, what then? ſhall we continue in ſin that grace may abound? God forbid: and Titus 2. 12. The grace of God that bringeth ſalvation, hath appeared to all, teaching us that denying ungodlineſſe and worldly luſts, we ſhould live ſoberly and righteouſly in this preſent world.

V. 14. all the law is fulfilled in one word] Some reſtrain the word, all the Law, to the ſecond Table; others take it abſolutely for the whole law; becauſe none can love his neighbour as himſelf, but he muſt needs love God: and the love of God and our neighbour contains in it the whole law. Others underſtand the words thus, all the Law, is fulfilled in this one word, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour, Rom. 13. 8. This precept is the complement of the whole law; that is, this precept added to the former Table makes up the whole law. For ſo the Greek word, πλήρωμα, is often taken.

Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thy ſelf] See Lev. 19. 18. Matt. 22. 39. Rom. 13. 9.

V. 16. This] Gr. but.

Walk in the Spirit] That is, diſpoſe all your life and actions according to the inſtructions and motions of the holy Spirit, as well in the ſpirituall frame of Religion, proper and peculiar to the Goſpel, as in all holineſſe of life and converſation. Some by the Spirit, underſtand the rationall appetite, and by the fleſh the ſenſitive, as Lyra: Some by the Spirit, underſtand the holy Ghoſt, and by fleſh carnall concupiſcence: as Theodoret and Oecumenius. Others with more probability affirm, that when Spirit and fleſh, are ſet in oppoſition one againſt the other, that by Spirit, is to be underſtood that part of man which is regenerated by the Spirit, and by the fleſh the naturall corruption which cleaveth ſtill unto the regenerate. See Rom. 8. 1.

ye ſhall not fulfill the luſt of the fleſh] Or, fulfill not.

V. 17. the fleſh luſteth againſt the Spirit] For the fleſh dwelleth even in thoſe that are regenerate; but the ſpirit reigneth in them, although not without great ſtrife, S. Auſtine in his Expoſition upon the Epiſtle to the Galatians, affirmeth that they are under the law, and not under grace, in whom the fleſh ſo luſteth againſt the ſpirit, that they cannot do what they would; but in the 24. Chapter of his firſt book of Retractations, he correcteth his former opinion, acknowledging that theſe words of the Apoſtle are meant, even of them, who are in the ſtate of grace: Quia & ipſi concupiſcentias carnis habent contra quas Spiritu concupiſcunt, volentes eas habere ſi poſſent & ideo non quæcunq; volunt faciunt, qui volunt illas extinguere nec poſſunt; non autem eas non habebunt, quando non corruptibilem carnem.

do the things that ye would] Gr. do not what ye would.

V. 19. Now the works of the fleſh] He letteth out that particularly, which he ſpake before generally, reckoning up ſome chief effects of the fleſh, and oppoſing them to the fruits of the Spirit, that no man may pretend ignorance.

V. 22. But the fruit of the Spirit] Therefore they are not the fruits of free-will, but ſo far forth as our will is made free by grace. He ſaith not, the works of the Spirit, as before the works of the fleſh, but the fruits of the Spirit, to teach us, that good works are not only the effects of Gods Spirit, but alſo that they are acceptable and pleaſing unto him, like moſt ſweet and wholeſome fruits, Matth. 3. 8. Joh. 15. 8.

V. 23. againſt ſuch there is no law] Such may be either referred to the fruits of the Spirit, or to the perſons who bring forth ſuch fruit, againſt men ſo qualified there is no law to condemn them: for the law of God which is ſo ſevere and terrible to all men that are in the ſtate of ſinne, is not ſo for all that unto the children of God, that do not maliciouſly ſet themſelves againſt it; neither are they lyable to the malediction thereof, they ſubmitting themſelves willingly to the ſame, as a gentle miſtreſſe of their actions, and guide of their life and converſation.

V. 24. have crucified the fleſh] We are not only to mortifie our fleſhly members, but alſo our inward affections, and to do this out of a reſpect to Chriſts Croſſe, which is a ſpeciall means to crucifie theſe our luſts, when we conſider that ſin is ſo great and hainous an evill in the ſight of God, that nothing but the bloud of the Sonne of God could expiate it.

affections] Or, paſſions.

V. 25. If we live in the Spirit] Or, by. If we be indued with the quickening Spirit of God, which cauſeth us to dye to ſinne and live to God, let us ſhew it in our deeds by holineſſe of life.

in the Spirit] Or, by.

V. 26. Let us not be deſirous of vain-glory] He addeth particular exhortations, according as he knew the Galatians ſubject to diverſe vices, and firſt of all he warneth them to take heed of ambition, which vice hath alwaies two companions, backbiting, and envie, out of which two it cannot be, but many contentions muſt needs ariſe.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ. 1. If a man be overtaken in a fault] Or, although. Gr. taken before, or preoccupated. The word in the Originall, προληφθῇ, derived from πρὸ, and λαμβάνω, ſignifieth to be taken before he is aware, or to be preſumed to be an offender, or taken before you, that is publiquely convicted of ſome fault or miſcarriage: moderate and temper your reprehenſion of him with Chriſtian meekneſſe, according to that golden Rule of S. Auſtine; Salſedinem correptionis amor Chriſti temperet, & dilectionem proximi ſal juſtitiæ condiat.

reſtore ſuch an one] Gr. ſet him right, or in joynt again.

leſt thou alſo be tempted] He toucheth the ſore; for they commonly are moſt ſevere Judges, who forget their own infirmity; and on the contrary, as S. Auſtine obſerveth; The true ſenſe and feeling of the infirmities we are ſubject to our ſelves, makes us tender and compaſſionately affected towards others; Nihil tam ad miſericordiam inclinat quam proprii periculi cogitatio. And Virgil brings in Queen Dido for a pattern in this kind, ſaying of her ſelf: Non ignara mali miſeris ſuccurrere diſco.

V. 2. Beare ye one anothers burdens] He ſheweth that this is the end of reprehenſion to raiſe up our brother which is fallen, and not proudly to inſult over him. To bear our brothers burden, is to have compaſſion on our brothers failings, and infirmities, which lye upon him, as a heavy load and burden, to ſupport him with comfort, and uſe the beſt means we can to eaſe and relieve him, and by diſcreet reprehenſion amend him.

and ſo fulfill the law of Chriſt] That of loving one another, Joh. 13.34. Which Chriſt calls his new commandement. For although it were alſo preſcribed by Moſes, Levit. 19.18. yet it is called Chriſts law, foraſmuch as it is not fulfilled but by his Spirit, and for that Chriſt ſo particularly commendeth it to his Diſciples, as well by precept, as by his own example.

V. 4. let every man prove his own work] Let every man ſeek to have commendation of his own life, by examining and reproving himſelf, and not by reprehending others. In theſe words, the Apoſtle taxeth that vice in the Galatians, which is too too common in moſt men; who are ſharp-ſighted, to eſpie ſmall motes in other mens eyes, and cannot diſcern a beame in their own. Nemo in ſeſe tentat deſcendere, nemo; Sed præcedenti ſpectatur mantica tergo.

rejoycing] Gr. boaſting.

V. 5. For every man ſhall bear his own burden] See 1 Cor. 3. 8. A reaſon, wherefore men ought to have the greateſt eye upon themſelves, is, becauſe that every man ſhall be judged before God according to his own life, and not by comparing himſelf with other men. S. Jerome upon this place noteth, that the Apoſtle in theſe words, obſcurely intimateth, that whileſt we live in this world, we may be helpt by the counſels, good advice, and prayers one of another; but after this life, we muſt ſtand or fall to our ſelves; no other can ſtead us by their prayers or other wayes. Dum in præſenti ſeculo ſumus, ſive orationibus ſive conciliis invicem poſſe nos coadjuvari, cum autem ante tribunal Chriſti venerimus, non Job, non Daniel, non Noë rogare poſſe pro quoquam, ſed unumquemq; portare onus ſuum. Which though it be a truth, and maketh much againſt Popiſh invocation of Saints, and prayers for the dead, yet it ſeemeth not to be the naturall interpretation of this Text; but rather that of S. Auſtine. De conſen. Evang. lib 2. cap. 30. Where reconciling the ſeeming contradiction between this firſt verſe and the ſecond, he ſaith, that the word burden is taken in a different ſenſe; Alia ſunt onera participandæ infirmitatis, alia reddendæ rationis Deo, de actibus noſtris. In the Originall, the words are different; in the ſecond verſe, it is βάρη, in this φόρτον, there by burdens, are meant ſuch ſins and infirmities, wherewith our brother is aggrieved and burdened, but here by burden is meant the puniſhment of every mans own ſinne.

V. 6. Let him, &c.] See 1 Cor. 9.14.

that is taught in the word] Gr. catechiſed. See Rom. 2.18. The word in the Originall is, κατηχούμενος, a word derived from ἠχὴ, a ſound, and ſignifieth to reſound, or inſtruct others, viva voce, by word of mouth, by ſpeech ſounding to their eares, to teach familiarly, as when children are taught the principles of religion; and hence cometh our Engliſh word catechiſing. Howbeit, as the Greek Scholiaſt truly obſerveth, it is taken more generally for him that is any way taught and inſtructed; whether it be in the firſt principles, and rudiments, or points of greater difficultie: whether plainly and familiarly, as catechiſers uſe to do; or more profoundly, as Doctors in the chaire.

communicate unto him that teacheth] Gr. catechiſeth; or inſtructeth in the principles of faith. 1 Cor. 14. 9. Let him afford him comfortable maintenance according to his ability; he ſaith not, μεταδιδότω, but κοινωνείτω, contribute, but communicate unto him, as Oecumenius obſerveth, to ſignifie unto us, that the relief of the Paſtour is not an almes-deed, but a kind of commerce and exchange of ſpirituall things for carnall. For he that teacheth beſtoweth on his ſtock ſpirituall treaſures; and they who are taught of him give him part of their temporall goods, (1 Cor. 9. 11.) ſo there is a communication on both ſides.

V. 7. Be not deceived; God is not mocked] He commendeth liberality both to their Paſtours, and to the poor; and firſt he reproveth them for pretending this and that, and all becauſe they would not help their neighbours, as though they could deceive God: afterward he compareth works of charity to a ſpirituall ſowing, which ſhall have a moſt plentifull harveſt, and he compareth coveteouſneſſe and niggardlineſſe to a carnall ſowing, whereof nothing can be gathered but ſuch things as being unprofitable fade away and periſh by and by.

V. 8. For he that ſoweth to his fleſh] That is, to the commodities of this preſent life; he that ſeeketh after wealth or honour, and ſuch things only whereby he may give ſatisfaction to his fleſh, and enjoy carnall delights and pleaſures, ſhall reap corruption; that is, a conſumption in his eſtate, rottenneſſe in his bones, and eternall death. But he that ſoweth to the Spirit, that is, deſireth increaſe of ſpirituall graces, and by the grace of the Spirit diſtributeth liberally to the poor, and performeth all works of piety and charity in this life, ſhall have a moſt plentifull harveſt in the life to come, and reap a moſt plentifull crop.

V. 9. And let us not be weary in well-doing] See 2 Theſſ. 3. 13. He taxeth ſuch as are liberall at the beginning, but continue not in well-doing, becauſe the harveſt ſeemeth to be deferred very long, as though the ſeed-time and harveſt were at one inſtant.

V. 10. houſhold of faith] They who are bred up in the ſame Church, which is the Houſe of God, they who are joyned with us in the profeſſion of the ſelf-ſame true religion, ought to be preferred before all other in our charity: yet ſo notwithſtanding that our liberality extend in ſome meaſure to all. Saint Auguſtine upon theſe words inferreth that all men are equally to be loved; and that we muſt with a like affection wiſh to all men eternall life, though we cannot perform to all the like offices of charity. This ſeemeth to be repugnant to the doctrine of other Fathers, and the Schooles generally, who teach that we ought more to love thoſe of our kinne then ſtrangers, Chriſtians then Infidels, right believers then heritiques, friends then enemies; but they quarrell with this religious Father without cauſe, for elſewhere he defineth all vertue to be ordo charitatis, an order of charity whereby we love firſt God, then our ſelves, after our neighbours, and then differently as we owe more obligation to them, or they better deſerve of us: his meaning therefore in this place can be no other then this, that we ought to love all men pari dilectione, that is with a like ſincerity of true love, though not a like ardencie of Chriſtian affection; or that we ought to love all men alike as they are men, and deſire truly their ſalvation, though as he ſpeaketh, we neither can nor are bound to perform the ſame offices of charity to all.

V. 11. How large a letter] The words in the Originall, πηλίκοις γράμμασιν, may ſignifie either with how great characters I have written unto you, or what a large letter I have written unto you; thoſe who follow the firſt Tranſlation make this to be the ſenſe, to diſabuſe and undeceive you I have made ſhift though I cannot write well, yet with mine owne hand in great and ill-ſhaped letters to give you an undoubted teſtimony that I preach not circumciſion; ſo Oecumenius. Others interpret the words thus, You ſee with what capitall letters I have written divers ſentences in this Epiſtle, that you might take ſpeciall note of them; ſuch letters Jerome in his Preface upon Job, calleth unciales literas, and the Poet grandes, Grandibus intumuit marmore cæde notis. They who follow the latter Tranſlation, make this conſtruction of it: You ſee what pains I have taken for your ſatisfaction, to write to you a letter of a large ſize, and that with mine own hand, which I uſe not to do. It is true that the Apoſtle wrote larger letters then this, as namely to the Romanes, and to the Corinthians: but he wrote them not with his own hand, as he did this. For that to the Romanes was written by the hand of Tertius, Rom. 16. 22. And the Epiſtles to the Corinthians are ſuppoſed by the Learned to have been written by others; the firſt by the hand of Soſthenes, the ſecond by the hand of Timothie.

V. 12. make a faire ſhew in the fleſh] Gr. good face. or faire countenance. A faire ſhew againſt the truth in keeping carnall rites and ceremonies; they urge circumciſion upon you, not out of any affection and zeal that they bear to the Law; but only for this purpoſe, that they may purchaſe themſelves favour among thoſe of their own ſort, and eſcape the malice and perſecution of the Jewes.

in the fleſh] Or, in your fleſh. In cauſing you to be circumciſed.

for the croſſe of Chriſt] For preaching the doctrine of Chriſt crucified.

V. 14. By whom the world is crucified, &c.] Or. whereby. S. Gregorie in the firſt of his Morals thus paraphraſeth upon theſe words: Becauſe neither Paul ſought after the world, nor the world after him, he ſaith he is crucified to the world, and the world to him. Bernard in his firſt Sermon, de Quadrageſima, conceiveth this to be the meaning: The world is crucified to me in my judgement and reputation thereof, and I am crucified to the world by an affection of compaſſion: Non incongruè poteſt intelligi crucifixum ei mundum reputatione, ipſum vero mundo crucifixum compaſſione. Others illuſtrate thus the words, All the honours, delights, and pomps which the world ſo much doteth upon, are as a croſſe to me; and thoſe things which the world eſteems as croſſes, I take delight in, and am faſtened unto them. But the moſt naturall expoſition ſeems to be this; God forbid that I ſhould glory in any thing ſave the death and paſſion of my Saviour; by the power whereof I am not only dead, but even crucified to the world: ſo that I have neither love nor liking more to the world and the luſts thereof, then to a dead man hanging upon a Gibbet, or Croſſe, which is not only a miſerable, but an ignominious ſpectacle ; on the other ſide, the world hath no more power on me to move me, then ſenſuall objects have to move or affect a dead man.

V. 15. availeth any thing] Gr. Text. is any.

but a new creature] Georgius Syncellus writeth that theſe words of the Apoſtle are taken out of a Book intituled Apocalypſis Moſis, the Revelation of Moſes ; but the Book is Apocryphall, and it is more likely that the Author of it bearing a falſe title is of later date, and tranſcribed theſe words out of Saint Paul, rather then that Saint Paul ſhould borrow them from that book. For the meaning of them it is evidently this : That in attaining ſalvation by Chriſt, neither Circumciſion, nor uncircumciſion is conſiderable, or available, but a new creature, a man renewed in the ſpirit of his mind, and reformed according to Chriſts Image. 2 Cor. 5. 17.

V. 16. upon the Iſrael of God] The true Iſrael circumciſed in heart, and in the ſpirit, and not in the letter, whoſe praiſe is not of men, but of God, Rom. 2. 19.

V. 17. I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jeſus] The word in the Greek ςίγματα, properly ſignifieth brands, that is ſuch marks as are burnt into a mans fleſh ; but here it is taken for all thoſe ſtripes and wounds which the Apoſtle received for Chriſt, and his doctrines ſake : and hereby he intimateth that he ſtartled at no perſecution, as his oppoſites the falſe Apoſtles did, and he oppoſeth his miſeries and the marks of thoſe ſtripes which he bare for Chriſts ſake, againſt the ſcarre of the carnall circumciſion as the true mark of his Apoſtleſhip and the meaning of the whole verſe ſeemeth to be this, I admoniſh all the faithfull to have this regard unto me, to wit, to adde no affliction to my affliction, nor vex my ſpirit further with queſtions and contentions, I having already ſuſtained and ſuffered ſo much for Chriſt, (2 Cor. 11. 23, &c.) whoſe marks I continually bear about me, and whereby I have ſufficiently teſtified the loyalty and faithfulneſſe of my miniſtery. 2 Cor. 6. 4, 5.

V. 18. with your ſpirit] With your minds and hearts : or, grace be with your ſpirit, that is, guide and direct your ſpirit, that you may diſcern the deceits of theſe falſe Apoſtles who indeavour to inthrall you to carnall rites : or becauſe grace chiefly worketh upon the ſoul and it reſideth in it, he expreſſeth that part, but meaneth the whole : and it is as much as if he had ſaid, Grace be with you. From this prayer of the Apoſtle is ſtemmed the Ancient Church in her Liturgy taken that reſponſe mentioned by Saint Chryſoſtome, in his Comment upon the tenth of Matthew, And to, or with thy ſpirit, [illegible]. When I ſay, peace unto you, and you anſwer, And to thy ſpirit ; not with your voyce only, but with your heart : whence alſo in our Liturgy, tranſcribed for the moſt part out of the ancient Liturgies of the Church, after the Creed the Miniſter ſaith, The Lord be with you, and the people anſwer, And with thy ſpirit.

ANNOTATIONS On the Epiſtle of Paul the Apoſtle to the EPHESIANS.

The ARGUMENT and ANALYSIS.

THe Apoſtle hearing that Epheſus, the Metropolis of Aſia minor, was reclaimed from the Idolatrous worſhip of Diana, to the pure worſhip of the true God in Chriſt, writeth this Epiſtle to the Congregation of the faithfull there, to confirm them in the Myſteries of Chriſtian Religion, and more fully to inſtruct them in the duties of a Holy Life, agreeable to their profeſſion.

The whole Epiſtle divideth it ſelf into two parts.

1. Contemplative, wherein he diſcourſeth profoundly of the cauſes of mans ſalvation, Gods eternall election and adoption by grace, and the incorporating of the Jewes and Gentiles into one Body, (the Church of Chriſt) made known to him by Revelation, Chap. 1. 2, 3.
2. Practick, wherein he inciteth them to ſhew forth good works, as the Badges of their Chriſtian Profeſſion. Theſe are ranked into two ſorts : Some required of them,

CHAP. I.

Verſ. 1. TO the ſaints] Gr. Text. to all the ſaints.

V. 3. Bleſſed be the God, &c.] See 2 Cor. 1. 3. 1 Pet. 1. 3.

bleſſings] Gr. benediction.

heavenly places] Or, things. Heavenly bleſſings are oppoſed to earthly, upon which the Old Teſtament moſt inſiſteth, [illegible] all bleſſings in Chriſt are called heavenly, either becauſe God the Father gave us them from his high Throne above ; [illegible] the Saints have theſe gifts beſtowed on them [illegible] long properly to the citizens of heaven ; or, becauſe by [illegible] of theſe gifts, even whileſt we are upon earth, our converſation is in heaven, Phil. 3. 20.

V. 4. choſen] According as God by his election formed a [illegible] body called mankind in oppoſition to the fleſh, whoſe head was Adam, in whom they did all ſinne and dye, and hath choſen Chriſt to be their head, that in him all might be gathered and made partakers by him of his grace, life and glory ; ſo afterwards he accompliſhed this counſell of his in time, diſpenſing all his graces unto his Church by Chriſt in his ſacred communion. See Chap. 3. 11. 2 Tim 1. 9. Election or choice here is taken for the eternall decree of election, which is of certain men in time drawn out of the common lump of corrupt mankind. See John 15. 16. Rom. 9. 11. 1 Theſſ. 1. 4. 1 Pet. 1. 2.

in him] Or, by. That is in Chriſt as our head, or, by Chriſt as our Mediatour.

foundation of the world] Gr. caſting, or laying, viz. of the foundation of the world.

that we ſhould be holy] God did not chooſe us becauſe we were, or otherwiſe would have been holy, but to this end that we ſhould be holy, being cleanſed with Chriſts blood [illegible] through faith ; which though in the text not expreſſed, is neceſſarily implyed. [illegible] without true faith, ſith by faith it is that our hearts are purified, Acts 15. 9.

and without blame before him] Not onely before men, as hypocrites may for a while, but in ſincerity, as in Gods preſence. See Gen. 17. 1. Luk. 1. 6. And this holineſſe and unblameableneſſe is true and unfained in this life, and here begun by the power of Gods Spirit; but it ſhall not be perfected in all parts and degrees till the life to come, 1 Cor. 13. 10. Epheſ. 5. 27. Phil. 3. 12. Yet even this unperfect holineſſe and unblameableneſſe of ours in this preſent life is acceptable to God in Chriſt, and received as perfect, he forgiving us our failings, through faith in Chriſt, Coloſ. 2. 10. Heb. 13. 21. 1 Pet. 2. 5.

in love] This ſome do underſtand of the love wherewith God loved us, conſtruing it with the word choſen; yet it may be fitly joyned with the words holy and without blame, and underſtood of our love towards God and our neighbour, wherein this holineſſe doth chiefly manifeſt it ſelfe, 1 Cor. 13. 1. Gal. 5. 6.

V. 5. the adoption of children] Of this adoption whereby we are made children of God, and coheirs with Chriſt, we have here indeed the beginning and expectation, John 1. 12. Rom. 8. 15. but the full fruition of this adoption and inheritance we ſhall not enjoy it till hereafter, Rom. 8. 23. Gal. 4. 5. Heb. 9. 15. 1 John 3. 2.

to himſelf] Or, into himſelf. To his glory, or for his own ſake.

according to the good pleaſure of his will] Not for any deſert or worth of our own, but only out of his own free undeſerved grace and favour, Romanes 9. 11, 12, 15, 16. and 11. 6. and 2 Tim. 1. 9.

V. 6. To the praiſe of the glory of his grace] That is, to the praiſe of his glorious grace, that as his bountifull goodneſſe deſerveth all praiſe, ſo alſo it ſhould be ſet forth and publiſhed.

hath made us accepted in the beloved] Gr. hath ingraciated us in the beloved.

V. 7. grace] Gr. Tec. bounty. or, goodneſſe.

V. 8. in all wiſedome and prudence] In perfect and ſound wiſdome. Wiſdome and prudence ſo differ, that wiſdome principally reſpects contemplation, and prudence, action. Wiſdome is a vertue of the minde, whereby we know cœleſtiall myſteries; prudence, whereby we wiſely order the affairs of our life, and regulate our Chriſtian converſation. By all wiſdome here, as in Coloſ. 1. 6. either all kind of wiſdome is underſtood, or all ſaving wiſdome.

V. 9. according to his good pleaſure] Not only the election, but alſo the vocation of the adopted ſonnes of God, proceedeth from meer grace.

V. 10. in the diſpenſation] Gr. Tec according to the diſpenſation. That is, in the time prefixed by his providence, the diſpenſer of times, and of order in all things, for the accompliſhment of the promiſes concerning the Meſſiah. The Greek word οἰκονομίαν, ſignifieth ſuch a diſpenſation, as houſe-keepers uſe in the governing of their houſe and family, ordering and diſpoſing their proviſions, and every thing elſe in a fit time, and a convenient manner. Thus alſo hath God ordained and ſetled in his houſe, that is, in his Church, even from the beginning of the world, certain times, in which, and manner, according to which, and perſons, by whom all things are to be performed.

fulneſſe of times] See Gal. 4. 4.

gather together in one]. The word in the Originall ἀνακεφαλαιώσασθαι, ſignifieth, to reduce into one capitall ſumme, or, bring under one head.

both which are in heaven, &c.] Hereby ſome underſtand the faithfull, whereof ſome are already in heaven, others are yet upon the earth. Others underſtand this place, not of the bleſſed ſouls in heaven, and beleeving men upon earth gathered by Chriſt under one head, and into one body; but of the Angels in heaven, which by Chriſt are reconciled to men, and both gathered together under one Head, which before-time had been divided and rent aſunder by reaſon of the ſins of men, Heb. 12. 22, 23. Revel. 19. 10.

heaven] Gr. the heavens.

in him] The faithfull are ſaid to be gathered together in Chriſt, becauſe they are joyned together with him, through faith, and become as it were one man.

V. 11. In whom alſo we have obtained, &c.] Gr. Tec. In whom we are called, being.

all things] All things are attributed to the grace of God, without exception, and yet for all that we are not ſtocks, for he giveth us grace both to will, and to do thoſe thin[illegible]at are good, Phil. 2. 13.

counſell of his own will] He ſaith not ſimply, accor[illegible] to his will, but according to the counſell of his will; to teach us, that God, as an intelligent and moſt wiſe Agent, doth all things upon moſt juſt and prudent grounds, known to himſelf, and hath alwaies a reaſon for his will, though to us his will muſt ſtand for the ſupreme reaſon; ſtat pro ratione voluntas.

V. 12. who firſt truſted in Chriſt] Or, hoped. Either he ſpeaketh this of the Jewes, who were called to the faith of Chriſt before the Gentiles, or he ſpeaketh it of the Apoſtles, who were ſimply the firſt-fruits of all beleevers, and brought both Jewes and Gentiles to the Chriſtian faith.

V. 13. ſealed with that holy Spirit of promiſe] Or, the holy Spirit. The manner of ſpeech is taken from men, who for better aſſurance and confirmation of any promiſes, are wont to give ſealed Bills, Bonds, or Letters; and that for the moſt part, with imprinting or ſtamping their owne Arms or Cognizance upon them. Now the promiſes of the pardon of our ſins, of our adoption and everlaſting inheritance are made unto us in the Goſpell, and applyed to us by faith, and the ſealing of the Spirit, that is added thereunto, is our regeneration, and the renewing of Gods image within us, which is, as it were, printed upon our ſoules, when we believe in Chriſt, to aſſure us more and more of the accompliſhment of thoſe his promiſes. 2 Cor. 1. 22. Chap. 4. 30.

V. 14. untill] Or, for.

purchaſed] Or, purchaſe.

V. 17. in the knowledge] Or, for the acknowledgement.

V. 19. Exceeding greatneſſe of his power] The greatneſſe of Gods power is as much manifeſted in the raiſing of our ſoules from the death of ſin to the life of grace, as in the raiſing dead bodies from the grave: and the very phraſe ſheweth, that the work of the holy Ghoſt in breeding faith in us, is more then a morall ſwaſion, to which we may yeeld, or not; for ſuch a ſwaſion cannot be ſaid to be the working of Gods mighty power, like to that whereby he raiſed Chriſt from the dead.

of his mighty power] Gr. of the might of his power.

V. 20. and ſet him at his own right hand] See Rom. 8. 34.

V. 21. principallity] Or, rule.

every name that is named] Above every thing whatſoever it be, or above all perſons, be they of never ſuch power or excellency. Honourable and famous men are called men of name, and the Name of the Lord is often taken in Scripture for the Lord himſelf. (Phil. 2. 9.) The Apoſtles meaning is, that Chriſt, even as man, is exalted, not only above all States and Potentates upon earth, but alſo all Angels and Archangels in heaven.

V. 22. And hath put all things under his feet] See Pſalme 8. 6. 1 Cor. 15. 25.

head over all things to the Church] Chriſt is ſaid to be the Head of the Church in three reſpects eſpecially. Firſt, in that he is above the Church, and ruleth it, as the head guideth the body. Secondly, becauſe he conveyeth life into it, as the head doth to the members. Thirdly, becauſe he provideth for it, as the Head doth for the members, and participates in the ſame nature with it, as the head doth with the members.

V. 23. the fulneſſe of him that filleth all in all] The love of Chriſt is ſo great to the Church, that though he doth fully ſatisfie all with all things, yet he eſteemeth himſelf but as a maimed and imperfect head, unleſſe he have the [illegible]rch joyned to him as his body.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 1. A*Nd you* hath he quickned] See Coloſ. 2. 13.

dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes] Not dead to ſins, but dead in ſins: He is dead to ſin, in whom ſin hath little or no power (Rom. 6. 2, 11.) but he is dead in ſinne, who hath no life of grace in him: all that are unregenerate are dead in this ſenſe; for as the immortality of them which are damn[illegible], is no life, ſo the uniting of body and ſoul is properly no li[illegible], but death in them who are not ruled by the Spi[illegible] God. [illegible]y treſpaſſes and ſinnes ſome underſtand the ſame[illegible] called παράπτωμα, as it implieth a ſlip or falling; [illegible] as it is an aberration from, or miſſing the right way. O[illegible]diſtinguiſh between treſpaſſes and ſins, and make treſpaſſes the [illegible]ginning as it were, and ſinnes the conſummation of w[illegible] works; or, as Saint Auſtine conceiveth, a treſpaſſe is an omiſſi[illegible] good; ſinne, a commiſſion of evill.

V. 2. according to the courſe of this world] The Originall αἰῶνα τοῦ κόσμου, is by ſome rendred, the age of this world; by others, the life of this world; or, generation of this world; by the Syrian interpreter and Tremelius, mundanitatem, the vanitie; or, word for word, worldlineſſe of this world: the meaning is, after the common courſe and faſhion of worldlings, that think of no other world then this preſent.

acco[illegible]ng to the prince] According to the will, inſtigation and ſugge[illegible]on of Satan, who being caſt out of the higher heaven [illegible]ory, Luke 10. 18. Revel. 12. 8) doth wander about now, and [illegible]ſe the power God permits him in theſe low regions of the [illegible]ntill he be ſhut up into the dungeon of eternall torments. [illegible]Cor. 4. 4. of the power of th[illegible] That hath power in moving the aire, and raiſing ſtorm[illegible]ere, as appeareth by the ſtory of Job, (Job. 1.) and c[illegible]ually fighting againſt the faithfull out of the air, Epheſ. 6. 12. Or, the word ἀὴρ may be taken, as it is often, in Heſiod and Homer, for, σκότος (as Heſiod. Ἐργ. κ. Ἡμ. Ἠέρα ἑσσάμενοι πάντη φοιτῶντες ἐπ' αἶαν caligine indutis] that is, darkneſſe; and that indeed is his proper ſtyle, for as God is the father of lights, ſo the Devill the Prince of darkneſſe.

now worketh in the children of diſobedience] The particle now is added here, by reaſon that Satan, ſince the preaching of the Goſpell, hath loſt that operation and full ſway in the faithfull, which formerly he had indifferently over all, albeit he doth not ceaſe to aſſault and moleſt them; but the power that is left him now, is chiefly over the unbeleevers, 2 Cor. 4. 4. 2 Theſſ. 2. 9, 10. and thoſe whom God hath given over to Satan, who maliciouſly refuſe the Goſpel; and he by his operations and ſuggeſtions leadeth them whitherſoever he will.

V. 3. alſo we] After that he had condemned the Gentiles, he confeſſeth, that the Jewes (among whom he numbreth himſelf) were no whit better.

in the luſts of our fleſh] By the name of fleſh, in the firſt place he meaneth the whole man, which he afterwards divideth into two parts, into the fleſh, which the Philoſophers term the ſenſitive or irrationall part; and into the minde, which they call the rationall; ſo that he leaveth nothing in man that is not dead in ſinne: and concludeth, that the whole man is born ſubject to the wrath and curſe of God. (John 3. 6.)

were by nature the children of wrath] Children of wrath may be underſtood, either actively, ſuch as deſerve wrath, as Judas is ſaid to be the childe of perdition, (Joh. 17. 12.) and the Phariſees Proſelytes, the children of hell: (Matth. 23. 15.) or paſſively, ſuch as are lyable to the wrath of God, and the ſentence of eternall death; men in Gods hatred, as well as others, that is, profane people which know not God.

V. 6. And hath raiſed us up together] To wit, as he addeth afterwards, in Chriſt: for as yet this is not fulfilled in us, but onely in our head, by whoſe Spirit we have begun to die to ſinne, and live to God, untill that work be fully brought to an end; but yet the hope is certain, for we are as ſure of that we look for, as we are of that we have received already.

V. 7. through Chriſt Jeſus] Or, in.

V. 8. by grace are ye ſaved through faith] Chriſt is the meritorious, grace the efficient, and faith the inſtrumentall cauſe of our juſtification and ſalvation; grace and faith ſtand one with another, to which two theſe are contrary, to be ſaved by our ſelves or our works. And becauſe it might be objected, that faith is our work, and conſequently that if we are juſtified by faith, we are juſtified by works; the Apoſtle immediately addeth that though this faith be in us, yet it is not of us, that is, not from the power of nature, but that it is meerly the gift of God: and this is to be meant not onely of the habit of faith, but the very act, as Saint Auguſtine in his 107. Epiſtle, Proſp. l. 1. de vocat. Gent. and the Synod held at Auraſica canon the laſt, clearly prove out of Philippians 1. 29.

V. 10. his workmanſhip] We are Gods workmanſhip, both in reſpect of our firſt creation, and in reſpect of our regeneration, which is a ſecond creation: of which theſe words are to be underſtood, for he ſpeaketh not of us as we are by nature, but as new creatures in Chriſt by grace.

ordained] Or, prepared.

V. 11. remember that ye] Applying the former doctrine to the Gentiles, he ſheweth that they were not onely as the Jews by nature, but alſo after a ſpeciall ſort ſtrangers and without God, and therefore they ought the rather to remember ſo great a benefit of God as was their admittance into the covenant of grace.

by that which is called the circumciſion] Or, in regard of that. Either he meaneth by circumciſion the Jews, who were known and diſtinguiſhed from the Gentiles by circumciſion the mark of the Covenant; or if he take not circumciſion, as he doth Galatians 2. 7. for the Jewes who were circumciſed, but for the ſacrament it ſelf: then the meaning is, that the Epheſians were uncircumciſion in reſpect of the carnall circumciſion, that is, were utterly deſtitute of it. If it be objected, that the Egyptians and Ethiopians, and Colchians, and Arabians, and [illegible]her nations were circumciſed; as Herodotus, l. 2. Hieron. [illegible] 9. Alexander ab Alexandro Genialium l. 2. report: the anſwer is eaſie; That though they were cut in the fore-skin of the fleſh as the Jews were, yet that was done to another end, either as a mark of their Nobility, or for ſome other purpoſe. They received it not as the ſeal of Gods Covenant; their Circumciſion was no ſacrament at all, neither by vertue thereof had they any entrance into the true Church of God.

V. 12. without Chriſt] He beginneth firſt with Chriſt, who was the end of all the promiſes, and ſhadowed out to the Jews under all their types.

being aliens from the common-wealth of Iſrael] That is, had no right nor title to the common-wealth of Iſrael.

without God in the world] The Gentiles were not ſimply Atheiſts, for they worſhipped ſome one, ſome more gods; yet becauſe they worſhipped not the true God; or if they worſhipped the true God, yet they worſhipped him not as God, nor glorified him in their life and converſation; but became vain in their imaginations, and changed the glory of the incorruptible God into an image made like to corruptible man, &c. Rom. 1, 21, 23. they are ſaid to be without God: and in this ſenſe, the Turks and all Infidels may be rightly tearmed ἄθεοι, without God, becauſe they worſhip not the true God in Chriſt.

V. 13. But now in Chriſt Jeſus] Chriſt is the onely bond both of Jews and Gentiles, whereby they are tied and united both to God and one to another.

V. 14. For he is our peace] That is, the Authour and cauſe of our peace; as well of the peace between God and us, as between our ſelves: he is the cement, the onely tie, and ground of the true union of Jews and Gentiles into one and the ſame Church.

the middle wall of partition] By the ceremonies and worſhip appointed by the law, the Jews were divided from the Gentiles: but now Chriſt having broken down the partition wall, joyneth them both together both in himſelf, and betwixt themſelves, and to God. In this manner of ſpeech the Apoſtle hath regard to that partition which was in Solomons Temple between the outward court of the Gentiles, and that of the people which was Lorica lapidea, whereof Joſephus de bello Judaico l. 6. c. 6. ſpeaketh, a wall that hindred all paſſage, ſight, and communion betwixt them, Ezek. 42. 20. The meaning is, that the Gentiles had gotten a free acceſſe now by the Goſpel unto the Church, and the benefits thereof; being not accounted profane any longer. And it may be alſo, that the Apoſtle in this alluſion had an eye to the renting of the vail in the Temple, Matth. 27. 51. Luk. 23. 45.

V. 16. in one body by the Croſſe] He alludeth to the ſacrifices of the law, which repreſented that true and onely ſacrifice.

having ſlain the enmitie thereby] Or, in himſelf. For he deſtroyed death by his death, and faſtened it as it were to the Croſſe, and the cauſe of ſinne being taken away, all hatred and enmitie betwixt God and man neceſſarily ceaſed.

V. 17. which were afarre off, and to them that were nigh] To them that were afarre off, that is, to the Gentiles, (Iſa. 57. 19.) aliens from the common-wealth of Iſrael and ſtrangers from the covenants of promiſe, verſ. 12. and to them that were nigh; that is, to the Jews who were nearer to God by reaſon of his Covenant with them, and Ordinances among them.

V. 18. through him, &c.] See Rom. 5. 2.

by one ſpirit] Or in.

V. 19. ye are no more ſtrangers] The Gentiles are taken into the fellowſhip of ſalvation, and he deſcribeth the excellency of the Church, calling it the Citie and Houſe of God.

V. 20. and are built] Gr. having been built. That is, your faith whereby you ſubſiſt in the communion of Saints hath for its infallible and immoveable ground, the whole doctrine of the Old and New Teſtament, the main ſubject whereof is Chriſt, who in his own perſon is the reall and eſſentiall foundation, and as it were, the corner-ſtone, where the great ſtrength of the building lyeth, (Pſal. 118. 22. 1 Pet. 2. 6, 7.) joyning the two wals together; that is, the two different Nations of the Jews and Gentiles, of whom the Church is compoſed

V. 21. framed together] So that God is the workman, not onely of the foundation, but alſo of the whole building.

V. 22. for an habitation of God] Both the whole Church and every particular beleever is an habitation of God; for God dwelleth in the Church, Levit. 26. 11, 12. and in every true beleever by his Spirit, 2 Cor. 6. 16.

through the Spirit] Gr, in.

CHAP. III.

Verſ. 1. F*Or this cauſe*] He maintaineth his Apoſtleſhip againſt the offence of the Croſſe, from whence alſo he taketh an argument to confirme his miniſterie, affirming that he was not onely appointed an Apoſtle by the mercy of God; but was alſo particularly appointed an Apoſtle of the Gentiles to call them to ſalvation, becauſe God had ſo determined it from the beginning, although he deferred a great while the manifeſtation of that his counſell.

the priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt] Not impriſoned by him, but for him: as likewiſe in Philemon, he ſtyleth himſelf a priſoner of Jeſus Chriſt. verſ. 9. caſt in priſon for the Goſpels ſake, and in particular a priſoner for the Gentiles; not onely becauſe he was their ſpeciall Apoſtle, but becauſe the ground of his ſufferings at this time was the hatred of the Jews his countrey-men, who by their accuſation procured him to be impriſoned at Rome; and the greateſt cauſe why the Jewes his countrey-men, thus maliced and perſecuted him was, for that he made the Gentiles equall unto them, as thereby, are they conceived, impeached the priviledges and prerogatives of the Jewes above the Gentiles.

V. 2. the grace of God] Gr. Tec. of his grace.

V. 3. be made known] Gr. Tec. was made.

afore] Or, a little before.

V. 5. Which in other ages was not made known] He meaneth not that none knew the calling of the Gentiles before, but becauſe very few in compariſon knew of it; and they that did know it had it revealed unto them darkly, and for the moſt part under figures in generall and confuſedly. The myſterie of the calling of the Gentiles was revealed in former ages, but not ſo diſtinctly and particularly as now it is.

V. 8. leſſe then the leaſt] Or, farre the leaſt.

the leaſt of all ſaints] The word in the Originall ἐλαχιστοτέρῳ, is as it were a double diminutive, and ſignifieth leſſer then the leaſt, if leſſer might be; whereby we may learn that this eminent Apoſtle had deſcended to the loweſt of thoſe three degrees of humility above mentioned. See Rom. Chap. 12.

V. 10. unto the principalities and powers] That is, the bleſſed Angels, Rom. 8. 38. Epheſ. 1. 21. Coloſſ. 1. 16. 1 Pet. 3. 22. They are thus called by reaſon that God doth often make uſe of their miniſtery in the governing of Countries, and Kingdomes, Dan. 4. 13. and 10. 12. And theſe Angels themſelves are very deſirous alſo to look into, and contemplate the manifold wiſdome of God in the governing of his Church, and the diſpenſing of his gifts and graces in Chriſt to the faithfull. 1 Pet. 1. 12.

known by the Church the manifold wiſdome of God] That in this glorious renovation of the world by Chriſt, not onely we, but even the Angels themſelves alſo, may have a new proof and document of the wiſedome of God in a different effect from what he demonſtrated at other times by the different eſtate and condition of the Church under the Old and New Teſtament.

V. 11. eternall purpoſe] Eternall, as the Schooles rightly diſtinguiſh, is ſaid in a threefold ſenſe; a parte ante onely, and ſo is that which had no beginning, but ſhall have an end: ſo are the Decrees of God even of ſuch things as are accompliſhed in time, and have their period, eternall: and ſo is that purpoſe of God eternall, of which the Apoſtle here ſpeaketh concerning the calling and incorporating of the Gentiles into the myſticall body of Chriſt and true Church of God. Secondly, eternall a parte poſt onely, that had beginning, but ſhall have no end; and ſo are Angels and the ſouls of men eternall. Thirdly, eternall a parte ante, & a parte poſt, that which never had beginning, nor ſhall have an end; and ſo God onely is eternall.

V. 14. For this cauſe I bow my knees] He teacheth by his own example, that the efficacy of the doctrine dependeth upon the grace of God, and therefore we ought to joyn prayers to the preaching and hearing of the Word; which are needfull, not onely to them who are novices in Religion, and Babes in Chriſt; but even to thoſe of ripeſt years and underſtanding in heavenly myſteries; that they growing up more and more by faith in Chriſt; being confirmed with all ſpirituall gifts, may be grounded and rooted in the knowledge of that unmeaſurable love, wherewith God the Father hath loved us in Chriſt, ſeeing that the whole family, whereof part is already received into heaven, and part is yet here upon earth, dependeth upon that adoption of the heavenly Father in his onely Sonne.

V. 15. whole family in heaven and earth] Or, father-hood, or whole ſtock. Nyſſen in Pſal. c. 8. defineth this family to be the whole number of all that are written in the Book of life. Πατριὰν δὲ ὀνομάζει τὸ σύςημα τῶν εἰς τὸν θεῖον κατάλογον συντελούντων, ſo the meaning is, That God who is the Father of Chriſt by nature, is alſo by adoption the father of all the Church, which is as it were his family, and the whole congregation of his children as well of thoſe that are already glorified in heaven, as of the reſt that yet do live by faith here on earth. See Epheſ. 1. 10.

V. 16. grant] Gr. give.

in the inner man] See 2 Cor. 4. 16.

V. 17. rooted and grounded in love] Gr. founded. Either rooted and grounded in that love wherewith God loved us, which is the root and very foundation of our election: or the meaning is, that our love, wherewith we love God who dwelleth in us by his Spirit, may be firm and conſtant. Ficta omnia ſicut floſculi celeriter decidunt; vera gloria radices agit: the like may be ſaid of charitie, fained affections and inconſtant deſires, like bloſſomes are blown away with every winde of temptation; true love takes deep root.

V. 18. what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height] Many wits run riot in their Geometricall and Morall diſcourſes upon theſe dimenſions: ſome conceive that the Apoſtle alludeth to the dimenſions of the Croſſe, and by height underſtand the wiſdome of Chriſt; by depth his humility; by length his longanimity; by breadth his charity. Others place the breadth in the extent of charity; the length in perſeverance; the height in the hope of celeſtiall rewards; and the depth in the inſcrutable judgements of God, Rom. 11. 33. See Auguſt. Ep. 112. Et de doct. Chriſ. l. 2. c. 41. Others thus reckon theſe dimenſions: He (ſay they) comprehendeth the length of the Croſſe who hath learned from the beginning of the world to the end, no man was ever juſtified or ſaved but by the Croſſe: he comprehendeth the breadth who conceiveth the Catholike Church ſcattered over the face of the whole earth to have iſſued out of Chriſts ſide: he comprehendeth the height who conſidereth with himſelf what is the height of the glory to which Chriſts humility raiſeth us: he comprehendeth the depth, who ſounds the bottome, ſo farre as by Scripture he may, of Gods election, and ſeparating ſome from the maſſe of corruption and perdition wherein he leaveth others. The Gloſſe upon the New Teſtament reſolveth all theſe dimenſions into the immenſity of Gods love, ſaying, Quæ ſit latitudo longitudo, ſublimitas, profunditas hoc ſignificat ut ſicut in ſphæra tanta longitudo quanta latitudo, & tanta latitudo quantum profundum; ita in Domino omnia æqualia ſunt immenſæ infinitatis. It is certain that the ſpeech is figurative clothed with a metaphor taken from the Geometricians, who if they will perfectly know any building or ſtructure, exactly meaſure it according to all theſe dimenſions; and hereby the Apoſtle would have us labour as exactly to meaſure the ſpirituall temple of God, as the Prophets were exact in deſcribing the dimenſions of the materiall (Ezek. 40.) that ſo they may underſtand how perfect it is in every part.

V. 19. And to know the love of Chriſt, which paſſeth knowledge] Gr. Tec. the exceeding love of the knowledge of Chriſt. If it paſſeth knowledge, how may we know it? The anſwer is, either it paſſeth all other knowledges, or that it paſſeth all the capacity of our wit, to comprehend it fully in our minde. For otherwiſe, who ſo hath the Spirit of God perceiveth ſo much, according to the meaſure that God hath given him, as is ſufficient to ſalvation, 1 Cor. 2. 15.

filled with all the fulneſſe of God] Gr. unto. That you may have abundantly in you, whatſoever things are requiſite to make you perfect with God, that you may be repleniſhed with all ſpirituall graces.

V. 20. Now unto him that is able] He breaketh forth into a thankſgiving, whereby the Epheſians may be confirmed in hope of obtaining any thing they ask of him: fo[illegible]e that is able to give us above all that we ask, is more bountifull then we can imagine; will certainly freely give us whatſoever we ask according to his will.

in us] Gr. Tec. in you.

V. 21. by] Gr. in.

ages, world without end] Gr. generations of a world of worlds.

CHAP. IIII.

Verſ. 1. OF the Lord] Or, in the Lord.

walk worthy of the vocation wherewith ye are called] See Phil. 1. 27. Coloſſ. 1. 10. 1 Theſſ. 2. 12. Though all men ought to walk worthy their ſpeci[illegible] calling, that is, ſo as it becometh men of ſuch a calling, as n[illegible]ely, Magiſtrates ought to carry themſelves, as it befitteth their place of authority, and Miniſters, as it becometh their ſacred function: yet the verſes following ſhew, that the Apoſtle here by calling, meaneth the generall calling of the faithfull, which is this, to be holy as our God is holy, and as we are called to the knowledge of the Goſpel, ſo we ſhould walk according to the preſcript of the Goſpel, 1 Pet. 1. 15, 16.

V. 3. Endeavouring to keep the unity of the Spirit in th[illegible]f peace] He exhorteth to perfect agreement, but yet ſu[illegible]is knit with the band of the holy Ghoſt. By the unity of [illegible]pirit, we may underſtand, either a full conſent and agreement in our ſpirits, that is, our judgements and affections, that we ſweetly conſpire together in the love of the ſame truth, and ſeek that truth in love: or by the unity of the Spirit may be underſtood the union of all the members of the entire Church, united together by the holy Spirit, after the manner of a ſpirituall and myſticall body.

V. 4. one body, and one Spirit] An argument of great weight, for an earneſt entertaining of brotherly love and charity one with another, becauſe we are made one body, having one God and Father, enlived with one Spirit, worſhipping the Lord with one faith, and conſecrated to him with one Baptiſme, and hope of one ſelf-ſame glory, whereunto we are called: whatſoever therefore breaketh charity, breaketh all theſe bonds aſunder.

V. 5. One Lord, one faith, one baptiſme] Not to touch upon the Grammaticall note, that the Apoſtle in this verſe declineth, εἷς,μία,ἓν,unus,a,um. unus Dominus, una fides,unum baptiſma; By one Lord,he underſtandeth not onely one Lord, our Governour and our Keeper; but alſo one Lord our Redeemer, who hath dearly bought us, that we ſhould ſerve him in holineſſe and righteouſneſſe all the dayes of our life. By one faith, he meaneth one doctrin of our faith Chriſt Jeſus, or belief in him, whereby all the faithfull who lived before under the Law, and now under the Goſpel were juſtified and ſaved. By one baptiſme,he underſtandeth not onely one ſpecie,that is,one kinde of Baptiſme inſtituted by Chriſt in the Goſpel; but one Baptiſme alſo numero: for every man is but once baptized; and ſo the word one Baptiſme is taken in the Nicene Creed, wherein we profeſſe to beleeve one Baptiſme for the remiſſion of ſinnes. 1 Cor. 8. 6. Luk. 1. 75.

V. 6. One God and Father of all] See Mal. 2. 10. As in the former verſe, by the word Lord,the Father is not excluded from being our Lord, nor the holy Ghoſt who is ſtyled the Lord, 2 Cor. 3. 17. ſo alſo, neither is the Sonne excluded here by the word one God, nor the holy Ghoſt; but by this diverſitie of Titles, onely the order and propriety is ſhewed, which each perſon hath in this work. Above all, ſome referre to the Father, who is the Author of all, and fountain as it were of the Deitie; through all,or by all, to the Sonne,by whom all things were created; in all to the Spirit, who dwelleth in the hearts of all the faithfull. Others referre all three to the Father, and thus paraphraſe the words; God the Father of all the members of the Church, which is the body of Chriſt, over all, over whom he hath the higheſt command and authority, by all, by whom he exerciſeth his ſpeciall providence, and in all in whom he dwelleth by his Spirit. But becauſe the Apoſtle ſaith; One God and Father of all; it is moſt probable that the three prepoſitions are to be attributed not to any one perſon or more in ſeverall, but to the Deitie in Common, and over relateth to God his authority, through to his providence, and in to his grace: one God who is above all by his authority,through all by his providence, and in all you that are beleevers by the graces of the Spirit.

in you all] Gr. Tec. in all.

V. 7. meaſure of the gift of Chriſt] Therefore not according to merits of congruity or condignity; As the Pelagians taught, whoſe hereſie is condemned in the Councell held at Dioſpolis, wherein the Fathers pronounce an Anathema to all that affirme, Gratiam Dei ſecundum merita hominum dari. Now if all diverſity of grace proceed from the meaſure of Chriſts gift, none ought to repine at anothers gifts, nor be proud of his own.

V. 8. When he aſcended &c.] Pſal. 68. 18. The Pſalmiſt out of whom the Apoſtle tranſcribeth this verſe, alludeth to the manner of great Princes or Conquerours; who in the day of their triumph, mounting on a high Steed, or taking their Chariot,led the captives, ſome before, and others after them bound with fetters and chaines, and when they came to their palace, divided the ſpoyles which they had taken from their enemies, and beſtowed rich gifts upon the Captains and ſouldiers,that deſerved beſt in their wars. Some by aſcending on high underſtand Chriſt lifting up himſelf on the Croſſe, but that was properly no aſcenſion, for he was nailed, firſt to his Croſſe,and then the Croſſe ſet up above the earth indeed, but not high. The true meaning of the Text is, when he mounted up through the ayr, and aſcended to the higheſt heaven the Seat of the bleſſed, above the viſible Spheres. He led captivity captive, that is, as ſome interpret, a certain number of captives, namely thoſe Saints that were long held in captivity of death, whoſe bodies aroſe at Chriſts death, Matth. 28. 52. and now they accompanied Chriſt in his triumphant march into heaven. Others underſtand this captivity more generally and they diſtinguiſh of an active and a paſſive captivity; of both which the words of the Apoſtle may be fitly underſtood; if they be underſtood of paſſive captivity, then the meaning is, he took away from Satan, Death, and Hell, all their captives, and made them his captives;changing their miſerable captivity, εἰς καλὴν καὶ συμφέρουσαν,into a holy and happy captivity,whereby they are brought into the obedience of the Goſpel: if captivity be underſtood actively, then the meaning is, that Chriſt hath captivated the world, fleſh, devill, death, and hell; which in ſeverall kindes had before captivated mankinde. By the gifts, are meant the gifts of the holy Ghoſt,conferred upon the Church after Chriſts aſcenſion.

V. 9. lower parts of the earth] Either down in the earth, which is the loweſt part of the world, or into the grave, which is called the heart of the earth, Matth. 12. 40. For the heart of the earth is the middle of the earth, as our heart is in the middle of our bowels; and the middle of the earth, as the Philoſophers demonſtrate, is the loweſt part of the earth. For whatſoever is above it any way is nearer the heaven, and conſequently higher. Howbeit it is not improbable, that the Apoſtle alludeth unto Pſal. 139. 15. My ſubſtance was not hid from thee, when I was made in ſecret, and formed in the loweſt parts of the earth; and then the meaning of the Apoſtle is: He deſcended into the loweſt parts of the earth; that is, into the Virgins womb. Ezek. 28. 2.

V. 10. that he might fill all things] Or, fulfill. Either he deſcended and aſcended, that he might fill both heaven and earth with his preſence, or repleniſh the Church with his gifts: or fulfill (for ſo the word πληρῶν, ſometimes ſignifieth) all the foregoing Prophecies of him, or fill the whole world with his knowledge and glory, Eſa. 11. 9. Or he doth ſhew himſelf every where preſent by his divine vertue, in the adminiſtration which he hath received of God, both in heaven and earth, Matth. 28. 18.

V. 11. And he gave ſome Apoſtles, &c.] See 1 Cor. 12. 28.

and ſome evangeliſts] By Evangeliſts ſome underſtand here the four Writers of the Goſpels; ſome thoſe who are endued with a ſingular gift of preaching the Goſpel, ſuch as Philip was, Acts 21. 8. who was yet but a Deacon; others the companions and fellows of the Apoſtles in the execution of their Office,being not able to ſupply all places themſelves, and ſuch an Evangeliſt was Timothy, 2 Tim. 4. 5.

V. 12. perfecting] Or, making up, or, reſtoring.

the body of Chriſt] The myſticall body of Chriſt, which is the Church.

V. 13. Till we all come in the unitie of the faith] Or, meet together into the unitie. The uſe of the miniſtery is perpetuall, ſo long as we are in this world, that is, untill having put off the fleſh; and throughly and perfectly agreeing betwixt our ſelves, we ſhall be joyned with Chriſt our Head, which is done by the knowledge of the Sonne of God encreaſing in us, and he himſelf by little and little growing up in us, untill we come to be a perfect man, which ſhall be in the world to come, when God ſhall be all in all.

the ſtature of the fulneſſe of Chriſt] Or, age. Some expound this of the reſurrection, in which as they conceive, all ſhall riſe in the ſtature and full age of Chriſt at his reſurrection, which was in the three or four and thirtieth year of his age. But the Apoſtle here ſpeaketh, not of our age, or ſtature, nor of Chriſts growth and full age in himſelf, but in us; and the meaning is, untill Chriſt his myſticall body grow to ripeneſſe and perfection, both in reſpect of all the members to be added thereunto, and alſo of their growth and perfection in grace, and the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt.

V. 14. no more children] Betwixt childhood, that is to ſay, a very weak eſtate, and our perfect age, which we ſhall have at length in another world, there is a mean or middle eſtate, to wit, our youth and going forward to perfection.

toſſed to and fro] Or, floting to and fro. He compareth them which reſt not themſelves upon the word of God, to little Boats or Skiphs, which are toſſed hither and thither with the doctrines of men, as it were with contrary windes; and withall he forewarneth them, that it cometh to paſſe, not onely by the lightneſſe of mans brain, but alſo by the craftineſſe of certain Teachers, who made as it were an Art of it.

by the ſleights of men] Gr. by the cogging of a Die, or, cheating. In the Originall it is κυβεία from κύβος, a Die; whereby is ſignified, either the levity or inconſtancy of men, whoſe opinions are as variable, and doctrines as uncertain as the caſting of a Die; or elſe their ſubtilty is meant, who cheat men with falſe ſophiſmes, as gameſters do with falſe Dice.

whereby they lye in wait to deceive] Gr. Tec. according to the circumvention of deceit; or, craftie fetches of the Devill.

V. 15. But ſpeaking the truth in love] Or, being ſincere. See Zech 8. 16. By earneſt affection to the truth and love,we grow up into Chriſt; for he (being effectuall by the miniſtery of his Word, which, as the vitall ſpirits, doth ſo quicken the whole body, that it nouriſheth all the limbs thereof, according to the meaſure and proportion of each) quickeneth and cheriſheth his Church, which conſiſteth of divers functions,as of divers members, and preſerveth the property of every one; and thence it followeth, that neither this body can live without Chriſt, neither can any man grow up ſpiritually, who ſeparateth himſelf from the other members.

V. 16. From whom, &c.] See Col. 2. 19.

every part] Gr. Tec. every member.

V. 17. vanity of their minde] See Rom. 1. 21.

V. 18. Having the underſtanding darkened] Gr. Being darkened in the underſtanding.

being alienated from the life of God] Of Chriſt, who after the manner of the ſoul, quickneth all his Members.

blindneſſe of their heart] Or, hardneſſe of their heart. See Rom. 1. 21.

V. 19. paſt feeling] Or, remorſleſſe. Having their conſcience ſeared, as it were, with a hot iron. The word in the Originall ἀπηλγηκότες, ſignifieth properly, without grief, or remorſe for their ſinnes, being ſtupid, like a member that is benummed, which hath no ſenſe in it. To this ſtupidity cuſtome in ſinne bringeth a man; for, conſuetudo peccandi tollit ſenſum peccati.

with greedineſſe] Or, in exceſſe.

V. 21. by] Gr. in.

as the truth is in Jeſus] As they have learned who acknowledge Chriſt in deed, and in truth, or as the true rule of life and manner of living is in Jeſus, as in the head.

V. 22. put off] See Col. 3. 8.

the old man] See Rom. 6. 6.

corrupt according to the deceitfull luſts] Gr. corrupted according to the luſts of deceit.

V. 23. be renewed in the ſpirit of your] See Rom. 12. 2.

V. 24. that ye put on] The Apoſtle compareth here the renewing of a man, to a new garment, the natural corruption, to an old out-worn one, which he ſaith the faithfull ought to put off, & put on the other; for that now being regenerated by the Spirit of God, they ſhould advance, and put on more and more, by the uſe of the means which God hath appointed for it, as by manfull reſiſtance againſt ſinne, by the Spirit of God, Rom. 8. 13. by ſtirring up the gift of God in them, 2 Tim. 1. 6. by attentive hearing and meditating on Gods Word, Pſal. 1. 2. 2 Tim. 3. 16. by the worthy participation of the Sacrament, 1 Corinth. 11. 27, 28. by powring out fervent prayers to God, Epheſ. 6. 18.

the new man] Thus the Apoſtle calleth the regeneration or renewing of man, and changing of the will to holineſſe and righteouſneſſe, wherein conſiſteth the image of God; the former part whereof is expreſt in this place, and the latter, Col. 3. 10. See 2 Cor. 5. 17.

V. 25. putting away lying] Lying in opinion, which is errour; in ſpeech, which is falſhood; in life and converſation, which is hypocriſie and diſſimulation; becauſe we are members one of another, and there is a near tye betwixt us, it is a ſinne to deceive any by lying and falſhood, but a greater to deceive thoſe of the ſame corporation, eſpecially ſo holy a corporation, as is the myſticall body of Chriſt: for if in the naturall body (as S. Chryſoſtome obſerveth) the members deceive not one another, the eye deceiveth not the foot, nor the foot the eye, nor the tongue the ſtomach; how much more abſurd and monſtrous a thing would it be, if the members of the ſame myſticall body of Chriſt ſhould deceive or ſupplant one another?

ſpeak every man truth with his neighbour] See Zech. 8. 16.

V. 26. Be ye angry and ſinne not] See Pſal. 4. 4. There can be no true love of God, nor zeal of his glory, where there is no anger nor indignation taken againſt thoſe who diſhonour God: the Apoſtle doth not therefore ſimply forbid anger, but teacheth us how to bridle our anger in ſuch ſort, that although it be hot, (Jam. 1. 20.) yet that it break not out into contumelious ſpeeches or actions, but that it be ſtraightway quenched, before we ſleep, leſt Satan taking occaſion to give us evill counſell, through his wicked counſels deſtroy us.

V. 27. Neither give place to the devill] See Jam. 4. 7.

V. 28. to give] Or, to diſtribute.

V. 29. Let no corrupt communication] Word for word, no rotten communication: whereby either he underſtandeth impure and filthy ſpeech, or unſavoury and unprofitable. The metaphor is taken from ſtinking and unſavourie meat which the ſtomach loathes; ſo doth the ears of the godly all corrupt communication.

to the uſe of edifying] Or, to edifie profitably.

V. 30. grieve not the holy Spirit of God] Be not refractory unto him, offend him not, leſt he diſpoſſeſſe your heart of thoſe joyes and comforts which formerly he hath wrought there, according to his office; and that he be not forced to withdraw himſelf from you, as from a loathed and offenſive harbour. The phraſe ſeemeth to be taken from the words of Eſay, c. 63. v. 10. and they imply that the Spirit of God which dwelleth in us, is provoked by ſuch ſins he formerly mentioned, they being loathſome and odious to him, to ſuſpend his friendly and comfortable operations in us, and inſtead of his love, let us feel his anger: as a Father doth caſt a ſad look upon his children while they are committing ſome evill in his ſight, and he muſt needs, though never ſo unwilling, chaſtiſe them, in ſtead of embracing them.

whereby ye are ſealed] Or, in whom ye are ſealed. See Epheſ. 1. 13.

V. 32. And be ye kinde one to another] See 2 Corinth. 2. 10. Col. 3. 12, 13.

forgiven] Or, freely pardoning.

CHAP. V.

Verſ. 1. F*Ollowers of God*] It is the part of Children to imitate their father; and Seneca ſaith truly, Optimus animus pulcherrimus Dei cultus eſt, the chief worſhip of God is that which is inward, and conſiſteth not ſo much in the contemplation and admiration, as imitating, ſo farre as we are able, the divine perfections of God, which is the brightning of his image in our ſoul.

V. 2. and walk in love] See Joh. 13. 34. and 15. 12.

an offering and a ſacrifice] There were two Altars in the Temple, the brazen and the golden; the brazen for bloody ſacrifices, the golden for the offering of Incenſe: the former was a type of Chriſts bloudy offering upon the Croſſe; the latter of his interceſſion for us. In regard of both, the Apoſtle here ſaith, that Chriſt gave himſelf, both for an offering, and a ſacrifice of a ſweet ſmelling ſavour to God for us.

V. 3. But fornication, and all uncleanneſſe or covetouſneſſe, &c.] See Col. 3. 5. 1 Theſſ. 4. 3, &c. In the ſenſitive appetite the Philoſophers place two faculties, the iraſcible, as they term it, and the concupiſcible. Now the Apoſtle having in the former Chapter, verſ. 31, 32. given rules for the rectifying of the affections ſeated in the iraſcible part, or faculty of the ſoul, here begins to give precepts for the bridling of the concupiſcible part, in which the diſorderly affections may be reduced to two principals, immoderate deſire of wealth, which is covetouſneſſe, and the inordinate deſire of pleaſure, which is voluptuouſneſſe.

V. 4. filthineſſe] Or, obſcenity.

nor jeſting] Or, ſcurrility, or jearing. The word in the Originall ευτραπελια, ſignifieth facetiouſneſſe of ſpeech, and by the Philoſophers is taken in a good ſenſe, who make it a vertue; but the Apoſtle takes it in an ill ſenſe, for ſcurrilous jeaſting and unſeemly mirth, unbefitting the gravity and ſanctity of a Chriſtian: and as in this word, ſo it hath faln out in many other, evill manners of men have ſpoiled them, as pharmacon, tyrannus, ſophiſta, latro, & magus, which at the firſt were taken in a good ſenſe, but now for the moſt part, if not altogether, in a bad.

V. 5. For this ye know, that no whoremonger, &c.] Becauſe theſe ſins are ſuch as the moſt part of men made light of, accounting them either as no ſins, or very ſmall ones, he awaketh the godly by this dreadfull denunciation, to the end they ſhould ſo much the more take heed to themſelves, flie from them, as moſt hurtfull plagues.

who is an idolater] Unuſquiſque (ſaith Jerome upon Amos) adorat ſua vitia, every man makes thoſe vices his god to which he wholly giveth himſelf, and whoſoever giveth any part of the worſhip which is due unto God, either with his body, or with his ſoul, to any creature, is an idolater: Guloſis venter Deus eſt, avarus colit mammona, hæreticus dogma, quod finxit; the politician idolizeth his brain; the heretick, his fantaſticall opinion; the glutton, his belly; the wanton, his Miſtreſſe; the ambitious, his honour; the covetous, his money; to whom the name of an idolater, in a peculiar manner belongeth; firſt, in reſpect of the object common to him and an idolater properly ſo taken. The idols of the heathen (ſaith the Pſalmiſt) are gold and ſilver, ſo are they of the covetous man; the one (as Paulinus acutely obſerveth) worſhippeth the image of his gods of gold and ſilver in the Church, the other, of the Prince ſtampt upon his Coyne in his Cheſt. Secondly, in reſpect of the acts common to them both: for as an idolater feareth his gods, ſo doth the covetous his gold, daring not to diſpoſe of it for his neceſſary uſe. And as the idolater putteth his truſt and confidence in his gods, ſo doth the covetous man in his goods; and as the idolater conceiveth that he holdeth his life from his gods, ſo the covetous man beleeveth that his life conſiſteth in the abundance of the things which he poſſeſſeth, Luk. 12. 15. Laſtly, as the idolater ſetteth his heart, and ſetleth his affections, and placeth his happineſſe in his idoll gods; ſo the covetous man ſets his heart upon his gold and ſilver, and holdeth them for his chiefeſt good, and higheſt felicity.

V. 6. diſobedience] Or, unbelief.

V. 7. Be not ye therefore partakers with them] Becauſe we are not ſo ready to any thing as to follow ill examples, therefore the Apoſtle warneth the godly to remember always, that the wicked are but as it were darkneſſe, and that they themſelves are as it were light: (1 Theſ. 5.) and therefore the other commit all villanies, as men are wont in the dark; but they ought not onely not to follow their examples, but alſo as the propertie of light is, to diſcover, and convince their darkneſſe, (John 3. 19, 20.) and to walk ſo, having Chriſt the true light going before them, as becometh the children of the light.

V. 8. light in the Lord] The faithfull are called light, not onely becauſe they have the outward light of the Word before them, and the inward light of the Spirit within them; but alſo becauſe they give light to others, inſomuch that their honeſt converſation reproveth the life of wicked ones. Matth. 5. 16. Phil. 2. 15.

V. 11. have no fellowſhip with the unfruitfull works of darkneſſe] Sins are called works of darkneſſe, for four reaſons eſpecially; firſt, becauſe they proceed from darkneſſe, that is, the ignorance of Gods truth in the unregenerate. Secondly, becauſe they damp the light of nature in all men, and of grace alſo in the regenerate. Thirdly, becauſe they ſeek darkneſſe, and are for the moſt part committed in the dark; for he that doth evill, hateth and ſhunneth the light. Laſtly, becauſe (without repentance) they bring men to utter and everlaſting darkneſſe in hell.

but rather reprove them] Or, convince them. Not only by ſeaſonable admonitions and reprehenſions, but eſpecially by your godly and exemplary life.

V. 12. a ſhame even to ſpeake of] ſic bonis auribus as well as oculis, there ought to be a continuall regard had to the eare, as well as to the eyes of the godly. As elſewhere the Apoſtle maketh uſe of the verſes of Epimenides and Aratus, ſo here he ſeemeth to allude to that Verſe of Sophocles in his Oedipus, ἀλλ' οὐ γὰρ αὐδᾶν ἔσθ' ἃ μηδὲ δρᾶν καλόν.

V. 13. reproved] Or, diſcovered.

whatſoever doth make manifeſt, is light] Either ſenſible light, which maketh things manifeſt to the eye; or intellectuall, which maketh things evident to the underſtanding; and that is either naturall, as the light of reaſon, or ſupernaturall, as the light of Gods Word, and his Spirit.

V. 14. Wherefore he ſaith, &c.] Some do take theſe to be the Apoſtles own words, uttering them as moved by the Spirit of Chriſt, as it is ordinary with the Prophets to teſtifie, Thus ſaith the Lord; wherefore he ſaith, that is, God ſaith by me unto you. Others, as Georgius Syncellus, conceive, that as S. Jude alledgeth a ſentence out of the Apocryphall book of Enoch, ſo S. Paul here alledgeth this out of an Apocryphall book of Jeremie, in which theſe formall words are found. S. Cyrill conceiveth, that theſe words are taken out of Eſay 51.9. Awake, awake, &c. but the words following, O arme of the Lord, awake, as in the ancient dayes, ſhew, that there God calleth not upon us to awake, but we upon him. It ſeemeth moſt probable, that this allegation of the Apoſtle is taken out of divers propheticall words, collected together, as namely in the ſix and twentieth chapter of Eſay and the nineteenth verſe, The dead ſhall live, awake and ſing, ye that dwell in duſt; and chap. 60. verſ. 1. Ariſe, for the light is come.

Awake thou that ſleepeſt, &c.] See Iſa. 60. 1. The Apoſtle ſpeaketh of the ſpirituall ſleep, both of ſinne and death; and this his exhortation concerneth as well the faithfull, as the unbelievers; the faithfull ſleep ſometimes in ſome one ſin or other, the unbelievers are dead in treſpaſſes and ſinnes: the former he exhorteth to be lively and vigilant, by the power of the Spirit of God, whereof they are made partakers already; the other, to riſe up from the dead, that by theſe exhortations apprehending the quickening power of Chriſt, they ſhould obey the ſame, even as Lazarus roſe by the word and power of Chriſt from his bodily death, John 11.43, 44. In ſumme, foraſmuch as all men are to give an account of all their works, at the dreadfull tribunall of God, ſo they are all of them called and ſummoned by his Word, to make ready their accounts, and prepare for the great Audit day, and to awake from their ſleep, and death of ſinne, to be enlightned by the light of the Goſpel, and to walk anſwerably to that light.

and Chriſt ſhall give thee light] Or, enlighten thee. In the Originall ἐπιφαύσει σοι, ſhall ſhine upon thee. For he is the Sunne of righteouſneſſe, Mal. 3.2. the true light that lighteneth every man that cometh into the world, John 1.9.

V. 15. See then that ye walk circumſpectly] Gr. how exactly ye walk. See Col. 4.5.

V. 16. Redeeming the time] Gr. ſeaſon, or, opportunity of time. Some conceive that the Apoſtle alludeth to the words of King Nebuchadnezzar to the Chaldeans, Dan. 2. 8. where in the tranſlation of the Seventie we read, ἐξαγοράζετε ὑμεῖς, you delay or gain time; and then the meaning is, ſtretch out the time as long as you can, by imbracing all occaſions of doing good. Others conceive it to be a metaphor taken from merchants, who prefer the leaſt profit that may be before their pleaſures, cloſely following their buſineſſe when the markets are at beſt. We may alſo give a third interpretation, purchaſe at any rate all occaſion of doing good, that ye may thereby in ſome ſort redeem that precious jewell of time which ye have formerly loſt; as travellers that have ſtaid long at their Inne, when they find the night coming upon them, they mend their pace, and go as many miles in one houre, as they did before in many.

becauſe the dayes are evill] The dayes are not evill in themſelves, for they are all Gods creatures, and it is a fooliſh ſuperſtition of the Gentiles and Aſtrologians to make difference of dayes, as if ſome dayes of the moneth or week were luckie, ſome unluckie: but the dayes are ſaid to be evill, in reſpect of the corruption of the time, and the perſecution of Gods Church; and the meaning of the Apoſtle is, that the faithfull are to look for hard and diſmall times, wherein the opportunities of doing good will be cut off, or very much ſtraitned, and therefore it is very needfull to anticipate them, by doing as much good as may be, while the time permitteth. See Eccleſ. 11.2. John 9.4. and 11.9. and 12.35. Gal. 6.10.

V. 18. Be not drunk with wine wherein is exceſſe.] Lycurgus for the abuſe took away all uſe of wine among the Lacedemonians, and commanded all the vines to be pluckt up by the roots: and the Mahometans for a like reaſon forbid any of their Sect to drink wine under pain of death, their Muſſelmans and Derviſes affirming, that there lurks a devill under every grape: But the Apoſtle is ſo farre from ſimply condemning all uſe of wine, that he enjoyneth 1 Timothie, 5. 23. to uſe a little wine for his ſtomacks ſake: and in this very place he doth not forbid the Epheſians to drink wine, but to be drunk with wine wherein is exceſſe, that is all kinde of riot, joyned with all manner of filthineſſe and uncleanneſſe; For as S. Jerome rightly obſerveth, Venter mero aſtuans facile deſpumat in libidinem; according to that of the Poet, Ebrietas ignis [illegible] fuit.

exceſſe] Or, intemperance.

V. 19. in pſalmes, and hymnes, and ſpirituall ſongs] Some conceive that theſe three words are Synonomaes, and that the epitheton added to the laſt, namely, ſpirituall, is to difference them from profane, light, laſcivious, and carnall ſongs. Others thus diſtinguiſh them, by Pſalmes he meaneth ſongs of divers arguments, whether they contain Hiſtoricall narrations, complaints and expoſtulations, or good nurture and inſtruction: but by hymnes he underſtandeth ſuch ſongs only, as contain the praiſes of God, and extolling his wondrous works: and by ſpirituall Songs, ſuch as contain the praiſes of God, ſed auguſtiore quadam forma; ſuch as were more muſicall, and ſet to parts, or in a higher key. But it ſeemeth moſt probable, that by Pſalmes, he meaneth the Pſalmes of David ſet to the harp or pſaltery, by Hymnes, certain Ditties made upon ſpeciall occaſion; and by ſpirituall Songs, ſuch as were not compoſed before-hand, and prickt before them with muſicall notes, but ſuch as men endited by an extraordinary gift.

making melody in your heart] That is, with an earneſt affection of the heart, and not with the tongue only; For, Non vox, ſed votum, non cordula muſica, ſed cor, non clamans, ſed amans cantat in ore Dei, Whence is that of S. Jerome, Deo non voce, ſed corde cantanda nec in tragœdorum modum guttur & fauces dulci medicamine colliniendæ, ut in eccleſiis theatrales moduli audiantur & cantica, In which words he condemneth not ſimply artificiall ſinging and elaborate muſick, but ſuch a kind of light and effeminate muſick, as better became the Theater then the Quire: and whoſoever are more taken with the ſtraines of muſick, and ſweetneſſe of the voyce, then with the matter of the ſong, muſt acknowledge with S. Auſtine in the tenth of his Confeſſions, that they are at a fault, and their heart ought to ſmite them for it. Cum mihi accidit ut me amplius cantus quam res quæ cantatur moveat, pœnaliter me peccare confiteor, & tum mallem me non audire cantantem.

V. 21. Submitting your ſelves one to another] A ſhort repetition of the end, whereunto all things ought to be referred, to ſerve one another for Gods cauſe.

V. 22. Wives, ſubmit your ſelves unto your own husbands] See Col. 3.18. Tit. 2.5. 1 Pet. 3.1.

as unto the Lord] That is, in obedience to Gods command; for they cannot be diſobedient to their husbands, but they muſt reſiſt God alſo, who is the Author of this ſubjection.

V. 23. For the husband is the head of the wife] See 1 Cor. 11. 3.

As Chriſt is the head of the Church] See 1 Cor. 11.3.

V. 24. ſubject unto Chriſt] Gr. ſubordinate.

in every thing] Either with this reſtriction in the Lord; or in every thing which pertaineth to the husband as her head and ſuperiour, and concerneth the good of the family.

V. 25. Husbands, love your wives, &c.] See Col. 3.19.

V. 26. with the waſhing of water, by the word] Gr. laver. By Chriſts bloud ſhed upon the Croſſe, and repreſented by the water of Baptiſme. For it is Chriſts bloud which cleanſeth us from all our ſinne. 1 John 1.7. By the word, either he underſtandeth the ſacramentall words uſed in Baptiſme, or the promiſe of free juſtification and ſanctification in Chriſt received by faith.

V. 27. not having ſpot or wrinkle] By ſpots we may underſtand the deformity of any ſinfull work; by wrinkle, any duplicity, folding in, or inſincerity in the intention: or, by ſpot greater ſinnes which defile the conſcience, and ſtain the reputation; by wrinkle, leſſer ſinnes and thoſe of infirmity, which are ſome blemiſh to our ſpirituall beauty. But then there growes a queſtion, whether the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of preſenting the Church to God in this world, or in the world to come in celeſtiall glory. The anſwer is, that there is a double perfection, purity and beauty of the Church: abſolute, without any ſpot or wrinkle, and that is not to be found in any of the ſons of men, while they are clothed with this body of death; and if we ſpeak of that purity and beauty, the Church is ſaid to be pure, and to have no ſpot or wrinkle, (2 Cor. 11.2.) not becauſe ſhe is ſo for the preſent, but becauſe ſhe is prepared to be ſo hereafter. As S. Auſtine noteth, Lib. de nat. & grat. And in the firſt of his Retractations: Quod dixi quam ſibi Deus elegit glorioſam eccleſiam, non habentem maculam neque rugam, non ideo dixi quia jam ſit omni ex parte talis eſt, (quamvis ad hoc electa non dubitetur ut talis ſit) ſed quando Chriſtus apparuerit vita ejus, tunc & ipſa cum eo apparebis in gloria. The ſecond is a purity and perfection, pro conditione hujus vitæ, according to the ſtate of this preſent life; and it conſiſteth in this, that all ſinnes are avoyded or repented of, and in Chriſt forgiven, and his righteouſneſſe imputed: in this ſenſe the Church is now preſently pure and undefiled, and yet not free from all ſinfull imperfection.

Blemiſh] Or, blame.

V. 29. no man ever yet hated his own fleſh] That is, his own body. That is, no man in his right wits wrongeth his own body, though ſometimes mad men teare their own fleſh, and others out of erroneous religion, either cut their fleſh, as the Baalites did, 1 King. 18. or flea it off, as the ancient heretikes, called the Flagellantes or whippers, and the Popiſh Monks and Friers do at this day.

V. 30. of his fleſh, and of his bones] Gr. made out of his. He alludeth to the making of the woman, which ſignifieth our coupling together with Chriſt, which is wrought by faith, and ſealed to us in the Sacrament of his Supper.

V. 31. For this cauſe ſhall a man leave his father and mother, &c] See Gen. 2. 24. Matth. 19. 5. Mark 10. 7.

two ſhall be one fleſh] See 1 Cor. 6. 16. Gr. into one.

V. 32. This is a great myſtery] Not that of the bodily marriage, but that of the ſpirituall, betwixt Chriſt and his Church, as the Apoſtle here declareth himſelf; which union he tearmeth a myſtery, by reaſon that the ſame can no way be apprehended by any naturall man, nor to be ſearched out by any underſtanding whatſoever, but is acknowledged by faith, that Chriſt is our Head and Bridegroome, and we his ſpirituall Bride and members, whereby all Chriſts benefits requiſite to our ſalvation, are beſtowed upon us by Chriſt our Bridegroome, as a dowry, and communicated to us from Chriſt as our Head, as life in the naturall body is conveyed to all the members from the Head.

CHAP. VI.

Verſ. 1. CHildren, obey your parents] See Col. 3. 20.

in the Lord] For the Lord is the Authour of all fatherhood, and therefore we muſt yeeld ſuch obedience as he will have us. In the Lord, implyeth both a commandement of childrens obedience from the Lord, and a reſtriction alſo, that they ſo farre obey their parents, as they ſwarve not from the true worſhip of God. For it is true, as Bernard teacheth, that we muſt yeeld obedience to our parents and ſuperiours, who are in the place of God, as unto God, but then we muſt adde his limitation, in thoſe things which are not againſt God.

V. 2. Honour thy father and mother] See Exod. 20. 12. Deut. 5. 16. Ecclus 3. 8. Matth. 15. 4. Mark. 7. 10.

the firſt commandement with promiſe] Gr. in. Seeing there is a promiſe annexed unto the ſecond commandement, how doth the Apoſtle ſay, that this is the firſt commandement with promiſe? The anſwer is, either that the Apoſtle by ἐντολὴ, derived from ἐντέλλω, underſtandeth a mandate or injunction of an affirmative duty; and ſo this is the firſt commandement with promiſe. For the ſecond commandement in the decalogue is a prohibition of idolatry, the fourth is a poſitive or affirmative precept, but with no promiſe annexed unto it. Or the Apoſtle underſtandeth of ſpeciall promiſes, the ſecond commandement is with promiſe of mercy to a thouſand generations, but that promiſe is generall; whereas the promiſe annexed to this fifth commandement, is a ſpeciall promiſe; that thy dayes may be long, &c.

V. 4. And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath] See Col. 3. 21.

admonition of the Lord] Or, inſtruction. Such admonitions, inſtructions, and precepts (for the word νουθεσία, extends ſo farre) as are taken out of Gods word, and are acceptable unto him.

V. 5. Servants, be obedient to them, &c.] See Col. 3. 22. Tit. 2. 9. 1 Pet. 2. 18.

with fear] That is, with carefull reverence: for ſlaviſh fear is not allowable in any, much leſſe in Chriſtian ſervants, who are ſpiritually free: yet their ſpirituall freedome taketh not away corporall ſervice; in ſo much that they cannot be Chriſts, unleſſe they ſerve their maſters willingly and faithfully, ſo farre forth as they may with a ſafe conſcience.

V. 6. Not with eye-ſervice] Either the meaning is, that whatſoever they do in their maſters buſineſſe or affaires they ſhould do it faithfully and ſincerely; and not in ſhew and ſemblance only; or that they ſhould be as carefull of doing their duty in their maſters abſence, as when their maſters eye is upon them; knowing that though their maſter be out of the way, Gods eye is alwaies upon them, and that he will reward their faithfull ſervice, though their maſters do not; as on the contrary, ſeverely puniſh their unfaithfulneſſe, though their maſter do not, or cannot.

heart] Or, ſoule.

V. 9. And ye maſters, do the ſame things] It is the duty of maſters to uſe the authority that they have over their ſervants moderately and holily, ſeeing that they in another reſpect have a common Maſter, which is in heaven, who will judge both the bound and the free, the maſter and the ſervant.

forbearing] Or, moderating.

your maſter] Some reade, both your and their maſter.

neither is there reſpect of perſons with him] Wiſd. 6. 7. Ecclus. 35. 12. Rom. 2. 11.

V. 10. be ſtrong in the Lord] Be ye ſtrengthned daily more and more by the power of the Lord againſt your enemies, whereof the means are ſet down and deſcribed, from the 13. verſe to the 19. Or theſe words in the Lord, contain an argument of confidence; be ye encouraged to hold out by that communion which ye have with the Lord by faith; drawing from him all the ſtrength ye ſtand in need of.

V. 11. Put on the whole armour of God] Having before muſtered his Forces and ſet all Chriſtians in their ranks, now he armeth them cap a pe. By the whole armour of God he underſtandeth all the furniture, and ſtore of Chriſtian vertues, together with all the means which God hath ordained to arme and defend us againſt the temptations of Satan.

that ye may be able to ſtand] That is, to keep your ſtation, not to flie, but to overcome and get the victory of your enemies.

againſt the wiles of the devill] Or, ſubtile aſſaults, or, ſleights. The Greek μεθοδείας, being derived from μετὰ, and ὁδὸς, ſignifieth properly a way-laying, circumvention, or going about, as they do who ſeek after their prey: and the Apoſtle may ſeem to allude to the firſt of Job, v. 7. where the Lord demanding of Satan, from whence he came; Satan anſwered, from going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it, and ſo μεθοδεύειν, in Saint Paul, and περιπατεῖν, in S. Peter, 1 Pet. 5. 8. are much at one.

V. 12. we wreſtle not againſt fleſh and bloud] The phraſe of wreſtling againſt fleſh and bloud, inſinuateth that our adverſarie is very neer us; we fight not eminus, but cominus, not at a diſtance, but neer at hand; our enemy comes within us, and grapples with us. We wreſtle not againſt fleſh and bloud, that is, frail and feeble men, ſuch as we are, not againſt humane and bodily power. By which words the Apoſtle doth not free us from our warfare againſt the world and the fleſh, our two other enemies: but his meaning is, we wreſtle not alone, nor chiefly againſt theſe: for our principall enemy is Satan, who ſets the world and the fleſh againſt us; and they ſerve as it were under his banner.

V. 12. but againſt principalities] The Apoſtle doth give here theſe titles to the devil and his angels, not as if they were ſet and ordained of God to be true Princes and Governours of the world: but that they do ſtill by force and ſtratagems uſurp that power over this corrupt and wicked world, (which the good Angels have from God) and that by the juſt judgement of God it is permitted unto them for a time to uſe that power to the puniſhment of the wicked, and the exerciſe of the godly, 2 Cor. 4. 4. 2 Theſſ. 2. 9, 10. Ephel. 3. 10.

againſt the rulers of the darkneſſe of this world] That is, of the ſtate of ignorance, ſinne, death, and confuſion which reigneth in this world.

againſt ſpirituall wickedneſſe] Or, wicked ſpirits. τὰ πνευματικὰ τῆς πονηρίας, Word for word, the ſpirituals of wickedneſſe, that is, either ſpirits that are given to all wickedneſſe, and ſeek to bring man unto the ſame: or the ſpirituall nature and kind of wickedneſſe, which is the improvement of wickedneſſe, and farre more odious to God and dangerous to the ſoule (ſuch as are blaſphemous injections by Satan and damnable hereſies, and deep plots againſt Religion) then carnall wickedneſſe or fleſhly pollutions.

in high places] Or, heavenly. Of theſe words there are diverſe expoſitions given. Saint Cryſoſtome and Oecumenius take ἐν for διὰ, or ὑπὲρ, in for for, and they thus expound the Text, We fight not for ſuch trifles as the earth affordeth, but for heavenly things, for the Kingdome of heaven, and our adoption, whereby we are made the ſonnes of God, and coheirs with Chriſt of a celeſtiall crown. Others underſtand by ἐπουρανίοις, high places, places above us, that are upon earth, to wit, in the regions of the ayre; called ſometimes in Scripture heaven. For Satan hath no place nor power more left him in the true and proper heaven, 2 Pet. 2. 4. Jude 6. Revel. 12. 8. Or by wickedneſſe in celeſtiall places, he meaneth wickedneſſe in ſacris & divinis, wickedneſſe in the Church, and corruption in the diſpenſing and adminiſtration of holy and heavenly things.

V. 13. evill day] See Ephel. 5. 16.

having done all] Or, having overcome all.

V. 14. having your loins girt about with truth] The ſouldiers of old time had broad and ſtrong girdles, or belts made of durable ſtuffe, beſet with many iron and braſſe plates, whereby the weaker parts of the body, that is, the loines and upper part of the belly were armed. Girding faſteneth the body and ſtrengthens it, and is uſually in Scripture taken for an expreſſion and ſign of ſtrength and victorie, as Job 40. 21. Eſa. 11. 5. and 22. 23. [illegible] who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life: Joh. 14. 6. whom all that are baptized put on, Gal. 3. 27. Others the truth of doctrine oppoſed to errours and hereſies; others ſincerity and uprightneſſe; oppoſed to hypocriſie; which is the truth of our life and actions; and this vertue indeed makes a man firme and ſteady in all his actions; whereas nothing makes a man more weak and baſe, and faint-hearted in trying trials, then hypocriſie and falſhood.

having on the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſſe] By the breaſt-plate of righteouſneſſe, which is the only fence for the heart, he underſtandeth a good conſcience, which is not only, as the Greek Scholiaſt tearmeth it, χιτὼν ἄῤῥηκτος, an impenetrable coat of male, or armour of proof; but as the Poet ſtyleth it a braſen wall, Hic murus aheneus eſto, nil conſcire ſibi, nulla pallescere culpa.

V. 15. And your feet ſhod] By the feet he underſtandeth the thighs and legs alſo up to the knees, which the Ancient were wont to arme with greaves, which are a kind of braſen boots, ſuch as the Scripture affirmeth that Goliah put on, with againſt David; 1 Sam. 17. 6. theſe ſerved not ſo much to ward the leggs from the injuries of the weather, as from the hurt of darts, arrowes, blowes, or thruſts.

with the preparation of the Goſpel of peace] Gr. In. That is, with being ever ready and prepared to profeſſe the faith, and to give an account of the hope that is in you. Rom. 10. 10. 1 Pet. 3. 15. For thoſe who are ignorant, or aſhamed, or timerous in this behalf, Satan eaſily foyleth, and bringeth to backſliding from their holy profeſſion: but thoſe who are well prepared, by frequent and profound meditations upon the Goſpel, which is the doctrine of our peace with God, are provided with ſuch ſhoos, buskins, or boots, as it were, that they may freely paſſe, and cruſh all impediments in the world, and finiſh the courſe of their heavenly calling without any let or offence.

V. 16. Above all] Or, over all.

taking the ſhield of faith] We muſt take this ſhield of faith above all, that is, in our account and eſteem; whatſoever other defenſive armour we want, let us not want this: Or over all, to cover and defend all other armour. By faith is meant, not an hiſtoricall faith, or faith of miracles, but a ſpeciall truſt and confidence in God by Chriſt. For this indeed covers and ſhelters the weakneſſe and imperfections of all other graces, and beſt defendeth them and us againſt all the aſſaults of Satan, Pſal. 91. 1. 9. 1 Pet. 1. 7, 8.

wherewith] Gr. in which.

able to quench] Not only to repell and keep off, but alſo to take away and deſtroy all their venemous power of hurting you.

all the fiery darts] That is, ſaith the Greek Scholiaſt, concupiſcence, or luſts which kindle a fire in the ſoul, all incentives to ſinne; as alſo the moſt dangerous temptations of incredulitie, diſtruſt, and deſpaire. For the metaphor of fiery darts, ſome underſtand it of venemous darts, which by their poyſon ſo infect the body, that it burneth as it were with fire. Others underſtand ſuch darts whoſe points were put into the fire to be hardened, that ſo they might do the more hurt: both ſorts well agree with the nature and property of Satans temptations, which do infect the ſoul, as it were, with poyſon; and ſcorch it, as it were, with fire, if they be not ſpeedily reſiſted and quenched.

the wicked] Or, that wicked one.

V. 17. And take the helmet of ſalvation] The hope of ſalvation purchaſed by Chriſt, by whoſe merits ye are ſaved already, and may lift up your ſelves as being already victorious in the [illegible] againſt which you are to fight, 1 Theſſ. 5. 8. Take for a helmet [illegible] and the ſword of the Spirit] That is, the ſpirituall ſword, which the holy Ghoſt hath prepared and put into the hands of the faithfull, which hath ſuch an excellent edge that it will cut off all Satans temptations.

which is the word of God] The word of God is called the ſword of the Spirit, for foure reaſons: Firſt, becauſe the Spirit putteth it into our hands, Ephe. 1. 13. Secondly, becauſe it ſlayeth our ſpirituall enemies, Eſa. 11. 4. Thirdly, becauſe it is ſharper than a two-edged ſword, and pierceth to the dividing of the ſoul and ſpirit, Heb. 4. 19. Fourthly, becauſe it is no carnall, but a ſpirituall weapon, 2 Cor. 10. 4.

V. 18. Praying alwaies with all prayer and ſupplication] Although prayer and ſupplication are uſually taken for the ſame, yet here ſome diſtinguiſh them thus; prayer is here taken, ſay they, for a deprecation of ſome evill, or temptation, that it may not overtake us; by ſupplication, an earneſt requeſt to God for his help and grace, that if it be his will and pleaſure to let us fall into ſome temptations, we may yet continue conſtant to this triall of our faith, and obtain a happy iſſue, 1 Cor. 10. 13.

in the Spirit] That is, being divinely moved and excited by the Spirit, Rom. 8. 25. Or earneſtly and heartily, Joh. 4. 24. Rom. 12. 11.

V. 19. And for me] See Col. 4. 3. 2 Theſſ. 3. 1.

utterance] Gr. ſpeech.

that I may open my mouth] Gr. in the opening of my.

boldly] Gr. in liberty, or freely.

V. 20. an ambaſſadour] The Apoſtles are called Ambaſſadours in foure regards eſpecially; Firſt, becauſe as an Ambaſſadour ſpeaketh nothing but what he hath commiſſion for from his Prince: ſo neither ought the Apoſtles and Miniſters of God to deliver any thing but that for which they have commiſſion from God. Secondly, becauſe as Ambaſſadours have reſpect whereſoever they are ſent, and protection alſo; in regard they repreſent the perſon and deliver the words of their Prince: ſo ought the Miniſters of the Goſpel alſo to be reſpected and protected, becauſe they are ſent from the Prince of heaven, and deliver his meſſage. Thirdly, becauſe as Ambaſſadours are publik Miniſters of State, and confined to no particular place, but are to go whereſoever the Prince ſends them: ſo the Apoſtles were publique Miniſters of God, confined to no certain countrey, but ſent to preach to all Nations. Fourthly, becauſe as Ambaſſadours of all other Meſſengers ſpeak the moſt freely, and boldly, being backed with the authority of their Prince, and warranted by their commiſſion: ſo of all other the Miniſters of the Goſpel ought to uſe freedome and boldneſſe of ſpeech, 2 Cor. 5. 20. & 7. 4. & 10. 1. Epheſ. 6. 19.

in bonds] Or, in a chain. In the Originall it is ἐν ἁλύσει, in a chain. For, as the learned Antiquaries obſerve, the Apoſtle at this time was not in priſon with fetters, but in the cuſtody of a ſouldier with whom he might go abroad, having a chain on his right arme, which was tyed to the ſouldiers left arme.

therein] Or, thereof.

boldly. Gr. freely.

V. 24. in ſincerity] Or, with incorruption ἐν ἀφθαρσίᾳ, word for word in incorruption, or with incorruption: and the meaning is, either the grace of Chriſt be with you, which grace is incorruptible: or grace be with them that love Chriſt in incorruption, that is, in ſincerity, not feignedly and hypocritically; or that love Chriſt to incorruption, that is, by him to obtain life everlaſting.

CHAP. I.

with the Biſhops and Deacons] The Synod of Nice forbad two or more Biſhops to have their Seats in one City, and before that, Cornelius Biſhop of Rome upbraids Novatus with ignorance (as Euſebius writeth in his ſixt Book of Eccleſiaſticall ſtory) for that he knew not that there ought to be but one Biſhop in that Church, in which he could not be ignorant that there were forty ſix Presbyters; and Oecumenius and Chryſoſtome affirme as much of Philippi, it being but one City, it cannot be ſuppoſed that there ſhould be in it at the ſame time, more Biſhops, in that reſtrained ſenſe, as the word Biſhop was afterwards taken. Here therefore by ἐπισκόποις, and διακόνοις, we are to underſtand the whole Miniſtery at Philippi, conſiſting of Presbyters, to whom the government of the Church was committed; and Deacons, who not only had the care of the poor, but alſo aſſiſted the Miniſters in their Eccleſiaſticall function.

V. 3. remembrance] Or, mention.

V. 5. For your fellowſhip in the Goſpel] Or, concerning. That by our Miniſtery ye have been brought to the communion and fellowſhip of the profeſſion of the Goſpel, and have ſo continued from the firſt day that you heard of it, even till now.

V. 6. will perform it] Or, will finiſh it.

untill the day of Jeſus Chriſt] The Spirit of God will not forſake you unto the very latter end, untill your mortall bodies ſhall appeare before the judgement of Chriſt to be glorified.

V. 7. I have you in my heart] Or, you have me in your heart.

in as much as both] Or, how that both.

ye all are] Or, ye all were.

partakers of my grace] Or, partakers with me of grace; or, of the ſame grace with me. Ye are all partakers with me of the ſame grace and mercy of God, in your effectuall calling: Or, by grace he meaneth that honour which God conferred upon him, in making him a noble confeſſour of the truth, and thinking him worthy to ſuffer for ſo good a cauſe. It ſeemeth therefore that ſome of the Philippians were partakers with the Apoſtle in his bonds, which the Apoſtle was ſo farre from eſteeming any diſgrace or diſparagement to him, that he accounted them a grace, and an ornament to him. As alſo did the noble Martyr Babylas, who gave charge at his death, that his bolts ſhould not be knockt off his feet, but be buried with him.

in knowledge] By knowledge ſome underſtand the contemplative ſcience of divinity and coeleſtiall myſteries: by αἰσθήσει, a practicall or experimentall knowledge, a ſenſible feeling of the work of grace in our hearts.

judgement] Or, ſenſe.

V. 10. approve things, &c.] Or, trie. The words in the Originall δοκιμάζειν τὰ διαφέροντα, may bear a double conſtruction, Either I pray God that your love may abound in all knowledge and judgement ſenſibly to diſcern the difference between the truth of God, and vain fancies of men; or between earthly traſh and heavenly treaſure: or, I pray God your love may abound in all knowledge and judgement, whereby you may approve of, and rightly value the excellent myſteries of ſalvation.

are excellent] Or, differ.

V. 11. filled with the fruits of righteouſneſſe] Gr. Tec. fruit. The fruits of righteouſneſſe are good works, both pleaſing to God, and profitable to men. For righteouſneſſe may be compared fitly to a tree, whoſe buds are good intentions and purpoſes; bloſſomes, good words, and fruits, good works. If we follow the reading of Tecla, and the Greek Scholiaſt, καρπὸν in the ſingular number, then by this fruit which we bear by being ingraffed into the true Vine, Chriſt Jeſus, he may underſtand, peace and joy in the holy Ghoſt, which is the fruit of the righteouſneſſe of faith.

are] Gr. Tec. is.

V. 12. underſtand] Gr. know.

have fallen out rather unto the furtherance of the Goſpel] Gr. come rather. Here he preventeth the offence that might be taken at his perſecution, whereby divers took occaſion to diſgrace his Apoſtleſhip; to whom he anſwereth, that God had bleſſed his impriſonment in ſuch wiſe, that he is by that means become more famous, and the doctrine of the Goſpel is by this occaſion further ſpread, although not with like affection in all men.

V. 13. my bonds in Chriſt] Or, for Chriſt. That is, the bonds and impriſonment which I ſuffer for Chriſts ſake, howſoever they were by Satan and his complices intended to the diſgrace and hinderance of the Goſpel, yet quite contrary by the providence and goodneſſe of God, they are turned to my great honour, and the advancement alſo of true religion; for all the palace] Or, Cæſars Court.

Nero's Court rings of my bonds, and the cauſe thereof.

in all other places] Or, to all others.

V. 14 word without fear] Gr. Tec. word of God without fear.

V. 16 The one preach Chriſt of contention] Either out of envie, to out ſtrip me, or a deſire to procure my death, that Nero through their preaching, hearing of the generall diſperſing of the doctrine taught by me, might be thereby inraged to take away my life, whom he hath now in bonds, to do with me what he will.

adde] Gr. Tec. ſtirre up.

V. 17. ſet for the defence of the Goſpel] Κεῖμαι, ſignifieth properly to lie, and ſo it may be here taken, and then the meaning is, ſome out of love preach the Goſpel to further my account at the laſt day, knowing that I lie in priſon for the Goſpel ſake, and by that my impriſonment am hindered in the exerciſe of my Apoſtolicall function. If we retain the common tranſlation, I am ſet for the defence of the Goſpel, then the meaning is, God hath appointed me a Champion of the Goſpel, and ſet me in my ſtation, to maintain it; which, through the power of his grace, I will keepe whatſoever dangers or terrours are before me.

V. 18. and I therein do rejoyce] He ſheweth by ſetting forth his own example, that the end of our afflictions is true joy, and that through the operation of the Spirit of Chriſt, which giveth to them that aske.

V. 19. ſhall turn to my ſalvation] As Joſeph ſpake to his brethren, Gen. 50. 20. You thought evill againſt me, but God turned it to good; ſo the Apoſtle here comforteth himſelf with this, that whatſoever miſchief his adverſaries pretended againſt him, by adding affliction to his bonds, yet that God would ſo order all things, that even the perſecution which was raiſed againſt him, ſhould turn to the furtherance of his ſalvation, and increaſe of his joy here, and glory hereafter.

V. 20. earneſt expectation, and my hope] We muſt continue even unto the end, with great confidence, having nothing before our eyes but Chriſts glory; whether we live or die, my hope is, that in nothing I ſhall be aſhamed; that in nothing they can do, or that can befall me, I ſhall have any cauſe to be dejected, abaſhed, or diſcouraged.

with] Gr. in.

V. 21 For to me to live is Chriſt, and to die is gain] Or, Chriſt is to me life, in and death gain] In Greek, as ſometimes alſo in Latine, a Verb in the Infinitive mood is put for a Noun, as, noſtrum hoc vivere triſte, for, noſtra hæc vita triſtis; and ſcire tuum nihil eſt, for ſcientia tua nihil eſt: ſo here, mihi vivere eſt Chriſtus, for, mihi vita Chriſtus ἐστὶ τὸ ζῆν, ἀντὶ τῦ ζωὴ, ὁ Χριστός. And in this ſenſe Nyſſen underſtandeth the phraſe in Epitaph. Baſil χριστὸς ἦν ἀμφοτέροις τὸ ζῆν, which the learned Interpreter thus rendereth, Chriſtus vita utrique erat, Chriſt was life to them both, and death a like advantage, The meaning is evidently this, Chriſt is my life here by grace, and hereafter by glory; he is both the Author and the end of my life; I live for him, I live to him, I live in him, I live by him, and if I be put to death, that ſhall no way endamage me, but rather bring me great advantage, in regard that thereby I ſhall exchange and gain heaven for earth, and a happy eternall life, for this miſerable and mortall. Or, all the gain I aym at, in life or death, is Chriſt, namely, to glorifie him by my ſervice. Acts 20. 24. & 21. 13.

V. 22. But if I live in the fleſh, this is the fruit of my labour] Or, But whether to live in the fleſh be profitable for me, or what I ſhould chuſe. That Chriſt is magnified in my body, whether of the two I ſhould chuſe, life or death, I cannot reſolve.

V. 23. For I am in a ſtrait betwixt two] I am perplexed and doubtfull betwixt theſe two deſires and wiſhes, there being very forcible and weighty arguments on either ſide.

having a deſire to depart] Or, be diſſolved; or, looſed. To return to my own and proper home, 2 Cor. 5. 6, 8, 9. 2 Tim. 4. 6. The word in the Originall ἀναλῦσαι, or, ἀναλύεσθαι, ſignifieth either to be reſolved, namely, into my firſt principles, as the Philoſophers ſpeak; or, diſſolved, whereby the Apoſtle intimateth, that death is no deſtruction, but a diſſolution onely, or taking aſunder the parts, of which we are compoſed; that is, a ſeparation of the ſoul from the body. The word ſignifieth alſo to change our abode or dwelling, that is, to depart this life, by a metaphor taken from thoſe that quit their Innes, to further their travell homewards; or from ſuch as be ready to go to Sea, and to ſet Sail for another countrey, untie and looſen the cables, whereby the ſhip lay faſtened and bound at the ſhore. It ſignifieth alſo, to be releaſed, and ſet at large, and at libertie; and it is very probable, that the Apoſtle in this phraſe ἀναλῦσαι, had a reference both to his bonds and to his death; and his meaning is, I deſire to be diſcharged and releaſed, as out of a common Gaole, ſo alſo out of the priſon of my body, that I may preſently be with Chriſt my Saviour in heaven, in reſt and bliſſe.

V. 24. Neverthelesse to abide in the fleſh] Here we have an example of a true ſhepheard, who maketh more account how he may profit his flock, then of any commoditie of his own whatſoever, though it were better for his owne particular to glorifie Chriſt by his preſent death and Martyrdom, that ſo he might preſently enjoy Chriſt, and receive his Crown of glory; yet he chuſeth rather to abide in the fleſh, and prolong his life, though in miſeries, perils, and bonds, for the furtherance and joy of their faith.

V. 26. for me] Gr. in me.

V. 27. Onely let your converſation be, &c.] See Epheſ. 4. 1. Coloſſ. 1. 10. 1 Theſſ. 2. 12. Having ended his Preface, he deſcendeth now to exhortation; and firſt of all, he exhorteth to unitie and conſent, that being knit together with common bonds, they continue through the ſtrength of faith to bear all adverſity, in ſuch ſort, that they doe nothing unworthy the profeſſion of the Goſpel.

ſtand faſt in one ſpirit] It is a metaphor taken from wreſtlers, that keep their ground, and ſhrink not a foot.

V. 28. in nothing terrified by your adverſaries] We ought not to be diſheartened, but rather encouraged by the perſecutions which the enemies of the Goſpel threaten and raiſe againſt us, ſeeing that they are certain witneſſes and evidences from God himſelf, both of our ſalvation, and of their deſtruction.

V. 29. For unto you it is given] Gr. Tec. unto us. He proveth what he ſaid before, that ſuffering perſecution is a token of our ſalvation, becauſe it is a gift of God to ſuffer for Chriſt, which gift he beſtoweth upon his own, as he doth the gift of faith. (2 Tim. 3. 12. 2 Theſſ. 1. 5.)

V. 30. Having the ſame conflict which you ſaw in me] Or, ſame fight. At my being with you, whereof we reade, Acts 16. 19, &c.

and now hear to be in me] By the relation of others what I now endure in my bonds here at Rome.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 1. ANy conſolation] A moſt vehement exhortation to unity and Chriſtian love, by way of Rhetoricall adjuration; as if he ſhould ſay, As ever you look to receive any comfort in Chriſt, or reap benefit by his love, and the communion between you and the Saints of God, fulfill my joy, by keeping the unity of the Spirit in the bond of love.

V. 4. Look not every man] The Apoſtle uſeth a word, which doth properly ſignifie to ayme or look narrowly as to a marke we ſhoot at; and his meaning is, that we ſhould not principally or only aym at our own honour, or profit: for otherwiſe a Chriſtian ought to provide for his own houſhold, 1 Tim. 5. 8.

V. 5. Let this minde be in you] Or, the ſame. Be you ſo humble and charitably minded, and ſo reſpect the good of others, even with neglect of your own, as we ſee Chriſt our Saviour did.

V. 6. In the form of God] Either in the nature and eſſence of God, being very God, as the ancient Fathers generally expound the word μορφὴ here uſed; or in the ſtate, that is, glory and majeſtie of God, appearing no otherwiſe, neither to Angels, nor to men, then as God in Divine glory and majeſtie.

not robbery] It was his right by nature (See Joh. 5. 8.) to be equall with God, and therefore the challenging it, could be no uſurpation of anothers right, or taking to himſelf, that which was not his own: A like phraſe is uſed in the Syriack rituall, where when Chriſt came to John to be baptized of him, John anſwereth, οὐ δύναμαι ἁρπαγμὸν ἁρπάζειν, that is, I cannot commit a robbery by taking that upon me which belongeth not to me.

V. 7. made himſelf, &c.] Gr. emptied himſelf.

of no reputation] Deveſted himſelf of his robes of majeſtie and glorie, and brought himſelfe as it were to nothing. Word for word, evacuated himſelf; laid aſide for the time his divine Majeſtie; ſo Nazianzen, εἰς ὃ ἐκένωσεν ἑαυτόν.

form of a ſervant] Either the true nature of man, who is a ſervant to God; or the quality and condition of a ſervant living in ſubjection, and receiving ſtripes for us. See Eſa. 53. 2, 3, 4, 5.

likeneſſe of men] Or, habit. Like other meer men, as Heb. 2. 14. and 4. 15. Rom. 8. 3.

V. 8. faſhion as a man] Or, ſhape, As a true man (not in ſhew and appearance onely) as Joh. 1. 14. We ſaw his glory as the glory of the onely begotten Sonne of God. Where as is demonſtrativum, non ſimilitudinis.

he humbled himſelf] In this verſe there is a kind of gradation: for it is more to become obedient, then to humble himſelf; more to yeeld unto death, then to become obedient; more to be crucified, then ſimply to die. For it was to ſubmit himſelf to a moſt painfull, ignominious and a curſed death, Gal. 3. 13.

V. 9 Wherefore God] Becauſe he humbled himſelf ſo low, God exalted him ſo highly, viz. above the grave in his reſurrection; above every name] That is, a dignity, glory, and power, above all names. For by meanes of this exaltation he hath enſtalled him in the poſſeſſion and glorious adminiſtration of his heavenly kingdome, wherein his divine Majeſty which had been eclipſed for a while, doth ſhine again in full and perfect glory.

V. 10. at the name of Jeſus] The Apoſtle in theſe words ſeemeth to have reference to Eſa. 45. 23. and the meaning is, that all creatures ſhould adore, and worſhip Chriſt, and yeeld him all obedience, either voluntarily, or by conſtraint, as to their Soveraign King at whoſe very name they ſhould fear and tremble. This is in part now performed in the Catholike Church diſperſed through the whole world; but ſhall be perfectly accompliſhed at the dreadfull day of Judgement, Rom. 14. 11.

of things in heaven, &c.] Or, thoſe. Of all creatures whereſoever they are, either in heaven as Angels, and the ſouls of them that ſleep in the Lord; or on earth, as men living; or under the earth, as devils in hell and damned Ghoſts. For though Angels and Spirits have neither corporall knees, nor fleſhly tongues, as men have; yet they have ſome meanes, whereby they are bound, and ſhall whether they will or no, expreſſe and teſtifie their ſubjection to our Lord and Saviour. See 1 Cor. 13. 1. and Apoc. 1. 7. and 5. 13. Or, Angels, men alive, and devils, Rev. 5. 13.

things on earth] Or, thoſe.

things under the earth] Or, thoſe.

V. 12. work out your own ſalvation] That is, employ all your abilities, and endeavours to approve, and practiſe all the means, which God hath appointed for the accompliſhment of your ſalvation, 2 Cor. 7. 1. Finiſh your ſanctification in the feare of God.

with feare] Feare and trembling are not here oppoſed to ſpirituall confidence, but to carnall ſecurity; and imply no more then a holy reverence, humility and carefulneſſe, (Pſal. 2. 11. Heb. 12. 28.) as Fulgentius ſpeaketh, ne ſuperbi amittamus quod indigni accepimus. Feare we may, and muſt out of the conſideration of our own infirmity: yet alwaies truſt and be confident in God, who worketh in us both the will and the deed, by whoſe power we are kept through faith to ſalvation, 1 Pet. 1. 5.

V. 15. harmleſſe] Or, ſincere.

ye ſhine] Or, ſhine ye, or, appear.

V. 17. and if I be offered] Gr. poured forth. If I be poured forth as a drink-offering upon the ſacrifice of your faith; as if he had ſaid, I have brought you Philippians to Chriſt, and now my deſire is, that you preſent your ſelves a lively ſacrifice to him, and then ſhall it not grieve me to be offered up as a drink-offering, to accompliſh this your ſpirituall ſacrifice, 2 Tim. 4. 6.

V. 19. But] Or, moreover.

V. 20. like-minded] Or, ſo dear unto me.

your ſtate] Gr. thoſe things that concern you.

V. 21. For all ſeek their own] See 1 Cor. 10. 24. All, that is, the greater part: for he excepteth Timothie and Epaphroditus: and his meaning is, that it is a vice incident to moſt, to preferre their own profit and worldly ends, before the glory of Chriſt.

V. 25. meſſenger] Gr. Apoſtle.

V. 28. the leſſe ſorrowfull] Gr. more without ſorrow.

V. 29. hold ſuch in reputation] Or, honour ſuch.

V. 30. work of Chriſt] By the work of Chriſt, he meaneth his labour in preaching: or his watching and paines taking in miniſtring to Pauls neceſſitie, calling it the worke of Chriſt to viſit Chriſt being poore and in bands in the perſon of Paul, Matth. 25. 36. 40.

CHAP. III.

Verſ. 1. REjoyce in the Lord] Not in worldly comforts and contentments; or not in carnall rites and obſervations; but in the Lord with a ſpirituall and heavenly joy.

V. 2. Beware of dogs] By dogs he underſtandeth the falſe Apoſtles, whom he calleth by this vile and reprochfull name, becauſe they barked at the light of truth, ſnarled and bit ſound and ſincere preachers with their ſlanders: or becauſe they returned unto their former groſſe and ſcandalous vices, as the dog to his vomit, 2 Pet. 2. 22.

evil workers] Either deceitfull workers, as 2 Cor. 11. 13. who ſeemed to ſeek the glory of God; but indeed aimed at their own profit, honour, or glory: or falſe teachers, who under pretence of building Gods Church, pulled it down; who took great toyle and paines, but onely to vent and further ſpread their erroneous and dangerous doctrine.

the conciſion] He calleth them ſo, not for that they made cuttings in their fleſh, after the manner of the ſuperſtitious Gentiles; but becauſe by urging circumciſion they made a rent and conciſion in the Church: or the prepoſition [illegible] in [illegible] in [illegible], and divers other words is taken in the worſer ſenſe, to diſgrace and diſparage the circumciſion they ſo much boaſted of; which was now no more a ſeale of Gods covenant, but a meer cutting of the fleſh with an inciſion alſo, and wounding of the conſcience.

V. 3. we are the circumciſion] We now are to be accounted of the true circumciſion, who have our hearts circumciſed, and our wicked luſts and affections cut off, by the grace of Chriſt ſerving God in ſpiritie of life.

V. 4. confidence in the fleſh] Truſt not, nor value our ſelves by externall priviledges which concerne the outward man, or rely not upon carnall rites.

V. 5. of the ſtock of Iſrael] See 2 Cor. 11. 22.

an Hebrew of the Hebrews] Not a proſelyte, but a native Hebrew, born of Hebrew parents, without any mixture of Gentiles in my lineage.

as touching the Law, a Phariſee] According to the ſtrict obſervation of the law, Act. 23. 6. & 26. 5.

V. 6. perſecuting the Church] See Act. 22. 4. & 26. 11. 1 Cor. 15. 9. Gal. 1. 13.

V. 7. were gain to me] Thoſe things which while I was a Jew I accounted rare and ſingular prerogatives, I now make no reckoning of; but ſlight them as not onely worthleſſe, but ſome way prejudiciall to my better calling.

V. 9. be found in him] That I who was loſt before in my ſelf, might be found in him, as a branch engraffed into the true Vine, Joh. 15. 2 or a member incorporated into his myſticall body.

not having mine own righteouſneſſe] That is, to be in Chriſt, to be found not in our own righteouſneſſe, but clothed with the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt imputed to us.

V. 10. That I may know him] Not onely contemplatively, but alſo practically; that I may feel the power of his reſurrection, in raiſing me firſt from the death of ſinne to the life of grace; and after from the death of nature, to the life of glory.

the fellowſhip of his ſufferings] That I may experimentally finde what exceeding joy and comfort it is to ſuffer for him, and with him.

V. 11. reſurrection of the dead] He ſpeaketh not of the reſurrection of the dead common to all, but of a reſurrection to a glorious and immortall life, Luk. 14. 14. Joh. 5. 29. In the Originall it is not ἀνάστασιν, but ἐξανάστασιν, which ſome of the learned obſerve to be alwaies taken for the reſurrection of the juſt; or reſurrection of life, which is oppoſed to the reſurrection of condemnation.

V. 12. for which alſo I am apprehended] For we runne, but ſo farre forth as we are laid hold on by Chriſt; that is, as God giveth us ſtrength, and ſheweth us the way. Or, I now follow hard to overtake and lay hold on Chriſt, who when I before wandred and fled from him, apprehended me and laid hands on me by his grace, Pſal. 119. 176.

V. 13. reaching] Gr. ſtretching.

V. 14. the mark] The prize of heavenly glory, [illegible] which we runne in the holy race ſet before us, 1 Cor. 9. 24, &c.

V. 15. as many as be perfect] As many as are fully inſtructed in this myſterie, and truly ſtrive for Chriſtian perfection. He ſaid before verſ. 12. that he was not already perfect; ſo that in this place he calleth them perfect which had well profited in the knowledge of Chriſt and the Goſpel, whom he ſetteth againſt the ruder and more ignorant. See more 1 Cor. 2. 6. Or, as many as think your ſelves perfect.

V. 16. By the ſame rule] Of faith and life, to wit, the word of God, not croſſing one another in our waies of teaching, or courſe of living.

V. 17 followers together of me] See 1 Cor. 4. 16.

V. 18. For many walke] He ſetteth forth the falſe Apoſtles in their colours, not out of malice, or emulation; but with ſorrow and tears; to wit, that they regarded nothing elſe, but the commodities of this life; that is to ſay, their enjoying peace and quietneſſe, and to flow in abundance of wealth, and worldly pleaſures, and live in honour and eſtimation among men, whoſe miſerable end he forewarneth them of.

enemies of the Croſſe of Chriſt] Though they preach Chriſt crucified, yet partly by not mortifying their fleſhly luſts; partly by preaching righteouſneſſe by the law, they undermine the doctrine of the Croſſe, and really oppoſe the power and virtue of Chriſts paſſion.

V. 19. Whoſe end is deſtruction] Both of body and ſoul in hell. Matth. 10. 28. See alſo Rom. 6. 21. 23.

glory is in their ſhame] Who glory in thoſe things whereof they ought to be aſhamed; or which in the end will prove their ſhame and confuſion. Rom. 6. 21.

V. 20. For our converſation is in heaven] Zanchius tranſlateth it our burgeſhip; others our civill ſociety, or politie; the Syriack our trade, or affairs. The Originall πολίτευμα, ſignifieth more then can be expreſſed in one word in our vulgar language. The full meaning is we look higher then the earth, we ſet our affection upon the things that are above; we carry our ſelves like fellow citizens of Saints; there we live according to the lawes of heaven; and here on earth in part enjoy the priviledges of the celeſtiall Jeruſalem.

look for the Saviour] See 1 Cor. 1. 7. Tit. 2. 13.

V. 21. our vile body] Gr. the body of our vileneſſe.

his glorious body] Gr. the body of his glory.

CHAP. IIII.

Verſ. 1. MY joy and my crown] My honour and greateſt ornament; or for whoſe knowledge and profiting in the Goſpel through my labours among you, a crown is laid up for me in heaven, 2 Tim. 4. 8.

V. 2. beſeech Euodias] Or, exhort.

beſeech Syntyche] Or, exhort.

V. 3. true yoke-fellow] By yoke-fellow the Apoſtle underſtandeth not his wife, as ſome of the ancients imagined: for he had no wife when he wrote his firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, as appeares, 1 Cor. 7. 7. and we read not that ever he married afterwards; but either he underſtandeth the husband of one of the women he mentioned before, or ſome chiefe and principall paſtour to whom the Epiſtles of the Apoſtles were uſually addreſſed, and by them afterwards read before all the congregation.

women which laboured with me in the Goſpel] Not which preached the Goſpel with Saint Paul, but who took paines to miniſter unto the Apoſtle, and were partakers of the combats and difficulties which he ſuffered from the enemies of the Goſpel.

whoſe names are in the book of life] See Revel. 3. 5. and 20. 12. and 21. 27. A metaphor taken from the enrolling of Citizens, or ſouldiers, that they may be known and held for ſuch. This roll is called here the Booke of life, becauſe therein are written all the elect who are ordained to eternall life, Exod. 32. 32. Luke 10. 20. Revel. 3. 5. and 17. 8. and 20. 12, 15.

V. 4. Rejoyce in the Lord] See Philip. 3. 1.

V. 5. moderation] Or, equity, or equall carriage.

The Lord is at hand] Either for our preſent ſuccour, Pſal. 33. 18. or he will come ſhortly to ſet an end to all your ſufferings; and revenge all the wrongs, done to all his Saints, viz. at the day of Judgement.

V. 6. Be carefull for nothing] See Matth. 6. 31, 34. 1 Pet. 5. 7.

ſupplication with thankſgiving] So David beginneth very often with ſupplications and teares, but endeth with thankſgiving.

V. 7. peace of God] Gr. Tec. [illegible]. The true ſpirituall and incomprehenſible reſt and quietneſſe of minde wrought by Gods Spirit in your hearts will keep you from all terrour, anxietie and trouble. See Rom. 5. 1.

hearts and minds] He divideth the heart and the minde; by the heart, underſtanding the will and affections; by the minde, the underſtanding or intellective facultie.

V. 8. honeſt] Or, venerable.

V. 10. your care of me hath flouriſhed again] Or, is revived. A metaphor taken from Plants which are dead in the Winter, but revive and flouriſh in the Spring: ſo it ſhould ſeem that their care for the Apoſtle was intermitted for a ſeaſon; either through forgetfulneſſe, or want of opportunity to ſend unto him; but now put forth as it were again, as flowers do in the Spring.

V. 11. be content] See 1 Tim 6. 5, 8.

V. 12. abaſed] Or, humbled.

V. 13. I can do all things] The word in the Originall ἰσχύω, ſignifieth not properly I can do all things, but I am able for all things, namely, thoſe things he mentioned before, which were rather paſſions then actions, as to be abaſed and to ſuffer need, &c.

through] Gr. in.

V. 15. as concerning giving] Or, to the account of giving.

V. 17. Not becauſe I deſire a gift] It is all one to me whether I want or abound, but in this I deſire a benefit may accrue unto you: for this fruit of your love will be allowed upon your account at the laſt day.

V. 18. I have all] Or, I have received all.

an odour of a ſweet ſmell] He alludeth to the ſweet ſmelling ſavours offered in the old law.

a ſacrifice acceptable] See Heb. 13. 16.

V. 22. of Caeſars houſhold] This Cæſar was Nero, in whoſe palace Saint Pauls bonds were made manifeſt, Phil. 1. 13. and God gave ſuch a bleſſing to his preaching and ſufferings, that he made ſome converts there, who afterwards proved martyrs, namely, Evellius and Torpetes, if at leaſt we may beleeve the Romane Martyrologie.

ANNOTATIONS
On the Epiſtle of Paul the Apoſtle to the COLOSSIANS.

The ARGUMENT and ANALYSIS.

SAint Paul according to his Apoſtolicall Function, taking care of all Churches, and hearing that at Coloſſa divers Weeds ſprang up, which hindered the growth of the Goſpel; namely, Heatheniſh opinions, concerning the mediation of Angels, and Jewiſh ſuperſtitions, in the obſervation of legall Rites, writeth this Epiſtle to them, wherein he rooteth up theſe Weeds, proving to them, that Chriſt is our onely Mediatour, by whom we have acceſſe to God; and that the Body being come, the legall ſhadowes are to vaniſh away,

The godly inſtructions treaſured up in this Epiſtle, partly tend to

1. The confirmation of the Chriſtian Faith in the Deity and Kingdome of Chriſt, and his triumph over principalities and powers, and our redemption, regeneration, and juſtification by him, Chap. 1. 2.
2. The regulating a godly life and converſation, by performing all ſuch duties as are required of all that embrace the Goſpel.
    1. Abſolutely, and in generall, as to mortifie the luſts of the fleſh, to ſpeak the truth, to avoid ſcandall, and to doe workes of Mercy and Charity.
    2. Relatively, and in particular, as namely, ſuch as are required from;
        1. Fathers to Children.
        2. Children to Fathers.
        3. Husbands to Wives.
        4. Wives to Husbands.
        5. Maſters to Servants.
        6. Servants to Maſters.

Verſ. 2. WHich are at Coloſſe] Coloſſe is a Citie ſituated in Phrygia, not farre from Hierapolis and Laodicea, on the ſide they bend towards Lycia and Pamphilia.

and peace from God] See Rom. 1. 7.

V. 4. to all the Saints] See 2 Cor. 1. 1.

V. 5. For the hope] Hope is here taken by a Metonymia, for the thing hoped for; to wit, thoſe glorious things which our hope aſſureth us are laid up for us in heaven, Rom. 8. 24.

V. 8. your love in the Spirit] Your ſpirituall love, or your love which cometh from the Spirit.

V. 9. in all wiſdome] See Epheſ. 1. 8.

V. 10. walk worthy of the Lord] See Epheſ. 4. 1.

unto all pleaſing] Or, to pleaſe him in all things.

V. 11. his glorious power] Gr. the power of his glory.

with joyfulneſſe] Our patience muſt not be unwilling, and as it were, drawn from us by force, but proceed from a joyfull minde, Act. 5. 41. Rom. 5. 3. Jam. 1. 2.

V. 12. unto the Father] We cannot otherwaies conſider of God to our ſalvation, but as he is Chriſts Father in whom we are adopted; beſide, the efficient cauſe of our ſalvation is the only mercy of God the Father, who maketh us meet to be partakers of eternall life by the Word and Spirit.

to be partakers of the inheritance of the ſaints in light] Gr. for, or to a part of the lot of ſaints in light.

in light] In the Kingdome of his grace and glory, which is called light, in regard of the true knowledge of God that ſhineth therein; and becauſe of the eternall glory and brightneſſe in heaven which followeth upon the ſame, Jam. 1. 17.

V. 13. his dear Sonne] Gr. the Sonne of his love.

V. 14. we have redemption] See Rom. 3. 24.

V. 15. Who is the image] See Heb. 1. 3. Chriſt is here ſaid to be the image of God, as well in reſpect of his eternall birth from the Father, being the expreſſe and eternall image of his perſon, Heb. 1. 3. as alſo in reſpect that being made man, God the Father did in him, and by him, as a lively image ſet forth before our eies his glorious attributes of wiſedome, goodneſſe, righteouſneſſe, and almightineſſe, &c, Joh. 14. 1. and 14. 9. 1 Tim. 3. 16.

of the inviſible God] The Father is called the inviſible God, not onely becauſe his eſſence or being is inviſible, 1 Tim. 6. 16. but for that he never revealed himſelf before the eyes of men, as the Sonne hath done in his humane nature, 1 Joh. 18.

the firſt-born of every creature] Or, of all the creation. Some, as Iſidorus Peluſiota, reade not, πρωτότοκον, but πρωτοτόκον, with the accent in penultimâ, and accordingly render the word, not the firſt-born, but the firſt bringer forth of all creatures. Others conceive that Chriſt is called the firſt-born, in reſpect of his eternall birth from the Father before all creatures, Joh. 1. 2, 3. A third ſort interpret the word, firſt-born of every creature, the heire of all, and make this Text parallel to the firſt of Hebrews the ſecond.

V. 16. For by him were all things created that are in heaven] See Joh. 1. 3. thrones, or dominions, &c.] This name together with thoſe that follow, ſignifie the Angelicall creatures with their ſeverall degrees, and dignities as well among themſelves, as in regard of the inferiour world, and the government thereof. See Rom. 8. 38. Epheſ. 6. 12. In particular, by thrones, many probably conceive the Cherubins to be meant, over whom it is ſaid, that God is ſitting as upon a throne, by a figure taken from the Cherubins that were over the Arke, whereupon appeared the glory of God, 1 Sam. 4. 4. 1 Chron. 28. 18. Pſal. 08. 1. Ezek. 10. 1.

V. 17. And he is before all things, &c.] See 1 Cor. 8. 6. John 1. 3.

V. 18. head of the body] That is, of the Church, his ſpirituall body, receiving from him ſpirituall liſe, and being governed by him as the head, Epheſ. 1. 22. & 4. 15, 16.

the firſt-born from the dead] See 1 Cor. 15. 20. Rev. 1. 5. The firſt-born among thoſe that are to riſe from the dead to eternall glory, whereby, as by the word beginning is intimated, not only that he is the firſt in order, and the cauſe of the reſurrection of the reſt; but beſides this alſo, that he ſhall himſelf according to his humane nature in glory farre ſurpaſſe them all, as the firſt-born in the Old Teſtament had a preheminency above the reſt, 1 Cor. 15. 20.

in all things] Or, among all, As in the creation and naturall eſtate of the world; ſo alſo in the redemption and ſpirituall eſtate of the Church. Or, among all, viz. the children of God, Rom. 8.29.

V. 19. all fulneſſe dwell] All perfection of grace, wiſdome, power, goodneſſe, and mercy: See Epheſ. 4.10.

V. 20. having made peace] Or, making peace.

bloud of his croſſe] By his bloudy oblation made upon the croſſe, Heb. 10.10.

reconcile all things] By ſinne heaven and earth were ſet at variance, and the creatures in them: but by Chriſt there is unitie ſet not only betwixt God and man, but alſo betwixt men and the Angels that are in heaven, as alſo the creatures that are upon the earth.

V. 21. in your mind by wicked workes] Or, by your mind in wicked workes.

now hath he reconciled] See 2 Cor. 5.18.

V. 22. the body of his fleſh] The fleſh his added, either to diſtinguiſh his naturall body from his myſticall body, of which he ſpake, verſe 18. or, to teach us, that his humane body was not a phantaſticall, but a true ſubſtantiall body.

V. 23. grounded] Gr. founded.

ſettled] Or, ſtable.

every creature which is under heaven] Mark 16.15.

V. 24. rejoyce in my ſufferings] See verſ. 11.

for you] for your profit and good, to ſtrengthen and confirme you by my example.

behind of the afflictions] This is not to be underſtood of Chriſts ſufferings for our ſinnes, as if there ſhould be ſomething wanting for our redemption, for that is perfect and compleat in all parts thereof, and nothing wanting. Verſ. 20. Heb. 10.14. 1 Joh. 1.7. & 2.2. But of the ſufferings of Chriſts members for his ſake, 2 Cor. 1.5. Heb. 11.26. For we muſt conceive of Chriſt and his Church, as of one body and perſon, whoſe afflictions are limitted by the providence of God. Now, Chriſt the head having ſuffered already, it remaineth now that the Church and every member thereof do ſuffer their ſhare likewiſe in their turn, according to his example, albeit to different ends, in as much as the ſufferings of Chriſt are the price of our redemption, whereas thoſe of the faithfull are nothing elſe but exerciſes and trials of their faith and patience.

of Chriſt] The afflictions of the Church are ſaid to be Chriſts afflictions by reaſon of the ſympathie betweene the Head and the members, Acts 9.4. 2 Cor. 1.5. & 4.10. Heb. 11.26.

V. 25 to fulfill the word of God] Or, fully to preach the word of God, Rom. 15.19.

V. 26. the myſtery, &c.] See Rom. 16.25. 1 Cor. 2.7. Epheſ. 3.9.

V. 27. in you] Or, amongſt you.

V. 28. in all wiſdome] Or, with. Perfect and ſound wiſdome, which is perfection it ſelfe, and ſhall in the end make them perfect, that follow it. See verſ. 9.

V. 29 mightily.] Gr. in power.

CHAP. II.

Verſ. 1. Conflict] Or, fear, or, care.

for you] Gr. concerning you.

face in the fleſh] Or, perſon.

V. 3. In whom] Or, wherein.

hid all the treaſures of wiſdome] Either the meaning is, that Chriſt hath in him the perfection of all wiſdome and knowledge; or that all ſaving knowledge and true wiſdome conſiſteth in this, that we rightly know Chriſt, out of whom there is no precious knowledge.

V. 6. received Chriſt] As you have received the doctrine of Chriſt, ſo perſevere you in it, and live according to it: or, as you have received Chriſt by faith, ſo walk you in him, who is the Way to eternall life.

V. 7. with] Gr. in.

V. 8. ſpoile you] Carry you away for a ſpoile, or a prey, namely, from Chriſt and his truth, to other doctrins or means of ſalvation without Chriſt: A compariſon taken from ſuch theeves, or Pirats, as do not only take and carry away the goods of thoſe they rob, but their perſons alſo, to make them their own, or other mens ſlaves.

through Philoſophie] Or, by. Hereby is not meant true Philoſophie, which is a gift of God, and a great help to the knowledge of Divinitie: but he meaneth Sophiſtry, and captious ſubtilties of ſome Heathen Philoſophers, as the following words, vain deceits do explain it, and as Paul ſpeaketh thereof, Rom. 1. 21, 22. Which Philoſophers had propounded divers matters in their vain ſpeculations, meaſuring heavenly myſteries by their naturall reaſon.

rudiments of the world] Or, elements. Ceremonies of the law, for as much as it pleaſed God in the infancy of the Church to lead the Iſraelites, and conſequently in them the reſt of the world that were ſaved unto Chriſt by this meanes, even as a childe is led to reade by learning the A.B.C. or a Scholler by his Accedence to his Grammar. See Gal. 4.3.

not after Chriſt] Not according to the doctrine and inſtitution of Chriſt, which only ought to take place in the Church, Gal. 1.6,8,9 & 2.21. & 5.2.4.

V. 9. in him dwelleth] By the union of the Divine nature with the humane in the unity of his perſon, the God-head dwelleth in Chriſt as the ſoul in the body.

all the fulneſſe of the God-head] Or, the whole fulneſſe. The perfect Deitie of the Sonne with all his attributes, and not only in regard of ſome particular gifts and graces, as he dwelleth in the Prophets, Apoſtles, and other Saints.

bodily] That is, perſonally, as the Greek word σωματικῶς ſometimes ſignifieth; or, ſubſtantially, in oppoſition to the ſhadowes and figures of the Old Teſtament, as the word is taken in this very Chapter, Verſe 17. yet the meaning is much at one, in whether of the two ſenſes we take the word. For God is ſaid in the Old Teſtament, to dwell in the Tabernacle, Ark of the Covenant, and Temple, but only as in the ſhadowes and figures of Chriſts humane nature, which he ſhould take on him in the fulneſſe of time, to dwell in the ſame perſonally, or really and ſubſtantially with all his fulneſſe: from whence the Apoſtle inferreth, that we muſt not look for any ſalvation without him, neither in the Ceremonies of the Law, nor in any humane inſtitution, but only in him and his Word.

V. 10. Principalitie and power] See Col. 1.16.

V. 11. Circumciſion made without hands] Not a carnall and outward Circumciſion, but an inward; not whereby a ſmall part of the fleſh or skin, but the whole body of ſinne is taken away. Rom. 6.6.

the body of the ſinnes of the fleſh] Gr. Tec. the body of the fleſh.

V. 12. Buried with him in Baptiſme] See Romanes 6. 4.

V. 13. dead in your ſinnes] See Epheſ. 2. 1.

V. 14. Blotting out] The Law was as the Writ or the Obligation, the uſe of the Ceremonies the ratification and acknowledgement of the debt, the bloud of Chriſt the payment thereof, whereupon the Obligation was cancelled.

hand-writing] The Greek word χειρόγραφον, ſome take for a Writing by Gods own hand in Tables of ſtone, Exod. 34.1. and thereby underſtand the Morall Law, or ten Commandements, ſaid here to be againſt us, in regard of that ſevere requiring of perfect obedience, which we were not able to perform; and thereby became ſubject to the curſe thereof, which Chriſt did bear on the Croſſe on our behalfe, & thereby redeemed us from it; Gal. 3.13. Yet foraſmuch as the Apoſtle here purpoſely diſputeth againſt Circumciſion and other Ceremonies of the Law, it ſeemeth moſt probable, that by the hand-writing we are to underſtand the Ceremonies of the Law, which are called a hand-writing againſt us, becauſe they were as an Obligation or bond whereby men did daily acknowledg their treſpaſſes and debts unto God, and that they deſerved the ſame death which the beaſt did endure; and could not by the outward uſe thereof be acquitted of the debt, as the Apoſtle declareth to the Hebrews, c. 10. v. 1, 2.

V. 15. ſpoiled] Taken from the Devill the unrighteous prey of ſo many ſoules, or ſtripped and unfurniſhed them of their power and armour, which were ſinne and death, whoſe ſtrength was the Law, 1 Cor. 15. 55, 56. Luke 11.22. A metaphor taken from conquered and ſubdued Souldiers and Commanders, who were wont to be ſtript bare of their Arms, and to be publikely led in triumph, to be a ſpectacle to all men, untill they were brought to priſon, and either there kept in bonds, or put to death.

a ſhew of them] Bringing them to open ſhame.

in it] Or, in himſelf. The Croſſe was a Chariot of triumph, no Conquerour could have triumphed ſo gloriouſly in his Chariot, as Chriſt did on his Croſſe; there he took away from Satan, that had the power of death, all ability to hurt us: for although he doth aſſault us ſtill, yet we are aſſured of an abſolute victory. Luke 10. 17. Rom. 8.37. & 16. 20. Revel. 22.10.

V. 16. in meat] Or, for eating and drinking.

in reſpect] Or, in part.

V. 18. beguile you of your reward] Or, judge againſt you. Permit no man to uſurpe a power of domineering over your conſciences, and to judge them guilty in theſe things; or, let no man take the prize which is laid ready at the Goale for you, by drawing you aſide, under pretence of voluntary humilitie to thoſe opinions and obſervances, which are not warrantable, as to uſe the Angels for your Mediatours, under a colour of awfull modeſtie, in not making your immediate addreſſe to God.

in a voluntary humilitie] Gr. being a voluntary humilitie.

intruding into thoſe things] Uſurping upon Chriſts office, and ſpeaking as confidently of thoſe his doctrines and laws, concerning Gods worſhip, as if they had come down from heaven, whereas they were nothing elſe but humane devices and ſpeculations, without any ſolid ground at all.

V. 19. not holding the head] Not holding himſelf to the true knowledge of Chriſt, who is the only head of the Church, from whom all the body of the univerſall Church, being knit together by the joynts and bands of one common ſpirit, receiveth ſpirituall nouriſhment and augmentation, with the increaſing of God, that is, which cometh of God.

V. 20. from the rudiments of the world] Or, from the elements of the world.

ſubject to Ordinances] Or, burdened with opinions, or, traditions. The word δογματίζεσθε, ſignifieth as well an enthralling our ſelves to doctrinall errours, as ſuperſtitious Rites and Ordinances.

V. 21. Touch not, taſte not] Theſe are the ſpeeches of ſuperſtitious men, which Paul here inſerteth, ſhewing thereby, that ſuperſtition doth grow from one degree to another. For firſt, they forbid to touch, that is, to eat or to drinke; then, to taſte; and laſtly, to handle at all; for that the ſpeech is here only of ſuch things wherewith the body is fed, appeareth by the two next following Verſes. Or, becauſe touch not, and handle not, ſeeme little to differ, or not at all; it may be here ſaid to one, touch not; to another, taſte not; to a third, handle not, ſuch or ſuch meats.

V. 22. to periſh] Gr. to corruption.

with the uſing] Gr. in the conſumption of them.

V. 23. neglecting of the body] Or, puniſhing, or, not ſparing of the body.

CHAP. III.

Verſ. 1. S*Eek thoſe things that are above*] Give your ſelves to the ſtudy and practiſe of a ſpirituall and Angelicall life, elevating your hearts and thoughts into heaven, without ſetting any more your affections upon the things on the earth, or putting any opinion of holineſſe in any outward earthly thing whatſoever. By the things that are above, he meaneth, everlaſting happineſſe and glory, whereof Chriſt hath taken poſſeſſion for us in heaven, together with all ſpirituall gifts, requiſite for ſalvation, which Chriſt at the right hand of his Father doth impart and diſtribute to his Church. Acts 2. 11. Eph. 4.8.

ſitteth on the right hand of God] Or, at. See Mark 15.19. Luke 24. 51. Acts 7.55. Rom.8.34.

V. 2. affection] Or, minde.

V. 3. ye are dead] Dead to the world, dead to the fleſh, dead to all the vain and ſinfull motions and deſires thereof.

your life is hid] Your life of grace and of glory are hid and laid up in Chriſt with God, as out of the knowledge, ſo out of the danger of the world. Or, it is hid with Chriſt, that is, as Chriſts life and glorious reign in heaven, ſo your ſpirituall life is concealed from the eies of worldly men.

V. 4. When Chriſt who is our life] That is, in whom, and by whom we live, who is not onely the efficient and meritorious cauſe, but the pattern alſo of our ſpirituall life.

V. 5. your members] Thoſe members which we made weapons of unrighteouſneſſe, or the evill affections and motions of corrupt nature, which is as it were a maſſe of ſinne, called expreſſely the body of ſinne, Rom.6.6. Col.2. 11. Theſe motions may be called members, becauſe the reaſon and will of corrupt man doth uſe them, and produce operations by them, as the bodie doth uſe the members.

upon the earth] Thus the Apoſtle calleth theſe vicious deſires, in regard they do ever move men to earthly things; viz. to the luſts of the fleſh, the luſts of the eye, and the pride of life, 1 John 2.16. whereof we ſhall be altogether freed in heaven. Rev. 21.27.

fornication] See Epheſ. 5.3.

inordinate affection] Gr. paſſion. The word πάθος, in the Originall ſignifieth ſome kinde of uncleanneſſe, in which men are rather paſſive then active; ſuch as the Apoſtle intimateth, Rom. 1.26. παρέδωκεν αὐτὺς εἰς πάθη ἀτιμίας.

covetouſneſſe, which is idolatry] Some conceive the Apoſtle here to ſpeak by way of aggravation; as when in 1 Sam. 15.23. rebellion is ſaid to be the ſinne of witchcraft, and ſtubbornneſſe to be idolatry; not that they are ſo properly, but that they are moſt hainous and execrable ſinnes, as witchcraft and idolatry were deſervedly eſteemed. Yet farther, how covetouſneſſe may be termed idolatry, ſee the note upon Epheſ. 5.5.

V. 6. children of diſobedience] An Hebraiſme, unbeleeving or diſobedient children, properly ſuch as no good perſwaſion can work upon. Epheſ. 5.6.

V. 7. the which ye alſo] Gr. Tec. theſe ye alſo.

in them] Or, among them.

V. 8. you alſo put off all theſe] Or, put you alſo from you all theſe.

V. 9. old man with his deeds] Our unregenerate condition, or our old depraved nature, with the ſinfull works thereof. See Rom.6.6. & Auguſtinum de vera relig. c.26. vetus homo exuitur primum in Baptiſmo, deinde quotidiano profectu novitatis.

V. 10. put on] He uſeth the metaphor of putting on, to ſhew that theſe graces are an addition to our nature, and that we are naked without them, and that they are as a beautifull ornament to our ſoul. Epheſ. 4.24.

new man] See Epheſ. 4. 24.
